Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 108th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

Vol. 150 WASHINGTON, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 3, 2004 No. 26

Senate

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m, and was called to order by the President pro tempore (Mr. STEVENS).

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Eternal Lord God, You are the source of every blessing. Thank You for Your unfailing love. Lord, we know that You want our hearts more than anything we have, and we would give them to You. Forgive us when we forget to see our challenges from a faith perspective. Remind us that You are an ever present help for all our troubles.

Inspire our Senators today. May they build their hope on You. As they are pressed by many issues, help them to slow down long enough to hear Your voice. Cheer our hearts with the knowledge that You will always sustain us. And, Lord, bless our military.

We pray this in Your holy Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, this morning there will be a period of morning business until 10:30 a.m. Following morning business, the Senate will begin consideration of S. 1637, the Jumpstart JOBS or, as it is also known, the FSC/ETI bill. Senators GRASSLEY and BAUCUS will be here through the morning to begin working through the amendments as they are offered.

Over the last couple of weeks we have been attempting to work out an agreement for consideration of the bill with the Democratic leadership. With the March 1 deadline behind us, it is imperative we attempt to consider this bill in an expeditious way. We have been unable, unfortunately, to reach agreement with our colleagues on the other side of the aisle to limit the nature of the amendments to the underlying bill. Thus, we are proceeding today in good faith and hope we can consider related amendments in order to make progress. Again, the March 1 deadline has passed. It is incumbent upon us to address this bill in an organized and expeditious way.

Rollcall votes can be expected today in relation to the Jumpstart JOBS bill. We will alert all Members as the votes are scheduled. It is critical that we work aggressively on the bill Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of this week. Next week we will be going to the budget.

NEW LEADERS FOR NEW SCHOOLS

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I want to take several minutes to comment on some good news from Tennessee, good news from Tennessee that underscores the importance of having a good, strong leader as principal of K through 12 schools.

Last month, the national, nonprofit New Leaders for New Schools chose the city of Memphis to participate in its education program. Memphis joins other cities—Chicago and New York and Washington—as a participant in this new and innovative reform effort in education. The program is called New Leaders for New Schools. It is the brainchild of John Schnur, a young social entrepreneur and education expert. He came up with the idea while at Harvard Business School. His idea was to take concepts of business leadership and apply it to education K through 12.

As we all know, every successful company is led by a successful CEO. Successful schools, in turn, are really no different. Great principals make for great schools. Really, it makes sense. New Leaders for New Schools trains outstanding individuals to become outstanding school principals. The program draws applicants from all walks of life, from former bankers and dot commers, to teachers and, indeed, retired principals. What they share is a deep belief in the potential of every child to succeed. These committed individuals are sent into urban school districts to turn around poor performing schools. As they prove their effectiveness, they can earn flexibility in hiring and carrying out reforms.

In Memphis, New Leaders for New Schools will recruit and develop 60 new principals over 3 years to serve in the public school system. City leaders are rightly excited about this great opportunity. The No Child Left Behind Act does set high standards, and a strong and effective school principal is key to meeting these goals.

I should note that 45 percent of Memphis school principals are eligible for retirement in the next 3 years. Training the next generation of principals is critical.

I am excited for the parents and the teachers of Memphis. I am especially excited for the schoolchildren of Memphis. With strong and motivated leadership at the top, they will have even more opportunities to realize their potential.

Every child can learn. Every child can succeed. New Leaders for New Schools is one more step in moving our education system forward.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

IRAQ INTELLIGENCE AND POSTWAR PLANNING

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, in recent weeks, Americans have witnessed a steady stream of reports that raise grave questions about the accuracy of statements made by senior Bush administration officials leading up to the war in Iraq.

The unequivocal administration pronouncements that Saddam Hussein possessed weapons of mass destruction, was pursuing nuclear capabilities, and had close ties with al-Qaida have not been proven or been proven unequivocally wrong.

Implications of these intelligence failures are far-reaching. While Saddam Hussein may be in prison, just this week CIA Director Tenet indicated America is still the target of terrorists who seek to kill as many Americans as possible in any way available to them.

At no time in our Nation's history has the integrity of the people who use intelligence and the people who produce intelligence been more vital to national security. Americans need to have confidence in both our policymakers and our intelligence community. To rebuild that confidence, Americans have a right to know how the administration and how our intelligence community could have been so wrong on matters of such grave import.

For a failure this massive, every aspect of America's national security policymaking process should be put under the microscope: How we collect information, how we analyze it, how it gets interpreted by administration officials, and how the Senate performs its oversight responsibilities.

Much of the discussion about our Iraq intelligence failures thus far has focused on our incorrect assessments of the threat posed by Saddam Hussein. While important, there is another vital piece of this story that has been overlooked until this point. That is, the administration's failure to plan for postwar Iraq and the consequences that would arise from toppling Saddam Hussein.

The administration's myopic approach to planning for post-Saddam Iraq continues to have consequences for the safety of our troops and the long-term security of our Nation and its interests. As a result, it is critical that the Nation learn more about why the administration failed to plan for the contingencies of a post-Saddam Iraq. As officials from the Bush administration, the United Nations, and the Iraq Governing Council seek to reach agreement on the administration's third and latest proposal for forming the first official post-Saddam government, we would be wise to look back at what went wrong.

A thorough, bipartisan investigation is warranted.

What makes the unfolding evidence of insufficient post-war planning most troubling is that, in this instance, contrary to the questions of weapons of mass destruction, it appears that our intelligence was right.

There was a consensus among the intelligence community that removing Saddam would be the easiest part of our efforts to secure and rebuild Iraq.

Our intelligence community, our military, and numerous independent groups all concurred in the assessment that our gravest challenges would come in the days after Saddam was ousted.

The greatest difficulty, all agreed, would come in the days following the toppling of Saddam Hussein. Senior administration policymakers were repeatedly warned by other officials within the government, as well as a raft of independent outside experts, to plan accordingly.

Months before the start of the conflict, these officials and experts carefully examined these issues and offered concrete proposals to maximize our chances for bringing about a stable Iraq while minimizing the risks to our troops and our taxpayers.

For instance, as far back as March 2002, a year before the invasion, the State Department was working on a $5 million project entitled the Future of Iraq. Experience from previous conflicts demonstrated the importance of preparing in advance for our postwar duties.

And experience from the past gave us all a guide as to what to expect in Iraq.

Although there were many other officials and organizations making similar assessments, the State Department's Future of Iraq project provides some useful insights into the information available to the administration had it chose to listen.

In its 13-volume study plus a one-volume summary and overview, the Future of Iraq project reached some prescient conclusions.

First, the project said Iraq would be disorderly after liberation and stressed that the days immediately after liberation would be critical—to both those who seek to work with us and those who do not.

> The removal of Saddam's regime will provide a power vacuum and create popular anxieties about the viability of all Iraqi institutions . . . the traumatic and disruptive events attendant to the regime change will affect all Iraqis, both Saddam's conspirators and the general populace.

Second, this report stressed the importance of restoring basic services as quickly as possible after the regime change. The report ''stressed the importance of getting the electrical grid up and running immediately—[this is] key to water systems, jobs. [This] could go a long way to determining Iraqis attitudes' toward coalition forces.''

Third, the report warned about the problems created by a wholesale demobilization of the Iraqi military.

> The decommissioning of hundreds of thousands of trained military personnel that [a rapid purge] implies could create social problems.

Each of these conclusions should have waved a red flag to administration officials: if addressed effectively, the transition will be smoother; if ignored, the transition will be more difficult. More difficult for our troops and more difficult for the Iraqi people.

Unfortunately, the administration apparently chose to ignore these and many other similar findings offered up by other groups. In fact, news reports indicate that White House and senior Defense Department civilian officials actually worked to exclude people who worked on or shared the views contained in the Future of Iraq report—views that have proven to be 100 percent correct.

One of the most comprehensive reports about this issue can be found in James Fallows' article in the January/February 2004 Atlantic Monthly entitled ''Blind into Baghdad.''

I highly commend this article to my colleagues.

Unfortunately, the many warnings about post-war Iraq fell upon deaf ears in the administration. For a variety of reasons, senior administration officials in the White House and senior civilians in the Defense Department ignored these warnings, instead apparently opting to rely on dubious sources to back up their rosy predictions about how our troops would be received by Iraqis and how smooth the transition would be.

For example, the administration was repeatedly pressed for an estimate before the start of the war on the number of troops and the cost of the operation.

Even though press reports indicate administration officials had signed off on a war plan in November 2002 that spelled out the size of the forces necessary for an Iraq mission, the administration persistently claimed not to know the size of the forces needed or their cost.

As late as February 2003, 2 months after the President had authorized the deployment of 200,000 troops to the region and less than 2 months before the start of the conflict, Deputy Defense Secretary Wolfowitz said, ''Fundamentally, we have no idea what is needed unless and until we get there on the ground.''

Even worse, the administration suggested that there would be no cost at all.

Administration officials stated that the proceeds from the sale of Iraqi oil would be used to pay for the American military presence.

On March 27, 8 days after the war had started, Wolfowitz was again pressed on a figure and indicated that whatever it turned out to be, Iraq's oil supplies would keep it low: ''There's a lot of money to pay for this. It doesn't have to be U.S. taxpayer money. We are dealing with a country that can really finance its own reconstruction and relatively soon.''

In April, after more than a month of conflict, Andrew Natsios, the director of USAID, said the total cost to the taxpayer would be no more than $1.7 billion. ''We have no plans for any further-on-funding for this.''

The administration either knew better at the time or should have known better.

And our troops and the American people certainly deserved better. Over 500 Americans have been killed and over 3,000 wounded in Iraq. Unfortunately, these numbers are likely to continue to grow before our mission there is complete.

We have already appropriated over $150 billion for this operation, and this cost could easily double before we are through.

Let me take another example—the administration's statements about the post-war environment we would encounter and the challenges we would face.

Although there are a few instances where administration officials went on the record before the war warning that a war with Iraq could require a lengthy commitment, administration officials repeatedly painted the most optimistic portrait possible in order to gain support for its strategy.

Vice President CHENEY's remarks 3 days before the start of the war typify much of what the administration was telling the American public.

When asked if the American people are prepared for a long, costly battle with significant casualties, the Vice President said, ''Well, I don't think it's likely to unfold that way . . . because I really do believe we will be greeted as liberators.''

This tragic miscalculation allowed the administration to abandon the intelligence-based, analytical process needed to plan successfully for the occupation of Iraq. The administration sent a smaller force than our senior military officials initially recommended.

Our personnel were not suitably prepared for the immense economic, social, and political complexities that we should have known would inevitably arise after the fall of Saddam Hussein. And our troops and the American people were not adequately equipped for the guerrilla tactics that have become all too common since President Bush declared an end to major combat operations.

Overall, the administration's overly optimistic attitude about post-war Iraq has contributed to a far more costly and arduous effort than needed to be the case.

Mr. President, not long ago, many of my colleagues and I had the honor of having dinner with more than 100 soldiers and their families at Walter Reed Army Medical Center. These soldiers had all been wounded while serving their country in Iraq. I hope my colleagues will take the opportunity to visit these young men and women. After seeing first-hand the kind of people our country has produced, I have never been more proud to be an American.

As I think of my night with these brave men and women who have sacrificed so much and asked for so little in return, I cannot help but think: Did we do right by them? Did we do everything possible to put them in a position to succeed at the least possible risk? Did we provide them with a plan for success and the tools needed to carry it out?

In a statement last year, General Anthony Zinni, one of the most respected and distinguished military leaders this country has produced, commented on what we owed those who we placed in harm's way.

He said:

> They should never be put on a battlefield without a strategic plan, not only for the fighting—our generals will take care of that—but for the aftermath and winning that war. Where are we, the American people, if we accept this, if we accept this level of sacrifice without that level of planning?

The administration based its post-war planning on blind hope, and hope is not a plan. We owe it to our troops and ourselves to determine whether we did everything we could to succeed in Iraq. Our success in Iraq and future conflicts depends on it. Our need to ensure that we do right by our troops demands it.

I yield the floor.

MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will be a period for the transaction of morning business until 10:30, with the time equally divided, and the time under Republican control to be equally divided between the Senator from Alaska, Ms. MURKOWSKI, and the Senator from Maine, Ms. COLLINS.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I have a unanimous consent request I wish to make.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we have only 40 minutes left until 10:30 a.m. We have on our side, and I am sure on the other side, more than 20 minutes. On our side, the Senator from Oregon wishes to speak for 15 minutes, the Senator from Connecticut wishes to speak for 10 minutes, which is 25 minutes. I don't know how much total time the two Senators on the majority would like. I am sure it is more than 20 minutes total.

I ask unanimous consent that the time be extended to 25 minutes on each side for morning business—not in addition to but 25 minutes total to each side.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On both sides, for a total of 50 minutes.

Mr. REID. A total of 50 minutes, yes, and that on our side, the Senator from Connecticut be recognized for 10 minutes and the Senator from Oregon be recognized for 15 minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Alaska, Ms. MURKOWSKI, is recognized.

ALASKA GAS PIPELINE—NO LONGER A PIPE DREAM

Ms. MURKOWSKI. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, we will soon begin debating the merits of the tax bill that will bring the United States into compliance with our World Trade Organization's obligations and assist domestic manufacturers. I understand this bill has been renamed the Jumpstart JOBS Act, referring to the number of manufacturing jobs that have been lost in the past few years, whether it is from businesses relocating their plants overseas, the outsourcing of jobs, or increased efficiency that does not require as much manual labor.

I believe that every Senator in this body wants to help those Americans who have been laid off to find new employment and to provide assistance to our domestic manufacturers that will lead to real job creation. But when we talk about job creation, too often this body overlooks a project that would produce those jobs for Americans, that would create jobs in all 50 States, and not just a few jobs but by at least one estimate we would create over 1 million jobs across the country.

Certainly, the number of jobs nationwide will at a minimum—at a minimum—be in the thousands, and that project I am speaking of is the construction of a natural gas pipeline from Alaska to the lower 48.

With the reality in mind that this project will lead to real job creation, I would like to speak to the body this morning about three very exciting announcements relating to the Alaska natural gas pipeline.

Three consortiums have filed applications to build a gas pipeline from Alaska's North Slope. These proposals would transport the 35 trillion cubic feet of known technically recoverable reserves to the starved markets in the lower 48. This would happen at a rate of roughly 4.5 billion cubic feet per day. Many believe there is upwards of 100 trillion cubic feet of natural gas on the North Slope and quite possibly more than that.

The first announcement from MidAmerican Energy Holdings Company, a major U.S. pipeline company and a subsidiary of Berkshire Hathaway whose chief investor is financier Warren Buffett. Partnering with MidAmerican will be Cook Inlet Regional Corporation and Pacific Star Energy, which is a consortium of Alaska Native corporations.

This is great news for Alaska, and it is great news for America. Individual Alaskans, Alaska Native corporations, and Alaska-owned corporations will have ownership opportunities in the pipeline under this proposal—this is good for Alaska's economy—and oversight of the main transportation project that will be used to move Alaska's commonly owned resources to market.

Rather than just benefit from the jobs and influx of short-term construction spending, as we saw during the construction of the Trans-Alaska pipeline, this represents a significant long-term benefit to individual Alaskans and their families.

Following MidAmerican's application, the three major producing companies in Alaska—ConocoPhillips, BP Exploration, and ExxonMobile—also filed an application with the State. These three companies hold the lion's share of the right to produce North Slope natural gas.

Late last week, a third group, which is the Alaska Gasline Port Authority, filed another application to build a pipeline. This third option proposes a liquefied natural gas project that would take natural gas from the North Slope, liquefy it at tidewater in south central Alaska for transport to the west coast markets in the lower 48.

In the end, the project that best meets the needs of Alaska and the markets will get built, but too often in our discussions we overlook the proposed LNG project in favor of the land route that goes through Canada. Two years ago, Alaska voters indicated their desire for construction of an LNG project, but we have to make sure the numbers make sense and the proposal is good for the State of Alaska.

I inserted language in the omnibus appropriations bill that provides the opportunity for the loan guarantees included in the Energy bill to be available for the LNG project option; that is, if the Secretary of Energy determines that it is the best project for purposes of this provision. It is something that needs to be proven by the project sponsors. Again, it demonstrates the need for passage of the Energy bill.

In the meantime, we have three applicants that are vying to build a gas pipeline along the Alaska-Canadian highway, with a possible spur to south central Alaska for an LNG project. They have come forward, put their names on paper, and they are willing to begin negotiations with the State. For all of these reasons, Alaskans are excited.

I need to back up and clarify. When the initial announcements were made about filing the applications, both MidAmerican and the producers stressed the need to enact the regulatory streamlining, the judicial streamlining, and the fiscal incentives that are currently contained in the Energy bill for the construction of a natural gas pipeline to go forward. There should be no misunderstanding about this; the provisions in the Energy bill relating to these issues must be enacted into law if we hope to see positive movement on this project.

These filings we have in place now in the State are not a guarantee that the project will be built. These applications represent the beginning of a dialog between the applicants and the State of Alaska, but no one should interpret these events to mean that we do not need to pass the Energy bill.

A cornerstone of our national energy policy is the production of Alaskan gas and delivery of the needed resources to markets in the lower 48. Members on both sides of the aisle recognize the benefit that Alaska gas means for America.

We have seen the volatility in the natural gas prices that had significant negative impacts on businesses and on families struggling to make ends meet and to keep their homes warm in the winter. The Alaska natural gas pipeline will bring welcome stability and a measure of predictability to the natural gas marketplace, as well as benefit consumers across the United States.

A couple of weeks ago, I had an opportunity to read an article by a gentleman by the name of Douglas Reynolds, an associate professor of oil and energy economics at the University of Alaska Fairbanks. Mr. President, you have read his book, I know, and have had good things to say about what he has written in the past. I have a copy of the article.

I ask unanimous consent that the article be printed in the RECORD immediately following my remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Ms. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, Mr. Reynolds brought out the point, which I would like to emphasize, that providing the financial incentives for a natural gas pipeline is ''like a futures contract to insure a more reliable natural gas supply source.''

Then he went on to say:

> Congress has the option to assure a future supply of Alaska gas at a reasonable price, and to get that supply on line sooner than markets alone will do it.

The effect would be to make Alaska's gas supply less reliant on NLG exporters with less chance for market manipulation.

To me, this just hits it right on the head. Consumers are facing increasing prices of natural gas. We have the opportunity to access a reliable supply of energy that will be produced under some of the most stringent environmental standards in the world and we can do it now, before we become dependent on foreign sources.

Douglas Reynolds and I are not the only ones who agree with this viewpoint. Recognizing the United States need for natural gas, the Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan testified before the Congress last year that natural gas supplies represent a ''serious problem'' to the national economy.

He noted U.S. policy with respect to natural gas is contradictory as we encourage consumption more than production. The chairman of the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, Senator DOMENICI, has worked diligently for more than a year to craft a bill that promotes many forms of renewable energy, encourages energy efficiency in the Federal Government and consumer products, increases the authorization of the low-income home energy assistance program, and moves us closer to construction of the Alaska natural gas pipeline.

To allay the major concerns of Members that led to the filibuster on the conference report on H.R. 6, the Senator from New Mexico has introduced a new Energy bill that has significantly less impact on the Federal budget. The new Energy bill streamlines the permitting process for the Alaska natural gas pipeline, expedites judicial review and provides for Federal loan guarantees and accelerated depreciation to lessen the cost of financing the project.

To those of my colleagues in the Senate who want to see this project built, who want to stop the rise of natural gas prices, who want to ensure a reliable supply of natural gas, who want to create hundreds of thousands of jobs across the country, I say pass this new Energy bill.

The fiscal and regulatory provisions in the Energy bill are a prerequisite to the construction of this project. The longer we wait, the longer we allow this important policy to remain caught in congressional gridlock, the more our economy is going to suffer. Senators should not accept the status quo when it comes to energy production. We should instead work to pass this Energy bill so we can tell the American people help is on the way, so we can begin to rationalize the energy markets, and so we can work to become less dependent on foreign sources of energy.

The Alaska natural gas pipeline will be the largest construction project of its kind ever completed. I believe the Federal Government should play a role in reducing the risk involved with this project, just as the Federal Government played a role in bringing affordable electricity to the South and to the Pacific Northwest.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAHAM of South Carolina). The Senator's time has expired.

Ms. MURKOWSKI. The provisions in the Energy bill fulfill the Federal Government's role in bringing this pipeline to fruition.

I yield the floor.

GAS LINE WILL HAPPEN, BUT ALASKA MUST NEGOTIATE

(By Douglas Reynolds)

During winter break in the Lower 48, I heard over and over again concerns about the price of natural gas. It is currently about $7 per thousand cubic feet, when only a few months ago it was $4. Some fear there is market manipulation since stocks of gas in reserve are adequate and the winter has not been colder than normal so far. Investigations have already started.

However, there is a reason behind the price rise. While this year there may be adequate supplies of natural gas, next year may be a different story. As I explain in my book, Lower 48 and Southern Canadian natural gas production will decline and the United States will face a supply gap with prices climbing above $10.

However, supply is declining faster than I anticipated. The market may merely be anticipating next year's supply gap—increasing prices now to conserve reserves and to increase production later.

Of course it is theoretically possible to have market manipulation. But this is extremely difficult to do and only works if the supply system is uncompetitive. The internal North American market is not.

Interestingly enough, if people in the Lower 48 are upset now about alleged manipulation of the natural gas market, they sure won't be happy when the United States starts depending more heavily on imported liquefied natural gas. This is because with imported LNG, the LNG exporters themselves will be able to manipulate natural gas prices and do it with impunity. It will be like OPEC all over again.

There is a mechanism to reduce LNG exporter's ability to manipulate the gas market. It is to get Alaska natural gas to market more quickly. Congress still has a chance to change the Energy Bill by putting back in the natural gas credit provisions. I know such a move is highly unlikely, but it is certainly something each Alaskan should be clambering for.

Interestingly enough, some experts would actually like to put in tax credits for Lower 48 gas producers rather than for Alaska gas even though Lower 48 producers are making money hand over foot. If more gas existed in the Lower 48, the current incentives would already be pushing supplies higher.

The fact of the matter is, the Alaska pipeline tax credits that were cut from the energy bill are like a futures contract to insure a more reliable natural gas supply source.

In other words, Congress has the option to assure a future supply of Alaska gas at a reasonable price, and to get that supply on line sooner than markets alone will do it. The effect would be to make America's gas supply less reliant on LNG exporters with less chance for market manipulation.

Since consumers are already complaining over high natural gas prices, I would think that having such tax credits and a more reliable source of natural gas would be to America's advantage. As it stands, American consumers will undoubtedly begin to complain ever louder when it's apparent that Alaska gas is stuck on the North Slope just waiting for the time when prices reach outrageous levels before reserves are finally developed.

Needless to say, our Alaska congressional delegation has fought hard to help make the gas line a reality, but now it is up to the state to take the initiative.

So will the gas line happen? Yes. But Alaska may have to negotiate with the producers or other pipeline companies to get a deal. I believe the best strategy for the state is to give a progressive royalty and severance tax package for all natural gas production.

That means a low royalty and tax percent during low prices and a high royalty and tax percent during high prices. This will give Alaska much more revenue than the current royalty and severance tax system would give because of anticipated high prices. It will also quicken the pace of developing a pipeline. It does however imply more risk in Alaska's revenues over the years.

The future price of natural gas will not be lower than $4 on the East Coast and will easily stay in the $6 to $10 range.

This is because Atlantic Basin LNG producers will be slow to ramp up production even while Lower 48 production goes into decline. Plus LNG exporters can manipulate market prices exactly the way domestic suppliers have been accused of doing. Alaska can take advantage of this and negotiate to get a line done quickly and with greater profits.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut is recognized for 10 minutes.

AMERICA'S ECONOMIC ISSUES

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise to very briefly address two subject matters. As I understand it, we will be moving later this morning to this ETI bill, or the extraterritorial income legislation. My fervent hope is that in addition to debating the underlying bill itself, we will also have an opportunity to raise questions about a staggering set of issues that is unfolding in our country, and that is the outsourcing of jobs all across this Nation to foreign lands.

We all understand this happens from time to time, but the explosion that has occurred in the last 36 months is deeply alarming to many Americans. We now have lost some 2.6 million to 2.7 million jobs over the last 36 months in the manufacturing sector alone. Many of these jobs are showing up either offshore in places such as India, Bangladesh, the People's Republic of China, or elsewhere. There is great concern in this country that we are losing a very important strategic base in our Nation, not to mention these critically important jobs which can never be replaced.

I inform my colleagues, and I know others feel similarly as I do, when we get to this bill there will be some opportunities to offer amendments and to address the very issue of American jobs.

When we hear the administration say, as the chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers did just a few days ago, that outsourcing of jobs was a good thing for America, we begin to understand the depths of concern people have when the administration fails to understand, at least through its leadership, how critically important it is that we stand up and do what we can to preserve critically important jobs, although not at the expense of international trade. We all understand the importance of trade in a global economy, but we also understand if we are going to be a vibrant participant in a global economy that we have to produce the goods or the services to compete.

If not only low-income jobs are given away but also high-technology jobs, information technology jobs, and engineering jobs, for instance, are leaving, then the ability of this country to compete in the 21st century is going to be severely disadvantaged.

I look forward to the coming hours today, tomorrow, and possibly Friday, to engage with my colleagues in some of this debate and discussion. It will be the first time since we have returned that we are going to have a real debate and discussion about jobs in this country and what we might do in this body to address those issues.

HAITI

Mr. DODD. Secondly, on an unrelated matter, I was alarmed but not terribly surprised to pick up the morning newspapers and to read what I thought might happen. I did not wish it to happen, but I thought it might happen in the island nation of Haiti.

Over the past weekend, I warned, as others did, if we did not step up and try to support a democratically elected government, albeit a flawed one but a democratically elected government, we would end up reaping what we sow. And we are doing just that.

In the headlines this morning we read things such as: Haiti rebel says he is in charge and has taken over down there. The man's name is Guy Philippe. This is a person who has a dreadful human rights record. These are people who ran death squads and are involved in the drug trades. They are now taking over. Anarchy apparently is reigning in the island nation of Haiti.

Parts of this article state the country is in my hands, this so-called rebel leader says. Although American officials denounced the armed rebels and said they should have no role in ruling Haiti, the American forces did not take any action to counter them at all. They have now taken over in that country and are apparently in charge down there. Anarchy is reigning. There are bodies in the streets of Port-au-Prince.

What I feared might happen if we did not stand up and support a democratic government—and again I will say a flawed one, but when the United States decided we were going to put a foot in the back of this elected President and send him out of the country, we warned the vacuum would be filled by the worst elements. In fact, I read over last evening and this morning that Baby Doc Duvalier, the worst oppressive leader in that country, and his father, wants to come back to Haiti under this new operation that is going on down there.

I am terribly disappointed the administration failed to step to the plate. I knew it was going to be difficult, but if we cannot support democratically elected governments—and again I will repeat, whatever problems Aristide had, they were not a few; they were many. Nonetheless, he was chosen by the people of that country on two different occasions, overwhelmingly so. If we are unwilling to stand and back democratically elected governments in this hemisphere and give a wink and a nod to those who replace governments that have been duly elected, we will see a repetition of what occurred in Haiti elsewhere. We are seeing it in Caracas, Venezuela, because we are endorsing the notion that when we don't like leaders in certain countries, we will ignore the chaos that can result from changing of government other than through the normal means of elected government. That is something that can happen, and it has happened.

So I rise to express my deep disappointment that once again the administration, in this hemisphere, is just failing terribly, and Haiti is a classic example of failure. We now have a huge mess on our hands.

I pointed out the other day, 30 percent of the population of the Bahamas is now Haitian. Thirty percent of that country is now occupied by people who have fled Haiti because of the repression and economic conditions in that nation. Twenty percent of children never reach the age of 5 in Haiti. The average income is $250. It is a poor Black country, and as a result I don't think we give it the kind of support we should have been giving it.

In fact, over the last 36 months we embargoed any assistance directed to the Government of Haiti. What kind of a country do we live in today that turns to a nation only 300 or 400 miles off our shore, with people living in desperate conditions, with the highest rate of AIDS in the hemisphere, and we have virtually nothing to say to them. Here we have today, once again, these impoverished, poor people down there, who had to live under dreadful governments over the years, finally get one they elect democratically, and because we don't like it, it is a failed leadership in our view, we walk away from it, and now you have thugs running the place again. It is not all our fault but, Mr. President a large part is. I am terribly disappointed about what has happened, and I wanted to rise this morning to express those sentiments.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

GROWING OUR MANUFACTURING EMPLOYMENT ACT

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, few issues are as important to the American people than the availability of good jobs in their communities. Manufacturing jobs have long provided quality employment for generations of Americans. Today, however, we are losing these jobs at a terrible rate, and no State has been hit harder than my home State of Maine.

According to a study by the National Association of Manufacturers, on a percentage basis Maine has lost more manufacturing jobs in the past 3 years than any other State in the Nation. We have lost nearly 18,000 manufacturing jobs during that period, good jobs that once provided lifelong employment to Mainers in towns such as Millinocket, Wilton, Waterville, Fort Kent, Dexter, Westbrook, and Sanford.

In response to this loss of manufacturing jobs, I have introduced legislation, the Growing Our Manufacturing Employment Act, which is aimed at reinvigorating the domestic manufacturing sector, boosting the level of domestic manufacturing, and preventing the further loss of these important jobs.

Mr. President, I know this is a major problem in your State as well, and we have had many conversations on what we might do to help.

At the national level, we are finally beginning to see the economic recovery for which Americans have been longing. Third and fourth quarter gross domestic product figures are up dramatically, the best two quarters since 1984, and analysts expect the gross domestic product to grow by 5.7 percent this year, which would make 2004 the best year in the past 20 years.

But even so, I don't have to tell you that parts of our economy simply are not sharing in this good news. Nowhere is this more true than in the manufacturing sector, where we have seen a steady erosion of good jobs. The number of American manufacturing jobs has declined each year since the end of 1997. In fact, if you look at the past 84 months, since March of 1997, the number of manufacturing jobs has declined each and every month, except for 7.

This loss of jobs has occurred under both Democratic and Republican administrations, so this is not a partisan issue. The final 3 years of the Clinton administration saw 27 months of manufacturing job losses, and the greatest single monthly decline in manufacturing jobs occurred in July of 1998 when 219,000 American manufacturing jobs disappeared.

As I mentioned, nowhere is the reality of this job loss in the manufacturing sector more acute than in my home State of Maine. The job losses during the past 3 years in the manufacturing sector in Maine represent more than 22 percent of my State's total manufacturing employment, a higher percentage of manufacturing jobs lost than in any other State.

Why are American manufacturing jobs disappearing? According to a new study conducted for the National Association of Manufacturers, one answer is the disparity in manufacturing costs in the United States versus other countries. In fact, compared to other countries, it costs an average of 22 percent more to manufacture goods here.

While it would surprise no one that American manufacturers face higher costs of doing business than manufacturers in countries such as China or Mexico, it would be a mistake to assume that wage rates alone explain those differences. They do not. In fact, the productivity of the American worker is unrivaled, allowing American workers to receive more value in wages for the goods they produce.

As the NAM study indicates, if wages were the only factor, then U.S. manufacturers would be far more dominant in the global markets than the current trade situation suggests.

It is other structural costs, such as the high corporate tax rate we impose on manufacturers, that make it more expensive to manufacture goods in the United States relative to the costs elsewhere. Indeed, the NAM study shows it is significantly cheaper to produce goods, even in high-wage industrialized countries such as Japan and France. This fact illustrates the critical impact these high structural costs have on manufacturers in the United States.

In essence, these costs have the same effect as a tax, as imposing a 22-percent additional tax on the cost of making goods here rather than overseas. To compete, American manufacturers must somehow do more with less, move operations overseas, or get out of manufacturing altogether. The end result is fewer jobs, a weaker economy, and a manufacturing sector in crisis.

I believe a healthy manufacturing base is essential to our Nation's future. Not only is manufacturing a key source of skilled high-paying jobs, but it is also critical to our economic and national security that we have the ability to manufacture the goods we need in this country.

For all of these reasons, I am proposing the Growing Our Manufacturing Employment Act. This bill would eliminate that 22-percent cost differential that American manufacturers face by providing a variety of tax incentives. For example, a jobs tax credit would be provided to manufacturers that employ displaced workers who are receiving trade adjustment assistance. That would help get those workers back to work.

In Maine alone, nearly 60 manufacturers are currently TAA-certified, and more than 4,200 Maine workers have been deemed eligible for benefits under TAA since the beginning of 2002. The credit would only be available to manufacturers that increase their employment level. The availability of this credit would be a powerful incentive to hire workers who are receiving benefits because they have been displaced.

As important as it is to assist workers who are eligible for benefits under trade adjustment assistance, however, this alone is not sufficient to address the crisis facing America's manufacturers. That is why my bill also includes a 2-year, across-the-board deduction of 9 percent on domestic manufacturing income, a tax break that would not be available for income earned on overseas operations. This, too, would be a powerful incentive, a powerful tax break, to help encourage manufacturers to keep their operations in America. It would help offset that disparity in costs.

In Maine, the sector that provides the most manufacturing jobs is the forest products industry, an industry that is struggling. Paper plant after paper plant in Maine has been laying off workers or closing down altogether, hurting our economy and leaving thousands of hard-working skilled workers without jobs.

My proposal includes provisions to encourage the recovery of the forest products industry, which is critically important not only to my State but to many other States, as well.

My bill, for example, provides a tax credit for reforestation expenses and changes the tax treatment for wood harvested on nonindustrial woodlots. These changes would both encourage sound forestry stewardship practices and also increase the wood supply by removing artificial barriers to sound woodlot management. Taken together, these provisions will help to ensure an affordable, reliable wood supply upon which so many manufacturing jobs in Maine depend.

Finally, this bill is designed to ensure that only companies that are helping to build America's manufacturing base obtain its benefits. It has both a carrot and a stick approach. Companies that move jobs offshore will see their benefits reduced. For example, they will not be able to claim that 9-percent deduction on operations that are located in the United States. Companies that choose to invert their corporate structure altogether in order to avoid U.S. taxes will not be eligible for this credit at all.

The crisis in the manufacturing sector demands our attention. It did not start yesterday, and it will not be resolved tomorrow. Solutions can and should be sought today.

The bill I have introduced is a good start, but additional remedies are needed. Manufacturing jobs arise in part because some of our trading partners simply do not play by the rules. The Presiding Officer has been a leader in this area. Our Nation's manufacturers can compete against the best in the world, but they cannot compete against nations that provide huge subsidies and other help to their manufacturers.

I hear from manufacturers in my State time and again whose efforts to compete successfully in a global economy simply cannot overcome the practices of the illegal pricing and subsidies of nations such as China. That is why I will soon be introducing a second bill that will help ensure that nations such as China are held fully accountable for their actions by our trade remedy laws. Unfair market conditions cannot continue to cause our manufacturers to hemorrhage jobs.

I am hopeful that working together on this and other legislative and administrative proposals, we can take the important steps needed to strengthen American manufacturers, to preserve our manufacturing capacity, and most of all, to help ensure that hard-working Americans have the jobs they need and deserve.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. WYDEN. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. WYDEN pertaining to the introduction of S. 2160 are located in today's RECORD under ''Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.'')

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

SEC. 401. CLARIFICATION OF ECONOMIC SUBSTANCE DOCTRINE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 7701 is amended by redesignating subsection (n) as subsection (o) and by inserting after subsection (m) the following new subsection:

''(n) CLARIFICATION OF ECONOMIC SUBSTANCE DOCTRINE; ETC.—

''(1) GENERAL RULES.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—In any case in which a court determines that the economic substance doctrine is relevant for purposes of this title to a transaction (or series of transactions), such transaction (or series of transactions) shall have economic substance only if the requirements of this paragraph are met.

''(B) DEFINITION OF ECONOMIC SUBSTANCE.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)—

''(i) IN GENERAL.—A transaction has economic substance only if—

''(I) the transaction changes in a meaningful way (apart from Federal tax effects) the taxpayer's economic position, and

''(II) the taxpayer has a substantial nontax purpose for entering into such transaction and the transaction is a reasonable means of accomplishing such purpose.

In applying subclause (II), a purpose of achieving a financial accounting benefit shall not be taken into account in determining whether a transaction has a substantial nontax purpose if the origin of such financial accounting benefit is a reduction of income tax.

''(ii) SPECIAL RULE WHERE TAXPAYER RELIES ON PROFIT POTENTIAL.—A transaction shall not be treated as having economic substance by reason of having a potential for profit unless—

''(I) the present value of the reasonably expected pre-tax profit from the transaction is substantial in relation to the present value of the expected net tax benefits that would be allowed if the transaction were respected, and

''(II) the reasonably expected pre-tax profit from the transaction exceeds a risk-free rate of return.

''(C) TREATMENT OF FEES AND FOREIGN TAXES.—Fees and other transaction expenses and foreign taxes shall be taken into account as expenses in determining pre-tax profit under subparagraph (B)(ii).

''(2) SPECIAL RULES FOR TRANSACTIONS WITH TAX-INDIFFERENT PARTIES.—

''(A) SPECIAL RULES FOR FINANCING TRANSACTIONS.—The form of a transaction which is in substance the borrowing of money or the acquisition of financial capital directly or indirectly from a tax-indifferent party shall not be respected if the present value of the deductions to be claimed with respect to the transaction is substantially in excess of the present value of the anticipated economic returns of the person lending the money or providing the financial capital. A public offering shall be treated as a borrowing, or an acquisition of financial capital, from a tax-indifferent party if it is reasonably expected that at least 50 percent of the offering will be placed with tax-indifferent parties.

''(B) ARTIFICIAL INCOME SHIFTING AND BASIS ADJUSTMENTS.—The form of a transaction with a tax-indifferent party shall not be respected if—

''(i) it results in an allocation of income or gain to the tax-indifferent party in excess of such party's economic income or gain, or

''(ii) it results in a basis adjustment or shifting of basis on account of overstating the income or gain of the tax-indifferent party.

''(3) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this subsection—

''(A) ECONOMIC SUBSTANCE DOCTRINE.—The term 'economic substance doctrine' means the common law doctrine under which tax benefits under subtitle A with respect to a transaction are not allowable if the transaction does not have economic substance or lacks a business purpose.

''(B) TAX-INDIFFERENT PARTY.—The term 'tax-indifferent party' means any person or entity not subject to tax imposed by subtitle A. A person shall be treated as a tax-indifferent party with respect to a transaction if the items taken into account with respect to the transaction have no substantial impact on such person's liability under subtitle A.

''(C) EXCEPTION FOR PERSONAL TRANSACTIONS OF INDIVIDUALS.—In the case of an individual, this subsection shall apply only to transactions entered into in connection with a trade or business or an activity engaged in for the production of income.

''(D) TREATMENT OF LESSORS.—In applying paragraph (1)(B)(ii) to the lessor of tangible property subject to a lease—

''(i) the expected net tax benefits with respect to the leased property shall not include the benefits of—

''(I) depreciation,

''(II) any tax credit, or

''(III) any other deduction as provided in guidance by the Secretary, and

''(ii) subclause (II) of paragraph (1)(B)(ii) shall be disregarded in determining whether any of such benefits are allowable.

''(4) OTHER COMMON LAW DOCTRINES NOT AFFECTED.—Except as specifically provided in this subsection, the provisions of this subsection shall not be construed as altering or supplanting any other rule of law, and the requirements of this subsection shall be construed as being in addition to any such other rule of law.

''(5) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this subsection. Such regulations may include exemptions from the application of this subsection.''.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to transactions entered into after the date of the enactment of this Act.

''(B) the person on whom the penalty is imposed has a history of complying with the requirements of this title,

''(C) it is shown that the violation is due to an unintentional mistake of fact;

''(D) imposing the penalty would be against equity and good conscience, and

''(E) rescinding the penalty would promote compliance with the requirements of this title and effective tax administration.

''(2) DISCRETION.—The exercise of authority under paragraph (1) shall be at the sole discretion of the Commissioner and may be delegated only to the head of the Office of Tax Shelter Analysis. The Commissioner, in the Commissioner's sole discretion, may establish a procedure to determine if a penalty should be referred to the Commissioner or the head of such Office for a determination under paragraph (1).

''(3) NO APPEAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any determination under this subsection may not be reviewed in any administrative or judicial proceeding.

''(4) RECORDS.—If a penalty is rescinded under paragraph (1), the Commissioner shall place in the file in the Office of the Commissioner the opinion of the Commissioner or the head of the Office of Tax Shelter Analysis with respect to the determination, including—

''(A) the facts and circumstances of the transaction,

''(B) the reasons for the rescission, and

''(C) the amount of the penalty rescinded.

''(5) REPORT.—The Commissioner shall each year report to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate—

''(A) a summary of the total number and aggregate amount of penalties imposed, and rescinded, under this section, and

''(C) is required to pay a penalty under section 6662B with respect to any noneconomic substance transaction,

the requirement to pay such penalty shall be disclosed in such reports filed by such person for such periods as the Secretary shall specify. Failure to make a disclosure in accordance with the preceding sentence shall be treated as a failure to which the penalty under subsection (b)(2) applies.

''(f) COORDINATION WITH OTHER PENALTIES.—The penalty imposed by this section is in addition to any penalty imposed under this title.''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for part I of subchapter B of chapter 68 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 6707 the following:

''(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'reportable transaction understatement' means the sum of—

''(A) the product of—

''(i) the amount of the increase (if any) in taxable income which results from a difference between the proper tax treatment of an item to which this section applies and the taxpayer's treatment of such item (as shown on the taxpayer's return of tax), and

''(ii) the highest rate of tax imposed by section 1 (section 11 in the case of a taxpayer which is a corporation), and

''(B) the amount of the decrease (if any) in the aggregate amount of credits determined under subtitle A which results from a difference between the taxpayer's treatment of an item to which this section applies (as shown on the taxpayer's return of tax) and the proper tax treatment of such item.

For purposes of subparagraph (A), any reduction of the excess of deductions allowed for the taxable year over gross income for such year, and any reduction in the amount of capital losses which would (without regard to section 1211) be allowed for such year, shall be treated as an increase in taxable income.

''(2) ITEMS TO WHICH SECTION APPLIES.—This section shall apply to any item which is attributable to—

''(A) any listed transaction, and

''(B) any reportable transaction (other than a listed transaction) if a significant purpose of such transaction is the avoidance or evasion of Federal income tax.

''(c) HIGHER PENALTY FOR NONDISCLOSED LISTED AND OTHER AVOIDANCE TRANSACTIONS.—

''(i) is based on the facts and law that exist at the time the return of tax which includes such tax treatment is filed, and

''(ii) relates solely to the taxpayer's chances of success on the merits of such treatment and does not take into account the possibility that a return will not be audited, such treatment will not be raised on audit, or such treatment will be resolved through settlement if it is raised.

''(B) CERTAIN OPINIONS MAY NOT BE RELIED UPON.—

''(i) IN GENERAL.—An opinion of a tax advisor may not be relied upon to establish the reasonable belief of a taxpayer if—

''(A) in any case in which gain or loss is recognized by the liquidating corporation with respect to such property, or

''SEC. 7874. RULES RELATING TO INVERTED CORPORATE ENTITIES

''(a) INVERTED CORPORATIONS TREATED AS DOMESTIC CORPORATIONS.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—If a foreign incorporated entity is treated as an inverted domestic corporation, then, notwithstanding section 7701(a)(4), such entity shall be treated for purposes of this title as a domestic corporation.

''(2) INVERTED DOMESTIC CORPORATION.—For purposes of this section, a foreign incorporated entity shall be treated as an inverted domestic corporation if, pursuant to a plan (or a series of related transactions)—

''(A) the entity completes after March 20, 2002, the direct or indirect acquisition of substantially all of the properties held directly or indirectly by a domestic corporation or substantially all of the properties constituting a trade or business of a domestic partnership,

''(B) after the acquisition at least 80 percent of the stock (by vote or value) of the entity is held—

''(i) in the case of an acquisition with respect to a domestic corporation, by former shareholders of the domestic corporation by reason of holding stock in the domestic corporation, or

''(ii) in the case of an acquisition with respect to a domestic partnership, by former partners of the domestic partnership by reason of holding a capital or profits interest in the domestic partnership, and

''(C) the expanded affiliated group which after the acquisition includes the entity does not have substantial business activities in the foreign country in which or under the law of which the entity is created or organized when compared to the total business activities of such expanded affiliated group.

