Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 106th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

Vol. 146 WASHINGTON, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 12, 2000 No. 127

Senate

(Legislative day of Friday, September 22, 2000)

The Senate met at 9:36 a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Dear God, we praise You for Your faithfulness. We say with Jeremiah, ''The Lord's mercies are new every morning; great is Your faithfulness.''—Lamentations 3:23.

We are profoundly moved by Your merciful kindness to us. You never give up on us. When we forget You, You infuse our lives with reminders of Your consistent love; when we resist Your guidance, You find new ways to get through to us; when hubris becomes a habit, You break the bond of self-sufficiency by showing us what we could accomplish with Your supernatural strength.

Lord we confess our need for humility. It is a combination of gratitude, honesty, and courage. We admit that all that we have and are is Your gift; we honestly face the distance between what we are and what we could be in our relationships and responsibilities; we need courage to blow the cap off of our reservations and live the full potential according to Your expectations.

Here we are at the beginning of a crucial day in the life of this Senate. As we rush into the schedule, we meet You at the pass. We don't need to spin to win with You. You know all about us. And so we simply ask You to take our minds and focus our intelligence on what is best for America, to take our wills and guide us to choose what is righteous and just, and to take our voices and speak Your truth through them. You are our Lord and Saviour. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable MIKE CRAPO, a Senator from the State of Idaho, led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

DIVISION B

HOUSING NEEDS ACT OF 2000

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the ''Housing Needs Act of 2000''.

SEC. 2. TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of Contents for this Act is as follows:

SEC. 3. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.—

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) the Nation has not made adequate progress in maintaining and expanding the inventory of affordable housing for low and very low-income families, including persons with disabilities and seniors;

(2) despite continued economic expansion, worst case housing needs have reached an all-time high of 5.4 million families, increasing by 4 percent between 1995 and 1997;

(3) the number of rental units which are affordable to extremely low-income families has decreased by 5 percent since 1991, a loss of over 37,000 units;

(4) the Administration and the Department of Housing and Urban Development has proposed increased funding for incremental rental vouchers as the primary solution to making additional housing available for low-income and very low-income families;

(5) while section 8 vouchers represent housing choice as a matter of philosophy, in many cases families using vouchers have difficult time finding housing, especially in low vacancy market areas;

(6) in many cases, where section 8 vouchers are used, the result is de facto redlining where low-income families are relegated to the poorest and most distressed neighborhoods with limited opportunities for transportation, employment and quality schools;

(7) section 8 vouchers do not produce additional new units of affordable low-income housing since banks will not finance new construction with one year termed portable assistance;

(8) the Department of Housing and Urban Development has not provided the necessary leadership to assist in the development of needed affordable housing;

(9) a large number of States and local government have been successful in developing new tools and opportunities for the development of additional affordable housing for low-income families, including the development of affordable mixed income housing as part of State and local redevelopment strategies for distressed communities; and

(10) State housing finance agencies have the local experience and knowledge to maximize the development of additional units of affordable low-income housing and to preserve the existing stock of low-income affordable housing.

(b) The purpose of this Act is to redirect the primary responsibility for the preservation of existing affordable low-income housing and the expansion of the inventory of affordable rental housing for very low-income and low-income families from the Federal Government to State and local governments through State housing finance agencies.

SEC. 4. DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this Act, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) The term ''low-income families'' shall have the same meaning as provided under section 3(b)(2) of the United States Housing Act of 1937.

(2) The term ''project-based assistance'' shall have the meaning given such term in section 16(c)(6) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, except that such term includes assistance under any successor programs to the programs referred to in such section.

(3) The term ''public housing agency'' shall have the meaning given such term in section 3(b) of the United States Housing Act of 1937.

(4) The term ''Secretary'' shall mean the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

(5) The term ''section 8 assistance'' or ''voucher'' shall have the meaning given such term in section 8(f) of the United States Housing Act of 1937.

(6) The term ''State'' shall mean the United States of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, Guam, the Virgin Islands, America Samoa, and any other territory of possession of the United States.

(7) The term ''State housing finance agency'' shall mean any State or local housing finance agency that has been designated by a State to administer this program.

(8) The term ''very low-income families'' shall have the same meaning as provided under section 3(b) of the United States Housing Act of 1937.

TITLE I—PRODUCTION OF NEW HOUSING FOR LOW AND VERY LOW-INCOME FAMILIES

SEC. 101. The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall make funds available to State housing finance agencies as provided under section 102 for the rehabilitation of existing low-income housing, for the development of new affordable low-income housing units, and for the preservation of existing low-income housing units that are at risk of becoming unavailable for low-income families.

SEC. 102. ALLOCATION OF RESOURCES.—

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall allocate funds approved in appropriations Acts to State housing finance agencies to carry out this Title. Subject to the requirements of subsection (b) and as otherwise provided in this subsection, each State housing finance agency shall be eligible to receive an amount of funds equal to the proportion of the per capita population of the State in relation to the population of the United States which shall be determined on the basis of the most recent decennial census for which data are available. For each fiscal year, the Secretary shall reserve for grants to Indian tribes 1 percent of the amount appropriated under the applicable appropriations Act. The Secretary shall provide for distribution of amounts under this subsection to Indian tribes on the basis of a competition conducted pursuant to specific criteria developed after notice and public comment.

(b) MINIMUM STATE ALLOCATION.—If the allocation under subsection (a), when applied to the funds approved under this section in appropriations Acts for a fiscal year, would result in funding of less than $10,000,000 to any State housing finance agency, the allocation for such State housing finance agency shall be $10,000,000 and the increase shall be deducted pro rata from the allocation of all other State housing finance agencies.

(c) CRITERIA FOR REALLOCATION.—The Secretary shall reallocate any funds previously allocated to a State housing finance agency for any fiscal year in which the State housing finance agency fails to provide its match requirements or fails to submit an affordable housing expansion plan that is approved by the Secretary. All such funds shall be reallocated pursuant to the formula provided under subsection (a).

SEC. 103. AFFORDABLE HOUSING EXPANSION PLAN.—

(a) SUBMISSION OF AFFORDABLE HOUSING EXPANSION PLAN.—The Secretary shall allocate funds under section 102 to a State housing finance agency only if the State housing finance agency has submitted an affordable housing expansion plan, with annual updates, approved by the Secretary and designed to meet the overall very low- and low-income housing needs of both the rural and urban areas of the State in which the State housing finance agency is located. This plan shall be developed in conjunction with the housing strategies developed for the applicable States and localities under section 105 of Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act.

(b) CITIZEN PARTICIPATION.—Before submitting an affordable housing expansion plan to the Secretary, a State housing finance agency shall—

(1) make available to citizens of the State, public agencies and other interested parties information regarding the amount of assistance expected to be made available under this Title and the range of investment or other uses of such assistance that the State housing finance agency may undertake;

(2) publish the proposed plan in a manner that, in the determination of the Secretary, affords affected citizens, public agencies, and other interested parties a reasonable opportunity to review its contents and to submit comments on the proposed plan;

(3) hold one or more public hearings to obtain the views of citizens, public agencies, and other interested parties on the housing needs of the State; and

(4) provide citizens, public agencies, and other interested parties with reasonable access to records regarding the uses of any assistance that the State housing finance agency may have received under this Title during the preceding 5 years.

SEC. 104. ELIGIBLE USE OF FUNDS.—Funds made available under this title shall be used for—

(1) the acquisition, new construction, reconstruction, or moderate or substantial rehabilitation of affordable housing for mixed income rental housing where the assistance provided under section 102 shall be used to assist units targeted to low and very low-income families, including the elderly and persons with disabilities;

(2) the moderate and substantial rehabilitation of rental housing units that are currently assisted under State or Federal low-income housing programs;

(3) the preservation of Federal and State low-income housing units that are at risk of being no longer affordable to low-income families;

(4) the purchase and creation of land trusts to allow low- and moderate-income families an opportunity to rent homes in areas of low-vacancy;

(5) conversion of public housing to assisted living facilities for the elderly;

(6) conversion of section 202 elderly housing to assisted living facilities for the elderly;

(7) conversion of HUD-owned or HUD-held multifamily properties upon disposition to housing for the elderly, housing for persons with disabilities and to assisted living facilities for the elderly;

(8) creation of sinking funds to maintain reserves held by State housing finance agencies to preserve the low-income character of the housing; and

(9) the creation of public/private partnerships in which corporations and nonprofits are encouraged to develop partnerships for the creation of affordable low-income housing.

SEC. 105. MATCHING REQUIREMENTS.—

(a) IN GENERAL.—Each State housing finance agency shall make contributions for activities under this title that total, throughout a fiscal year, not less than 75 percent of the funds made available under this title.

(b) ALLOWABLE AMOUNTS.—

(1) APPLICATION TO HOUSING.—A contribution shall be recognized for purposes of a match under subsection (a) only if—

(A) is made with respect to housing that qualifies as affordable housing under section 107; or

(B) is made with respect to any portion of a project for which not less than 50 percent of the units qualify as affordable housing under section 107.

(2) FORM.—A contribution may be in the form of—

(A) cash contributions from non-Federal sources, which may not include funds from a grant under section 106(b) or section 106(d) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 or from the value of low income tax credits allocated pursuant to the Internal Revenue Code;

(B) the value of taxes, fees or other charges that are normally and customarily imposed but are waived, forgone, or deferred in a manner that achieves affordability of housing assisted under this title;

(C) the value of land or other real property as appraised according to procedures acceptable to the Secretary;

(D) the value of investment in on-site and off-site infrastructure directly required for affordable housing assisted under this title;

(E) the reasonable value of any site-preparation and construction materials and any donated or voluntary labor in connection with the site-preparation for, construction or rehabilitation of affordable housing; and

(F) such other contributions to affordable housing as the Secretary considers appropriate.

(3) ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—Contributions for administrative expenses may not be recognized for purposes of this section.

SEC. 106. DISTRIBUTION OF ASSISTANCE.—Each State housing finance agency shall ensure that the development of new housing under this section is designed to meet both urban and rural needs, and prioritize funding, to the extent practicable, in conjunction with the economic redevelopment of an area.

SEC. 107. ELIGIBLE AFFORDABLE HOUSING.—

qualify for assistance under this title only if the housing—

(1) has not less than 30 percent of the units assisted under this title occupied by very low-income families who pay as a contribution towards rent (not including any Federal or State rental subsidy provided on behalf of the family) not more than 20 percent of the adjusted income of a family whose income equals 50 percent of the median income for the area, as determined by the Secretary, with adjustments for the number of bedrooms in the unit, except that the Secretary may establish income ceilings higher or lower than 50 percent of the median income for the area on the basis of the Secretary's findings that variations are necessary because of the prevailing levels of construction costs or fair market rents, or unusually high or low family incomes;

(2) except as provided under paragraph (1), requires all units assisted under this title to be occupied by households that are low-income families and who pay no more than 30 percent of 100 percent of the median income for an area; and

(3) will remain affordable under the requirements provided in paragraphs (1) and (2), according to legally binding commitments satisfactory to the Secretary, for not less than 40 years, without regard to the term of the mortgage or to the transfer of ownership, or for such period that the Secretary determines is the longest feasible period of time consistent with sound economics and the purposes of this Act, including foreclosure where the responsibility for maintaining the low-income character of the property will be the responsibility of the State housing finance agency.

SEC. 108. TENANT SELECTION.—An owner of any housing assisted under this Title shall establish tenant selection procedures consistent with the affordable housing expansion plan of the State housing finance agency.

SEC. 109. PROHIBITION ON USE OF FUNDS FOR SERVICE COORDINATORS OR SUPPORTIVE SERVICES.—No funds under this Act may be used for service coordinators or supportive services.

SEC. 110. PENALTIES FOR MISUSE OF FUNDS.—The Secretary shall recapture any assistance awarded under this Title to the extent the assistance has been used for impermissible purposes. To the extent the Secretary identifies a pattern and practice regarding the misuse of funds awarded under this Title, the Secretary shall deny assistance to that State for up to 5 years, subject to notice and an opportunity for judicial review.

SEC. 111. SUBSIDY LAYERING REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements of section 102(d) of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989 may be satisfied in connection with assistance, including a commitment to insure a mortgage, provided under this Title by a certification of a State housing finance agency to the Secretary that the combination of assistance within the jurisdiction of the Secretary and other government assistance provided in connection with a property assisted under this Title shall not be any greater than is necessary to provide affordable housing.

SEC. 112. MULTIFAMILY RISK-SHARING MORTGAGE INSURANCE PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall carry out a mortgage insurance program through the Federal Housing Administration in conjunction with State housing finance agencies to insure multifamily mortgages for housing that qualifies under this Title. This program shall be consistent with the requirements established under section 542 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1992, except that housing that meet the requirements of this Title shall be eligible for mortgage insurance.

SEC. 113. REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue notice and comment rulemaking with final regulations issued no later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 114. SUNSET.—Title I shall expire on October 1, 2001, except that all funds shall remain available until expended.

TITLE II—SECTION 8 VOUCHER SUCCESS DEMONSTRATION

SEC. 201. AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall establish a voucher success demonstration to permit public housing agencies to increase the payment standard for section 8 vouchers for an area in excess of the payment standard established under section 8(o)(B) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 to assist in helping low-income and very low-income families obtain housing in tight rental markets. Except as otherwise provided herein, all assistance provided under this Title shall be subject to the requirements of the United States Housing Act of 1937.

SEC. 202. ELIGIBILITY.—

(a) VOUCHER SUCCESS PLAN.—Not less than annually, each public housing agency that seeks to participate in the voucher success demonstration under section 201 shall submit to the Secretary a voucher success plan that—

(1) demonstrates that the market area for which the public housing agency is responsible is an area, based on housing market indicators, such as low vacancy rates or high absorption rates, where there is not adequate available and affordable housing or where families with vouchers will not be able to locate suitable units or use tenant-based assistance successfully;

(2) identifies a payment standard in excess of the payment standard established under section 8(o)(B) that will ensure that not less than 97 percent of families with vouchers will be able to obtain suitable housing in that market area within 120 days;

(3) describes actions that the public housing agency will take that will assist families with vouchers, including seniors and persons with disabilities, to identify and obtain suitable and available affordable housing that is close to transportation, employment opportunities, quality schools and appropriate services; and

(4) shall include such other information and commitments as deemed appropriate by the Secretary.

(b) INCREASED PAYMENT STANDARD.—The Secretary shall approve a payment standard for a market area under this demonstration to no more than 150 percent of the payment standard established under section 8(o)(B) of the United States Housing Act of 1937. This payment standard shall be published annually in the Federal Register and adjusted annually to reflect changes in each market area.

(c) PROCEDURES.—The Secretary shall establish requirements and procedures for the submission and review of voucher success plans, including requirements for timing and form of submission, and for the contents and approval of such plans.

(d) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue interim regulations no later than 3 months after the date of enactment of this Act with final notice and public comment regulations issued no later than 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

(e) SAVINGS CLAUSE.—A family using a voucher approved as part of a demonstration under this Title shall be eligible for an approved payment standard in excess of the payment standard established under section 8(o)(d) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 to the extent the assisted family continues to reside in the same housing in which the family was residing on the date in which the housing was determined eligible for the increased payment standard under this Title.

SEC. 203. LIMITATION ON FUNDING.—Except to the extent additional incremental vouchers are provided in appropriations Acts, for purposes of this section, each public housing agency shall be limited to the section 8 funds allocated to that public housing agency as of October 1, 2000, including appropriate amounts for reserves, for purposes of implementing the voucher success plan.

TITLE III—PRESERVATION OF LOW-INCOME HOUSING AND MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

SEC. 301. SECTION 8 PROJECT-BASED FLEXIBILITY.—Section 8(o)(13) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 is amended by—

(1) in paragraph (A)(ii), striking ''15 percent'' and inserting in lieu thereof ''25 percent''; and

(2) adding the following new paragraph (E) to the end:

''(E) The Secretary shall establish expedited procedures to allow public housing agencies to enter into housing assistance payment contracts with respect to existing structures.''.

SEC. 302. DISPOSITION OF HUD-HELD AND HUD-OWNED MULTIFAMILY PROJECTS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall maintain any rental assistance payments attached to any dwelling units under section 8 of the United States Housing Act of 1937 for all multifamily properties owned by the Secretary and multifamily properties held by the Secretary for purposes of management and disposition of such properties. To the extent, the Secretary determines that a multifamily property owned by the Secretary or held by the Secretary is not feasible for continued rental assistance payments under section 8, the Secretary may, in consultation with the tenants of that property, contract for project-based rental assistance payments with an owner or owners of other existing housing properties.

SEC. 303. FAMILY UNIFICATION PROGRAM.—Section 8(x)(2) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 is amended by—

(a) striking ''any family (A) who is otherwise eligible for such assistance, and (B)'' and inserting in lieu thereof: ''(A) any family (i) who is otherwise eligible for such assistance, and (ii)''; and

(b) inserting before the period at the end: ''(B) for a period not to exceed 18 months, youths who have attained at least 18 years of age and not more than 21 years of age and who have left foster care at age 16 or older''.

SEC. 304. PERMANENT EXTENSION OF FHA MULTIFAMILY MORTGAGE CREDIT DEMONSTRATIONS.—Section 542 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1992 is amended—

(1) by revising subsection (b)(5) to read as follows:

''(5) INSURANCE AUTHORITY.—Using any authority provided in appropriation Acts to insure mortgages under the National Housing Act, the Secretary may enter into commitments under this subsection for risk-sharing units.'';

(2) by revising subsection (c)(4) to read as follows:

''(4) INSURANCE AUTHORITY.—Using any authority provided in appropriation Acts to insure mortgages under the National Housing Act, the Secretary may enter into commitments under this subsection for risk-sharing units.'';

(3) in the heading, by striking ''Demonstrations'' and inserting ''Programs'';

(6) in subsection (b)(1), by striking ''determine the effectiveness of'' and inserting ''provide'';

(7) in subsection (c)(1), by striking ''test the effectiveness of'' and inserting ''provide'';

(8) by striking subsection (d); and

(9) by striking ''pilot'' and ''PILOT'' each place it appears.

This Act may be cited as the ''Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act, 2001''.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The committee substitute is agreed to. The Bond-Mikulski amendment is agreed to.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The amendment (No. 4306) was agreed to, as follows: (The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under ''Amendments Submitted.'')

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, as comanager, I am pleased to present to the Senate, H.R. 4635, the VA–HUD appropriations bill for fiscal year 2001, as reported from the Committee on Appropriations.

This is an unusual year. We have offered, and it has been accepted, a managers' amendment that I have offered with my distinguished colleague, Senator MIKULSKI, which will replace the Senate committee-reported text of H.R. 4635.

This compromise amendment was worked out in agreement with Senator MIKULSKI, Congressman WALSH, Congressman MOLLOHAN, and me in consultation with the administration. This is an unusual and far from perfect situation. It is not the way I would normally prefer to proceed with the passage of the VA–HUD appropriations bill. Nevertheless, we have worked hard to develop a comprehensive package that considers the concerns of all colleagues in both the House and Senate. It also met the test for approval by the administration. I strongly believe that the proposed compromise language strikes the right balance in funding the programs under the jurisdiction of the VA/HUD Appropriations Subcommittee.

The managers amendment/compromise agreement totals some $105.8 billion, including some $24.6 billion in mandatory veterans benefits. This represents some $1.1 billion over the Senate committee-reported bill and almost $1 billion less than the budget request. Outlays are funded at some $110.7 billion for fiscal year 2001, $540 million over the Senate committee-reported bill of $110.2 billion. The bill meets our current funding allocation, per the Budget Committee.

We also did our best to satisfy priorities of Senators who made special requests for such items as economic development grants, water infrastructure improvements and the like. Such requests numbered several thousand, illustrating the level of interest and demand for assistance provided in this bill.

We also attempted to address the administration's top concerns, including funding for 79,000 new housing vouchers, as well as record funding for EPA at $7.8 billion.

Before going into the details of the compromise agreement, I would like to commend my ranking members, Senator MIKULSKI, and her staff for their cooperation and support throughout this process. We would not have reached agreement as quickly, nor attained as good a result, without her active help. She is a vitally important part of this operation. I am deeply grateful for her help, guidance, and counsel.

To turn to the elements of the bill: For Veterans Affairs, the proposed compromise language to VA/HUD FY 2001 appropriations bill includes funding for VA that totals $47 billion, including $22.4 billion in discretionary spending. Veterans needs remain the highest priority for this bill, and compared to the President's request, this bill has an additional $54.7 million.

The compromise includes $20.28 billion for VA medical care, $1.4 billion more than the current level, and $351 million for research, an increase of $30 million above the budget request level for this key program which helps ensure the best quality of care to our veterans and keeps the best doctors in the VA system.

The VA/HUD fiscal year 2001 appropriations compromise also includes about $180 million more than the President's request for VA medical care by including a provision that will ensure VA will not be penalized from collecting less in new receipts authorized under the 1999 Millennium Act.

In addition, the compromise includes a new Title V, Filipino Veterans Benefits Improvements, which provides benefits to Filipino veterans who fought alongside American soldiers in World War II and who live in the United States, equal to those benefits provided to U.S. veterans of World War II. This is a long overdue remedy of inequitable treatment of Filipino veterans. We thank our colleagues on the Veterans' Affairs Committee for their agreement and assistance in including this provision.

For HUD, the VA/HUD fiscal year 2001 appropriations compromise appropriates some $30.6 billion, approximately the same as the budget request. This includes a section 8 rescission of some $1.8 billion in excess section 8 funds. This funding includes all the funding needed to renew all expiring section 8 contracts and also provides funds for 79,000 incremental vouchers, an administration priority.

The public housing capital funding is increased by $45 million above the budget request in fiscal year 2001 to $3 billion. Similarly, the public housing operating funding has been increased by $50 million above the budget request in fiscal year 2001 to $3.242 billion.

In addition, CDBG and HOME funds have been increased by $150 million each in fiscal year 2001 with CDBG at $5.057 billion and HOME at $1.8 billion, respectively. These are important block grant programs which rely on decisionmaking guided by local choice and need. I also hope these funds are used as an investment in housing production to meet the increasing affordable housing needs of low-income families. Staff work in this subcommittee has shown one of the serious problems facing us is lack of affordable housing.

In addition, the VA/HUD appropriations bill for fiscal year 2001 funds section 202 elderly housing at $779 million, the budget request, and section 811 housing for disabled persons at $217 million, $7 million over the budget request. A separate account has been created at $100 million for the renewal of expiring shelter plus care contracts.

This bill includes a number of noncontroversial HUD administrative provisions, whereas we have dropped, at the request of the Senate Banking Committee, a new housing production program for extremely low-income families and a provision that would have provided favorable treatment under FHA for municipal workers such as teachers, firemen, and police.

We also have maintained a provision that would increase the amount of section 8 assistance available to PHAs for project-based assistance from 15 percent to 20 percent with a limitation that no more than 25 percent of the units in a building can be project-based, except in the case of seniors, disabled persons and scattered site housing as well as a provision that would require HUD to maintain section 8 projected-based assistance on a HUD-held or HUD-owned multifamily housing projects where the project is elderly or disabled housing unless that housing is not viable. These are important provisions that focus on local decisionmaking and local housing needs.

For EPA, the VA/HUD fiscal year 2001 appropriations compromise includes a record $7.8 billion for EPA, plus an additional $138 million for the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry, and the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences which traditionally have been funded under EPA's appropriation and are funded separately in this bill. Thus, compared to the budget request, the compromise will provide an additional $686 million more than the President and about $400 million more than fiscal year 2000.

Additional funds of $550 million above the budget request have been provided for clean water state revolving funds as well as additional funds of $12 million for section 106 water quality grants—$57 million above the fiscal year 2000 level to help states meet future total maximum daily load requirements.

Compared to last year, the compromise increases operating programs by $246 million including an additional $20 million for the climate change technology initiative voluntary programs and protection of all core programs.

The compromise does not fund new, unauthorized programs such as clean air partnerships or Great Lakes grants which would detract from EPA core responsibilities.

With respect to legislative issues, the compromise bill includes the fiscal year 1999 bill with report language relative to the Kyoto Protocol. The proposed report would provide up to an additional 6 months for finalizing the arsenic-in-drinking water rule, and the bill modifies the so-called Collins-Linder provision on ozone nonattainment designations which would allow EPA to make designations once the Supreme Court decides this case but not later than June 2001.

These so-called EPA riders are primarily report language which we believe are fair and reasonable compromises on issues where there are broad questions and we need to bring some resolution. While everyone may not agree with these decisions, we have worked hard to balance the decisions associated with this account to the overall benefit of EPA policy and funding needs in consultation with and agreement with the administration.

For FEMA, the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the VA–HUD appropriations bill for 2001 appropriates a total of $936.8 million for FEMA and includes an additional $1.3 billion in disaster relief contingency funds. With the disaster relief funds provided here, coupled with contingency funds already on hand, funding will be sufficient to meet fiscal year 2001 disaster relief operations.

Most notable in FEMA funding is the addition of $30 million above the Senate- or House-appropriated levels for emergency food and shelter, for a total of $140 million. This popular program results in temporary housing and food assistance to thousands of needy individuals with very little overhead costs.

For the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the VA–HUD appropriations compromise funds NASA at $14.285 billion instead of $14.035 billion, for an increase of $250 million. This account includes $5.46 billion for human space flight, which is $37 million below the administration request for fiscal year 2001. This reduction reflects a NASA request for a reduction in this account in order to provide full funding for the Mars 2003 lander program.

The funding includes $6.19 billion in fiscal year 2001 for science, aeronautics, and technology, instead of $5.93 billion as requested by the administration, an increase of $261 million above the budget request. Included in this is $20 million for Living with a Star and $290 million for the space launch initiative, including $40 million for alternative access to the space station initiative. In addition, mission support is funded for fiscal year 2001 at $2.6 billion, instead of $2.58 billion, an increase of $24.7 million over the budget request.

For the National Science Foundation—and this is a very important area for the ranking member and me—the VA–HUD compromise funds NSF at $4.43 billion, a $529 million increase over the fiscal year 2000 enacted level and $146 million below the President's request. Funding highlights include $215 million for information technology research, $150 million for nanotechnology, and $65 million for plant genome research. Lastly, to assist smaller research institutions, $75 million was included for EPSCoR, a $20 million increase over last year's level, and $10 million for the Office of Innovation Partnerships.

We believe very strongly the scientific exploration in space needs to be spread broadly throughout the land to ensure we achieve inclusion of knowledgeable and dedicated scientists at institutions which may not traditionally have received funding in the past.

I consider NSF a priority account that needs additional funding in order to pace U.S. leadership in science and technology. Senator MIKULSKI and I have heard from leading scientists in this country who say that we are falling behind because we are not providing enough funding for the National Science Foundation. Medical doctors who depend directly upon the research work done at the National Institutes of Health have come to us and said that we must bring NSF funding up to NIH funding because so many of the health breakthroughs on which NIH is working depend upon the support the National Science Foundation provides.

Senator MIKULSKI and I have launched an effort to double the NSF budget. We have circulated a letter and have a significant number of colleagues who have joined with us. We will be back. We will be asking the full Senate to recognize a priority in the National Science Foundation and help get us on that path for the next year.

Finally, for the National Service Corporation, the VA–HUD fiscal year 2001 appropriations compromise appropriates $458 million, a $25 million increase over last year's level and $75 million below the budget request. Further, $30 million will be rescinded from excess funds in the National Service Trust.

The compromise also funds the Community Development Financial Institutions Fund at $118 million, a $23 million increase over last year's level and $7 million below the request.

I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I begin by thanking my colleague, Senator BOND, as well as our colleagues Senator BYRD and Senator STEVENS, for enabling us to move our bill forward. I particularly express my appreciation to Senator BOND for his collegial and civil way of including me in all discussions related to both the funding and policy that we developed in this bill. His courtesy and collegiality are very much appreciated.

I believe today the bill we present takes care of national needs and national interests. I am also confident that it will be signed by President Bill Clinton because it takes care of the day-to-day needs of the American people and at the same time looks forward to helping with the long-range needs of our country to remain competitive and on the cutting edge of science.

This bill has always been to me about five things: meeting our obligations to our veterans—promises made, promises kept; investing in our neighborhoods and our communities promoting self-help; creating real opportunities for people to move from welfare to work, to make sure that public housing is not a way of life but a way to a better life; and, of course, advancing science and technology, the new ideas that lead to the new jobs and the new products. It is also about protecting consumers from fraud and scams and communities from floods and disasters.

I believe we meet the goals in this bill, and we have done it in a fiscally prudent way. While I support the bill, the process has left much to be desired; again no fault of Chairman BOND but really the Senate has placed us in a very awkward situation.

The bill before the Senate today is a managers' substitute for the Senate bill. This is effectively our conference report. We did not have a conference report, though we met. We had kind of a chatroom where we would meet and try to iron out our differences. We did. It also involved OMB and the White House for consultation. We wanted to be sure both sides of the aisle would support the bill. We also wanted to be sure that the President would sign the bill. I believe we achieved this.

I say to my colleagues, it will be absolutely crucial, in order to move this bill with this unique parliamentary situation, to have no amendments to this legislation. My colleague from California, Senator BOXER, will offer two amendments. I am going to oppose them. I am going to oppose them both on procedural and substantive grounds. On procedure, if the Boxer amendments prevail, we will have enormous difficulty reconvening and working with the House to pass this bill. I just put that out.

Though we had an unofficial conference, I do believe we were able to move forward. Senator BOND has outlined in detail what we were able to do financially. I am so glad we worked together on a bipartisan basis, particularly in the area of veterans health care, joining hands, scrutinizing the budget and then the appropriations to make sure that veterans health care will be funded $1.4 billion over last year's level.