Except as provided in regulations, an acquisition of properties of a domestic corporation shall not be treated as described in subparagraph (A) if none of the corporation's stock was readily tradeable on an established securities market at any time during the 4-year period ending on the date of the acquisition.

''(b) PRESERVATION OF DOMESTIC TAX BASE IN CERTAIN INVERSION TRANSACTIONS TO WHICH SUBSECTION (a) DOES NOT APPLY.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—If a foreign incorporated entity would be treated as an inverted domestic corporation with respect to an acquired entity if either—

''(A) subsection (a)(2)(A) were applied by substituting 'after December 31, 1996, and on or before March 20, 2002' for 'after March 20, 2002' and subsection (a)(2)(B) were applied by substituting 'more than 50 percent' for 'at least 80 percent', or

''(B) subsection (a)(2)(B) were applied by substituting 'more than 50 percent' for 'at least 80 percent', then the rules of subsection (c) shall apply to any inversion gain of the acquired entity during the applicable period and the rules of subsection (d) shall apply to any related party transaction of the acquired entity during the applicable period. This subsection shall not apply for any taxable year if subsection (a) applies to such foreign incorporated entity for such taxable year.

''(2) ACQUIRED ENTITY.—For purposes of this section—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'acquired entity' means the domestic corporation or partnership substantially all of the properties of which are directly or indirectly acquired in an acquisition described in subsection (a)(2)(A) to which this subsection applies.

''(A) the amount of the inversion gain for the taxable year, and

''(B) the highest rate of tax specified in section 11(b)(1).

For purposes of determining the credit allowed by section 901 inversion gain shall be treated as from sources within the United States.

''(A) the limitations of this subsection shall apply at the partner rather than the partnership level,

''(B) the inversion gain of any partner for any taxable year shall be equal to the sum of—

''(i) the partner's distributive share of inversion gain of the partnership for such taxable year, plus

''(ii) income or gain required to be recognized for the taxable year by the partner under section 367(a), 741, or 1001, or under any other provision of chapter 1, by reason of the transfer during the applicable period of any partnership interest of the partner in such partnership to the foreign incorporated entity, and

''(C) the highest rate of tax specified in the rate schedule applicable to the partner under chapter 1 shall be substituted for the rate of tax under paragraph (2)(B).

''(4) INVERSION GAIN.—For purposes of this section, the term 'inversion gain' means any income or gain required to be recognized under section 304, 311(b), 367, 1001, or 1248, or under any other provision of chapter 1, by reason of the transfer during the applicable period of stock or other properties by an acquired entity—

''(A) as part of the acquisition described in subsection (a)(2)(A) to which subsection (b) applies, or

''(B) after such acquisition to a foreign related person.

The Secretary may provide that income or gain from the sale of inventories or other transactions in the ordinary course of a trade or business shall not be treated as inversion gain under subparagraph (B) to the extent the Secretary determines such treatment would not be inconsistent with the purposes of this section.

''(5) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 172 AND MINIMUM TAX.—Rules similar to the rules of paragraphs (3) and (4) of section 860E(a) shall apply for purposes of this section.

''(6) STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—The statutory period for the assessment of any deficiency attributable to the inversion gain of any taxpayer for any pre-inversion year shall not expire before the expiration of 3 years from the date the Secretary is notified by the taxpayer (in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe) of the acquisition described in subsection (a)(2)(A) to which such gain relates and such deficiency may be assessed before the expiration of such 3-year period notwithstanding the provisions of any other law or rule of law which would otherwise prevent such assessment.

''(B) PRE-INVERSION YEAR.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'pre-inversion year' means any taxable year if—

''(i) any portion of the applicable period is included in such taxable year, and

''(ii) such year ends before the taxable year in which the acquisition described in subsection (a)(2)(A) is completed.

''(A) section 6662(a) shall be applied with respect to such underpayment by substituting '30 percent' for '20 percent', and

''(B) if such underpayment is attributable to one or more gross valuation understatements, the increase in the rate of penalty under section 6662(h) shall be to 50 percent rather than 40 percent.

''(2) MODIFICATIONS OF LIMITATION ON INTEREST DEDUCTION.—In the case of an acquired entity to which subsection (b) applies, section 163(j) shall be applied—

''(A) without regard to paragraph (2)(A)(ii) thereof, and

''(C) CERTAIN TRANSFERS DISREGARDED.—The transfer of properties or liabilities (including by contribution or distribution) shall be disregarded if such transfers are part of a plan a principal purpose of which is to avoid the purposes of this section.

''(ii) to treat stock as not stock.

''(2) EXPANDED AFFILIATED GROUP.—The term 'expanded affiliated group' means an affiliated group as defined in section 1504(a) but without regard to section 1504(b)(3), except that section 1504(a) shall be applied by substituting 'more than 50 percent' for 'at least 80 percent' each place it appears.

''(5) SUBSEQUENT ACQUISITIONS BY UNRELATED DOMESTIC CORPORATIONS.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to such conditions, limitations, and exceptions as the Secretary may prescribe, if, after an acquisition described in subsection (a)(2)(A) to which subsection (b) applies, a domestic corporation stock of which is traded on an established securities market acquires directly or indirectly any properties of one or more acquired entities in a transaction with respect to which the requirements of subparagraph (B) are met, this section shall cease to apply to any such acquired entity with respect to which such requirements are met.

''(B) REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements of the subparagraph are met with respect to a transaction involving any acquisition described in subparagraph (A) if—

''(i) before such transaction the domestic corporation did not have a relationship described in section 267(b) or 707(b), and was not under common control (within the meaning of section 482), with the acquired entity, or any member of an expanded affiliated group including such entity, and

''(ii) after such transaction, such acquired entity—

''(I) is a member of the same expanded affiliated group which includes the domestic corporation or has such a relationship or is under such common control with any member of such group, and

''(II) is not a member of, and does not have such a relationship and is not under such common control with any member of, the expanded affiliated group which before such acquisition included such entity.

''(f) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall provide such regulations as are necessary to carry out this section, including regulations providing for such adjustments to the application of this section as are necessary to prevent the avoidance of the purposes of this section, including the avoidance of such purposes through—

''(1) the use of related persons, pass-thru or other noncorporate entities, or other intermediaries, or

''(2) transactions designed to have persons cease to be (or not become) members of expanded affiliated groups or related persons.''.

''(2) RECOGNITION OF GAIN OR LOSS.—In the case of any sale under paragraph (1)—

''(A) notwithstanding any other provision of this title, any gain arising from such sale shall be taken into account for the taxable year of the sale, and

''(B) any loss arising from such sale shall be taken into account for the taxable year of the sale to the extent otherwise provided by this title, except that section 1091 shall not apply to any such loss.

Proper adjustment shall be made in the amount of any gain or loss subsequently realized for gain or loss taken into account under the preceding sentence.

''(3) EXCLUSION FOR CERTAIN GAIN.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—The amount which, but for this paragraph, would be includible in the gross income of any individual by reason of this section shall be reduced (but not below zero) by $600,000. For purposes of this paragraph, allocable expatriation gain taken into account under subsection (f)(2) shall be treated in the same manner as an amount required to be includible in gross income.

''(B) COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENT.—

''(i) IN GENERAL.—In the case of an expatriation date occurring in any calendar year after 2003, the $600,000 amount under subparagraph (A) shall be increased by an amount equal to—

''(I) such dollar amount, multiplied by

''(II) the cost-of-living adjustment determined under section 1(f)(3) for such calendar year, determined by substituting 'calendar year 2002' for 'calendar year 1992' in subparagraph (B) thereof.

''(ii) ROUNDING RULES.—If any amount after adjustment under clause (i) is not a multiple of $1,000, such amount shall be rounded to the next lower multiple of $1,000.

''(4) ELECTION TO CONTINUE TO BE TAXED AS UNITED STATES CITIZEN.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—If a covered expatriate elects the application of this paragraph—

''(i) this section (other than this paragraph and subsection (i)) shall not apply to the expatriate, but

''(ii) in the case of property to which this section would apply but for such election, the expatriate shall be subject to tax under this title in the same manner as if the individual were a United States citizen.

''(B) REQUIREMENTS.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to an individual unless the individual—

''(i) provides security for payment of tax in such form and manner, and in such amount, as the Secretary may require,

''(ii) consents to the waiver of any right of the individual under any treaty of the United States which would preclude assessment or collection of any tax which may be imposed by reason of this paragraph, and

''(iii) complies with such other requirements as the Secretary may prescribe.

''(C) ELECTION.—An election under subparagraph (A) shall apply to all property to which this section would apply but for the election and, once made, shall be irrevocable. Such election shall also apply to property the basis of which is determined in whole or in part by reference to the property with respect to which the election was made.

''(b) ELECTION TO DEFER TAX.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—If the taxpayer elects the application of this subsection with respect to any property treated as sold by reason of subsection (a), the payment of the additional tax attributable to such property shall be postponed until the due date of the return for the taxable year in which such property is disposed of (or, in the case of property disposed of in a transaction in which gain is not recognized in whole or in part, until such other date as the Secretary may prescribe).

''(2) DETERMINATION OF TAX WITH RESPECT TO PROPERTY.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the additional tax attributable to any property is an amount which bears the same ratio to the additional tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year solely by reason of subsection (a) as the gain taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to such property bears to the total gain taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to all property to which subsection (a) applies.

''(3) TERMINATION OF POSTPONEMENT.—No tax may be postponed under this subsection later than the due date for the return of tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year which includes the date of death of the expatriate (or, if earlier, the time that the security provided with respect to the property fails to meet the requirements of paragraph (4), unless the taxpayer corrects such failure within the time specified by the Secretary).

''(4) SECURITY.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—No election may be made under paragraph (1) with respect to any property unless adequate security is provided to the Secretary with respect to such property.

''(i) the tax determined under paragraph (1) as if the day before the expatriation date were the date of such cessation, disposition, or death, whichever is applicable, or

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I am happy to be, once again, on the floor with a very important piece of legislation. With the cooperation of the Democratic leadership of the Senate Finance Committee, Senator BAUCUS, we bring to the floor a bill that was voted out of committee 19 to 2. Senator BAUCUS and I always work together as much as we can—that is, most of the time—to bring to the Senate a bill that can get through the Chamber because as so many people who watch the Senate regularly know, the Senate, unlike the House of Representatives, can't function if it does not function in a bipartisan way.

So we proceed, then, with this bipartisan bill: the Jumpstart Our Business Strength Act. If I refer to the acronym JOBS, it is jumpstart our business strength.

Since March 2000, long before President Bush took office, the manufacturing sector has been under significant economic pressure. Obviously, that has affected manufacturing workers. A recent CBO study estimates that going way back to March 2000, an estimated 3 million workers have lost their manufacturing jobs.

The Congressional Budget Office attributes this job decline to the recession that began in November 2000 and the weak economy in demand that followed, part of it a result of September 11 and recovery not coming as normal as recoveries do.

But we always tend to look at bad news. Bad news tends to make the front pages of the newspaper. Good news tends to make the back pages, if there is good news printed at all.

There is good news on the horizon. That is, that new manufacturing orders, just this past December, surged to their highest levels in 50 years. They haven't been that high since July of 1950. And January was the sixth consecutive month that manufacturing activity expanded. In December, the manufacturing employment index grew for the second consecutive month, but the overall economy during that month added 1,000 jobs only. That was, of course, disappointing. But it wasn't disappointing from the standpoint of the manufacturing employment index growing because it seems that is the lagging sector of this recovery.

I believe we are on the right path for a strong recovery. In fact, there has been a recovery underway since economists ruled that the last recession ended October 1, 2001. But when a recovery ends, it is not always visible. Of course, it is visible in most segments of the economy by very strong indices that are there to prove that. But one area that is not is manufacturing employment. We do now have those 2 consecutive months of increased employment.

I believe we are on the right path to strong recovery, but we must do more to ensure manufacturing stays on the path of recovery. Manufacturing is so vital to the overall health of our economy, including follow-on sectors that benefit: the service and financial sectors.

As government policymakers, which we are, we have to act to revitalize the manufacturing sector. Today we have some good news on manufacturing, and that is, the legislation we bring to the Senate, because it is going to help enhance employment in the manufacturing sector.

As I have said previously, but I cannot emphasize too much, by a vote of 19 to 2 this bill was voted out of the Senate Finance Committee. Our bill is a bipartisan balance of domestic tax relief and international tax reforms, all meant to strengthen American business. Not as an end in itself, but as business strengthens, jobs are created. We are talking about jobs for Americans.

Most importantly, this bill is revenue neutral. That is important, when we read in the newspapers about facing a budget deficit. This bill then will not add one dime to the Federal deficit. The JOBS bill will repeal the current FSC/ETI regime and use all the money from repeal to provide a 3-point tax rate cut on income from U.S.-based manufacturing. I emphasize U.S.-based manufacturing. We start those cuts phasing in next year. This 3-point rate cut is only for manufacturing and only for manufacturing in the United States. This bill will not help American manufacturers that want to manufacture offshore.

I point out how our bill would approach this effort to help create jobs in American manufacturing and do it on American soil as opposed to the way that the Ways and Means Committee of the other body, and even other bills that will be offered in the upcoming debate, would face these issues. Our bill reducing taxes applies to all that manufacture in America.

I wish to make clear to our colleagues this is a bill to help manufacturing in the United States. American companies that manufacture overseas will not get the benefit of the corporate rate reduction. Foreign corporations that want to come over here to America and build plants and employ people in this country would get the benefit. But this bill is about helping American manufacturing that takes place in the United States of America.

I wish to differentiate the approach we use from the approach the Ways and Means Committee uses.

Unlike the pending Ways and Means bill, and other bills that will be offered during the upcoming debate, these cuts apply to all who manufacture in America, regardless of size. So this is going to include sole proprietors, partnerships, farmers, individuals, family businesses, multinational corporations, and foreign companies that set up manufacturing plants in the United States. All of these enterprises will benefit as long as they manufacture.

So the objectives of this bill are pretty simple. Three: Jobs, jobs, jobs, meaning jobs that pay money because of manufacturing in America.

Manufacturing is important to all States, and I want to point out some benefits. For my State of Iowa—the figures I have are for 2001—Iowa's gross State product was $91 billion. Of that, $19 billion or 21 percent of the State's wealth was created by manufacturing. From 2001 to 2002, Iowa's exports grew by nearly 15 percent. We shipped nearly $5 billion of goods out of Iowa, and that was during the year 2002.

In Iowa, we have 222,000 jobs in manufacturing. So that shows how important it is for the United States to be competitive in manufacturing both home and abroad because of 222,000 jobs just in my State. Those kinds of export numbers translate into very good and lasting jobs at home. Many of our country's manufacturing jobs are dependent upon the current FSC/ETI international taxing regime.

I have a map behind me that makes this very clear. It shows by State the jobs that are existing today because of the current FSC/ETI provision: South Carolina, 47,000 jobs; my State of Iowa, 35,000 jobs; California, 429,000 jobs; Texas, 262,000; New York, 215,000; Illinois, 156,000; Washington State, 107,000 jobs generated by FSC/ETI.

As my colleagues probably know, FSC/ETI stands for Foreign Sales Corporation, extraterritorial income. This is what was determined to be contrary to our international trade agreements, and that is why we have this legislation before us because if we do not do something about this issue, these numbers of jobs that are dependent upon this legislation are in jeopardy because our manufacturing will not be competitive with our foreign competition.

Of course, what this is all about is passing legislation that will be in agreement with our trade agreements and, consequently, still protect American manufacturing as the FSC/ETI has done over the last 25 to 30 years.

FSC/ETI reduces the income tax on goods manufactured in the U.S. and sold overseas. FSC/ETI is critical to the manufacturing sector. It can reduce taxes on exports by as much as 3 to 8 tax rate percentage points.

The nonpartisan Joint Committee on Taxation says that 89 percent of the Foreign Sales Corporation benefits go to manufacturing companies. Many of those companies are the largest manufacturing employers in the Nation. This reduced rate of tax on exports of U.S.-manufactured goods keeps our companies competitive in the international marketplace. It allows our companies to compete with the European Union countries, which happen to have a taxing system where they get a rebate on their value-added tax on exports.

If we did not have the Foreign Sales Corporation, we would be exporting more of our taxes, making us uncompetitive with the European Community that has a different taxing system, value-added tax, that they do not export.

Several years ago, the European Union filed a claim with the World Trade Organization challenging FSC/ETI as an illegal export subsidy. Hence, we are here repealing such an important provision because under trading rules, according to the decision, we cannot have a subsidy if it is contingent upon the act of exporting. The World Trade Organization ruled that the FSC/ETI is an illegal export subsidy and has authorized the European Union to impose up to $4 billion a year of sanctions against U.S. exports.

The European Union has already started this because March 1, this year, was the date to do it. The sanctions start at 5 percent of the $4 billion, and they are going to increase 1 percent for each month if we do not repeal the FSC/ETI provisions. They are going to cap out at 17 percent. So by November, these sanctions will be 12 percent. How are we going to compete when the tax benefits that were supposed to level the playing field are not only used, but the European Union, in a legal way under our trade agreements, is levying sanctions. Just as the United States when the European Union lost a case on our beef—they did not take our beef—we leveled sanctions against European products that are coming into this country, all in a legal way but not necessarily in the best way to conduct international trade.

So eventually, these sanctions are going to get up to 17 percent, and at that point the European Union will review the effectiveness of the sanctions, and further increases are possible.

The European Union has been consistent in its message, that the FSC/ETI must be repealed; the same way that we were insistent upon Europe and we won a case in the World Trade Organization that they take our beef.

This is a serious threat against American manufacturing, and Europe knows where to hit us. One of those is agricultural products, plus paper products, and also a number of important manufacturing industries, and they are hitting us right now in our soft underbelly.

These sanctions are going to undermine the economic recovery that is underway, as I indicated before—underway with 2 months in a row of a positive upturn in the manufacturing index. So I believe it is important for the United States to fulfill its obligations under our trading rules.

Now, it so happens that we win a lot more cases than we lose, and it also is true that the United States has been a leader—in fact, the entire world recognizes us as a leader, and they wait for us sometimes—in reducing trade barriers around the world. We have shown leadership for the last 60 or 70 years in this area going back to the reciprocity agreements of the 1930s of reducing trade barriers.

As we expect Europe to import our beef when we win a case, it seems to me that we must show leadership in complying with these rules. What the World Trade Organization is all about is to bring the rule of law to what would otherwise be a jungle of international trade. That is because we get more business activity when there is predictability and understanding of how we are going to do business. Just as that is true in our domestic policy for business expansion, it is true in international trade; if there is predictability, we will get more business expansion around the world.

Domestic law has made that possible within the United States. We need to support a regime that does the same thing in international trade because we have seen under that regime of rule of law in international trade for the last 50 or 60 years the expansion of the world economic pie.

We are not talking about something that is just good for the United States. It is good for the United States. But we are talking about something that is good for the entire world.

We have a growing world population. If you don't have a growing world economic pie, there will be less for more people and less for more people means political, economic, and social instability, and chaos.

So we have seen under this regime of rule of law in international trade that the world economic pie has grown tremendously, and to a great extent because of international trade.

The United States has led the way. We need to continue leading the way. There are some lobbyists who are suggesting this is no big deal, this doesn't have to be done now, it can be done tomorrow, it can be done next year, and somehow these sanctions don't mean anything. They do mean something because they are going to make our products uncompetitive and then we can't sell. If these were put on John Deere tractors in Waterloo, IA, one-fourth of the jobs could go.

One-fourth of the jobs at John Deere tractor in my home State are related to trade. But we do have to abide by the rule of law in international trade unless we want chaos, unless we want the jungle.

These lobbyists say sanctions don't matter. They argue: After all, sanctions only start at 5 percent. They would say: There has been a decline in the dollar. That is going to take care of that problem. With a decline in the dollar, add on 5 percent, no difference.

But I will bet these lobbyists who are spreading this word that Congress doesn't have to act don't represent anybody—any workers or any firms—on this retaliation list. But for those industries that I have already talked about, and there are a lot more, sanctions do matter because they will not be able to export if they can't compete. Five percent right now, and for sure 17 percent a year from now, is going to make a big difference.

In regard to the lower value of the dollar against the euro, that somehow merely restores the status quo of the 1990s for a lot of American companies so they can export more. The recent decline in the dollar helped these companies regain lost market share in Europe, and we have lobbyists saying they ought to be back in that position that they were in just a year ago, not being able to sell because of the high cost of the dollar?

Why would Congress want to deprive these companies and their employees, where these are good American jobs, of the opportunity to export? That is beyond me. These are good jobs, because statistics show conclusively that jobs connected with exports pay 15 percent above the national average.

Besides, there is no guarantee that the value of the dollar will not go up tomorrow because our official policy is a strong dollar policy. Our official policy is also to let the marketplace decide the value of the dollar. But if it does go up, it is going to leave American exporters in even a worse situation than they are today with that 5 percent and next month 6 percent.

It is plain wrong for us in Congress, when we can do something about it—and this bill does something about it—to gamble the future of these American working men and women on the volatile international currency market.

There is another fancy suggestion from these high-paid lobbyists, that all we have to do is cut a Government check to these U.S. exporters that are hurt by the sanctions.

That suggestion is just as stupid as the previous one. First, it is likely that the World Trade Organization would find such a scheme to be a prohibited export subsidy anyway, just as they originally did. That would continue the cycle of noncompliance and retaliation.

These birds don't believe in the rule of law on international trade. They like the jungle of international trade. In fact, most lobbyists like a jungle because they are the ones who think they are smart enough to sort it out. We are not going to allow that jungle to grow just so lobbyists can prosper.

But this scheme, as the original suggestions, is unworkable. It would probably require a new government bureaucracy to administer. You know what. This JOBS bill is about creating manufacturing jobs, not jobs in a government bureaucracy.

It has also been suggested that the U.S. Government could simply pay compensation to some foreign government rather than comply with our international trade obligations. I suppose, in the era of foreign aid, you might say that suggestion is theoretically possible. But it is not very realistic.

Under the World Trade Organization dispute settlement system, there is only one way, just one way, a nation can bring itself into compliance with an adverse ruling, conforming with the WTO-inconsistent measure, and that is with a report adopted by the dispute settlement body. That would dictate that as long as FSC/ETI is not repealed, the United States remains in violation of these international trade commitments. So paying compensation to some government, in my reading of the obligations under the trade commitments, is not going to bring the United States into compliance.

Furthermore, it has to be remembered that compensation in lieu of retaliation is only a viable option if the prevailing parties agree.

I think that is something the European Union is not inclined to do.

Even if it were possible, I am not going to suggest on the Senate floor that the United States taxpayers ought to be writing a check to the country of France. I, for one, don't think Congress is going to buy these arguments that we don't have to deal with this now and there are other ways around. These proposals are shell games expounded by Washington lobbyists trying to confuse Congress, confuse the public, and thus avoiding a real permanent solution to a longstanding FSC/ETI dispute with the European Union. This is not realistic. They will not stop the imposition of European sanctions.

People suggesting these alternatives ought to face facts. Gambling America's exports on the volatile currency market won't work. Cutting government checks to U.S. exporters won't work. Transferring taxpayers' money to foreign governments such as France won't work. These are shell games. There is only one real solution for American workers. This is something that has been worked out in a bipartisan way for the Senate to consider by the Senator from Montana and this Senator. This is the JOBS Act that is before us, and the best solution is to pass the JOBS Act now. I hope my Senate colleagues and our counterparts in the House of Representatives will act on the Finance Committee's FSC/ETI legislation. It is all of our responsibility—Democrat and Republican alike—to pass this bipartisan legislation.

If we, as a body, fail to act, American workers will suffer with fewer jobs, and the United States will lose an opportunity to rejuvenate and remain globally competitive in the mainstay of its economy—the manufacturing sector of our economy.

Our majority leader, Senator FRIST, should be commended for bringing this bill to the floor so that the Senate can act now to end sanctions before they seriously damage the economy and before they damage our transatlantic relations. The bill needs to be passed so we can end the sanctions as soon as possible.

Repealing FSC/ETI raises around $55 billion over 10 years. Eighty-nine percent of it comes from jobs in the manufacturing industry. If that money is not sent back to help the manufacturing sector to be competitive with Europe, FSC/ETI repeal will be a $50 billion tax increase on manufacturing. The old rule of economics is if you tax something more, you get less of it. So there is going to be less jobs in manufacturing.

I think we can all agree that a $50 billion tax increase on manufacturing will not stimulate job growth in that sector. That is why the JOBS bill passed by the Finance Committee uses every penny from the FSC/ETI bill repeal. To give this 3-percentage tax rate cut on all income derived from manufacturing—that is done in the United States—there is no benefit to American companies manufacturing overseas. There would be a benefit to international companies that come here to create jobs in America in manufacturing. Our 3-point rate reduction is not export contingent under the World Trade Organization rules. Unlike the FSC/ETI regime, this 3-point rate reduction applies to goods manufactured in the United States and which are sold domestically in the United States, or if they are exported for sale outside the United States. If you make it here, we cut your taxes regardless of whether you are a U.S. or foreign corporation—bringing those manufacturing jobs, then, to the United States of America. The JOBS bill starts phasing in the 3-point percentage tax rate reduction immediately in 2004.

If you look at this next chart behind me, you see on average, European Union manufacturing income is taxed at 21 percent but U.S. manufacturing income is taxed at 24 percent. As you can see, the 3-point rate cut on manufacturing income in the JOBS bill keeps us even with the European Union on manufacturing tax burdens.

We included in the JOBS bill several international tax reforms that are aimed specifically to help manufacturing. The whole JOBS bill is slanted towards manufacturing. Flaws in our international tax rules seriously undermine America's ability to compete in the global marketplace. International tax reform, like doing something with FSC/ETI, is long overdue.

Our current system is built upon a framework dating back to President Kennedy in the early 1960s. We clean up problems that cause foreign earnings to be double taxed by the United States and the foreign countries where those profits are earned. We reform subpart (f) to ensure that active foreign businesses are taxed when the money is brought home and not when the United States companies are locked in battle with foreign companies that do not pay taxes.

You will hear a lot of noise in the upcoming debate about these international provisions. But let me tell you right now that the international provisions in our bipartisan JOBS bill are targeted to benefit U.S. manufacturing companies. Members may be surprised to learn our international provisions can actually harm a company's expansion in the United States of America where we want companies to expand so that jobs are created here and so that those jobs are not exported. It is a simple thing to do. Just fix our tax laws so that jobs are created in America as opposed to overseas.

We will have plenty of opportunity to talk about that issue in the upcoming debate.

In an era of expanding global markets, in an era of falling trade barriers, and in an era of technological innovations that melt away traditional notions of national borders, it is critical that our international tax laws keep pace with these new business realities.

We also include a provision for manufacturing that is not making money right now. We allow a 3-year net operating loss carryback. This will allow companies to reclaim prior taxes paid. This will give them cash liquidity to weather the current storm.

I understand there may be some effort to expand this 3-year carryback to a 5-year carryback.

The JOBS bill also includes the Homeland Reinvestment Act sponsored by Senator SMITH of Oregon, Senator ENSIGN of Nevada, and Senator BOXER of California. That is a bipartisan group to which anybody ought to be drawn.

This subpart of our JOBS bill, which is sponsored by Senators Smith, Ensign, and Boxer, is intended to encourage companies to bring their foreign earnings back to the United States by temporarily providing the reduced rate of tax. This bill will tax foreign earnings at 5¼ percentage points instead of the 35 percent that would normally apply.

Advocates of this Homeland Investment Act claim that those moneys will be invested overseas instead of the United States, if we don't tax them at a lower rate than the 35 percent.

These colleagues view this measure as I do, very much stimulative to the economy and helping with our unemployment problem.

One last point I will make is that our bipartisan manufacturing tax bill is revenue neutral. I don't think it does harm to emphasize, sometimes we pass a tax bill and less money comes into the Federal Treasury and we might have a bigger deficit. This bill does not do that. Not one dime is added to the current deficit.

Thank God, the President has been in the forefront of this, asking for a bill that would be revenue neutral. We have delivered for our colleagues who believe in revenue neutrality of tax bills. We have delivered for the President.

The JOBS bill provides over $112 billion in business tax relief which is paid for by shutting down tax shelters and by closing abusive loopholes. Let me emphasize that because people are reading about this every day in the newspaper, companies setting up shell corporations overseas, with nothing but a cabinet and maybe an address, a post office box, for the sole purpose of avoiding taxation. They dash and stash the cash, whereas we have all these other patriotic companies staying in America.

There are other schemes I will not go into, but we deal with those schemes in this legislation, bringing in additional revenue that can be used, then, to make our international taxing regime more fair and do it in a way that creates jobs in the United States of America, not overseas.

It is a fact of life with most bills that come to the Senate, there is never complete agreement on an approach. There is always 20 percent on the right and 20 percent on the left that might disagree with something that comes to this Senate. What this Senate is all about is moving things to the center, to get a consensus to get something passed. In the process, there is never complete agreement.

For instance, some Members did not favor including this Homeland Reinvestment Act which Senators SMITH, ENSIGN, and BOXER have written. We have included it in this bill. So we may have votes on that.

Our bill contains a temporary haircut on the rate reduction some Members would like to remove and others would like to retain. We will probably have that divisive issue before the Senate. Some Members prefer a reduction in the top corporate rate in place of all these international tax reforms and manufacturing rate cut deductions. Now, that is a more simple approach than we have, but this approach misses a couple of factors.

First, the top level rate cut would only go to the biggest corporations of America. It would not go to the local family-held S corporation or partnership as our finance bill does. We think we ought to help small business in the process.

Second, FSC/ETI repeal will not create a large tax increase on the service industry. That repeal will be a $50 billion tax increase on manufacturing. If we redirect the FSC/ETI repeal money to an across-the-board corporate cut, as a couple of my colleagues will offer an amendment to do, then the manufacturing sector will be the revenue offset for the services sector of tax cuts. It is a fact that we have a struggling manufacturing sector and I don't think a sector of our economy that is slowly recovering ought to be hit with this sort of a revenue offset for the benefit of the service industry. We have to face what is the current crisis in manufacturing.

Working families are living in financial fear. We owe a secure future to these hard-working men and women. For them, we have a secure future. Their employers must be able to compete and thrive both at home and abroad. Then their future is secure. Their employers cannot thrive if these companies are burdened with excessive tax rates at home and international tax barriers abroad.

Our bipartisan JOBS bill presents the best opportunity to end that burden and to make a downpayment on putting Americans back to work. Let's hope the Senate gets to work, puts American manufacturing back in the game. That is why I am here, urging my colleagues to support a bipartisan JOBS Act and cooperate to get this bill on the President's desk.

In closing, I have one message for the 39 Democrats who are not on the Finance Committee and may not see this, other than just a piece of legislation voted out of the Senate Finance Committee. I say to the 39 Democrats who are not on the committee, they have an opportunity to help us very quickly move a bill to the other body, very quickly help us pass a bill to help manufacturing, help us pass a bill to create jobs for American men and women in manufacturing, which is slow to recover. They have an opportunity to help with bipartisanship in the other body because there are bills in the other body, but they are short of the number of votes they need. Part of the reason is maybe the other body does not see the need to pass a bipartisan bill as we do in the Senate. There are Republicans and Democrats in the other body who are working on a way to do this, a way that is not far removed from our legislation.

If we have a real strong vote over here and we get this done quickly, we might be able to help the House of Representatives pass some legislation and to do it in a bipartisan way. Helping to pass legislation in a bipartisan way is not a bad goal for Senators, since we practice that.

Also, those 39 Democrats will have an opportunity to help the Senate Finance Committee do something we want to do because we can get it done in this bipartisan way and it is not exactly the way the White House wants us to get it done. Here again, we share governing responsibilities with the President and with the House of Representatives, and so Democrats working with Senator BAUCUS and myself, Democrats who are not on the committee, can help get a bill to the President, help the President to see maybe the aspects about this bill they do not like, they ought to take a second look at to see the good work, and help get a bipartisan bill through the House of Representatives.

I don't say that in a defensive way because I don't know of any reason the other 39 Democrats do not want to help us accomplish what we want to accomplish. What I have just said is not for that purpose, but only said for the purpose of those Democrats who are not on this committee, there is a larger aspect than just the language of the legislation that is before the Senate. It benefits them for a lot of goals they want to accomplish that sometimes cannot be accomplished as a minority part of this body.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I would like to make a few remarks about the JOBS bill before the Senate. With this bill, we join in the work of improving the economic well-being of Americans.

This bill is about creating good jobs in America. This bill is about improving the standard of living of all Americans.

Let me begin with the economic context for this bill. In a series of statements over the coming week, I will address particular aspects of the legislation. We begin with the dignity and importance of work. Our jobs often define who we are. They are where we spend much of our waking hours. As the preacher teaches in the book Ecclesiastes, ''A man can do nothing better than to . . . find satisfaction in his work. This . . . I see, is from the hand of God. . . .''

Job creation is fundamental to our ability to live a good life. It is through the creation of good jobs that Americans have come to enjoy remarkable advancements in income and comforts. The American job creation machine makes our shores the shores to which immigrants swarm. We don't see people heading for the door. Rather, people from around the world want to live in America.

Ours is a dynamic economy. This economic growth is the key to our Nation's success.

I point out this chart. I will raise it up so people can see it. This chart shows the picture I have just basically described. In 1900, in the wake of the industrial revolution, America already stood at the pinnacle of the world economy. Already in 1900, believe it or not, we had the highest per capita income in the world, slightly more than Britain or Australia, and almost double that of France or Germany.

But even adjusted for inflation in today's dollars, not 1900 dollars, America's per capita GDP—a rough measure of our average income—was only about $5,000 a year in today's dollars. Measured by today's standards, we lived in poverty: Walking and horseback was how one got around; electricity lit only 3 percent of homes in 1900; only one-third of Americans had running water; only 15 percent had flush toilets; life expectancy was 47 years.

In 1900, America had one of the best educated populations in the world. But 1 in 10 were illiterate. The typical adult had left school after the eighth grade. There were only 382 Ph.Ds awarded in the entire country in 1900.

Even though in 1900 our economy was at the top of the world, Americans had an average income then that the average person in Mexico has today.

If our economy had not grown, our standard of living would be unacceptable by today's measures. Economic growth made a huge difference.

Because of economic growth, inflation-adjusted, our per capita income today is roughly seven times now what it was 104 years ago.

With economic growth, electricity became available across the country, and automobiles made us a mobile nation and made much more of the Nation within reach of work.

It is incredible to see how much we have grown in real per capita GDP since 1900. You can see a dip on the chart in 1929. But we have grown at a rapid rate.

The next chart is very interesting as well. This is private sector employment. American economic growth created 108 million new jobs, net, since 1900. In 1900, the American economy employed 27 million people in its civilian labor force. By January 2004, 104 years later, the American economy employed almost 140 million Americans.

Two-thirds of Americans participate in the labor force—substantially higher rates than in Europe. That is up from 55.5 percent in 1900. Americans are hard-working people. We work.

The American economy has, on average, created more than a million net new jobs every year since 1900. Since 1935, we have done better; America has created 1.5 million jobs every year. That is a net figure.

America's economic growth springs from our people, our freedom, our unity. The American people are smart and as hard working as any in the world. Our free market has given this great people the freedom to achieve their best potential. Our unity has protected its huge internal market from robbers, foreign and domestic.

We are lucky to be Americans, very lucky. Our Nation is still a magnet for immigrants. This country is still a beacon to countries around the world.

We can pride ourselves in our independent judiciary, which helped make this country strong. We can be proud of our system of government—this long-lived democracy. We have a dynamic, mobile society.

In a number of ways, America has it right. More times than not, Americans have struck about the right balance between government protections and private freedoms, to contribute to economic growth.

Our society provides an environment for success. Bill Gates, for example, might be a pauper in Sri Lanka. But America provides the environment and infrastructure and, of course, the political system and markets where a Bill Gates can succeed. We should not take this lesson for granted. This is not true in all countries. Our society, economy and, yes, the Government contributed to the successes of people such as Bill Gates.

Government does have a role to play, for good or evil, either to foster or to impede this economic growth.

Government can impede growth. By running large continuing budget deficits, the Government can suck vital capital out of the economy, robbing individuals and businesses of funds that can be used for investment.

Thus, the record budget deficits that the Government is now running pose a threat to our Nation's economic growth. We have to recognize that. These deficits decrease national savings, decrease private sector investment, and raise interest rates. The resulting slower economic growth and increased cost of borrowing harm businesses, large and small.

Foreign governments can impede our growth when they deny Americans access to their markets, when they don't let us sell products in their country, when they artificially depress the value of their currency, flooding our lands with their imports and denying our exports a fair opportunity to compete.

Our Government can foster growth by investing in education, by opening markets at home and abroad, and by removing barriers to our economic greatness. We can foster growth in America.

That is what this bill is about—removing barriers to economic growth and creating jobs.

It is no secret that in the past few years the engine of American job creation has ground to low gear; manufacturing has been particularly hard hit.

This next chart shows the story of private sector job creation in the American economy over the last decade. Beginning in March of 1993, here at the lower left, the American economy steadily created new jobs throughout the rest of the decade. The economy grew. People had jobs and families had more money in their pockets. In fact, from January of 1993 to January 2001, about 20 million—net jobs—were created in America.

Private sector employment peaked at 111.6 million jobs in December of 2000. The Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that since the end of the year 2000, the private sector of the American economy lost 3 million jobs. You can see that on the chart. Our peak was here in 2000 and we have lost jobs—3 million. Three million jobs were lost in the American economy since that peak in December of 2000. In January of this year—the month for which we have the latest statistics—the American economy employed 108 million private sector workers, which means 1 out of every 40 private sector jobs have disappeared since the end of 2000.

The manufacturing sector has disproportionately borne the brunt of these job losses.

This next chart shows the story. This is manufacturing jobs from 1993 to 2004. We can see the dramatic decline in roughly 2001, since July of 2000.

Since July of 2000, the American economy has lost 3 million manufacturing jobs. That is a net loss. The Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that in January, America employed 14.3 million workers in manufacturing, and that is down from the 42nd straight month from the high of 17.3 million in July of 2000. That is a drop of 17.5 percent in manufacturing employment. More than one in every six American manufacturing jobs has disappeared since July of 2000. Again, one in every six manufacturing jobs in America has disappeared since July of 2000.

Manufacturing jobs have disappeared in all 21 industries that constitute the manufacturing sector. It is in all sectors. We lost jobs in computer and electronics products. We lost jobs in transportation equipment. We lost jobs in machinery. We lost jobs in fabricated metals. We lost jobs across the board.

My home State of Montana has suffered more than most. It has had a 19-percent reduction in manufacturing jobs since January of 2000.

This next chart also shows job losses happening all across the country; not just across all manufacturing sectors but all across America. Every State in the Nation but one has lost manufacturing jobs since July 2000. The darker the shade, the greater the job loss; the lighter the shade—orange and yellow—there is less job loss. But every State in the Nation has lost jobs, except one.

The manufacturing jobs we are losing are good jobs. This next chart shows manufacturing jobs pay more than service jobs on the average. We all know we are moving from a manufacturing society to a service job society. Regrettably, those new jobs, service jobs, pay quite a bit less than manufacturing jobs, and that has been true from 1994 all the way up through the current date.

This next chart shows manufacturing employment is now at its lowest absolute level since July of 1950. Fewer Americans are employed in manufacturing today than at any time in more than half a century. We can see from the line from 1950 to today there is essentially the same number of jobs. Clearly, we are not doing very well.

Why do I mention all this? First, it is fact. Second, we have to deal with it. We have to do something about it, and that brings us to the bill before us, the JOBS bill. We have targeted the provisions of this bill directly at manufacturing employment. Why? Because that has been the greatest problem.

This bill will not be a complete solution. By no stretch of the imagination will this bill be a complete solution to job loss in America. To help create and keep manufacturing jobs, we also need to do many other things in addition to passing this bill. We need to open foreign markets to American goods much more aggressively than we have done in the last couple of years. We need to improve education, to preserve the comparative advantage of American workers. Clearly, we have to be the smartest—hopefully at least try to be the smartest—in the world. To do that, we have to educate our kids and keep education at all levels, and to retrain workers.

We also need to make health care more affordable. Health care costs in the United States are too high. They place a big burden on employment, on businesses. The cost of health insurance and the cost of health care is way too high and should be lowered. We also need to provide assistance to displaced workers. They need to be retrained.

This bill will do two things that will make an important contribution to creating and keeping manufacturing jobs in America. This bill will contribute to economic growth and increased demand. This bill will help reduce manufacturers' tax burdens. It will reduce the tax rate for domestic manufacturers by 3 percentage points. Basically, it is a 9-percent reduction for domestic manufacturing income, which translates to about a 3-percentage point break for corporations. The JOBS Act will thus help all manufacturers who produce goods in the United States.

Cutting taxes for domestic manufacturers will help prevent layoffs. It will help. It will not solve the entire problem, but it is going to certainly help. It will help preserve jobs, and this bill is paid for. It will not contribute to the deficit. It thus will not raise interest rates. It thus will not levy that hidden tax of higher borrowing costs for business.

This is an important bill. It comes none too soon. American manufacturing is calling out for help. This bill is part of the answer.

To ensure continued prosperity and well-being, the American economy needs to start growing again, and this bill is part of that solution.

This bill is an important first step to address the economic circumstances in which we find our country. Over the days to come, I look forward to working with my colleagues on this bill. I particularly thank the chairman of the committee, Chairman GRASSLEY, who has done a terrific job in putting this bill together in a way that focuses directly on the problem.

We know we are here in large respect because of the WTO ruling which says we must repeal the so-called FSC/ETI regime because it is WTO illegal and replace it with a system that helps our domestic manufacturers in a way that is legal under WTO. There are various ways to fashion a replacement bill, and the other body has a replacement bill which gives the break to American corporations, C corporations, big corporations. We have a different bill. Our bill says if you are a C corporation, if you are an S corporation, sole proprietorship, partnership—whatever—if you manufacture products domestically in the United States of America, whether you export is irrelevant. You get the same reduction in your tax rate. That is to help small business as well as big business. So business together across the board is helped, not just big business.

We all know that is important because most new jobs are created by small businesses. There are many more small business people in this country than there are big business. Small business tends to be more creative in creating new jobs and expanding rather than big corporations.

I will stop here. There is much more to say about this bill.

One final point. I mentioned it is paid for. It is paid for by measures which in themselves should be good public policy and we should pass, anyway. What are they? They are corporate tax loophole closures. They are shelters legislation. They are post-Enron provisions that have not yet been enacted into law. There is something else called silos, to shut down another abusive international transaction.

Not only is this bill paid for, it is paid for in ways that will help restore consumer and investment confidence in American business which, in and of itself, will help create and keep jobs in America.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I have a few more comments I would like to make about this bill. I hope, though, we can get an agreement put together, a list of several amendments that would then be in order. I know various Senators and leadership are now discussing that. It would be my hope we could reach that agreement fairly soon so we can get on with this bill.

Let me just discuss for a few minutes what this JOBS bill is really all about. It is a bill which the Finance Committee reported last November. It is something we simply must pass due to the WTO decision. I hope we can get it enacted into law as soon as possible.

I think this bill is important for three reasons. First of all, it will cut taxes for domestic manufacturers. That is important. The bill will also simplify taxes for American companies operating overseas. That, too, is important. And it will bring us into compliance with an unfavorable ruling of the World Trade Organization—no small matter. The JOBS bill, the bill before us, reduces the tax rate for domestic manufacturers by 3 percentage points. So if you are in the top bracket, it is 3 percentage points. If you are a company or corporation in a lower bracket, it is still about the same. Actually, it is a 9-percent deduction for the cost of producing or manufacturing products in the United States, which translates to about a 3-point reduction. Cutting taxes for domestic manufacturers will help prevent layoffs. It will help preserve jobs. As we all know, this country has lost 3 million—think of that, 3 million—manufacturing jobs since July of 2000. That is net loss. We have lost a lot more and gained some, but the net loss is 3 million manufacturing jobs lost since July of 2000.

When I talk to manufacturers in my home State, as I know the Presiding Officer does in her own State, they say the rising cost of doing business is one of the biggest impediments to business. It is a big problem business has. By cutting the cost of doing business, this bill will help alleviate the job loss.

This bill will help companies do their job. This bill helps small businesses as well as larger businesses. The Tax Code treats different kinds of businesses differently, as we all know. C corporations, as you well know, are companies that exist as a separate entity from their owners, thus limiting the owners' liability. The corporations can be liable for various actions, but the stockholders themselves, the owners, are not. That is the reason why companies organize themselves, very often, in that manner.

This chart shows about 26 percent of companies in the United States are organized as C corporations; that is, they limit their owners' liability, the shareholders themselves. The owners are not liable.

Sole proprietorships and partnerships are businesses where the owners of the business are fully liable for its debts. S corporations are smaller businesses that are incorporated for liability purposes but taxed as a partnership. The S corporations, partnerships, and sole proprietorships are collectively known as passthrough entities. These are generally smaller businesses, while C corporations are larger concerns.

Why do I mention all of that? I mention all that because, as I earlier stated, about a quarter of companies are organized as C corporations, but about three-quarters of American companies are organized differently, either as sole proprietorships, as partnerships, or as S corporations. We want to make sure that not just standard, garden-variety C corporations get the benefit of this bill but that all companies that manufacture domestically get the benefit of this bill, so we have changed the underlying bill.

Currently, today, under the FSC/ETI regime, which has been declared illegal by the WTO, the C corporations are the ones that get the benefit of the tax break. It helps them export products overseas. But in the Finance Committee, we felt, not just big companies but all companies should get the benefit of reduced taxes.

Nearly three-fourths of the manufacturers in this country are S corporations, partnerships, and sole proprietorships. About three-quarters of all new jobs that are created are by these small businesses. This chart shows that. About one-half of all employees in this country are employed not by big C corporations, they are employed by the other passthrough entities I mentioned. About three-quarters of all the jobs created and held in the United States are not by the big companies but by all the other smaller companies.

That is why we have extended this bill to include so-called passthrough entities. Our smaller businesses are the backbone of my State's economy and certainly the backbone of the economy of the Presiding Officer's State. I think they deserve tax relief just as much as larger businesses do.

In addition, by including partnerships and sole proprietorships, more of our agricultural producers will become eligible for this tax relief.

The JOBS bill that is before us also includes long overdue international tax reform. We are not just talking about the domestic manufacturing reduction rate; we are also talking about international tax simplification. That is for bigger American companies that do operate overseas. We want to make sure our American companies are competing on equal ground with rivals from other countries. One way to do that is to limit double taxation. When our companies are taxed twice, that makes them less competitive. We have included international tax simplification and reform provisions that will help American companies compete with foreign companies overseas.

A number of provisions will help companies better utilize their foreign tax credits. Foreign tax credits prevent income from being taxed twice. There is a repatriation provision that encourages companies to bring back overseas profits for investments in the United States. There is also a provision that will ease the tax compliance burden for small businesses looking to gain access to overseas markets. These are worthwhile, and they are measures that will help restore fairness and integrity to our American tax system.

As I mentioned, the bill repeals the current FSC/ETI laws. Why? To bring us into compliance with WTO obligations. Our bill replaces a tax incentive that was dependent on exports with a tax incentive that is not dependent on exports. A company can utilize this tax benefit in this bill whether the product it manufacturers is exported. So long as it is manufactured in the United States, that company qualifies. We will partially offset the loss of tax benefits to U.S. exporting companies, therefore, by the repeal of the current law, which I said is inconsistent with WTO, and will also provide benefits to all American manufacturers, providing a needed boost to our economy.

Another point: This legislation is completely paid for. Repealing the old FSC/ETI regime will cover most of the cost for the new tax incentive. By repealing the current law, that almost pays for what we are doing here.

The international provisions are paid for; that is, the additional provisions of the bill are paid for with offsets that curb abusive tax shelters. We have offsets in this bill. They will not just create revenue, but they are also good provisions, good tax policy in and of themselves—clamping down on shelters, the inversions provisions, post-Enron reforms, something else called SILOs, which is a gimmick, frankly, that international American companies are using to shelter their income. All that is shut down, and that pays for the rest of the bill. Again, these shelter provisions are absolutely critical to be enacted.

Let me mention in a little bit more detail the three reasons for supporting this bill. I mentioned it is fully offset and the revenue goes to manufacturing. I think that is a principle we should maintain. We should not put incentives in this bill or change this bill in a way that deviates from that. We should also not change this bill in any way that reduces or diminishes stopping the abuses of tax shelters. That is a principle we should absolutely maintain.

I might say something about our budget deficit. Our current budget deficit is projected at about $521 billion this year. We all know that is basically an understatement. It is going to be much worse. Why? Because the administration's budget, as well as the budget resolution pending in the Senate Budget Committee, does not include several factors which more accurately reflect the true deficit our country is facing. What are those? First, both the budgets of the administration and the Budget Committee, which will be coming before the floor on Monday, will not include the cost of the war in Iraq. It will not include war costs. In fact, defense spending is going to be cut a little bit. One might wonder why, when costs are going up. My guess is the administration will come back with a supplemental next year with a big increase in Iraq costs and war costs. This budget does not include that and it should. That would be more honest.

Second, the budget does not include the cost of making expiring tax cuts permanent. That is the view of the administration, that they should be permanent. The budget does not include that.

It doesn't include providing alternative minimum tax relief. We all know this Congress is going to have to enact alternative minimum tax relief soon, and it is very expensive. That also is not included, to say nothing of the cost of paying for the baby boomers when they start to retire in the not too distant future.

Deficits are going to be a lot larger than contemplated in either the administration budget or the budget resolution that will come to the floor.

I say that because it is all the more reason why this bill must be budget neutral. I say that also because there are other Members of Congress who have a different view about that. They would not like this to be budget neutral. They would like there to be further tax cuts but not paid for. I think that is not wise. Frankly, psychologically, as well as actually, the American people will appreciate us having a budget-neutral bill and trying to work toward a balanced budget. That means people around the country are saying those guys and gals in Washington maybe have their heads screwed on straight. Maybe they are doing something right back there. Maybe they are not frittering away taxpayer money.

The more we do what is right, by keeping this budget neutral, not succumbing to the siren song of lowering taxes but not paying for them, the better off we will be in so many respects.

Another point: We have a heck of a job ahead of us, a huge challenge. What is it? It is how to create more jobs in America, how to keep jobs in America, and how to help those who have lost jobs—no easy task. It is extremely difficult. We all know the statistics. Three million manufacturing jobs lost in the last several years. We have to do something about that. The real question is, what do we do? What is the right thing to do? Some say it is OK. That is the way things are. That is international competition. That is globalization. It just happens. In the long run we are all better off. Some say that.

Essentially that was a statement of Mr. Mankiw the other day that has been bandied about so much. He said that is the way it is. There will be new technologies. Companies will be able to compete better. They have to lower their costs, and they can lower their costs if they can compete any place in the world. If that means jobs overseas, lowering costs, that makes American companies more competitive.

I have a different view. I think we have to face up to the challenge of creating more jobs and retraining Americans so they can have jobs, and keeping those jobs in America. That is, we cannot be passive. We have two choices: try or do nothing.

I say we try to create more jobs in America; we try to keep more jobs in America; we try to retrain people and help people who have lost jobs. We have to do something about it.

The administration thus far has been passive. It has gone AWOL. It does not seem to really care. I do not see any affirmative programs to create jobs in America. We need them. It is a hugely complex problem in both the short term and long term. In the long term, it is education—science, math, engineering. Did you know we don't graduate nearly as many engineers as does Japan, Europe? And China graduates about three times the number of engineers we do. Did you know that? How long can we continue that? In the long term, we cannot. It is unsustainable.

I must also say the amount of financial aid or the amount of support in basic research has dropped tremendously in America. The number of engineers who graduate in America is now about 30 percent less than it was not too many years ago. The figure is worse than that. We are not going to be able to compete in the long run if we continue that. It can't be done. There are lots of other long-term measures we have to undertake.

There are also in the midterm things we could be doing and we are not. What are they? No. 1, we are not opening foreign markets. Look at India, look at other countries in the world that are closed to America, particularly the country of India. We hear about all the call centers going to India. We don't hear about goods being exported to India for a very good reason: India is by and large closed. They are closed to intellectual property rights, closed to so many markets, so many products. India is closed. What are we doing about that? Not much.

The same can be said for other countries—China. Remember the WTO? They are a member of the WTO. We gave them PNTR. China has a lot more to do.

What are we doing in trade? Basically looking to countries—with no disrespect—such as Bahrain and Morocco. These smaller countries don't have huge commercial benefit to the United States. It is easier to reach trade agreements with those countries. It is much more difficult to go after where the real problem is. As I mentioned, this country is not doing that, and it should do that. It should start working more aggressively to open markets so we can sell products overseas. When we start selling products overseas, that means more jobs in America. It is pretty doggone simple, but it is not being done.

I might also add that there are other things we could be doing that we are not doing. I mentioned education. We are cutting education in this country. We are not fully financing No Child Left Behind. How are we going to compete in the world if we don't give full due to education? We have all gone overseas and visited high schools in countries worldwide. I have. The graduates in Pusan, Korea, are bright as the dickens, and they are hungry.

We have great schools and great teachers. But there is so much more we can do. In my State—and this may be true in other States—teachers are leaving because their salaries are so low. They cannot teach. A lot of schools in the country are cutting back on gifted children programs. They don't have any money. Why are we cutting back on gifted kids? That certainly helps all kids, including the underprivileged.

Madam President, I will yield the floor because I see our Democratic leader in the Chamber. He has a lot to tell us. Certainly, it will add immensely to this discussion. I urge us to think critically about the real problem. We cannot close our borders and put our heads in the sand. We have to meet this challenge head on. This is part of that effort.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Democratic leader is recognized.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I compliment the Senator from Montana for his words. I have not heard all of his remarks this morning, but I could not agree more that this is a problem that has to be addressed head on. As he noted, this legislation gives us an opportunity to do so. It may not be the ultimate solution, but it is a critical building block in our effort to restore the economy and create new jobs.

I hope that very shortly we can get on with the debate. We had an agreement not to offer amendments, of course, until people have had a chance to make opening statements. I intend to make a short one. I hope in the not too distant future we can begin the real debate. We don't have a lot of time. We have 3 days. Senator FRIST is right that we have a lot to do in a short period of time. If we are going to maximize the use of these 3 days, it is time to get on with amendments. I know Senator HATCH is prepared to offer the first one. We hope that certainly before the end of this noon hour, we will have offered the first amendment.

Mr. President, these are very difficult times for millions of American families.

Nine million Americans can't find jobs. We have the highest long-term unemployment rate in 20 years. And in the last 3½ years, our economy has lost 2.9 million jobs; 2.8 million of those jobs were manufacturing jobs.

These aren't abstract numbers. They have real world, dramatic impacts in South Dakota and across our country. And the millions of affected families are looking to us for answers. They don't want hand-outs; they want jobs.

Unfortunately, American has lost manufacturing jobs every month since this administration took office—every single month. This is unprecedented. It's also dangerous for our economy.

Manufacturing is more productive, it pays higher wages, and provides more benefits than other sectors of the economy. Manufacturing jobs are the kind of jobs you can raise a family on. They're the kind of jobs that make it possible for middle-class families to put their kids through college, and put something away for retirement.

We have clear choices in facing this problem. We can let jobs move overseas—or we can fight to keep them here. We can try to create jobs here, or we can do nothing in the face of globalization.

We can provide help for workers who are losing their jobs, or we can look the other way. And we can strengthen worker protections, or we can strip away overtime and other benefits that have been a hallmark of the American workplace.

A couple of weeks ago, President Bush and his economic advisors weighted in on this issue and told Americans it was a good idea to ship jobs overseas and we ought not worry about it. I don't see it that way, and I know people in South Dakota don't see it that way. And we need to do something about it.

Today's legislation is the second step in this process. The first step was the creation and the passage of a very important highway bill, which will create hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of new jobs over the course of the next 6 years. This is the second step.

The foreign sales corporation regime was created to counterbalance provisions in the Tax Code that create incentives to move operations overseas. It provided tax advantages for American companies that keep their jobs in America and ship their products overseas.

But the World Trade Organization has decided that these advantages were an unfair subsidy and needed to be eliminated. And if they weren't eliminated, international sanctions would follow. Those sanctions kicked in beginning March 1.

The question before us is what to replace the old export tax regime with?

The Bush administration is completely focused on overseas activities and has proposed nothing to encourage manufacturing job creation at home.

But thanks to Chairman GRASSLEY and Senator BAUCUS, we have another solution before us.

The centerpiece of their legislation is creating tax incentives for manufacturers that will keep and create good jobs in America. Their proposal is one of the most important opportunities we will have this year to begin addressing America's manufacturing crisis.

Just as importantly, this bill gives us an overdue opportunity to do more.

We need to accelerate and increase domestic manufacturing tax incentives, and establish a strong job creation tax credit.

We need to prohibit tax deductions for outsourcing expenses, and require notice to employees about outsourcing plans. Every community has a right to know how many employees are losing their jobs, why then are losing their jobs, and where those jobs are being sent.

We need to restrict outsourcing of government contracts.

We need to help workers who are hurt by outsourcing, and make sure they have access to training and health care while they get back on their feet.

And we need to reverse some of the Bush administration's worst policies—like eliminating overtime for 8 million workers, including veterans who have been given training in the military and are now ineligible for overtime pay as a result of this regulation. We need to do that. American workers have the same rights they have always had. That fact needs to be reemphasized with the legislation we will offer on this bill.

We can't wait until next year to make these improvements. Millions of American families need them today. And I have seen firsthand, in South Dakota, why this is so important.

I recently toured a manufacturing plant in Sioux Falls. Graco Incorporated is the world's leading manufacturer of fluid-handling systems and equipment. They've been in business for 78 years. They employ about 165 people.

The plant manager showed me two, nearly identical parts. The first was made in Sioux Falls. The other—made overseas—wasn't quite as high-quality, but it cost a little less because the people who made it were paid less, with no benefits.

The manager showed me those two parts. Then he introduced me to the workers who would lose their jobs if Graco took the easy, offshoring route. He said, ''I don't want to be the one to have to tell them they don't have jobs anymore.''

The people at Graco are resisting the temptation to export their workers' jobs. They're doing everything they can think of to be good, responsible corporate citizens of my State. The last thing the Federal Government should do is make that job any harder.

Our responsibility is to make it easier for Graco and thousands of other companies to keep and create jobs here at home.

As I said, this bill is one step in a long process. By itself, it will not completely reverse the unpredecented decline in American manufacturing that has occurred since 2001. That will require a comprehensive plan and sustained bipartisan cooperation over a period of time.

In the short term, we have to work together to restore fiscal sanity to the budget.

The Federal deficit this year will be half-a-trillion dollars—with no end in sight to the red ink. This debt could cripple our economy and destroy our children's future.

In the longer term, our Government should assist people with education and training so they can seize the opportunities that rapid change creates. We need to help people who are displaced by change, and we need to make sure America remains on the cutting edge of innovation.

The administration is not facing either of these challenges. We have the largest budget deficits in all of American history, and the administration is drastically underfunding training and education.

The President's budget recommends $9.3 billion less for the President's own educational reform plan than the new law calls for.

By choosing tax cuts for those at the top over assistance for States, the President has forced drastic increases in tuition at public colleges and universities.

The administration has fought Democratic efforts to help dislocated workers upgrade their skills at community colleges.

At a time when other countries are feverishly trying to challenge America's preeminence in critical technology, the administration, through neglect and politicization has weakened America's science and technology infrastructure and undercut America's scientific edge.

The decline in American manufacturing isn't just happening on President Bush's watch. It is happening in part because of President Bush's policies.

Our choices are clear. We can follow the administration's path and make it easier and cheaper for companies to ship American jobs overseas, or we can fight to keep good jobs in America. We can turn our back on millions of workers and families who cannot find jobs, or we can help them get back on their feet and get back to work.

It is our hope that, in a bipartisan way, we can find ways to ensure that these goals can be achieved, not only with this legislation but certainly beginning with the amendments we will offer throughout the debate on this bill and hopefully with final passage accorded this legislation someday soon.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Madam President, before the distinguished Democratic leader leaves the floor, I would like, through you, to pose this to him: We have been here now for approximately 2 hours on this very important legislation. The Democratic leader has talked about how important it is, the distinguished chairman of the committee has talked about how important it is, our ranking member has talked about how important it is, and we are doing nothing. We have a gentleman's agreement that this would be for debate only, but I think the Democratic leader would agree with me, and I think everybody should be put on notice that this cannot go on all day long, that this is ridiculous; would the Senator agree to that?

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I respond to the Senator from Nevada, the distinguished assistant Democratic leader, that the schedule is clear. We have this afternoon, we have tomorrow, and, let's face it, honestly, we only have Friday morning, and we will be under great pressure, I am sure, not to have any amendments offered beyond midmorning on Friday.

So for all intents and purposes, we have a little bit more than a day to debate this critical legislation prior to the time the majority leader has already indicated we are going to be moving to the budget, setting aside this legislation.

We are going to be assessed $4 billion in tariffs beginning this week if we do not correct the current situation. So this legislation is urgent. It needs to be addressed.

I think we have some very critical amendments that ought to be offered in this very narrow window to accommodate concerns on both sides of the aisle. I hope we can do so. Frankly, as the Senator suggests with his question, we need to do it soon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Madam President, it is true also, is it not, that we have made—and I would like to hear the Democratic leader respond to this—a fair response? The majority has an amendment they want to offer, sponsored by Senator HATCH, dealing with extension of some tax credits. We then said we would like to offer an amendment to stop what—it is not a crime but it is close to it in our country today with all the outsourcing of all these contracts, and we want to make sure the U.S. Government contracts are not outsourced unless there are certain limitations placed upon them.

Then they would come back with another amendment sponsored by Senator BUNNING. Then we would come back with another amendment sponsored by Senator HARKIN dealing with overtime, and this is no secret; this is an issue about which we have great concern as to what the administration is doing with American workers with overtime.

Is there anything in this agreement the Democratic leader sees that should prevent us from moving forward on this critical legislation? We have even agreed to time limits; is that not true?

Mr. DASCHLE. The Senator from Nevada is correct. We have agreed with our Republican colleagues to limit the amount of time devoted to each of these amendments.

I see the distinguished chair of the Finance Committee, and it looks as if he may be about to propound a unanimous consent request. Perhaps we can yield the floor to accommodate his interests in doing so. I think we all hope to achieve the same goal. Let's move this bill forward. Let's have a good debate about amendments, up or down, and let's see if we can complete our work on this legislation in a timely way.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I ask the following unanimous consent request. We have perfecting amendments that have been cleared on both sides. Therefore, I ask unanimous consent that the first-degree and second-degree perfecting amendments that are at the desk be considered and agreed to en bloc and that the motions to reconsider be laid upon the table; provided further that the committee substitute be agreed to and considered as original text for the purpose of further amendment. I further ask unanimous consent that the next first-degree amendments in order be the following: a Senator Hatch and Senator Murray amendment on R&D, with a Bingaman second-degree amendment which is relevant to the first degree; then Senator DODD dealing with outsourcing; then Senator BUNNING and Senator STABENOW dealing with accelerating manufacturers' tax cut; and then the fourth amendment will be Senator DASCHLE or his designee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Madam President, reserving the right object, I wish to express my appreciation to the chairman of the committee. He, in the statement he has made so far, along with the ranking member, underscored the importance of moving this legislation, and this is movement in that direction.

As we indicated in the dialog between Senator DASCHLE and this Senator, we will agree on time limits anytime the Senator wants to work something out in that regard. We will be happy to do that. This is a very good first step, and we do not object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 2646) was agreed to.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under ''Text of Amendments.'')

The amendment (No. 2645), as amended, was agreed to.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under ''Text of Amendments.'')

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. REID. Madam President, we now have an amendment that will be offered as soon as Senator HATCH arrives. Senator BYRD saw we were not doing a lot on the floor, and he asks, through me, that he be able to speak for up to 20 minutes at this time.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I feel as if I owe that to the Senator from West Virginia because I already made arrangements for him to speak before we completed this agreement.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I propound that in the form of a unanimous consent request, with the understanding that the first amendment be offered as soon as he finishes. That will be good.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Madam President, I thank the distinguished Democratic whip and I thank the distinguished chairman of the committee for his courtesy.

INDEPENDENT COMMISSIONS ON NATIONAL SECURITY ISSUES

Most of us are familiar with the Aesop's fables, having read some of them at one or more times during our lives. Aesop once told the story of a jaybird that ventured into a yard where peacocks used to walk. There the jay found a number of feathers fallen from the majestic birds when they had last molted. He tied them all to his tail and strutted toward the peacocks. His cheat was quickly discovered, and the peacocks harassed the imposter until all his borrowed plumes had fallen away. When the jay could do no more than return to his own kind, having watched him from afar, they were equally affronted by the jay's actions.

The moral of the story, said Aesop, is that it takes more than just fine feathers to make fine birds.

It is an age-old lesson that the Congress should hold in its mind as we consider how best to investigate the distorted and misleading intelligence that the administration used to build its case for war in Iraq.

On February 6, the President announced the creation of his own commission to investigate our intelligence agencies to find out, in the words of Dr. David Kay, why we were almost all wrong about the administration's prewar claims of huge Iraqi stockpiles of weapons of mass destruction. If Congress is serious about getting to the bottom of this apparent intelligence failure and the administration's rush to war, we must realize that once stripped of its dazzling plumage, the White House proposal for its own so-called independent commission is a real, honest to goodness turkey. It is not only fine feathers that make fine birds.

The President has described the panel that he created as being an independent commission. Well, nothing could be further from the truth. This commission is 100 percent under the thumb of the White House. Who created the panel's charter? The President. Who chooses the panel members? The President. To whom does the panel report? The President. Whom shall the panel advise and assist? The President. Who is in charge of determining what classified reports the panel may see? The President. Who gets to decide whether the Congress may see the panel's report? The President.

To describe this commission as independent is to turn that word's definition on its head. In fact, the deeper one delves into the text of the Executive order that creates the President's so-called independent commission, the more one finds that the commission is ill-equipped to discover just what went wrong with the prewar intelligence on Iraq.

At first glance, the charter of the President's commission appears very broad. It is to assess whether the intelligence community of the United States is sufficiently authorized, organized, equipped, trained, and resourced to tackle the threats of terrorism and weapons of mass destruction. As part of that goal, the commission is to compare prewar intelligence on Iraq with what has so far been discovered.

That mission sounds like a mouthful, but it really misses the point of why the American people are calling for a commission to investigate in this matter.

The public has a right to know why our intelligence on Iraq was so wrong, how the administration may have misrepresented its intelligence, who is going to be held accountable for misleading our country into war, and what will be done to fix the problems with our intelligence. Those are exactly the questions an independent intelligence panel should be investigating, and yet the President's commission only skirts those key issues.

What is more, even though the President promised that his commission will investigate current intelligence on North Korea, Iran, and Pakistan, his Executive order, in fact, does not bother to direct the commission to review intelligence on those countries. Instead, the President's Executive order directs the commission to focus its energies on Libya and Afghanistan. Libya and Afghanistan are not countries that the President has labeled as part of his axis of evil. A real independent intelligence commission would shine new light on how we assess the threats of North Korea and Iran, not be distracted by sideshows that will keep the commission busy until March 31, 2005.

The President has carefully drafted this Executive order to allow himself to serve as the gatekeeper on what information the so-called independent commission might have access to. While the President directs Federal agencies to cooperate with this commission, he also has created a giant loophole that would prevent the most important intelligence products from being read by his commission.

The Executive order reads as follows: The President may at any time modify the security rules or procedures of the commission to provide the necessary protection to classified information.

I was born at night but not last night. All of America knows that the White House is in a dispute with the September 11 Commission over intelligence reports that were read by the President. The commission wants them. The White House will not give them. The Executive order drafted by the President to create an intelligence commission makes sure that his own commission will never see documents that the President does not want them to see.

At least the 9/11 Commission has the power to issue subpoenas for critical information. The President's intelligence commission does not even have that power. The deck is being stacked against a full and open inquiry on the prewar intelligence on Iraq. Congress is not even assured of having access to the commission's report.

The President has required that the commission send its report to him in March 2005 and then within 90 days the President will consult with the Congress concerning the commission's report and recommendations.

Why can the Congress not simply read the commission's report? Why should the White House be given the opportunity to reword, reshape, redact, or even flat out censor the so-called independent commission's report before Congress can get their hands on it?

It is quite possible that if this so-called independent commission is allowed to proceed as the President has directed, Congress will never have the chance to review the commission's work.

Tucked away in the President's Executive order is a provision that intends to exempt this commission from judicial review. Let us not forget that the Office of the Vice President fought tooth and nail in Federal courts, and is still doing so, to keep the General Accounting Office, an arm of the Congress, from learning about the meetings of the Vice President's energy task force.

Could this provision be an attempt to hide the work of the President's intelligence commission from Congress? I would not put such a scheme beyond the White House, which has already demonstrated its zeal for secrecy.

The administration's case for war in Iraq appears to have been built upon cherry-picked intelligence, produced and massaged to hype the American people into going along with a war of choice. The President's so-called independent commission would allow the White House to do the exact same number on the commission's report as it did on prewar intelligence and analysis; namely, pick out only the parts that it wants the public to see and bury the rest.

It is bitter irony that a report on whether the administration covered up evidence that contradicted a rush to war might itself be covered up under the terms of the President's Executive order.

So what is next? An independent commission to investigate the President's own commission? Is that so? I wonder. Let us not make the mistake of ignoring the shortcomings of the White House's version of an intelligence commission on Iraq, only to be haunted by those problems later.

The revelation by Dr. Kay that he does not believe any stockpiles of weapons of mass destruction existed in Iraq has dealt a blow to the President's case for war. It has shaken the American people's faith in their Government. We owe it to the American people to get to the bottom of what went wrong with our intelligence agencies and whether the administration misused the intelligence that it was provided.

The President has simultaneously promised a commission to investigate these matters and stacked the deck against the independence of his very own panel. That is not the right way to gain the confidence of the American people in their Government. It is yet another in a string of attempts by this White House to mislead the American people on issues of national security.

Congress must step in and correct the grievous error that the President has made in creating a commission that is not equipped properly to do its job. Congress should use the independent 9/11 Commission, a commission that has shown itself to be fair, independent, and bipartisan, as a starting point for how to create an independent panel to investigate the Iraq intelligence failures. If the administration is serious about getting to the bottom of this debacle, this new commission might even be created in just a matter of days.

The American people deserve answers on why the administration relied on faulty intelligence to take this country to war without presence of an imminent threat. A commission that is designed to keep the inquiry under the thumb of the same White House that misled Congress and the public about the nature of the threat from Saddam Hussein will never be able to operate independently. So Congress should not allow the President to get away with posting a fox at the door to the hen house.

The structure of the 9/11 Commission is a solid foundation upon which to conduct an inquiry into the administration's prewar intelligence claims. The 9/11 Commission has been doing yeoman's work in digging into all of the events that led up to those catastrophic attacks on New York and Washington. In fact, the only real problem that the 9/11 Commission has faced is the lack of cooperation from the White House.

After refusing to meet with the full membership of the 9/11 Commission, the President and Vice President have reluctantly proposed to meet only with the chairman and vice chairman of the panel. And for how long? Just 1 hour.

The National Security Adviser has flatly refused to participate in any public discussions with the Commission. The White House position on dealing with the 9/11 Commission is so unreasonable that the administration is drawing criticism from both sides of that panel. There is even talk that former Senator Bob Kerrey, who once served as Chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, could resign because of the administration's refusal to let the Commission do its work. What could possibly be the reason for this stonewalling by the White House?

It is as if a whole swath of the Washington establishment has completely forgotten the horror of the terrorist attacks that killed 3,000 innocent people. But the American people have not forgotten. The American people have their priorities straight. They place getting at the truth of how that tragedy was carried out above election year politics.

Enough with the stonewalling. Enough with the foot dragging. Enough with the election year politics. The Senate acted correctly a few days ago to extend the life of the 9/11 Commission so that it can get its work done, and the House should promptly follow suit. Now Congress should act quickly to create an independent Iraq intelligence commission. The confidence of the American people in their Government, the people's government, hangs in the balance.

Madam President, I yield the floor and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HAGEL). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, the amendment I am offering today is an important and appropriate one for any bill that has the word ''jobs'' in its title. It is a bill to extend and expand a tax provision that is central to creating and retaining U.S. jobs—the research credit. I am joined in this effort by Senators MURRAY, BAUCUS, CANTWELL, SMITH, BUNNING, and GRASSLEY.

This bipartisan amendment will help to ensure that businesses continue to increase research activities—and to create new jobs—in the United States. As many of our colleagues are aware, the current research credit expires in just a few weeks, on June 30, 2004.

I believe that if we fail to act to extend this credit, we surely will see the negative effects manifest in lower economic growth, fewer jobs, fewer innovative products, and opportunities lost as research is taken from this country to other nations that offer more attractive incentives.

Our colleagues many times have expressed their resounding support for the research credit and I hope they will again. This amendment not only would extend the credit for 18 months, until December 31, 2005, but also would allow businesses to choose a new way to calculate the credit so that more research-intensive companies can lower their costs of U.S.-based research activities.

The American taxpayer relies on us to make the right policy choices for the long-term health of our economy. We have faced and are still facing major challenges both to our national security and to our economic security. Time and again we have looked to the industries on the cutting edge of new and improved technologies to help us meet those challenges.

My home State of Utah is a good example of how State economies benefit from the research tax credit. Utah is home to a large number of firms that invest a high percentage of their revenue on research and development.

In Utah, 5 percent of the workers—51,000 people—work in the research-intensive high technology sector. That includes over 10,000 people working just to design computer systems, and over 6,000 producing medical equipment. And there is a lot of R&D taking place outside of Utah's high-tech sector.

Just to give one example, more than 7,000 people work in Utah's chemical industry, and workers in that industry benefit from research and development taking place in Utah and throughout the country. Aerospace and the pharmaceutical industries are two more examples of big Utah employer groups that reap the benefits of R&D.

I want Utah companies to be able to buy better manufacturing equipment, more reliable electronics, and have access to more efficient quality control techniques. The workers who use new inventions will get just as many benefits as workers who create those new inventions. And the evidence clearly shows, that the research credit will increase innovation.

In short, there are tens of thousands of employees working in Utah's thousands of technology based companies, with tens of thousands more working in other sectors that engage in R&D. Beyond that, practically all of Utah's hundreds of thousands of workers benefit from higher productivity coming from the innovations that researchers both inside and outside of Utah produce. Research and development is clearly the lifeblood of our economy throughout the Nation.

Since 1981, when the research credit was first enacted, the Federal Government has joined in partnership with businesses, large and small, in those industries to ensure that the research dollars were expended in the United States so that the jobs were created here. We as a nation have reaped the benefits of that research.

It seems clear to me that if we want to keep our Nation and our economy strong and growing, it is vital that we maintain and even enhance our position as the world leader in technological advances. Our Nation simply must continue to invest in research and development, especially in the private sector. And, the Federal Government must affirm its role as a partner in those private-sector endeavors.

I believe the best way to ensure that private-sector investment in R&D continues at the health rate needed to fuel further productivity gains is to extend the current-law research credit and make that credit more widely available. Ideally, the credit should be made permanent.

I have long advocated a permanent credit and this body is overwhelmingly on record for a permanent research credit. During the Senate's debate on the 2001 tax cut bill, I offered an amendment to provide for such a permanent credit that the Senate adopted. Unfortunately, that provision was dropped in conference and we lost a great opportunity.

Given our budget deficit situation, I do not believe it is possible politically to make the research credit permanent on this bill. Ironically, though, a permanent credit costs no more than one that is regularly extended. Because of the urgency and importance of this matter, however, this amendment seeks only a temporary extension.

Let me point out a few key points for our colleagues so they can understand the importance of the research credit. These are according to the staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation.

The primary category of expenditures that qualify for the research credit are wages paid to employees performing research in the Unites States. In 2001, more than 15,000 taxpayers claimed the research tax credit—42 percent of these businesses were engaged in manufacturing.

However, of the total $6.5 billion in research credits claimed in 2001, 66 percent of those dollars were claimed by manufacturers. When you look at the size of the companies claiming the credit in 2001, you see that 68 percent of the firms claiming it had assets of $10 million or less.

The research credit translates into real jobs in the United States and, as the statistics show, it is our small- and medium-size domestic manufacturers that most benefit from the research credit.

A great deal of the reason our economy grew so rapidly in the second half of the last decade was because of a strong surge in our productivity rate. This surge is continuing into the present and has been a marvel to most economists.

This increase in productivity has allowed the economy to continue to grow at a rapid pace without the increase in inflation that usually accompanies such growth. Moreover, increases in productivity growth are the key to future economic security, particularly in light of the huge entitlement challenges we face in the coming years. A very large factor in that productivity growth is innovation, which of course, requires R&D.

As I mentioned, this amendment would extend the current credit until December 31, 2005, giving businesses that utilize this important incentive some certainty in the short-term so that they can hire the needed personnel to take research activities off the drawing board now.

Over the years, the research credit has proven to be a powerful incentive for companies to increase their research and development activities. Unfortunately, it does not work perfectly. Part of the reason is that this is an incremental credit, designed to reward extra research efforts, not just what a company might do anyway. From a good tax policy point of view, I believe this is the best way to provide an incentive tax credit.

However, it is difficult to craft an incremental credit that works as it should in every case. While the regular credit works very well for many companies, it does not help some other firms that still incur significant research expenditures. This is because the credit's base period of 1984 through 1988 is growing more distant and some firms' business models have changed.

There is no good policy reason why research should be more expensive for some industries than it is for others. To partially solve this problem Congress enacted the alternative incremental research credit, AIRC, in 1996, and now we propose a way to address the rest of that problem.

In addition to increasing the AIRC rates, this amendment allows taxpayers to elect, in lieu of the regular credit or the AIRC, an alternative simplified credit that is based on a rolling average of the prior 3 years' qualified research expenses. This provides companies that are increasing their R&D with another way to take advantage of the credit when the 20-year-old base period proves to be irrelevant.

This is an important amendment. It is important to our economy, both now and in the future. It is important to good, high paying jobs in the United States.

We need to continue to be the world's leader in innovation. We cannot afford to allow other countries to lure away the research that has always been done in the United States. We cannot afford to have the lapses in the research pipeline that would result if we do not take care of extending this credit before it expires on June 30. I urge all of my colleagues to support this amendment. It is the right thing to do. We have done it before. We certainly should do it now. I wish it were permanent. But under the circumstances, this is the best we can do. I have every confidence my fellow Members of the Senate will vote for this amendment.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. I rise today to join with Senator HATCH to strengthen and extend the research and development tax credit. We are all concerned about our slow economy. Every day we learn of more American jobs that are being shipped overseas. We worry about American companies losing out in the global marketplace and the impact that has on our workers and on our economy.

Today, we are offering a way to fight back and help our workers and companies continue to lead the world in innovation. Today, I am proud to offer an amendment that will support high-wage jobs for American workers at home and make our products more competitive around the world.

Anyone who wants to support good-paying American jobs, and anyone who wants to help American companies compete and win in the global marketplace should vote for the Hatch-Murray amendment. We all know research and development is a critical part of any business's success, but investing in R&D is not cheap. Our foreign trade competitors offer substantial tax and financial incentives to encourage American companies to make their research investments elsewhere. But we need those jobs in the United States and this amendment gives us a chance to support American workers in the face of foreign competition.

That is why the R&D tax credit is so important. It provides a real incentive for companies to increase their investment in U.S.-based research and development. The credit helps stimulate innovation, wages, and exports which all contribute to a stronger economy and a higher standard of living for American workers.

This is about investing in America. Because this tax credit is only available for R&D performed in the United States, it provides a discount on qualifying expenditures, and it is a proven incentive for U.S. companies to increase their R&D investment in the United States.

Unfortunately, the existing research and development tax credit will expire this June. Unless we take action, in just a few months we will be throwing away one of the best incentives for spurring investments at home. I have always supported making the R&D tax credit permanent, but because of budget constraints, we are not in a position to do that today. But we can do the next best thing and extend and strengthen this incentive.

The Hatch-Murray amendment does three things: First, it extends the traditional credit for 18 months through December 31, 2005; second, it increases the alternative incremental credit rate starting in January of 2005; and finally, again starting in January of 2005, it provides an alternative simplified credit to encourage even more research-intensive businesses to spend more on research in the United States.

The R&D tax credit is a great example of how we make the Tax Code work for American workers and American families right here at home.

I have a letter from the R&D Tax Credit Coalition, and I ask unanimous consent to have it printed in the RECORD after my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit No. 1)

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, this letter is actually signed by over 500 companies and associations and urges Congress to permanently extend the R&D tax credit and make the modifications contained in S. 664.

I share with my colleagues a portion of the letter:

> The technological innovations made possible by the R&D Credit enable companies to bring more products and services to market, increase employment, and raise the standard of living for all Americans.
> R&D helps manufacturers and services companies with U.S. operations maintain a competitive edge over lower-cost foreign competitors.
> It allows a small, medium or large company to reduce its financial risk in expensive, labor-intensive R&D investments.
> Since the credit was created in 1981, investments in technology and innovation have spurred economic growth and contributed greatly to our country's high standard of living. Continued R&D spending is a necessary element in our country's ability to invest for our future.

This is not some abstract economic principle. It is a real incentive that creates jobs and helps workers in America. I have seen it firsthand at companies throughout Washington State. This year, Microsoft plans to invest $6.8 billion on R&D. Because this tax credit is targeted almost exclusively at wages, the credit will translate into additional jobs in Washington State and in the United States. That will mean jobs not just at Microsoft but at many other local companies.

In fact, according to a February 25, 2003, article in the Seattle Times, one study found that every job at Microsoft supports 3.4 other jobs in the economy. It also found that from 1990 to 2001 Microsoft was responsible for more than a fourth, 28.3 percent, of King County's growth. That is an example of how one company's investment in R&D is supporting good family wage jobs throughout the region.

That is just one company. There are many other companies engaged in R&D in Washington State and in the United States. Their investment in R&D will help our workers and help our economy.

I want to share some other figures that show the importance of R&D investment, especially in Washington State.

In the year 2000, companies performed almost $200 billion in R&D; $9.8

billion of that research was performed in Washington State.

Let me shed some light on types of employers that are doing that work. Thirty-three percent of the research done in Washington State was performed by manufacturers. We have seen a terrible loss of manufacturing jobs over the years, and this credit is one way to help them stem the tide. Mr. President, 11.4 percent of the research done in Washington State was done in the professional, scientific, and technical service industries.

This is about moving our economy forward. Technological innovations have accounted for more than one-third of our Nation's economic growth during the last decade. We know innovation is critical to sustained growth in the future.

Extending and improving the R&D tax credit is one of the most important steps we can take right now to foster investment at home and job creation throughout the country.

I urge my colleagues to give American workers a fair shot in the global marketplace by voting for the Hatch-Murray amendment.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

R&D CREDIT COALITION,
Washington, DC, February 9, 2004.

Hon. BILL THOMAS,
Chairman, Committee on Ways and Means, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.
Hon. CHARLES GRASSLEY,
Chairman, Committee on Finance, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.
Hon. CHARLES RANGEL,
Ranking Member, Committee on Ways and Means, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.
Hon. MAX BAUCUS,
Ranking Member, Committee on Finance, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMEN THOMAS AND GRASSLEY, AND RANKING MEMBERS RANGEL AND BAUCUS: We urge you to make the enactment of a permanent research tax credit (R&D Credit) with the modifications contained in companion bills H.R. 463/S. 664 an early legislative priority in 2004.

As you know, the technological innovations made possible by the R&D Credit enable companies to bring more products and services to market, increase employment, and raise the standard of living for all Americans. R&D helps manufacturers and services companies with U.S. operations maintain a competitive edge over lower-cost foreign competitors. It allows a small, medium or large company to reduce its financial risk in expensive, labor-intensive R&D investments.

Since the credit was created in 1981, investments in technology and innovation have spurred economic growth and contributed greatly to our country's high standard of living. Continued R&D spending is a necessary element in our country's ability to invest for our future.

The growth of our economy is inextricably tied to the ability to companies to make a sustained commitment to long-term research. Congress has consistently demonstrated support for the R&D credit. This year, in order to provide stability and to ensure that all companies performing intensive research in the United States are able to benefit from the credit, Congress should make the credit permanent, increase the Alternative Incremental Credit (AIRC) rates, and provide an alternative simplified credit calculation.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant journal clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, just a parliamentary inquiry: I understand we are on the FSC bill, and we are on an amendment that has been laid down; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. HARKIN. I thank the Chair.

America is stuck in a jobless recovery and this jobless recovery is not an accident. It is in large measure the result of failed economic policies, policies that the administration stubbornly clings to despite the loss of nearly 3 million private sector jobs over the last 3 years.

This administration has embraced outsourcing. It is against extending unemployment insurance for the long-term unemployed. It is adamant against raising the minimum wage. And it is determined—any day now—to eliminate time-and-a-half overtime pay for millions of American workers.

It is time for Congress to step in and chart a new course. It is time for Washington to listen to ordinary working Americans. They are telling us loudly and clearly that their No. 1 issue is economic security. They are telling us that they fear losing their jobs, health care, and retirement.

Now they also fear losing their right, which has been their right since 1938, to time-and-a-half compensation for work over 40 hours a week. They fear, with good reason, that under the Department of Labor's new rules, they will be obligated to work a 50-, 55-, 60-hour week with zero additional compensation. For millions of working Americans and their families, this is unacceptable. It is, indeed, the last straw.

Accordingly, at the appropriate time, I will offer an amendment to this bill that will stop the administration from implementing its proposed new rules to eliminate overtime pay protection for millions of American workers.

This amendment will be very familiar to my colleagues. Late last year a similar amendment I offered passed the Senate by a vote of 54 to 45. It was endorsed in the House by a vote of 226 to 203. It also won the overwhelming support of the American public. Yet despite this clear expression of the will of Congress and of the public, my overtime amendment was stripped from the omnibus appropriations bill in conference.

Today this overtime amendment is back by popular demand. It amazes me that wherever I travel, anywhere in the country, people come up to me to talk about this overtime issue. They know now what the administration is trying to do. They are upset. Working families are angry and they want action. They want us to take action to stop the implementation of these new rules that will take away their protection so that they can get time and a half when they work overtime.

Frankly, at this point the administration has zero credibility on this issue. The Department of Labor claims that it simply wants to give employers clear guidance as to who is eligible for overtime pay. But ordinary Americans are not buying this happy talk. They know that the administration is proposing a radical rewrite of the Nation's overtime rules. They know these new rules will strip millions of workers of their right to fair compensation.

The people are right. They are correct. Plain and simply, the new overtime rules are a frontal attack on the 40-hour workweek, pushed aggressively by the administration without a single public hearing. Yes, that is correct. Last year these proposed rules came out, drastically changing our overtime pay protections, the rules that had been implemented since 1938, without one public hearing anywhere in the United States.

These new proposed rules could effectively end overtime pay in dozens of occupations, including nursing, police officers, firefighters, clerical workers, air traffic controllers, social workers, journalists. Indeed, the new criteria for excluding employees from overtime are deliberately vague and elastic so as to stretch across vast swaths of the workforce.

Listen to Mary Schlichte, a nurse in Cedar Rapids, IA:

> Many nurses just like me work long hours in a field with very stressful working conditions and little compensation. . . . Our patients rely on us. Our families depend on us. We need overtime pay so we can stay in the profession we love and still make our ends meet.

Ms. Schlichte told me about her Cedar Rapids nurse colleagues who also rely on overtime pay. One nurse is married to a struggling farmer. She relies on her overtime pay to cover their insurance premiums. They already fear losing their farm, and now they fear losing their health care coverage also.

Dixie Harms is a longtime trainer of nurses in Des Moines. Ms. Harms told me:

> If overtime is changed for hospital nurses, we will see a mass exodus of registered nurses from the hospital setting because they will get fed up and refuse to volunteer so many hours to what they really love doing.

Two and a half years ago, after the terrible September 11 attacks, many in this body spoke eloquently about the heroism of our firefighters, police officers, public safety workers. Ever since, America's first responders have worked long hours to protect us from terrorists threats. But now the administration apparently wants to deny them time-and-a-half compensation for those longer hours. Simply put, this is wrong.