We also want to look ahead to be sure, while we are taking care of the men and women who bear the permanent wounds of war, we do the medical research, to find the cures for those things affecting our veterans population. This legislation provides $350 million for medical and prosthetic research, $30 million over last year. I have seen the work at my own University of Maryland and know that people will live longer, live better, and recover more quickly because of the funding for veterans health care research which also goes into the civilian population.

Also, we have added more money, $100 million, for State veterans homes. This is to provide long-term care and rehabilitation, which is very crucial. It means the Federal Government does not bear the sole burden, the State governments do not bear the sole burden, and, most of all, our veterans do not bear the sole burden. This unique Federal-State partnership will meet the long term and rehab needs of our veterans.

In addition, we have paid attention to the day-to-day needs of our constituents in Housing and Urban Development.

We want to make sure the people of the United States of America, who are out there working every day but who are also part of the working poor, have help with housing. We have been able to create 79,000 new vouchers to help working families find affordable housing. Unfortunately, we do not have enough housing to meet their needs.

Senator BOND led a very vigorous effort, which I supported, as did the authorizers on my side, to start a production program. We were derailed from that, but we did not want to be detoured from the bill, so we put that aside for another year. But we really call out to our authorizers, please, pass a production bill that will generate jobs in construction and meet the needs of our citizens.

Where I think we also worked very closely together is in helping the elderly and disabled. We have provided $780 million for housing for the elderly. It is more than last year. It also helps with assisted living and service coordinators to be able to help people keep as independent as long as they can, and to even develop new models of care.

At the same time, we looked out for those who are disabled and the special AIDS population. But we wanted to also remember not only the ''H,'' which is housing, we wanted the part called urban development. But we also know so many of our constituents live in rural areas. So we looked to see how we could increase the ability for local decisionmaking. That is why we funded community development block grant money and a program called HOME at much more than last year, because it goes right to cities, communities, and neighborhoods. Whether you are in a small rural town in Missouri or a big city such as Baltimore, community development block grant money and HOME will be of great help to you.

But we are about promoting self-help. That is why we continued to stay the course in providing funds for empowerment zones, again recognizing rural needs and also promoting home ownership. That is why we help the homeowners by extending the FHA downpayment simplification program for another 25 months. So we looked at how we could create opportunities at the local level.

Another area where we have strong bipartisan support within the committee and by its chairman and ranking member is to make sure that America continues to lead the way in science and technology. Therefore, I am so pleased that we are funding the National Space Agency at $14.3 billion, $250 million above the President's request. Quite frankly, I think NASA needs a lot more because they have been severely cut over the years, but fiscal prudence won. At the same time, we wanted to make sure that we were fiscally prudent, that our shuttle will be safe, our space station will be ready, and that we will move ahead on a vigorous space science program, such as the Living With A Star Program that will be done at Goddard Space Flight Center in my own community.

The National Science Foundation is also a very important, crucial program. The national science program, as Senator BOND has said, really does promote the basic research that goes into our country. It has been a star. It has been almost flat-lined for several years while we tried to balance the budget. This is why this year they will receive a $520 million increase over last year's enacted level.

One of the areas which we will be also advocating is a field called nanotechnology. You have heard of a nanosecond. It is because it is small. But let me tell you, the nanotechnology is the next generation past this infotechnology. You have seen the biotech revolution and the infotech revolution, but wait until the nanotech research gets underway. We are going to have new products, new materials. We are going to be able to have a supercomputer the size of my ring.

We will be able to take little pills, that will literally have diagnostic equipment, that will be able to go through our bodies, giving immediate responses to our physicians. This is going to be extraordinary. I am so pleased to be part of what we are doing.

At the same time, we want to call forth young people to continue the call for service. That is why I am so pleased we continued to stay the course on national service, with a modest increase.

One of the things we have done in national service is add something called E-Corps. As many of my colleagues know, I have been a strong proponent to make sure we do not have a digital divide in this country, meaning that young people have access to technology and access to know how to use technology. What we are creating in this legislation is having E-Corps volunteers to train and mentor not only the children but community leaders and librarians and others who will be teaching our children.

Last, but not at all least, we joined hands to protect the environment. We have increased funds for the environment, whether it is the clean water revolving fund, small watershed programs to restore rivers and streams, or having full funding of the Chesapeake Bay program. I believe the environment will be stronger and better protected by the resources that we have put in this bill.

Now, yes, there are riders. I don't go for riders. None of us go for riders. But we were in a very difficult situation with the bill. We took the language that was being proposed by the House, working with the office of OMB—the President's own—and the Council on Environmental Quality that advises the President on the environment. They were in the room to help us really identify the appropriate language that could meet the policy objectives of those who advocated it without shackling EPA or hurting communities.

I will say more about that during the debate. But I will tell you, regardless of how you feel about the riders, they were acceptable to the President's Council on Environmental Quality.

To be more specific, Mr. President, I am especially pleased that we were able to provide a significant increase in funding for veterans health care. We met the President's request of $20.2 billion and are $1.4 billion above last year's level. This will help us ensure that promises made to our veterans are promises kept, and that our veterans get the health care to which they are entitled.

We were also able to provide $351 million for medical and prosthetic research. This is $30 million above the budget request and last year's level.

The VA plays a major role in medical research for the special needs of our veterans, such as: geriatrics, Alzheimers, Parkinson's, and orthopedic research. Our veterans are not the only ones who benefit from this research—our entire nation does, especially as America's population continues to age.

We are also providing $100 million in funding for state veterans homes. This is $40 million above the budget request and $10 million above last year's level. The state homes serve as long-term care and rehabilitation facilities for our veterans.

We were also able to provide over $1.6 billion for the Veterans Benefits Administration, which will help them administer benefits to our veterans more quickly.

I am also very pleased that we were able to include a new title in our bill that will provide benefits to Filipino veterans who fought alongside Americans in World War II and who live in the United States.

Finally, our Filipino-American veterans will receive equal benefits for equal valor.

We were able to take care of America's working families in this bill as well, by funding housing programs that millions of Americans depend upon.

Our bill provides almost $13 billion to review all expiring section 8 housing vouchers. And we have included $453 million in funding to issue 79,000 new vouchers, to help working families find affordable housing. This is 19,000 more than we were able to fund last year.

We included provisions to make it easier for public housing authorities to provide more project-based assistance to increase the stock of affordable housing, instead of just vouchers.

As many of my colleagues were aware, a production bill was under serious consideration during the conference. It was a modified version of Senator BOND's housing production bill that was included in the original Senate bill. Unfortunately, we were forced to drop this provision due to objections from the authorizing committee, but I hope we will re-visit the issue next year. We were also able to maintain level funding for other critical core HUD programs.

We provided $779 million for housing for the elderly, which meets the President's request and is $69 million more than last year. This includes funds for assisted living and service coordinators. We also provided $217 million in funding for housing for disabled Americans, which is $7 million above the President's request and $23 million over last year's level.

Homeless assistance grants received a $5 million increase and are funded at $1.025 billion.

We were able to provide both the Community Development Block Grant Program and the HOME Program with $150 million increases. CDBG is funded at more than $5 billion, and HOME is funded at $1.8 billion. The CDBG Program is one of the most important programs for rebuilding our cities and neighborhoods.

We also provided increased funding to help our neighborhoods and communities through the HOPE VI Program, which helps demolish and then revitalize distressed public housing sites. This year, we provided $575 million for HOPE VI, the same as last year's level.

I am pleased that we were able to provide funding for other programs that help America's communities. We increased funding for empowerment zones by providing $90 million in this bill and increased funding for CDFI—Community Development Financial Institutions Fund.

Funding for empowerment zones will help designated areas with economic development and social services. Community involvement in the empowerment zone initiative will prove especially beneficial.

We also help homeowners by extending the FHA downpayment simplification program for 25 months.

As I said, I am extremely pleased that our bill fully funds NASA at $14.3 billion, an increase of $250 million. This funding exceeds the President's request for NASA. All of NASA's core programs are fully funded and all of our centers are fully funded, including the Goddard Space Flight Center in my home State of Maryland.

The VA–HUD bill includes $1.5 billion for Earth science, more than $2.5 billion for space science, including funding for the Mars polar lander, and $20 million to start an exciting new program called ''Living With A Star,'' which will study the relationship between the sun and the Earth and its impact on our environment and our climate. It will help us predict and protect against solar storms that can disrupt our energy and communications systems.

I am especially proud that this program will be headquartered at the Goddard Space Flight Center.

NASA science programs are critical not just for science, but for technology. With NASA technology, we can create new jobs and literally save lives, while developing a greater understanding of how our universe works.

I fought hard to make sure that this funding was included in this manager's amendment.

And, of course, in the area of human space flight, we fully fund the space shuttle upgrades, space station construction, and fully fund the new ''Space Launch Initiative'' to find new, low-cost launch vehicles that will reduce the cost of getting to space.

The VA–HUD manager's amendment also increases funding for the Corporation for National Service.

The House bill cut funding for the Corporation for National Service, but I made it a priority to restore it in the Senate bill and in conference.

The corporation is funded at $458 million, a $25 million increase over last year's level.

The Corporation for National Service has enrolled over 100,000 members and participants across the country, in a wide array of community service programs, including: AmeriCorps, a national service program that helps communities, learn and serve America, which supports service-learning programs across the country by providing funding and training, and the National Senior Service Corps, which helps seniors get involved in their communities.

As many of my colleagues know, I have been very concerned about the digital divide in this country.

I introduced legislation called the Digital Empowerment Act to provide a one-stop shop and increased funds to local communities trying to cross the digital divide.

I am pleased that this bill contains $25 million within the national service budget to create an ''E-Corps'' of volunteers who will bring technology skills to people who have been left out or left behind in the digital economy, by training and mentoring children, teachers, and non-profit and community center staff on how to use computers and information technology.

With regard to the EPA, our bill provides $7.8 billion in funding, plus an additional $138 million for the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry, ATSDR, and the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, NIEHS.

All together, this is an increase of $400 million over last year's level, and $686 million more than the President's request.

We increased funding by $246 million for EPA's core environmental programs, including a $38 million increase for nonpoint source pollution control grants, and a $20 million increase for the climate change technology initiative.

We also provided an additional $550 million for the clean water state revolving fund. Taking care of the infrastructure needs of local communities has always been a priority for the VA–HUD Subcommittee.

We have fully funded the Chesapeake Bay, Great Lakes, and Long Island Sound Programs, and provided $1.25 million for the Chesapeake by small watershed grants program, a $500,000 increase over last year's level, that will help our small communities around the Bay watershed prevent runoff and pollution.

Legislatively, the bill includes the FY 1999 bill and report language regarding the Kyoto Protocol, provides up to an additional 6 months for finalizing the arsenic-in-drinking-water rule, and includes a weaker version of the Collins-Linder provision on ozone.

There is no language on the diesel sulfur rule. However modified report language has been included regarding dredging and invasive remediation.

I am a strong supporter of FEMA, and am proud that we have provided $937 million in funding for FEMA, plus an additional $1.3 billion in emergency disaster relief funding.

The National Science Foundation is funded at $4.43 billion, a $529 million increase over last year's enacted level, and one of the largest increases in NSF's history.

This funding level will keep America at the forefront of science and technology into the next century in infotech and bio-tech, and is an important step towards holding onto America's science and technology base.

This is a downpayment toward our goal of doubling the NSF budget over the next five years.

I am especially pleased that we were able to provide $150 million for the new nanotechnology initiative. We were also able to provide $215 million for information technology, and well-deserved increases for several of NSF's education and human resources accounts. These include a $10 million increase over the budget request for informal science education, nearly $20 million for graduate fellowships in K–12 education, and over $55 million for graduate research fellowships.

Mr. President, I once again appreciate the cooperation of my colleagues throughout this process. While I regret that this year's process was highly irregular, I am pleased that we worked together to bring a conference agreement to the Senate floor. I believe this year's VA/HUD bill is good for our country, our veterans, and our communities.

Mr. President, before I conclude my statement, I really want to thank Senator BOND and his staff, Jon Kamarck, Cheh Kim, and Carolyn Apostolou, for all the work they did, and also my own staff, Paul Carliner, Sean Smith, and Alexa Mitrakos, for helping us really move this bill, and, most of all, to move America forward.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BUNNING). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4307

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, on behalf of the Democratic leader, I call up amendment No. 4307 and ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Maryland [Ms. MIKULSKI], for Mr. DASCHLE, proposes an amendment numbered 4307.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under ''Amendments Submitted.'')

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I yield back all time on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I heard the number, but what is the bill? What does it do?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the language of S. 2900 as reported.

Mr. BYRD. Is this the language of the Senate, of the bill that was reported from the committee?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. BYRD. So it is the Senate-reported bill and carries the Senate title?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the language, but it doesn't carry the title.

Mr. BYRD. It carries the Senate number.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, if the Senator will withhold, I just asked unanimous consent that this amendment be called up and yielded back time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct. The Senator from Arizona does have the time. He also has time on the bill.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I know the Senator has time.

Mr. MCCAIN. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Maryland until she completes this business.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I thank the Senator from Arizona.

Does Senator BYRD intend to speak?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I do not intend to take the time of the Senate at this point.

I thank the distinguished Senator from Arizona.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I thank the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. President, I urge that the amendment be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arizona wish to speak before the amendment is adopted?

Mr. MCCAIN. Since the Senator from Maryland had already embarked on this parliamentary movement, I will yield until that is completed and then speak after that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 4307.

The amendment (No. 4307) was agreed to.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion to reconsider.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the amendment.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask for a division.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia asks for a division. As many as are in favor of the amendment will rise and remain standing until they are counted. (After a pause.) Those opposed will rise and stand until counted.

On a division, the amendment was rejected.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I thank both Senator BOND and Senator MIKULSKI for their hard work on this important legislation which provides federal funding for the Departments of Veterans Affairs (VA) and Housing and Urban Development (HUD), and Independent Agencies. Once again, though, I find myself in the unpleasant position of commenting on the process of bringing these spending bills to the Senate floor and on the spending items that have not been appropriately reviewed.

This task is even more necessary for this bill because of the truly unique process by which it arrived on the Senate floor—a process that increasingly empowers appropriators while disenfranchising many of my colleagues.

Let me comment on the process that has brought us to the point in time where we are about to vote on final passage of this bill. First, let me explain how the appropriations process is supposed to work. In the normal process of passing appropriations bills, an appropriations bill is first passed in the House of Representatives, then the Senate passes its own version. A conference committee is formed to iron out the differences between the two different bills, resulting in a conference report. Then the conference report is passed by both the House and the Senate, and sent to the President for his signature in order to become law. That sounds fairly straightforward.

In the case of this bill, we have decided to substitute the normal process of considering appropriations bills for a highly questionable approach to passing legislation.

The process we have decided to undertake avoids substantive debate on the merits of this bill and to the larger question of whether we are spending taxpayers' hard-earned money wisely and responsibly. Just because it is late in the game does not give us the right to avoid the normal process of appropriations. The Senate is being asked to pass the bill despite the fact that there was only one copy made available to each side and many Senators did not have adequate time to review its contents. How can we make sound policy and budget decisions with this type of budget steam-rolling?

Let me be clear about what is occurring today. This VA–HUD bill that we are voting on is a so-called ''composite compromise,'' cloaking the reality that we would normally be calling a VA–HUD conference report. The Appropriations leadership intends to take up the House-passed version of this year's VA–HUD Appropriations bill, substitute a Senate managers' amendment written by the House and Senate Appropriations Committees which for all practical purposes is a conference agreement—a conference agreement, not open to public inspection, not done through the normal legislative process, such as appointing conferees or allowing full disclosure of the issues being discussed. This process will allow the Appropriators to simply insert a ''Committee Statement'' into the record outlining certain questionable spending priorities that will ultimately be paid for by the American taxpayer. This ''composite compromise'' will then go to the House so that they can quickly pass the amended bill and then send it to the President for his signature.

Is that the way to pass legislation? As legislators, we have been entrusted by the American taxpayers to represent the fiscal interests of them and their nation. The American taxpayer is counting on us to use their hard-earned money wisely and here we are, manipulating the budget process so that we can say we did something and go back home to campaign.

Unfortunately, Mr. President, the budget process games began long before this bill.

When the conference report on Legislative Branch Appropriations bill first came to the floor for debate and a vote last month, the appropriators decided to insert the Treasury and General Government appropriations bill into it. Rather than having the Treasury and General Government Appropriations bill considered separately as it is usually done, to be debated on its own merits, the appropriators' actions decided to circumvent the normal budget process. This so-called ''minibus'' was soundly defeated and rightly so.

When the conference report on the Transportation Appropriations bill was brought to the Senate floor for a vote, the appropriators did not even provide a copy of the report for others to read and examine before voting on the nearly $60 billion bill. The transportation bill itself was only two pages long with the barest of detail—with actual text of the report to come later.

And yet, the appropriators were expecting Senators to vote yes on legislation that could not even be read, deciphered, and debated intelligently? How is this type of action accountable to all the hard-working Americans who demand that all their tax dollars are wisely spent? I worry that these budget games we play serve to reinforce their cynicism about politics.

Mr. President, the budget process can be summed up simply: no debate, no deliberation, and very few votes. Mr. President, this is no way to run the United States Senate.

To date, only two of the thirteen appropriations bills have become law. Of those remaining, three bills—Labor, HHS, Education, VA–HUD, and Treasury-Postal—were never brought to the Senate floor for debate as part of a deliberate strategy to prevent votes on any controversial amendments that my colleagues may have offered. Extraordinary measures are being employed to drive these spending bills through Congress. The only winners in such an arrangement are the appropriators. The rest of us, including our constituents, are, for all intents and purposes, shutout of the process.

Mr. President, by adopting this budget strategy, we do a disservice to our constituents by not squarely facing tough issues, whether it's school choice, gun control, campaign finance, minimum wage, gambling, or HMO reform, and engaging in debate—even in the heat of an election season where both sides of the aisle are maneuvering for maximum political advantage. These are important issues. They deserve to be debated and each deserves an up or down vote.

Moreover, we have an obligation to ensure that Congress spends the taxpayer's hard-earned dollars prudently to protect the projected budget surpluses. The American public cannot understand why we engage in a process that continues to spend huge amounts of money without adequately balancing this spending against our nation's most urgent present and future needs. Spending from this budget process has been on automatic pilot. We have already exceeded the budget caps by over $30 billion, consuming, so far, about one-third of the on-budget surplus for FY2001—and we have yet to pass all of the appropriations bills. This byzantine budget process precludes serious discussion about how our projected budget surpluses should be devoted to national priorities such as saving Social Security, providing much needed tax relief, paying down the national debt, or addressing other major priorities.

But more is lost beyond the throttling of debate, the profligate spending of taxpayers' dollars, and the broken budget process.

Since 1960, the percentage of voters participating in the general presidential election has dropped nearly 15 percent, reaching below the 50 percent mark four years ago. Today, voter apathy, especially among the youth of America, is widespread. Even more disheartening is the fact that too many Americans, when asked to rank the people in the different fields from highest regard to lowest, consistently rank our profession near the bottom. Poll after poll continues to show an undercurrent of cynicism toward our governmental institution. As I previously mentioned, budget games like the one we have witnessed in the last few weeks contribute to this cynicism.

We can still seize the reform mantle and learn from this budget morass when the doors of the new Congress open in January. We need new reforms in the way we address the budget process. Perhaps we should even consider the radical step of abolishing the Appropriations Committees. Too many programs are without authorization. We also should study whether the authorizers should also be the appropriators, to build more accountability into the process.

There are many other reforms we should consider next Congress if we are to spare Congress' reputation from further damage and begin to repair the people's respect for this Government.

The Washington Post yesterday had an article by Dan Morgan, ''As Last Bills Leave Station, Lobbyists Grab Tickets.''

> With only a handful of bills remaining to be signed into law before Congress adjourns, well tailored business lobbyists for elite corporations have descended on Capitol Hill to plead for dozens of special provisions in a Washington ritual with billions of dollars at stake.

Mr. President, on October 6, the Senate passed the conference report on the bill H.R. 4475, which funds the Department of Transportation and related agencies. At the time, I included for the RECORD a list of examples of pork barrel spending contained in the Transportation conference report. But because the list of pork barrel was so long and so extensive I was unable to publish the full list in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. For those who wish to view the list in its entirety, please visit my website: http://mccain.senate.gov and click the ''pork barreling'' logo at the bottom.

We are also legislating on these appropriations bills. Huge and vital interests are being legislated in smoke-filled rooms in the darkest corners of this Capitol. These lobbyists are out there and they are doing damage to the national interest by getting their special interests represented in appropriations bills which have never been debated or discussed on the floor of either House.

That is wrong, Mr. President. Nobody knows how much overspending there will be. Some say as much as $45 or $60 billion.

There is an article today, I believe in the USA Today, that shows we are spending the surplus. We are all talking about how we will use the surplus. Yet we are spending it now. We are spending the surplus. We are putting into law entitlement programs that will spend even more.

There are some very interesting CBO studies and others by outside watchdog organizations that indicate this much ballyhooed and very optimistic view of our budget surplus is being eroded as we speak by this appropriations process.

I urge my colleagues to look at these bills, to look at the spending in it, to look at the legislation that is going on. We are abrogating our responsibilities to the taxpayers by voting on bills that we have neither seen nor read.

I hope we can make some sense out of this. The train wreck that is about to occur is the worst that I have seen in all the years I have been in the Congress. I don't think it helps us in the eyes of the American citizens, to say the least.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, with respect to this bill, it is a very frustrating exercise, as Senator MCCAIN said. One of the problems is we have a practice around here of combining bills in such a way that while you want to vote for part of it, you want to oppose the other part. It makes it very difficult to make your decision about whether you will vote yes or no.

I wrote to the Appropriations Committee chairman when I first came to the Senate and asked to ''de-attach'' some of the bills. The bill before the Senate is the VA-HUD bill. Everybody wants to vote for the veterans programs, and because of the way those programs are structured this year, I support those programs. I want to be able to vote for those programs.

As usual, when it is combined with the runaway spending in the HUD part of the bill, it makes it impossible to do so. It is exacerbated this year as a result of the tactics of the minority. We have not been able to bring bills to the floor, and we have not been able to send them to the President. The result is we have had to combine a bunch of bills at the end of the session, and we find we have to combine the energy and water appropriations bill with the VA-HUD appropriations bill.

The problem, as bad as it is in the first instance, is exacerbated. I voted for the energy and water appropriations bill. While there are programs in that bill that I don't support overall, it was an important and good bill. I supported what Senator DOMENICI was trying to do in that legislation, by and large, so I voted for it.

The question is what to do now in a bill, the VA-HUD bill, which is increasing at a huge rate, and which now has the energy and water bill attached to it. I can't pick and choose. I can't take the veterans part out and say I support that, but I don't support the rest of it. I can't take the energy and water part out and say, I support it but I don't support the rest of it. It is not a good way to legislate, as Senator MCCAIN said.

I point out, there are good things in the bill. Veterans health care is increased by 6.5 percent, from $19 billion to $20.3 billion. The account for prosthetic and medical research, a relatively small account but very important, will receive a modest increase. There are some important projects in the NASA account that will receive necessary funding. I support that part of the bill.

How can I support a bill which has exploded funding in the HUD part of it? The VA part of this bill increases spending by 7 percent. Now, that is an important and significant increase. But the social programs under the HUD part of this bill have increased by 18 percent.

I have heard it said when we add up all the spending bills this year, it will be more than any other year in modern history, including the Great Society. We are increasing these social programs in the HUD part of the bill by 18 percent. The earmarking has exploded. We have not seen the final list, but we know it is up to at least $292 million, up from $123 million in the committee-passed bill, and $240 million from last year. That is too much. We have funding in here for everything from renovating theaters to restoring carousels. This is not something the Federal Government needs to be doing.

Finally, there is language in the Senate report that suggests that some of my colleagues are wavering from a commitment that has been made by the Senate and the House to ensure that the allocation of veterans health care funds reflects the reality of where veterans live.

Four years ago, under the leadership of Senator MCCAIN, Congress implemented the Veterans Equitable Resource Allocation System. This was done at the request of the Veterans' Administration. Up until then, the formula that VA used did not take into account shifts in population that are relevant in assessing where resources are needed. In particular, we found in Arizona a lot of so-called snow birds, those great folks who live in the cold States and come down to visit Arizona in the wintertime because it is warmer in Arizona. We didn't have the facilities to take care of all of those people because the dollars associated with their care were allocated to the Northeast primarily, or to the North.

The Senate, therefore, voted overwhelmingly to implement this new system that let the dollars follow the patients, so to speak. That vote was 79–18. Yet some who benefited from the earlier faulty formula complained, and as a result we find language in here that will require a study. The money for this study is going to have to come from the health care that otherwise would be provided to veterans.

I don't believe the way the language in the report is written the investigators are going to have a fair approach to this because of the one-sided list of items they are to explore.

I want to be able to support the veterans part of this bill. I want to support the energy and water component of this legislation, but it will be very difficult considering the explosive growth in the HUD part of the bill.

I commend the chairman of the committee, Senator BOND, and Senator MIKULSKI. They have an impossible task. Everybody comes to them with requests. The bottom line is we have to draw the line at some point. It seems to me this is the point at which the American taxpayers deserve to be represented.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized to offer an amendment.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent I be allowed 2 minutes of additional time to talk about the situation in the Middle East.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank Senators MIKULSKI and BOND for their graciousness. I know they are anxious to move their bill forward. I also thank them and Senator DASCHLE and Senator LOTT for receiving an agreement with me, whereby I could offer these very important amendments to this appropriations bill.

(The remarks of Mrs. BOXER are located in today's RECORD under ''Morning Business.'')

AMENDMENT NO. 4308

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California (Mrs. BOXER), for herself and Mr. BAUCUS, proposes an amendment numbered 4308.

(Purpose: To strike the riders that delay the Environmental Protection Agency's new standard on arsenic in drinking water and that prohibit the designation of nonattainment areas under the Clear Air Act)

On page 103, strike the first three lines.

On page 138, strike section 427.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, may I ask if we can have a copy of the amendment?

Mrs. BOXER. Certainly. I say to my friend that it is a very simple amendment. It strikes two riders. We will send it over to the Senator at this time. It doesn't have any language. It simply strikes two of the riders.

Mr. President, will you please tell me when I have 5 minutes remaining of my time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, my amendment strikes two egregious anti-environment riders that have been attached to this appropriations bill. These riders are opposed by 21 environmental groups.

There is a letter on everyone's desk from the League of Conservation Voters. They consider this to be extremely important.

We also have another letter that came in this morning signed by the most respected environmental groups in the country supporting both of my amendments.

We will try to put these on the desks. I will go through the groups in a moment.

Twenty-one environmental groups oppose these riders. They say they believe these riders would ''jeopardize public health or the environment.''

The first rider deals with arsenic in drinking water. Let me take a moment to explain why I think this rider should be stricken. In the Safe Drinking Water Act Amendment of 1996, which the Senate approved unanimously, we told the EPA to update its drinking water standard for arsenic by January 1, 2001. We included this provision in the law because we learned from public health experts that the current standard for arsenic is severely dangerous and outdated. The standard was set in 1975, but it was based on public health data from 1942.

What do scientists and health experts say about the dangers of arsenic? According to a National Academy of Sciences report, arsenic in water is known to cause cancer of the lungs, skin, and bladder. The National Academy of Sciences study and other studies also found that arsenic in drinking water may cause kidney and liver cancer. Arsenic is also known to cause other severe problems, including toxicity to the central and peripheral nervous system, hypertension, cardiovascular disease, skin lesions, and could cause birth defects and reproductive problems.

Here is the national shocker. The National Academy of Sciences estimates that 1 in every 100 people who drink water containing arsenic at the current standard may well develop cancer caused by arsenic. This is a cancer risk that is 10,000 times higher than the cancer risk EPA allows in food.

The National Resources Defense Council analyzed EPA's base data, and they looked at 25 States serving approximately 100 million Americans. They found that approximately half of those Americans are drinking water with arsenic levels that could cause 1 in 100 of them to develop cancer.

The arsenic levels in those systems meet the EPA's outdated 50 parts per billion standard. As the NAS has said, the outdated standard ''does not achieve EPA's goal for public health protection and requires revision as promptly as possible.''

Let me repeat that. This is science. They base these rules on science. The sciences say set the standard at a lower level as soon as possible.

In this rider we push the date back. It is a delay. I think it is a dangerous delay.

The EPA has been working on this new standard for a long time. They have held numerous public hearings. Actually, they have been working on updating the standard since the early 1980s.

It is time to do this. The EPA was told by Congress to move forward by January 1, and now this rider was slipped into this bill.

I know my friends believed at the time that these riders were not that much of a problem. Whoever told them that—and I was not in the room—I believe was wrong. They are proven wrong by science. They have been proven wrong.

Call me old fashioned, but I think when you play around with the arsenic levels in drinking water, it deserves to have the light of day. It should not be attached to some rider. I am the ranking member on the subcommittee on the Environment. My chairman of the full committee is here, Senator BAUCUS. We are working hard to make sure that drinking water is safe. Yet we push back the date. That is not the right thing to do.

I appreciate my friends giving me 15 minutes of time, and I am going to give Senator BAUCUS about 5 minutes of that time when he is ready. I have saved 5 minutes.

This is no way to legislate on an issue such as arsenic.

In closing, before I yield my time to my friend, I want to talk about the other part of this amendment which deals with another egregious rider that has to do with clean air. The clean air rider is very important. It essentially would prohibit EPA from designating new regions of the country as being in violation of smog standards. In other words, it is a gag order on EPA, telling them they cannot, in fact, tell communities their air is dirty. This is a fact.