Since passage of the Fair Labor Standards Act in 1938, overtime rights and the 40-hour workweek have been sacrosanct, respected by Presidents of both parties. But nothing, it seems, is sacred to this administration when it comes to workers' rights.

For 65 years, the 40-hour workweek has allowed workers to spend time with their families instead of toiling past dark and on weekends. At a time when the family dinner is becoming an oxymoron, this standard is more important than ever.

These radical revisions are antiworker and antifamily. Given the fact we are stuck in a jobless recovery, the timing of this attack on overtime could not be worse. It is yet another instance of this administration's economic malpractice.

Bear in mind that time-and-a-half pay accounts for some 25 percent of the total income of Americans who work overtime. With average U.S. incomes declining, the proposed changes would slash the paychecks of millions of American workers.

Moreover, the proposed new rules are all but guaranteed to hurt job creation in the United States. This is basic logic. If employers can more easily deny overtime pay, they will push their current employees to work longer hours without compensation.

With 9 million Americans currently out of work, these proposed regulations will give employers yet another disincentive to hire new workers. Why hire a new worker if you can get your present workers to work overtime and not have to pay them time and a half? That would be cheaper than hiring a new worker.

It is bad enough to deny 8 million workers their overtime rights, but what is really striking about these proposed rules is the mean-spiritedness of the language included in these proposed rules from the Department of Labor.

For example, the department is offering employers what amounts to kind of a cheat sheet—helpful hints on how to avoid paying overtime to the lowest paid workers, the same workers who are supposedly helped by the new rules.

Let me be clear about this. There is a part of the proposed changes that we all support, and that is raising the minimum pay level by which a worker would not be exempt from any overtime rules. For example, right now, if you make below about $7,000 a year, no matter what your job is, you cannot be exempted from overtime, from overtime rules—even if you are a professional or if you fall into one of the exempt categories. If you make below about $6,900 or $7,000 a year, you have to be paid time and a half overtime, no matter what your job is. The administration is proposing to raise that to about $21,900, close to $22,000 a year. It has not been raised for a long time, so that is all well and good. But, in so doing, the administration has put out technical advice to employers on how they can get around paying the lowest paid workers time and a half.

For example, the department suggested in writing that an employer might cut a worker's hourly wage so that any new overtime payments will not result in a net gain to the employee. It also recommends if the worker's salary is close to the threshold, you might want to raise their salary slightly to meet that threshold and then their protection for time and a half would end, and then they could be exempt.

This is kind of disgraceful. This would be like the IRS putting out advice to would-be scofflaws, or people or entities that might want to get around paying their fair share of taxes, telling them how to avoid paying their taxes, saying here is how you can effectively cheat. What would we say if the IRS started putting out advice to employers, saying here is how to get around paying your fair share of taxes?

That is what they are doing on overtime. They are putting out advice to employers, saying here is how you get around it. It is disgraceful. There is one part of this new proposed rule that I find probably more disgraceful than just about anything. I know that when I say this, people are going to say: HARKIN, this cannot be right, this cannot happen.

The more I dig into the nuts and bolts and fine print of this proposed rule for changing overtime, the more astounded I am at what we are finding, in terms of who is now being exempted, or trying to be exempted from overtime pay.

Would you believe it if I told you that the administration, for the first time since 1938, is changing the rules to make it harder for veterans to get overtime pay than their counterparts who did not serve in the military? Let me repeat that. Mr. President, generally, people would not believe me if I told them this administration, in their proposed rules, is making it harder for a veteran to qualify for overtime than someone who didn't serve in the military. People say: HARKIN, that cannot be right.

Read the proposed regulation. I have the old one. Here is the old rule that covers overtime pay. There is a section called ''Learned Professions,'' and it is talking about who basically would be not barred from exemption. It talks about members of the professions, such as graduates of law school and different things like that. It says here the word ''customarily'' implies that in the vast majority of cases a specific academic training is a prerequisite for entrance into the profession. It makes the exemption available to the lawyer, the chemist, and things like that. But it does not in any way mention veterans in the old rule. There is no mention of veterans.

Here is the new rule. I have it blown up on the chart. It says:

However, the word ''customarily'' means that the exemption is also available to employees in such professions who have substantially the same knowledge level as the degreed employees, but who attained such knowledge through a combination of work experience, training in the Armed Forces, attending a technical school.

Et cetera, et cetera. These words, ''training in the Armed Forces'' have never been in the rules before. In other words, since 1938, we have gone through World War II, the Korean war, cold war, Vietnam war, the gulf war, Dominican Republic war, Grenada, and a whole bunch of other things. And our veterans—people who have served in the military, who went in there, who the Army asks to ''be all that you can be in the U.S. Army.'' How many ads do we see enticing young people to come into the military because they can get training which will increase their ability to earn more money later on in life, after they get out of the military—specialized training that will make them more desirable in the workforce?

Well, guess what. They are running those same ads to be all you can be, learn a specialized training, and be more valuable in the workforce, and at the same time the administration is promulgating a rule saying: Wait a minute, if you get training in the Armed Forces, guess what. You are now covered under this new rule that says you can be exempted from the overtime pay protection because now you fall into the same kind of category as lawyers and architects and people who went to school for a long time to receive specialized training.

Again, don't take my word for it. Read it. ''Training in the Armed Forces''—those five words have never been in the rules before, never. We said before if you get training in the Armed Forces, you can now be exempt from overtime pay. That is what is coming down the pike. That is what is in these rules. That is why so many of us feel so strongly that this proposed overtime rule should not be adopted.

According to the proposed rules, employers can consider specialized training and knowledge gained in the military as equivalent to what is learned in professional schools. This will allow employers to reclassify veterans as ineligible for overtime. I started looking at some of the comments made regarding this. I wondered where it is coming from. Here are comments on behalf of the Boeing company:

Boeing observes that many of its most skilled technical workers received a significant portion of their knowledge and training outside the university classroom, typically in a branch of the military service, where through a combination of classroom training and field experience they become ''learned experts'' on very sophisticated aerospace products or services. Oftentimes, such experts are actually more knowledgeable than colleagues with advanced degrees— Master's degrees and Ph.D.s.

and are viewed by the customers as the company's experts on the product. Boeing thus supports the Department's—focus on the knowledge used by the employee in performing her job, rather than the source of the knowledge or skill.

What Boeing is saying is we have a lot of people who work for us who got their training in the military. They have become skilled in their profession. But because they did not go to graduate school, because they got their training in the military, we still have to pay these people overtime. We have to pay them time and a half, and we do not want to pay them time and a half. We want to treat them just like Ph.D.s and all those other people. So, therefore, they support the proposed rule change that would allow them, Boeing, to reclassify these former veterans as being exempt from overtime pay protections.

This is a letter from Thomas Corey, the national president of the Vietnam Veterans of America:

Therefore, we would like to make you aware that the proposed modification of the rules would give employers the ability to prohibit veterans from receiving overtime pay based on the training they received in the military. . . . The proposed rule changes will make these veterans and their families unfairly economically vulnerable in comparison with their non-veteran peers.

Let me repeat that:

The proposed rule changes will make these veterans and their families unfairly economically vulnerable in comparison with their non-veteran peers. We hope you will agree that the men and women who have served our Nation so well in military service should not be penalized for having served.

That is Thomas Corey, national president, Vietnam Veterans of America. I think that is the crux of it. You could have two people, both skilled in a certain area, let's say aerospace or whatever it might be. One got his training in the military and one got his training in some other way outside the military. So the person outside the military would be covered under overtime. The person who served in the military would not be covered by overtime.

I wish someone would make some sense out of that. It is just a slap in the face to the men and women who served in the military and were told: Be all you can be, get specialized training in the military, but what they are not telling them is once you do that, they are going to take away your right to overtime pay once you get out of the military.

This is outrageous—outrageous not just to our veterans but to most Americans. Veterans organizations are deeply disturbed by this, not just the Vietnam veterans but all veterans organizations.

Picture this: The Commander in Chief has mobilized thousand of reservists and National Guard troops from Iowa and from across America. They left their regular jobs as police officers, firefighters, nurses, clerical workers, on and on, and are deployed in Iraq for a year or more. But if the administration has its way, when these troops come back home from Iraq or wherever to resume their civilian jobs, they are going to find that if they received specialized training in the military, they have been stripped of their right to time-and-a-half overtime pay.

It is punishing veterans precisely because they were dedicated soldiers who pursued specialized instruction and training while in the military. The Department of Labor is preparing quite a welcome home present for many of the guardsmen and reservists returning from Iraq. It might read this way:

Dear Returning Veteran: While you were away we reclassified your job so that you no longer qualify for time-and-a-half overtime pay. Thank you for serving our country.

There is another group I talked about last year—and it is still true this year—who are disproportionately harmed by the proposed new overtime rules—women.

The fact is, women tend to dominate in retail services and sales positions which would be particularly affected by the new rules. Married women in America increased their working hours by nearly 40 percent from 1979 to 2000. As women have increased their time in the paid labor market, their contribution to family income has also risen. These contributions are especially important to lower and middle-income families—important for housing, health care, heating bills and, of course, for sending kids to school.

Yet now the administration's new rules would take away overtime protections from millions of American women. Women in the paid workforce would be forced to work longer hours for less pay and, of course, this means more time away from families, more childcare expenses with no additional compensation. Not surprising, prominent women's groups are adamantly opposed to the new overtime rules.

The American Association of University Women, the National Organization of Women, the National Partnership for Women and Families, the YWCA, and Nine to Five, and the National Association of Working Women are all strongly supporting my amendment to stop the administration from implementing these new overtime rules.

There is a broader context to this discussion of overtime. There is a bigger picture. As I said, the No. 1 issue for Americans today is economic security, and with good reason, because it is abundantly clear that America is stuck in a jobless recovery.

Since this administration took office, nearly 3 million private sector jobs have been lost, including one in every seven jobs in manufacturing. George W. Bush has presided over the largest job loss of any President since Herbert Hoover. Yet the President remains wedded to policies that are making the problem worse. He remains wedded to policies that are destroying jobs, driving down wages, and threatening the economic security of the American people.

A couple of weeks ago, the White House issued its annual economic report signed by the President explaining why we should welcome the ''offshoring'' of U.S. jobs. The President's top economic adviser assured us that the outsourcing of high-end, white-collar jobs to Asia is ''a plus for the economy in the long run.''

The President's economic report praises the virtues of a ''level playing field for goods and services,'' arguing that when a good or service is produced more cheaply abroad, it makes more sense to import it than to make or provide it domestically. That is from the President's report.

We have a very serious question to ask ourselves: Do we really want American workers competing on a ''level playing field,'' head to head with factory workers in China working for 20 cents an hour, with software engineers in India working for $10,000 a year, going head to head with countries that employ abusive child labor to make products?

In reality, is this not a race to the bottom, with nations competing to slash salaries and benefits in order to win more jobs? Outsourcing is not the only thing hurting job creation and suppressing wages. These new overtime rules will have the same effect. Eight million workers will be stripped of their right and their protection to overtime pay.

Of course, the employers can deny overtime pay. As I said, they simply push their current employees to work longer hours without compensation. This is a powerful disincentive to hire new workers. So as with outsourcing, the idea of sending so many of these jobs overseas, where they are paying 20 cents an hour, no health benefits, no retirement benefits, no Social Security, no environmental protections, killing overtime pay is the same thing. Just keep in mind if an employer can work an employee more than 40 hours and not pay time and a half, we can see that an employer would then say, well, why should I hire new workers? I will just work my present workers longer. If I can get 4 or 5 more hours a week out of each employee and not pay time and a half overtime, that is better than hiring somebody else.

That is exactly what this proposed overtime rule is all about. It is terrible for job creation. I do not know why this administration does not see that. Yet in the face of facts, in the face of all of the reports we have gotten, in the face of what Americans are saying, which is that they want their overtime protected, the administration is surging ahead. They are going to strip people in this country of their right to overtime pay.

Since we have had no public hearings on it, we are not certain why the administration is doing this. Why are they moving ahead with the most profound change in our overtime laws since 1938? Now, I use my words carefully. I said the ''most profound change.'' There have been changes in overtime rules and laws since 1938, since the Fair Labor Standards Act was passed, of course. Many occupations that existed then no longer exist, and they were taken off. I understand.

New occupations came in like computer software writers, computer engineers, which were not around in the late 1930s, 1940s, 1950s, or 1960s. So there have been changes.

Every time we have made a change in the overtime rules, we have done it through open hearings, through open collaboration between the administration and Congress and labor, all working together to do what is right for our people and our country.

So, yes, we have made a number of changes since 1938, but as far as my research shows, this is the first time since 1938 that an administration has made this profound a change, and it is the first time since 1938 that the administration has proposed these changes without having one public hearing. It is the first time since 1938 that any administration, Republican or Democrat, has proposed changes such as this in the overtime rules without consultation and working closely with Congress to develop a consensus as to what has to be done.

I am left with, perhaps, some conclusions: The administration really does not want to create a lot of new jobs; that by driving down labor costs, perhaps we can increase corporate profitability. It allows corporations to export cheap labor overseas with outsourcing. The administration puts pressure on U.S. workers to accept lower wages, less generous benefits, longer working hours. This is true of outsourcing, and it is true of eliminating overtime.

Right now, American workers work longer than any workers in any industrialized country in the world. We now work longer than workers in Japan, Germany, Great Britain, and our neighbor to the north, Canada. Guess what we are being told. Guess what our workers are being told by this administration. That they are going to work even longer, and they will not have any right to overtime pay.

There is more. The President refuses to extend benefits for the long-time unemployed, and opposes any increase in the minimum wage. It has been frozen at $5.15 an hour for years. This is not a living wage; it is a poverty wage. It keeps downward pressure on wages all across the spectrum.

All this means, again, is fewer jobs for U.S. citizens. It means downward pressure on wages for all of our workers.

Something is missing. What is missing is ordinary, hard-working Americans are not participating in this so-called economic recovery. More and more Americans live in fear of losing their jobs, their health benefits, and losing their retirement. The truth is, we cannot build a sustainable recovery by exporting jobs, by driving down wages, and by making Americans work longer hours without compensation.

Moreover, such a recovery, if it even could take place, is not desirable. As one individual said, my time with my family in the evenings and on the weekends is premium time. Yes, I work during the week to make a living, but the time with my family is premium time. If I am going to be asked to give up my premium time with my family, do I not deserve to have premium pay, time and a half, something out of the ordinary?

As this person said to me, I get my wages, which are ordinary, for my ordinary working hours that I have agreed to work, but I should not get ordinary pay for my premium time, which is the time I spend with my family. That is why I say a recovery that means that our American workers are going to work longer, spend more time away from their families, and not get paid any more for it is not a desirable recovery.

A true recovery must include all working Americans. It can only be built on a foundation of good jobs with good wages in America, not overseas. It can only be built on a foundation that includes a minimum wage that is a living wage, not a poverty wage. It can only be built on a foundation that preserves American workers' rights to time and a half overtime pay.

Shortly, I will be offering this amendment. Obviously, this FSC bill is touted as a JOBS bill. That is all well and good. Let us have an open and good discussion about that. We have some amendments to offer that a number of us believe will help increase jobs in this country. The one I will be offering will be protecting the overtime rights of American workers. So I am hopeful we can move on to that.

On this issue, the administration ignores the pleas of the public. It has brushed aside the clear wishes of both Houses of Congress. Last year, we passed the amendment in the Senate to disallow the Bush regulations on taking away overtime pay protections. The House emphatically approved of that. Yet it was stripped out in conference. Again, this is not acceptable. I hope we can have a strong bipartisan vote in support of my amendment that would disallow taking away overtime pay protection for American workers. We can save the administration from making a terrible mistake. We can protect American workers' time-honored right to overtime compensation, and we can support an economic recovery that includes all Americans, a recovery that respects and preserves the American way.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SUNUNU). The Senator from New Mexico.

AMENDMENT NO. 2651 TO AMENDMENT NO. 2647

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to amounts paid or incurred after December 31, 2004.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I thank my colleagues, Senator HATCH and Senator MURRAY, for their leadership on extending and strengthening the research and development, R&D tax credit. The ability of our Nation to remain a world leader in technology and innovation is directly related to the investment we make in research and development. The R&D tax credit is an important component of this strategy as it creates an incentive for private companies to invest in research they might not otherwise have invested in but for that tax credit. This is an efficient way to accomplish a goal in our society that is increasing funding for research.

Senator DOMENICI and I have been working here for the last several years to make some changes in the R&D tax credit law. The amendment I have sent to the desk incorporates those changes we have worked on. The amendment is based on legislation we filed in each of the last several Congresses, most recently S. 515 in the 107th Congress. This amendment addresses two weaknesses in the current R&D tax credit.

The first part of the amendment provides participants in a research consortium with a flat 20-percent research credit. A consortium is defined as a group of five or more unrelated companies which are working together on a specific type of mutually beneficial research. Under current law, these companies are unable to take advantage of the full R&D tax credit. That does not make good sense. We should be encouraging companies to work together to share the costs of research instead of requiring that each of them bear the full capital expenditure to which they would be entitled in order to get the research tax credit. The amendment I have sent to the desk which Senator DOMENICI and I have been working on would correct this and would encourage this type of private research teaming.

The second part of the amendment would be to get rid of a restriction that allows companies to only consider 65 percent of their research expenses for purposes of calculating their tax credit when the funds are paid to an outside party such as a Federal laboratory or university or a small business.

Again, as with consortiums, this provision makes no sense as it exists in current law. In many if not most cases it is far more efficient and economical for a company to have their research done at a facility that is already equipped to do this type of experimentation and development. We ought to be encouraging businesses to utilize these resources instead of discouraging that use. For this reason, the amendment would allow a company to consider 100 percent of all of their expenses when contracting with a lab or university or small business to handle their research projects.

The amendment would come into effect at the end of the year. It would continue for as long as the R&D provisions are in effect which, under the Hatch-Murray amendment which is what this proposal would amend, is the end of 2005.

I look forward to working with my colleagues, Senators HATCH and MURRAY, on their R&D amendment. I very much appreciate their support for these small changes Senator DOMENICI and I would like to see made in this bill.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. REID. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ENSIGN. I ask unanimous consent the time until 3:30 be equally divided in the usual form and that if the Bingaman amendment has not been previously disposed of, the Senate would then vote in relation to the Bingaman second-degree, to be followed immediately by a vote in relation to the Hatch first-degree, as amended if amended, provided further no additional second degrees be in order prior to the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. REID. No objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from Tennessee is going to seek recognition. I ask unanimous consent that following the Senator from Tennessee, I be recognized to speak on the R&D amendment.

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object, we have no problem with that except we now have an hour and 10 minutes. We don't want those two Senators to use the entire 70 minutes so we should have some idea how long they are going to speak.

Mr. ENSIGN. For myself, I would only need 5 minutes.

Senator ALEXANDER?

Mr. REID. I think it would be appropriate if my friends agree the time be equally divided between now and 3:30 between the proponents and opponents of the measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the order, the time is equally divided.

Mr. ENSIGN. I ask to be recognized after Senator ALEXANDER.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. Who yields time?

Mr. ENSIGN. I yield to Senator ALEXANDER.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, my intention was to ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business for 7 or 8 minutes, which may not be appropriate at this moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under controlled time that is the Senator's right. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business for up to 7 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The remarks of Mr. ALEXANDER are printed in today's RECORD under ''Morning Business.'')

Mr. ALEXANDER. I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I want to speak on the R&D tax credit that is in this bill—the proposal to extend that tax credit which is scheduled to expire. I want to talk about some of the benefits.

This is a tax credit that has been supported by both sides of the aisle and by both bodies. There are many benefits to keeping this R&D tax credit as part of our Tax Code; first of all, the industries that benefit from this tax credit. I am the chairman of the Republican High-Tech Task Force in the Senate, and I hear about this issue all the time from very important parts of our economy and how important it is to the creation of jobs.

The industries that benefit from this include—it is not limited to the aerospace industry—the agriculture industry, biotechnology, chemical industry, electronic, energy, information technology, manufacturing, medical technology, pharmaceuticals, software and telecommunications, as well as others.

It is not just big business that benefits from this R&D tax credit; it is also many small businesses. The companies that perform significant amounts of R&D perform that research and development in the United States. They pay very good wages to the people who do the research and development.

This tax credit should be made permanent in the long run. That is my goal—to someday make this tax credit permanent. We keep extending it. I think it has been extended 10 different times over the years. It was allowed to actually lapse once, but it has never been made permanent. I believe it should be made permanent. Unfortunately, we can't do that in the context of what we are doing today. But we should at least make sure that R&D tax credit is extended for the 18 months the bill calls for.

Why is it important? New vaccines, faster Internet, and other communications capabilities, safer transportation, enhanced energy-efficient appliances, higher quality entertainment, better homes, improved national security. The list of societal benefits as a result of R&D is endless.

R&D is the lifeblood of the U.S. economy. We really should encourage not only adoption of the extension but also eventually making permanent this tax credit.

The revenue analysis, according to the economic benefit of the R&D tax credit prepared by Coopers & Lybrand in 1998 says:

> In the long run, $1.75 of additional tax revenue would be generated for each dollar the Federal Government spends on the credit, creating a win-win situation for both the taxpayers and the government.

I will conclude with this: We should do the right thing for the economy and allow companies some level of predictability. We keep telling them we are going to extend it, we are going to extend it. But, frankly, it is hard when research and development is usually planned long term. It is hard to do that when we keep coming up to the deadline and then finally extending the tax credit.

I encourage us to do what we are doing today—extending it for 18 months but also be looking for ways to make this R&D tax credit permanent.

I yield the floor.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I yield myself about 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask my friend from Wyoming how much time he has. It is my understanding that there was an agreement before I came to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the time until 3:30 is equally divided between the majority and minority leader.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I will be very brief.

I am very happy to be supporting the pending amendment. This is an amendment that the author of the amendment, Senator HATCH, and I have introduced many times over many years. I have been a cosponsor of this amendment for years. Senator HATCH has been a cosponsor of this amendment for years. It is critically important that we finally get a major research and development tax stimulus enacted into law. This provision has been in law for various years, but it has always been extended—on and off again. It has been a yo-yo tax provision—a yo-yo incentive. Sometimes companies get it, sometimes they don't. Sometimes we enact it—all the way back to the expiration previous times—sometimes we don't. It is very irresponsible, in my judgment, for this Congress not to give permanent research and development tax credit to American companies. Other countries do. The Government of Canada, for example, has a R&D tax credit which is much more generous than the one we give to American companies.

There are other countries that also have stimulus incentives to research and development—more generous than we have in our country.

I urge adoption of this amendment.

I also agree with my good friend from Nevada. This provision should be permanently extended. It makes no sense not to be permanently extended. It should be a permanent fixture in the law.

I say that because the stakes are getting so high. We are losing jobs to overseas companies in lots of ways.

One way to create jobs in America is to have a very aggressive research and development tax credit for research and development in America. It is clear that jobs tend to be where the research is. The more research we have in America, the more likely it is we will have more jobs in America. It will also help to maintain jobs.

We do not want jobs to go overseas. This will help us maintain jobs in America. We should not erect barriers to our companies going overseas. We should not stick our heads in the sand. That does not work. We are facing an immense challenge, and one good way is to pass this amendment.

In addition to passing the underlying bill, this JOBS bill before the Senate is not going to be the silver bullet many would like but it will help significantly.

With respect to the R&D credit, 62 percent of total industry research and development is performed in manufacturing industries. That includes computer and electronic products, transportation, equipment, and chemicals. It is disproportionately helpful to manufacturing jobs. We clearly want more manufacturing jobs in this country. Manufacturing jobs are important to the entire economy.

The multiplier effect in manufacturing jobs is extremely high. For every 16 million manufacturing jobs in this country, another 9 million are created in retail, wholesale, finance, and other sectors. That is not as true in other sectors. Most of the R&D effect is manufacturing, and manufacturing has a very high multiplier effect, which is all the more reason to get this passed.

Workers employed in manufacturing plants with more technologies also earn 63 percent more than workers in plants using lower level technologies. It is a question not only of the number of jobs but the wages the jobs pay, the amount of income those workers will receive.

I can go on at great length as to why this is so important. I am not going to expand anymore on it because I think Senators realize how important it is. I expect this to pass by a very large margin, and well it should.

Once we pass this amendment, it is incumbent upon us to start looking for other ways we can help give stimulus and help American companies keep jobs in America. I am certainly going to be a part of this. It is something we desperately have to do.

What is the remaining time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority has 27 minutes remaining and the minority has 30 minutes remaining.

Mr. BAUCUS. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. ENZI. I will talk about an amendment that has not been laid down. There were comments about overtime a while ago, and I want people to know the rest of the story.

The bill we are on has the catchy name of FSC/ETI. What we are trying to do is comply with some World Trade Organization requirements that allow penalties to be put on our exports overseas and agricultural products are a big one. They always get targeted when this sort of thing happens. We need to correct our law so we are not being penalized, so we do not eliminate business that the United States can have.

Penalties went into effect on March 1 and go up 1 percent per month on U.S. businesses if we do not change the law. We are trying to change the law. It needs to be done quickly. It should be done pretty cleanly. It obviously is not going to be.

We keep talking about jobs, but our actions do not match our words. I point out one very important jobs program we have that affects Americans who want to improve their skills and get a better job. We have the Workforce Investment Act, and that has the potential each and every year to retrain 900,000 people so they have the skills and talents to handle the jobs available, the well-paying jobs available in this country that we are having to fill from overseas.

Do you know what has happened to that bill? Let me give Members a brief history. We passed it out of the Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committee unanimously. How often do you think that happens in that committee? It can be a very contentious committee. It passed out of the committee unanimously. What happened in the Senate? We passed it in the Senate by unanimous consent. That means not one person in the Senate wanted to amend the bill; not one person in the Senate wanted to vote against the bill. It was unanimous. That is as bipartisan as we can possibly get.

Where is that bill now? We cannot appoint a conference committee. That is the committee made up of Republicans and Democrats who would meet with Republicans and Democrats from the House to work out differences between what they passed and what we passed. We cannot have a conference committee to do that.

That is 900,000 jobs in this country that are being stalled out; 900,000 opportunities we are not going to give to Americans. Instead, we are going to talk about a whole bunch of amendments to this bill that are going to slow down this bill and increase penalties on American businesses trying to ship goods overseas. In fact, all American businesses.

Keep that in mind. If we want to take care of jobs in this country and make sure jobs stay in this country, we would get a conference committee appointed on the Workforce Investment Act and get that thing resolved and get people trained and to work.

One of the examples of what will happen on this is the overtime amendment that we have been promised. I could wait until it actually came up, but there were some comments made and there is a need to respond on the 40 minutes we have already heard about the overtime amendment.

It is time to strip the rhetoric from the reality and consider who is really helped and hurt by this amendment which prohibits the Department of Labor from updating the rules exempting white-collar employees from overtime pay. It is not all that simple.

When I am back in Wyoming, I like to hold town meetings to find out what is on the minds of my constituents. At each town meeting, there is usually someone in attendance who is quite concerned about government regulations. I am often told to rein big government in, keep the rules and regulations simple, keep them current and responsive, and make sure they make sense in today's ever changing workplace.

Most of the people I talk to are small businessmen, but that is most of business in this country. They are being killed by the rules and regulations, and, in some cases, by trial attorneys.

Today we are reviewing an amendment that takes the opposite approach. Instead of keeping it simple and current, it will prohibit the Secretary of Labor from updating the rules exempting white-collar employees from the Fair Labor Standards Act and overtime requirement in some cases, an attempt to reject the new, turn back the clock, and look to yesterday for the answer to tomorrow's problems. It is an approach that is doomed to failure before it is even applied. I am opposed to the amendment.

There is no question that the workplace has dramatically changed during the last half century. The regulations governing white-collar exemptions remain substantially the same as they were 50 years ago. The existing rules take us back to the time when workers held titles such as straw boss, keypunch operator, legman, and other occupations that no longer exist today.

Our economy has evolved. New occupations have emerged that were not even contemplated when the regulations were written. A 1999 study by the General Accounting Office recommended that the Department of Labor: Comprehensively review current regulations and restructure white-collar exemptions to better accommodate today's workplace and to anticipate future workplace trends. That is precisely what the Department of Labor's proposal to update and clarify the white-collar regulations will do.

While the Department's proposal will update and clarify, this amendment will do neither. Instead, it will set the clock back to 1954 and try to force the square peg of the 21st century jobs into the round hole of the workplace of 50 years ago.

I am a former shoe salesman and I know how to tell when something will not fit. This just will not fit. It is like trying to force a size 10 foot into a size 6 shoe. It will not fit no matter how hard you try.

Through the course of the debate on overtime over the next several days, we will hear a lot of numbers. Some of them are statistics and we know how statistics work. I am an accountant so I will try to give some good numbers and hope you will put up with me with the numbers, but there are numbers you need to know.

Let us be clear about what this amendment will do. The amendment will undermine the Department of Labor's efforts to extend overtime protection to 1.3 million low-wage workers. Under the current rules, only those rare workers earning less than $8,060 a year are protected for overtime pay. That is how old this rule is. You are protected if you are making less than $8,060 a year. Now the administration's proposed rule will raise that threshold to $22,100 a year.

Doesn't that sound more common sense in today's market? Doesn't that sound like a number that covers more people? If the old rule covered those making less than $8,060, a new rule, covering those making less than $22,100, would cover more people.

As a result, 20 percent of the lowest paid workers would be guaranteed overtime pay. The overtime provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act were originally intended to protect lower income workers. The proposed rules will provide lower income workers with the protection they deserve.

That also makes it easier for businesses to know when they are complying with the law. And that is important, particularly for small businesses. They need to know. They should not have a bunch of different criteria that they need a special accountant or attorney to interpret for them so they can tell whether they are violating the law.

This rule, the one proposed—proposed; it is not finalized yet—by the Department of Labor will make it easier for businesses to know when they are complying.

By undermining the administration's efforts to better protect lower income workers, who will this amendment protect? The supporters of the amendment—the amendment that is going to be laid down, I guess—claim that an estimated 8 million workers will become ineligible for overtime under the proposed rules. However, this estimate is based on a study by the Economic Policy Institute, and it is riddled with errors. For example, the study includes in its calculations at least 18 percent of the workforce who work 35 hours or less a week. These part-time workers do not work more than 40 hours a week and, therefore, they do not receive overtime in the first place.

The study also claims the proposed rule will deny overtime pay to white-collar employees earning more than $65,000 a year. However, not all the employees earning over $65,000 are exempt under the proposed rules—only those performing office or nonmanual work and one or more exempt duties. This means workers, such as police officers, firefighters, plumbers, Teamsters, carpenters, and electricians will not—will not—lose their overtime pay. The Department of Labor acknowledges the possibility that 644,000 highly educated workers making over $65,000 a year might lose their overtime. Mr. President, 1.3 million get picked up on the bottom end; 644,000 drop out on the top.

Supporters of this amendment claim that the proposed rules will strip overtime pay for first responders and nurses. If we look behind the rhetoric, we find there will be virtually no change in status for first responders and nurses under the Department of Labor proposal. Under both the current and proposed regulations, only registered nurses are exempt from overtime pay.

Supporters of this amendment claim that military personnel and veterans will lose their overtime pay under the proposed rules. However, military personnel and veterans are not affected by the proposed rules by virtue of their military status or training. Nothing in the current or proposed regulation makes any mention of veteran status.

Who will this amendment protect, if not low-income workers, first responders, nurses, veterans, or millions of other working Americans? The antiquated and confusing white-collar exemptions have created a windfall—a windfall—for trial lawyers. Ambiguities and outdated terms have generated significant confusion regarding which employees are exempt from the overtime requirements. The confusion has generated significant litigation and overtime pay awards for highly paid, white-collar employees. Wage and hour cases now exceed discrimination suits as the leading type of employment law class action. Let me repeat that again. Wage and hour cases now exceed discrimination suits as the leading type of employment law class action.

This amendment—the amendment that Senator HARKIN is going to put in—will not preserve overtime for millions of working Americans. The amendment will not help employers and employees clearly and fairly determine who is entitled to overtime. The only clear winners from this amendment will be the trial lawyers who will continue to benefit from the current state of confusion. We are spending taxpayers' dollars sorting through what could be solved with clarity.

I stress that these are proposed rules—proposed rules. The Department of Labor has received, and is currently reviewing, around 80,000 comments to their proposed regulations. We should allow the regulatory process to continue and give the Department a chance to complete its review of the proposed rules. Once the review is completed, the Department will align the white-collar regulations with the realities of the 21st century workplace, the intent of the Fair Labor Standards Act, and—this is most important—what they have learned from the comments.

They have 80,000 comments. I expect them to read those. I expect them to react to those, and make sure that it becomes a part of the rule.

Now, supporters of this amendment are, in effect, denying the public a voice in the regulatory process. This amendment will deny the Department of Labor an opportunity to respond to public comments. I happen to believe that public comments play a critical role in the regulatory process.

I will tell you, I go back to Wyoming most weekends. I go out on Friday, travel to a different part of the State, and come back on Sunday. It is the most valuable thing I do around here, and that is because I get to talk to the person who has the problem firsthand. Do you know what? They are working on that all day, every day. And the advantage is they have usually thought of some kind of a solution. Now, when I bring it back, quite often, the comment is: It is too simple. It will never work. Where did you come up with a crazy idea like that? And I have to explain: From the guy with the problem who works on this every day and knows the commonsense approach to solving that problem.

Those are the people writing in with comments. Those are the people who are saying: This is where it is right. This is where it is wrong. Fix it where it is wrong. Leave it in the new context where it is right. That is how the process is supposed to work.

We want the Department of Labor to look at those comments and respond—respond by changing the rule, or respond by letting the people know how that will not work or how it is covered a different way. We have to have that process work.

Now, I hope if there are substantial changes it gets put out one more time for comments. There is not anything around that says they cannot reissue them for comment. The public comments are what help us get it right. We do not do these jobs, so we do not know all the right answers. But the people out there working on them do. The answers can be made right.

Now, if the final rule has gone astray, after all of this process, we can use the Congressional Review Act to reverse it. And we have done that before. That is where we say: You did not pay attention to the process. You did not pay attention to the comments. We are going to jerk you back to reality. But now is not the time or the vehicle for making that determination.

I hope my colleague will not put down the amendment, but if he does, I hope my other colleagues will support me in allowing the Department to move forward with the review and response that they need to be doing. They do need to be paying attention to all of this debate. But we do need to bring that rule into the current century and make sure people are working at jobs and the rules are understandable, particularly with small businesses that are trying to provide a service, not figure out Government regulations.

I yield the floor and reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to yield myself such time as I may consume from the time under the control of the Democratic side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DODD. Let me say to those who may be listening in the offices of Members who want to come over and wish to be heard on this matter, I will be prepared to yield some time. I am here to discuss an amendment that will come up after 3:30. I thought I would move things along while we have this dead time, while we are waiting for this vote to occur, to discuss upcoming amendments and encourage those who may want to participate in some of those debates to come to the floor and share some of their thoughts.

I will be offering at the appropriate time, sometime after 3:30, an amendment that deals with the outsourcing of jobs. I note the presence of the Presiding Officer who comes from the same region of the country I do. We have all been feeling it in our States, not just in the Northeast, but across the country, the tremendous pinch that is occurring as a result of job loss and the growing number of jobs that are being outsourced. I am told by those who cover these issues that the coalition opposed to any legislative efforts to stop outsourcing is coming up with some new language. They don't like the word, ''outsourcing,'' so they are calling it worldwide sourcing, to take some of the sting out of the language. They may succeed in taking the sting out of the language by changing the vocabulary, but you cannot take the sting out of finding out that your job has been lost and that others offshore are taking those jobs because it enhances the bottom line in a quarterly report someplace. We need to address that.

I fully understand that outsourcing to some degree is going to go on. I expect that to be the case. But I don't think the Federal Government ought to be subsidizing that effort. I am one who has believed in and supported free and fair trade agreements over the years. I take great pride in that. In a global economy, you have to do that. But I also understand if we don't have the services or provide the manufactured goods with which to trade globally because we have given up a significant part of our manufacturing base or given up a critical area of technology in the service areas, for instance, we are necessarily going to be great competitors in a global marketplace in the 21st century.

You may say we are nowhere near that yet. The rest of the world doesn't even come close to producing the quality and high value goods we do in the United States. They can't come close to providing the high technology we do.

I think we have all learned over the last number of years that technology and productivity is highly portable, and it is moving at warp speed. What was true a year ago, 5 years ago, certainly 10 years ago, is no longer the case. I suspect this rate of speed of change is going to continue to grow.

At this particular juncture, I think it is important that we speak to this issue and that we try to find some balance on how we maintain our global leadership role, continue to provide opportunities for American workers, while simultaneously not allowing the exportation of jobs overseas.

I was terribly disheartened to read a report, the Economic Report of the President, February 2004, just last month, this publication that comes out. It is designed to give an overall economic report of the Nation, with various suggestions and ideas. I am not making up these quotes from some news article or some demagogue or pundit out there when talking about these issues. These are actual conclusions reached by the top economic advisers to the President of the United States when it comes to the issue of manufacturing and outsourcing.

First on outsourcing, chapter 12, on page 229 of this economic report of President Bush and his economic team, it says:

When a good or a service is produced more cheaply abroad, it makes more sense to import it than to make or provide it domestically.

I would suggest that is a conclusion with which some economists may agree. Some have drawn the conclusion that that is inherently a far better idea, just thinking in terms of quarters or yearly reports, I suppose, and the bottom line. That may be OK. But if you are worried about generational change, if you are worried about trying to establish a bedrock of job opportunities, stability, and security in the 21st century, then it absolutely makes no sense to export that job rather than to provide it domestically.

I note in this morning's Wall Street Journal—so you don't think these ideas are merely being spouted by a Democrat in disagreement with the President's economic report—a March 3, 2004, article, ''Lesson in India.'' I ask unanimous consent to print the full article in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Wall Street Journal, Mar. 3, 2004]

LESSON IN INDIA: NOT EVERY JOB TRANSLATES OVERSEAS

(By Scott Thurm)

When sales of their security software slowed in 2001, executives at ValiCert Inc. began laying off engineer in Silicon Valley to hire replacements in India for $7,000 a year.

ValiCert expected to save millions annually while cranking out new software for banks, insurers and government agencies. Senior Vice President David Jevans recalls optimistic predictions that the company would ''cut the budget by half here and hire twice as many people there.'' Colleagues would swap work across the globe every 12 hours, helping ValiCert ''put more people on it and get it done sooner,'' he says.

The reality was different. The Indian engineers, who knew little about ValiCert's software or how it was used, omitted features Americans considered intuitive. U.S. programmers, accustomed to quick chats over cubicle walls, spent months writing detailed instructions for overseas assignments, delaying new products. Fear and distrust thrived as ValiCert's finances deteriorated, and coworkers, 14 time zones apart, traded curt e-mails. In the fall of 2002, executives brought back to the U.S. a key project that had been assigned to India, irritating some Indian employees.

''At times, we were thinking, 'What have we done here?' '' recalls John Vigouroux, who joined ValiCert in July 2002 and became chief executive three months later.

Shifting work to India eventually did help cut ValiCert's engineering costs by two-thirds, keeping the company and its major products alive—and saving 65 positions which remained in the U.S. But not before ValiCert experienced a harrowing period of instability and doubt, and only after its executives significantly refined the company's global division of labor.

The successful formula that emerged was to assign the India team bigger projects, rather than tasks requiring continual interaction with U.S. counterparts. The crucial jobs of crafting new products and features stayed in Silicon Valley. In the end, exporting some jobs ultimately led to adding a small but important number of new, higher-level positions in the U.S.

In F2003, ValiCert agreed to be acquired by Tumbleweed Communications Corp., a maker of antispam software with its own offshore operation in Bulgaria. Today, the combined Tumbleweed is growing, and again hiring software architects in Silicon Valley with six-figure salaries, as well as engineers overseas. Without India, Mr. Vigouroux says, ''I don't know if we'd be around today.''

ValiCert's experience offers important insights into the debate over the movement of service jobs to lower-cost countries, such as India. Such shifts can save companies money and hurt U.S. workers. But the process is difficult, and the savings typically aren't as great as a simple wage comparison suggests. Some jobs cannot easily or profitable be exported, and trying to do so can risk a customer backlash: In recent months, Dell Inc. and Lehman Brothers Holdings Inc., for example, moved several dozen call-center and help-desk jobs back to the U.S., after employee and customer complaints.

Founded in 1996, ValiCert specializes in software to securely exchange information over the Internet. Banks use ValiCert's software to safeguard electronic funds transfers, health insurers to protect patient medical records. Although still unprofitable, ValiCert conducted an initial public offering in July 2000, in the dying embers of the dotcom boom. In two months, the stock doubled to $25.25.

In 2001, however, sales growth slowed, as corporate customers reduced technology purchases. ValiCert had projected that it would break even with quarterly revenue of $18 million, according to Srinivasan ''Chini'' Krishnan, founder and then-chairman. Quarterly expenses had grown to $14 million, but revenue was stalled at less than half that figure. Executives began considering shifting work to India. The ''motivation was pure survival,'' says Mr. Krishnan, who left the company after the Tumbleweed merger.

India was a natural choice because of its large pool of software engineers. Moreover, both Mr. Krishnan and ValiCert's then-head of engineering grew up in India and were familiar with large tech-outsourcing firms.

Some, including Mr. Jevans, harbored doubts. The Apple Computer Inc. veteran says he preferred ''small teams of awesome people'' working closely together. Nonetheless, that summer, ValiCert hired Infosys Technologies Ltd., an Indian specialist in contract software-programming, to supply about 15 people in India to review software for bugs, and to update two older products.

With no manager in India, ValiCert employees in the U.S. managed the Infosys workers directly, often late at night or early in the morning because of the time difference. ValiCert also frequently changed the tasks assigned to Infosys, prompting Infosys to shuffle the employees and frustrating ValiCert's efforts to build a team there.

Within a few months, ValiCert abandoned Infosys and created its own Indian subsidiary, with as many as 60 employees. Most employees would be paid less than $10,000 a year. Even after accounting for benefits, office operating costs and communications links back to the U.S., ValiCert estimated the annual cost of an Indian worker at roughly $30,000. That's about half what ValiCert was paying Infosys per worker, and less than one-sixth of the $200,000 comparable annual cost in Silicon Valley.

To run the new office in India, ValiCert hired Sridhar Vutukuri, an outspoken 38-year-old engineer who had headed a similar operation for another Silicon Valley start-up. He set up shop in January 2002 in a ground-floor office in bustling Bangalore, the tech hub of southern India. The office looked much like ValiCert's California home, except for the smaller cubicles and Indian designs on the partitions. There were no savings on the rent. At $1 a square foot, it matched what ValiCert paid for its Mountain View, Calif., home offices, amid a Silicon Valley office glut.

Misunderstandings started right away. U.S. executives wanted programmers with eight to 10 years of experience, typical of ValiCert's U.S. employees. But such ''career programmers'' are rare in India, where the average age of engineers is 26. Most seek management jobs after four or five years. Expertise is security technology, key to ValiCert's products, was even rarer.

By contrast, Mr. Vutukuri quickly assembled a group to test ValiCert's software for bugs, tapping a large pool of Indian engineers that had long performed this mundane work.

But the Indian manager heading that group ran into resistance. It was ValiCert's first use of code-checkers who didn't report to the same managers who wrote the programs. Those U.S. managers fumed when the team in India recommended in June 2002 delaying a new product's release because it had too many bugs.

By midsummer, when Mr. Vutukuri had enough programmers for ValiCert to begin sending bigger assignments to India, U.S. managers quickly overwhelmed the India team by sending a half-dozen projects at once.

Accustomed to working closely with veteran engineers familiar with ValiCert's products, the U.S. managers offered only vague outlines for each assignment. The less-experienced Indian engineers didn't include elements in the programs that were considered standard among U.S. customers. U.S. programmers rewrote the software, delaying its release by months.

In India, engineer grew frustrated with long silences, punctuated by rejection. Suresh Marur, the head of one programming team, worked on five projects during 2002. All were either cancelled for delayed. Programmers who had worked around the clock for days on one project quit for new jobs in Bangalore's vibrant market. Of nine people on Mr. Marur's team in mid-2002, only three still work for ValiCert. ''The first time people understand,'' he says. ''The second time people understand. The third time it gets to be more of a problem.''