I do not understand, again, why we would be doing this. There is a court case pending on the power of the EPA. It specifically says in that court case that EPA has the right to designate these areas and to tell people in these areas they are not meeting the smog standard. Administrator Browner made a very strong comment about this rider in the past.

I ask how much time I have remaining.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 8 minutes remaining.

Mrs. BOXER. What I would like to do at this time is yield 3 minutes to my friend, Senator BAUCUS, and 2 minutes following to my friend, Senator LAUTENBERG. Then I would have 3 minutes remaining, which I would retain.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator would have 3 minutes.

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I thank my good friend from Maryland, Senator MIKULSKI—I worked with her on this bill—and also Senator BOXER for offering these amendments.

I strongly support Senator BOXER in her efforts to delete these provisions. Not only do they intrude upon the jurisdiction of the Environment and Public Works Committee, they are clearly legislation. Our committee was not consulted. The Appropriations Committee is now writing legislative language in an appropriations bill. It also is very unsound public policy.

One of these riders, the so-called Linder-Collins provision, is really an attack on the public's right to know. The provision prohibits the Environmental Protection Agency from identifying those areas which do not the meet the 8-hour standard ozone pollution provision until next June. In other words, even if the EPA knew an area had unhealthy air, it could not tell citizens or their government.

Since my time is so limited, I will not speak more on that issue. Senator BOXER will, and I believe other Senators will, too.

I also want to speak a bit on the other one, and that is the arsenic provision. The other rider postpones EPA's final rules on arsenic standards for drinking water for 6 months. This is very important. This is yet another unhealthy delay that could expose Americans to unnecessary danger. Why do I say that? First, arsenic is a poison. We now know it is also a carcinogen. So it is an especially serious contaminant in drinking water.

Get this. The current standard for arsenic was written in 1942, before we knew that arsenic causes cancer. Then, in 1996, Congress completed a comprehensive rewrite of the Safe Drinking Water Act. We put some common sense into the act, some risk assessment, some additional funding for the States. We also put in place a plan to resolve the remaining scientific issues.

As a result of the scientific study done by the National Academy of Sciences, we learned that arsenic is even more deadly than previously thought. NAS found:

> There is sufficient evidence from human epidemiological studies . . . that chronic ingestion of inorganic arsenic causes bladder and lung cancer as well as skin cancer.

The study also said the current standard should be revised downward ''as promptly as possible.''

Furthermore, when the Environment and Public Works Committee had a hearing on the matter, in response to a question, Dr. Michael Cossett, a member of the NAS group who studied the arsenic issue, said:

> Our committee specifically in its conclusions felt that the standards should be lowered as promptly as possible.

He went on to say that the current standard certainly was not protective of public health.

Yet we have this anti-environmental rider. It is further delay in protecting the American public from better arsenic standards. I cannot understand it. I think it is very bad public policy, and I strongly urge Congress to delete these provisions which, if not deleted, are going to cause serious harm to the American public.

Mr. President, earlier today we had a discussion about the arsenic rider. I want to assure Mr. BOND and Ms. MIKULSKI that although the minority committee staff was notified about the intention to pursue this rider, they objected to its inclusion. I just want to be sure the RECORD accurately reflects what occurred.

I yield the remainder of my time to my friend from California.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, time is short. I will try to get to the point very quickly.

I support Senator BOXER's amendments to this VA–HUD appropriations bill. I want to point out one thing. Under the leadership of Senators BOND and MIKULSKI, the bill our subcommittee reported last month was far better than the one before us today.

What we see today with these riders that have come over from the House side of the Capitol is delayed corporate responsibility. That is what these amendments ought to be called: Just take care of the corporations and forget about our obligation to our people to protect us from contaminated, polluted environments.

One of these amendments is there because it is strongly supported by General Electric, an extremely powerful corporation. I like General Electric. I know a lot of the people who run that company. But they have, according to the League of Conservation Voters, polluted 200 miles of New York and Connecticut coastline with a million pounds of PCBs. Their slogan is: ''Bring Good Things To Life.'' We have heard it. I would rather have them say: ''Bring Good Life To Things,'' like fish and birds and people. That is where they ought to be.

I commend Senator BOXER for bringing up this amendment. I hope our colleagues are going to support it.

This is a good bill, other than this part. Again, I commend Senators BOND and MIKULSKI for a very tough job well done. But we ought not let the corporations escape getting on with their responsibilities.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. I would like to retain my 3 minutes if I might, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri now has 15 minutes.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Very briefly, this bill includes the provision that provides up to an additional 6 months for EPA to finalize the arsenic in drinking water rule. They can finalize it before June 2001 but will not be held to the statutory deadline. And EPA does not anticipate finalizing the rule until April or May, despite the act's requirements. The practical effect of knocking this out would be to force EPA to spend its resources fighting in court to do what it cannot otherwise do, and that is take the time necessary to do the job right.

The Safe Drinking Water Act called for a full year of comment. The full year would be up June 2001. The most conservative estimates of compliance, including EPA's, for the smallest communities show water rates increasing by hundreds of dollars per family.

The State of Utah Department of Environmental Quality says the rate increase to remove arsenic from the Heartland Mobile Home Park would be $230 per month per customer. Even the EPA said it would be $70 per month per customer.

Do you know what is going to happen? No system. They are going to be off the system. There will be no water. They will get it from sources that are not protected at all.

This is a very important rule that needs to be worked out scientifically. EPA has not identified the specific level in drinking water below which there is not a significant risk to public health.

On the ozone nonattainment designation, it seems to me completely unreasonable that EPA should be making designations when that standard is before the U.S. Supreme Court. Why do the EPA and the State expend resources giving communities a black eye by designating them nonattainment areas when the entire ability to designate may be repealed by the Supreme Court? The EPA would be allowed, under this legislation, to move forward when the Supreme Court acts but no later than June 2001.

Do not blacklist communities before there is a statutory authorization. The National Association of Counties has said this process will brand hundreds of new counties across the country clean air violators resulting in lost jobs and lost economic opportunity.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ALLARD). The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. BOND. I yield 5 minutes to my distinguished colleague from Maryland.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I oppose the Boxer amendment on arsenic in drinking water, and I urge my colleagues to vote against it.

This amendment is not needed, and its adoption will effectively kill this bill.

Let me be clear about what we did.

In our negotiations with the House, bill language was added that allows EPA to take until June 22, 2001 to issue a final rule setting the allowable level of arsenic in drinking water.

EPA remains free to issue the final rule anytime up to June 22, 2001.

This provision was carefully negotiated with the administration.

It does not prevent, prohibit or restrict EPA's ability to issue a final rule for arsenic in drinking water.

Since EPA missed the deadline for proposal of this rule, this extension from the current January 1, 2001 statutory deadline would allow EPA the same length of time—12 months—to consider public comments as contemplated in the Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments of 1996.

This provision is fully consistent with the Safe Drinking Water Act.

Our provision maintains all of the protections for public health and safety.

If it didn't, I would not support it.

This is not a debate about arsenic in drinking water.

We all agree that arsenic in drinking water should be reduced or eliminated consistent with science based public health standards.

This is a disagreement over process, not substance.

Let me be very clear, the language contained in the VA/HUD bill is permissive and does not prevent EPA from issuing the regulation earlier than June 2001 if EPA is prepared to promulgate the final rule.

Also, public interest groups would still be allowed to file suit next June if EPA misses the revised deadline—just as they can now.

No one's rights or privileges have been taken away.

Our provision on arsenic simply moves a date. It poses no threat to public health or the environment.

It is fully consistent with the Safe Drinking Water Act, and it maintains EPA's full authority.

I point out to my colleagues that this bill contains $825 million for the safe drinking water revolving loan program.

This is EPA's main program to upgrade and improve our Nation's public drinking water systems.

Overall, our bill provides $3.6 billion for all clean water programs—a $200 million increase over last year and, over $700 million more than the President's request.

If the Boxer amendment is adopted, it will kill this bill and jeopardize the funding increases for our clean water programs.

If this bill dies, there is no guarantee that we will be able to maintain our current level of funding.

The administration supports our provision, and I urge my colleagues to vote against the Boxer amendment.

Mr. President, I oppose the Boxer amendment on ozone nonattainment and I urge my colleagues to oppose it.

This amendment is not needed and should it pass, it will effectively kill this bill.

The administration supports the provision in our bill, and I urge my colleagues to support it and vote against this amendment.

Let me be clear about what the ozone nonattainment provision in the VA/HUD bill does.

The provision prohibits EPA from issuing new ozone nonattainment designations until June 15, 2001, or until the Supreme Court issues its ruling in this matter, whichever comes first.

The administration was involved in the negotiations over this provision and they support it.

I believe this provision is a matter of common sense. It makes no sense to issue new nonattainment designations, just to have the Supreme Court invalidate them.

That will do nothing more than confuse State and local governments and undercut EPA's authority and credibility.

I want to point out to my colleagues, that during our negotiations with the House, the language was modified to allow final designations to occur as soon as the U.S. Supreme Court rules on the ozone standard case, rather than waiting until June 15, 2001.

Depending on the Supreme Court's decision, this would potentially allow EPA to proceed with final designations several months earlier than under the original language.

This provision does not weaken the Clean Air Act, it does not threaten the Clean Air Act and, it does not undercut EPA's authority.

Our bill language does not preclude EPA from taking preparatory steps leading up to the final designations.

After the final designations are made, States have 3 years before they have to begin implementing their plans for achieving the new standard.

The additional time provided by this bill language, being tied to the Supreme Court process, minimizes any delay in moving forward with any clean air plans and acknowledges the uncertainty created by the ongoing litigation.

Our bill provides $209 million for State air assistance grants to help states meet Clean Air Act requirements.

If the Boxer amendment passes, the VA/HUD bill will be killed and funding levels that it contains will be in jeopardy.

I urge my colleagues to vote against the Boxer amendment and support the administration.

Mr. President, in summary, I oppose the Boxer amendments both on the issue of substance and procedure. No. 1, everybody complains about the process. Nobody complained about it more than BOND and MIKULSKI. We wanted to bring our bill to the floor, have a vote by the Senate, and go into a conference that was open and public. We were denied that.

Because we were worried about the homeless, because we were worried about veterans, because we were worried about the environment, we pressed on in a quasi-conference. BOND and MIKULSKI were united to delete the riders, but we lost. The House would not yield.

We then went to a fallback position because, again, we are worried about the homeless; we are worried about the veterans; we are worried about the environment and the National Service Corps, and all that is in this bill. When we negotiated, I invited into the room OMB—with the concurrence of my Republican colleagues—who brought in the Council on Environmental Quality. The President's chief adviser on the environment was on the phone with the legal counsel at EPA. We did not make this up.

I thought I was proceeding on safe grounds because of the advice I received from the Council on Environmental Quality. I say to my Democratic colleagues: Do you believe in a letter from 21 groups or do you believe in President Clinton's Council on Environmental Quality? The choice is there. Do you believe the advocacy analysis or President Clinton's analysis? I go with President Clinton because I believe there is a track record on protecting the environment.

What about arsenic? It does not shackle anybody. It delays it by 6 months. Under the current law, EPA must give the regs by January 2001. They can issue them at any time up to 2001. EPA retains its authority and its flexibility to issue the regs any time, but it removes the old deadline. Why do we do this? So small rural communities can have time to get EPA information, cost, and other things they are going to need to comply.

Let's go to the ozone. That court case is before the Supreme Court of the United States. It is not going through some small court. It is in the Supreme Court. They are going to decide it in June. The Court term ends in June. This language will no longer apply once the Court issues its ruling. Also, the language becomes moot in 2001.

Why was this language added? To prevent EPA from making new attainment designations and then have the Supreme Court invalidate them. We are saying, let the Court act and move on. At the same time, EPA is allowed to go on with its own planning process. Once the Supreme Court acts, EPA is good to go.

We are not shackling anybody. We are not stymying anybody. I believe in each of these instances there is flexibility to meet the compelling needs of public health. If they did not have that, I would not have supported it. If President Clinton's own team did not tell me it was OK to do this, I would not have done it.

I stand on the advice we were given, and I believe the advice is accurate, responsible, and reliable. I urge my colleagues to defeat the Boxer amendments.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Maryland. I yield 3 minutes to the junior Senator from Idaho.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The junior Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, I thank Senator BOND and Senator MIKULSKI. As chairman of the Fisheries, Wildlife and Drinking Water Subcommittee, I rise today in strong opposition to the amendment to prevent the EPA from having the time necessary to produce a proper arsenic drinking water rule based on the available science. It is important to note that in 1996 this Congress directed the EPA to adopt a specific schedule to propose an arsenic standard to allow for a full year of public review and comments by scientific experts and then to implement a rule after taking into consideration those comments.

That is what is at stake. It is important to follow up on what Senators BOND and MIKULSKI have said about what this amendment really does. It has been characterized as stopping the EPA from protecting us from arsenic problems.

The reality is that all this amendment does is give the EPA up to an additional 6 months to complete its work. In fact, I am quite surprised to see this amendment today because the administration itself has said they do not have the ability to meet the statutory deadline, and they need this extra time to make sure the rule they adopt is scientifically justified and does not cause the immense damage to local small communities in rural areas that is of concern.

We have held hearings on this issue in our subcommittee, and witness after witness has raised questions about whether the science is there to justify the direction in which the EPA is going. The EPA has acknowledged these questions. The EPA has said it needs time to further review the science, and the EPA has said it will take that time if we give it to them to do a good rule that will protect the country and yet not do damage to small communities in rural areas.

It is also important to note that this amendment does not stop the EPA from acting at any time the EPA deems it is ready to act. If the EPA says it has the process finalized, it has the science understood and is ready to proceed, they can proceed tomorrow, they can proceed in November or December or January when the statutory deadline exists. Again, the EPA has told us they are not ready to do so and that they need this extra time. We believe they need the extra time because of the impending damage that could be caused to local communities across this country.

As Senator BOND has said, there are communities and individual families who will see their water bills go up by hundreds of dollars. There are communities that probably will have to go off their systems because of this. The potential damage if we do not give the EPA the time to act properly and to review the comments is immense, and that is why I must oppose this amendment. I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I reserve the time that has been allocated to various Members. I now allocate 3 minutes to the distinguished senior Senator from Idaho.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The senior Senator from Idaho is recognized.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—CONFERENCE REPORT TO ACCOMPANY H.R. 4205

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, on behalf of the leadership, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the DOD authorization conference report following the consideration and vote on H.R. 4516 on Thursday; that the conference report be considered as having been read and debated under the following agreement: 2 hours under the control of the chairman of the Armed Services Committee; 2½ hours under the control of Senator LEVIN; 1 hour under the control of Senator GRAMM; 30 minutes under the control of Senator WELLSTONE; that following the debate just outlined, Senator BOB KERREY be recognized to make a point of order, and that the motion to waive the Budget Act be limited to 2 hours equally divided in the usual form. I further ask unanimous consent that following the use or yielding back of time on the motion to waive, the Senate proceed to vote on the motion and, if waived, a vote occur immediately on adoption of the conference report, without any intervening action, motion, or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. REID. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, this is the agreement we have been attempting to work out for the last day. This is something Senator WARNER and Senator LEVIN have worked on very hard. It is a good bill. We, on this side, think the agreement is something that will be to the benefit not only of the Senate but the country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I thank the chairman of my subcommittee for yielding.

I say to the Senator from California, her amendment is a perfect example of no good deed goes unpunished. I say that to the Senator from California for this very simple reason. This language has been worked out with all of the parties, and all of the staffs, with the administration, and with the EPA. While they do not like it, they understand their science, and where they are does not justify, at this time, the kind of regulation they are attempting to bring down.

From the State of the Senator from California, let me read from the Indian Wells Valley Water District. This is a water district of 10 to 12 wells, wells that, meeting the current standard proposed by EPA, would cost this water district $1 million per year—a 60- to 70-percent cost increase in their operations.

What happens when Government goes silly or crazy based on science they have not substantiated, in highly mineralized areas, where arsenic is present in water supplies, is that they drive up costs, and ultimately they collapse these little water districts and everybody goes out and drills their own wells to supply their own household water and then an even greater problem exists.

We are talking about cost per speculative cancer case—cost per speculative cancer case.

If the amendment of the Senator from California prevails, that cost per speculative cancer case goes to $5 million per speculative case.

I do not think that is good policy. I know the science isn't there yet to justify it because the word ''speculative'' is the word EPA uses in suggesting these dramatic reductions in arsenic levels.

I do not want to destroy rural water systems. Neither does this subcommittee. My colleague from Idaho spoke very clearly about the real live impact if this amendment were to prevail. Across this country, small independent water districts cannot nor could not comply without a cost of several hundred dollars more per month added to the cost of a water bill.

This is not good policy. I do not even think it is good politics.

Let me repeat: No good deed will go unpunished according to this amendment because we have been working collectively together to solve this problem, recognizing the phenomenal importance of the water quality to all citizens in this country.

Energy and Water, as an authorizing committee, has acted responsibly. While the ranking member might suggest that staff or they were not consulted, that is simply not true. They were thoroughly involved and consulted on this issue. This is a compromise. It does not shut down the process, as has clearly been spoken to by my colleague from Idaho, Senator CRAPO. So I hope the Senate will recognize that.

Let us not rush to judgment, nor let us not get into the speculative business of driving up costs of water and, therefore, allowing people to go out and drill their own wells and even create a more dangerous water structure for small rural communities.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's 3 minutes have expired.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. KERRY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of debate on the two amendments under the previous order, I be permitted to speak on the VA-HUD bill for 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KERRY. I thank the Chair.

Mr. BOND addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, we reserve the remainder of our time on these amendments. I believe the chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee is on his way over.

What time do we have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri has 2 minutes, and the Senator from California has 3 minutes.

Mr. BOND. I thank the Chair. We reserve our time.

Mrs. BOXER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I want to respond to my colleagues directly on a number of points that they made. These two riders should be deleted. It is bad process. I think that has been spoken to a number of times. And it is really bad policy. I think that has been spoken to as well.

I say to my dearest friend, Senator MIKULSKI, who has worked so hard on this bill—and it means everything to her—how much I support her bill but for these riders. I want to tell her how I feel.

I do not think that all wisdom resides in Washington. I think I am quoting the Republican candidate for President. I do think these 21 groups are phenomenal. I do trust them. The National Resources Defense Council, the Sierra Club—maybe they do not always agree with every one of us, but they spend their lives on these issues. I do respect them. And I do think that they can. I am really glad it looks as if they are going to count these votes as an important vote on their scorecard.

But I do want to say if CEQ were in the room and some others from the administration—I know it to be fact, and it is true —I just do not happen to agree with them. I will tell you who was not in the room, who was not even given the courtesy of a phone call, Senator Max BAUCUS, who is the ranking member on Environment and Public Works. I will tell you who else was not in the room, Senator MOYNIHAN, who supports my dredging amendment. I think a phone call from the administration, if you will, to those folks would have been in order to find out how we feel about these anti-environmented riders. So we are very disappointed.

I say to my friend, Senator CRAIG, who has left the floor, he calls it ''silly science'' to talk about a lower standard for arsenic. Here is the silly science. I have to tell you, taxpayers pay the National Academy of Sciences to produce this study on arsenic in drinking water. This isn't silly science. This is what they said:

> This outdated standard does not achieve EPA's goal for public health protection and, therefore, requires revision as promptly as possible.

So what did we do? We did the opposite. We delayed the date.

The Senator mentioned a water district in California. That is why we have a waiver in the Safe Drinking Water Act, for those small communities, a waiver so they will not have hardship. That is why we have a State revolving fund which, by the way, is funded in this bill. It needs more attention. It needs more help.

But I have to say, again—and call me as old-fashioned as you want; maybe it is because when I was a kid I saw ''Arsenic and Old Lace''—but I can tell you right now, the science is clear. It is not silly; it is not foolish. This is very dangerous. We have to do something about it.

To say this is a rush to judgment when we have been having hearings on the standard since the 1980s, we all know what it is about. It is about a delay. It is the hope that the new administration may not be as tough.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All the Senator's time has expired.

Mrs. BOXER. I ask unanimous consent for 30 more seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. So I would sum up this way. We have a gag order in front of us in the rider that deals with EPA not being allowed to tell people they live in a dirty air district. It is for people to know that exposure to smog decreases lung function. It hurts our children with asthma, and it leads to emergency room visits. The courts have said clearly—and I have a direct quotation from the court—the court said: EPA has the right to tell people the truth about the quality of their air. This rider overturns that court decision.

I hope we will have strong support for this amendment.

I thank my friends.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's 2 minutes have expired.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I inquire of the Senator from New Hampshire if he is ready to speak?

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Yes.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, just to correct the record, the staff of the ranking member on the Environment and Public Works Committee was consulted, was informed of this. This was not done without advice to them. That was just incorrect.

I now yield the remaining time on this side to the Senator from New Hampshire.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire has 1 minute 39 seconds.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. That is not much time to try to make my points here. But, look, this is one of those situations where you have an amendment, part of which I support and part of which I do not, which means I have to oppose it.

The clean air provisions that the Senator from California has outlined I can support. But it is unfortunate that I have to be here today, as the chairman of the committee, to choose to do something that this body chose to do 4 years ago in the Safe Drinking Water Act amendment.

It is worse that the only groups objecting to this language in VA-HUD are doing so because they stand to gain attorney's fees. I support the underlying managers' amendment by the Senator from Missouri. We are going to see wasteful litigation here, and it is wrong.

To put this in context would take more time than I have, but we all agree the standard on this should be reviewed. This is not a discussion about the standard. The arsenic standard needs to be reviewed. But due to the complexity and science that was needed to develop the standard, the Congress very clearly dictated a timeframe.

Congress directed EPA to propose a rule on January 1, 2000, and to finalize the rule on January 1, 2001. They made it clear we wanted to provide one year from the date of publication of a draft rule to publication of a final rule. EPA cannot meet this requirement right now, and we need to get this science. We need to draw all this in. That is what the managers' amendment allows for.

To go to litigation now means we will waste millions of dollars of taxpayers' money on litigation for no reason, and they are still not going to be able to meet the standard in spite of the litigation. It is absolutely ridiculous.

I encourage my colleagues to support Senator BOND and the managers' amendment on this issue.

To reiterate, I come today to talk about Senator BOXER's amendment to the VA HUD appropriations bill. Unfortunately, Senator BOXER has put two issues into her amendment. I support one and strongly object to the other. Due to that strong objection I will vote against this amendment.

On the arsenic provision, it is very unfortunate that I need to come down here today to defend what this body chose to do four years ago in the Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments. It is even worse that the only groups objecting to this language in the VA HUD appropriation bill are doing so because they stand to gain attorneys fees.

The provision on arsenic in the VA–HUD Appropriations bill does one thing: preserves the original intent of the Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments of 1996. While Senator BOXER's amendment does one thing—promotes wasteful litigation.

To put this into context let me explain the history and reality of the situation. The Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments of 1996 clearly outlined a need to review the standard for arsenic. We all agree the standard needs to be reviewed. This is NOT a discussion about the standard. I repeat, the arsenic standard needs to be reviewed.

However, due to the complexity and science that was needed to develop the standard, we the Congress, very clearly dictated the time frame for developing this rule. Congress directed EPA to propose a rule on January 1, 2000 and to finalize the rule on January 1, 2001.

The Congress also made it very clear that we wanted to provide one year from date of publication of a draft rule to publication of a final rule. The reason was to allow sufficient time for public comment and EPA review to finalize this very complex issue. Thus, the Congress stated that the final rule should be published on January 1, 2001, one year after the publication of the draft rule.

Unfortunately, the EPA missed the January 1, 2000 deadline to publish the draft rule by six months. There may be very good reasons for why EPA missed this deadline, but the fact is EPA missed the statutory deadline for publication by six months.

EPA provided 90 days to comment on the proposed rule, however it is my understanding that EPA will be having an additional comment period on information that became available after the original draft rule was published. So basically, we are not done with the public comment period EPA, less than three months from the statutory deadline to publish the final rule has not even received all the public comments.

What do these dates and missed deadlines mean? They mean, and EPA will agree with me on this, that there is no way that EPA will meet the January 1, 2001 statutory deadline to publish this final rule. In fact, EPA will probably not publish the final rule until late spring. I support EPA taking the time to consider all the stakeholders comments and the very complex information they have received. I support the original intent of the Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments to provide one year to finalize this rule. Especially, in light of the controversy this rule has brought on by a host of very credible institutions like the EPA Science Advisory Board that questions the EPA proposal. But that is not what we are down here today to talk about.

What happens unfortunately, is a host of groups will sue EPA on January 2, 2001 for not publishing the final rule. Everyone knows that EPA will miss this deadline, YET, these organizations will waste everyone's time and tax payer's money by bringing an unnecessary lawsuit. So what am I down here to discuss today? I am here to discuss: unnecessary attorney's fees, waste of tax payer dollars, and place a burden on the judicial branch.

To avoid those three issues, I support the arsenic provision in the VA–HUD Appropriations Bill. This provision would extend the deadline for finalization of the arsenic rule to no later than June 22, 2001. This provides the EPA one year to finalize the rule—exactly the same time frame as the Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments.

Why is this needed? Because this is a complex rule and the Congress realized that when they required EPA to take one year to finalize the rule. But just as important: we the Congress can make sure tax payers dollars are not wastefully spent on unnecessary judicial proceeding and attorney's fees.

Our constituents should not have to pay the price for the EPA's failure to follow the mandates of the Safe Drinking Water Amendments of 1996. This extension will have no impact on human health because it is completely consistent with EPA's time frame for finalizing the rule.

I am sure that is why the White House and the Council on Environmental Quality is not opposing this language.

Senator BOXER's amendment does absolutely nothing to protect human health. It only protects those environmental groups that want litigation will benefit. This is unfortunate because the litigation will produce the exact same outcome as this provision. However the litigation has consequences, it will produce: unnecessary attorneys fees, an unnecessary burden on the judiciary, an unnecessary burden on the EPA, and taxpayer dollars funding all of this. I cannot stand here and encourage unnecessary litigation. But I can proudly support the original intent of the Safe Drinking Water Act and allow EPA to take appropriate time to consider all the comments and information in proposing a final rule.

Now switching to the Clean Air Act issue. The motion to strike also contains language that touches on another one of those complicated Clean Air Act issues. I believe that this is exactly the type of thing that must be addressed by the committee of jurisdiction rather than through a rider.

Last year the Environment and Public Works Committee first addressed the issue of what limits were needed on the implementation of these air quality standards while the court was reviewing them. At that time, the committee was considering a bill to improve the transportation conformity provisions of the Clean Air Act. Senator INHOFE offered an amendment to deal with this matter and the amendment was adopted.

Even as the INHOFE language was accepted, there was discussion regarding how it might be improved prior to floor consideration. During the past few months, members of the Environment and Public Works Committee, and especially Senator INHOFE and Senator BAUCUS, worked hard to develop language that is now broadly supported—and included in this bill. The bill also contains controversial language on the same issue that came from a House appropriations bill and was not considered by the Environment and Public Works Committee. In fact, no authorizing committee in either body dealt with this language.

Mr. President, it seems to me that we are borrowing trouble by taking the House language because the language Senator INHOFE proposed speaks to precisely the same problem as the language Senator BOXER seeks to strike. We do not need both.

Let me briefly address the substance of the issue. As many Members know, the Supreme Court is currently reviewing the EPA's recently established air quality standards for smog and soot, ozone and particulate matter.

At the same time, implementation of the standards is proceeding. The EPA is required by law to identify areas that violate the standards, even though the court might throw the standards out. More importantly, designating areas as violating the standards triggers automatic requirements under the Clean Air Act. These include restrictions on highway construction and expanding or building new facilities that would emit air pollutants.

The problem we are trying to solve is that these requirements may be triggered and then the standards could be overturned, leading to planning chaos for many states. Senator INHOFE's language would delay the effective date of the automatic requirements under the Clean Air Act to allow time for the Supreme Court to act. The language from the House bill that Senator BOXER seeks to strike would bar the use of funds for making determinations about what areas would violate the standards; thus preventing the triggering of the automatic Clean Air Act requirements.

So we have two ways of skinning the same cat. Senator INHOFE's approach has bipartisan support and is the work product of members of this body's authorizing committee. The House language is controversial and has not received consideration from any authorizing committee.

The House language is controversial because many people believe that the air data collected by the states should be analyzed by the EPA and made public no matter what happens to the standards in the courts. Also, the limit on the use of funds could delay implementation in the event that the Court upholds the standards.

I believe that the Senate should recognize and reward the effort that Senator INHOFE has made to eliminate unnecessary conflict over this issue. I support the language in the bill developed by the Senator from Oklahoma.

If the motion by the Senator from California to strike the House language was not attached to the arsenic issue, I would support the Senator in her motion, and I would encourage the entire Senate to do the same. Because the arsenic matter is the overriding concern for me, I must oppose the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized to offer a second amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 4309

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mrs. BOXER], for herself, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. MOYNIHAN, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. KERRY, and Mr. LEVIN, proposes an amendment numbered 4309:

(Purpose: Expressing the sense of the Congress regarding the cleanup of river and ocean waters contaminated with DDT, PCBs, dioxins, metals and other toxic chemicals)

At the appropriate place, add the following:

SEC. . (a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) more than one-eighth of all sites listed on the Superfund National Priorities List are river and ocean water sites where sediment is contaminated with PCBs, dioxins, DDT, metals and other toxic chemicals;

(2) toxic chemicals like PCBs, dioxins, DDT and metals tend to be less soluble, and more environmentally persistent pollutants;

(3) toxic chemicals like PCBs, dioxins, DDT and metals polluting river and ocean sites around the nation may pose threats to public health, safety and the environment.

(b) SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.—It is the sense of the Congress that the Environmental Protection Agency should move swiftly to clean up river and ocean sites around the nation that have been contaminated with PCBs, DDT, dioxins, metals and other toxic chemicals in order to protect the public health, safety and the environment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I wanted the amendment read because I think it is a pretty clear statement of what we ought to be doing; that is, expediting the cleanup of the Superfund sites.

To respond to Senator BOND, the staff of Senator BAUCUS has informed me that they received one call and they objected to the riders. They don't believe Senator BAUCUS was ever called personally. We are going to check on that because I do want the record clear on it.

I ask unanimous consent that Senators MOYNIHAN, SCHUMER, and KERRY be added on as cosponsors of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I strongly oppose report language included in this conference agreement that will delay the cleanup of waters contaminated with toxic pollutants such as DDT and PCBs. We tried to work with my colleagues to change this language. We were unable to be successful.

The language will remain in because you can't strike report language, but we have a sense of the Senate that is very clear. Basically the operative language, which was just read by the clerk, is:

It is the sense of the Congress that the Environmental Protection Agency should move swiftly to clean up river and ocean sites around the nation that have been contaminated with PCBs, DDT, dioxins, metals and other toxic chemicals in order to protect public health, safety and the environment.

The report language included in this bill—remember, this is an appropriations bill—prohibits the EPA from cleaning up river and ocean sites that are contaminated with these horrible pollutants until the National Academy of Sciences completes a study or until June of 2000, whichever comes first. That isn't the worst of it. The worst of it is, we believe this language opens up a whole new loophole, which is really going to mean we are going to have many more court suits. I will get to that in a minute.

We think this language could delay the cleanup of at least six Superfund sites nationwide. One of them happens to be in California. The report language that is extremely troubling, which we were unable to remove, requires EPA to ''properly consider the results of the NAS study'' before moving forward on the cleanup of these sites. Anyone who knows anything about litigation knows a lawyer will have a field day with the phrase ''properly considered.''

What does that mean? You must properly consider before you move ahead with a cleanup? You could have a whole year discussing what that means, and that is exactly what the polluters are going to do. They are going to haul this Government into court just to try to get out of their responsibility. It will give polluters a hook to get into court and to litigate.

I want to talk about a site off the Santa Monica Bay, the Montrose site.

Mr. President, will the Chair inform me when I have 5 minutes remaining of my time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will do that.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank the Chair.

The Montrose Chemical Corporation holds the distinction of being the largest producer of DDT in the world. That is not a great distinction since we know what a poison DDT is.

It discharges tons of DDT through storm sewers into the ocean off the Palos Verdes peninsula, and 100 tons of it sits on the ocean floor there.

DDT is classified as a probable human carcinogen. It is thought to have severe liver and neurological impacts, and it has also recently been identified as a chemical which may promote breast cancer.

We know DDT is causing harm to the ocean, i.e. Santa Monica Bay, because the DDT goes up through the food chain where it reaches the bald eagles. Of course, we know those bald eagles were brought to the brink of extinction by DDT, and we know it causes the eagle eggs to thin and to fail to successfully hatch. EPA estimates it will cost $150 million to restore the ocean where that dump is.

The report language, in our strong opinion, with legal authorities across this country, tells us that it would prohibit the EPA from cleaning up this site until the NAS report comes out. And then even after that, Montrose will go back into court. Mind you, they have already spent $50 million fighting the cleanup. Their position is: Let the DDT just sit there. Don't cap it off. Don't do anything. In the meantime, it is poisoning the environment there.

I don't understand why we do these things. When I talk to my constituents, their eyes roll. Arsenic, DDT, PCBs, these are not good things. If we could agree on one thing around here, it would be to get rid of them. We do everything we can to help people who are good actors to clean up their act, if they made a mistake. We have a State revolving fund.

It stuns me that in this century we are still arguing over cleaning up arsenic out of the water, cleaning up DDT that is harming wildlife.

As to this argument by Montrose that they should do nothing, imagine how strongly they feel. They have spent $50 million in order to do nothing. Why didn't they spend the $50 million cleaning up the site, and we would be rid of the DDT; we wouldn't have this poison moving up the food chain.

What we hope to achieve—and we hope the managers will support this—is a very simple sense-of-the-Congress amendment. It is so clear. What we say is: Look, we can't get your language out of the report. We understand you don't want to make changes because you don't want to go back to conference. All we are saying is, let's stand firm together. Let us pass the sense of the Congress. I will reiterate it, and then I will save my 5 minutes. I am hopeful others will come to the floor.

It is the sense of the Congress that the Environmental Protection Agency should move swiftly to clean up river and ocean sites around the nation that have been contaminated with PCBs, DDT, dioxins, metals and other toxic chemicals in order to protect health, safety and the environment.

Now, my colleagues say nothing in this bill would harm that. I hope, therefore, they will support this amendment. I think it is very important.

Mr. President, I will take an additional 30 seconds to say Senator LEVIN wants to be added as a cosponsor. Senator BAUCUS was not personally consulted by anyone on this matter. That is clearing up the record, straight from Senator BAUCUS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri is recognized.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I am sorry we have to get into this little battle over who said what and who said what, when where, and why. Let it be clear that we on both sides made our best efforts to assure that everyone was advised. Twice, Mr. Tom Sliter, a staffer on EPW, was notified and discussed this with my assistant, Ms. Apostolou. He also, I understand, participated in a briefing conducted by Mr. Carliner of the minority staff.

Not everybody agreed with all of those things, and we never said that we had 100-percent agreement. We don't get 100-percent agreement, but we do extend the courtesy to all of the Members who are interested to let them know what we are doing and give them an opportunity. I am sorry to get into this, but when it was said that we did this without notification in an attempt to hide this, that is absolutely wrong. That is an unfortunate and unfair slam at our staff. I do not intend to let it stand.

The next point I will make, just to call it to the attention of my colleague from California, is we have been advised that no California sites would be affected. EPA has indicated they will be sending a letter to assure the Senator that no California sites would be affected by the proposed managers' amendment, or the language in the statement of managers.

Let me say that while, technically, this issue is not before us at this time, we do intend to include a statement which has been carefully worked out at painstaking meetings that Senator MIKULSKI and I had, along with our House counterparts, with OMB Director Jack Lew and George Frampton, CEQ Director. This language will be included to address the concerns raised by EPA about House report language on this issue.

The report language simply requires EPA to take into consideration a National Academy of Sciences study on contaminated sediments, which has been worked on for the past several years and is expected within the next 3 months, before dredging or invasive remediation actions at sites where a plan has not been adopted by October 1, 2000, or where dredging has not already occurred.

Exceptions are provided for voluntary agreements and urgent cases where there is significant threat to public health. Furthermore, EPA is not prohibited from proposing draft remediation plans involving dredging or invasive remediation technologies.

In view of the time, effort, and resources that have gone into examining the efficacy of dredging contaminated sediments, it would truly be a shame not to consider the best science available before going forward. This is not going to result in undue delays, but it will result in an informed process.

Dredging is very controversial and it is very costly. What do you do with the dredge material if you dig up material that is contaminated? Where do you put it? I can tell you that the answer will be NIMBY—not in my backyard. That is the first thing everybody will say. ''Can't you find a better or safer place to put it?''

Also, does dredging cause more harm, potentially, to the health and environment than leaving the contaminated sediments in place? When you stir it up and dig into the contaminated sediments, do you spread more out and do you get more in the water supply or in the air? These are things that scientists ought to tell us. The National Academy of Sciences is working on it. What would you do with thousands of truckloads of dredge material if you dredged it up and the National Academy of Sciences says you should have left it in place?

Well, it is important that we act on science around this place. I know there are some groups that love to write letters and have their own agenda and say that we need to move forward. I believe most people in this body would agree that getting a peer-reviewed study by the National Academy of Sciences before we engage upon a massive and potential danger-causing activity—dredging up sediments, or other invasive remedies—makes sense. For that reason, I believe that carefully crafted language, which was agreed on by the OMB Director and the CEQ Director, is a far preferable resolution of this very serious question. Let's take the radical step of waiting to rely on the science.

I yield to my distinguished colleague from Maryland such time as she may require.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, how much time remains for the opponents to the Boxer amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Nine minutes.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, will the Chair inform me when I have taken 4 minutes in the event that others also wish to speak?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes, the Chair will do so.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the Boxer amendment and I urge my colleagues to vote against it.

This amendment will have to be disposed of by the House. It will not be accepted by the House and therefore will kill this bill.

I would like to explain to my colleagues how our bill addresses the issue of contaminated sediments, why I am opposed to the Boxer amendment and, why the administration is opposed to the Boxer amendment.

The Boxer amendment is not necessary and its passage would effectively kill this bill.

Let me explain what we do in our bill.

The final version of the VA/HUD bill will contain report language in the statement of the managers that prevents EPA from dredging any contaminated site that does not have an approved plan in place by October 1, 2000 until the National Academy of Sciences, NAS, has completed its study on this issue and EPA has reviewed it.

This language sunsets on June 30, 2001. The NAS is expected to release its report in December. With an EPA review, the delay would last probably no more than 120 days.

We have included some exceptions to this language that are very important and I want to outline them for my colleagues.

First, if a site has an approved dredging plan in place by October 1, 2000, the language does not apply.

Second, if dredging or dredging activity is already occurring at a site, the language does not apply.

Third, if a site has a voluntary agreement in place with a potentially responsible party, the language does not apply.

Fourth, if EPA determines that a site poses a threat to public health, the language does not apply.

These exceptions are very important and were carefully negotiated with the administration.

This was no small victory for us.

The House passed VA/HUD bill included report language that would have directed EPA not to initiate or order dredging or other invasive remediation technologies, until the NAS report was complete and required that the results be incorporated into the EPA decision making processes.

This more extreme language would have effectively frozen work at affected sites for an indefinite period of time.

During our negotiations with the House, we successfully modified the provision to remove the extreme language.

The report language that will be incorporated into the final version of the VA/HUD bill still leaves EPA with some discretion and does not mandate any solutions.

Our language also allows EPA to take comment on proposed remedial actions such as that for cleanup of the Hudson River.

Our language would also allow all cleanup plans to be finalized by a date certain—June 30, 2001—even if the NAS report has not been completed in a timely manner.

The NAS is expected to use their final report, no later than January 1, 2001, allowing the report to be properly considered by EPA while sites without final plans work on their drafts.

Mr. President, the administration supports our language and I urge my colleagues to vote against the Boxer amendment.

I wish to also respond to my colleague and friend, the Senator from California, by saying this: No. 1, neither Senator BOND nor I wanted the riders. The House insisted on the riders. So we attempted to remove the draconian substance of the riders and put in more procedural issues, more procedural safeguards. The Senator thinks we wimped out. We think we had a victory because of the draconian aspect. We fought off the dragons.

Also, I want to be clear to my colleagues, we are in a very unusual parliamentary procedure. If we pass this bill without any amendments, it will go immediately to the House and can go through a process of ratification and will be done. If any of these amendments pass, we will have to go into a parliamentary situation where the House will not accept this and, therefore, the bill will be dead. So I just lay that out for everyone to take into consideration.

So the funds for EPA, which are quite robust—matching, in many instances, the President's request—housing, as well as veterans, science and technology, and other consumer protection agencies such as the Consumer Product Safety Commission—I believe will be jeopardized.

Having said that, I don't want to make my argument on jeopardizing the bill. I want to address the concerns that my conscientious colleague has raised about jeopardizing the environment.

This bill prevents EPA from dredging at any site that does not have an approved dredging plan by October 1 until the National Academy of Sciences has completed its study and EPA has reviewed it. In the arsenic ozone debate we heard, the National Academy of Sciences elevated it to an icon status that said don't do anything on this rider because of what the National Academy of Sciences says. By the way, I think the Senator from California and I would agree that we do need the National Academy of Sciences. On the dredging issue, what we are saying is that the dredging sites cannot move ahead until the National Academy has completed its study and EPA has looked at it. Guess when the study is going to be done. December 2000 or January 2001. Any delay will be micro—90 to 120 days. Guess what. I say to my colleagues in the Senate, this is not permanent. It only takes this language to June 30, 2001.

This language has a sunset provision of June 30, 2001.

What are these exceptions? The main one is that if EPA believes any site poses a threat to public health, the language does not apply.

Let me repeat to anyone who thinks wisdom lies in Washington, with 21 advocacy groups, that if EPA believes the site poses a threat to public health, this language does not apply.

Also, if the site has a voluntary agreement in place, it doesn't apply. If dredging is already occurring at a site, the language does not apply. If you have your plan approved by October 1, the language does not apply.

We have so many ''doesn't applys'' here that I don't think the arguments made by the proponents of this amendment apply really in any way that has validity or attraction.

If you are worried about public health—I salute you for it—remember, it would not apply.

I join with my colleagues to say let the National Academy of Sciences complete its work. Let the EPA review it. Then it can move forth on all of this. If there is a delay, it would be 90 to 120 days.

That is basically what the argument is.

I hope the amendment offered by my colleague from California will be defeated.

How much time did I consume?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Four minutes ten seconds remain.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I reserve the right for either Senator BOND or me to do rebuttal.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise today to support the Sense of the Congress amendment on contaminated sediments offered by the Senator from California (Mrs. BOXER). I do so because I have concerns about the implications that the report language accompanying this bill may have for the remediation and restoration of the Fox River in my home state of Wisconsin.

My staff has tried repeatedly over the last several days to clarify the report language with the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and has been unable to do so. I had wanted a letter from the EPA explaining the impact of this language on the Fox clean-up. In fact, my office was told by the Office of General Counsel that the EPA could not state with certainty the effects of this language on the Fox River, because it was one of the clean-ups that they had identified which might be delayed by this report language. This leaves me with concern that the next few actions Wisconsin is about to take to clean up the Fox River may be delayed, and my concern is shared by the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources.

As members of this body know, the Senate's version of the VA–HUD bill did not contain any report language on sediments. Only the version which passed the other body contained report language on this issue, and this language is retained and modified in the report accompanying this bill. Therefore, I also raise concerns, Mr. President, because my Wisconsin colleague in the House (Mr. GREEN), who represents the Fox Valley, tried to clarify the House report language in a floor colloquy when the measure was considered in the House of Representatives. This bill before us now changes the very language my colleague from Wisconsin specifically tried to clarify, and adds new and explicit time lines which do not mesh with the upcoming actions that will be taken to clean up the Fox River. As a Wisconsin Senator, I have no choice but to try to enhance the understanding of what this language would do, and I believe that the amendment by the Senator from California (Mrs. BOXER) makes it clear that Congress intends the EPA to move swiftly to clean up contaminated river and ocean sites.

I want to explain the status of the Fox River clean-up. The Fox River is currently not a National Priority List (NPL) site, commonly known as Superfund site. Nonetheless, the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (WDNR) is working to develop a final Remedial Investigation and Feasibility Study (RIFS) and is expected to release that study in late December, 2000 or early January, 2001. The Wisconsin DNR intends to release the final RIFS jointly with the EPA, and the other trustees which include: the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Oneida Tribe of Wisconsin. A final Record of Decision (ROD) could be reached between March and early June, 2001.

If the National Academy study is not yet complete and ''properly considered'' by EPA before the final RIFS is issued, as the Conference Report language requires, the report language is unclear about whether public comment can be initiated on the final RIFS. The report language says that public comment can be taken on ''proposed'' or ''draft'' remediation plans but is unclear with respect to comment on a final RIFS. Further the language says that ''no plans are to be finalized until June 30, 2001 or until the Agency has properly considered the National Academy of Sciences report, whichever comes first.'' Potentially stalling comment on the final RIFS raises concerns, as the final RIFS will finally indicate a preferred alternative for cleaning-up the Fox, an alternative which was not indicated in the draft RIFS. Interests on all sides of this issue—the paper companies that are potentially responsible parties in the clean-up, local governments that are concerned about liability, and local citizens who have been waiting to see what will be done to address the contaminants in the river—deserve to know what the preferred alternative is and to express their views.

Moreover, if the final ROD is issued before June 30, 2001, its implementation could also be delayed by this language. Though some may view this as simply a delay of a few weeks, I remind my colleagues that Wisconsin is a cold weather state. My State needs the certainty of being able to plan to contract to implement the remedy during the summer and early fall construction season. If not, we risk having to put off the clean up for another calendar year due to cold weather delays.

Given these uncertainties, I support my colleague from California's (Mrs. BOXER) amendment. This report language may have consequences for my state which I simply feel must be addressed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I yield 3 minutes to my friend from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from California. I had not expected to speak on this matter. I came to the floor to speak on the VA–HUD bill as a whole.

Let me share a couple of quick observations about these riders.

I congratulate my colleague from California for the fight she is making because it is an important fight as a matter of principle, and also it is a matter of science and common sense. These riders don't find their way into this legislation accidentally. There are powerful interests in the country that made sure these riders were here. We consistently see these attacks on environmental enforcement efforts in the country because there are people who just do not want a change.

On the air quality standards and nonattainment designations, the American Trucking Association is waiting for litigation with the EPA and wants to stop the EPA from keeping accountability with respect to the Clean Air Act.

That is what this is about. I have great respect for truckers and great respect for their efforts across the country. They are important to our economy. No one here is going to suggest otherwise. But every American has seen what happens at stoplights where they are sitting in a car that is living up to emission standards and a truck starts out at the stoplight. There is a great plume of black smoke that comes out of that truck. It is all over our highways. We know it. SUVs are presenting us with an increased problem because they come in under the light truck exception.

The fact is that the air standards of the country are not reaching the levels they ought to reach. The EPA is our chosen entity to enforce the Clean Air Act and to make sure that Americans are not subjected to pollution and air quality standards that are less than high.

We are told by the EPA what happens with this delay. There is the exposure of some 15,000 premature deaths in the country. Some 350,000 more Americans will suffer asthma as a consequence of the lack of air quality standards. That is the risk the Senate will take by allowing this kind of rider. However innocuous it may seem or however people make it sound going forward, there is a diminishment of the capacity of the EPA to enforce the law Congress has already passed to allow Americans to live by the highest air quality standards.

With respect to the dredging, I understand where that comes from. We have all been through that struggle in Massachusetts to try to clean up the Husatonic River. We are going to do some dredging there. There is now a struggle about the Hudson River, and other rivers, about whether or not those are going to be cleaned up.

The fact is the National Academy of Sciences has already provided us with not one but two studies that show dredging is a legitimate and important mechanism for cleaning up polluted areas. We are trying to do that in the Bedford-Hartford area where we have PCBs. They fear if this rider passes, that cleanup may in fact be jeopardized because people will use the excuse to say we don't have to proceed.

That is what is at stake. I know it is difficult to pull these bills together. There are a lot of different interests that have to be satisfied. But the fact is the Senate ought to take a vote on these riders. We ought to vote appropriately—that they don't belong in this legislation.

I thank my colleague for her efforts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, how much time is remaining on my side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Four minutes.

Mrs. BOXER. Would you let me know when I have 1 minute remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will be glad to do that.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I thank my friend from Massachusetts for his eloquent remarks. He is a leader on environmental issues in the Senate. It makes me feel really good that he came over.

I want to again try to set the record straight. Senator BOND said a letter is on its way from the EPA saying the California site is not in fact affected by the language in the bill regarding dredging. We have called them again. We called the general counsel last night. I told my friend from Missouri. They tell us that no such letter is coming.

Be that as it may, whether the letter comes or it doesn't come, the fact is if it does not affect California—and I hope he is right—I say to my friend, if he gets that letter, I will be very grateful. It is a bad situation because the language, in fact, we believe will really slow down the cleanup of Superfund sites. That is why you have Senators MOYNIHAN and SCHUMER concerned about the Hudson River. That cleanup will be stalled.

As my friend, Senator MIKULSKI, said—she calls me the gentlelady from California. She is the gentlelady from Maryland. That goes back to our House days. Senator MIKULSKI pointed out that she said these riders are less draconian. I believe that. They are less draconian. They are still bad, and they don't belong on their otherwise terrific bill. They do harm.

My friend points out that it is very clear the language said this will wreck the public health—no delay. It doesn't say ''affect'' the public health or the environment. When you have an effect on the environment by the fish eating DDT, you do not have to be a rocket scientist; if the fish eat DDT, it it is bad for humans. When do you prove that? It may not come down the line much longer.

I know my friend worked very hard on this. She had people in the room whom she trusted. But, again, I don't believe the administration sought out these riders. My friend is right; it was the House Members who did. They simply don't belong here. It would be very simple for us to agree to this sense of the Senate. I think it would be helpful because my friends say they don't want to delay these cleanups.

I want to make one point about science. Listen very carefully when people stand up here and say it is silly science and we must act on science. The EPA and the National Academy of Sciences acted on science with their new rule on the arsenic standard. Guess what. They are calling this silly science. This is the National Academy of Sciences. They say arsenic is very dangerous.

The bottom line is you can't seem to win around here. You get a report done by the National Academy of Sciences, and they say you have silly science; forget about it; throw it away. When you don't have the report, they say you can't act. As my friend pointed out, there have been many studies done by the National Academy of Sciences on port dredging as a way to get rid of these contaminants. We didn't know they were life threatening and dangerous. We know that now.

I hope we will have a good solid vote on these amendments.

I thank my colleagues. I retain 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, we are now in the concluding minutes of the debate.

First of all, on the three issues raised by the Senator from California, I want to say a couple of things.

No. 1, I am very proud of the Senate. When we moved our bill out of the full committee, we had no riders. We were not authorizing on appropriations. We had no riders, and we attempted to stand firm. Yes, we did face the dragons of the riders. What we ended up doing was not eliminating the dragons but we defang them. We defang the riders. We took the teeth out of them so they couldn't snarl up what this legislation is trying to do.

I believe the language we have adopted through the committee, through the managers' amendment, does have the riders. They are procedural. We acknowledge the flashing yellow light of the Senator from California with her terrible situation in California. We will do everything we can to make sure the Senator has that letter. I know it is not a substitute for the amendment. However, we want our colleagues to know the flashing yellow lights raised by the proponents are not valid.

Remember on the dredging, if the site has been approved by October 1, 2000, the language doesn't apply. If the dredging is already occurring, the language does not apply. If you have a voluntary agreement, the language does not apply. And if the EPA certifies that the site posed a threat to public health, the language does not apply.

I recommend the Boxer amendment does not apply to this bill and I urge its defeat.

I yield back the remaining time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Two minutes remain.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I take 1 minute to say the ranking member and I have been advised by EPA the California sites that would be affected by the language—and it is the clear understanding of the managers of the bill in the Senate—are either pilot sites already underway and would not be included or they are sites in which the final action would not be ready by the timeframe in which this action is delayed.

We have been advised, and it is our understanding, there is no application of this provision. It was intended to be included in the statement of managers on any California site.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask for an additional 30 seconds added to my remaining 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank my friends for the opportunity for the brief debate. I say to my friends, these are not harmless riders. You can say they will ''defang'' and that is in the eye of the defanger.

The bottom line is these are not harmless riders. It is not harmless to tell the EPA they are gagged from telling the people in my State and every other State that they live in a dirty air situation. That is what this rider does.

It is not harmless to tell the EPA they cannot set a new standard for arsenic, a standard that essentially was set with data collected in 1942. I will not tell anyone if I was born then or not. That is an old standard, folks. We know it is much more dangerous.

Finally, it is not harmless to delay the cleanup of PCBs and DDT and all the other hazardous toxins that sometimes get into the bay and the ocean floor and harm the wildlife and work up the chain.

Please support the Boxer amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Massachusetts is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. KERRY. I see we have more time than I anticipated. I ask unanimous consent for 5 additional minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BOND. I want to make sure that there is time for the ranking member and myself.

What is the time situation, and how much time now does the Senator from Massachusetts have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts at the present time has 10 minutes.

Mr. BOND. And he is requesting?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Another 5 minutes.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I do not object.

I amend that to ask unanimous consent that the remaining 20 minutes prior to the 12:30 vote be divided between the ranking member and myself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I rise to speak on the legislation we will vote on shortly, the VA–HUD bill, with mixed feelings. I want to be clear to my colleagues, the distinguished Senator from Maryland and the Senator from Missouri, those feelings have absolutely nothing to do with the level of leadership they have provided on this legislation. I think they have done an outstanding job under exceedingly difficult circumstances. When I say ''difficult circumstances,'' they know better than anybody in the Senate what we are talking about.

This bill is traditionally knocked around, almost always begins with a significantly below realistic cap which makes it almost impossible for them to do their work for months on end. And then at the last minute they get some kind of a reprieve and they are allowed the opportunity to try to fit the pieces together, satisfy their colleagues, satisfy national priorities, and come to the Senate.

I think they have produced a housing budget that in light of recent years—I emphasize this—is a very strong budget. They have done an exceptional job with respect to the existing housing programs that we have in this country. They have increased funding for almost every significant Federal housing program that is already run by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. For that, I thank them—not just for me but for countless numbers of people across the country who depend on one or another of those efforts to have decent shelter and a competent housing program for their communities.

Let me share quickly a couple of examples where the work has been exceptional. They have provided about $6.2 billion for operating and capital costs in public housing, which is an increase over the administration's request. The HOPE VI program, which has been enormously successful in turning some of the Nation's worst public housing developments into healthy, mixed-income communities, including a number in my home State of Massachusetts, has received an additional $575 million.

The HOME program and the CDBG received significant funding increases. Any of us can go home and talk to a mayor and we will learn quickly how important those particular programs have been to the discretionary capacity of mayors to be able to make a difference for their communities.

The Community Reinvestment Act has been able to extend credit. That has assisted the communities. The bill also brought the homeless budget back up to where it was.

But let me just discuss, if I may, an area in which I know both the Senator from Missouri and the Senator from Maryland share with me a sense of frustration and a sense of a priority not met by this legislation. There is something the Congress of the United States could have done about this, and has chosen not to do.

Very simply, we need a production program in this country. We used to have a production program, but over the last years we have seen a retreat from the commitment by the Federal Government to provide production.

Last night, in the debate between Vice President GORE and Governor Bush, there was an exchange where the Vice President said to the Governor that he didn't doubt his heart, or his goodness as a person but that he questioned his priorities. I come to the floor today to question the priorities of all of us in Washington, the Congress and the administration, with respect to one of the most evident, compelling needs that we face in this country, in community after community after community. This is not a Boston or a Massachusetts issue. It is not a New England issue. There is not a community in the United States of America that you go to today where there are not people having an extraordinarily difficult time being able to find adequate housing.

The reason is partly something we can celebrate, in the sense it comes out of an economy that is so extraordinarily strong. But, on the other hand, because it is so strong and so many people are able to afford the few available places, the rents have risen to a point where even some vouchers are being refused. So we are upping the number of vouchers in this legislation to some 80,000 new vouchers, but there is no place for anybody to take them.

The result is, even as we live in a time of extraordinary economic expansion, too many of our fellow Americans are not sharing on the up side and are finding it increasingly difficult to find decent housing. HUD estimates that 5.4 million low-income households have what we call worst case housing needs. These families are paying over half their income towards housing costs or they are living in severely substandard housing.

Since 1950, the number of families with worst case housing needs has increased by 12 percent. That means 600,000 more of our fellow citizens cannot afford a decent and safe place to live, even though the United States of America has the best economy we have had in maybe half a century. For these families, living paycheck to paycheck, one simple unforeseen circumstance such as a child getting sick or a big car repair bill or some other kind of emergency can send them into homelessness. That is not an exaggeration.

Earlier this year, on the front page of the Washington Post, an article detailed these problems right here in our own backyard, the Nation's Capital. That article detailed the plight of low-income families living in apartments that are no longer affordable because the owners decided to no longer accept Federal assistance. For those families, the loss of their affordable housing unit meant they could go without a home.

We have mistakenly viewed this crisis as limited to certain demographic groups. I really caution my colleagues not to fall into that stereotype. There is not one metropolitan area in the country where a minimum wage earner can afford to pay the rent for the average two-bedroom apartment. The minimum wage today—is it $5.15? You would have to earn over $12 an hour to afford the median rent for the average two-bedroom apartment in this country. That figure rises dramatically in many metropolitan areas.

An hourly wage of $28 is needed in San Francisco; $23 on Long Island; $19 in Boston; $17 in Washington, DC, $16 in Chicago and in Seattle, and $15 in Atlanta. In every one of these cases, the affordability crisis has grown worse over the course of the past year. Working families are increasingly finding themselves unable to afford a house. A person in Boston would have to make over $35,000 a year just to afford a two-bedroom apartment, and we know that is well above the median earnings of folks in that area—as well, I might add, as most of the country.

In Cape Cod, MA, a working mother of three children has been forced to live in a camper. The children actually live in a tent because the camper is not large enough. The mother cooks on an outdoor grill. She cleans the campground toilets to help pay the rent on her campsite. She works 40 hours a week, earns $21,000 annually, and she cannot find affordable rental housing.

There was another article in the Washington Post this week which emphasizes the impact of this issue. Because of the ability of higher wage earners in this area who have benefited from the booming economy to pay higher housing costs, we have seen a rise in the number of building owners who refuse to rent to households that are assisted by section 8 vouchers. In Prince Georges County, 300 tenants in an apartment complex were recently told they have to move because the owner is no longer going to accept section 8.

I know the Senator from Missouri understands everything I have thus far said and supports the notion that we need a production program. I am grateful to the Senator from Missouri for having not just seen that, but put $1 billion into this bill for housing production. That is how this bill went to the conference level. That bill could have received support from the House and the administration that would have left us in a position to fund.