In the U.S., executives lurched from crisis to crisis, as ValiCert's revenue dipped further. Each quarter brought more layoffs. By year end, the California office, which once employed 75 engineers, was reduced to 17; the India office, meanwhile, swelled to 45. Engineers ''felt the sword of Damocles was swinging above their cube,'' recalls John Thielens, a product manager.

Executives knew they could save more money by exporting more jobs. But they were developing a keener sense of how critical it was to keep core managers in the U.S. who knew ValiCert, its products, and how they were used by customers. ''Even if you could find someone'' with the right skills in India, says Mr. Krishnan, the ValiCert founder, ''it wouldn't make business sense to move the job.''

Frustrations came to a head in September 2002, when a prospective customer discovered problems with the log-on feature of a ValiCert program. The anticipated purchase was delayed, causing ValiCert to miss third-quarter financial targets. The India team had recently modified the program, and the glitch prompted U.S. managers to question ValiCert's entire offshore strategy.

Relations had long been strained between the U.S. and Indian product teams. John Hines, the Netscape Communications Corp. veteran who headed the tight-knit U.S. product team, thrives on quick responses to customer requests. As his team shrank to six engineers from 20, Mr. Hines was assigned three engineers in India. But he viewed the Indians' inexperience and the communication delays, as more a hindrance than a help. ''Things we could do in two days would take a week,'' he says.

Mr. Vigouroux, who became CEO in October 2002, admits to a touch of ''panic'' at this point. ValiCert's cash was running low. ''We didn't have a lot of time,'' he says. He conferred with Mr. Hines, who said he wanted to be rid of India, even if it meant a smaller team. Mr. Vigouroux agreed to hire one engineer in California. When he learned of the decision, Mr. Vutukuri says he felt as if he had failed.

By contrast, Matt Lourie, who heads ValiCert's other big programming group, welcomed additional help in India. He was struggling to keep pace with customer demands for new features on his product and new versions for different types of computers.

At the same time, ValiCert executives were streamlining operations and changing how they divided work between California and India. They gave the India team entire projects—such as creating a PC version of a program initially built for bigger workstations—rather than small pieces of larger projects. U.S. managers began writing more detailed specifications for each assignment to India.

ValiCert also killed its three smallest-selling products to focus resources on the remaining two. To improve morale in the U.S., Mr. Vigouroux crowded the remaining employees into one corner of the half-vacant office and installed a ship's bell that he rang each time ValiCert recorded $10,000 in revenue. He made sure the India employees received company-wide e-mails, and conducted multiple sessions of monthly employee meetings so the India group could listen at a convenient hour. Engineering-team leaders began conferring twice a week by telephone, shifting the time of the calls every six months so that it's early morning in one office and early evening in the other.

Toward the end of 2002, Mr. Vigouroux began to ring the bell daily, as customers such as Washington Mutual Inc. and MasterCard International Inc. purchased ValiCert's software.

By early the next year, ValiCert executives believed the company had stabilized. Revenue increased to $3 million in the fourth quarter of 2002, up 27% from the previous quarter. Expenses declined, and the company neared profitability. Investors detected a pulse, and the stock rose to 46 cents on the Nasdaq Stock Market at the end of January, from a low of 20 cents in August 2002.

But with just $3 million in cash, ValiCert remained precarious. Mr. Vigouroux started meeting with potential new investors and began talks with Tumbleweed CEO Jeffrey C. Smith.

Tumbleweed also had been through significant layoffs and retrenchment, and in February 2003, the companies agreed to merge. The combined Redwood City, Calif., company's 150 engineers today are almost evenly divided among California, the Tumbleweed operation in Bulgaria, and the India office started by ValiCert. In Bulgaria, engineers write and test software, and scan millions of e-mails daily for traces of spam. In India, engineers test software, fix bugs and create new versions of one product. Last September, Tumbleweed released its first product developed entirely in India, a program that lets two computers communicate automatically and securely. Mr. Marur's team had worked on it for over 18 months.

Core development for new products remains in California, where engineers are closer to marketing teams and Tumbleweed's customers. Since July, Mr. Lourie's U.S. team has grown to nine engineers, from six.

Tumbleweed's fourth-quarter revenue grew 69% from a year earlier, as its net loss shrank to $700,000, and cash increased by $2.4 million. Shares have risen five-fold in the past year.

Brent Haines, 36, is a new hire. He joined in October as a $120,000-a-year software architect, charged largely with coordinating the work of the U.S. and India teams. That often means exchanging e-mail from home with engineers in India between 11 p.m. and 3 a.m. California time, as Mr. Haines reviews programming code and suggests changes. Such collaboration requires extensive planning, he says, ''something very unnatural to people in software.''

''Nine months ago, people would have said [moving offshore] was the biggest . . . disaster,'' says Mr. Thielens, the product manager. ''Now we're starting to understand how we can benefit.''

Mr. DODD. This is a story written by Scott Thurm. It is about a company, ValiCert, that learned key roles must remain in the U.S. for outsourcing to work. And the thrust of the article is this company rushed, like everybody else. Forty percent of the top 1,000 companies in America are now outsourcing their jobs, sort of like chasing into Mexico back in the 1980s when the financial service sector thought that was the place to be, without much thought. Once these trends begin, they are sort of like sheep following one after another without much thought involved.

This company ValiCert went racing off to outsource its jobs, reduced its employment, saved a lot of money, according to the article, expected to save millions annually while cranking out new software for banks.

I am quoting from the article now:

When sales of their securities software slowed in 2001, executives at ValiCert began laying off engineers in Silicon Valley to hire replacements in India for $7,000 a year.

ValiCert expected to save millions while cranking out new software for banks and insurers and government agencies. Senior Vice President David Jevans recalls optimistic predictions that the company would ''cut the budget by half here and hire twice as many people there [in India].'' Colleagues would swap work across the globe every 12 hours, helping ValiCert ''put more people on it and get it done sooner,'' he says.

The reality was different. The Indian engineers, who knew little about ValiCert's software or how it was used, omitted features Americans considered intuitive. U.S. programmers, accustomed to quick chats over cubicle walls, spent months writing detailed instructions for overseas assignments, delaying new products. Fear and distrust thrived, and ValiCert's finances deteriorated and coworkers, 14 time zones apart, traded curt e-mails. In the fall of 2002, executives brought back to the U.S. a key project that had been assigned to India, irritating some Indian employees.

''At times we were thinking, what have we done here?'' . . .

The article goes on; I won't read all of it; the point being sort of buyer beware. This notion that you might be hiring people for a fraction of what it would cost to hire someone in the Silicon Valley and it is going to allow you to make millions because of laid-off American workers and you hire someone 8 or 10 time zones away, has been, certainly in the case of this particular company, proven to be untrue.

So to the point that when a good or service is produced more cheaply abroad, it makes more sense to import it than to provide it domestically, I would suggest that the people who wrote the economic report for the President may want to talk to the people at ValiCert. I don't suspect that is one company. I suspect that is true of many companies. So it is not Biblical.

I agree that in certain cases you will make a lot more money by firing people in the United States and getting rid of them. Why should you worry about that? Your job is to provide a bottom line. That is your job.

My job is a little different than your job. My job, as a Senator, is to not only watch out for you and your company, to make sure you live in an environment where you can make a profit, I have an obligation to those people who work for you as well. I didn't get elected to the Senate just to guarantee you a bottom line. My job is setting public policy, not quarter by quarter, not just bottom line and yearly report to yearly report, but longer than that. That is what we are supposed to do in a Chamber such as this, to think a little longer, to worry about this country, those who are the children of the 21st century and what kind of a Nation are they going to inherit after you and I have left. They are going to ask us about what we did at the beginning of the 21st century when we saw the trend lines reaching out to cause literally millions of people to lose their jobs.

One report indicates that in the next 10 years or so we may lose as many as 4 million jobs, a loss of $140 billion in wages, just by outsourcing alone.

That number may be low, according to those who have done this. I will get to the charts in a minute and identify the source of that. I will get to the amendment at an appropriate time and talk about the specifics of it. I know I am going to hear that your amendment goes too far, it is too heavyhanded, because I am going to suggest that maybe the use of Federal tax dollars—we ought to have second thoughts about subsidizing this rushing to go overseas to outsource. I cannot stop a private company with its own dollars deciding to do that. You can make it less of an attractive thing through the Tax Code or more attractive for people to stay here, but I certainly cannot stop you from doing it.

But I ought to be able to say something about how American taxpayer money is being used. If their money is being used to cause somebody to lose their job and to hire someone for the attraction of the salary someplace else, maybe taxpayers have a right to be heard on this issue. This amendment says Federal tax, for the purpose of outsourcing—with the exceptions of national security and other provisional waivers, which I will explain—ought not to be something we are supporting. If you want to do it as a private company, that is your business. I don't think you ought to necessarily have a right to Uncle Sam's taxpayer money to do that at the expense of critical jobs that are important for this Nation's future.

I will go on in this economic report because I may not have time, when we get to the amendment, to talk about it. I cited chapter 12, page 229, where you have this emphatic statement that it automatically, in every case, as I read this, makes more sense to import. They don't talk about outsourcing. They act as if it were a good or a service. I know economists like to suggest that is all it is. But I think people in Ohio, Connecticut, or Pennsylvania are more than a good or a service. They may have a family, a home mortgage they are trying to pay, and they may have other obligations; and they worry about their future retirement and health care. So to have the cold eye of an economist saying a person out there who has a job in America may find it gone because the quarterly report would look a lot better if we can hire that person for $7,000 a year rather than paying you $40,000, $50,000, $60,000, or $70,000 a year, and you are really nothing more than a good or a service—I think many of us here believe otherwise.

These are not just goods or services; these are human beings who help to strengthen this country, provide us the kinds of liberties and opportunities we enjoy as Americans. I think it is about time we stood up for them and what their interests may be—not at the expense of others, but to merely strike a balance. This is not about being against trade, being an isolationist at all. It is merely saying strike some balance before this sort of giddy trend, where company after company is sort of playing follow the leader and runs amuck as they send these jobs willy-nilly offshore; we ought to say let's look at what we are doing and at what ultimate price we may pay.

The second point I want to make out of this economic report is a reference with regard to what is manufacturing. I don't have the page number, unfortunately, on this, but I will get it before I finish my remarks. It is a highlighted box, and the title of the box that is framed out here is ''What Is Manufacturing?'' This economic report says the definition of a manufactured product, however, is not straightforward. When a fast food restaurant sells a hamburger, for example, is it providing a service or manufacturing a product? You may say that is only a question. You know, if this is your question and the example you would cite in your question, what are you thinking of? Do you think it is a debatable item as to whether or not producing a hamburger or a hot dog involves manufacturing? This is not some op-ed piece; this is the official economic report of this administration's economic policy. In bold print in this economic report they suggest there is a legitimate question over whether or not working at McDonald's or Burger King flipping hamburgers ought to be classified as a manufacturing job. If you don't think we are in trouble on these issues, just read that.

That is an example of the kind of terribly naive at best, at worst rather callous, thinking when it comes to talking about the importance of manufacturing. I don't belittle a job somebody holds down working in a fast food restaurant. For many people out there, that is the only job they can get to provide for themselves and their families. They would be the first to tell you that they hardly think of themselves as being in the manufacturing business. Yet, in the administration's official report, it raises the question of whether or not it is a manufacturing job. At least this Member gets a sense they are lost on this issue, when they raise questions as foolish as that.

Let me go to some of these charts, if I may. Let me just give you a suggestion of what is happening on the issue of manufacturing. The first chart I raise here points to the fact that in the last 36 months, we have now lost in the United States of America 2.8 million manufacturing jobs—since January 2001, up until now, the winter of 2004. That is 2.8 million manufacturing jobs that have gone in this country. I believe that is the single largest loss of manufacturing jobs that has occurred since the Great Depression. I understand transitions in the economy. Things happen and move in different directions. But I don't think you can wash your hands of this and say I am sorry, but that is the trend line and that is the way life is—sort of a laissez-faire approach.

We ought to analyze why things are happening, where are the jobs going, and what are the implications for our country. I understand where the CEO of a company is coming from, and the board of directors or the administration of a company. Their concern is the bottom line and whether you have a profit to show the next quarter. I think Members of Congress ought to have a different set of questions from whether the quarterly report is all right—whether this trend line is going to continue, and what it means to our country. If this trend line continues and we end up losing a manufacturing sector, we will deeply regret it.

I come from a State where I have 5,400 small manufacturers—or I did—in Connecticut. Most of them are small operators, with 5, 10, 15 people, third and fourth generation, producing not just flowers or some other item but, rather, significant products, many of which are used in the aircraft engine industry of my State, the manufacture of the sophisticated submarines we produce in Connecticut, or other high value products. These manufacturers employ highly skilled people, producing very valuable pieces of equipment used in some of our most sophisticated defense and nondefense products. So when I see these jobs and these businesses going, I have to be reminded that we are not going to create this overnight. You don't reconstitute the manufacturing base overnight. Again, I accept we have to make changes and you cannot say we are going to stop this altogether. But I think we have an obligation to express our concerns and worries about where we are headed, if we don't speak up and begin to address what this may mean for our country.

I am very worried about where these trend lines are going and what it may mean. If we end up continuing to lose jobs and manufacturers, I am concerned about what it may mean for our country if we end up having to import not only the jobs but the products themselves. That is another subject matter we can discuss later. We ought to worry about it as a country. If we don't do something soon in this area, that is going to be a continuing problem.

Let me point out further, to give some idea of where this is all happening, because it is not, as I mentioned, just my State of Connecticut. I mentioned my friend and colleague, the Presiding Officer, comes from New Hampshire up in our area. Just to highlight, his small New England State as well had some 22,300 jobs in the manufacturing sector lost in New Hampshire. In my State of Connecticut, it is about 32,800, about 10,000 more. That is in the last 36 months.

The trend lines are: Pennsylvania, 132,000; Ohio, 153,000 jobs have been lost; California, 272,000 manufacturing jobs lost; the State of Washington, 59,000; Oregon, 21,000; Texas, 149,000; Florida, 52,000; Georgia, 67,000; 142,000 jobs lost in the small State of North Carolina. This is all in the last 36 months.

I won't go through State after State, but you get some sense of this. It is not isolated to our corner in Connecticut, our small State, or the area of New England: New York State, 115,000 jobs; Michigan, 121,000; Wisconsin, 168,000; Illinois, 115,000 jobs. It is a worrisome trend. It is going on all across the country.

Again, we cannot say this is transitional, I am sorry, America, you are going to have to live with this. We ought to respond in a way that acknowledges this trend and tries to offer some ideas on how we might turn this trend around.

I will be glad to share with my colleagues, if they are curious about their States—I will not go through all 50 States, but there is not a State in the country that has not lost manufacturing jobs. Some have lost very few. The State of Wyoming lost 700 jobs; North Dakota, 500. That may be the lowest. Arizona, 34,000; New Mexico, 5,000; Colorado, 37,000; Kansas, 19,000; Arkansas, 29,000; Missouri, 38,000. These job losses have been very painful.

We talk about these jobs, and I think the tendency is to talk about them in and of themselves, the job loss in any manufacturing sector in any given State. Each manufacturing job supports three other U.S. jobs. When we end up losing these jobs in the manufacturing sector, there is a ripple effect.

I won't dwell on this, but I think most of my colleagues are aware of this already. When someone loses their source of income in the area of manufacturing, the effects are felt in retail trade, personal/business services, and other manufacturing sectors with the inability of people to purchase goods. It is not as if these jobs exist or, when they are lost, the only people paying that price are the people who lost the job. In effect, it is being felt across the economy as well.

Mr. President, 14 million additional jobs are in danger.

Now we get into the question of jobs going offshore. I want to give some indication of what is happening. Let's get back to the outsourcing question. I mentioned manufacturing because a lot of these jobs are moving in that area.

We are told—and this is from Time magazine in their February 22 issue—that by the year 2015, more than 3 million American jobs are projected to be shipped overseas. We begin to see these trend lines. In 2005, it moves up to 588,000 which will be outsourced overseas. A few years later that number of jobs goes to 1.6 million, and projections are, with no effort being made to change this direction, the number gets up to 3 million. We are worried that if we do not speak up now and do something about this trend, we are going to find a continued erosion and continued loss of these jobs overseas.

Let me point out where they are coming from because this may be helpful as well to those interested in this subject matter. There are 14 million additional jobs in danger of being shipped overseas, as I mentioned. Where are they coming from? Office support areas, some 8 million jobs; business and financial support, 2 million; in the area of computer and math professionals, close to 3 million; in the area of paralegal, legal assistance, diagnostic support, medical transcriptions and the like, the numbers are in the thousands, to give some idea where we are going with all of this.

It isn't just these low-wage jobs that are going. They are also going in the more sophisticated areas as well. I mentioned earlier the story in the Wall Street Journal talking about ValiCert. They were talking about jobs in Silicon Valley. I guarantee you we are not talking about low-wage jobs at all. Those are jobs that are fairly well paid, and they are being lost. The trend lines are not good in just raw numbers, but also in sectors of the economy where these jobs are being lost.

At the appropriate time, I will offer a very specific amendment to address the issue. Very briefly, the amendment would do the following: It will restrict anyone from using Federal tax dollars to ship jobs offshore in three different ways. First, the Federal Government may not use Federal taxpayer dollars to procure goods or services to fulfill contracts that use overseas workers at the expense of American jobs.

Second, we tell State and local governments that any Federal dollars they receive in the form of a grant or in the form of an appropriation by formula or in any other way are not to be used to promote the loss of American jobs.

I point out that today 40 States outsource jobs. I am told that in the State of Minnesota, if you lose your job and you call up the unemployment office, you are going to talk to someone in India about what your rights and benefits are. I do not need to tell you the reaction of those people in that State who lost their job and they are talking to someone offshore to tell them what their benefits are.

The third way is, any agency seeking to privatize a government contract being paid with U.S. taxpayer dollars may not enter that contract if it again displaces American workers in favor of offshore workers.

In all these cases, we have exceptions on the grounds of national security and we allow the Governor or a Federal agency head to, in effect, waive these provisions if there is bona fide lack of goods and services in the United States. There is an escape clause here.

The obvious question arises, one, on national security, or, two, if no one is producing these goods and services here, what are we supposed to do? Rather than have the President have to waive the provision, we allow a Governor or head of an agency who would be in charge of this particular area to do so.

Let me take a few minutes to explain why this is a timely amendment and why it is deserving of our support. A gentleman by the name of John Bowman dedicated 25 years of his life to becoming an information technology professional, and he was very good at it, I might add. He, like hundreds of thousands of Americans, lost his job because of outsourcing. John looked around and realized what happened to him was not an isolated incident. It was part of a massive trend, and he decided to do something about it.

John will tell you he would be the last person in the world leading a grassroots organization that has practically become a grassroots movement in this country, not just in my State but all across the Nation. These are white-collar professional people, highly trained, who are watching their jobs lost day after day, flying offshore, being outsourced.

Fortunately, John is now being joined in this fight from people of all walks of life—labor unions, small business owners, Republicans and Democrats alike. I had a meeting in my State a few days ago on this issue. I had people in the same room that I could not put in the same town in Connecticut a year ago—people from the manufacturing sector, from labor unions, and the private sector coming together. They differ on a lot of issues, but on this one they are joined in common cause. They recognize what we are experiencing is different from what we experienced before.

Today, advances in technology and fewer trade restrictions have made it far easier to move goods, information, and jobs around the globe. Foreign countries are aggressively enticing American businesses with promises of lower wages, lax worker protections, and weak environmental laws. Countries such as India and China have figured out if you want to compete in the global marketplace in the best jobs, you need to invest in the best education and training of your workers. Rather than trying to find a meaningful way to address these new circumstances, this administration would rather pretend the world is still functioning as it always did and actually that our economy is on a path to recovery. As a matter of fact, our country is hemorrhaging jobs at an alarming rate. As I mentioned already, according to one estimate, by the year 2015, 3.3 million, close to 4 million jobs and $136 billion in annual wages will have moved offshore if we do not do something about it. Four hundred of the largest 1,000 companies are already sending jobs offshore, with more planning to do so every single day.

In a short time I will get a chance to go into this in more detail as to why I think this is an important amendment and why I hope my colleagues will support it.

I realize it is a loud shout at this moment, and I know others will argue that maybe it is louder than it need be, but I do not know any other way to express my deep concern about what is happening in my State and all across this country if we do not begin to say that at least with taxpayer money you are going to have to act differently. You may decide to do it on your own dime, but you are not going to do it on the dimes of my taxpayers, to send jobs overseas when they are not necessary. You do not need to do that in order to survive.

I see my colleague from Montana in the Chamber. I yield the floor and at an appropriate time I will come back to this discussion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the time for the minority has expired. The majority controls an additional 9 minutes 20 seconds.

Who yields time?

Mr. GRASSLEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum and that it come off of our time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant journal clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

AMENDMENT NO. 2647

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, there are several aspects of U.S. job creation and retention on which many of us may disagree. I do not believe, however, that the need for an effective research credit is one of them. It will do more for workers, more for jobs, more for high technology, more for opportunities, and more for the economy than most anything else we could pass. In this jobs bill it seems very appropriate for us to add this particular amendment to it.

This amendment has strong support from both sides of the aisle. It has the unified support of the whole business community. It is the right thing to do for U.S. workers, for the U.S. economy, and for our children and our grandchildren. This amendment will open a door for small businesses, where most of the jobs are created anyway, to create more jobs, more opportunities, more good products, more high technology, more ways of keeping the United States at the forefront, economically, in this world than almost anything else we could do.

This jobs bill, which itself is an excellent bill that will do a lot for jobs, will be much better for having this amendment added to it. I hope my colleagues will all vote for it. It is a worthwhile thing to do. It is something that every one of us ought to vote for.

I thank those who have cosponsored this with me, those who have amended it with their excellent suggestions and the members of the Senate Finance Committee who have been champions of this for many years. I believe over the long run this type of amendment is going to pay off in great dividends.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant journal clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

VOTE ON AMENDMENT NO. 2651

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 3:30 having arrived, the question is on agreeing to amendment No. 2651.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 2647, as amended.

Mr. BAUCUS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, may I inquire what is the business before the Senate?

AMENDMENT NO. 2660

Mr. DODD. I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DODD] proposes an amendment numbered 2660.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Data not supplied.)

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I offer this amendment on behalf of myself, Senator COLEMAN of Minnesota, Senator KENNEDY, Senator CORZINE, Senator MIKULSKI, and others.

Let me say to the floor managers, if I may, I know they are interested in the time. I am prepared to agree to a 1-hour time agreement. I do not necessarily expect to take the hour. I know there are others who may want to be heard. I know you want to move things along, so I am prepared to have a time agreement and move on my amendment, give my remarks, and then others can speak, and then vote on it, if you would like.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, with this amendment, we are moving along on this bill. I very much appreciate the Senator's generosity in suggesting a time agreement. At this point, apparently, that is not advisable. But I thank the Senator for making his generous offer and for proceeding nevertheless.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I will move forward. If, at any moment you would like to have a time agreement, let me know and I will try to accommodate you so you can move on to other matters.

I have already spoken about the amendment during the time between 2:30 and around 3:30, describing, in a sense, what the amendment would do and the rationale for the amendment. I will be glad to go back over this amendment again for my colleagues and then engage in any debate or discussion about it.

In a sense, I am preaching to the choir when I talk about this issue to my colleagues on both sides of the aisle because we all painfully know what has happened in the last 36 months in our country. We have lost around 2.8 million manufacturing jobs in the United States. I have laid out on this chart I have in the Chamber how that breaks down State by State across the country.

In my home State of Connecticut, we have lost some 32,000 jobs in the manufacturing sector; California, 272,000; Ohio has lost around 153,000 jobs; in Illinois, 115,000; Texas—the Presiding Officer's State—150,000 jobs.

So certainly we all appreciate the fact there has been a tremendous erosion in a very critical area in our economy.

We also know there is another phenomena occurring, and at an accelerated pace; that is, the outsourcing of many jobs, including some manufacturing jobs, around the globe, and it is accelerating at warp speed.

We now know there are literally 400 of the top 1,000 companies in the United States outsourcing their jobs to India or China or other nations around the globe. Mr. President, 40 of the 50 States now outsource jobs.

My amendment simply says—and there are waivers in here and the like. I understand, although I do not like it, if a company decides on its own dime it is going to outsource a job. I disagree with that. I think they are wrong to do it, but it certainly is their right to do it. We can offer tax incentives to encourage people to stay here, tax disincentives so they do not go offshore, but ultimately a company can decide for itself.

It is another matter with taxpayer money, with the money that American taxpayers send to Washington. The idea that we would use their dollars to outsource an American job is something on which I think we ought to speak loudly and clearly. We ought to say: Look, we disagree with that. We don't think you ought to be able to do that.

So this amendment, in three different areas, very simply says: First, the Federal Government may not use Federal taxpayer money to procure goods and services to fulfill contracts that use overseas workers at the expense of American jobs. Second, we tell State and local governments that any Federal dollars they receive in the form of a grant, in the form of an appropriation, or any other way, that they are not to use those Federal dollars to promote the loss of American jobs for the creation of offshore jobs. And, third, we say any agency seeking to privatize a Government contract being paid with U.S. taxpayer dollars may not enter into that contract if it, again, displaces American workers in favor of offshore workers.

Now, very quickly, in anticipation of some of the arguments we may hear, we provide waivers and exceptions on grounds of national security, and we also allow Governors or Federal agency heads to waive these provisions if there is a bona fide lack of comparable goods or services in the United States.

In this legislation, we also, of course, make it clear that the Government procurement agreements between the United States and some 27 other nations, that are predominantly Western Europe countries, are not affected by the prohibitions contained in this bill. Those 27 nations do not include, I would point out, India or the People's Republic of China.

So the major sources of outsourcing are not affected by those provisions. Thus, we are in complete compliance with the WTO and every other formal agreement we have. We are not in violation of any of those agreements as a result of this amendment.

Now, I had a meeting in my State—and I assume my colleagues may have had similar kinds of gatherings—where people came together who you could not have put in the same county a year ago on this issue. I am talking about my chambers of commerce, my manufacturing associations, and my labor unions—all coming together saying: When is Washington going to say something about this outsourcing that is going on?

If we continue to allow these jobs to flow out of our country, then I think we run the risk, at critical junctures, of having the human talent necessary for us to provide those services and to produce those goods which will allow us to compete effectively in the 21st century. Once you lose jobs, particularly in the manufacturing sector, or some of the high-skilled areas, it is very difficult to go back and re-create those jobs, to re-create those manufacturing centers.

Let me point out an article that appeared in the Wall Street Journal this morning. In fact, I have already included it in the RECORD. But the ValiCert company—and I think this is a front-page story or nearly a front-page story in the Wall Street Journal—discovered that outsourcing was no great success for them. They did it and discovered that the value they were getting for the jobs and products being produced did not equal that produced here in the United States. They have reversed that decision.

So when you read in this economic report, prepared for the President of the United States, last month, in February— and I will quote the report for my colleagues where they state, in absolute terms, on page 229 of this report:

> When a good or service is produced more cheaply abroad, it makes more sense to import it than to make or provide it domestically.

Well, tell that to the ValiCert company. They did not discover that. Certainly, while that may be true of a bottom line of a company, if you are trying to preserve jobs in this country, which is a responsibility we bear in this body, and not just to those companies but to the people who work for them—an American job is not just a good or a service. An American job has implications that go beyond just the dollar amount lost of income in wages or salaries. It means also that a family may not pay their home mortgage and may not be able to provide the goods and services that allow our economy to grow and expand. It means families are under more strain and stress because they have lost the source of income to provide for themselves.

So this ought not be a partisan issue. This ought to be something on which we stand united. This is not being an isolationist. I am a free trader. I have been so in the years I have been here. I have supported many, many free trade agreements, and I opposed some as well, but I honestly believe if you are going to be an effective trader, a free and fair trader in the 21st century, then you ought not squander and give up the very jobs that make it possible for you to compete in this global economy.

So I am deeply concerned that if we do not say something, particularly with U.S. taxpayer money that is being used to subsidize this outsourcing of jobs, then we are failing to understand what is going on across this country. In State after State after State, the trend lines are there in manufacturing. It is also occurring in other sectors in the economy.

Let me share with my colleagues, as shown on this chart, indication of where the outsourcing of these jobs is occurring. Presently, it is occurring in areas such as office support. The estimate is 14 million additional jobs, by the way, will be lost and shipped overseas over the next several years. The estimates are about 8 million will occur in office support areas; in computer and math professionals, close to 3 million jobs lost in that area; business and financial services, over 2 million jobs; paralegals, diagnostic support services, medical transcriptions, over 94,000.

So it is not just low-wage, low-salary jobs that are going but very sophisticated, high-technology jobs that could be leaving our country as well. That makes us weaker. It is not in the national security interests of the United States to be losing these critical jobs at a time when we need them most in order to provide for the economic growth of our own Nation.

So while I understand, from a business perspective, your job is to look at quarterly reports, to try to improve the bottom line, our job in the Senate and the Congress of the United States goes beyond looking at quarterly reports.

We should look generationally. I don't want my generation to be the first generation of Americans which leaves the coming generation less well off than every other succeeding generation has left their children and their grandchildren. We are at risk of doing that if we don't step up at this juncture and say we need to stop or at least discourage this outsourcing of jobs that is occurring at a rapid pace every single day.

It is hard not to pick up a U.S. newspaper in any city and read where one corporation, one business after another, is making the decision to outsource more jobs. I think we ought to say, let's slow down. Let's have some balance. Let's not use taxpayer money to allow these jobs to be lost. That is the thrust of the amendment.

I hope we will have overwhelming support for this idea. This bill is an appropriate place to be debating it. It is something that could make a huge difference for those who are worrying whether we are paying attention at all. We have just debated over the last 5 weeks medical malpractice, providing immunization for gun manufacturers. We have had a bill on pensions. But we have not spent 5 minutes debating the issue of what is happening to America's jobs. That is the big issue.

Look at any survey right now. Ask the American people what they worry about the most. It is the loss of jobs. They are outraged we have nothing to say when it comes to outsourcing of jobs to other nations, and we are not standing up and defending our own workforce.

In this same economic report I cited earlier, to give you some idea of why people get discouraged, I mentioned earlier the quote suggesting it was an automatic thing that outsourcing of jobs was good or, as they call it, importing of jobs. That is the way they describe it. I mentioned already a company identified in a Wall Street Journal article this morning, ''Lesson in India, Not Every Job Translates Overseas.'' I encourage my colleagues to look at that article as one example of a company that discovered outsourcing was bad for business, not good.

In this same economic report prepared by the President's top economic advisors, they raised the following question:

> The definition of a manufactured product, however, is not straightforward. When a fast food restaurant sells a hamburger, for example, is it providing a service or inputs for manufacturing a product?

If this was some sort of cartoon in the paper, I might have laughed at it, but it is part of an official document, an economic report prepared by the President's top economic advisers which suggests through the question that flipping a hamburger or cooking a hot dog is a manufacturing job. You get some idea and sense of where the outrage of the American public is coming on why we are unable to speak to this issue.

Again, I don't care if you are a Democrat or Republican, what your politics or ideology is. We have to stand up and defend our country in a moment like this. I worry about losing these jobs.

I mentioned earlier I had some 5,400 manufacturers in my State employing well over 240,000 people. We have lost about 35,000 jobs in the last 36 months. My manufacturers produce critical components for some of the most sophisticated defense technologies in the Nation. If you lose that manufacturing base, it is not just the loss of a manufacturing job or the loss of a good little company, it is also a critical issue when it comes to national security needs. Many of these small manufacturers produce critical components and parts for some of the most sophisticated defense technologies in our Nation.

I mentioned earlier my friend and colleague from Texas. The number of jobs there, 150,000. I know this Senator has many of these small companies that are producing those parts for defense companies, defense technologies. There is a ripple effect. We know as well, beyond the implications for our national security, for every one of these jobs that are lost in the manufacturing sector, there are jobs lost in other sectors. It is not just that job that is lost or that family that is affected. Each manufacturing job supports three other U.S. jobs. So when we lose these jobs, we also feel it in the retail trade, in the professional services, and in manufacturing as well.

I apologize if I get heated about this subject, but it is painful to read some of this cold-eyed analysis that suggests somehow you just have to stomach this or weather this, that this is just one of these cyclical or structural occurrences in the national economy, and these statistics, as troublesome as they are, are nothing more than that, statistics.

Behind every one of those statistics, behind every one of those numbers I cite, is usually a head of household or people trying to keep their families together. They are not just statistics. These are American citizens. These are human beings who are doing everything they can to live by the rules and provide for their families. They want to know whether their Congress—they don't identify themselves when they get up in the morning as a Democrat or Republican; they get up in the morning and worry about their families and their future—gets it, if we understand it, and whether we are willing to do anything about it.

This is an attempt by myself and my colleague from Minnesota and others to say at least when it comes to your tax dollar, we are going to say to the States, localities, and other businesses with waiver provisions here, you are not going to use those dollars to outsource an American job, not on our watch. You may decide to do it with your own money, but you will not do it with American taxpayer money. That is why we offer this amendment.

I yield the floor to my colleague from Minnesota for any comments he would like to make.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment offered by my colleague from Connecticut. I am proud of working with the President to grow jobs. I firmly believe, from my days as a mayor, when you cut taxes, you shape an environment in which folks invest. And when they invest, mom and dad have a job. The best welfare program is a job. The best housing program is a job. Access to health care comes with a job, most often. So we have to do what is necessary to grow jobs. We are moving in that direction. Clearly, more needs to be done.

Changing the economy at times reminds me of turning around one of those oar boats in Lake Superior: You have to get it moving in the right direction. I believe we are moving in the right direction, but more has to be done.

We have an opportunity with the Dodd amendment to do more, to make sure we use taxpayer dollars wisely, in a way that prevents the outsourcing of American jobs and grows jobs here.

The underlying bill we are dealing with, the Jumpstart JOBS Act, is moving us in that direction. We have to do more. We are doing it right here.

I am one who has supported and supports expanding markets. I understand the importance of trade in terms of growing jobs. This initiative is not designed to step in the way of our efforts to expand and broaden our capacity to find new markets for our products. On the contrary, what it does is ensures those firms which have exemplary goods and services to sell have a fair shake at contracts involving Federal dollars.

This issue has come up in Minnesota. From conversations with my Governor, it is clear—and I understood this when I was a former mayor—we have an obligation to get the best possible value for taxpayers. We have to look at the bottom line. But at the same time we have to be concerned about the impact on our State and national economy of foreign offshoring when other options are available, when the work can be done here.

I call this commonsense legislation. Again, I support trade as a way to create wealth and jobs. But for a government at any level to contract out with foreign entities for delivery of federally funded U.S. programs is tantamount to Detroit, MI buying a fleet of foreign-made squad cars. It doesn't make any sense. It flies in the face of common sense.

Recent news reports noted that under a $16.8 million contract with an Arizona firm, calls to a Minnesota toll-free number for help with lost and stolen food stamp cards are being routed to Bombay, India. Under a $13.3 million contract, software programs in India are helping build a Web-based system to automate eligibility for Medicaid and other health care benefits to low-income Minnesotans.

The administration of U.S. Government programs ought to be done here at home in the U.S. Even if some of the work is outsourced to private vendors, the thought of our Medicaid or food stamp programs being run out of someplace in India would offend most Minnesotans' sensibilities, and it offends mine.

We have an opportunity to talk about what we do with taxpayer dollars. Would you use those taxpayer dollars in a way that fosters the growth and development of American jobs or do we send them overseas? I think common sense says we use them here.

My colleague and I may disagree at times on tax policy or on a range of issues. But this is an issue that should cut across partisan lines. We have an interest in growing jobs in this country and this is a way to make commonsense use of taxpayer dollars. I am proud to stand in support of my colleague's amendment to this bill.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, I also rise to support the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut. It is very hard for people in my State and across this country to read the President's economic report and hear economic theory that is pronounced in economics 101, that somehow or another 19th century comparative advantage is the basis on which we ought to be working jobs in this country.

Folks are very concerned when they don't have work. That is a very simple principle of economics. We are seeing so many of our manufacturing jobs go, and now 40 out of 50 of our States are taking jobs that are government jobs and shipping them overseas and undermining our economy here. That is not highfalutin economics. That is taking money out of the pockets of people who drive our economy and make a difference in our communities. It has all those multiplier effects other economists might talk about. Then you don't collect tax revenues, you don't have people spending money back into the economy and driving it. A Senator talked about manufacturing jobs, but there is a leverage or multiplier effect on government jobs as well.

This is really out of touch with the American people, when we believe our policy ought to be to encourage outsourcing. Here, with taxpayer dollars, in the Federal Government, we have an opportunity to say, no, this is not the direction we ought to take. We should not be moving jobs overseas that would be very properly done here at home. We see it in the manufacturing sector. I am not sure I totally agree we ought to let everybody look at their quarterly bottom line and move. I think we need to understand there are national security interests at stake on jobs we have right here at home. We need to make sure we have a manufacturing sector that can actually produce steel, manufacture the weapons that protect our men and women when they go to war. We need to have that strength and it needs to be substantial.

We need to work to make sure our technology is under our control, the privacy of the information that flows in. I think we ought to push back against all this outsourcing for a lot of reasons that don't just deal with economics. But it is absolutely unfathomable that we would take State and local folks, Federal Government people, and ship their jobs overseas at the cost of not being able to have the overall economic impact of this. I think, particularly with the waivers the Senator from Connecticut has built into these programs, we have a program that will make a difference.

It is not enough to talk about translating hamburger-flipping jobs into reclassifying manufacturing as a means to solve an outsourcing problem. It is incredible, absolutely incredible, the illogic we see running through this economic report.

I think the Senator from Connecticut has put together a response that makes sense. We are going to use U.S. taxpayer dollars to make sure when we have Government jobs, they stay here. I am proud to be a cosponsor. I think it is absolutely essential the American people know we are fighting for their best interests at home on the floor of the Senate. This is the most direct, clear method of pushing back against what is a very wrongheaded approach to creating jobs in America.

Again, I am pleased to be a cosponsor.

Mr. DODD. If my colleague will yield, I thank my colleague from New Jersey for his support, and my colleague from Minnesota as well.

My colleague from New Jersey is no stranger to these issues. I made note before of what is happening in Minnesota and other States. In Connecticut, we have lost 32,000 manufacturing jobs. New Jersey has lost over 55,000 manufacturing jobs.

Mr. CORZINE. If the Senator will yield for a quick statement, on Friday, we closed the last Ford production facility in New Jersey, and we are on track to have complete closure of the auto industry in New Jersey, which used to be one of the heartlands of auto production, outside of Michigan. It is very much reflected in the kinds of numbers the Senator is talking about.

We were supposed to be replacing those jobs with technology, information systems and telecommunications equipment, and now we see those jobs moving offshore just as much, and some are reflected in those numbers. That is why it is so important to stanch some of that movement by the kind of action that would be taken in reflection of the amendment of the Senator.

Mr. DODD. I mentioned earlier there was an article in this morning's Wall Street Journal entitled ''Lesson in India: Not Every Job Translates Overseas.'' I want to ask my colleague a question. Because of his background in business, he understands those issues better than most of us. This reads:

When sales of their security software slowed in 2001, executives at ValiCert Inc. began laying off engineers in Silicon Valley to hire replacements in India for $7,000 a year.

It says:

The reality was different. The Indian engineers, who knew little about ValiCert's software or how it was used, omitted features Americans considered intuitive. U.S. programmers, accustomed to quick chats over cubicle walls, spent months writing detailed instructions for overseas assignments, delaying new products. Fear and distrust thrived as ValiCert's finances deteriorated, and coworkers, 14 time zones apart, traded curt emails. In the fall 2002, executives brought back to the U.S. a key project that had been assigned to India, irritating many Indian employees.

''At times, we are thinking, 'What have we done here?'' recalls John Vigouroux, who joined ValiCert in July 2002 and became chief executive three months later.

Tell me a bit about this. I think the assumption is made automatically, and certainly in this economic report prepared for the President by his administration, it makes a categorical statement that outsourcing of jobs is always a good thing because it improves the bottom line. Here is an example of a company which had a very different example. Aside from the obvious reduction in payroll by hiring people in another country to do the job, and firing Americans, are there also examples where this kind of activity has actually been bad for business and not necessarily automatically good for business, as suggested by this report?

Mr. CORZINE. Well, the Senator from Connecticut raises a good point because I think when business decides it wants to outsource 14 time zones away or 12 time zones away, there are enormous synergies in business that are lost—the ability for people to work in similar space, to get the economies of the consolidation of ideas, working with people. It doesn't work nearly as well. As a matter of fact, a lot of businesses are consolidating so they can make a lot of their operations much more sympathetic with each other. These are business principles a lot of folks follow.

I don't think it is as obvious as is commented in the economic report of the President, but I guarantee sometimes the short-term benefits that somebody might see on a quarterly report, because they have lowered their loss, are grossly offset by long-term costs because they lose the technological innovation of having people work together. They lose the economies of scale, and the potential long-term costs, aside from the social costs the Senators from Connecticut, Minnesota, and New Jersey have been talking about, are huge.

Mr. DODD. I thank my colleague for those comments. They are very enlightening. It is further indication that these trend lines are moving forward.

There has been a report in Time magazine that indicates we are looking at, some indicate over the coming years as many as 14 million, 15 million jobs to be outsourced if we do not begin to do something about it. In the near term, I think the number is between 3 and 4 million with a loss, by the way, just looking at revenue loss, of wages lost—forget everything else, forget what happens when a person loses their job and the ripple effects that occur—just in lost wages it is about $140 billion.

We know what kind of budget deficit we are in already. I don't think this figure has been projected onto those numbers at all. We look at revenues coming in, and we look at what expenditures for which we have to account, and a loss of $136 billion to $140 billion in wages, lost because of outsourcing over the next decade or less, ought to be a matter of deep concern, even if you are not affected or moved by what happens to families or heads of households who are trying to provide for the needs of their families.

The fact that we lose that much salary and wages going out ought to be of great concern. I mention that as an additional implication of what is caused by outsourcing.

Again, I said earlier, we can offer incentives for people to stay, we can offer disincentives in the Tax Code for them not to go, but I don't know, for the life of me, why we ought to be taking American taxpayers' money—we insult the taxpayer to say, I am going to use your money to fire someone in this company and hire someone someplace else to do the job at a fraction of the cost because it is going to improve your bottom line.

I don't know how the Senator feels, but the societal implications are profound. Our job is not only to make sure there is wealth creation in the country, but also we bear a responsibility beyond quarterly reports to see to it, from a generational standpoint, that we are going to leave this country at least as in good a shape as we inherited from our parents.

Mr. CORZINE. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. DODD. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. CORZINE. The $140 billion the Senator from Connecticut spoke about with regard to salaries on the chart the Senator previously showed, there is a multiplier effect. It is almost three times that value to the economy. The Senator had the chart which showed the full implications. It is remarkable what is given up when our Nation loses these jobs overseas. It is not just those salaries. When you take the full implication, because you also have to look at the tax revenues that come back into the coffers of State, local, and Federal governments, these numbers could be even larger. This is just showing the impact of what the multiplier effect is for the economy.

These numbers are huge. So the undermining of the well-being of our economy by this outsourcing element is just way more profound than I think is being discussed and is an extraordinary misrepresentation and a mistake for the administration to believe that this is something we ought to be embracing and encouraging.

There is another element that needs to be thought about. Every time those outsourcing jobs cost an American job, then that individual has to compete for another job. Right now, for all but the top 20 percent of our economy, we are seeing declining real wages.

The fact is, people are competing for lesser quality jobs that pay less than the jobs that are leaving. I think we have seen estimates that it is about 20 percent less that an individual makes in the next job they take after they have been laid off. It is profoundly wrong for the administration to embrace such a dangerous idea both for the economic power and also the real hurt that I think it brings to the individual loss.

Mr. DODD. I thank my colleague. It is worthwhile to make the point that actually watching the buying power, the wealth of individuals being reduced, overall our country suffers from that—obviously the families do—but when you reduce that buying power, that wealth, implications are being felt throughout our economy.