When people say: Senator, what about the cap? What about the total amount of money? In this year, the 2001 budget cycle, as a matter of priority, the administration and others are choosing to pay down $200 billion of debt. I am all for debt paydown. I know that is a tax cut to all Americans. I have been one of those here who has supported the concept that we ought to pay off the debt as rapidly as we possibly can. But the key is in the words ''as rapidly as we possibly can.'' Maybe we should add words such as ''as is appropriate,'' or ''as is measured against other priorities of the country.''

I do not know where it is written in stone or otherwise made an edict of the budgeting process that we have to choose to pay down $200 billion instead of paying down $199 billion or $198 billion, or some other figure. Would it really be so bad if the United States took 1 year longer to pay off the entire debt while sufficiently addressing the question of adequate housing for American families today?

The Senator from Missouri sought to put $1 billion into this bill. So we are making our own priorities. I say to my colleagues, as a matter of common sense and sound investment policy in the future of the country, it makes sense to invest in production of housing for people who cannot afford it because the alternative is that you have a lot of kids who are dragged out of schools, moving from community to community, often becoming at risk as a consequence of the lack of adequate housing. We will pick up their costs. We will pick up their costs when some Senator comes to the floor and says we need more Federal assistance to build prisons; or we need more Federal assistance for the juvenile justice system to take care of those kids who are getting into trouble; or we need more Federal assistance for the drug program because we have too many crack houses and too many communities that are magnets for crime.

Why? Because we don't allow them to become the kinds of communities we want them to be by investing up front in creating the kind of housing the country needs. It is inexcusable, in a nation as rich as we are, doing as well as we are, that we cannot find $1 billion to make certain we have a production program to help build the kind of housing that will release the pressures on the marketplace and can be felt all up and down the ladder in housing costs in the country.

Some colleagues will say: Why should the Federal Government do that? Years ago, we made a commitment in this country about housing. We have come to understand that there are certain things the marketplace doesn't always do very well. I happen to believe we have the most efficient allocation of capital of any economic system anywhere on the face of the planet. I am proud of that. I support that in dozens of ways—through the Small Business Committee, Banking Committee, Commerce Committee, tax incentives, various ways in which we allow the private sector to do what it does best, which is create jobs. But sometimes there are certain sectors of the economy where the marketplace does not work as efficiently. We have always recognized that with one kind of tax incentive or tax credit or direct grant or other kind of incentive or another. Housing just happens to be one of them.

When the supply is very tight and the demand is very high, you have a capacity for rents to rise and you have builders targeting their building to that place where they can make the most money. That is a natural instinct in a marketplace where you are looking for the greatest return on investment. You do not get your great return on investment from the sectors where the people can least afford the rents.

That is why we need a production program, and that is why I hope in these final days before the Congress adjourns we will find our way to include in the omnibus bill the production program we need so desperately. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FITZGERALD). The time of the Senator from Massachusetts has expired.

There are now 20 minutes equally divided among the managers of the bill.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, as we conclude our debate on the VA–HUD bill, there are differences of opinion on these riders. I do hope they are rejected. If they are adopted, it will have a serious parliamentary and maybe even fiscal consequence. However, it is a democracy; people need to work their will. I am very proud of this bill because we do meet the needs of our veterans, those who fought the war over there so we could have peace here. I am very proud of what we have done in housing and urban economic development because what we want to do is create an opportunity ladder so people can make sure they have the opportunity for a better life, that there is local control in decisionmaking, strengthening communities whether they are in rural or urban America.

I am very proud of what we have done on the environment. We have funded clean air, clean water, safe drinking water, the ongoing efforts to clean up the Chesapeake Bay and many other bays around the United States of America. Also, in terms of science and technology, again, we have increased the funding so we can come up with the new ideas that ultimately will save lives, generate jobs, and save communities. That is what this bill is all about.

There are little known provisions, such as funding Arlington Cemetery where brave people who died in war are buried, and where Navy diver Stethem, my own Maryland resident who died as a result of an act of terrorism, is buried. He was on an airplane, and he wore the Navy uniform. They beat him up. This bill is a tribute to what people fight and die for around the country: That people will have a better life.

I yield the floor.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I wish to follow up with some comments on the issues we have discussed today and express, again, my sincere appreciation to my colleague from Maryland for the tremendous cooperation and guidance and valuable assistance she has provided, and her staff, Paul Carliner and others. We have had a lot of difficulties in working out this bill under unusual circumstances, but we both extend our thanks to the chairman and the ranking member, Senator STEVENS and Senator BYRD, for assisting us and for providing us with the resources we needed ultimately to put together a bill that meets the needs in so many important areas, from veterans to housing to the environment to space to science and emergency management. It has been a challenging time.

The Senator from Massachusetts noted that we had made an effort with respect to the production of housing. Frankly, I believe there is nothing more important. I think we have finally gotten the attention of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, which had heretofore focused solely on sending out new vouchers.

They wanted new vouchers overall. And my staff did what I thought was a very helpful report—completed it a month or so ago—which pointed out in so many areas vouchers simply cannot be used. There is no place to use them. The nationwide average is about 19 percent. I think in Jersey City some 65 percent of the vouchers cannot be used. In St. Louis County, MO, 50 percent cannot be used. It is an empty promise, a hollow promise, when we give a needy family a certificate that says this will pay their rent, and they take it out someplace and find out they cannot rent anyplace with that voucher, with that section 8 certificate. That does not do much good.

So we did fight hard for the production program. People have objected. I think they had legitimate concerns about the provisions. We agreed that these should be considered in an authorizing vehicle. We hope and we urge the Banking Committee next year to take up the problem of housing production. Let's get all these ideas out on the table.

My office has a lot of good ideas; I am sure others do. Let's get them all out and work them out in authorizing language. How sweet it would be if we had an authorized piece of housing legislation that would make it unnecessary for us to include housing provisions in the appropriations bill. It might be a lot duller, but I believe the ranking member and I could still pass the appropriations bill. So I urge them to deal with those housing questions.

We also thank our colleagues from the Environment and Public Works Committee for their helpful comments. As a member of that committee, I urge them to take a look at these many provisions which are included in our bill because of concerns over the direction we are moving in the environment. I would like to deal with them on the authorizing basis. I hope that we may do so in the future.

Mr. President, I thank all our colleagues for their help.

I reserve 2 minutes for the chairman of the committee at such time as he may choose for matters that he wishes to bring up.

Mr. STEVENS. Will the Senator yield now?

I thank the Senator very much.

Mr. President, I thank Senator BOND and Senator MIKULSKI, who have worked so hard on this bill and brought us a bill now, through the negotiations they have had with the House, that I believe will be signed. It has been a very difficult bill. In working together, it is nice to see a good bipartisan effort on our appropriations bills.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent it be in order for me to offer an amendment at this time. The amendment is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska [Mr. STEVENS] proposes an amendment numbered 4310.

Mr. STEVENS. I would like to have the amendment read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

At the appropriate place in the amendment, add:

DIVISION C

SEC. . In lieu of a statement of the managers that would otherwise accompany a conference report for a bill making appropriations for federal agencies and activities provided for in this Act, reports that are filed in identical form by the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations prior to adjournment of the 106th Congress shall be considered by the Office of Management and Budget, and the agencies responsible for the obligation and expenditure of funds provided in this Act, as having the same standing, force and legislative history as would a statement of the managers accompanying a conference report.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 4310) was agreed to.

Mr. STEVENS. I move to reconsider the vote and move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Ms. MIKULSKI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I know we are concluding. I express my thanks to Senator STEVENS and to Senator BYRD, who enabled us to move forward with this very unusual process, and for the assistance they gave us in dealing with severe budgetary allocations.

I also thank Senator BOND, as well as Congressman WALSH, for including the Democrats as full participants, and also the courtesy extended to members of the executive branch at OMB and also to the Council on Environmental Quality.

I also thank Senator BOND's staff for, again, their really close work in relationship with us and for the professionalism that was afforded. And I thank my own staff. While we worked on this bill, a lot of people were off enjoying themselves. They went home to dinner; they went to fundraisers; they played with their grandchildren; and we were out here working. That is our job. We were happy to do it. But after we would go home, the staff would work, often until 10, 11, 12 o'clock at night and through weekends. I thank them for their hard work. But, most of all, I know the American people thank them for their hard work.

Mr. President, that concludes my remarks.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4308

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 1 minute.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, my amendment strikes two riders which are harmful and unfair to the American people. That is why 21 environmental groups support the amendment. And the League of Conservation Voters has indicated they are going to score this on their environmental scorecard.

The first rider delays the setting of a new standard for arsenic in drinking water. The National Academy of Sciences tells us we must act on a new standard for arsenic in water because arsenic is now a known carcinogen. They urge swift action because they tell us that the old standard was based on 1942 data. Arsenic causes cancer. That is science. We should not delay.

The second rider gags the EPA from informing communities that their air quality is harmful to their health. That is, to me, in a democracy, an amazing thing that we would stand here and allow this to happen, where the EPA would be denied the free speech to go into communities and say: You have to watch out for your health.

Gag rules on clean air and delays on arsenic standards are bad riders. I hope we will strike them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri has 1 minute.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, with respect to the arsenic rider, the National Academy of Sciences says somebody must act, but the EPA has not determined what action must be taken. Give them the full year that the Clean Water Act envisioned. We are doing this so they can conduct the process and not wind up spending their time in court.

With respect to the ozone nonattainment designations, this is simply saying: Don't go out and put black eyes on communities when lower courts have said that the EPA doesn't have the authority to issue those designations. Wait until you find out whether they actually have the authority to go out and brand a community as being out of attainment with this particular standard until you find out whether it is lawful.

I strongly urge my colleagues to join with me in opposing this amendment.

Mr. President, I move to table amendment No. 4308, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the motion to table amendment No. 4308. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

CHANGE OF VOTE

Mr. DODD. Mr. President on rollcall No. 270, I voted aye. It was my intention to vote no. Therefore, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to change my vote since it would in no way change the outcome of that vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The foregoing tally has been changed to reflect the above order.)

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, on behalf of the leader, I ask unanimous consent that the next votes in this series be limited to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from California.

AMENDMENT NO. 4309

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, do I have 1 minute to describe this amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, this is a simple amendment. It is a sense of the Congress and says the following:

It is the sense of the Congress that the Environmental Protection Agency should move swiftly to clean up river and ocean sites around the Nation that have been contaminated with PCBs, DDT, dioxins, metal, and other toxic chemicals in order to protect the public health, safety, and the environment.

I think this is very straightforward. I think we should all join hands and support the amendment. Why do I think we need it? There is report language in this bill that we believe delays the cleanup of these sites. The managers say, no, they don't think it will result in delay. If that is the case, then why can't we all join hands and support this sense of the Congress?

My goodness; we ought to protect our environment in this way. It seems to me if we have PCBs, if we have DDT with an ocean environment, a bay environment, or river environment, it is going to harm and it is harming the wildlife. That gets passed on to humans as the fish consume the DDT.

I urge a ''yes'' vote.

I ask for the yeas and nays on this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The Senator from Maryland.

Ms. MIKULSKI. First, do not be deluded by the phrase ''sense of the Congress.'' This is not a free ride on the riders. There are consequences if this passes. It is a dangerous amendment. This amendment will then go to a formal conference. The House will not accept our decision. This bill will then die as so many other things are dying. It will die quickly, as a matter of fact.

Second, in terms of the consequences to policy, first of all, there are so many exceptions in this bill, one of which is that this language does not apply if EPA says the site poses a threat to public health. It does not apply if a voluntary agreement is in place, if dredging is already occurring in a site. If a site has an approved plan by October 1, 2000, it doesn't apply.

Guess what. It sunsets on June 30, 2000. Let's just sunset the amendment and move on.

Mr. BOND. I move to table and ask for yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to a motion to table the amendment No. 4309. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. HELMS) and the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. GRAMS), are necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN), the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY), and the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. LIEBERMAN) are necessarily absent.

SECTION 404

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I would like to discuss with the distinguished chair of the Appropriations Subcommittee on VA, HUD and Independent Agencies the role of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) in the Section 404 permitting process. FEMA and the Section 404 wetlands permitting program are subject to the authorization jurisdiction of the committee I chair, the Senate Environment and public Works Committee, and receive their funding through this appropriations bill.

Mr. BOND. I would be delighted to discuss this matter with my colleague from New Hampshire.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. As the Senator knows, the Federal Emergency Management Agency was not established with the intent that it become a regulatory agency. Rather, the principal mission of the Agency is to administer relief to areas of our nation that are suffering from catastrophic events such as floods or hurricanes. The Section 404 permitting program under the Clean Water Act, as the Senator also knows well, is a complicated and controversial federal regulatory program administered primarily by the Army Corps of Engineers. However, the Environmental Protection Agency also has a major role in the implementation of the program that includes the ability to veto decisions by the Corps to issue specific Section 404 permits. I believe that two agencies implementing a federal regulatory program is quite enough.

Mr. BOND. I am familiar with the Section 404 program and agree with the Senator's observations.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. I have two specific concerns regarding FEMA and the Section 404 program. First, I understand that a new rule on nationwide permits was issued by the Corps effective June 7, 2000. Nationwide permits are a streamlined permitting process that apply to minor wetlands disturbances that have a minimal impact on the nation's wetlands. These permits are very important to the operation of the program since as many as 85 percent of the permits issued by the Corps each year are nationwide permits. One aspect of this new rule makes it very difficult to obtain nationwide permits in the one hundred year floodplain. According to the Corps, 53 percent of the floodplain is subject to the jurisdiction of the Section 404 program. The rule provides that certain nationwide permits can be obtained in a portion of the hundred year floodplain if approved by FEMA or the local flood control agency.

Congress has not authorized a role for FEMA in the Section 404 permitting process. Is it your understanding that this new rule will be implemented in such a fashion that FEMA will not become a regulatory agency with respect to Section 404 nationwide permits?

Mr. BOND. I agree with the Senator that FEMA should not have a regulatory role in the Section 404 program and that there is some lack of clarity in the new nationwide permit rule regarding FEMA's role. The report of the Committee that accompanies this legislation contains language requesting detailed information from FEMA regarding their implementation plans under this new rule. I can assure the Senator that we will address his concerns as we work with FEMA on their funding needs and requests.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. I thank the Senator for his attention to my concerns about FEMA's role in the 404 program. I would also call the Committee's attention to the related problem of the issuance of individual 404 permits in the 100 year floodplain. I believe it is important to emphasize that, just as in the case of nationwide permits. FEMA does not have a regulatory role in the issuance of individual permits under Section 404. Whether or not there should be such a policy in the hundred year floodplain is an issue that Congress may wish to address in the future. However, for now, I believe that it must be restated that FEMA has not been authorized a decisional role in whether or not an individual Section 404 permit should be issued nor the conditions of a Section 404 permit. We do not need a third federal agency with a decisional role in the Section 404 permitting program. Obviously, FEMA may comment on applications for Section 404 permits, as may any citizen or federal agency, but that opportunity must not be transformed into a decisional role. Does the Senator agree with me on this point? Is it the Senator's understanding that the funds in this bill will not be used by FEMA to play a decisional role in the issuance of individual Section 404 permits in the hundred year floodplain?

Mr. BOND. I agree with the Senator on this point. The funds in this bill are not to be used by FEMA to play a decisional role in the issuance of individual Section 404 permits in the hundred year floodplain.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished colleague from Missouri.

ASSISTING VETERANS WITH DISABILITIES

Mr. LEVIN. Will the Chairman of the VA, HUD and Independent Agencies Appropriations Subcommittee yield for a question?

Mr. BOND. I will be pleased to yield for a question from the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. First, I want to compliment the Chairman and the Ranking Member, Ms. MIKULSKI, for bringing this bill to the Senator floor and for the Subcommittee's attention to the health, rehabilitation and research programs funded by this bill that are critical to our Nation's veterans.

I also want to compliment the Chairman and the Ranking Member for the subcommittee's report language that urges the VA's Rehabilitation Research Office to conduct a demonstration project to assess the impact of a new mobility technology on the ability of veterans to perform work functions, thereby leading to increased opportunities for veterans with disabilities to return to work. This innovative mobility device is a major advance in that it has the ability to climb stairs, traverse all terrain and balance the seated user at standing eye-level. It should, I hope, provide veterans who have mobility impairments with significant additional opportunities in the workplace. The demonstration project called for by the Subcommittee's language will help clarify the additional employment opportunities that such a device should create for our Nation's veterans. I thank the Subcommittee for its assistance in making process on this matter.

With new and emerging technologies becoming available that can assist veterans with disabilities, it is vital that the VA keep pace with the marketplace and ensure that veterans with disabilities have access to these advancements. I have had the pleasure of seeing this new mobility device perform its functions and it clearly holds great promise. I am hopeful that this demonstration project will show a significant impact that this device can have on the ability of veterans with disabilities to return to work and I am eager on review the findings of the demonstration. Would the Chairman agree that the demonstration that is requested in the Subcommittee's language be completed by May 1, 2001?

Mr. BOND. Yes, I think that the more than 7 months between now and May 1, 2001, is ample time to complete the demonstration project. I thank Senator LEVIN for his work on this important issue and for bringing it to the Subcommittee's attention.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the Chairman for his continuing leadership on this matter.

DREDGING

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, this Manager's Amendment contains language which would direct the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to take no action to initiate or order the use of dredging or invasive remedial technologies where a final plan has not been adopted prior to October 1, 2000, or where such activities are not now occurring until the NAS report has been completed and its findings have been properly considered by the Agency. Would the Senator from Maryland be willing to clarify a few questions about this language?

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I would be pleased to offer information about this Amendment to my friend from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Is it understood that the Environmental Protection Agency has the discretion to define ''threat to public health'' and ''urgent case'' as those terms are applied to the exceptions? Further, is it understood that the EPA has the discretion to define ''properly considered.''

Ms. MIKULSKI. The Senator is correct.

Mr. LEVIN. Does the Senator from Missouri, the Chairman of the Subcommittee, agree with these clarifications?

Mr. BOND. I agree with the Senator from Maryland and join in her interpretation of this language.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, as always, I appreciate the courtesy of the distinguished Senators from Maryland and Missouri.

GREAT WATERS PROGRAM

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, we congratulate the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Appropriations Committee for presenting the Senate with an Appropriations bill which addresses so many of the water quality issues confronting America today. We also want to reiterate our support for a program of great interest to our colleagues from the Great Lakes states.

Mr. LEVIN. The Great Waters program, authorized by the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990, assesses air deposition as a source of toxic contamination to key water bodies, including the Great Lakes and Chesapeake Bay. Research suggests that at least half of all new toxic pollution loadings entering the Great Lakes may be transported and deposited by the atmosphere. Consistent funding for the monitoring of air deposition of toxic contaminants is especially critical at this time as the international community completes negotiations of an international treaty on persistent organic pollutants. The Great Waters program will provide a key component of the database used to judge the effectiveness of this international agreement in lowering the toxic contaminants entering the Great Lakes, and other great waters of the United States, from foreign sources.

Mr. DEWINE. I would like to ask the distinguished Chairman if the bill provides sufficient funding through the parent account to restore funding for critical monitoring under the Great Waters program to the fiscal year 1999 level of effort?

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I want to thank the distinguished Senators from Ohio and Michigan for highlighting the importance of the Great Waters program. We are pleased to recommend continuation of this program which is so vital to understanding the impact of airborne toxins on aquatic ecosystems. I assure the Senator that the intention of this bill is to restore sufficient funding to allow assessment of our progress in reducing the amount of toxic pollution entering the nation's waters.

THE CENTREDALE MANOR RESTORATION PROJECT

Mr. L. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I appreciate the work of the subcommittee chairman and ranking minority Member in putting together this year's VA-HUD appropriations bill. I would like to clarify one matter of importance regarding removing an environmental threat in a Rhode Island community. The Centredale Manor Restoration Project is a Superfund site in North Providence, RI. With my encouragement, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has been moving quickly at this site. The site was only added to the National Priorities List in February of this year and several removal actions have been conducted at the site. Recently, the EPA released a proposed Engineering Evaluation/Cost Analysis that recommends replacement of the Allendale Dam and excavation of contaminated soils from residential properties along the Woonasquatucket River. These cleanup plans—requiring excavation of approximately 2,500 cubic yards of soils and sediments—were intended to be finalized later this year after the current public comment period, with design and construction work to follow shortly thereafter. There is a great deal of local support for getting on with this clean up and removing dangerous contaminants from North Providence neighborhoods.

I understand that the report attached to this bill contains language directing EPA to wait until completion of the current National Academy of Sciences study of sediment remediation technology, and proper consideration of the NAS study as it relates to EPA remedy selection, before finalizing any more dredging plans. The NAS study is scheduled to be completed no later than January 1, 2001. It seems to me this report language would allow the EPA to continue planning associated with the Centredale Manor cleanup, including replacement of Allendale dam and excavation of contaminated soils and sediments in and along the Woonasquatucket River, at the North Providence Superfund site. Ultimately, I believe that following consideration of the NAS study, EPA will be able to finalize the cleanup plan and implement that final plan during the 2001 construction season. I would like to confirm with the Chairman of the VA-HUD Appropriations Subcommittee that the report language is not intended to delay progress toward cleaning up contamination at the Centredale Manor Restoration Project in North Providence.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, the Senator from Rhode Island is correct. The conference report language on dredging and EPA review of the pending study by the National Academy of Sciences is not intended to delay progress towards cleaning up contamination at the Centredale Manor Restoration Project in Rhode Island. It is intended to ensure that EPA considers the findings of the NAS study in selecting remedies involving contaminated sediments.

Mr. L. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I appreciate the chairman's clarification of this matter.

TEA–21

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I would like to engage the Chairman of the VA–HUD Appropriations Subcommittee in a brief colloquy on an important matter.

It is my understanding that the managers' amendment that we are adopting includes a rider which prohibits the EPA from making nonattainment designations under the new 8-hour ozone standard until June 15, 2001, or the final adjudication of the American Trucking Association vs. EPA case now before the Supreme Court, whichever comes first. Is that right?

Mr. BOND. The Senator from New Jersey is correct.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. While I believe that inclusion of this rider is unfortunate as it will slow progress toward cleaner air, I understand that it should have little practical effect. EPA is unlikely to make those designations much in advance of June 15, 2001, in any case, even though all but about 6 states have submitted proposed areas for nonattainment designation.

I would just like to make one thing very clear for the record. This rider is a prohibition on the expenditures of funds. It does not negate the requirement included in TEA–21 that areas be designated under the new ozone standard. It also does not in any way prejudice the litigation pending before the Supreme Court. Would the distinguished Chairman confirm that these points are true?

Mr. BOND. Yes, Mr. President, the Senator is correct. This language does not modify section 6103 of TEA–21, nor is it intended to affect the Supreme Court's consideration of the litigation on these standards in any way.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I concur with the Subcommittee Chairman and the Senator from New Jersey.

CERCLA

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I would like to clarify a section in the statement of the managers accompanying the conference report. The language directs EPA to take no action to initiate or order the use of certain technologies such as dredging until certain steps have been taken with respect to the National Academy of Sciences report, with exceptions for voluntary agreements and urgent cases. It is my understanding that after June 30, 2001, or when EPA has properly considered the NAS report, whichever comes first, the conferees intend that EPA could proceed to finalize any such plans and act on those plans through steps to initiate or order dredging and other technologies, as appropriate.

Mr. BOND. The Senator is correct. The statement of the managers is not intended to limit EPA's authority to act on a plan that is finalized in accordance with the conditions set out.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. It is also my understanding that in directing EPA to properly consider the NAS report, the conferees are not intending to change the normal criteria by which EPA selects remedies, such as the factors laid out in CERCLA, the National Contingency Plan, and applicable guidance. Instead, the conferees are asking EPA to disseminate the report to officials within the Agency who make remedy selection decisions and to ask them to review it as part of the larger body of research on scientific and technical issues associated with hazardous waste cleanup. The NAS report is not being singled out for special deference greater than it would otherwise receive.

Mr. BOND. The Senator is correct. The statement of the managers calling for EPA to properly consider the NAS report is not a change in the CERCLA remedy selection process, it is not a call for an EPA response to the report, and is not a direction to give the report more weight than it would otherwise receive.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. It is also my understanding that urgent cases would include situations in which contaminated sediments, either alone or through their accumulation in fish, cause significant risks to public health such as increases in cancer risks, reproductive effects, or birth defects.

Mr. BOND. The Senator is correct.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I concur with the subcommittee chairman and Senator LAUTENBERG.

EPA'S ENDOCRINE DISRUPTOR SCREENING PROGRAM

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I want to call the Senate's attention to a program that the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is implementing in a way that I believe is inconsistent with the original intent of Congress. The Endocrine Disruptor Screening Program, EDSP, was created by EPA to implement language in the Food Quality Protection Act, FQPA, and Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments of 1996 requiring that EPA, and I quote, ''develop a screening program, using appropriate validated test systems and other scientifically relevant information, to determine whether certain substances may have an effect in humans that is similar to an effect produced by a naturally occurring estrogen, or other such endocrine effect . . .'' The Program was required to be implemented by August 1, 1999.

This program has been plagued by a lack of public participation from key constituencies, an expansive interpretation of the Congressional mandate, questionable decisions as to the validation of testing protocols, and neglect of money appropriated for the development of non-animal tests.

In October 1996 EPA formed the Endocrine Disruptor Screening and Testing Advisory Committee, EDSTAC, under the Federal Advisory Committee Act to advise EPA on risk assessment techniques for endocrine disrupting chemicals. EDSTAC included scientists and representatives from EPA and other government agencies, industry, national environmental groups, worker protection groups, environmental justice groups, and research scientists. More recently, EPA set up the Endocrine Disruptor Standardization and Validation Task Force to perform the work needed to develop, standardize, and validate the screens and tests proposed for the Program. However, one very important constituency was not included in either of these groups—in fact they were excluded—they are the animal welfare groups. Traditionally, these groups have been left out of the consultation process of EPA regarding the newly initiated chemical testing programs. Any program that includes testing of chemicals for toxicity or other effects involves the use of animals in such testing, however, the groups that advocate for animal welfare were excluded from providing early input in the Endocrine Disruptor Screening Program.

As Chairman of the committee with jurisdiction over the testing and handling of toxic chemicals, the Committee on Environment and Public Works, I am particularly concerned about how this program is being administered. In addition to the lack of public input, a major concern deals with the large number of animals used in testing that could occur as a result of EPA's implementation plan for this program. On August 25, 2000, EPA published a report to Congress on the Endocrine Disruptor Screening Program that sets forth the findings, recommendations and further actions of EPA in implementing the EDSP. The implementation plan that EPA has come up with is broader than the plain language of the FQPA. While obtaining better data on endocrine disruptors is certainly a worthy goal, I am concerned about the expansion of this congressionally mandated program. The broad interpretation by the EPA of the chemicals to test and the method of validation calls into question whether this program will be implemented in a manner consistent with the intent of Congress. All of these expanded interpretations increase the number of test animals needed to implement the program.

The law specifically states that EPA is to ''use appropriately validated tests.'' EPA has interpreted the law to mean that animal tests can be validated through the EPA's own Science Advisory Board, however, non-animal tests must be run through a more rigorous Interagency Coordinating Committee for the Validation of Alternative Methods (ICCVAM) process. ICCVAM was created as a standing committee in 1997 and is composed of representatives of fifteen Federal regulatory or research agencies that regulate the use of animals in toxicology testing; EPA is a co-chair of ICCVAM. The ICCVAM process with input from the EPA Science Advisory Board reviews can ensure that the tests, animal or non-animal, will produce good results. I believe all tests should be assessed for validation by ICCVAM.

My comments up until now have been critical of the plan that EPA has put forth for future implementation of the Endocrine Disruptor Screening Program. Last year, Congress appropriated $5 million for the development and implementation of the test methods including the high throughput prescreen, a non-animal screening process. After spending $70,000, the Agency has stopped working to integrate the high throughput pre-screen into the Endocrine Disruptor Screening Program. Although this specific example concerns me, it is only one example of the general disinterest of EPA in integrating non-animal tests into the program. I urge the EPA's Office of Research and Development to apportion funds to prioritize research, development and validation of non-animal tests.

Mr. BOND. Thank you for your insight and comments on EPA's Endocrine Disruptor Screening Program. We are in agreement that EPA should implement the Program better. EPA should also pursue the validation and incorporation of non-animal testing as soon as practicable.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. I want to thank the Senator from Missouri for his comments and hope we can continue to work together on the monitoring of this and other EPA programs.

MILITARY RETIREES

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, as you know, current law requires that for a military retiree to receive his VA disability compensation he must waive an equal part of his retirement pay. This issue is frequently referred to as ''concurrent receipt,'' because it would involve the simultaneous receipt of two types of benefits.

The service connected disabled military retiree is the only person that is forced to pay for their own disability compensation. A worker in private industry is not forced to pay for his own disability. Likewise, local, State and federal civil servants, appointed and elected officials are not forced to pay for their own disability compensation.

For several years I have worked closely with military retirees and veterans organizations to change the law to permit receipt of all deserved benefits. This is a step that this Congress must take. It is unfair that a person who serves his or her country and has a service-connected disability can't draw both benefits.

Legislation to fix concurrent receipt has been introduced during the past several Congresses. Last year, thanks in great part to the efforts of the Chairman and the Ranking Member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, the Senate took a first step towards fixing this problem by authorizing a concurrent receipt provision for severely disabled military retirees. The existing concurrent receipt restrictions, however, remain in effect.

This year, the Senate again made an effort to solve the concurrent receipt problem. During debate on the Department of Defense Authorization bill, the Senate included an amendment to completely repeal concurrent receipt laws. This would allow all veterans to receive their full disability compensation along with their retired pay. When the conference report to the Defense Authorization bill reached desk of the conferees, however, they were faced with an insurmountable financial problem.

The Defense Authorization conference report that is being considered today contains crucial provisions that will enable the government to fulfill its first priority: to provide a strong national defense. In addition, the Act contains significant and necessary increases in overall defense spending, especially directed at improving morale and retention. One of the most important of these provisions is an amendment, fulfilling a broken promise, which will give the same health care benefits to military retirees as those available to active duty service members. Therefore, I will support the Defense Authorization bill.

However, I want to take this opportunity to declare my intentions and to call upon my colleagues for their support. As part of the annual budget process next year, I will work with my colleague from Nevada, Mr. REID, who has dedicated a great deal of time to this effort, to include budget cap room for concurrent receipt.

I want to remind my colleagues, the service connected disabled military retiree is the only person who is forced to pay for his own disability compensation. It is simply unfair that a person who serves his or her country and has a service-connected disability can't draw both his VA and disability benefits concurrently.

This is a situation that must be fixed and I look forward to working with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to ensure that our servicemembers, active duty and retired, receive the full benefits that they deserve.

HOUSING NEEDS

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I thank Senators BOND and MIKULSKI for their good work on this year's VA–HUD appropriations bill. Also, I would like to congratulate Secretary Cuomo on the hard work he has done to raise awareness of the critical housing needs many Americans are experiencing around the country.

As the ranking member on the Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs Committee, I have a very keen interest in the portion of this bill that funds the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

This year's budget is a strong step in the right direction. The bill contains increases in spending for many of the critical housing programs that serve middle- and low-income families.

It includes funding for nearly 80,000 new section 8 housing vouchers. These vouchers will provide additional housing resources for families experiencing critical housing needs.

Funding for the HOME and CDBG programs has been increased by $200 million and $300 million over last year's levels respectively. These are programs that local governments and non-profits rely on to build and rehabilitate affordable housing, as well as revitalize communities.

The Committee has also provided for an increase in the homeless budget, which includes emergency shelter, permanent housing, counseling, and job training services. For the approximately 500,000 people that are homeless in this country on any given night, this additional money will mean a better chance to find a bed in a shelter, a soup kitchen at which to eat, or a permanent home.

They also took the important step of providing a stream of funding to renew Shelter Plus Care vouchers. This will enable local providers to continue to build up the infrastructure they need to serve this vulnerable population.

This year's budget builds on the public housing reform legislation we passed two years ago by increasing the public housing operating and capital funds, enabling local public housing authorities to maintain and invest in their properties.

Also included is a two year extension of The Federal Housing Administration's Down Payment Simplification Program. This will allow the FHA to continue using the simplified formula to extend homeownership to more American families.

Additionally, there is an increase in spending for the Lead Paint Hazard program, a very important program for cities trying to abate the poisonous lead paint found in their housing stock.

Lastly, I want to thank Senators BOND and MIKULSKI for their efforts in pushing one provision that did not make it into the bill, that is, a new housing production program. While I am disappointed that we were unable to achieve this in the end, I appreciate their acknowledgment of the housing crisis our nation is experiencing.

The long-term answer to this problem will have to be the dedication of new resources to building additional housing. While the nearly 80,000 new section 8 vouchers will help to alleviate the severe housing crunch that many working American families experience, I hope we will be able to revisit the topic of production again next year.

All in all, this is a very good bill. I am very pleased and again congratulate my colleagues on a well thought out, well funded, piece of legislation.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, as all Senators are aware, I have taken the floor on a number of occasions, not only this year, but over the past several years, to express my concern about the manner in which the Senate was disposing of certain appropriation bills. This year—as in three previous fiscal years, fiscal years 1997, 1999, and 2000—the Senate has, until today, again been unable to take up and debate and amend several fiscal year 2001 appropriations bills; namely, Treasury/General Government, VA/HUD, and Commerce/Justice/State appropriations bills. I have been deeply concerned that the Senate is in danger of becoming a mere adjunct of the House, when it comes to consideration of appropriations bills.

In light of the circumstances in which we find ourselves, so near the end of the 106th Congress, I was pleased to support the unanimous consent agreement entered into yesterday. Under that agreement, the Senate has before it this morning the Fiscal Year 2001 VA/HUD Appropriations bill, as amended by the Senate Appropriations Committee. That Committee-reported bill has been amended by a Committee substitute offered by Senators BOND and MIKULSKI. Despite the fact that the Senate has not taken up the VA/HUD Appropriations bill until today, the fact is that Chairman BOND and Ranking Member MIKULSKI have worked tirelessly on the substitute before the Senate today. They have worked with the Administration and the other body to pound out an agreement that is acceptable to all parties involved in those negotiations. So, I am pleased that the many hours that they have devoted to this effort have resulted in the agreement now about to be adopted by the Senate. As is always the case, when it comes to appropriations bills, no one is fully satisfied with the final agreements that are reached. I am sure that there are areas where members would prefer to see changes made, but the time has come and gone for us to complete our work on the Fiscal Year 2001 appropriations bills—a fiscal year which began some 12 days ago.

Mr. President, as I explained earlier in my remarks, the Senate, until today, had not taken up the VA/HUD bill, or the Treasury/General Government bill, or the Commerce/Justice/State bill. The amendment at the desk places before the Senate the Committee-reported FY–2001 Treasury/General Government Appropriations bill.

This is the only opportunity that the Senate has had to consider the Treasury/General Government Appropriations bill, other than its being presented to the Senate on September 14th in a combined Legislative Branch and Treasury/General Government conference report, which was unamendable. The inclusion of the Treasury/General Government appropriations in the Legislative Branch conference report was not amendable and precluded the Senate's opportunity to debate and amend the Treasury/General Government bill on the Senate floor. Instead, on September 14th, Senators were asked to vote on the unamendable conference report, which contained not only the Legislative Branch Appropriations for Fiscal Year 2001, but also the Treasury/General Government Appropriations for Fiscal Year 2001. The vote on that combined conference report was 28 yeas and 69 nays. The motion to reconsider that vote is still pending.

Mr. President, it is my understanding that several adjustments to that Legislative Branch and Treasury/General Government conference report have been made in the form of amendments to the Transportation Appropriations bill, which were adopted in conference and were included as part of the Transportation conference report, which has now passed both Houses of Congress and is awaiting the President's signature. I do not intend to discuss those amendments in detail at this time, but instead will point out that a concern by Senator REID regarding the selection of a chief administrative officer for the Capitol Police has been resolved in that Transportation conference, together with substantial increases in funding for the IRS and certain other matters pertaining to the Treasury/General Government portion of that combined conference report.

As a result of these amendments regarding the Legislative Branch and Treasury/General Government conference report, it is my understanding that that conference report is now acceptable to the Chairmen and Ranking Members of those two Subcommittees, and I believe it is the intention of the Leadership to bring up and dispose of that combined Legislative Branch and Treasury/General Government conference report immediately following completion of consideration of the VA/HUD Appropriations conference report, which is currently before the Senate.

Mr. President, I urged the Leaders to allow for the amendment to put before the Senate the Treasury/General Government Appropriations bill, as reported by the Appropriations Committee, in order to preserve, at least to some extent, the Senate's right to take up appropriations bills prior to their being inserted into unamendable conference reports. I appreciate that the Leaders accommodated my request. Although, under the unanimous consent agreement, there will be no opportunity to amend the Treasury/General Government Appropriations bill, at least we have preserved the Senate's right to consider it. I am encouraged by the fact that the Majority Leader, at this late hour of the session, has attempted, as best he could, to allow some semblance of Senate consideration of the VA/HUD and the Treasury/General Government appropriations bills. I am hopeful that a similar agreement can be reached on the one remaining appropriations bill which the Senate has not yet acted upon—the Commerce/Justice/State Appropriations bill.

I am also very hopeful that we can find a way to ensure that the Senate can return to the regular appropriations process in the next Congress and all congresses thereafter, whereby appropriations bills are reported by the Committee and taken up in the Senate for debate and amendment prior to their being inserted into unamendable conference reports.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment to explain my votes on the amendments offered by Senator BOXER to the VA–HUD Appropriations bill relating to legislative riders that were attached to the bill. Included in the bill were provisions that would potentially delay the issuance of rules on arsenic, the declaration of new ozone non-attainment areas, and ordering dredging for the clean up of PCB's. Senator BOXER offered amendments that would have eliminated or weakened these provisions. She has worked hard for our environment, and has been a leader on ecological issues, so I regret I had to vote against her proposals. Unfortunately I had to oppose her for several reasons. First, the amendments, if accepted would have seriously disrupted Congress's efforts to complete our work on the budget. These amendments would have resulted in additional delays, and could have jeopardized the fate of the bill.

I was also concerned because the Administration did not oppose, and did not agree with the dire assessment of the effects of these riders. Staff at the EPA do not believe that these riders will result in any significant delays. EPA does not believe that the dredging language included in the bill will delay action on the Fox River in my state, but it will ensure that we use the best science available when EPA develops clean up plans.

Senators BOND and MIKULSKI, along with the Administration, have done their best to neuter destructive language that was included in the House version of this bill, and I think they have done well. We would prefer that these riders not be included at all, but if they must, at least they were included in a way that is unlikely to have any negative effect on the environment.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I am very pleased that this year's VA, HUD Appropriations bill contains $1 million for the City of Detroit for the Detroit River walkway or promenade. The riverfront is a focal point of Detroit's redevelopment efforts in connection with the City's upcoming 300th anniversary and plans are underway to construct an extensive, pedestrian-friendly walkway or promenade along the shoreline. I have personally been able to obtain support from this body for that purpose. The grant provided for in this bill will help defray the costs of the project, such as land acquisition, walkway installation and building demolition, and will help give Detroit a world-class waterfront.

We also have before the Senate today two very important amendments to this bill. The first would strike language in the report which delays the Environmental Protection Agency from making a final regulation for arsenic in drinking water. The National Academy of Sciences has found that the current regulations for the levels of arsenic in our water are unacceptable. The Environmental Protection Agency has proposed to lower the standard from the current 50 parts per billion to 5 parts per billion. I support that proposal and regret that I had to vote against this amendment. However, this amendment contained two provisions and it is the other provision I do not support.

That part of this amendment would strike language in the report which prevents the Environmental Protection Agency from designating an area in nonattainment under the Clean Air Act pursuant to the 8-hour national ambient air quality standard for ozone. I agree that an ozone standard should be in place to protect public health and the environment. However, the Environmental Protection Agency's authority to issue the 8-hour standard is currently under review by the United States Supreme Court. The Court will hear argument on November 7 to decide whether to uphold a Court of Appeals decision that invalidated the 8-hour standard on the grounds that the agency had assumed an ''unconstitutional delegation of legislative power.'' Even the EPA has agreed that it cannot actually implement efforts with respect to the 8-hour standard. Until the Supreme Court hears this case, we do not know whether the EPA even had the authority to make this new rule. Therefore, I agree that the EPA should refrain from using the standard—a standard that may be struck down as unenforceable—until the Supreme Court has made its determination regarding the constitutionality of the EPA's actions.

Now this isn't a frivolous matter. A nonattainment designation can detrimentally affect an area and, if not justified, would cause needless economic hardship, such as costly transportation conformity measures, should the Supreme Court rule that the 8-hour standard is unenforceable. Further, this standard could impose unfair economic burdens on a number of communities in Michigan that suffer from significant ozone and other pollution transported from more severely polluted areas. And it could be all for nought if the Supreme Court strikes down the standard.

Mr. President, I support the goals of the Clean Air Act. However, it needs to be applied in a common sense equitable manner if it is to retain the support of the American People. It is not equitable to designate an area in nonattainment if that designation may become null and void in a matter of months. For these reasons I voted against the Boxer Amendment.

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I am pleased that, with my support, the Senate took another step today toward fulfilling our country's commitment to provide health care for our veterans. The fiscal year 2001 VA–HUD Appropriations Conference Report that passed the Senate this afternoon contains a $1.4 billion increase in veterans health care funding from the last year's appropriations level.

While I am pleased that we have finally come around to talking about additional funding for veterans health care, as opposed to three years of flatline budget levels, I am disappointed that the funding level in the FY2001 VA–HUD Appropriations Conference Report falls short of the level proposed by veterans organizations.

The authoritative Independent Budget is produced by major veterans organizations including AMVETS, the Disabled American Veterans, the Paralyzed Veterans of America, and the VFW. The Independent Budget and The American Legion agree that the Veterans Administration will need at least $500 million more in funding than provided by this conference report.

I am pleased to have led the effort last year in the Senate to increase veterans health care funding. Through my efforts on the Senate Budget Committee and on the Senate floor, we were able to start reversing the negative effects of three years of flat-lined veterans health care budgets with an increase of $1.7 billion. I am pleased that my efforts appear to have convinced the Administration and Members of Congress to start talking about increases in veterans health care funding instead of keeping this budget stagnant.

This year, I was successful in getting a bipartisan amendment passed to the Senate Budget Resolution that added an additional $1.9 billion to last year's funding for veterans health care. The conference report that passed the Senate today fell $500 million short of this goal and will prevent the VA from adequately funding a number of important programs including medical care, research, long term care, and necessary facility construction and renovation.

While the $1.4 billion increase in this year's VA budget and the $1.7 billion increase from last year are important improvements, I'm afraid the funds are simply providing budgetary backfill for the years when the veterans health care needs were ignored. We need a VA veterans' health care budget that can adequately offset years of underfunding, the higher costs of medical care caused by consumer inflation, wage increases, and legislation passed by Congress. For the first time in a number of years, we're working with overall budget surpluses instead of budget deficits. Clearly, the funds are there to provide for veterans health care. It is simply a question of whether the political will is there to make veterans health care a priority instead of an afterthought.

As a member of the Senate Budget Committee, I will continue to do all I can to encourage my colleagues to approve adequate funding levels for veterans health care. I look forward to continue working on a bipartisan basis with my Senate colleagues as well as with representatives of the veterans community in South Dakota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President. I rise to speak about a provision in the VA, HUD and Independent Agencies Appropriations bill, which was passed by the Senate today. Specifically, I want to speak about the substantial backlog of civil rights claims that have been filed with the Environmental Protection Agency's, EPA, Office of Civil Rights, OCR.

As my colleagues know, Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 provides that no person in the United States shall, on the grounds of race, color, or national origin, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be otherwise subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving federal financial assistance. For thirty-five years, this law has been a cornerstone of our nation's civil rights protections. To better implement Title VI in federal environmental programs, President Clinton issued an Executive Order in 1994 requiring each federal agency ''to make achieving environmental justice part of its mission by identifying and addressing, as appropriate, disproportionately high and adverse human health or environmental effects of its programs, policies, and activities on minority populations.''

Under EPA's Title VI implementing regulations, 40 CFR Section 7, EPA-funded permitting agencies are prohibited from taking actions in the permitting process that are intentionally discriminatory or have a discriminatory effect based on race, color, or national origin. Under these regulations OCR is required to ''promptly'' investigate all complaints filed under Title VI unless all parties agree to a delay [40 CFR Section 7.120]. OCR is first required to initiate complaint proceedings within 5 days of receipt of a complaint [40 CFR Section 7.120(d)]. Then it must review the complaint for acceptance, rejection, or referral to another agency and make a determination within 25 days of the receipt of the complaint [40 CFR Section 7.120(d)(1)]. If a complaint is accepted, EPA must make a preliminary finding in the matter, including recommendations, if any, for achieving voluntary compliance, and OCR must notify the recipient of these finding within 180 days of the start of the complaint investigation. [40 CFR Section 7.120(d)(2)].

Unfortunately according to the OCR's most recent log of cases filed on October 4, 2000, 103 Title VI claims have been filed since September 1993. Of these, over half, 56 cases, are still pending. The remainder were either rejected or dismissed over jurisdictional issues. Eleven of the still active cases have been pending for 5 years or more, without resolution. Only one case has been resolved by a decision of the OCR, which found that there was not a legally recognizable ''adverse impact'' on the community and denied the community's request for reconsideration.

To further complicate resolution for these civil rights claims, in 1998 a rider was inserted in the VA–HUD Appropriations bill that blocked the implementation or administration of the interim Guidance to enforce Title VI claims issued on February 5, 1998. This rider has effectively stopped the EPA from investigating and responding to claims of race or national origin discrimination that have been filed with the Agency after October, 1998. That same rider has been on all subsequent VA/HUD bills, including this one.

This summer the EPA revised it's Guidance, which was noticed in the Federal Register for public comment. The revision is titled ''Draft Revised Guidance for Investigating Title VI Administrative Complaints Challenging Permits.'' I am pleased that the rider, included in this VA/HUD Appropriations bill, would not apply to the EPA's revised Guidance.

However a there still remains a large backlog of cases to be acted upon. There were 35 complaints filed after the first rider in 1998. To date only one has been accepted for investigation. Although the step of acceptance or rejection is required under Federal Regulation within 25 days of the receipt of the complaint, 34 of these complaints are more than 25 days old and over half of them, 20 of 34 cases, have been ''under review'' for more than a year.

The EPA's own regulations are clear, regardless of any Guidance. Furthermore, the rider does not account for the entire backlog of unresolved complaints. There are still 21 complaints pending that were filed before the rider blocking the EPA's 1998 Guidance went into effect. Of these cases, 19 have been accepted, but no preliminary findings have been made. Two cases are still under review after 4½ years, and as you will recall the deadline in the federal regulations for accepting cases is 25 days from the initial complaint date. And again, half of the still active cases,—11 of 21—have been pending for 5 years or more, without resolution.

It appears the EPA is out of compliance with it's own regulations for processing civil rights complaints, both for cases filed before and after the effect of the rider. While the rider has no doubt been a hindrance to the Agency, it clearly does not absolve the Agency of its responsibilities under the 36 year old civil rights law. And the Agency's own regulations lay out a clear framework for processing and acting on complaints.

Several environmental and civil rights organizations have written to Congressional leaders on this backlog. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter to the VA, HUD and Independent Agencies Subcommittee from the NAACP, and a letter from the Earthjustice Legal Defense Fund be entered into the RECORD following my statement.

In closing, I am pleased the Administration appears to be working to finalize the revised Guidance. However, I remain concerned that the EPA has established no clear way of dealing with the backlog of civil rights claims that have built up over the past seven years.

Therefore, as a Senator from Minnesota, I call on the EPA, as expeditiously as possible, to resolve the many backlogged civil rights claims, several of which have been pending for years. Only then will we be able to fulfill the intent of the landmark 1964 Civil Rights Act.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF COLORED PEOPLE,
Washington, DC, October 11, 2000.

Hon. CHRISTOPHER S. BOND, Chairman,
Hon. BARBARA MIKULSKI, Ranking Member,
VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Subcommittee, Committee on Appropriations, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR BOND AND SENATOR MIKULSKI: The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the nation's oldest and largest grassroots civil rights organization, strongly opposes the anti-civil rights, anti-environmental rider in the House version of the VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies Appropriations bill that, for the third year in a row, attempts to interfere with the obligation of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to investigate and resolve Title VI Civil Rights complaints filed with its Office of Civil Rights. We urge you to not accept this rider in the final version of the bill, and to instead insist on bill language that requires the EPA to begin immediately resolving the growing backlog of civil rights complaints filed since 1993 by communities of color struggling for environmental justice.

The rider, as well as the backlog of civil rights complaints, has had the effect of undermining one of the most important laws in this country, Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, color or national origin. The NAACP worked for the enactment of Title VI and continues to work against any actions that may result in racial discrimination. Therefore, we are deeply troubled by acts of Congress and actions of government agencies that may result in having a disparate impact on communities of color.

Any community in this nation that feels that it is threatened by a state environmental agency decision must have access to legal recourse to address its concerns. Historically, these communities have been low-income areas with high concentrations of African Americans, Latino Americans and Asian Americans. The fact that communities of color are disproportionately over-represented among communities with these complaints leads to inevitable concerns that their basic civil rights are being violated. According to the EPA's Office of Civil Rights, there are now 56 complaints lodged with the agency that remain unresolved. Many of these claims were filed with the EPA several years ago. However, the agency has not even notified complainants about whether their complaints have been accepted or rejected—a duty required of the EPA by federal regulations. Of the 21 unresolved complaints that were accepted for investigation, over half were filed more than five years ago. The EPA has failed to render preliminary findings for all of the complaints accepted for investigation. However, federal regulations require the EPA to make preliminary findings within 180 days of the complaint's acceptance for investigation. EPA's failure to comply with federal regulations has blocked resolution of civil rights complaints. As a result, people of color who lack the resources for federal court civil rights litigation are effectively denied access to legal redress at the administrative level. This is a completely unacceptable situation.

The House anti-civil rights, anti-environmental rider makes a bad situation worse. For the last two years and as proposed for next year, the riders expressly prohibit the EPA from investigating and resolving new civil rights complaints. The result has been a maintaining the status quo of concentrating polluting sources in communities of color. By blocking the EPA from developing and implementing concrete manners of resolving these complaints, the rider creates a chilling effect on the EPA for investigating the backlog of complaints. As a result, the riders clearly have added to the problem of the growing backlog of unresolved civil rights complaints.

The rider is an unjust denial of a civil rights remedy for people of color struggling to protect their children and communities from environmental hazards and pollution. It violates the spirit, if not the outright language, of the Constitution of the United States that guarantees every American the right to ''life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.''

We urge you to delete all language from the final bill that could interfere with EPA's ability to investigate civil rights violations, and to insert into the final bill a provision that requires the EPA to resolve the backlog of civil rights complaints as expeditiously as possible. I hope that you will feel free to contact me with any questions or comments you may have on this matter. I look forward to working with you to ensure that the rights of all Americans are protected.

Sincerely,

HILARY O. SHELTON,
Director.

EARTHJUSTICE,
LEGAL DEFENSE FUND,
October 12, 2000.

Hon. PAUL WELLSTONE,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR WELLSTONE: EarthJustice Legal Defense Fund is a non-profit environmental law firm whose mission is to enforce laws that protect our environment through litigation and advocacy. One of these laws is Title VI of the Civil Rights Act, which expressly prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, color or national origin in federally-funded programs. In 1993, the New Orleans office of Earthjustice successfully represented African American citizens groups in Mississippi by filing the first Title VI Civil Rights complaint with the Environmental Protection Agency (''EPA''), which was against the state's environmental programs that concentrated waste sites in African American communities. Our civil rights complaint protected Mississippi citizens, who were unfairly targeted for additional proposed waste sites.

Clearly, Title VI of the Civil Rights Act is an important remedy to protect people of color who are disproportionately burdened by toxic facilities and waste sites. There have been numerous governmental and academic reports that demonstrate the racial disparities that exist in environmental permitting decisions, which concentrate polluting sources in communities of color. The gains that people of color have made in the struggle for environmental justice have heightened public awareness about this form of racism and established institutional changes at the EPA and other government agencies to address this issue. However, actions taken by Congress over the past three years have taken away the ability of people of color to exercise their civil rights in defense of their health and environment.

The right of citizens to seek legal redress—a cornerstone of our democracy—is blocked by Congressional riders that have prevented the EPA from investigating civil rights complaints for the last two years. This rider is also inserted in this year's VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies bill. Through this rider, Congress has effectively repealed civil rights protections for people who live in fear of industrial accidents and daily breath a cocktail of toxic chemicals spewed by facilities and waste sites in their neighborhoods. As a result of the rider, there has been an increase in the number of civil rights complaints filed with the EPA by people of color that go unanswered. There are now 56 civil rights complaints pending before the EPA's Office of Civil Rights that remain unaddressed, in violation of the agency's own Title VI regulations requiring prompt resolution of claims. The rider's offensive prohibition against investigating new civil rights complaints with tools and analyses developed by the EPA silences people of color. We find that such legislation is a dangerous erosion of our civil rights, which opens the door to new riders that can dismantle civil rights protections in housing, education, employment, and transportation. We find it profoundly disturbing that with one brushstroke of a pen, Congress can set back the gains of the civil rights movement in this country.

The anti-civil rights and anti-environmental rider in the present VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies bill sets a dangerous precedent in this country for taking away the rights of citizens. We deeply appreciate your leadership in opposing this rider and supporting a safe and healthy environment for all communities.

Sincerely,

MONIQUE HARDEN,
Staff Attorney.
JOAN MULHERN,
Senior Legislative Counsel.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, have the yeas and nays been ordered? I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BOND. Before we begin the vote, I urge all my colleagues to support this measure. Senator MIKULSKI and I have worked long and hard. Obviously, we have not made everybody happy, but that is not in our power. We hope we have done well by all of the functions and all of the facilities and departments we serve. We hope our colleagues will be sullen but not rebellious and join us in passing a measure which has so many good things to provide for veterans, housing, environment, space, science, and emergency management.

Again, I thank all my colleagues for their indulgence as we had to go through this unusual episode. I thank our staff, Jon Kamarck, Carolyn Apostolou, Cheh Kim, and Joe Norrell. On the minority side, Paul Carliner and Alexa Mitrakos have been outstanding.

The most valuable ally I have on this measure is the very distinguished Senator from Maryland, Ms. MIKULSKI, to whom I am deeply grateful, and I appreciate her leadership and guidance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I echo the expression of thanks to our staff and to our colleagues. I urge we move immediately to a vote and serve the Nation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the bill, as amended, pass? The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. GRAMS) and the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. HELMS) are necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN), the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY), and the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. LIEBERMAN) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) would vote ''aye.''

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

''(B) PERCENTAGE LIMITATION.—Not more than 20 percent of the funding available for tenant-based assistance under this section that is administered by the agency may be attached to structures pursuant to this paragraph.

''(C) CONSISTENCY WITH PHA PLAN AND OTHER GOALS.—A public housing agency may approve a housing assistance payment contract pursuant to this paragraph only if the contract is consistent with—

''(i) the public housing agency plan for the agency approved under section 5A; and

''(ii) the goal of deconcentrating poverty and expanding housing and economic opportunities.

''(D) INCOME MIXING REQUIREMENT.—

''(i) IN GENERAL.—Not more than 25 percent of the dwelling units in any building may be assisted under a housing assistance payment contract for project-based assistance pursuant to this paragraph.

''(ii) EXCEPTIONS.—The limitation under clause (i) shall not apply in the case of assistance under a contract for housing consisting of single family properties or for dwelling units that are specifically made available for households comprised of elderly families, disabled families, and families receiving supportive services.

''(E) RESIDENT CHOICE REQUIREMENT.—A housing assistance payment contract pursuant to this paragraph shall provide as follows:

''(i) MOBILITY.—Each low-income family occupying a dwelling unit assisted under the contract may move from the housing at any time after the family has occupied the dwelling unit for 12 months.

If such rental assistance is not immediately available to fulfill the requirement under the preceding sentence with respect to a low-income family, such requirement may be met by providing the family priority to receive the next voucher or other tenant-based rental assistance amounts that become available under the program used to fulfill such requirement.

''(F) CONTRACT TERM.—A housing assistance payment contract pursuant to this paragraph between a public housing agency and the owner of a structure may have a term of up to 10 years, subject to the availability of sufficient appropriated funds for the purpose of renewing expiring contracts for assistance payments, as provided in appropriations Acts and in the agency's annual contributions contract with the Secretary, and to annual compliance with the inspection requirements under paragraph (8), except that the agency shall not be required to make annual inspections of each assisted unit in the development. ''(H) RENT CALCULATION.—A housing assistance payment contract pursuant to this paragraph shall establish rents for each unit assisted in an amount that does not exceed 110 percent of the applicable fair market rental (or any exception payment standard approved by the Secretary pursuant to paragraph (1)(D)), except that if a contract covers a dwelling unit that has been allocated low-income housing tax credits pursuant to section 42 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 42) and is not located in a qualified census tract (as such term is defined in subsection (d) of such section 42), the rent for such unit may be established at any level that does not exceed the rent charged for comparable units in the building that also receive the low-income housing tax credit but do not have additional rental assistance. Subject to its waiting list policies and selection preferences, a public housing agency may place on its waiting list a family referred by the owner or manager of a structure and may maintain a separate waiting list for assistance under this paragraph, but only if all families on the agency's waiting list for assistance under this subsection are permitted to place their names on the separate list.

''(K) VACATED UNITS.—Notwithstanding paragraph (9), a housing assistance payment contract pursuant to this paragraph may provide as follows:

''(i) PAYMENT FOR VACANT UNITS.—That the public housing agency may, in its discretion, continue to provide assistance under the contract, for a reasonable period not exceeding 60 days, for a dwelling unit that becomes vacant, but only (I) if the vacancy was not the fault of the owner of the dwelling unit, and (II) the agency and the owner take every reasonable action to minimize the likelihood and extent of any such vacancy. Rental assistance may not be provided for a vacant unit after the expiration of such period.

''(ii) REDUCTION OF CONTRACT.—That, if despite reasonable efforts of the agency and the owner to fill a vacant unit, no eligible family has agreed to rent the unit within 120 days after the owner has notified the agency of the vacancy, the agency may reduce its housing assistance payments contract with the owner by the amount equivalent to the remaining months of subsidy attributable to the vacant unit. Amounts deobligated pursuant to such a contract provision shall be available to the agency to provide assistance under this subsection.

INTELLIGENCE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2001—CONFERENCE REPORT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the conference report to accompany H.R. 4392, the intelligence authorization.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate on the bill H.R. 4392, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2001 for intelligence and intelligence-related activities of the United States Government, the Community Management Account, and the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement and Disability System, and for other purposes, having met, have agreed that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agreed to the same with an amendment, and the Senate agree to the same, signed by a majority of the conferees on the part of the Houses.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

(The report was printed in the House proceedings of the RECORD of October 11, 2000.)