These happen from a structural standpoint. But when you allow it to go on with Federal money being used—again, as I say, I would not be party, as much as I may object, to companies that want to do this. I think they are wrong to do it. They are making a mistake. It is harmful to our country. On their dime, I guess they have a right to do it. But on our dime, they ought not have the right to do it, and this is the American taxpayers' dime.

I don't think we ought to be saying to them, You can take your Federal taxpayer money and pay somebody offshore to do it, losing an American job that could be done here. I don't think that is right, and that is the purpose of this amendment. I thank my colleague.

Mr. BAUCUS. My good friend from New Jersey has to leave the floor. I compliment the Senator for what he is trying to do. This clearly is the issue, the problem that faces our country as it will certainly for the rest of the year and probably for the indefinite future.

I am wondering, in addition to the approach suggested today—and there probably are additional proposals, too. This is a complex problem and requires a complex solution. It reminds me of a quote I am fond of making. H.L. Mencken once said: For every complicated problem there is a simple solution, and it is usually wrong.

In my judgment, this administration not only is sort of laissez-faire but kind of going AWOL on this issue. I don't see a plan. I don't see a way to deal with job loss that passes the smell test. In addition, wouldn't it help to be much more aggressive in enforcing our trade laws?

One thing that bothers me, frankly, is that we are going about getting trade agreements with minuscule economies. The big bang for the buck is enforcing our trade laws, say, with respect to India or China or maybe the European Union. There are lots of examples.

We hear about all the call centers in India. We don't hear much about many products by American companies being sold in India, and the Indians are very much violating the intellectual property agreements. Billions of dollars are being lost to American companies that could be spent in America because other countries are not living up to their international obligations.

I was wondering if the Senators agree that is one of the additional ways we can take to keep more jobs in America? Let's open up markets in other countries so we can export more.

Mr. CORZINE. The Senator from Montana is exactly right, some of the regulatory restrictions or ability to actually penetrate some of these markets, while they may meet the letter of the law with regard to trade agreements, are virtually impossible, particularly in the services where we supposedly have the comparative advantage.

I think unless we are prepared to deal on all fronts—enforcing our trade agreements, particularly with large economies—we are not going to see even the theoretical benefits coming back of open trade markets. The situation is very true in the old industry that I worked in, financial services. It is very hard to penetrate these large economies about which the Senator has talked.

So we give up the jobs in outsourcing, but we are not getting the ability to actually provide the services that would make up for some of those jobs back here at home.

It goes back to a miscast presentation of a concept that is fine in Economics 101 books on comparative advantage but makes no sense in the everyday lives of working men and women in America.

Mr. BAUCUS. The point I am trying to make is, we Americans pride ourselves on being fair and open, but I don't know that other countries are as fair and open when it comes to trade.

We are not pure. We do not wear a white hat. Other countries are not necessarily Darth Vaders and wear black hats. But I think it is also true the shade of gray of our hat is a lot lighter shade of gray than the shade of gray of their hats. They do not agree to fair trade in the main. I am talking about the bigger countries. India is the best example, the most blatant example.

Mr. DODD. I thank my colleague from Montana, as well, for his comments. I think they are poignant. While we do not specifically address those issues, he is absolutely correct. It is another piece of this puzzle on which we need to do a far better job. I have had some recent discussions with ambassadors from some of the Latin American countries and have suggested to them they ought to start talking to us about having labor standards and environmental standards from their perspective.

Mr. BAUCUS. Absolutely.

Mr. DODD. If free and fair trade is to work well, it ought to be raising the quality of life and the level of wealth accumulation by people in these countries with whom we are about to enter into trading agreements. That is good for us, and it is good for them. Instead of us having to fight for it here, they ought to be fighting for it and insisting upon it on behalf of their own constituents.

Mr. BAUCUS. Let me ask the Senator a question on that same point. Would the Senator agree that in the main, most of the countries we are talking about—we are talking about environmental standards and labor standards in these countries—generally do not most of those countries want to sign free trade agreements with the United States because it adds to their prestige; it helps them market their products and helps them gain standing in the world? Would the Senator agree with that?

Mr. DODD. I say to my friend from Montana, it is as obvious as anything. These are the shelves—this is the marketplace you want to be. If you are any other country in the world, you want to be able to access the greatest consumer market in the history of mankind, which is the United States of America. This is the most inviolable place to which you can sale your services and your goods.

Mr. BAUCUS. Would the Senator also agree that it is the case that most of these countries probably want to enjoy the status or the prestige of having a free trade agreement with the United States? Certainly we are not going to negotiate an agreement that gives away the store. This is a bargain for an exchange. Is it not also true that it therefore is a mistake for the United States to in effect be negotiating against itself; that is, for some in the administration to say, no, we do not want those labor standards, we do not want those environmental standards, whereas in truth those countries, frankly, are the ones we should be talking with because they themselves want these agreements and would be much more willing to agree to them?

Mr. DODD. Absolutely. The whole point of these trading agreements, because we are a high value country, obviously, and we do not want to dumb down our system, we want to see improving quality products, you need to sell them to somebody. If the countries with whom you are entering trading agreements do not have a population that can afford to buy your higher value goods and services, then the trading arrangement is going to be all one way and not the other. So it is very much in our own interest, from a larger perspective, to be able to have it.

Too often it is U.S. interests that are insisting that labor and environmental agreements not be included because they want to be able to enter those markets and hire people at those depressed wages and be able to operate plants that do not face environmental regulations. So they see it as advantageous for them. They then turn around and sell those goods back here.

They are not thinking about an American corporation that wants to sell its quality product there. It is very shortsighted and, of course, it only leads to further encourage the outsourcing of jobs, which is exactly what is going on.

Mr. BAUCUS. The point being that the other countries themselves are much less concerned about this.

Mr. DODD. And they should be more concerned about it.

Mr. BAUCUS. Exactly.

Mr. DODD. My colleague would be interested to know, in my conversations, very informally at this point, but I am finding a great deal of receptivity to the point the Senator from Montana is making; that, in fact, they should be insisting upon these points. The politics of their own countries are changing and they are insisting if you are going to enter these agreements, that this be a part of it as well.

Mr. BAUCUS. Absolutely.

Mr. DODD. We may be looking at a new era where it is not going to be just people in this Chamber calling for these kinds of things, but, in fact, people in these other countries are going to be insisting upon it as well.

Mr. BAUCUS. I do not know how much time the Senator has, but I might ask, if the Senator does not mind, to address another subject with respect to jobs. Would the Senator agree, as we try to find a solution to this problem, that one of the issues we have to face and have to focus on is high health care costs that American companies pay and face? It is a very complex problem, clearly, but a lot of companies unfortunately are lowering their employee health benefits or their retiree health benefits because they say it is necessary in order to do business; the world is just so competitive.

The first casualty is those who lose their health benefits. They are scared to death, frankly, about lowered health benefits or no health benefits. On top of that, it is partly, it seems to me, because we do have high health care costs in America.

In fact, the last study I saw is that we pay twice as much per capita on health than does the next highest country. I do not know if we are twice as healthy as people in other countries, but we pay a lot, and that has to be the cost of doing business.

What I am getting at, is part of the solution of this some way to address efficiencies in health care and quality of health care, recognizing that employees of companies in other countries have their health covered by the government, where that is not true in our country; that that, too, is a part of the problem here? If we are honest with ourselves, we are going to have to figure out some way to get our hand on that one, too.

Mr. DODD. I appreciate the comments of my colleague from Montana. He is absolutely correct. I did not even get into the issue of what happens here. Obviously, when you fire someone, lay someone off, you hire someone offshore to do the job, there is absolutely no requirement that the fired or laid-off worker is necessarily going to be able to get any kind of health care coverage from the former employer. Even when you have retired with full benefits there is no guarantee, as we learned through the discussion of the Medicare bill that was before us only a few months ago.

So in addition to the lost jobs and wages—that is all I have been talking about today—there are benefits that are incredible, and when people lose those benefits it adds to the roles of the 44 million people in this country who have no health insurance.

They get health care. It might be showing up in an emergency room, which increases the costs of everyone else who has health care, as we all know. Fortunately, in this country if people get sick they can show up someplace and get some kind of coverage.

Mr. BAUCUS. Usually that is true.

Mr. DODD. It is not free, and it adds tremendously to the cost of others as well. So the implications, in addition to laying someone off—as we see now the thousands of jobs that have gone—the Senator from Montana is very accurate in pointing this out when looking at this issue.

Here we are taking Federal taxpayer money. That is what my amendment addresses. It says: With Federal taxpayer money you can lay someone off and hire someone else and pay them basically with Federal dollars. So we are, in a sense, not only causing that person to lose their job in this country but also their health care benefits and other benefits they may have, not to mention what it does to a family.

Talk about keeping families together, the single largest reason why families break up is economics. Every study in the world that has been done on that institution says it is economics.

As a matter of Federal policy, in effect we are saying we are going to outsource these jobs, causing a great disruption in America and families' lives. The Senator from Montana is so right to point out that the health care implications, because we have not yet sorted this out, are huge.

Again, I come back to the point, I do not accept it, I do not like it, but if someone on their dime wants to lay someone off and hire someone else, I do not like it and I wish I could do something about it and I certainly want to support measures that I know of the Senator from Montana and the Senator from California, such as giving tax incentives to encourage people to stay here, but when someone does it with Uncle Sam's nickel, with the taxpayers' money, then I say, no. I have some control over that.

I am offering an amendment today that says when it comes to U.S. taxpayer money, you are not going to lay somebody off and hire somebody else 12 time zones away to do the job. You may do it on your dime but not on their dime.

I will mention one other subject matter that I know my colleague from Montana and my colleague from California care about, and that is privacy. That is one of the things we have not talked about at all on this issue.

I pointed out earlier—I apologize to my colleague from California because she cannot see this chart, but I was talking earlier about where these jobs are going, from what sectors of our economy they are coming from, the 14 million additional jobs in danger of being shipped overseas. One of the areas we are talking about is in the area of medical, diagnostic and medical services. This covers a little more than almost 300,000 jobs in that area.

We all know what is happening. Today, with information technology, x-rays can be transmitted at the speed of light or faster.

Mr. BAUCUS. We are going to give you a Nobel Prize for that.

Mr. DODD. All sorts of medical information.

We have provisions of law in this country that say you cannot share certain private medical information with insurance companies or employers without consent. Medical information is now being processed by someone who has been hired 12 time zones away—all of a sudden that information is no longer well-protected. So as we see the increase in these diagnostic support services and medical transcriptions going offshore, then the very protections we ought to have as Americans are also being lost. I don't cover that in my amendment here, but we may offer some language on this bill at some point that would say you have to give people at least the opportunity to say I don't want my medical records being processed or handled by someone offshore. I want it kept in the United States because I don't want someone to be able to go in and find out highly sensitive information about me and my family that could be used against me.

Today the laws of the United States do not adequately protect you when this information is being processed and handled offshore. That is one of the major areas we are seeing these jobs moving.

Mrs. BOXER. Will my colleague yield for a question?

Mr. DODD. I am happy to yield.

Mrs. BOXER. First let me say how happy I am to hear you and our ranking member have this conversation. This is so important. In a way it is kind of a problem that snuck up on us. I took a look at the loss of manufacturing jobs in California and my heart sank.

Mr. DODD. There were 272,000 jobs lost.

Mrs. BOXER. Think about it, 272,000 jobs.

There is one area covered in your amendment. Since no one has mentioned it, I want to read into the record a letter and then answer the comment, and then I am done with my role here today other than to say thank you again for your leadership.

This is an interesting issue. It is covered. Your amendment is not reflected on the charts because it deals with agriculture, something in your State you don't have as much of as I have.

I want to read a letter I just wrote to Ann Veneman. I believe this will get you a lot of votes from agriculture country.

DEAR MADAM SECRETARY: I was shocked to learn that the U.S. Department of Agriculture purchased 70,000 metric tons of rice for the Iraqi people from abroad rather than purchasing this product from U.S. sources. At a time when U.S. farmers are facing increased economic pressures and food surpluses, our taxpayer money should be spent on U.S. commodities, not the commodities of other nations.

California, like many other States across our nation, is experiencing a surplus of commodities such as rice that could provide valuable nutrition to the Iraqi people while alleviating potential crop losses for our nation's farmers.

Then I talk about California's high quality of rice.

As we work to alleviate food shortages experienced by the Iraqi people, we have a unique opportunity to assist our own farmers. I request USDA reconsider this decision and instead purchase the needed quantity of rice from U.S. farmers. In the future, USDA should use taxpayer dollars to purchase U.S. rice before it spends taxpayer dollars on foreign commodities.

I wrote this letter on February 24. I am so pleased. I discussed this with your staff. Your amendment would cover this.

Here we have the sons and daughters of America's working people, including people on the farms for sure, going off to Iraq and putting their lives on the line. Now their families either see their jobs going abroad or in this case they are ready and willing to feed the Iraqi people. They are excited about it, they have great products, they have surpluses, and our administration, the Bush administration, goes outside.

I wanted to first of all ask if you were aware of this issue, and, second, say to you whether you were or you were not, I thank you on behalf of the people who make a living from agriculture, because we have our serious problems. We have the best products in the world and we have farmers who are ready to feed the hungry.

Mr. DODD. Let me say to my colleague I was not aware of it. I apologize for not being aware of it.

I know agriculture is a huge industry in the State of California, particularly in the area of rice. It is significant. So I am pleased to know we are covering this kind of activity as well.

Again, this is not being isolationist.

Mrs. BOXER. No.

Mr. DODD. Every time you try to stand up for an American job you are called an isolationist. There is a new coalition. They want to change the language, by the way. There was an article this morning that says, ''Business coalition rewrites lexicon for jobs outsourcing.'' They point out, they say the coalition is now rallying around ''worldwide sourcing'' as a less provocative term.

I apologize for sounding provocative, but we didn't make this up. What ought to be provocative is the fact that people like my colleague from California have constituents who are losing their jobs because we are not doing enough to protect these jobs—not from a protectionist standpoint, but protect them when in fact there is no loss to be incurred as a result of standing up and saying we ought to be doing what we can to protect these positions in our country. I commend her for it.

I thank you for raising it. It is an important point and I am glad our amendment covers it.

Mrs. BOXER. I will talk to those from agriculture states because they may not be aware this administration is taking the dollars this body voted on—I had problems with voting on it, but most people voted for it—they are taking that taxpayer money and taking it right out of this country. It is outrageous.

I thank you again for your leadership.

Mr. DODD. My staff gave me some other information. I have mentioned others. Tax experts now say Indian-chartered accountants, the subcontinent version of certified professional accountants, will prepare somewhere between 150,000 and 200,000 tax returns this year. That is up from 20,000 last year.

I am not making up these numbers. The trend lines are moving at a very rapid pace. In this case here I am not suggesting these are necessarily being paid for with Federal tax dollars. I don't know that. If it is not, obviously we are not covering the situation and these firms that want to continue doing it unfortunately will be able to continue. But if they were doing it with Federal tax money, I say no, just as my colleague from California says no.

If someone with their own dime wants to decide they are going to ship rice or whatever products and use someone else offshore, that is one thing. But when they are using taxpayer money to do that, that is when we have an obligation to stand up and say no.

Mrs. BOXER. Thank you.

Mr. DODD. I appreciate her very much for raising that issue.

Let me say I see my colleague from Iowa on the floor, and others. This Senator is prepared to vote. I talked about this. I have had colleagues come over and share some thoughts on it. I know there are other matters. I know Senators want to move on. I am certainly not engaged in any filibuster. I am prepared to ask for the yeas and nays and vote on this amendment and move on to other questions. Is there some opportunity? I don't want to go into a quorum call if other Members want to come over and discuss other matters, but if we want to vote on it, I would like to do it. What chance do we have, I ask my friend from Iowa?

Mr. GRASSLEY. I will be glad to respond to that. Some Members on our side have not studied the amendment as much as they felt they should and have some questions about it. I would say there are two things. One is understanding completely the impact of your amendment, which obviously is a legitimate concern. The other is that kind of makes a determination whether some Members on our side would want to take some action, maybe with an amendment to the amendment. That decision has not been made. My guess is that decision is not going to be made today. That decision will be made tomorrow.

Mr. DODD. I appreciate that.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Maybe I am being more candid than a Republican ought to be, but that is the way it looks to me. You have always been transparent with me. I think I ought to be transparent with you.

Mr. DODD. I thank my colleague and the manager of this bill for his candor on the subject matter. He will certainly understand if I share with him—I know these were not his views, he is expressing the views of others who didn't understand the impact of this amendment. Let me say to him, my good friend—and he is a good friend. We have been in Congress together for many years—the impact of not doing something here is huge, on workers losing their jobs. I know my colleague knows that and shares my concern about it as well.

It is not terribly complicated what I am suggesting here. It is straightforward. It says when it comes to taxpayer money, it can't be used to subsidize someone offshore at the cost of an American job.

I know the coalition of the Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers and some other groups out there don't particularly like this amendment because 400 of the top 1,000 corporations are now outsourcing jobs, and I am sorry if they are disappointed by this amendment, but there are an awful lot of people losing their jobs.

That is the only reason I raise it. I have to wait until tomorrow. We will have to wait, obviously. I am disappointed because I thought it was pretty straight forward. Nonetheless, I appreciate my friend's candor.

I see my colleague from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I wanted to ask a question of my friend. I would be happy to defer.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I think maybe I answered too casually when I answered the Senator's question—that maybe I have a feeling there were not legitimate concerns by people on my side. There are a couple legitimate concerns. No. 1, the Senator's amendment does have some mandate on States. That creates a lot of concern—I will bet not only on my side but on his side as well. That is a very philosophical point of view of the impact which we make in the Senate on 50 States, and how many subdivisions I don't know. The other one is the extent to which this might lead to legitimate legal retaliation as a result of the Senator's amendment. That seems to me to be a reasonable, free, and fair trade consideration in any action this body takes.

I want to make clear that it is not strictly political. There are some concerns about his amendment. I enunciated at least two.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I yield to my colleague from California.

Mrs. BOXER. I have a question of my friend, Senator GRASSLEY.

While the Senator was out, I was telling the Senate that I had written to Ann Veneman because with taxpayer dollars the USDA went out and bought rice from a foreign country instead of from my rice farmers. I think that is wrong.

I ask this question of my friend: If there are legitimate concerns, I am sure my friend will sit down and work them out with somebody because you have been here a long time. There is no one who is more patient and more willing to sit down and figure things out. But I have a feeling it is deeper than that. I have a feeling you have touched a nerve today which is a very important nerve to be touched. I think it is being touched in the Presidential campaign. I think it is being touched in the campaigns across our country, and it is being touched here today.

If we don't stand up and do something about this, as my friend pointed out in his very chilling chart—and say there is some complication, there is a message being sent, it may be too late.

I say to my friend, if he is willing and if there is some concerns around the edges which can be worked out, I just hope he won't back off this amendment in a substantial way. If there is a difference between the parties, bring it on, I say. This is what people care about in my State, and I know also in my friend's State. Can he give me a sense of the thinking on how he is going to proceed since the majority will not allow a vote today?

Mr. DODD. I will make two points.

I appreciate my friend from Iowa telling me what the substantive concerns are about the amendment, one which I think we have addressed.

On the second question he raised, we included language which very specifically makes clear that the government procurement agreements between the United States and 27 other predominantly western European countries would not be affected by this legislation. India and China are not part of that problem. The major culprit in all of this is outsourcing of jobs. But my colleague from Montana raised the question that we could be found in violation of World Trade Organization policies, if we didn't include this language. So I think we addressed the concerns about whether or not we are going to run afoul of some international agreements to which we are a signatory.

The second part about mandating States, if you are going to use Federal money to lay off workers in your State and hire someone 12 time zones away to do the job, I don't consider that a mandate. That is Federal money. If you want to do it with State money, I can't keep you from doing that. That is your choice. If you are going to do it with Federal money that comes from grants and so forth, I think the American taxpayer would like to know that Federal dollars are being used to lay off one person in your State and hire someone 12 time zones away. You can call that a mandate, but I call it common sense at this particular juncture.

I think we have gone as far as we can go on this issue. We have covered the ground.

I thank my colleague from Wisconsin, Senator KOHL, for joining me in a bipartisan fashion on this amendment.

Today, 40 States outsource jobs. That is pretty alarming.

If you are unemployed in a State and you call up your unemployment office to find out about your rights, and you are talking to someone 14 time zones away to find out your rights, that is offensive to people in this country. They want to know what we are going to do about it. Do we understand what they are going through?

This is the first opportunity we have had since we have been back over the last 5 or 6 weeks to raise the one issue here. Night after night, Lou Dobbs on CNN, to his great credit, is talking about this issue. He is not talking about it and speaking to an audience that is not interested. The audience across this country is deeply interested in this subject matter. They want to know whether or not anybody is doing anything about it. I can't stop a private company from outsourcing with their own money. But I can stop you from using Federal taxpayer money to fire somebody here and hire somebody 14 time zones away. That I can try. I may not win, but I can try to do it. And that is what we are trying to do.

Mrs. BOXER. I am really relieved to hear my friend's response to the Senator from Iowa. As I understand his amendment, he has already gone a very long way in answering the concerns that were raised. I hope we will stick with it. I think the people in this country are watching. They are not only watching CNN, but they want to know what we are doing. It is an amendment that I have been looking forward to for a long time. We have to make a stand, and I think what my friend is doing is not overreaching.

I rise to say thank you to the Senator for sticking with it, and I will do all I can to help him get it passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. COLLINS). The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, first of all, the Senator from Connecticut has been right in the sense that we have raised some concerns, and we are working with him. He has made some modifications. We are still hearing about some more concerns. I have expressed two of those already. I would like to express another concern that I have heard.

Yes, it preserves jobs in America if there is not outsourcing of service jobs that are involved. But this is a legitimate concern on our side: The extent to which there might be retaliation by countries that outsource some things to the United States. That goes on as well. We want to make sure if we are losing jobs, we don't have a greater loss of jobs in retaliation for Americans who are already employed by a company outside the United States which is using the services of American people in America.

These are concerns that need to be addressed. These are things that will be brought out in debate, and it may be possible to work on continuing modifications of the Dodd amendment so that hopefully we can get it passed without a great deal of opposition.

At this point, we are not prepared to vote.

Mr. DODD. Madam President, I don't believe I yielded the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut has the floor.

Mr. DODD. My colleague from Nevada is in the Chamber. I didn't know if he wanted to speak.

Mr. REID. If I could make a brief statement without the Senator losing the floor——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. For the minority, the majority leader has indicated there will be no votes tonight. Everyone should know that.

Mr. GRASSLEY. That is what my Blackberry said 5 minutes ago.

Mr. DODD. For the purposes of those who don't know what a Blackberry is, we will explain that.

I do not know whether my colleague from Texas has a question of me or not. I know he would like to speak on the issue. Does he have a question for this Senator on the subject matter?

Mr. CORNYN. If the Senator will yield, I will have a brief response but not so much a question at this time.

Mr. DODD. I will wrap up myself. I would like to come back, if I could.

Again, maybe I am wrong. But every survey I have seen over the last number of weeks has indicated that people—even people who have jobs—are worried about this issue.

To give you some indication of the disconnect that occurs when it comes to this issue, I quote from the Los Angeles Times story, which appeared elsewhere, but talking about this question, it says:

''The movement of American factory jobs and other white collar work to other countries is part of a positive transformation that will enrich the United States economy over time even if it causes short term pain and dislocation,'' the Bush administration said the other day.

It goes down and says from the economic report:

''Outsourcing is just a new way of doing international trade,'' said Gregory Mankiw, Chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

They prepared the report.

More things are tradable than were tradable in the past, and that is a good thing.

The article goes on.

I remember the statement being made; Mr. Mankiw apologizing. He said it was a bad choice of words, and we certainly accept his apology. The problem is, it was not the words. It is not a bad choice of words; it is a bad idea.

The idea of saying I am sorry I said only indicated to me they were sorry they said it out loud. They did not change their mind about the subject matter but merely said we got caught at something we should not have said because it was bad politics to say it. I misspoke politically but not substantively, and there is a fundamental disagreement on this point that outsourcing is a good thing.

These are not just goods and services to be tradable in the open marketplace. These are critical jobs which mean a huge difference to the families affected. We bear no greater responsibility in this Chamber than to do what we can to protect American families. When they are being threatened by unnecessarily shipping their job overseas, it is our obligation to speak out and try to do something about it that is responsible.

I made the point over and over again, and I will make it again, I have supported far more free trade agreements over my course of service here than not because I believe that is where you have to be in the 21st century. But they have to be fair agreements. We have to negotiate them far better.

The Senator from Montana and I have talked about how we might achieve those desired results. I don't subscribe to the notion that it is isolationist or protectionist to stand in the Senate and say I think it is wrong to use Federal taxpayer money to cause someone in this country to lose their job and hire someone 14 time zones away. I don't think that is a good idea. Others may say that is their right, but we will have a vote on whether you think it is right.

Examine it until you are blue in the face and try every cockamamie idea to undermine what we are doing, but it is a bad idea to federally subsidize the exportation of jobs that ought to be kept here, not for protectionist reasons but if we provide services and jobs in the global marketplace in the 21st century, you better have the people here who can do it.

If we give up that kind of human capital that is so critical to our long-term success of people, we are putting our Nation in jeopardy. It is not a great quarterly answer. For that company which wants to make more money next quarter, this is a dreadful idea. But if you are thinking more than quarters, if you are thinking down the road about what kind of a Nation we will be leaving the next generation who will inhabit these seats we hold today as Members—we have an obligation to them, as well. We owe an obligation, just as others who sat in these seats bore an obligation to us and left us a pretty decent country—not a perfect one, but a good one. We should see to it that coming generations have the equal opportunity to bear the fruits we have provided for two centuries.

We do not do it by remaining silent or giving phony reasons about why jobs are being outsourced unnecessarily around the globe. That is why I bring it up and that is why I hope we can have a vote and move on it. It is not that difficult to understand.

I yield the floor, as I know my friend from Texas wants to be heard.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, the distinguished Senator from Connecticut has spoken passionately and eloquently about our concern about job loss in this country and certainly it is something we are all concerned and want to do something about. But I am sure none of us would want to endorse a cure which is worse than the disease or cause other problems that perhaps we have not thought through or that are not intended.

I do detect a whiff of politics. I notice the chart says manufacturing jobs lost under President Bush. Perhaps since the time when we had primarily an agrarian economy, we have seen tremendous shifts in our economy because of the efficiency of a flow market system that is far more efficient than the command-and-control economy that is used in other parts of the world that is inefficient and stifles competition and innovation and the productivity that we have in this country.

I certainly would not want to see us do anything that would harm the good things we had going on in the economy in the effort to address a real problem but perhaps with the wrong solution.

I appreciate the Senator from Wyoming mentioning this is something I and no doubt other Members would like to study a little further to see exactly what the details may be before we were asked to vote on it.

I am not an economist. I do understand why companies outsource, to find a cheaper way of producing their product. Even though the distinguished Senator from Connecticut says it is a bad idea, I am not sure what you can do or what we could do, short of erecting a wall around this country and saying we are no longer interested in international trade. I don't know what we can do to avoid companies who are seeking to produce a cheaper product in a more competitive environment from outsourcing some of those jobs. I do think there is an answer, but I am not sure the answer is what the distinguished Senator from Connecticut is proposing.

In fact, by prohibiting the outsourcing of jobs we are basically saying the American taxpayer has to pay a higher price than they would otherwise have to pay. Certainly, that is something we need to explore, whether the higher price is worth the proposed cure.

Also, the Senator from Iowa mentioned we are a country that has a policy of free and fair trade. Of course, there is a question of retaliation. But the truth is, we have seen a loss of manufacturing jobs in this country for a lot of reasons other than outsourcing or competition with China, India—now with the movement of white-collar jobs particularly in the service sector to that country—and that is simply because we have increased productivity. Technology has made it possible to do the same or, indeed, more work using less people. That is just a fact of life. I don't think anyone would want to go back to the last century and say we are not going to seek further improvements in technology or innovation because we do not want to put people out of work.

The truth is, the solution is, we need to make sure we continue to educate our workforce and not for minimum-wage jobs but for good high-paying jobs. Members may recall the President addressed this issue in his State of the Union speech and talked about the importance of Americans competing in a global economy by educating and perhaps retraining our workforce for new and better-paying jobs.

He mentioned his initiative, working with community colleges. I took the President's words to heart because I am concerned—as no doubt all 100 Members of this body are—about job loss in this country. I went to the community colleges in my State. I said, Tell me what you are doing to train the American worker or perhaps to retrain the American worker for good, high-paying jobs. I went to Amarillo in the Panhandle where I found that Bell Helicopter and the Amarillo College helped create a curriculum to train people to work on the V–22 Osprey which is produced in that plant.

I remember a young woman, a single mom, Hispanic woman, with two children, formerly working as a prison guard making about $9 an hour. As a result of this program with Amarillo College and Bell Helicopter—this is just one example—she is now working on a production line, contributing to the transformation of our military and also improving her standard of living, making about $16 an hour in a good job.

I have done the same thing in Austin where I went to the Austin Community College and learned about partnerships they had entered into to train nurses, surgical techs, dental hygienists. At the San Jacinto Community College near Houston they have partnerships with Boeing and NASA and others to train people for good, high-paying jobs.

Now, I realize we are in the political season, and I understand that perhaps nothing said in this body or anywhere else in Washington is perhaps totally devoid of politics, but the truth is, Americans can and will always be willing to compete and win in the global competition in this new economy.

Now is not the time for us to wring our hands and say: Oh, woe is us. We just can't quite do it. We have to erect protectionist walls. We have to come up with solutions which, perhaps maybe actually increase prices to the American consumer while not actually solving the problem that we are all concerned about; that is, job loss.

So I say as part of this debate—and, again, I know the Senator from Connecticut has the best of intentions, and we share the same concern—now is not the time for the American worker or for the Members of the Congress to lose faith in free markets and the capitalist economy which has made this Nation the envy of the world.

We are talking now again, thankfully, about addressing our immigration issues in this country. I will note that there are not people trying to get out of the United States of America because things are so bad. To the contrary, people are risking life itself to come here because we are still a beacon in terms of the opportunities provided, in terms of the freedom, in terms of the ability of people, working hard in this country, to have a good standard of living and a better quality of life.

I hope the election year does not consume us so much that we look at the glass always as half empty rather than half full, or look at something as a lemon rather than an opportunity to make lemonade.

I think the President is exactly on the right track. I think if we commit resources to train the American worker to be part of the innovation that has always characterized and been the hallmark of the American economy and the business providers in this country, to make sure those workers are trained in this constantly evolving economy, which is very efficient, and sometimes brutal, but to make sure we are there and are working with local and State and Federal governments to do everything we can to assist business partners and the education community to train the American worker for good, high-paying jobs, I think we have nothing to fear.

Finally, where I was raised we were taught that we would get our formal education and then we would go to work and maybe even stay in the same job for the rest of our adult life. But the truth is, today that is just not possible. We need to change our frame of mind so that we teach our younger people, look, learning is a lifetime endeavor, and it may be that you will change jobs at different times during your adult life because you want to improve your circumstances, you want to get a better paying job to better provide for your family, and you can do it in a free country where there is an opportunity to retrain, to get an education throughout the course of your life.

I firmly believe now is not the time for the American people to lose faith in the good thing we have going in this country, and that, as I said a moment ago, is the envy of the entire world. I believe our focus ought to be on that education, lifetime job training, and not on erecting barriers around this country or perhaps other solutions, although well intended, which will have a detrimental impact.

With that, Madam President, I yield the floor.

Mr. DODD. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant journal clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I think the American people need to look at what has transpired in recent weeks with this administration. Senator DODD has brought to the Senate's attention one issue; that is, a high-ranking member of this administration has said that outsourcing jobs—what does it mean? Shipping jobs overseas—is good for our economy. That is what he said. Well, if that were the end of it, you could well say, maybe that was just somebody who made a mistake.

Then we have today Tommy Thompson who says: We should not have Americans be concerned about all the money we are giving to Iraq to establish a health care system because we really have, in the United States, a universal health care system because those people who have no insurance get taken care of. That is what a Cabinet officer of this President said.

Now, should we stop there? Let's go on and talk about what another Cabinet officer said 2 weeks ago, the Secretary of Education. The Secretary of Education said, to a group of assembled Governors, that the National Education Association were terrorists. He did not say it once to the Governors but twice. I have talked to Governors who were there: The National Education Association are terrorists; the largest teacher organization in the world, based in the United States, are terrorists.

I think that is something I cannot comprehend: How the Secretary of Education can say this about teachers.

Someone I went to high school with—we played baseball together; we were on the first State championship baseball team in the history of the State of Nevada; He was a pitcher; I was a catcher—Reynaldo Martinez and I have been friends for these many years. He was my chief of staff in the Senate. He retired a few years ago. He was a longtime organizer for the National Education Association. To call Rey Martinez a terrorist because he was a member of that organization is difficult for me to comprehend.

For me personally, what is transpiring in Congress, because of the position the administration has taken regarding highway transportation—the former chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee, the former chairman of the Finance Committee, now the ranking member of the Finance Committee, has worked, as I have worked, on a number of highway bills. There is no bill we do in the Senate, in the Congress, that is more important than a highway bill. It creates millions of jobs over a 6-year bill. We produced a bill based on the budget we passed a year ago. We have there, in the bill that we were able to report out of committee, in keeping with the budget, and as passed the Senate of the United States, a bill that is a very good bill, that does not raise one penny of taxes, that takes care of transit and highways. The President says he is going to veto the bill.

Outsourcing is good; 44 million Americans, don't worry, you have universal coverage because if you get sick, you can go to an emergency room, if you are lucky, if there is one there; the National Education Association personnel are terrorists; and he is going to veto the transportation bill. Is there somebody in the bowels of the White House trying to destroy the President? I cannot imagine the President would come up with these ideas himself. I certainly hope not.

I commend and applaud my friend from Connecticut, the senior Senator from Connecticut. He has brought to the attention of the Senate the importance of focusing on the disastrous loss of manufacturing jobs. Since this President has been in office, our Nation has lost a total of 2.8 million jobs. Every single month, with no exception, manufacturing jobs are lost.

I guess I should be leading the cheers here because out of the 50 States, the great State of Nevada is the only one in white on this chart. We hold the record. We created 200 new jobs in the last 3½ years. That is certainly better than losing 200, and it is certainly better than the State of Texas, which has lost 150,000 jobs, or the State of New York, 115,000 jobs. Even a small State such as Wyoming lost 700 jobs. California has lost 273,000 jobs. So 200 may not look like much, but for us in Nevada, we will take it.

Two hundred manufacturing jobs in 3½ years were created in the State of Nevada—not much, until you compare it to the rest of the country. Then we are doing pretty well. We are the only State in the Union that had a net gain of manufacturing jobs during this Presidency.

Where have these jobs gone? Some are gone forever, but lots of them have gone overseas. Our country cannot remain strong if we can't manufacture steel, automobiles, airplanes, and appliances. I am very happy that we do wonderfully well with our service industry. No place represents that better than the State of Nevada, especially Las Vegas. But we cannot remain the superpower of the world by flipping hamburgers, which is something I forgot to mention.

Somebody in the administration suggested 2 weeks ago that we should create a new manufacturing category; that is, people who work in fast food restaurants. I am not making that up. They want to turn people who work in McDonald's preparing meat patties, putting the sandwiches together, into manufacturers.

Mr. DODD. If my colleague will yield, in chapter 2, page 73 of the Economic Report of the President—this was prepared by the President's economic advisors—they raise the issue here as if it were a legitimate question. They say: The definition of a manufactured product, however, is not straightforward. When a fast food restaurant sells a hamburger, for example, is it providing a service or is it manufacturing a product? They think that is a legitimate question, that manufacturing a hamburger might actually be a manufacturing job. My colleague from Nevada is absolutely right to raise this point.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I have only talked about what has happened in the last few weeks: Outsourcing is good, teachers are terrorists, veto the transportation bill. We have universal coverage in America because if you are one of the 44 million, you get taken care of some day somewhere. That is universal coverage. That was the Secretary of Health and Human Services who said that. And now they are trying to develop a new category of manufacturing.

This reminds me of my friend Greg Maddux. In Las Vegas we are so proud of him. He has won the Cy Young Award 4 years. He is slightly built and my size. He is one of the greatest pitchers of all size. His hands are smaller than mine. He is now going to Chicago. He needs to win 11 more games to become a 300-game winner, which is a big deal in baseball. Just a handful of people have done that. So he needs 11 more games. Based on the President's assumption of how we can create manufacturing jobs, maybe we can get him to 11 more quickly. What I suggest is having four strikes instead of three. With four strikes—he has great control—I guarantee you, even though he will be 37 years old next month, I think he could win his 11 games much more quickly.

That is what is going on with this administration. If you don't like what goes on, change the rules.

I have said before, I have two brothers older than I. One of them was working in a Standard station in a place called Ashfork, AZ. He wanted to take his little brother away from Searchlight. So we went to what I thought was the big town of Ashfork, AZ. Frankly, it was not a lot of fun for me because my brother had a girlfriend, and he didn't spend a lot of time with me. So I was pushed off on his girlfriend's brother. I could not beat him at anything. It didn't matter what it was. I never beat him at anything because he always changed the rules in the middle of the game. That is what is going on here with the administration. We are going to change the definition of manufacturing.

The loss of jobs in our country is very bad. If it were only manufacturing jobs that were going overseas, I would not like it, I would complain about it. But this has been compounded because the loss of manufacturing jobs is not the only problem. The Senator from Connecticut and I were looking earlier today at a chart. I am sure he has shown it. This chart talked about some of the diagnostic procedures that were going overseas. Look at some of these things: 14 million jobs in danger of being shipped overseas.

Mr. DODD. These charts belong to Senator KENNEDY. He feels very strongly about these charts. I wanted to make sure the record reflects we are borrowing Senator KENNEDY's charts. They are very good charts.

Mr. REID. As I was saying, Senator DODD and I were looking at this earlier today. We don't need to go through all of this, about the 14 million jobs, some of which have already been shipped overseas and some going overseas. Diagnostic support services, we already know what these are. They are actually shipping medical records to other countries and having them catalogued. But they are also having some of these medical records reviewed. Take, for example, a CAT scan. Ship it overseas. They can have somebody there review it very quickly. Take, for example, an X-ray, a simple X-ray, ship it overseas. They can do it quickly. You will get the results back soon. I don't feel very good about that. I go to my doctor in Las Vegas or Reno, Boulder City, Elko in Nevada. They are shipping the X-rays they take of my body to India or some foreign country to have somebody over there call my doctor or the hospital staff and tell them what is wrong with me? I don't think so.

The additional problem with that, just from a basic fairness standpoint, I won't disclose the Senator's name, but a Senator told me she had two complaints from constituents in that State that privacy was being violated, people had information that came from overseas about her health condition. I hope the people making these decisions for our President were not trained during the Reagan years.

Reagan, for whom I have the highest respect, didn't continue this. He learned early on it was not a good idea when someone in his administration said, let's have ketchup considered a vegetable for the school lunch programs. Maybe that person is still around here someplace and giving these great recommendations to this administration. I hope not. Or if it is true that that person is around, maybe they should put a stop to it. We do not want people who are being X-rayed, medical records, lawyers who research cases and write briefs, technological specialists to keep virtually every company running—all these jobs are fleeing America in a mad global case for cheap labor.

Every time a job goes overseas, it hurts an American family.

It used to be that if you lost a job, you would find one pretty quickly. Now the average time for getting a new job after losing a job in America is almost 1 year. Losing the job is bad enough because you lose self-esteem, you lose a sense of pride, you believe you have not been appreciated, even though you were doing the best job you could, but also that family probably loses their health insurance because they cannot pay for the COBRA; they don't have money to do so.

My son left to go to Vegas, and he needed coverage of insurance for 2 weeks. It cost him $2,200. He is married, has two little girls, his wife was pregnant. He had no choice. He had the money to pay for it. If he had not had it, I would have helped him. That is not the way it is with everybody. Many people are not able to buy insurance for periods of time when they don't have it. Maybe they are buying a home or were going to buy one and they lose the sense of a dream of owning a home.

What about college? College is so expensive. It used to be that when I was growing up, I could work in the summers and during the school year to pay for my education. My parents were not in a position to help me, and I basically educated myself with a few little scholarships I had. You cannot do that anymore. You cannot work during the offseason—unless you rob banks—to pay for a college education. It is too expensive. So that is another thing a family would lose—the ability to prepare for their children to attend college. That is why the loss of American jobs is a crisis in our country. We need a real plan to address that issue. We cannot afford to wait until the next business cycle because the flight of jobs overseas is a result of powerful economic forces.

American workers are not afraid of fair competition. I am not against that, but I am against the mentality of chasing cheap labor around the globe with no regard to long-term implications. When American companies choose cheap labor, they are saying our environment doesn't matter. They are saying conditions for their own workers do not matter, and they are forgetting the great lesson learned from Henry Ford. Henry Ford was not a person I liked everything he did or said, but he was a good businessman. He realized in order for his company to sell cars, the people who build them should be able to also buy those cars. In other words, workers are also customers. A worker who earns a decent living can afford to buy the products and services American companies are selling. So every time a so-called American company chases cheap labor by moving jobs overseas, we are all diminished. The market for goods and services in our country is damaged.

As I have said, the President's top economic advisers said the outsourcing of jobs is a good thing. Every day someone in the administration says the economy is getting better. It might be looking up to those who have the Wall Street Journal and the Financial Times delivered to their homes but not to middle class Americans. They feel that inside something is happening that goes beyond the normal business cycle.

Middle class Americans are deeper in debt than ever. Consumer debt is at an all-time high. Middle class Americans are afraid the Social Security benefits will be swallowed in the sink hole of a half-trillion-dollar deficit. And they are right. The debt would be much bigger for the 3 years that this President has been in office but for the fact that the debt is being disguised by the Social Security surplus. Middle class Americans are worried their jobs might be outsourced. They are being hit hard by the skyrocketing cost of health care. Their deductibles and copayments keep going up, and they wonder whether they are going to lose coverage entirely.

There are 77,000 people on strike in California who work in grocery stores. They are not on strike because of working conditions, not because of wages or hours; they are striking for one simple reason, health benefits. They could not make ends meet by having to pay what they were going to be told by their employer they had to pay for health costs, so they went on strike—one of the longest strikes in modern history.

All these problems are deeper than the business cycle. They all demand a real economic plan, and part of that plan is the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut. It is not everything. If we had the opportunity, we could come up with a better plan. This is a step in the right direction. What we have to do in Congress today is understand that we are not going to completely rewrite Superfund, endangered species, clean air and clean water, or the economic situation this country faces. But we have the ability to do things to improve Superfund and endangered species. We can do a little here and a little there to help the economic situation in this country.

The amendment by the Senator from Connecticut is a good amendment. It is a step in the right direction. That is why we chose this as our first amendment. It sends a message to the American people that we want to do something to stop the outflow of these jobs. Focusing on Federal Government outsourcing is one of the things at which we need to take a closer look.

We can start trying to improve our economy now, today, by cutting off Government contracts to companies that plan to outsource their work. Two years ago, the State of Florida ordered a $280 million contract to a company that outsources its work to India. If Florida wants to do that, it is their business. But when the American taxpayers hire somebody to do a job, it should be done by an American worker who is also a taxpayer.

For the fourth time in the last few minutes, I commend Senator DODD for this amendment and urge all of my colleagues to support it. I also say this to the majority: If tomorrow, when we come back in session, there is an effort made to prevent the Senator from Connecticut from having a vote on this, we are going to keep offering it and offering it until we get a vote on it. If we don't get it done on this bill, we will get it done on the next bill. If we don't get it done on the next bill, it will be offered on the next bill. This is our No. 1 amendment, and we are going to continue pushing it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut is recognized.

Mr. DODD. Madam President, I thank my colleague from Nevada for his comments. He is absolutely right about changing the rules. I have worried about that, when all of a sudden—and I have seen it happen in the past—you don't like the numbers you have, so you come up with a whole new definition and expand the numbers. That is what it looks like when you start talking about what clearly are fast food service jobs, manufacturing jobs, and we have seen those efforts being made.