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, the Senate has before it the conference report to H.R. 4392, the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001. The conference report reflects the legislation, S. 2507, that was approved unanimously by the Select Committee on Intelligence on April 27, 2000, and amended and approved by the Senate on Monday, October 2.

I thank Senator BRYAN, the vice chairman of the committee for his assistance in expediting this conference report. This is Senator BRYAN's first year as vice chairman. It has been a pleasure to work cooperatively with him on a wide range of issues, and I regret that this also will be his last year on the committee and in the Senate.

The committee has been increasingly troubled by the NSA's growing inability to meet technological challenges and to provide America's leaders with vital signals intelligence, SIGINT. Success in NSA's mission is critical to our national security. Therefore, the conference report reflects the start of our investment in resources and support aimed at restoring the NSA's' capabilities.

I am proud to report that the conference report addresses the growing problem of leaks of classified information. The conferees endorsed the Senate provision that will close a gap in U.S. law to ensure the prosecution of all unauthorized disclosure of classified information. Successive directors of Central Intelligence have decried the growing problem of leaks of classified information and the damage it causes to our national security. DCI Tenet has publically stated that the U.S. Government ''leaks like a sieve.''

Arguments that section 304 will stifle the freedom of the press simply don't pass muster. This provision has nothing to do with restraining publication. It simply criminalizes knowing and willful disclosure of properly classified information by those charged with protecting it. The Senate Intelligence Committee unanimously approved this provision and worked closely with the Attorney General and the intelligence community to incorporate changes requested by the Department of Justice. The Departments of Justice and State and the CIA all support the provision as approved by the conference committee.

Another provision of the bill is designed to ensure that the State Department corrects the serious, systemic security weaknesses that have repeatedly placed at risk sensitive classified intelligence information collected at considerable risk and expense. This provision would require that the Director of Central Intelligence certify that the retention and storage of Sensitive Compartmented Information (SCI) by any element of the State is in full compliance with all applicable DCI directives relating to the handling, retention, or storage of such information.

The bill requires the Director of Central Intelligence, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense, to create an analytic capability for intelligence relating to prisoners of war and missing persons. The analytic capability will extend to activities with respect to prisoners of war and missing persons after December 31, 1990.

Also, the bill strengthens the IG's requirements to be fully engaged in investigating and responding to possible wrongdoing by senior CIA officials. In the wake of the investigation of former Director of Central Intelligence John Deutch this provision will ensure that the CIA policies its senior officials.

The conference report also contains the Counterintelligence Reform Act of 2000. S. 2089 was introduced by Senators SPECTER, TORRICELLI, THURMOND, BIDEN, GRASSLEY, FEINGOLD, HELMS, SCHUMER, SESSIONS, and LEAHY in April in the wake of Congressional and other investigations into PRC espionage against the Department of Energy's nuclear weapons laboratories and other U.S. government facilities, and the U.S. government's response. Those investigations focused attention on the application of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978, and highlighted coordination, information-sharing, and other problems within and among the Department of Energy, FBI, and Department of Justice. The amendment will correct some of the problems in coordinating and sharing information between federal agencies, and will clarify procedures and the statutory roles of various agencies in the investigation and prosecution of espionage and other cases affecting national security.

I thank all Senators for their cooperation in this conference report, particularly the members of the committee. I also thank the staff of the Select Committee on Intelligence for their hard work in developing this legislation.

SECTION 304

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I would like to ask a question of the Vice Chairman of the Intelligence Committee, Senator BRYAN, for purposes of clarification with respect to one definition in the Intelligence Authorization bill. And that's the definition of ''classified information'' in Section 304 of the bill which amends Section 798A of Title 18. Section 304 establishes as a crime the willful disclosure of classified information to an unauthorized person. In paragraph (c)(2) it defines ''classified information'' as ''information that the person knows or has reason to believe has been properly classified by appropriate authorities, pursuant to the provisions of a statute or Executive Order. . .''

Mr. President, I would like to ask the Vice Chairman's assurance that this bill is not intended to alter in any way the existing definitions of classified information contained in other statutes relevant to the protection of classified information and whistleblower rights. Is that correct?

Mr. BRYAN. The Senator is correct, and I thank him for bringing this to the attention of the Senate.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the conference report be agreed to, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The conference report was agreed to.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—H.R. 4461

Mr. WARNER. I ask consent that at 10 a.m. on Friday the Senate turn to the conference report to accompany H.R. 4461, the Agriculture appropriations bill, and it be considered under the following agreement, equally divided in the usual form.

I further ask consent that the debate continue beginning at 9:30 a.m. on Tuesday and proceed throughout the day.

I ask consent that the vote occur on adoption of the Agriculture conference report at 11:30 a.m. on Wednesday and that paragraph 4 of rule XII be waived and the time between 9:30 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. on Wednesday be equally divided in the usual form, and, finally, 45 minutes of the minority time be under the control of Senator HARKIN.

Mr. REID. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—H.J. RES. 111

Mr. WARNER. I ask consent that immediately following the vote on passage of the Defense authorization conference report, the Senate proceed to the consideration of H.J. Res. 111, the continuing resolution, the resolution be read the third time, and the Senate then proceed immediately to a vote on passage of the resolution with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE FLOYD D. SPENCE NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2001—CONFERENCE REPORT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the conference report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate on the bill H.R. 4205, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2001 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year and for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes, having met, have agreed that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with an amendment, and the Senate agree to the same, signed by a majority of the conferees on the part of both Houses.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

(The report was printed in the House proceeding of the RECORD of October 6, 2000.)

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, it is my privilege as chairman, together with my distinguished friend and ranking member, Mr. LEVIN, the Senator from Michigan, to at long last bring to the Senate the annual conference report from the authorizing committee in the Senate and the authorizing committee in the House.

To refresh the recollection of Senators, I will read the time agreement: 2 hours under the control of the chairman of the Armed Services Committee, Mr. WARNER; 2½ hours under the control of the ranking member, Mr. LEVIN; 1 hour under the control of Senator GRAMM; 30 minutes under the control of Senator WELLSTONE. Following the debate just outlined, Senator ROBERT KERRY will be recognized to make a point of order. The motion to waive the Budget Act will be limited to 2 hours equally divided in the usual form.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WARNER. We hope to yield back some time because I know many of our colleagues are anxious to make commitments, but this is a very important piece of legislation. I am certain the Senators who are going to participate, whom I have identified, will do so in a manner that fits the importance of this annual piece of legislation.

This is the 39th consecutive authorization bill passed by the Congress, assuming it passes this Chamber. It passed the House by a vote of 382–31. That will give some clear indication of the importance of the legislation and the strong support that it merits and has merited in the House of Representatives.

Mr. President, the Senate, as I have been with my colleagues here for the past hour or so for the voting, reflects a very somber note on this sad day for America—indeed, for all those who, throughout the world, stand guard for freedom. We have suffered a tragic loss to the U.S. Navy. This is in parallel with frightful losses taking place elsewhere throughout the Middle East. It brings to mind that this is a most dangerous world that faces us every day. Men and women in the Armed Forces of the United States go forth from our shores, serving in countries all over the world. They, of course, now are on a high alert because of the tragic terrorist act inflicted upon one of our destroyers, the U.S.S. Cole.

First in mind are thoughts for our sailors who have lost their lives, and most particularly their families and the families who, at this hour, are still waiting definitive news with regard to the crew of that ship. The casualties number four dead, approximately 12 missing, and some 35 to 36 suffering wounds. Still the facts are coming in.

This clearly shows the danger; it shows the risks the men and women of the Armed Forces are taking—not only in the Middle East region. This, of course, happened in a port in Yemen. The ship was on a routine refueling, a matter of hours, as it worked its way up towards the Persian Gulf to take up its duty station in enforcing the United Nations Security Council sanctions against Iraq. Because of the smuggling that is taking place in violation of those sanctions, those are dangerous tasks and they are being performed every day by men and women of the U.S. Armed Forces, Great Britain, and other nations. Air missions are being flown over Iraq every day, and often those missions are encountering ground fire and other military activity directed against them. We must be a grateful nation for the risks that are constantly assumed by the men and women of the U.S. Armed Forces and their families.

The Senate will have an opportunity to get further facts in the course of the day.

I will now direct my attention to this particular bill, and I see the distinguished President pro tempore, the former chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee. It is my privilege to succeed him. As an honor to our distinguished former chairman, I ask he lead off the debate on this bill today.

Mr. THURMOND. Thank you very much. I appreciate your fine work as chairman.

Mr. President, before I discuss the conference report on the Defense authorization bill, I want to join my colleagues in expressing my condolences to the families of the sailors killed and wounded in this morning's attack on the U.S.S. Cole. This heinous attack again demonstrates the constant peril faced by our military personnel and reinforces the need for this Nation to maintain its vigilance at all times.

Mr. President, I join Chairman WARNER and Senator LEVIN, the ranking member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, in urging my Senate colleagues to support the conference report to accompany the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001. The report, which is the culmination of hundreds of hours of work by the Senate and House Armed Services Committees, is a continuation of the Congress' efforts to reverse the decline in the readiness of our armed forces. It increases the President's budget request by more than $4 billion. More important, it directs the additional resources to the critical areas of procurement, research and development, and improving the quality of life for our military personnel and their families.

The chairman and ranking member have already highlighted the significant aspects of this bill. However, I do want to comment on the comprehensive health care provision for Medicare-eligible military retirees and the Energy Employees' Occupational Illness Compensation Program, both of which I consider significant aspects of this legislation. The health care provision is long overdue legislation that will ensure our military retirees and their families receive life-long health care committed to them as a condition of their service. It will significantly ease the uncertainty regarding health care and financial burden for thousands of military retirees who have dedicated their lives to the service of the Nation. The occupational illness compensation provision provides fair and just compensation to the thousands of workers who were exposed to dangerous levels of hazardous material and other toxic substances while they worked on the Nation's nuclear weapons programs. Although I understand that these benefits come at a significant financial cost, we must keep in mind our commitment to these patriots and remember the greatness of a Nation is not how much gold or wealth it accumulates, but on how it takes care of its citizens, especially those who serve in the Armed Forces.

As with all conference reports, there are disappointments. I am particularly disappointed that the provision to increase the survivor benefit plan basic annuity for surviving spouses age 62 and older was dropped during the conference. The provision would have increased the survivor benefit plan annuity for these individuals from 35 percent to 45 percent over the next four years. I understand that despite the obvious merit of the legislation it was dropped during the conference because it would have cost $2.4 billion over the next 10 years. I find this ironic, since there is more than $60 billion in direct spending attributed to this conference report.

Despite my disappointment regarding the survivor benefit plan provision, this is a strong defense bill that will have a positive impact on the readiness of our armed forces. It is also a fitting tribute to my friend FLOYD SPENCE, the Chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, to have this bill named in his honor. FLOYD has worked tirelessly for our military personnel throughout his long and distinguished career in the House of Representatives. Regrettably, due to the House Rules he will give up the chair of the Armed Services Committee at the end of this session. Although he will be missed as chairman, his leadership and concern for our military personnel will have a lasting legacy in this conference report and FLOYD will continue to serve the people of South Carolina and the Nation as a member of the House Armed Services Committee.

I congratulate Chairman WARNER and Senator LEVIN on this conference report and urge my colleagues to give it their overwhelming support.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I believe there is a parliamentary inquiry from our colleague. I yield for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that following the Senator from Virginia and the Senator from Michigan, I be allowed to speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I thank the Chair.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, of course, his request is in the unanimous consent agreement, and, of course, we will observe it.

Today the Senate begins consideration of the conference report to accompany H.R. 4205, the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001.

Before I discuss the provisions of the conference report, I want to report that my fellow Senators on the conference panel and I enthusiastically joined the House conferees in naming this bill. Representative FLOYD SPENCE has served as the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee for the last six years. His chairmanship, however, represents only a portion of the almost 30 years Representative SPENCE has been a tireless and dedicated supporter of the military men and women in uniform. As chairman of the committee, in particular, he has led the committee and the House of Representatives in addressing the many challenging national security issues that have confronted our nation in the wake of the cold war. Representative SPENCE has accomplished this undertaking with distinction. From this former Marine captain to a retired Navy captain, I salute him for his leadership. Under the rules of the House, he will relinquish command of the committee at the end of this Congress. Representative SPENCE will remain a member of the committee, and I look forward to continuing to work with him in the many years to come.

This legislation will have a profound, positive impact on our nation's security and on the welfare of the men and women of the Armed Forces and their families. For the second year in a row, the conference report before the Senate authorizes a real increase in defense spending. We have built on the momentum begun last year by authorizing $309.9 billion in new budget authority for defense for fiscal year 2001—$4.6 billion above the President's budget request. And how have we allocated this increase? This bill authorizes $63.2 billion in procurement, which is $2.6 billion above the President's budget request; $38.9 billion in research, development, test and evaluation, which is $1.1 billion above the President's request; and $109.7 billion in operations and maintenance funding, which exceeds the budget request by $1.0 billion.

It is said that success has a thousand fathers and failure is an orphan. The majority of credit for the successes in this bill however, can be attribute to five distinguished and decorated fathers: the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the four service chiefs. General Shelton, General Shinseki, Admiral Clark, General Jones, and General Ryan came to Congress repeatedly during this session and presented to the Senate Armed Services Committee their concerns about the state of the Armed Forces today. They also shared with us their observations about the future. They have consistently shared this information with us in a reasonable, earnest, and nonpartisan manner. We greatly appreciate their candor and contributions to this process.

We all recognize that our military today is over deployed and under recourced—both in terms of people and money.

Since the early 1990s, the U.S. military has been sent on operations overseas at an unprecedented rate; at the same time that force structure was reduced by a third and defense spending was declining. From the end of the Viet Nam War until 1989, there were 60 military deployments. From 1990 to today, there have been 343 deployments—a 571 percent increase. These statistics accurately tell the story. This trend has increased the risk to our forces and has exacerbated the recruiting and retention problems in the military. This cannot continue.

While the rate of military deployments is established by the President, the Congress, within our constitutional powers, is continuing to support the Armed Forces by improving the quality of life for the men and women in uniform and their families, by providing for funding increases to address declining readiness problems, aging equipment, and recruiting and retention difficulties. The conference report does this. For the servicemen and women deployed around the world, and the families at home that wait their return, they should know that the Congress is steadfastly behind them.

I turn now to what is one of the most important single item in this conference report—military healthcare, particularly for our retired personnel and their families. History shows they are the best recruiters of all.

The conference report before the Senate fulfills an important commitment of ''healthcare for life'' made by the recruiters—the U.S. Government—beginning in World War II and continuing through the Korean war and the Viet Nam war. The goal of making that commitment was to encourage service members to remain in uniform and become careerists. Simply put, a commitment of health care for life in exchange for their dedicated career service.

Again, this convergence report fulfills the promise of healthcare for life. I am proud of the bipartisan unanimity with which the Senate Armed Services Committee supported this initiative—an initiative never taken before by an congressional committee.

Let me describe for my colleagues and for our active and retired service members around the world the legislation in this conference report to authorize health care benefits for Medicare-eligible military retirees and their families, and how we arrived at this outcome.

For as long as I can remember, military recruits and those facing re-enlistment have been told that one of the basic benefits of serving a full military career is health care for life. We all know now that this commonly offered incentive was not based in statute, but was, nonetheless, freely and frequently made; it is a commitment that we must honor.

Let me briefly review the history of military health care. Military medical care requirements for activity duty service members and their families were recognized as early as the 1700's. Congressional action in the last 1800's directed military medical officers to attend to military families whenever possible, at no cost to the family. During World War II, with so many service members on activity duty, the military medical system could not handle the health care requirements of family members. The Emergency Maternal and Infant Care Program was authorized by Congress to meet this road. This program was administered through state health agencies.

The earliest reference in statute defining the health care benefit for military retirees was in 1956 when, for the first time, the Dependent's Medical Care Act specified that military retirees were eligible for health care in military facilities on a space-available basis. In 1966, this Act was amended to create the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services, CHAMPUS, to supplement the care provided in military facilities. This legislation, in 1966, specifically excluded from coverage military retirees who were eligible for Medicare—a program which had been enacted by the Congress one year earlier, in 1965.

The exclusion of over age 65, Medicare-eligible military retirees from guaranteed care from the military health care system was masked for many years because the capacity of military hospitals an the military medical system exceeded that required to care for active duty service members; therefore, many Medicare-eligible retirees were able to receive treatment, on a space-available basis, at military facilities. In the 1990s, we began to reduce the size of our military services and the base realignment and closure, BRAC, rounds began to close bases—and military hospitals—all across the Nation. The combined effect of fewer military medical personnel to provide care and the closure of over 30 percent of the military hospitals eliminated the excess capacity that had been so beneficial to military retirees. Also during this decade the retiree population grew dramatically, adding pressure to the military health care system. The true magnitude of the problem was finally exposed.

All of us have heard from military retirees who served a full career and, in so doing, made many sacrifices. Many times the sacrifices these heroic veterans made resulted in serious medical conditions that manifested themselves at the time in their lives when they were pushed out of the military health care system. As a nation, we promised these dedicated retirees health care for life, but we were ignoring that promise.

On February 23, 2000, I introduced a bill, S. 2087, that provided for access to mail order pharmaceuticals for ALL Medicare-eligible military retirees, for the first time. The legislation also would improve access to benefits under TRICARE and extend and improve certain demonstration programs under the Defense Health Program.

On May 1, 2000, I introduced S. 2486, which added a retail pharmacy component to the previous legislation, providing for a full pharmacy benefit for all retirees, including those eligible for Medicare.

On June 6, Senator TIM HUTCHINSON and I introduced S. 2669, a bill that would extend TRICARE eligibility to all military retirees and their families, regardless of age. Later that same day, I amended the defense authorization bill to add the text of S. 2669. This legislation provided uninterrupted access to the Military Health Care System, known as TRICARE, to all retirees.

While the Senate bill extended TRICARE eligibility to all military retirees and their families regardless of age, the defense authorization bill passed by the House of Representatives took a different approach. The House bill expanded and made permanent the Medicare subvention program. Medicare subvention is a program that is currently being tested in ten sites across the country. Under Medicare subvention, the Health Care Financing Agency of the Department of Health and Human Services reimburses the Department of Defense for providing health care to Medicare-eligible military retirees in military hospitals.

There are several problems with Medicare subvention. First, the amount of the reimbursement from Medicare to DOD falls well short of the actual cost of providing that care, causing DOD to absorb a loss for each retiree covered by the program. Second, expanding Medicare subvention nationwide would provide access to health care only for those beneficiaries living in proximity to the remaining DOD medical facilities. In contrast, the Senate bill covered 100 percent of the Medicare-eligible military retirees, regardless of where they live.

As many of you know, since the defense authorization conference began in late July, Senate and House conferees have been working toward the mutual goal of adopting legislation which would provide comprehensive health care to all military retirees, regardless of age. I am pleased to announce that the conference report to accompany the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 includes a permanent health care benefit for retirees—modeled on the Senate bill. I am delighted that we have honored the commitment of health care for life that was made to those who proudly served this nation. This is long overdue.

It had always been my intent to make this health care benefit permanent. In fact, when I originally introduced my legislation in February, with the support of many in the Senate, there was no time limit on the benefits contained in my amendment. During Senate floor consideration, a discussion arose about whether a budget point of order could be made against the bill due to the mandatory costs of the amendment. At that point, I made the decision to limit the provision to a preliminary 2-year period to ensure that there would be no point of order against the authorization bill. We knew of Senators who had a legitimate interest in raising such a point of order, and I did not want to put the bill at risk.

All through this process, I have made clear my commitment to work to make these benefits permanent at the earliest opportunity.

During the defense authorization conference we had an opportunity to make my retiree health care provisions permanent by converting the benefit to an entitlement and creating an accrual account in the Treasury. This conversion to an entitlement would not occur until fiscal year 2003.

Let me describe how funding the health care benefit through an accrual account would work. Accrual method of financing is more of an accounting mechanism than a change in funding. Using an accrual method of financing does not, in itself, increase the costs of a program. Accrual funding is commonly used in entitlement programs; one example of an accrual account is the military retirement account. The Department of Defense would annually deposit such funds, as determined by the actuarial board, into the accrual account in the Treasury. The Treasury, which would absorb the liability for certain costs attributed to providing health care, would also make an annual deposit to the accrual account. The costs of the health care benefit would than be paid from the accrual account.

The net effect of funding this important program as an entitlement would be similar to funding it from within the discretionary accounts of the Department of Defense. While a significant portion of the burden of funding this program is moved from the Department of Defense budget, there is little net cost to the federal government.

Permanently funding the military retiree health care benefit will be seen by retirees, active duty service members and potential recruits as the nation keeping it's commitment of health care for life to military retirees. Those serving today and those who are joining the military will see that the promise of a lifetime of health care, in return for serving a full career, will be honored in perpetuity.

Two weeks ago, in testimony before both the Senate Armed Services Committee and the House Armed Services Committee, General Hugh Shelton, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and each of the service chiefs strongly supported making this benefit permanent and using the accrual account method of financing. The Joint Chiefs have repeatedly testified that failing to honor the commitment to our retirees has been detrimental to their recruiting and retention efforts.

During our conference we made many tough decisions on issues that are very important to many Senators. I resisted every proposal that would potentially generate a point of order against the conference report. The accrual funding mechanism and the direct spending associated with the retiree health care benefit will make our conference report vulnerable to a motion to raise a point of order against our bill which would require a 60 vote majority to overcome. It is any Senator's legitimate right to take such an action. While I respect the right of any Senator to raise a point of order, I am urging my colleagues to consider the benefits of the health care provisions in this bill, which are fully justified. We would not want to leave our over-65 military retirees in doubt about our intentions with respect to their medical care. They must make critical decisions regarding their medical insurance plans and medical care. By making this health care plan a permanent entitlement, we are truly fulfilling the commitment made to all those who have completed a career in uniform.

If such a point of order is sustained, then the Defense authorization conference report will have to be recommitted to a new conference. There is simply not enough time in this Congress to commence a new conference.

If the Defense authorization conference report is not passed, there will be no health care benefit for Medicare-eligible military retirees. If the defense authorization conference report is not passed, this would be the first time in 38 years that the Congress has not passed a Defense authorization bill. That would be a tragedy. What a terrible signal to send to our brave men and women in uniform defending freedom around the world.

In addition to restoring our commitment to our retirees, the conference report also includes a number of important initiatives for active and reserve men and women in uniform today. The conferees authorized a 3.7 percent pay raise for military personnel effective January 1, 2001 and a revision of the basic pay tables to give noncommissioned officers an additional pay increase, effective July 1, 2001. I cannot understate the importance of providing our noncommissioned officers with this support. They are our career soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines; tried and true, they are the backbone of our military and are more than deserving of this pay raise.

We included a provision to reduce the number of military personnel on food stamps. The conference report would provide up to $500 per month in an additional, special pay for military personnel who are eligible for food stamps. By our estimates, this provision should reduce the 6,000 military personnel estimated by DOD to be on food stamps today by about half. To further assist our most needy service members, the conferees agreed to eliminate the requirement that service members pay 15 percent of their housing costs out of their own pocket and directed implementation of the Thrift Savings Program of active and reserve service members.

The conference report extends current and authorizes additional recruiting and retention bonuses and special pays. If the bill is not enacted into law, all of these bonuses will expire on December 31, 2000. If the services are not able to offer the recruiting and reenlistment bonuses, their recruiting and retention progress of this past year will be for naught.

Also important to improving the quality of life for servicemen and women and their families is our continuing support for the modernization, renovation, and improvement of aging military housing. This conference report contains $8.8 billion for military construction and family housing, an increase of $788.0 million above the administration's request. More than $443.0 million of this amount is for the construction of 2,900 family housing units—800 more homes than last year. The conference report also provides more than $585.0 million to renovate and upgrade critical barracks space for unaccompanied military personnel and more than $660.0 million for vital military construction projects for reserve components.

This conference report also supports a group of dedicated men and women, who, while not in uniform, provided an equally important contribution to the defense of the Nation. The conference report establishes a new program to compensate Department of Energy, DOE, employees and DOE contractor employees who were injured due to exposure to radiation, beryllium, or silica while working at certain DOE defense-related nuclear facilities. This new program is intended to compensate those employees who, for the past 50 years, have performed duties uniquely related to nuclear weapons production and testing. Eligible employees would receive a lump sum payment of $150,000 and payment for all future medical costs related to the covered illness.

At this point, I recognize the important contributions of Senators THOMPSON, VOINOVICH, MCCONNELL, and DEWINE and their staff in crafting the final conference outcome on DOE workers compensation. Although they were not conferees, they were involved every step of the way as we negotiated this important issue with the House. They are to be commended for their tireless efforts on behalf of DOE workers.

I will now briefly highlight just a few of the important measures in this bill which support modernization and operations of our land, sea, and air forces, and which support our continuing efforts to identify and counter the emerging threats—information warfare or the use of weapons of mass destruction.

The conference report:

Increases funding by over $888.0 million for the primary military readiness accounts for ammunition, spare parts, equipment maintenance, base operations, training funds, and real property maintenance. While the additional funds that the conferees have provided will help with some of the most critical shortages in these areas, further efforts will be required over the next several years if we are to restore the Armed Forces to appropriate levels of readiness;

Supports the Army's transformation efforts by: authorizing an additional $750.0 million for this initiative; directing the Army to provide a plan that charts a clear course toward the fielding of an objective force in the 2012 time frame; and requiring an evaluation of equipment alternatives for Interim Brigade Combat Teams;

Adds $560.0 million to the President's budget request for ship construction;

Adds $15.7 million for five additional Weapons of Mass Destruction Civil Support Teams, WMD–CST, which will result in a total of 32 WMD–CSTs by the end of fiscal year 2001. WMD–CSTs, formerly known as Rapid Assessment and Initial Detection, RAID; Teams, are comprised of 22 full-time National guard personnel who are specially trained and equipped to deploy and assess suspected nuclear, biological, chemical, or radiological events in support of local first responders in the United States.

Includes a provision that would designate one Assistant Secretary of Defense as the principal civilian advisor to the Secretary for Department of Defense activities for combating terrorism. This provision—which is critically needed—ensures that there is a single individual within the Department responsible for providing a focused, comprehensive and well-funded DOD policy for combating terrorism.

Provides additional funding to address several of the Department of Defense's most critical shortfalls in combating cyber-warfare threats. The conference report adds $15.0 million to create an information Security Scholarship Program to address shortages in skilled DOD information assurance personnel by providing essential training and education in exchange for a service commitment, and $5.0 million to establish an Institute for Defense Computer Security and Information Protection to conduct critical research and development that is currently not being done by DOD or the private sector, and to facilitate the exchange of information regarding cyberthreats and related issues;

Adds $146.0 million to accelerate technologies leading to the development and fielding of unmanned air combat vehicles by 2010 and unmanned ground combat vehicles by 2015. This initiative will allow the Department to exploit the opportunities created by the rapid pace of technological development to provide our men and women in uniform with the most advanced weaponry and leverage these developments in a way that minimizes the risk to those deployed in harm's why;

Authorizes a net increase of $391.8 million for ballistic missile defense programs including a $129.0 million increase for National Missile Defense risk reduction, an $85.0 million increase for the Airborne Laser program, and an $80.0 million increase for the Navy Theater Wide missile defense program;

Reduces the congressional review period from 180 days to 60 days for changes proposed by the administration on the export control levels of high performance computers;

Ensures service contractors receive prompt and timely payment from the Department of Defense by requiring a plan for the electronic submission of supporting documents for contracts and the payment of interest for service contracts for payments more than 30 days late;

Authorizes $470.0 million in federal assistance to the Nation's firefighters over the next two years. The conference report also establishes a framework for the review and reauthorization of the program at the end of that time.

I would now like to take a few moments to address a provision which is not in the final conference report—the Warner-Kasich amendment on Kosovo.

As my colleagues know, I started the legislative effort to get our European allies to live up to the commitments they have made to provide assistance to the peacekeeping operation in Kosovo shortly after returning from a trip to the region in January. I was greatly troubled by what I saw in Kosovo—a U.N. peacekeeping mission that was out of money; a civil implementation effort that had barely begun, almost seven months after the war had ended; and U.S. and other NATO troops having to make up for shortfalls on the civilian side by performing a variety of non-military missions, from performing basic police functions to running towns and villages, to acting as judges and juries. I could not allow this situation to continue without reviewing the issue with our allies and bringing it to the attention of my colleagues.

The United Sates bore the major share of the military burden for the air war on behalf of Kosovo—flying almost 70 percent of the strike and support sorties, at a cost of over $4.0 billion to the U.S. taxpayer and great personal risk to our aviators. In return, the Europeans promised to pay the major share of the burden to secure the peace. European nations and institutions quickly volunteered billions in assistance and thousands of personnel for the effort to rebuild Kosovo. Unfortunately, as I discovered in January, these resources and personnel were not making their way to Kosovo—commitments were simply not becoming realities.

I introduced legislation that had a very clear and simple purpose: to tell our European allies that we would not allow the commitment of U.S. military personnel to Kosovo to drift on endlessly because of the failure of the Europeans to live up to their commitments. My legislation would have done no more than hold our allies accountable for the pledges and commitments they freely made.

For a variety of reasons, a form of the legislation that I originally sponsored failed in the Senate on a close vote. However, Congressman KASICH, after consulting with me, pursued similar legislation as an amendment to the defense authorization bill in the House of Representatives. The Kasich amendment passed the House by an overwhelming margin—over 100 votes. It was this amendment that we addressed during our conference.