This wasn't the first administration trying games like that. We have had others in the past doing that. I appreciate his comments, and I thank him for his support as well.

I have just a couple of other points. My friend and colleague from Texas cited earlier some of the efforts in the area of job training, vocational education. I wanted to respond by saying I don't disagree. I think that is an important element. But the problem is that one of the frustrations is the outsourcing of jobs that is occurring at a rather remarkable rate now, and it seems to be accelerating and very little is being offered to try to do something about this.

In fact, even in the area of protecting manufacturing jobs and doing something about retraining, let me share with my colleagues what is going on. In the manufacturing extension partnership, which is a very important issue for the manufacturing firms of this country, this is going to mean less help to an estimated 11,000 small businesses; 28,000 workers will either lose their jobs or not be hired as a result of these cuts.

So there is cutting back in this area. Outsourcing is going to have a huge impact on the manufacturing sector.

The Small Business Administration is being cut by $79 million, hurting hundreds of thousands of small businesses struggling to create jobs for Americans. There is a cut of $316 million for vocational education. This is in addition to the more than $1.5 million in proposed cuts to job training and vocational education made over the last 3 years. We are also cutting $448 million for the Workforce Investment Act programs.

My point is, as we watch these outsourcing of jobs and the loss of 2.8 million manufacturing jobs, I would be heartened if I thought we were making an effort at least to commit additional resources to help provide training for people who find themselves under normal cyclical circumstances losing a job, but here we are in an abnormal situation where there is an extraordinary loss of manufacturing jobs occurring across the country in the last 36 months and we have an extraordinary acceleration of outsourcing of jobs occurring over the same period of time—I pointed out that now 400 of the top 1,000 businesses in America are outsourcing, 40 of the 50 States, all for a very obvious reason. You can save a lot of money right off the top by doing it. When you can hire somebody in India at $7 a day as opposed to paying someone a salary in Silicon Valley, you do not have to have a Ph.D. in mathematics to know the outcome.

I understand the motivation behind it. The question I have is, are we going to sit back and allow this to continue at the expense of losing the kind of human investments that we ought to be making to guarantee that we have a workforce capable of doing jobs and providing the services that America ought to be providing in the coming years?

In addition to that, even if we were not doing an amendment or were not going to support language that would say that Federal taxpayer money ought not be used for this purpose, I would like to think that in the area of vocational education, small business assistance, manufacture extension partnerships, and certainly Workforce Investment Act—all of these areas—that the administration would say: Look, this is our answer to this. We don't agree with you, Senator, about not using Federal funds.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that an article from the Los Angeles Times be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BUSH SUPPORTS SHIFT OF JOBS OVERSEAS

(By Warren Vieth and Edwin Chen)

WASHINGTON.—The movement of American factory jobs and white-collar work to other countries is part of a positive transformation that will enrich the U.S. economy over time, even if it causes short-term pain and dislocation, the Bush administration said Monday.

The embrace of foreign outsourcing, an accelerating trend that has contributed to U.S. job losses in recent years and has become an issue in the 2004 elections, is contained in the president's annual report to Congress on the health of the economy.

''Outsourcing is just a new way of doing international trade,'' said N. Gregory Mankiw, chairman of Bush's Council of Economic Advisers, which prepared the report. ''More things are tradable than were tradable in the past. An that's a good thing.''

The report, which predicts that the nation will reverse a three-year employment slide by creating 2.6 million jobs in 2004, is part of a weeklong effort by the administration to highlight signs that the recovery is picking up speed. Bush's economic stewardship has become a central issue in the presidential campaign, and the White House is eager to demonstrate that his policies are producing results.

In his message to Congress on Monday, Bush said the economy ''is strong and getting stronger,'' thanks in part to his tax cuts and other economic programs. He said the nation had survived a stock market meltdown, recession, terrorist attacks, corporate scandals and war in Afghanistan and Iraq, and was finally beginning to enjoy ''a mounting prosperity that will reach every corner of America.''

The president repeated that message during an afternoon discussion about the economy at SRC Automotive, an engine-rebuilding plant in Springfield, Mo., where he lashed out at lawmakers who oppose making his tax cuts permanent.

''When they say, 'We're going to repeal Bush's tax cuts,' that means they're going to raise your taxes, and that's wrong. And that's bad economics,'' he said.

Democrats who want Bush's job were quick to challenge his claims.

Sen. John F. Kerry of Massachusetts, the front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination, supports a rollback of Bush's tax cuts for the wealthiest Americans and backs the creation of tax incentives for companies that keep jobs in the United States—although he supported the North American Free Trade Agreement, which many union members say is responsible for the migration of U.S. jobs, particularly in the auto industry, to Mexico.

Campaigning Monday in Roanoke, Va., Kerry questioned the credibility of the administration's job-creation forecast.

''I've got a feeling this report was prepared by the same people who brought us the intelligence on Iraq,'' Kerry said. ''I don't think we need a new report about jobs in America. I think we need a new president who's going to create jobs in America and put Americans back to work.''

In an evening appearance at George Mason University in Fairfax, Va., Sen. John Edwards of North Carolina mocked the Bush administration's economic report.

Edwards, who also supports repealing tax cuts for the richest Americans and offering incentives to corporations that create new jobs in the United States, said it would come as a ''news bulletin'' to the American people that the economy was improving and that the outsourcing of jobs was good for America.

''These people,'' he said of the Bush administration, ''what planet do they live on? They are so out of touch.''

The president's 411-page report contains a detailed diagnosis of the forces the White House says are contributing to America's economic slowdown and a wide-ranging defense of the policies Bush has pursued to combat it.

It asserts that the last recession actually began in late 2000, before the president took office, instead of March 2001, as certified by the official recession-dating panel of the National Bureau of Economic Research.

Much of the report repeats the administration's previous economic prescriptions.

For instance, it says the Bush tax cuts must be made permanent to have their full effect on the economy.

Social Security also must be restructured to let workers put part of their retirement funds in private accounts, the report argues. Doing so could add nearly $5 trillion to the national debt by 2036, the president's advisors note, but the additional borrowing would be repaid 20 years later and the program's long-term health would be more secure.

The report devotes an entire chapter to an issue that has become increasingly troublesome for the administration: the loss of 2.8 million manufacturing jobs since Bush took office, and critics' claims that his trade policies are partly to blame.

His advisors acknowledge that international trade and foreign outsourcing have contributed to the job slump. But the report argues that technological progress and rising productivity—the ability to produce more goods with fewer workers—have played a bigger role than the flight of production to China and other low-wage countries.

Although trade expansion inevitably hurts some domestic workers, the benefits eventually will outweigh the costs as Americans are able to buy cheaper goods and services and as new jobs are created in growing sectors of the economy, the report said.

The president's report endorses the relatively new phenomenon of outsourcing high-end, white-collar work to India and other countries, a trend that has stirred concern within such affected occupations as computer programming and medical diagnostics.

''Maybe we will outsource a few radiologists,'' Mankiw told reporters. ''What does that mean? Well, maybe the next generation of doctors will train fewer radiologists and will train more general practitioners or surgeons. . . . Maybe we've learned that we don't have a comparative advantage in radiologists.''

Government should try to salve the short-term disruption by helping displaced workers obtain the training they need to enter new fields, such as health-care, Mankiw said, not by erecting protectionist barriers on behalf of vulnerable industries or professions. ''The market is the best determination of where the jobs should be,'' he said.

Bush's quick visit to Missouri—his 15th to a state considered a critical election battleground—was the first of several events this week intended to underscore recent economic gains. Although U.S. job creation remains relatively sluggish, the nation's unemployment rate fell from 6.4% in June to 5.6% in January, and the economy grew at the fastest pace in 20 years during the last half of 2003.

The format of his visit to SRC Automotive—one that he particularly likes—involved several employees and local business owners sharing the stage with the president to discuss their perspectives on the economy, with Bush elaborating on their stories to emphasize particular aspects of his economic program.

Today, Bush is scheduled to meet with economic leaders at the White House. On Thursday, he goes to Pennsylvania's capital, Harrisburg—in another swing state that he has already visited more than two dozen times since becoming president.

Mr. DODD. The headline in the Los Angeles Times—it is a viewpoint—says: ''Bush Supports Shift of Jobs Overseas.'' It goes on to talk about the report that I talked about all afternoon, this economic report prepared by the Council of Economic Advisers, where they conclude that the outsourcing of jobs is a good thing. The author of that language apologized for his use of those words, but he has not apologized, and I understand why, because he believes it is good economic policy to be outsourcing.

There are some of us—I do not know if it is a majority—who disagree with that conclusion, that outsourcing is necessarily good.

I cited already from the Wall Street Journal companies that painfully discovered when they outsourced, while they thought they were going to save money, it actually cost them dearly. It is not only not good, but it fails to take into account—watching somebody's job be lost because there is a cheaper labor pool that you don't have to pay health care benefits to, despite the fact the person here is going to lose them—if it is really good for America.

I am suggesting while this rush is occurring that we ought to put on the brakes and stop, look, and listen so we will not necessarily be caught up in a situation where a year or two or five from now we will look back and say: Why didn't somebody say something or do something when we knew this was happening, when we could sit, watch, and read on a daily basis the pouring of jobs out of this country to 14 time zones away, depriving people of benefits and income they needed for their families; what did you do on your watch? What did you do?

If the answer is we thought it was a good thing for the American economy, then I think we will be suffering an indictment historically.

I see my colleague from Kentucky who wants to move on to matters of the day. I yield the floor, with the right to be recognized at the conclusion of his remarks.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I say to my friend from Connecticut, he will hardly have to hold his breath and he will be back up waxing eloquent to all of our colleagues who I am sure, back in their offices, are watching his speech and listening carefully to every word.

ELIMINATING THE ''HAIRCUT'' PROVISION

Mr. SMITH. Madam President, I rise today in support of S. 1637, the JOBS Act, which will halt European Union trade sanctions against American industries and provide immediate tax relief for domestic manufacturers.

U.S. manufacturing has experienced a crisis over the last three years due to the global economic downturn, sharply diminished capital spending, global overcapacity, and steady price declines for manufactured goods. S. 1637 provides a strong incentive for companies to keep and create jobs in the U.S.

However, I believe we can improve S. 1637 by eliminating the ''haircut'' provision that increases the taxes on U.S. manufacturers for their U.S. companies merely because these companies also manufacture products abroad. This concept is totally at odds with the purpose of this legislation—to cut taxes on manufacturers that employ American workers. U.S. companies with global operations employ more than 23 million Americans—9 million of which are manufacturing jobs. Foreign-owned companies with U.S. operations employ more than 2 million manufacturing workers in the U.S.

The haircut is structured so that the more a company manufacturers abroad, the less of a manufacturing rate cut it gets. The ''haircut'' makes the U.S. a less competitive location for current and future investment. Thus, it is less likely that multinational manufacturing companies will site new plants and new high-paying jobs in the U.S.

Furthermore, I am concerned that the ''haircut'' invites mirror legislation in other countries. In this time of crisis for the U.S. manufacturing industry, we cannot afford to let any more manufacturing jobs slip away, particularly due to bad tax policy.

With my colleague, Senator BREAUX, I am offering an amendment to the JOBS Act which will eliminate the ''haircut'' and provide an equal tax benefit for all manufacturers that employ American workers. Congress should be in the business of rewarding all well-paid manufacturing jobs that are created in the U.S.—not just those created by certain domestic manufacturers.

Mr. KENNEDY. Madam President, we call this bill the ''Jumpstart Our Business Strength Act''—the JOBS Act, because that is exactly what we are debating this week—the critical issue facing so many millions of Americans, the lack of jobs.

To hear President Bush, you would never know there was a problem with jobs. According to the Bush administration, everything is sunshine and roses.

Over and over again, the President says things that show he is out of touch with the lives of ordinary Americans and can't understand the economic hardships they are facing. Happy talk about economic recovery doesn't jibe with the daily lives of the people on Main Street.

In his State of the Union Address in January, the President said ''. . . this economy is strong, and growing stronger . . . Productivity is high, and jobs are on the rise.''

A week later he said: ''The economy is growing, people are finding work. There's an excitement in our economy . . . You can tell I'm upbeat, and I've got reason to be. Not only the numbers say things are looking pretty good, the American people are telling me they feel pretty good.''

Then came his annual economic report and its ringing endorsement of sending jobs overseas.

At the National Governors Association meeting last Monday, he said he thinks the 5.6 percent unemployment rate is ''a good national number.''

Yesterday, Vice President CHENEY said, ''The economy's in very good shape, and going forward there's every reason to be optimistic that we will have the kind of growth that we need to create jobs out there.''

In fact, he went on to say that if ''Democratic policies had been pursued over the last two or three years. . . . we would not have had the kind of job growth that we've had.''

Job growth? Someone should tell the Vice President that we have lost over two million jobs in the Bush economy.

The reality of the Bush economic record is very different from the rhetoric.

Just a few weeks ago, the President said in his economic report that the economy will create 2.6 million new jobs this year. The reality is that no one in the White House or the Cabinet will endorse the 2.6 million number.

President Bush said his first tax cuts in 2001 would create 800,000 additional jobs by the end of 2002. The reality is, we lost 1.9 million jobs instead.

His 2002 economic report predicted 3 million jobs would be created in 2003. Instead, more than 300,000 were lost.

He said the tax breaks enacted last year would create 510,000 additional jobs by the end of the year, but we lost 53,000 jobs last year.

Even the few jobs being created are not as good as the jobs we have lost. The new jobs pay on average $8,000 less than jobs lost in the Bush economy. In 48 of the 50 States, jobs being created pay 21 percent less than had been paid by industries losing jobs.

Employees have smaller paychecks, and are even less able to keep up with the rising costs of education, let alone pay the bill for food, rent and health care.

A big part of the job problem is the worsening crisis in manufacturing. We have lost nearly 3 million manufacturing jobs since the Bush administration took office. It is a nationwide problem, affecting almost every State in the Union. Forty-nine of the 50 States have lost manufacturing jobs under this President.

That is only part of the story. Fourteen million other jobs are newly at risk of being sent overseas as well. Every day, we hear more stories about how white collar jobs and service sector jobs in health care, financial services, and information technology are going to other countries.

What is the President's response? More empty rhetoric and broken promises. Last year on Labor Day, the President met with workers and promised to appoint a manufacturing czar to deal with the loss of manufacturing jobs. How typical of the President to make a promise like that on Labor Day and then forget all about it.

Six months later, there is still no manufacturing czar. Administration officials say they're working on it, but the economy is still hemorrhaging manufacturing jobs.

American workers deserve better than this. They deserve better than to have their jobs exported with the President, as cheerleader in chief, waving good bye.

We need to do more, to encourage good-paying manufacturing jobs to stay here, and discourage corporations from sending jobs and new investment overseas.

This bill contains provisions to encourage manufacturing in the United States, and I commend Senator GRASSLEY and Senator BAUCUS for their bipartisan work on this bill. But we can do more and we must do more.

We need to provide incentives now for companies to keep and create manufacturing jobs in the United States. A key weakness in this bill is that the tax benefits for domestic manufacturing are phased in too slowly. These companies and their workers need help now.

We need to stop rewarding multinational corporations that send jobs to other countries.

This bill not only fails to do that, it creates $35 billion in new or larger tax breaks for companies doing business abroad. Why on earth do we want to make exporting of American jobs more attractive to corporations? These international provisions should be removed from the bill, and the tax dollars should be used to make the tax benefits for domestic manufacturing more robust.

In many respects, the tax code already gives a greater subsidy to profits from foreign operations over domestic plants. We ought to change that too, instead of kowtowing to the clout of multinational corporations. Our corporate tax laws should be rewritten to increase the cost of exporting jobs and decrease the cost of maintaining jobs in America.

And what about the urgent needs of Americans who have already lost their jobs and their long-term unemployment benefits too?

Solid majorities in the Senate and the House have already sent a message loud and clear to the White House and the Republican leadership in Congress that we want to reinstate those benefits, which expired on December 31st. Ninety thousand workers a week have lost their benefits and still can't get a job. They're moving in with friends or family, giving up health care, and struggling to pay every bill. Yet our Republican colleagues say, in their best imitation of Marie Antoinette, ''let them eat cake.''

They tell the unemployed to look harder for work. They treat them as slackers, and say they won't subsidize their idleness any longer. That attitude is wrong. The unemployment insurance extension we enacted when the economy began to decline has expired, and I urge my colleagues to fix it, before these hard-working employees who have lost their jobs through no fault of their own suffer any longer.

I also urge my colleagues to join me in strengthening this legislation. We must improve incentives in the manufacturing industries and give working Americans a chance for the jobs and the better future they deserve.

Mr. SMITH. Madam President, I will offer an amendment which would allow commercial fishermen to use income tax averaging to help mitigate the negative effects of their fluctuating incomes.

Progressive tax systems, like the Federal income tax, often penalize farmers and others whose incomes vary greatly from year to year. Recognizing this fact, Congress, in 1997, gave farmers the option to calculate their taxes by averaging their income over a 3-year period. This was an important change in the Tax Code and has helped many in our agriculture communities weather the up-and-downs of a sometimes erratic farm economy.

Like farmers, our fishermen are often subject to dramatic swings in income. Whether it's changing ocean conditions, harvest restrictions, or bad weather that keeps them in port, the change in income can be severe and beyond their control. For example, fishermen in Coos Bay, OR have struggled with regulatory restrictions and reduced stocks over the last several years. Unfortunately, our Tax Code doesn't allow for flexibility, and fishermen, who experience both good and bad years, are forced to pay more taxes than if they had steady income levels.

My amendment would resolve some of this inequality by extending to commercial fishermen the same income averaging benefit given to farmers. It would also fix a technical error in the original provision that has led to some farmers being caught under alternative minimum tax.

I thank the chairman for his leadership on this issue in the past and including this important provision in his bill, the Tax Empowerment and Relief for Farmers and Fishermen, TERFF, Act. I am pleased to see that portions of the TERFF Act were incorporated into the bill now before us, and I am hopeful that we will be able to address the issue of income averaging for fishermen also at this time.

Our farmers and fishermen represent an important sector of our economy. Unfortunately, they and their families often have to deal with more than their fair share of challenges. Making the Tax Code more consistent and more reflective of the variable nature of resource industries will also make it more fair and provide some measure of stability for these hard working individuals.

I encourage the Senate to consider and pass this important amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ALEXANDER). The Senator from Kentucky.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to a period for the transaction of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMEMORATING DANIEL BOORSTIN

Mr. ALEXANDER. Over the weekend, the United States of America lost one of its great teachers of what it means to be an American. Daniel Boorstin died at the age of 89. He served as Librarian of Congress and director of the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of Science and Technology. Daniel Boorstin's books about the American experience earned a Pulitzer Prize in 1974. He believed America's success came largely because we have been free from the ''virus of ideology,'' free to be flexible and responsive, ''free to take clues from the delightful, unexplored and uncongested world around us.'' Free from ideology, being an American became its own ideology.

Daniel Boorstin celebrated Americans for always trying the new. He believed we have been at our best when we have been ''on the verge,'' encountering new territory—whether it was creating new schools, new crops, new planting techniques, new towns, a new form of the English language, new technologies, new cars and trains, or John Winthrop's new City on the Hill.

He observed during these encounters with new circumstances, we have been more aware of our Americanness, that our appetite for the new has been whetted, and that we have leaned on one another for support, often organizing new forms of communities to deal with new circumstances. Boorstin believed America works community by community. He argued that the prototype early American was not the solitary trailblazer but a wagon train community.

Despite his erudition and his Pulitzer, Dr. Boorstin was not especially popular with professional historians. Perhaps it was because he was such a booster, as have been most Americans. Perhaps it was because he contented himself with being an ''amateur'' historian, not shackled by the ruts along which professionals often trudge. Or, perhaps it was because he was a member of a diminishing band of public figures—the late Senator Pat Moynihan and American Federation of Teachers President Albert Shanker were two others—who believed passionately in American exceptionalism. A growing number of history professionals today reject this idea of exceptionalism. To them, our country is fortunate, rich and large, but not more exceptional than many other countries. These professionals prefer social studies to U.S. history. They take snapshots of our national experience instead of teaching the steady drumbeat of a work in progress toward grand goals. In their enthusiasm for overlooked victims, they themselves overlook heroes.

Because of their growing influence we now find American history courses watered down, the great controversies of race and religion ''sensitized'' from textbooks. Civics is often dropped entirely from the curriculum. As one result, our high school seniors score worse on U.S. history tests than on any other subject.

Daniel Boorstin's writings have reminded us of what is truly exceptional about America, warts and all. He emphasized that our greatest accomplishment is that, more than any other country, we have united people from everywhere into a single nation, united by beliefs in a few principles rather than by race, creed, and color. He taught that we may be proud of where we came from, but should be prouder to be Americans.

He left us one other very special insight. In an essay written in 1962, Dr. Boorstin foresaw that television would create a world in which we would have a hard time telling the difference between heroes—those worth paying attention to because we might learn from their nobility—and celebrities who are ''famous primarily for being famous.'' He invented the term pseudo event, which most of us will recognize as today's photo opportunity.

My favorite of Daniel's Boorstin's books was not his Pulitzer winner. It was The Discoverers, a stream of stories about men and women in history who challenged dogma and created a better life for mankind.

As we are poised on yet another verge in our national experience, we would do well to remember Dr. Boorstin's advice about what has served us well before: be more aware of our Americanness, whet our appetites for the new, and form new communities so that we might rely better on one another as we deal with changing circumstances.

REPORT PURSUANT TO WAR POWERS RESOLUTION

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the attached statement from the President of the United States be printed in the RECORD, consistent with the War Powers Resolution.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, March 2, 2004.

Hon. TED STEVENS,
President pro tempore of the Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: In my report to the Congress of February 25, 2004, I provided information on the deployment of combat-equipped U.S. Armed Forces to Haiti. I am providing this additional report, consistent with the War Powers Resolution, to help ensure that the Congress is kept fully informed on U.S. military activities in Haiti.

On February 29, 2004, approximately 200 additional U.S. combat-equipped, military personnel from the U.S. Joint Forces Command deployed to Port-au-Prince, Haiti, to secure key facilities, to facilitate the continued repatriation of Haitian migrants, to help create conditions in the capital for the anticipated arrival of the Multinational Interim Force, to protect American citizens as may be required, and for other purposes consistent with United Nations Security Council Resolution 1529 (2004). I anticipate additional combat-equipped military personnel will be deployed to Haiti until the situation in Haiti stabilizes. The forces that the United States deployed and continues to deploy will be part of the Multinational Interim Force.

The United Nations Security Council unanimously adopted Resolution 1529 on February 29, 2004. It authorized the deployment of a Multinational Interim Force to contribute to a more secure and more stable environment in the Haitian capital and elsewhere, to facilitate the provision of humanitarian assistance and the access of humanitarian aid workers to the Haitian people, and for other purposes.

It is anticipated U.S. forces will redeploy when the Multinational Interim Force has transitioned to a follow-on United Nations stabilization force.

I have taken this action pursuant to my constitutional authority to conduct U.S. foreign relations and as Commander in Chief and Chief Executive. I am providing this report as part of my efforts to keep the Congress informed, consistent with the War Powers Resolution.

Sincerely,

GEORGE W. BUSH

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2003

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I speak about the need for hate crimes legislation. On May 1, 2003, Senator KENNEDY and I introduced the Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act, a bill that would add new categories to current hate crimes law, sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

In February, 2003, in Antioch, CA, a 15-year-old teen was charged with assault and battery and for committing a hate crime. He viciously assaulted and taunted another teenager because he believed he was gay.

I believe that Government's first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act is a symbol that can become substance. By passing this legislation and changing current law, we can change hearts and minds as well.

CHANGES TO DISCRETIONARY CAPS

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, section 421 of H. Con. Res. 95, the 2004 Budget Resolution, requires the chairman of the Senate Budget Committee to make appropriate adjustments in the appropriate allocations and aggregates to reflect the difference between Public Law 108–11, the Emergency Wartime Supplemental Appropriations Act of 2003—and the corresponding levels assumed in the resolution.

As enacted, the Emergency Wartime Supplemental Appropriations Act of 2003 contains budgetary authority, outlays and revenues that differ from those assumed in the budget resolution. On May 5, 2003, the allocations and aggregates were revised, but the discretionary caps were not appropriately adjusted to reflect the changes.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a table which reflects the revised discretionary caps for 2005. These revised caps are the appropriate levels to be used for enforcement of the 2004 Budget Resolution.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

DISCOVERY BY JULIAN ''JAY'' W. MCNEIL II

● Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, today I would like to take the opportunity to honor Mr. Jay McNeil of Paducah, KY. On January 23, 2004, Mr. McNeil discovered a new nebula while examining the night sky over Western Kentucky.

Mr. McNeil immediately established himself as an extremely capable amateur astronomer. The discovery was made with a relatively small telescope. His discovery was a very rare occurrence. According to experts in the field, such a discovery by an amateur of this magnitude has not occurred since 1939.

The discovery, later named McNeil's Nebula, was verified by the International Astronomical Union in February of 2004. The nebula is believed to contain a newborn star and is about 1,500 light years from earth. This means that what Mr. McNeil saw actually occurred a millennium and a half ago, and is just now being seen on earth.

I salute Mr. McNeil for his discovery. The thirst for knowledge and appreciation for science that he has shown serves as an example for all Kentuckians.●

LEWISTON ELKS LODGE NO. 896 CELEBRATES 100-YEAR ANNIVERSARY

● Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, it is with great honor that I congratulate the Lewiston Elks Club, Lodge No. 896, on its 100-year anniversary. The organization has overcome multiple obstacles in its efforts to continue the fellowship among its members, and more important, its consistent and significant contributions to the local community.

Lodge No. 896 was first chartered on March 8, 1904 by just eight members. The organization envisioned by the original eight founders has grown to include more than 13,000 members over the past century. Today it is the largest Elks Club in Idaho. Successful recruitment efforts bring in 15 to 18 new members each month, making the Lewiston lodge one of the Nation's best. Together, the Elks have made countless positive impacts on the Lewiston area, and have been stellar ambassadors of our great State.

The Lewiston Elks Lodge has endured two devastating fires, the first of which occurred in 1904 after the club's second meeting. The second fire happened in 1969, and spurred the group to move the lodge to a new location overlooking the beautiful Snake River, which passes through Lewiston. It was at its present location that disaster made a third attempt. In 1998, the lodge was closed for more than 18 months after a landslide on the hillside below threatened the structure. Despite these obstacles, the Lewiston Elks have continued their community service.

The service projects carried out by the Lewiston Elks are significant. They serve people of all ages, and from every walk of life. Some projects include making Christmas baskets, supporting a drug awareness program, poster contests, and an annual food caravan for needy families. The Elks also express their support for individuals and groups in the community by sponsoring a number of awards recognizing Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts, Special Olympics, and Teenager of the Month and Year. Education is another area that the Elks are firm in their support. The Lewiston club offers yearly scholarships to local youth ranging from $100 to $1,000.

Perhaps one of the greatest contributions from this organization is the support it offers to the Idaho State Elks Rehabilitation Hospital. The modern hospital, located in Boise, serves nearly 12,000 patients a year and is working on a proposal to provide rehabilitation services to military veterans returning from war zones. With the support of the Lewiston Elks and other organizations, the hospital plans to open a new Hearing and Balance Center in the next few months.

On behalf of the citizens of the Lewiston area, and the entire State of Idaho, I thank Lodge No. 896 for their commitment to their community. It is the standard set by the Lewiston Elks that encourages local youth to strive to improve themselves, and for neighbors to help one another. Their selflessness has allowed everyone in the community to benefit. Congratulations to the Lewiston Elks for their endurance and dedication for the past 100 years.●

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message from the President of the United States was communicated to the Senate by Ms. Evans, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGE REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States submitting a nomination which was referred to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

(The nomination received today is printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

NOTIFICATION OF THE CONTINUATION OF THE NATIONAL EMERGENCY BLOCKING PROPERTY OF PERSONS UNDERMINING DEMOCRATIC PROCESSES OR INSTITUTIONS IN ZIMBABWE—PM 69

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs:

To the Congress of the United States:

Section 202(d) of the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1622(d)) provides for the automatic termination of a national emergency unless, prior to the anniversary date of its declaration, the President publishes in the Federal Register and transmits to the Congress a notice stating that the emergency is to continue in effect beyond the anniversary date. In accordance with this provision, I have sent the enclosed notice to the Federal Register for publication. It states that the national emergency blocking the property of persons undermining the democratic processes or institutions in Zimbabwe is to continue in effect beyond March 6, 2004.

The crisis caused by the actions and policies of certain members of the Government of Zimbabwe and other persons to undermine Zimbabwe's democratic processes or institutions has not been resolved. These actions and policies pose a continuing, unusual, and extraordinary threat to the foreign policy of the United States. For these reasons, I have determined that it is necessary to continue the national emergency declared on March 6, 2003, blocking the property of persons undermining democratic processes or institutions in Zimbabwe and to maintain in force the sanctions to respond to this threat.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. WYDEN (for himself, Mr. STEVENS, and Ms. MURKOWSKI):

S. 2160. A bill to regulate interstate commerce by prohibiting the sale of children's personally identifiable information for commercial marketing purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President and colleagues, there is now clear evidence that it is open season for large-scale commercial marketing to the Nation's smallest children. As a result, today I am introducing with the distinguished chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, Senator STEVENS, legislation to protect the privacy of America's children.

I suspect parents of very young children would not want their children's names and addresses, their e-mail addresses, their ages and other data treated as a simple marketplace commodity to be freely bought and sold for a profit with no questions asked. Yet that is exactly what happens every day.

Parents may not be aware of it, but large list brokers routinely advertise and sell information on very young children for marketing purposes. Their lists cover millions of children and often include such data as ethnicity, family income, and hobbies or interests. In short, commercial trafficking in personal information about very young children is surprisingly commonplace.

How extreme has it gotten? Take a look at this example. The broker of this list says on their Web site that they have more than 15 million names of children from the ages of 2 to 13. They said they update it monthly. That is why it is clear it is open season for large-scale marketing to the country's smallest children, which has concerned Senator STEVENS and I. The list brokers break it down for the marketers, as well, to help them target the very young.

On this next graphic, a list broker offers marketing lists that only contain the names of preschool children ages 2 to 5. If that is too young for a particular marketer's needs, the marketer could pursue lists of elementary school children ages 5 through 11 or junior high school kids age 11 to 13. These lists of young children are advertised openly on the Internet for anyone who is interested.

We can see the details promised: Full name, address, and age. My view is that is not information about youngsters that parents want available for sale without the consent of the parents. But it is happening now all the time because there is big money in marketing to the very young. Children, of course, influence the purchases of their parents. Sometimes they have money to spend of their own. As a result, an estimated $12 billion per year is spent on marketing to these very young children.

Unfortunately, with all the money involved, the ethics of direct marketing to children and appropriate limits get short shrift. The very young are not likely to understand the intent and tactics of marketing pitches the way adults do and may be more vulnerable to influence, manipulation, and questionable and deceptive tactics. The wholesale trafficking of specific information about individual youngsters and the use of that information to target and contact those children for marketing purposes is something that most parents find very troubling.

The suggested use for these lists runs the gamut. Here is another list broker that has 20 million names of children in preschool through eighth grade. They have all kinds of suggestions. We can see a few of the examples on the chart that make it clear exactly how great this potential market is.

That is why I am introducing today, with the bipartisan support of our colleague, the distinguished chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, Senator STEVENS, a privacy act to protect our youngsters.

The bill's premise is simple: Trafficking in data on very young children for the purpose of commercial marketing should not be permitted in our country. Specifically, the bill bans the selling or purchasing of personal information about people that the seller and purchaser know to be very young. There would be an exception for cases where the parent is given express consent, provided that the parent had notice of what he or she was consenting to and was not required to grant consent as a condition of obtaining a desired product or service.

There would also be an exception for the sale of information for nonmarketing purposes as long as the purchaser certifies it will neither use the information for marketing nor allow others to do so. This exception would allow, for example, health care officials to still use available data to track the spread of a disease or for students, of course, to get information about various academic activities. The list buyers would have to certify that lists are not being purchased or resold for marketing; otherwise they will be in violation of the law.

The bill's enforcement provisions track those of the Children's Online Privacy Protection Act. Primary enforcement authority would rest with the Federal Trade Commission, and State attorneys general would be authorized to bring enforcement actions as well.

I think we all understand marketers have products they want to get out, and lists are a big part of their trade. But it is one proposition when the person on the list is an adult; it is quite another to be buying and selling and trafficking in all of this data and all of these lists on the very young.

I say to the Senate, if you just spend a little time on the Internet, you will see what I have concluded; that it is open season for the large-scale marketing that is targeted at very small children, and we ought to make an effort to draw some lines.

Yes, marketing is accepted and important with respect to adults. But I hope my colleagues will join me and Senator STEVENS today in supporting a commonsense effort to limit the way in which data is used and commercialized about America's smallest children.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the legislation I am introducing today with Senator STEVENS be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2160

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Children's Listbroker Privacy Act''.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds the following:

(1) Commercial list brokers routinely advertise and sell detailed information on children, including names, addresses, ages, and other data, for use in marketing. This data is commonly available on children as young as two years old, enabling marketers to target specific demographics such as junior high school, elementary school, or even preschool.

(2) Commercially available marketing databases can be very large, covering millions of children.

(3) Commercially available marketing databases can include a variety of information on the children they cover, from ethnicity to family income to hobbies and interests.

(4) Money spent on marketing to children has been estimated at $12 billion per year.

(5) Several Federal statutes, including section 1061 of the No Child Left Behind Act, the Children's Online Privacy Protection Act, and the Family and Educational Rights and Privacy Act, restrict the collection and disclosure of information about children or students under specified circumstances. When data on children is collected in a manner that is outside the scope of those statutes, however, Federal law does not significantly restrict the commercial sale or resale of such data.

(6) The ability to sell information about children to marketers for a profit creates an economic incentive to find new and creative ways to collect and compile such information, and possibly to circumvent or subvert the intent of those Federal statutes that do govern the collection of information about children or students. There are a variety of means and sources that marketers and list brokers can and do use to compile names, addresses, and other data about children.

SEC. 3. RESTRICTION ON SALE OR PURCHASE OF CHILDREN'S PERSONAL INFORMATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—It is unlawful—

(1) to sell personal information about an individual the seller knows to be a child;

(2) to purchase personal information about an individual identified by the seller as a child, for the purpose of marketing to that child; or

(3) for a person who has provided a certification pursuant to subsection (b)(2), in connection with the purchase of personal information about an individual identified by the seller as a child, to engage in any practice that violates the terms of the certification.

(b) EXCEPTIONS.—

(1) PARENTAL CONSENT.—Subsection (a) does not apply to any sale, purchase, or use of personal information about a child if the parent of the child has granted express consent to that sale, purchase, or use of the information.

(2) CERTIFICATION.—Subsection (a)(1) shall not apply to the sale of personal information about a child if the purchaser certifies to the seller, electronically or in writing, before the sale is completed—

(A) the purpose for which the information will be used by the purchaser; and

(B) that the purchaser will neither—

(i) use the information for marketing that child; nor

(ii) permit the information to be used by others for the purpose of marketing to that child.

SEC. 7. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act takes effect 6 months after the date of enactment.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I am proud to introduce, with my colleague from Oregon, a bill which protects children from being strategically targeted by commercial advertising.

I was shocked to learn that presently there is no law that restricts companies from purchasing databases which contain information about children.

In fact, websites have been brought to my attention that actually sell lists of children as young as pre-school.

The thought of companies acquiring lists of information about kids that are barely past the toddler stage is appalling.

These companies actually market that the lists can be selected and purchased by sorting according to different age groups. They suggest possible commercial uses for the lists such as for magazines, amusement parks, child care services, etc.

One of the websites even points out that many high school students have their own credit cards or have use of their parents' credit cards. The website then suggests that companies could buy these lists so they could market to children various products such as clothing, computers, etc.

The bill that we are introducing today will deter entities from selling these lists of personal information about children to be used for commercial purposes.

The bill will prohibit anyone from selling or buying personal information about a person who is known to be under 16 years of age unless: 1. The parent has given express consent; or 2. The buyer certifies that the information is being obtained for strictly non-marketing purposes. If that is the case, they can't subsequently sell the information to a commercial marketing group.

The enforcement will be by the Federal Trade Commission and the 50 attorney generals.

I look forward to working with my colleague from Oregon and others on this bill.

By Mrs. BOXER:

S. 2161. A bill to amend title 5, United States Code, to establish a national health program administered by the Office of Personnel Management to offer Federal employee health benefits plans to individuals who are not Federal employees, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, over 43 million Americans are uninsured, which means that one in every 7 Americans has no health insurance. It is not surprising that two-thirds of the uninsured are low-income. What may be surprising to some is that most of the uninsured—8 in 10—come from working families. Most of these uninsured are not eligible for public health insurance programs, such as Medicaid or SCHIP.

Lack of health insurance too often means poorer health care. The uninsured receive less preventive care, are diagnosed at more advanced disease stages, and once diagnosed, tend to receive less therapeutic care. The Institute of Medicine estimates that 18,000 Americans die prematurely each year due to the effects of a lack of health insurance.

The plight of the uninsured has consequences that reach beyond the uninsured. In 2001, the uninsured amounted to about $35 billion in uncompensated care. Those costs are borne by all of us through higher health care costs and government-funded reimbursements.

Furthermore, the Institute of Medicine suggests that the reduced health and higher mortality of the uninsured costs society between $65 billion and $130 billion a year, and concludes that public programs are likely to have higher budgetary costs than they would if everyone under 65 had health insurance. In addition, the Urban Institute recently found that if people were covered by insurance, there could be savings to Medicare and Medicaid of $10 billion a year.

Even those who have health insurance find it extremely expensive and of poor quality. It is time to expand access to affordable, quality health insurance for all Americans.

The bill I am introducing today, the ''Universal Access to Affordable Insurance for All Americans Act of 2004,'' is a partial solution that will give Americans access to the same health insurance program as Members of Congress.

It establishes a separate risk pool within the Federal Employee Health Benefit Program for individuals who wish to purchase individual or family coverage. The Office of Personnel Management would make at least one private health insurance plan available through the FEHBP to non-Federal employees. While individuals will have access to the same program as Federal employees, the entry of others into FEHBP will not affect Federal employees at all.

My bill also makes this insurance affordable by establishing advanceable, refundable tax credits for certain low and middle-income participants. For those below poverty, the credit is 100 percent. The credit is gradually decreased up to 400 percent of poverty. So a family of 4 making $18,850 or less would receive a 100 percent credit. A family of 4 making $75,000 would receive a 30 percent credit.

We need to begin implementing measures to provide all Americans with access to affordable health coverage. My bill is a step toward this goal.

S. RES. 308

Whereas the ancient Greeks developed the concept of democracy, in which the supreme power to govern was vested in the people;

Whereas the Founding Fathers of the United States drew heavily on the political experience and philosophy of ancient Greece in forming our representative democracy;

Whereas Greek Commander in Chief Petros Mavromichalis, a founder of the modern Greek state, said to the citizens of the United States in 1821, ''it is in your land that liberty has fixed her abode and... in imitating you, we shall imitate our ancestors and be thought worthy of them if we succeed in resembling you'';

Whereas Greece is one of only three nations in the world, beyond the former British Empire, that has been allied with the United States in every major international conflict for more than 100 years;

Whereas Greece played a major role in the World War II struggle to protect freedom and democracy through such bravery as was shown in the historic Battle of Crete that presented the Axis land war with its first major setback, setting off a chain of events that significantly affected the outcome of World War II;

Whereas the price for Greece in holding our common values in their region was high, as hundreds of thousands of civilians were killed in Greece during the World War II period;

Whereas President George W. Bush, in recognizing Greek Independence Day, said, ''Greece and America have been firm allies in the great struggles for liberty. Americans will always remember Greek heroism and Greek sacrifice for the sake of freedom... [and] as the 21st Century dawns, Greece and America once again stand united; this time in the fight against terrorism. The United States deeply appreciates the role Greece is playing in the war against terror.... America and Greece are strong allies, and we're strategic partners.'';

Whereas Greece is a stabilizing force by virtue of its political and economic power in the volatile Balkan region and is one of the fastest growing economies in Europe;

Whereas Greece, through excellent work and cooperation with United States and international law enforcement agencies, arrested and convicted key members of the November 17 terrorist organization;

Whereas Greece, geographically located in a region where Christianity meets Islam and Judaism, maintains excellent relations with Muslim nations and Israel;

Whereas Greece has had extraordinary success in recent years in furthering cross-cultural understanding and reducing tensions between Greece and Turkey;

Whereas Greece and the United States are at the forefront of the effort for freedom, democracy, peace, stability, and human rights;

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates March 25, 2004, as ''Greek Independence Day: A National Day of Celebration of Greek and American Democracy''; and

(2) requests that the President issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

S. RES. 309

Whereas today's youth are vital to the preservation of our country and will be the future bearers of the bright torch of democracy;

Whereas youth need a safe haven from various negative influences such as child abuse, substance abuse and crime, and they need to have resources readily available to assist them when faced with circumstances that compromise their safety;

Whereas the United States needs increased numbers of community volunteers acting as positive influences on the Nation's youth;

Whereas the Safe Place program is committed to protecting our Nation's most valuable assert, our youth, by offering short term ''safe places'' at neighborhood locations where trained volunteers are available to counsel and advise youth seeking assistance and guidance;

Whereas the Safe Place program combines the efforts of the private sector and nonprofit organizations uniting to reach youth in the early stages of crisis;

Whereas the Safe Place program provides a direct way to assist programs in meeting performance standards relative to outreach and community relations, as set forth in the Federal Runaway and Homeless Youth Act guidelines;

Whereas the Safe Place placard displayed at businesses within communities stands as a beacon of safety and refuge to at-risk youth;

Whereas more than 700 communities in 42 states and more than 14,000 locations have established Safe Place programs;

Whereas more than 68,000 young people have gone to Safe Place locations to get help when faced with crisis situations;

Whereas through the efforts of Safe Place coordinators across the country each year more than one-half million students learn that Safe Place is a resource if abusive or neglectful situations exist;

Whereas increased awareness of the program's existence will encourage communities to establish Safe Places for the Nation's youth throughout the country: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) proclaims the week of March 14 through March 20, 2004 as ''National Safe Place Week'' and

''(n) CLARIFICATION OF ECONOMIC SUBSTANCE DOCTRINE; ETC.—

''(1) GENERAL RULES.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—In any case in which a court determines that the economic substance doctrine is relevant for purposes of this title to a transaction (or series of transactions), such transaction (or series of transactions) shall have economic substance only if the requirements of this paragraph are met.

''(B) DEFINITION OF ECONOMIC SUBSTANCE.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)—

''(i) IN GENERAL.—A transaction has economic substance only if—

''(I) the transaction changes in a meaningful way (apart from Federal tax effects) the taxpayer's economic position, and

''(II) the taxpayer has a substantial nontax purpose for entering into such transaction and the transaction is a reasonable means of accomplishing such purpose.

In applying subclause (II), a purpose of achieving a financial accounting benefit shall not be taken into account in determining whether a transaction has a substantial nontax purpose if the origin of such financial accounting benefit is a reduction of income tax.

''(ii) SPECIAL RULE WHERE TAXPAYER RELIES ON PROFIT POTENTIAL.—A transaction shall not be treated as having economic substance by reason of having a potential for profit unless—

''(I) the present value of the reasonably expected pre-tax profit from the transaction is substantial in relation to the present value of the expected net tax benefits that would be allowed if the transaction were respected, and

''(II) the reasonably expected pre-tax profit from the transaction exceeds a risk-free rate of return.

''(C) TREATMENT OF FEES AND FOREIGN TAXES.—Fees and other transaction expenses and foreign taxes shall be taken into account as expenses in determining pre-tax profit under subparagraph (B)(ii).

''(2) SPECIAL RULES FOR TRANSACTIONS WITH TAX-INDIFFERENT PARTIES.—

''(A) SPECIAL RULES FOR FINANCING TRANSACTIONS.—The form of a transaction which is in substance the borrowing of money or the acquisition of financial capital directly or indirectly from a tax-indifferent party shall not be respected if the present value of the deductions to be claimed with respect to the transaction is substantially in excess of the present value of the anticipated economic returns of the person lending the money or providing the financial capital. A public offering shall be treated as a borrowing, or an acquisition of financial capital, from a tax-indifferent party if it is reasonably expected that at least 50 percent of the offering will be placed with tax-indifferent parties.

''(B) ARTIFICIAL INCOME SHIFTING AND BASIS ADJUSTMENTS.—The form of a transaction with a tax-indifferent party shall not be respected if—

''(i) it results in an allocation of income or gain to the tax-indifferent party in excess of such party's economic income or gain, or

''(ii) it results in a basis adjustment or shifting of basis on account of overstating the income or gain of the tax-indifferent party.

''(3) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this subsection—

''(A) ECONOMIC SUBSTANCE DOCTRINE.—The term 'economic substance doctrine' means the common law doctrine under which tax benefits under subtitle A with respect to a transaction are not allowable if the transaction does not have economic substance or lacks a business purpose.

''(B) TAX-INDIFFERENT PARTY.—The term 'tax-indifferent party' means any person or entity not subject to tax imposed by subtitle A. A person shall be treated as a tax-indifferent party with respect to a transaction if the items taken into account with respect to the transaction have no substantial impact on such person's liability under subtitle A.

''(D) TREATMENT OF LESSORS.—In applying paragraph (1)(B)(ii) to the lessor of tangible property subject to a lease—

''(i) the expected net tax benefits with respect to the leased property shall not include the benefits of—

''(I) depreciation,

''(II) any tax credit, or

''(III) any other deduction as provided in guidance by the Secretary, and

''(ii) subclause (II) of paragraph (1)(B)(ii) shall be disregarded in determining whether any of such benefits are allowable.

''(4) OTHER COMMON LAW DOCTRINES NOT AFFECTED.—Except as specifically provided in this subsection, the provisions of this subsection shall not be construed as altering or supplanting any other rule of law, and the requirements of this subsection shall be construed as being in addition to any such other rule of law.

''(5) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this subsection. Such regulations may include exemptions from the application of this subsection.''.

''(2) DISCRETION.—The exercise of authority under paragraph (1) shall be at the sole discretion of the Commissioner and may be delegated only to the head of the Office of Tax Shelter Analysis. The Commissioner, in the Commissioner's sole discretion, may establish a procedure to determine if a penalty should be referred to the Commissioner or the head of such Office for a determination under paragraph (1).

''(C) is required to pay a penalty under section 6662B with respect to any noneconomic substance transaction, the requirement to pay such penalty shall be disclosed in such reports filed by such person for such periods as the Secretary shall specify. Failure to make a disclosure in accordance with the preceding sentence shall be treated as a failure to which the penalty under subsection (b)(2) applies.

''(f) COORDINATION WITH OTHER PENALTIES.—The penalty imposed by this section is in addition to any penalty imposed under this title.''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for part I of subchapter B of chapter 68 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 6707 the following:

''(ii) the highest rate of tax imposed by section 1 (section 11 in the case of a taxpayer which is a corporation), and

''(B) the amount of the decrease (if any) in the aggregate amount of credits determined under subtitle A which results from a difference between the taxpayer's treatment of an item to which this section applies (as shown on the taxpayer's return of tax) and the proper tax treatment of such item.

For purposes of subparagraph (A), any reduction of the excess of deductions allowed for the taxable year over gross income for such year, and any reduction in the amount of capital losses which would (without regard to section 1211) be allowed for such year, shall be treated as an increase in taxable income.

''(2) ITEMS TO WHICH SECTION APPLIES.—This section shall apply to any item which is attributable to—

''(A) any listed transaction, and

''(C) CERTAIN TRANSFERS DISREGARDED.—The transfer of properties or liabilities (including by contribution or distribution) shall be disregarded if such transfers are part of a plan a principal purpose of which is to avoid the purposes of this section.

''(B) REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements of the subparagraph are met with respect to a transaction involving any acquisition described in subparagraph (A) if—

''(i) before such transaction the domestic corporation did not have a relationship described in section 267(b) or 707(b), and was not under common control (within the meaning of section 482), with the acquired entity, or any member of an expanded affiliated group including such entity, and

''(a) GENERAL RULES.—For purposes of this subtitle—

''(1) MARK TO MARKET.—Except as provided in subsections (d) and (f), all property of a covered expatriate to whom this section applies shall be treated as sold on the day before the expatriation date for its fair market value.

''(2) RECOGNITION OF GAIN OR LOSS.—In the case of any sale under paragraph (1)—

''(A) notwithstanding any other provision of this title, any gain arising from such sale shall be taken into account for the taxable year of the sale, and

''(B) any loss arising from such sale shall be taken into account for the taxable year of the sale to the extent otherwise provided by this title, except that section 1091 shall not apply to any such loss.

Proper adjustment shall be made in the amount of any gain or loss subsequently realized for gain or loss taken into account under the preceding sentence.

''(3) EXCLUSION FOR CERTAIN GAIN.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—The amount which, but for this paragraph, would be includible in the gross income of any individual by reason of this section shall be reduced (but not below zero) by $600,000. For purposes of this paragraph, allocable expatriation gain taken into account under subsection (f)(2) shall be treated in the same manner as an amount required to be includible in gross income.

''(B) COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENT.—

''(i) IN GENERAL.—In the case of an expatriation date occurring in any calendar year after 2004, the $600,000 amount under subparagraph (A) shall be increased by an amount equal to—

''(I) such dollar amount, multiplied by

''(II) the cost-of-living adjustment determined under section 1(f)(3) for such calendar year, determined by substituting 'calendar year 2003' for 'calendar year 1992' in subparagraph (B) thereof.

''(ii) ROUNDING RULES.—If any amount after adjustment under clause (i) is not a multiple of $1,000, such amount shall be rounded to the next lower multiple of $1,000.

''(4) ELECTION TO CONTINUE TO BE TAXED AS UNITED STATES CITIZEN.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—If a covered expatriate elects the application of this paragraph—

''(i) this section (other than this paragraph and subsection (i)) shall not apply to the expatriate, but

''(ii) in the case of property to which this section would apply but for such election, the expatriate shall be subject to tax under this title in the same manner as if the individual were a United States citizen.

''(B) REQUIREMENTS.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to an individual unless the individual—

''(i) provides security for payment of tax in such form and manner, and in such amount, as the Secretary may require,

''(ii) consents to the waiver of any right of the individual under any treaty of the United States which would preclude assessment or collection of any tax which may be imposed by reason of this paragraph, and

''(iii) complies with such other requirements as the Secretary may prescribe.

''(C) ELECTION.—An election under subparagraph (A) shall apply to all property to which this section would apply but for the election and, once made, shall be irrevocable. Such election shall also apply to property the basis of which is determined in whole or in part by reference to the property with respect to which the election was made.

''(b) ELECTION TO DEFER TAX.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—If the taxpayer elects the application of this subsection with respect to any property treated as sold by reason of subsection (a), the payment of the additional tax attributable to such property shall be postponed until the due date of the return for the taxable year in which such property is disposed of (or, in the case of property disposed of in a transaction in which gain is not recognized in whole or in part, until such other date as the Secretary may prescribe).

''(2) DETERMINATION OF TAX WITH RESPECT TO PROPERTY.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the additional tax attributable to any property is an amount which bears the same ratio to the additional tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year solely by reason of subsection (a) as the gain taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to such property bears to the total gain taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to all property to which subsection (a) applies.

''(3) TERMINATION OF POSTPONEMENT.—No tax may be postponed under this subsection later than the due date for the return of tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year which includes the date of death of the expatriate (or, if earlier, the time that the security provided with respect to the property fails to meet the requirements of paragraph (4), unless the taxpayer corrects such failure within the time specified by the Secretary).

''(4) SECURITY.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—No election may be made under paragraph (1) with respect to any property unless adequate security is provided to the Secretary with respect to such property.

''(B) ADEQUATE SECURITY.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), security with respect to any property shall be treated as adequate security if—

''(i) it is a bond in an amount equal to the deferred tax amount under paragraph (2) for the property, or

''(ii) the taxpayer otherwise establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the security is adequate.

''(5) WAIVER OF CERTAIN RIGHTS.—No election may be made under paragraph (1) unless the taxpayer consents to the waiver of any right under any treaty of the United States which would preclude assessment or collection of any tax imposed by reason of this section.

''(6) ELECTIONS.—An election under paragraph (1) shall only apply to property described in the election and, once made, is irrevocable. An election may be made under paragraph (1) with respect to an interest in a trust with respect to which gain is required to be recognized under subsection (f)(1).

''(7) INTEREST.—For purposes of section 6601—

''(A) the last date for the payment of tax shall be determined without regard to the election under this subsection, and

''(B) section 6621(a)(2) shall be applied by substituting '5 percentage points' for '3 percentage points' in subparagraph (B) thereof.

''(c) COVERED EXPATRIATE.—For purposes of this section—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the term 'covered expatriate' means an expatriate.

''(2) EXCEPTIONS.—An individual shall not be treated as a covered expatriate if—

''(ii) has not been a resident of the United States (as defined in section 7701(b)(1)(A)(ii)) during the 5 taxable years ending with the taxable year during which the expatriation date occurs, or

''(B) SPECIFIED PROPERTY.—Any property or interest in property not described in subparagraph (A) which the Secretary specifies in regulations.

''(2) SPECIAL RULES FOR CERTAIN RETIREMENT PLANS.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—If a covered expatriate holds on the day before the expatriation date any interest in a retirement plan to which this paragraph applies—

''(i) such interest shall not be treated as sold for purposes of subsection (a)(1), but

''(ii) an amount equal to the present value of the expatriate's nonforfeitable accrued benefit shall be treated as having been received by such individual on such date as a distribution under the plan.

''(B) TREATMENT OF SUBSEQUENT DISTRIBUTIONS.—In the case of any distribution on or after the expatriation date to or on behalf of the covered expatriate from a plan from which the expatriate was treated as receiving a distribution under subparagraph (A), the amount otherwise includible in gross income by reason of the subsequent distribution shall be reduced by the excess of the amount includible in gross income under subparagraph (A) over any portion of such amount to which this subparagraph previously applied.

''(C) TREATMENT OF SUBSEQUENT DISTRIBUTIONS BY PLAN.—For purposes of this title, a retirement plan to which this paragraph applies, and any person acting on the plan's behalf, shall treat any subsequent distribution described in subparagraph (B) in the same manner as such distribution would be treated without regard to this paragraph.

''(D) APPLICABLE PLANS.—This paragraph shall apply to—

''(i) any qualified retirement plan (as defined in section 4974(c)),

''(ii) an eligible deferred compensation plan (as defined in section 457(b)) of an eligible employer described in section 457(e)(1)(A), and

''(B) the date the individual furnishes to the United States Department of State a signed statement of voluntary relinquishment of United States nationality confirming the performance of an act of expatriation specified in paragraph (1), (2), (3), or (4) of section 349(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1481(a)(1)–(4)),

''(C) the date the United States Department of State issues to the individual a certificate of loss of nationality, or

''(D) the date a court of the United States cancels a naturalized citizen's certificate of naturalization.

Subparagraph (A) or (B) shall not apply to any individual unless the renunciation or voluntary relinquishment is subsequently approved by the issuance to the individual of a certificate of loss of nationality by the United States Department of State.

''(4) LONG-TERM RESIDENT.—The term 'long-term resident' has the meaning given to such term by section 877(e)(2).

''(f) SPECIAL RULES APPLICABLE TO BENEFICIARIES' INTERESTS IN TRUST.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), if an individual is determined under paragraph (3) to hold an interest in a trust on the day before the expatriation date—

''(A) the individual shall not be treated as having sold such interest,

''(B) such interest shall be treated as a separate share in the trust, and

''(C)(i) such separate share shall be treated as a separate trust consisting of the assets allocable to such share,

''(ii) the separate trust shall be treated as having sold its assets on the day before the expatriation date for their fair market value and as having distributed all of its assets to the individual as of such time, and

''(iii) the individual shall be treated as having recontributed the assets to the separate trust.

Subsection (a)(2) shall apply to any income, gain, or loss of the individual arising from a distribution described in subparagraph (C)(ii). In determining the amount of such distribution, proper adjustments shall be made for liabilities of the trust allocable to an individual's share in the trust.

''(2) SPECIAL RULES FOR INTERESTS IN QUALIFIED TRUSTS.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—If the trust interest described in paragraph (1) is an interest in a qualified trust—

''(i) paragraph (1) and subsection (a) shall not apply, and

''(ii) in addition to any other tax imposed by this title, there is hereby imposed on each distribution with respect to such interest a tax in the amount determined under subparagraph (B).

''(B) AMOUNT OF TAX.—The amount of tax under subparagraph (A)(ii) shall be equal to the lesser of—

''(i) the highest rate of tax imposed by section 1(e) for the taxable year which includes the day before the expatriation date, multiplied by the amount of the distribution, or

''(ii) the balance in the deferred tax account immediately before the distribution determined without regard to any increases under subparagraph (C)(ii) after the 30th day preceding the distribution.

''(C) DEFERRED TAX ACCOUNT.—For purposes of subparagraph (B)(ii)—

''(i) OPENING BALANCE.—The opening balance in a deferred tax account with respect to any trust interest is an amount equal to the tax which would have been imposed on the allocable expatriation gain with respect to the trust interest if such gain had been included in gross income under subsection (a).

''(ii) INCREASE FOR INTEREST.—The balance in the deferred tax account shall be increased by the amount of interest determined (on the balance in the account at the time the interest accrues), for periods after the 90th day after the expatriation date, by using the rates and method applicable under section 6621 for underpayments of tax for such periods, except that section 6621(a)(2) shall be applied by substituting '5 percentage points' for '3 percentage points' in subparagraph (B) thereof.

''(iii) DECREASE FOR TAXES PREVIOUSLY PAID.—The balance in the tax deferred account shall be reduced—

''(I) by the amount of taxes imposed by subparagraph (A) on any distribution to the person holding the trust interest, and

''(II) in the case of a person holding a nonvested interest, to the extent provided in regulations, by the amount of taxes imposed by subparagraph (A) on distributions from the trust with respect to nonvested interests not held by such person.

''(D) ALLOCABLE EXPATRIATION GAIN.—For purposes of this paragraph, the allocable expatriation gain with respect to any beneficiary's interest in a trust is the amount of gain which would be allocable to such beneficiary's vested and nonvested interests in the trust if the beneficiary held directly all assets allocable to such interests.

''(E) TAX DEDUCTED AND WITHHELD.—

''(i) IN GENERAL.—The tax imposed by subparagraph (A)(ii) shall be deducted and withheld by the trustees from the distribution to which it relates.

''(ii) EXCEPTION WHERE FAILURE TO WAIVE TREATY RIGHTS.—If an amount may not be deducted and withheld under clause (i) by reason of the distributee failing to waive any treaty right with respect to such distribution—

''(I) the tax imposed by subparagraph (A)(ii) shall be imposed on the trust and each trustee shall be personally liable for the amount of such tax, and

''(II) any other beneficiary of the trust shall be entitled to recover from the distributee the amount of such tax imposed on the other beneficiary.

''(F) DISPOSITION.—If a trust ceases to be a qualified trust at any time, a covered expatriate disposes of an interest in a qualified trust, or a covered expatriate holding an interest in a qualified trust dies, then, in lieu of the tax imposed by subparagraph (A)(ii), there is hereby imposed a tax equal to the lesser of—

''(i) the tax determined under paragraph (1) as if the day before the expatriation date were the date of such cessation, disposition, or death, whichever is applicable, or

''(ii) the balance in the tax deferred account immediately before such date.

Such tax shall be imposed on the trust and each trustee shall be personally liable for the amount of such tax and any other beneficiary of the trust shall be entitled to recover from the covered expatriate or the estate the amount of such tax imposed on the other beneficiary.

''(G) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this paragraph—

''(iv) ADJUSTMENTS.—The Secretary may provide for such adjustments to the bases of assets in a trust or a deferred tax account, and the timing of such adjustments, in order to ensure that gain is taxed only once.

''(v) COORDINATION WITH RETIREMENT PLAN RULES.—This subsection shall not apply to an interest in a trust which is part of a retirement plan to which subsection (d)(2) applies.

''(3) DETERMINATION OF BENEFICIARIES' INTEREST IN TRUST.—

''(A) DETERMINATIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH (1).—For purposes of paragraph (1), a beneficiary's interest in a trust shall be based upon all relevant facts and circumstances, including the terms of the trust instrument and any letter of wishes or similar document, historical patterns of trust distributions, and the existence of and functions performed by a trust protector or any similar adviser.

''(B) OTHER DETERMINATIONS.—For purposes of this section—

''(i) CONSTRUCTIVE OWNERSHIP.—If a beneficiary of a trust is a corporation, partnership, trust, or estate, the shareholders, partners, or beneficiaries shall be deemed to be the trust beneficiaries for purposes of this section.

''(ii) TAXPAYER RETURN POSITION.—A taxpayer shall clearly indicate on its income tax return—

''(I) the methodology used to determine that taxpayer's trust interest under this section, and

''(II) if the taxpayer knows (or has reason to know) that any other beneficiary of such trust is using a different methodology to determine such beneficiary's trust interest under this section.

''(g) TERMINATION OF DEFERRALS, ETC.—In the case of any covered expatriate, notwithstanding any other provision of this title—

''(1) any period during which recognition of income or gain is deferred shall terminate on the day before the expatriation date, and

''(h) IMPOSITION OF TENTATIVE TAX.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—If an individual is required to include any amount in gross income under subsection (a) for any taxable year, there is hereby imposed, immediately before the expatriation date, a tax in an amount equal to the amount of tax which would be imposed if the taxable year were a short taxable year ending on the expatriation date.

''(2) DUE DATE.—The due date for any tax imposed by paragraph (1) shall be the 90th day after the expatriation date.

''(3) TREATMENT OF TAX.—Any tax paid under paragraph (1) shall be treated as a payment of the tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year to which subsection (a) applies.

''(4) DEFERRAL OF TAX.—The provisions of subsection (b) shall apply to the tax imposed by this subsection to the extent attributable to gain includible in gross income by reason of this section.

''(i) SPECIAL LIENS FOR DEFERRED TAX AMOUNTS.—

''(1) IMPOSITION OF LIEN.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—If a covered expatriate makes an election under subsection (a)(4) or (b) which results in the deferral of any tax imposed by reason of subsection (a), the deferred amount (including any interest, additional amount, addition to tax, assessable penalty, and costs attributable to the deferred amount) shall be a lien in favor of the United States on all property of the expatriate located in the United States (without regard to whether this section applies to the property).

''(B) DEFERRED AMOUNT.—For purposes of this subsection, the deferred amount is the amount of the increase in the covered expatriate's income tax which, but for the election under subsection (a)(4) or (b), would have occurred by reason of this section for the taxable year including the expatriation date.

''(2) PERIOD OF LIEN.—The lien imposed by this subsection shall arise on the expatriation date and continue until—

''(A) the liability for tax by reason of this section is satisfied or has become unenforceable by reason of lapse of time, or

''(B) it is established to the satisfaction of the Secretary that no further tax liability may arise by reason of this section.

''(3) CERTAIN RULES APPLY.—The rules set forth in paragraphs (1), (3), and (4) of section 6324A(d) shall apply with respect to the lien imposed by this subsection as if it were a lien imposed by section 6324A.

''(II) the reasonably expected pre-tax profit from the transaction exceeds a risk-free rate of return.

''(C) TREATMENT OF FEES AND FOREIGN TAXES.—Fees and other transaction expenses and foreign taxes shall be taken into account as expenses in determining pre-tax profit under subparagraph (B)(ii).

OUTSOURCING OF AMERICAN JOBS

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I may not use all of my 20 minutes. I have been talking at some length this afternoon, although it is my custom to do so. I might point out, for those who are interested, this is not a filibuster. I am prepared to vote on this amendment right now. I was prepared to vote on it an hour and a half ago, but there are those who want to analyze what I am proposing.

I suppose it is more than analysis that is occurring. They are trying to figure out how to defeat it, and I regret that because I do not think it is complicated. I think it is straightforward. I think it makes sense.

I would not be offering this if this was not a problem sweeping across the country. Concerns are being expressed everywhere by Americans of varying incomes and positions. I know in my own State I have had meetings with people I could not put in the same town or county together a year ago who are coming to us now and saying, would you please do something here. I am talking about my chambers of commerce.

I had a meeting last week at a Teamsters Local that included the chambers of commerce, the Manufacturers Association, the International Association of Machinists and Teamsters. I do not need to remind the Chair what a unique circumstance that is when a crowd like that gets together—by the way, all asking me to do the same thing.

They were not just asking me but asking us what we were going to do, because they have watched the alarming decline of manufacturing jobs in the country, and it seems to be accelerating at a dramatic pace.

Also the problem they foresee, and I agree with them on this outsourcing of jobs, which is very appealing, and I understand it from a corporate standpoint, when one sees their competitors, neighbors, and businesses are outsourcing and cutting their budgets by huge amounts because they can hire someone for $7 a day or $2 an hour, as opposed to paying them $40,000, $50,000 or $60,000 a year, then the lure is remarkable.

As we know, in fact, the Indian government is providing tremendous incentives to lure call centers, providing corporations with tax exemptions and building western-style technology parks fitted with telecom infrastructures.

What are we doing? Are we doing anything to try and compete with that or are we just saying that is the way the world is and we better get used to it because that is what is going to happen for the foreseeable future, and maybe something will come along that will all of a sudden fill this vacuum, that will restore these manufacturing jobs or information technology and the like?

I can only hope that would be the case because in the absence of doing anything else, we are going to find a continuing decline in this area.

I worry about this from the standpoint of national security. In my State, I have over 5,000 small manufacturers. I have major corporations as well. I probably have more large Fortune 500 corporations in my State than any other State in the country on a per-capita basis, given the size of my State. My State is the home of major corporations. Many of them are major defense contractors, and those 5,000 small manufacturers in many cases are suppliers of very sophisticated technologies for my defense contractors and others who produce sophisticated products.

I do not need to tell the Presiding Officer, we have lost 35,000 jobs now in 36 months in this area. When those are lost, they are not reconstituted. Once they are gone offshore, the idea that you are going to rebuild that, my experience is—and I am prepared to listen to others who want to contradict me—I think it is unlikely.

So the question I have to ask, as we stand here and receive this news almost on a daily basis, is there not some danger in losing this manufacturing capability for a time in the 21st century when we may find ourselves confronted with the fact these jobs we gave away are now being held by people in countries that do not agree with us on certain matters, and all of a sudden they do not want to supply us with certain component parts that may be necessary to build jet engines, submarines, Black Hawk helicopters or something else my State or the State of Tennessee or some other part of the country produces?

We are watching this tremendous outflow occurring. The Presiding Officer was the former Secretary of Education, as I pointed out earlier, and again I understand the budget constraints. This is a very difficult time. Putting aside whether one agrees or disagrees on how we got to this situation, we have a terrible fiscal situation on our hands and yet even in the area of job training and assistance we are wiping out the manufacturing extension partnerships; we are cutting the SBA by millions of dollars; we are cutting vocational education by $316 million; we are cutting the Workforce Investment Act by $448 million.

We are not only not trying to compete with what India is doing on its creation of call centers, by offering tax incentives for businesses to stay here, we are even cutting back in the area that might offer some hope to someone in this area who is losing their job because it has been outsourced some place.

On every front, we seem to have nothing to say to this issue right now, except this is the way life is; get over it, America. You just have to live with this. This is the way the world is going to be.

I do not think it has to be that way. I think we can do better. I think that is what the American people ask us when we come here—try to do better.

I have to look in the eyes of my own child, an infant, and I wonder what kind of a century she is going to grow up in. She will look back someday and ask herself, or hopefully me, what did you do back at the turn of this century when you knew this was going on, when you saw thousands of jobs leaving our country, when you saw manufacturing declining, what did you do? This was not some sneak attack. You were all aware of it. Your local papers wrote about it every day. Did you offer any ideas and suggestions on how we might compete in a global marketplace—because we should, we must—while simultaneously not losing the human investments, the human capital, that are critical for any successful society to succeed? What did you do?

I am afraid if we go back and she looks at what we are doing at the outset of this century, then she would be startled to learn we are cutting back in the areas that might provide some educational opportunity for people in vocational areas, that we had nothing really to say to a hemorrhaging of jobs going out of the country, and that we were basically silent except to bemoan the fact that 2.8 million manufacturing jobs in 36 months disappeared in the country. And there is every indication those numbers are going to increase, and the impact on other sectors of our economy will be very profoundly affected.

I mentioned already we are now being told the outsourcing of American jobs will probably exceed 3 million, close to 4 million over the next decade, unabated. That is a loss of $136 billion to $140 billion in salaries and wages in the United States, not to mention the human and societal impact.

So I do not apologize to my colleagues for feeling as strongly as I do about this. I am a free trader. I voted for NAFTA. I thought it was the right thing to do. I voted to give fast track authority. I voted for the Jordanian agreements and others. I have opposed some as well. I have not been exclusively for them, but I believe in free and fair trade. I also believe a self-respecting nation cannot allow its human capital intelligence to be lost without standing up and trying to do something about it.

The subject matter of this amendment very simply says at this juncture, look, let's stop. At least when it comes to the expenditure of Federal taxpayer money, those dollars ought not to be used to pay for outsourcing jobs until we figure out a better way to answer this problem. I do not think that is complicated.

Now, I gather K Street in town is going ballistic at this very hour because obviously major corporations, 400 out of 1,000 top ones in the country, are doing it. Forty of fifty States are doing it right now. So they want to continue doing it because it is a great saver of money if you are focused on quarterly reports.

That is their job on K Street and that is their job in the corporate board rooms, to worry quarter by quarter by quarter. I don't think that is right, but that is what they do. Thank the Lord there are many corporations who do think longer than that.

Our job is not to think in quarters, not to be unmindful that corporations should and must. But our obligation is to have a broader, deeper vision; to think about longer term effects of decisions we make, no matter how attractive and how appealing they may be to someone who has to explain to a group of shareholders why it is that they have or have not exceeded last quarter's profit margins—bottom line.

Certainly outsourcing will help do that on any given day. If you can hire someone for a couple of bucks and lay off that person in Connecticut, Tennessee, California, Ohio, Pennsylvania, you are going to save money, I promise you. Quarterly reports are going to look great.

But my question is, What does America look like? What does our Nation look like in the coming generation? In fact, if we lose these jobs, which are critical to our own well-being and success, if we lose manufacturing that we cannot replace, if we squander the ability to produce vital components and parts that are essential to contribute to our national defense structure, what does my country look like in 5 years, 10 years, 20 years down the line?

That is the question I am asking. That is why I am offering this amendment, to see if we cannot at least step up and say when it comes to the taxpayer's dime, that we should not be taking your tax dollar and subsidizing this outsourcing of jobs. If a private company, with its own money, wants to do it, that is their business. I regret it, but if they want to do it they have a right to do it. I think we ought to have tax incentives to discourage them one way or the other, but at the end of the day if they want to do it, they ought to be given the right to do it. I can't stop that. That is their dime.

But on the taxpayer's dime, I think we ought to say something else. What my amendment does is say you cannot use that dime. You cannot use that dime to lay off somebody and hire someone 14 time zones away to do a job that a hard-working American ought to be able to hold and do in order to provide for their family.

I don't think that is outrageous. I don't think that is isolationist or protectionist. I think that is standing up for the people of this country who expect nothing less from those of us who represent them in this Chamber. That is why I am offering this amendment. My hope is tomorrow morning we can get to it and vote on it and dispose of it one way or the other. If you want to vote against it, vote against it. But I ask you to join with my colleague from Minnesota, Senator COLEMAN, and others who have been a part of this effort, to say this is our way of saying to people out there we hear you.

We are not suggesting this amendment is perfect. I would be the last person to say that. I am sure it is not perfect. But at least it says to voters and to constituents out there who are worrying every day whether they are going to become one of those statistics, that we are going to try to do something about this, so you need to know your Government, your Congress is doing what it can to stop this.

Our obligation is not exclusively to them. We have obligations to others as well, including those who serve and work in these corporations. I am not against them at all, but they are making their decisions in what they determine is in their best interests and the best interests of their shareholders. I respect that.

But I have a higher obligation. I have an obligation, not only to that shareholder but to the people who work for them as well. I respect those who only have to worry about the narrow constituency, but I wasn't elected by the people of Connecticut to come here and merely worry about that narrow constituency. I have another obligation. I serve in the Senate, not just a State legislature. When I am here and I vote and I cast ballots, they don't just affect the people who live in my State, that I represent; they are part of the 280 or 290 million people across this country.

I look at the 2.8 million who have lost their jobs in manufacturing, the close to 3 million who will lose their jobs to outsourcing in the coming days, maybe as many as 14 million, we are being told, over the next couple of years. I didn't dwell on this particular chart at this moment, but 14 million additional jobs are in danger of being shipped overseas. Those people want to know whether or not we have anything to say to them.

So I urge my colleagues to support this amendment. I don't know of another issue that is more important to the American public at this hour than this one. We have seen it all across the country in the last number of days. National news programs talk about it every single night and report nightly about corporations that are outsourcing more and more jobs.

The American people want to know what we have to say to them. So I regret we have not been able to vote on this earlier. I didn't intend to take this time. I was prepared to vote 2 hours ago, 3 hours ago, but there are those who do not want to vote on this amendment right now. My hope is we will be able to do so first thing in the morning and say with a very loud, clear, and my hope is a unanimous voice that we stand with those who worry about whether America is squandering its wealth and its treasury, not just the treasury of dollars and cents but a far more important treasury, the human capital that is the American workforce.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I respect the distinguished Senator from Connecticut, as he knows. I will certainly look at this amendment. But throughout this day I have seen others on the other side continually talk about jobs and loss of jobs like we are not doing anything about it. Nothing could be farther from the truth. This very bill, FSC/ETI, is a very important bill. We call it the Jumpstart Our Business Strength on Jobs bill because it will help us to increase the number of jobs in this country by huge dimensions. It also is a smart thing to do. It also saves us $4 billion in assessed costs with the E.U. in international trade, if we get this done. That is very important.

Some of the comments I have heard today, not those of the distinguished Senator from Connecticut—in fact, I exclude his comments—some of the comments I have heard today would have you believe the only way you are going to get jobs is more of the same: More Government, more Government support, more and more controls, more and more approaches towards unionizing America.

I am one of the few Members of this body who ever held a union journeyman's card. I worked 10 years in the building construction trade unions and earned my journeyman lather's card. The laths trade was one of the most interesting trades. In the early days it was wood lathing, little partitions of woods that you put on partitions and ceilings that you would plaster over. In my day it was metal lath, which was a much more high-tech approach towards putting up partitions and ceilings and elliptical arches and Gothic arches, and it was a very skilled trade and I was fortunate that I was able to do that and I am proud I was able to do that.

Today, the lathing trade is no longer in existence because we priced ourselves out of the marketplace. Today, all of the lathers who used to work in this very skilled trade had to transition into the carpenters' union because their trade no longer could pay for itself.

As a matter of fact, you don't see many buildings plastered today. The reason you don't, it is just too expensive. So drywall has become the norm. I am not criticizing anybody. What I am saying is, we can price ourselves out of the marketplace.

I can remember time after time, my fellow union lathers would say: Hey, kid, slow down. We are not going to have any work if you keep working so fast.

My father was one of the best lathers in the world and taught me the trade.

He said: Look, you give an honest day's work for an honest day's dollar and you work as hard as you can.

It was anathema to me to slow down so we could have more work. That is what happened. They slowed down and the work dissipated and, of course, the trade no longer exists.

I think we are worse off because we don't have lath and plaster in a lot of our buildings today. I am not blaming my fellow union members, but sometimes we have to acknowledge that there are gives and takes in the business world. The fact that some businesses do their business offshore is not necessarily bad because in many cases we get even more jobs onshore. Sometimes we don't. Sometimes it is bad. But by and large, business in this country has always worked because we believe in the free market system. We believe in competition. We believe in high productivity.

My feeling is that this country cannot be beat in productivity. If we really work hard and we continue to do the best we can, we are always going to be able to compete.

But where we cannot compete because of low wages and government subsidization and violations of international trade laws, then, my gosh, let's not quit. Let's go and find new jobs.

This administration inherited some terrifically bad times. The whole last year of the Clinton administration was headed into recession, and everybody knows it. Anybody who says otherwise is not telling the truth. Everybody knows that. So this President inherited that.

I don't particularly blame the Clinton administration. We do have cycles. But I have to say I think they could have done some things to have prevented it. But that is probably true of everything. He then inherited this recession, and on top of that comes September 11, which created magnificent problems for all of us. It was very costly and expensive and put pressure on the budget. It cost us in so many ways, even from a productivity and jobs standpoint.

But economic growth for the third quarter of last year was up over 8 percent. In the fourth quarter, it was 4.1 percent. I know years here when we would have killed for 4.1 percent. Frankly, I believe the first quarter of this year is going to be all right too, even though normally it is a slow quarter.

I think all we have to do is do our best to work together as Democrats and Republicans without all the screaming and shouting like one side has all the answers and the other side doesn't, which I have heard a lot of today, and put aside the politics and do what is best for our country. Unfortunately, some just can't seem to do that.

I believe the President is doing a great job. I believe his various Cabinet-level officials are doing great work. In fact, I have never seen better in my 28 years in the Senate. I believe it is time to be fair, decent, and honorable.

THE FAIRNESS IN ASBESTOS INJURY RESOLUTION ACT

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise today to support the comments from the distinguished majority leader of last Friday with respect to the asbestos legislation. This is an absolutely vital issue for this country's civil justice system and, most importantly, to our economy.

If you want to have jobs, then let us get this asbestos reform bill through and we will get hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of jobs back, and perhaps the 70 large companies which have gone into bankruptcy will be able to resurrect themselves and be able to employ more people.

We now have the opportunity with S. 1125, the Fairness In Asbestos Injury Resolution Act, to correct what has become a gross injustice against asbestos victims and the defendants who are relentlessly hauled into court despite having never manufactured or ever sold a shred of asbestos fiber.

It has been a long road for this legislation so far. But I concur with Senator FRIST, our distinguished majority leader, that we are finally in a position where we can enact this legislation.

We went through a grueling markup of this bill last year, and since then have engaged in focused discussions over remaining differences under the stewardship of my friend from Pennsylvania, Senator SPECTER, and Judge Becker of the third circuit court of appeals. The stakeholders and Members involved in these discussions all agree that this process has proved to be quite successful, not only in clarifying areas of disagreement but in proposing workable solutions to these areas. As a result, there now remains a mere handful of issues left to consider. But given the timeframe set forth by the leader last Friday, I believe more needs to be done to help bridge the gap on the remaining issues. Therefore, I propose that we get the primary stakeholders and interested Members together for a 2-day-long negotiating session sometime in mid- to late-March with this type of focus on the last handful of these issues. I believe we can resolve the remaining differences in this bill. There is nothing we can't solve, if we will work together. This issue is too important, and we are too close not to give this one last effort through an extended 2-day-long meeting. I know Judge Becker and the stakeholders and the key Republican Members have all expressed their desire to participate in this 2-day meeting. I hope my Democratic colleagues who have been working on this issue will join us in the final push toward reaching consensus.

Let me give some background for those who have not been as steeped in this legislation over the past year or so. For more than 20 years, compensation to legitimate victims of asbestos exposure has been unacceptably diminished and delayed. It has become quite evident to the committee that tens of thousands of true asbestos victims are faced with agonizing pain and suffering with uncertain prospects of a meaningful recovery in our existing tort system. These victims are left with little to nothing because precious resources are being diverted to unimpaired plaintiffs and a handful of creative trial lawyers who are looking to make a quick buck.

I am a member of the American Trial Lawyers Association, having been a trial lawyer in my former non-Senate life, since we Mormons believe in a premortal existence. I have to say that my fellow ATLA members are embarrassed by this small cadre of personal injury lawyers who are thinking only of themselves and the huge fees they make, with the approximately 50 to 60 percent of the moneys that go to attorneys. They are embarrassed by it. They won't say that because they don't want to cut up their fellow personal injury lawyers. But that is what is going on here.

In up to 90 percent of the cases that have been filed, the person has never had a sick day in his life with regard to asbestos. In most of those cases, they have been sent to doctors who will find injury no matter what. It borders on fraud and in some cases it is fraudulent. It is wrecking the country. Seventy major companies are now in bankruptcy, and there are over 8,400 or more, going up to 15,000, that possibly will be thrown into bankruptcy that never had anything to do with asbestos or made anybody ill from asbestos.

At the same time, scores of companies with almost no connection to the problem have had to file for bankruptcy, as I have said, and hundreds of others live under the constant threat of insolvency from this litigation. What this translates into is lost jobs, depleted pensions, and weaker financial markets.

If my friends on the other side of the aisle want to do something about jobs, let us get serious about asbestos reform. Let us get serious about doing what is right for those who are truly ill and who won't get very much at all. Those who were employed by 70 companies are getting 5 cents on the dollar. We take care of them with this trust fund.

We have heard the statistics but they bear repeating. The RAND Institute for Civil Justice tells us, to date, 70 companies have been forced into bankruptcy—at least 3 with operations in my home State of Utah.

The number of claims continues to rise as does the number of companies pulled into the web of this abusive litigation, often with little, if any, culpability. More than 600,000 people have filed claims, and more than 8,400 companies have been named as defendants in asbestos litigation.

This has become such a gravy train for some abusive personal injury lawyers that over 2,400 additional companies were named in the last year alone. RAND, this great research institution, also notes in its bipartisan research that about ''two-thirds of the claims are now filed by the unimpaired, while in the past they were filed only by the manifestly ill.''

That is a low number. It is really up to 90 percent. But let us take their number. Two-thirds of them are filed by people who really are not impaired.

Former Attorney General Griffin Bell, amongst many others, has denounced this type of ''jackpot justice.''

To address this national problem, I introduced a bipartisan bill with my friends, Senators BEN NELSON, MIKE DEWINE, ZELL MILLER, GEORGE VOINOVICH, GEORGE ALLEN, SAXBY CHAMBLISS, and CHUCK HAGEL. This bill creates a trust fund which provides expedited no-fault compensation to victims while reducing the wasteful transaction costs. Attorney's fees and transactions costs have been as high as 60 percent of the amounts recovered.

After weeks of marking up the bill, we passed this legislation favorably from the committee with bipartisan support last July. No one can accuse us of being unwilling to compromise. When I look at where our bill started—and it was a good start—and where it is now, our willingness to compromise is abundantly clear.

Let me show you this chart. In total, we have made 53 changes to this bill to accommodate concerns raised by our friends on the other side, the Democrats.

Let me review a brief history of these changes. In May, we circulated a bipartisan draft measure, and my staff met then with Democratic staff to listen to their concerns. As a result of these discussions, we incorporated many of their requests even before introduction.

We then embarked on several weeks of markups that saw dozens of Democratic-initiated amendments adopted into this legislation. I didn't agree with all of these amendments, but it can't be said that there hasn't been strong participation with Democrats on this bill.

By the way, I met for a couple of hours with the head of the AFL–CIO to explain this bill to him. I know deep in my soul that he knows I am doing everything in my power to do what is right. I know he knows that we have done what is right. I respect and appreciate the fact that he sat down with me and talked with me about it.

This chart behind me summarizes some of the major changes we made at the behest of the Democrats.

Raising the level of mandatory contributions to well over $100 billion; 111 different changes to increase the value of awards to victims; 22 changes to make it easier for asbestos victims to be eligible for compensation; a historic, bipartisan agreement on eligibility criteria where the unions and everyone came together; reimbursement for medical monitoring—now they will pay for medical monitoring of people who are not sick and especially those who are; five additional provisions to guarantee payment of mandatory contributions; relief for asbestos victims in Libby, MT, where asbestos was mined; a Federal ban on asbestos and ''bad actor'' protections.

Look at this chart. ''To build bipartisan support, more than 53 changes to S. 1125 have already been made at the urging of the Democrats. These occurred prior to the bill's introduction, during negotiations between introduction and committee consideration, and throughout the four committee markups devoted to the legislation.''

I ask unanimous consent all of these changes be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Increasing the compensation levels available for eligible lung cancer claims with underlying asbestosis a maximum of $1,000,000 (depending on smoking history).

Mr. HATCH. That chart is amazing. I don't agree with all those changes, but we made them to accommodate our friends on the other side. Just look at all these changes. No one can tell us we are not doing everything we can to make this bill a consensus bill and to be fair to everybody.

We know there are a lot of people who will be compensated under this bill who have never suffered a bit from asbestos, but we have given the benefit of the doubt. Many of them are union workers who have smoked all their lives and got cancer from smoking but have had something to do with asbestos at one time or another in their career but probably have shown no feasible asbestos.

Literally thousands and thousands, hundreds of thousands, will be compensated. There comes a point where you have to say, Let's do what is right here. Let's not just keep loading this bill up so you can beat your breast and claim you get more money, more blood out of these companies.

Moreover, even though our original claim values would have on average provided more money to legitimate claimants, we increased the values even more and we removed most collateral source offsets to ensure more of the award goes directly to the claimant. That means even though they received moneys, we removed those as offsets.

These changes listed on the chart behind me do not even include other changes we have offered since the bill was reported out of committee. Through the leadership of the majority leader, we got contributors to add an additional $6 billion in overall funding along with significant increases in claims values in many categories. We started at $94 billion in mandatory funding because this amount would give more money to claimants on average than they received in the current tort system. Nonetheless, through the markup in the Frist financing agreement, we increased the fund to have the capacity to pay out $114 billion to claimants. It is not just money, either. The Frist financing deal adds more flexible borrowing authority as yet another safeguard for solvency. Senator

FRIST has my cooperation and support in doing this.

Our willingness to resolve the Democratic concerns speaks for itself by virtue of where this bill stands today. I again thank Senators FRIST and SPECTER for their willingness to help resolve some of the difficult issues on this legislation and, of course, the cosponsors as well.

Let me talk about the final issues. Even though we made all of these changes that show up here, I understand some want to make further changes, including streamlining the claims process even more. I have said I am willing to look at such proposals, but the time has come and the time is past to wrap up this process. It passed out of the committee last summer and we need to stop talking and do something. With all of this whining about jobs that all of us want to get in this country, this bill would do more to create jobs and solidify our economy than any other bill we can pass this year. This bill makes sense except for how costly it is, but even then we are willing to do that. This is why we need to continue working for the next several weeks on the issues and sit down in a 2-day meeting sometime in the last half of March to see if we can finally get agreement on all of the issues.

I thank Senator SPECTER and Judge Becker for their valuable assistance. I was not really happy because we had gone through so much and I had commitments from so many people if we got to $108 billion, this bill would go and they would support it. I got it to $108 billion—and I think they thought we could not do it—and they said we have to have more and more and more. We are giving them more, even.

I also appreciate the willingness of Senator SPECTER and Judge Becker to help finally resolve these issues in a 2-day session. My friends, Senators LEAHY, DODD, and DASCHLE, have been graciously willing to sit down with us at a staff level to narrow the differences and I am confident they will be willing to join in this 2-day meeting as well. We are willing to accommodate schedules to get full participation in this meeting within a reasonable fashion.

We simply cannot delay any longer. We need to ensure the truly sick get paid and paid in a timely manner. We need to provide stability to our economy by stemming the rampant litigation that resulted in a tidal wave of bankruptcies and stop endangering jobs and pensions through the current broken system. This crisis reaches far and wide and it hurts everyone.

What is happening with these bad acting personal injury lawyers who have been handling some of these cases, they forum-shop the cases into jurisdictions where juries go wild and judges support them and judges are in the pocket of the plaintiffs' lawyers. In one case, if I recall it correctly, five people, not one of whom experienced a sick day up to that time, got $125 million, while thousands and thousands of very sick people get nothing. That is wrong.

For anybody to keep supporting that process the way some have done is wrong. That is why I am here on the floor to challenge all of our colleagues to work together in good faith, put our differences aside and let's get this bill done in the best interests of our country and the best interests of jobs. If that is not done, I would not listen to one ''mouthing'' word from people on jobs because they are playing politics rather than doing the art of the doable, doing what needs to be done, what must be done in the interests of the sick people, the truly sick people and, I might add, many others who did not get their sickness from asbestos, but we give them the benefit of the doubt.

This bill really will work even though I have to admit it is very tough on the companies that have to come up with this $114 billion.

I yield the floor.