I believe that the legislation Congressman KASICH and I jointly pursued this year has had a very positive effect. Money and personnel for civil implementation efforts are now flowing into Kosovo. Our allies are making credible progress in fulfilling their commitments. The civil implementation effort in Kosovo is now moving forward. While more clearly needs to be done, it was the feeling of a majority of the conferees—myself included—that the Kosovo legislation had largely achieved its purpose, and keeping this legislation in the final conference report could have a negative impact on relations with our allies and, perhaps, developments in Kosovo.

In place of the Kasich language, the conferees included a provision which requires the President to submit semi-annual reports to the Congress, beginning in December of this year, on the progress being made by our allies in fulfilling their commitments in Kosovo. Such reports will allow the Congress to keep track of developments in this important area. If these reports reveal that progress again lags, it is the intention of this Senator to pursue legislation in the future designed to ensure greater burden sharing by our European allies in this crucial venture.

In conclusion, I want to thank all of the members and staff of the Senate and House Armed Services Committee for their hard work and cooperation. This bill sends a strong signal to our men and women in uniform and their families that Congress fully supports them as they perform their missions around the world with courage and dedication.

I am confident that enactment of this conference report will enhance the quality of life for our service men and women and their families, strengthen the modernization and readiness of our Armed Forces, and begin to address newly emerging threats to our security. I strongly urge my colleagues to adopt the recommendations of the conference committee.

Mr. President, I especially thank my distinguished friend and ranking member for the cooperation he has given me. This is the 22nd year we have served together in the Senate. We have been partners all these many years. We are proud to have the joint responsibility of the leadership of the committee that tries at every juncture to exert wisdom and decisions reflecting bipartisanship and, as in the famous words of another Senator, we check politics at the water's edge, particularly as it relates to the forward-deployed troops of our Armed Forces.

We are proud of that record. We have worked together very well. There was unanimous signing of the conference report which is presently before the Senate. I am very proud of the participation of all members of our committee and, indeed, the superb staffs of both the majority and minority.

I join my distinguished colleague, the President pro tempore and former chairman, in recognizing this bill is named for FLOYD SPENCE, the chairman of the House committee. Chairman SPENCE has served many years. He was a World War II veteran in the Navy and rose to the rank of captain. He has had a distinguished public service record in the United States. It is most fitting that this bill be named in his honor.

Mr. President, I see the presence of our distinguished colleague from Alabama. Perhaps he would like to follow the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. SESSIONS. If that is appropriate, I will be honored to follow the Senator.

Mr. WARNER. Senator WELLSTONE, to be correct. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent he be recognized following Senator WELLSTONE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, unless the managers, Mr. LEVIN or myself, for some reason need to be recognized.

For the second year in a row, the conference report before the Senate authorizes a real increase in defense spending. We have built on the momentum of last year by authorizing $309.9 billion in new budget authority for Defense for the fiscal year 2001, $4.6 billion above the request of the President of the United States.

That additional funding over and above the President's request was the result of the actions of many Senators, most particularly our Senate leadership, Republican and Democratic, the Budget Committee chairman, Senator DOMENICI, the ranking member, and others, and I certainly had a strong hand in it. We had a record to take before the Senate to justify that increase, and that record, in large measure, was put together by the Joint Chiefs of Staff; specifically, the Chiefs of the Services who have periodically come before the Congress and, in accordance with the clear understanding between the Congress and the Service Chiefs, to give us their opinions with regard to the needs for their respective military departments and, indeed, the other departments. They give us those professional opinions, even though those opinions at times are at variance with the statements of the President, the Secretary of Defense, and possibly even the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The Service Chiefs have come forward repeatedly and told us about the needs over and above budget requests. Therefore, at this time, I specifically thank them for their service and thank them also for standing up for those in uniform and their families in their respective military departments.

When you are down there, whether it is an enlisted man or junior officer, looking up to those four-stars, it is a long way, but they are the leaders and they are the most trusted of all, the most unbiased. When it comes to politics, there is not a trace. They are there for the interest of our Nation and most specifically for those who every day follow their orders. I thank them.

They confirmed what we all know: That today, the U.S. military is overdeployed and underresourced, resource in terms of people, dollars, procurement, and O&M funds. I will go into detail about them in the course of this debate.

Since early 1990, the U.S. military has been sent on operations overseas at an unprecedented rate. At the same time, that force structure was reduced by a third and defense spending was declining every year up until 2 years ago. From the end of the war in Vietnam until 1989, the records of the Pentagon show there were 60 military deployments.

From basically 1989 until today, there have been 343 deployments in sharp contrast to the 60 in the preceding period. This represents over a 500-percent increase in our deployments. These statistics tell the story.

I am not suggesting in any way that most of these deployments were absolutely essential. Many were in the vital security interests of the United States. As I think quite properly, those contending for the Presidency today, both Republican and Democrat, have pointed out that they will watch very carefully what has been brought to the attention, largely by the Congress and the Chiefs, that they are overdeployed and underresourced. Those are the statistics of this period basically from 1989 until today.

While the rate of military deployments is established by the President, the Congress, with our constitutional powers, is continuing to support the Armed Forces by improving the quality of life for the men and women in uniform and their families, and the President, in his budget submissions, has done that. But each time in the past 3 years, the Congress has gone above the President's request to add what we can, given the budget constraints, to further improve the quality of life of the men and women in the Armed Forces, to further increase procurement, to further increase O&M funds because we are highly aware of that theme—overdeployed and underresourced.

The conference report takes great strides in the direction to improve, over and above that requested by the President, the quality of life of our men and women and, I may say, the retirees.

I am proud of our committee. The Senate Armed Services Committee, the records show, is the first committee in the Senate to recognize the need for revising the health care program for career military retirees. Basically, that is 20 years or, in the case of those who have medical retirement, earlier than 20, but the career military have long been neglected.

I want to credit the many organizations and many individuals who approached this chairman, who approached, I believe, every Member of the Senate, and brought to their attention the need for correction. That correction, I am proud to say, is incorporated in this conference report and will be given in great detail.

Basically, these retirees, in my judgment, have been entitled to this for many years. In my judgment, they were promised this. At a later point in this debate, I will go into the specifics because I have researched it way back. And now, at long last, in this 2001 appropriations, we make the start for a health care program to have the care for those retirees which they deserve and to which they have been entitled for many years. One of the most important single items in this conference report is this military health care.

History shows that our military retirees are the best recruiters of all. One of the direct consequences of our military being overdeployed and underresourced—I will use that refrain over and over again—has been the difficulty in recruiting the needed personnel, the difficulty in retaining the middle grade officers primarily, and the middle grade enlisted, particularly those with skills that are in direct competition with our ever-burgeoning economy in the private sector, who know full well that to get a military person—trained in computers, trained in electronics—they know they get a well-trained, well-disciplined, reliable employee.

That is quite a lure to these young men and women who are overdeployed, who suffer so much family separation. There has been an over 500-percent increase in these military deployments in the past decade or so. So that is the reason we are having difficulty in meeting our recruiting goals.

But we are beginning to put a fix in to take care of the retirees, so once again they can go out, as they have done in the past—I am not suggesting they withstood recruiting, but certainly some of the incentive has been lacking because they have not been treated fairly—and, once again, they will be in the forward vanguard of recruiting. They are the best recruiters of all.

I have to say on a personal note, my father served in World War I. I am very proud of his service and believe he recruited me in World War II by simply saying: It is your duty, son. Although I had very modest service at the conclusion of, the end of that war, fathers like him all throughout the country—and some mothers—were the recruiters long before we got to the recruiting station.

The conference report before the Senate fulfills an important commitment of health care for life, as we have determined because in World War II, history shows, and continuing through the Korean war, and indeed through Vietnam, the goal of making that commitment was to encourage service members to remain in uniform and become careerists. Simply put, there was the commitment of health care for life in exchange for their dedicated career service.

Let me describe for my colleagues and for our active and retired service members around the world the legislation in this conference report to authorize health care benefits for Medicare-eligible military retirees and their families. First, our committee, we were in the forward vanguard of this. Then we were joined by the House. But let me describe what we have done in this bill jointly—Senate and House—in this conference report.

Military medical care requirements for active duty service members and their families were recognized as early as the 1700s. That is how far back in the history of our country it goes—George Washington's Continental Army. Congressional action in the late 1800s directed military medical officers to tend to military families, whenever possible, at no cost to the family.

During World War II, with so many service members on active duty, the military medical system could not handle the health care requirements of many family members. The Emergency Maternal and Infant Care Program was authorized by Congress to meet that need in that wartime period. This program was administered through State health agencies. The earliest reference in statute defining the health care benefit for military retirees was in 1956, when for the first time, the Dependent's Medical Care Act specified that military retirees were eligible for health care in military facilities on a space-available basis.

In 1966, a decade later, this act was amended to create the Civilian Health and Medical Care Program of the Uniformed Services, called CHAMPUS, to supplement the care provided in military facilities. This legislation, in 1966, specifically excluded from coverage military retirees who were eligible for Medicare, a program which had been enacted by the Congress 1 year earlier, in 1965.

All of us have heard from military retirees who served a full career and in so doing made many sacrifices. Many times the sacrifices these heroic retirees made resulted in serious medical conditions that manifested themselves in a time in their lives when they were pushed out of the military health care program. As a nation, we promised these dedicated retirees health care for life, but at that period we were ignoring that promise of America.

On February 23, 2000, I introduced a bill, S. 2087, that provided for access to mail-order pharmaceuticals for all Medicare-eligible military retirees. This was the first time that has ever been done. The legislation would also improve access to benefits under TRICARE and extend and improve certain demonstration programs under the Defense Health Program.

On May 1, 2000, I introduced S. 2486, which added a retail pharmacy component to the previous legislation, providing for a full pharmacy benefit for all retirees, including those eligible for Medicare.

Now, I staged this purposely because throughout this period I was in consultation with the many veterans groups who came forward in that period, experts who had studied this for a long time and brought to my attention the added requirements in the legislation.

While I and other members of the Senate Armed Services Committee were working on this legislation, we were doing so in consultation regularly with those organizations representing the retired military and the Department of Defense. It is interesting, Secretary Cohen had some difficulty, understandably, because of his budget constraints. But I know in his heart of hearts he was concerned about the military retirees, as were the Chiefs. But the time came when the Chiefs had the opportunity to express their opinions, which, as I say, were at variance with those of the Secretary of Defense and, indeed, the President. They told us about the need for this legislation.

So while I thank the Senate and most particularly our committee for pioneering this effort for the first time in the history of the Congress, we owe a debt of gratitude to so many others who helped us, gave us the encouragement, and, indeed, showed us the path to follow.

On June 6, Senator TIM HUTCHINSON and I introduced S. 2669, a bill that would extend TRICARE eligibility to all military retirees and their families regardless of age. Later that same day, I amended the Defense authorization bill to add the text of S. 2669. This legislation provided uninterrupted access to the military health care system, known as TRICARE, to all retirees.

While the Senate bill extended TRICARE eligibility to all military retirees and their families regardless of age, the Defense authorization bill passed by the House of Representatives took a different approach. I respect their approach, but it was different from ours.

The House bill expanded and made permanent the Medicare subvention program. Medicare subvention is a program that is currently being tested in 10 sites across the country. Under Medicare subvention, the Health Care Financing Agency of the Department of Health and Human Services reimburses the Department of Defense for providing health care to Medicare-eligible military retirees in military hospitals.

There were two significant problems with Medicare's subvention in the judgment of the Senate, and particularly the conferees, when we got to conference.

First, the amount in the reimbursement from Medicare to DOD falls well short of the actual cost of providing that care, causing DOD to absorb a loss for each retiree covered by the program.

Second, expanding Medicare subvention nationwide would provide access to health care only for those beneficiaries living in proximity to the remaining DOD medical facilities. In contrast, the Senate bill covered 100 percent of the Medicare-eligible military retirees, regardless of where they live.

This is important; I emphasize that. Many of the military retirees live under very modest circumstances and have sought places in our Nation for their retirement homes which cost less and, therefore, very often are not co-located with large military facilities and military medical hospitals. They are scattered. It has been a burden on some of those people through the years to travel considerable distances to avail themselves of such medical assistance as was afforded to them prior to this bill.

Since the Defense authorization conference began in late July, Senate and House conferees have been working towards the mutual goal of adopting legislation which would provide comprehensive health care to all military retirees regardless of age. I am pleased to announce that the conference report to accompany the National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 2001 includes a permanent health care benefit for retirees modeled on the Senate's original version to have it permanent.

I am delighted that we have honored the commitment of health care for life that was made to those who proudly served the Nation on a permanent basis.

I acknowledge the strong participation by the House conferees; indeed, the Speaker of the House and the chairman of the House Subcommittee on Personnel, and Chairman Spence, Chairman Stump. I could mention many who worked on this. That was a subject of some concern in the conference because Senator LEVIN and I, when we had our bill on the floor with provisions which would, in an orderly way, have enabled us to have permanency to this program, were going to be challenged on a point of order. That may occur again today. Frankly, I would rather have it occur today than when this bill first was on the floor 2 months or so ago for various reasons.

So the conferees made the decision—a bold one—that they would make this permanent, and we now present that to the Senate. It had always been my intent to make this health care permanent. In fact, when we originally introduced the legislation in February, with the support of many in the Senate, there was no time limit on the benefits contained in the early Senate bills and amendments. I have covered the history of how we have gotten where it is now permanent.

The net effect of funding this important program as an entitlement would be similar to funding it from within the discretionary accounts of the Department of Defense. There is little net cost to the Federal Government. Permanently funding the military retiree health care benefit will be seen by retirees, active duty service members, and potential recruits, both enlisted and officers, as the Nation keeping its commitment to health care for life to military retirees. Those serving today and those who are joining the military will see that the promise of a lifetime of health care in return for a career will be honored by America.

Two weeks ago in testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee and the House Armed Services Committee, Gen. Hugh Shelton, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and each of the Service Chiefs strongly supported making this benefit permanent and using the accrual account methods of financing. While I respect the right of any Senator to raise a point of order, I am urging my colleagues to consider the benefits of the health care provisions of this bill which are fully justified. We would not want to leave our over-65 military retirees in doubt about our intentions with respect to their future medical care.

This issue is on the 1 yard line, ready to be carried across for a touchdown by the Senate, hopefully within a matter of hours.

These retirees must make critical decisions regarding their medical insurance plans and medical care. By making this health care plan a permanent entitlement, we are truly fulfilling the commitment made to all those who have completed a career in uniform and to those contemplating a career in the future.

I am going to yield the floor at this time so as to move along. I will return to my remarks at a later point.

I yield the floor to my distinguished colleague. Again, I thank Senator LEVIN for his untiring efforts on our behalf to create this historic piece of legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, first let me congratulate Senator WARNER, our chairman, for his distinguished service, as always, for his total commitment to the men and women in the military, for trying to produce a bipartisan product which we have produced again this year. Without his leadership, this would not be possible. I, first and foremost, thank my good friend JOHN WARNER for again coming through with a really good bill that I think will command the large number of votes which will be forthcoming.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I thank my colleague. I know he would wish to share, with me, such credit for this legislation with all members on both sides of the aisle of the Armed Services Committee. We have a great team.

Mr. LEVIN. That was indeed the next point. We are blessed with a committee which operates on a bipartisan basis. The members of the committee work well together. The chairmen of our subcommittees work well. Our staffs work well together. We have many blessings to count being able to serve in this body and to serve our Nation, but surely one of our great blessings is being on a committee which is able to operate on such a bipartisan basis.

I echo Chairman WARNER's comments about the tragedy in Yemen this morning that involved the Navy ship, the U.S.S. Cole. Our hearts and prayers go out to the families of those who have been lost in this despicable act of terrorism. Our hearts and prayers go out to the sailors who have survived who are now struggling for life. Our hearts and prayers go out to their families. We are in, as we surely understand, for a long battle against terrorist acts.

I notice my good friend from Kansas on the floor, chairman of the subcommittee that addresses new threats we face. The terrorist threat which was exemplified this morning in Yemen has been repeatedly pointed out by him and other members of the subcommittee and of the Senate as being the type of threat that we face. That kind of terrorist act is a real world threat which is here and now.

That was not a weapon of mass destruction, but it was a weapon that caused massive injury, massive death. We must put our brains and our resources together with allies to try to prevent these kinds of actions from occurring and, when they do occur, to bring the perpetrators to justice.

The Senator from New York has requested that I yield 5 minutes to him so he may make a statement at this time. The order that we had established by unanimous consent was that after my opening statement the Senator from Minnesota would be recognized, and then the Senator from Alabama would be recognized. I want someone on the other side of the aisle to hear this, but I ask unanimous consent that that be modified at this time so I may defer my opening statement to yield to the Senator from New York 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I thank my friend, the Senator from Michigan. He is gracious as always, and I appreciate the opportunity to briefly interrupt this proceeding. I also compliment him and Senator WARNER on the bill they have put together. As was mentioned, the whole Chamber admires the bipartisan way in which the Senators from Michigan and Virginia have worked together.

I rise today to say I am stunned and saddened by the violence which has erupted in the Middle East. I am saddened by the loss of four innocent and brave American sailors, victims of malicious, malevolent, maddening terrorism that has no rationale, no justification.

My prayers and thoughts are with their families, as well as with those who have been injured and those who are missing, and their families as well. Terrorism can strike anywhere at any time. We have to be doing all we can in this Chamber to deal with it.

I am stunned also that after 7 years of good faith negotiations all too many Palestinians still see violence as the means to achieve their ends. The violent pictures we saw of the two Israeli reservists being thrown from a window and brutally beaten is enough to turn anyone's stomach. Pictures such as that and so many other pictures that we have seen are not only very disturbing to us, but it lessens the chances for peace in the Middle East.

I am disappointed and sad that Chairman Arafat has failed to stop or even condemn the violence. Yasser Arafat says he is for peace and he has signed agreements for peace. Yet violence has erupted in the Middle East and not only has he failed to stop it, you don't hear a word of condemnation. Instead, one may feel that he misguidedly thinks violence is a means to an end. I am saddened that a peace process which saw the courage and sacrifice of leaders such as Yitzhak Rabin and Ehud Barak may be crumbling before our eyes. The prospect for peace, at least in the near future, has been shattered by today's events.

I have been a supporter of the Oslo peace process because I truly believe that peace is the only realistic, long-term alternative for Israel and Israel's Arab neighbors. It will be through peace that they achieve strength and security. It will be through peace that Israel will have its future aglow with possibilities. But now, to be honest, I am not so sure what will come of the Oslo peace process, let alone how much more Israel can sacrifice in the name of peaceful compromise which may never come to be. Prime Minister Barak went further than anyone dreamed he could go, and even those exceedingly generous and courageous offers were rejected.

Peace has to be a two-way street; otherwise, it is just empty promises.

Chairman Arafat must be called to task for his inability to control the violence and to embrace peace. The sad truth is that while Israeli leaders were preparing their citizens for peace by bringing them to accept the compromises necessary for peace, Arafat was doing the opposite. He was making false promises to his people and raising false hopes.

If there is to be real peace in the Middle East, Chairman Arafat has a responsibility to prepare his people for peace, not violence. That means changing Palestinian textbooks which still call for the destruction of Israel. It also means stopping the rhetoric of hate concerning Jewish claims to Jerusalem's holy sites. Most of all, it means telling his people, as Ehud Barak has, that compromise is the way to attain a fair and just settlement, and that violence is no longer an option.

As a result, today, sadly, extremists on both sides have been strengthened. Who has benefited from what has happened in the last 10 days? Ideologues, and only ideologues; not average people, whether they be Jew, Arab, Christian, or Moslem.

I believe Mr. Arafat will rue the day he let this genie out of the bottle. He has let forces loose and he now has a tiger by the tail, and I even wonder whether he can survive.

To the Israelis, I say: Stay the course, even at this painful moment. It will be very easy to throw up one's hands and give up. Yes, be strong, and make sure that when a horrible thing such as happened to the two in Ramallah happens, there will be a price paid. But don't give up on the course to peace; don't give up to those who will tell you there is another solution. There is not.

To my fellow Americans, I say: First, we are so saddened, again, by the loss of innocent lives—people defending America as Americans have for more than 200 years. I also say to my American brethren that we can't isolate ourselves, that this conflict in the Middle East is not one on which we can turn our backs. Just look; not only are four Americans dead; several more are missing and many more injured, and oil prices are up. We are carefully watching movements of troops in Iraq and Iran at this moment. We are worried about terrorism even on our own shores. No, we all must stay the course.

As I mentioned, the prospects for peace in the Near East have been shattered by today's actions. Only by strong, courageous but careful and judicious action by people of good will—Americans, Israelis, and Arabs—can those pieces be put back together. I thank the Chair.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, if my colleague will yield for 30 seconds, I know other colleagues want to respond, but I say to my colleague from New York in as sincere a way as I can, I thought his words were powerful and eloquent. They were beautifully written, beautifully said, and very important. I want to associate myself with him. I know I can't speak on it as well as the Senator did, so I associate myself with what he said. It is just the way I think about it and feel about it.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. L. CHAFEE). The Senator from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. President, I ask the distinguished Presiding Officer this: It is my understanding that the Senator from Michigan will be recognized next, to be followed by the distinguished Senator from Minnesota, to be followed by the Senator from Alabama, Mr. SESSIONS; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. ROBERTS. I ask unanimous consent that I may be recognized following the remarks by Senator SESSIONS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, while the Senator from New York is still on the floor, I commend him for his thoughtful comments about the Middle East. I was not only struck by the content of his comments, but also by the way in which they were so forcefully and calmly delivered, which I think will reverberate throughout this Chamber.

These are times of great violence in the Middle East. One of the most striking things to me is the silence of Chairman Arafat relative to violence. Prime Minister Barak has said to his own citizens, ''I urge our Jewish citizens to refrain from attacking Arabs and their property under any circumstances.'' From Chairman Arafat, we have had silence about the actions of the Palestinians in the streets. That silence speaks volumes. It was referred to by the good Senator from New York, and I want to again say that I thought his comments were exactly the right substance and tone.

I also want to expand on that one thought, about what we have not heard once from Chairman Arafat, which is a statement saying that violence—by whoever—is wrong. We have not even gotten that much from Chairman Arafat, and it is a huge and very obvious and intentional omission on his part, which speaks very loudly about what his intentions are.

I would be happy to yield to my friend from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I think the Senator from New York summed up my feelings. I think Americans have to understand that tiny, little Israel, the only democracy in that part of the world—surrounded by some of the worst tyrannies in the world—is having a very difficult time right now. If there was ever a country in the history of the United States that has shown their friendship to the United States it has been Israel. During this time of need for Israel, we have to show our friendship toward them—no one wants to see the violence taking place—and recognize that Israel is a democracy. It was in 1948. It is today.

As my friend from Michigan said, I hope we will have Chairman Arafat come forward and do something publicly to denounce what is taking place on the Palestinian side. It has been despicable—from the raiding of the tomb, to the terrible murders of these two Israeli soldiers today.

I support the statement made by my friend from New York, and certainly my friend from Michigan who is managing this bill. Today, of all days, signifies to me the importance of the work that he and Senator WARNER have done to get this bill to this point so we can authorize the many things that need to be done by the U.S. military. We have talked about the act of terrorism against our U.S. Navy, and this bill addresses that.

As I said yesterday, the Senator from Michigan is to be commended for his work on this bill.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Nevada. He is always thoughtful and on the point. He joins those of us who have commented on the tragic loss of our sailors and on the injuries to our sailors on the U.S.S. Cole because not only is it happening at the moment—this act of terrorism—but it is dramatizing what the major threats to our security are. But it is just another reminder of the sacrifices of the men and women of our military and the risk that they face every day in this world.

I thank him for his comments.

I am happy to yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I thank both of my colleagues for not only their kind remarks but for their leadership on this and some other issues. It is a pleasure to serve in the Senate under such leaders as the Senators from Michigan and Nevada. I thank them.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the good Senator from New York.

Mr. President, let me now continue with my remarks relative to the Defense authorization bill itself.

The most far-reaching step that we have taken in this conference report is to answer the call of Secretary Cohen and the Joint Chiefs of Staff to address shortcomings in the health care program. We provide health care for our military personnel and our retirees and their families. But there are shortcomings. There are gaps. There are holes. There are lapses. We are trying to fill those. We are trying to make the commitment of health care to our military men and women and to their families, and after they retire, a real-world commitment. We want to fulfill the promise of lifetime health care to those who complete a military career by providing, as we do in this bill, that retired members and their families remain in the TRICARE health program for life. When they become eligible for Medicare, TRICARE would serve as a Medigap-type policy and pay virtually all costs for medical care that are not covered by Medicare itself. This means that retirees will be able to choose any medical provider that accepts Medicare, and TRICARE would pay the deductibles and the copayments.

Second, the budget request that we approved improves access to health care for families of active duty members by eliminating deductibles and copayments for care provided by the TRICARE program.

We would also make TRICARE Prime available to the families of service members assigned to remote locations where they don't have access to military treatment facilities. And we provide for physical exams for family members when required for school enrollment.

Finally, we would address the rising price of prescription drugs by providing a generous pharmacy benefit for military retirees. Under this provision, prescriptions filled in a military facility will be free. Prescriptions filled through the military's national mail-order pharmacy will cost $8 for a 90-day supply. Retirees would pay a 20-percent copayment for prescriptions filled in a way which is on an approved list of retail pharmacies. There is the so-called ''network retail pharmacy.'' They would pay a 25-percent copay for prescriptions filled in a non-network retail pharmacy; in other words, from a pharmacy not on the approved list.

I am appalled, as so many Members of this body are appalled, by the rising costs of pharmaceuticals in this country, and by the growing gap between the prices paid for drugs by our citizens and people who live in other countries—frequently, by the way, for prescription drugs manufactured in this country and often subsidized either directly by taxpayers in the form of NIH grants to people who develop those drugs and do the research on them, and indirectly through the Tax Code. We provide credits for research and development. We have this gap between what our citizens pay and citizens in other countries pay for drugs manufactured in the United States. We are not curing that gap in this bill, except we are taking a step relative to military retirees. This step at least addresses that problem for military retirees.

It is my hope that before the end of this session or in the next Congress that we will provide a similar benefit for Medicare beneficiaries.

The importance of this prescription drug program is shown by the effort that was made to achieve it. The importance of this benefit is reflected in the fact that military retirees brought to our attention the extraordinary expense to them of prescription drugs. We are responding to that. We have a moral obligation to respond to that because we made a commitment to them.

This country has a moral obligation surely to our seniors—I think to all of us, but at least to our seniors—to make prescription drugs affordable. We haven't made the same kind of commitment technically to our seniors. But surely we should feel the moral obligation to make sure our seniors have access to affordable prescription drugs. That commitment that we surely should feel, I believe, will be advanced by this action that we are taking relative to our military retirees. Hopefully it will prod us to do the same for all of our seniors as we do for our military retirees in the area of prescription drugs.

We cannot overlook the fact that these provisions are going to be expensive to implement. This bill would establish a new entitlement program for military retiree health care at an estimated cost of $60 billion. The $60 billion cost of this program is over the next 10 years. It is actually, technically, a $40 billion net cost to the Government for reasons that I will go into when we get to the waiver of the point of order relative to the budget.

It is a significant amount of money, $60 billion of direct spending, or $40 billion net, over the next 10 years. Either one of those numbers is a big number. We should be very conscious of what we are doing. That is why it is very important this body act openly and forthrightly on this proposal.

Senator WARNER mentioned that we had made a proposal in committee which would have achieved this same goal on a phased-in basis, first for 2 years and then permanently, in a way which would have met the requirements of the Budget Act without creating a point of order.

In the wisdom of the conferees, we made this a permanent benefit. It is the right thing to do. But there is a cost to it which exceeds the amount of money this committee has been authorized to allocate under our mandatory spending limits. This body will then be offered the opportunity and presented with the question: Do we wish to waive that limit, to use the waiver authority as provided for us in the Budget Act, in order to approve this permanent benefit?

That will be argued at a later time in this debate. I intend to vote to waive the Budget Act and permit this benefit to go into effect for our retirees. However, it is important that this body, when it exceeds these spending allocations, does so in a way where everyone has a chance to recognize what it is we are doing in that regard.

As I said, there was no provision made in this year's budget resolution for this level of mandatory spending. We were given a very small amount, closer to half a billion. There was a way we could have operated within that level in a 2-year program, then expecting to make that permanent later on in a way which would have complied with the Budget Act. But this conference went in a different direction. It is a reasonable approach, perhaps even a more straightforward approach. In any event, it does create this point of order which we now need to address in this bill.

I believe these steps to address problems in the military health care system are the right thing to do. Again, we just should do so openly. We should not do so blindly. The problem is not with this bill but in the budget resolution itself, which is not realistic in the amount of money it provided for this and for other purposes.

The conference report also includes a title numbered 35 in the Senate bill which is the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Program. This Nation now has a great debt to the many workers in our nuclear weapons facilities who played such a vital role in winning the cold war, a deterrent which they produced which was able to deter aggression to help maintain security and peace. But we now know that many of these workers were exposed to dangerous radioactive and chemical materials in the course of their work, and they are now suffering from debilitating and often fatal illnesses as a result. It is simple justice that these workers and their families should be compensated for those illnesses.

The Department of Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Act provides that compensation, and it does so in a fair and balanced manner. We were able to overcome significant opposition in the House of Representatives and provide compensation to the loyal Department of Energy workers who were poisoned by that work in support of our Nation's defense. Now there is a cost. We should be aware of that cost. It is a cost of $1.1 billion over 5 years and about $1.6 billion over 10 years.

I am particularly pleased that the conferees rejected a House provision which would have prohibited the continued deployment of United States ground combat forces in Kosovo under certain circumstances. What the House provision said was, if the specified contributions by our allies for civilian policing and reconstruction were not met by a target date, then our troops would automatically be withdrawn.

First of all, our European allies are almost to those levels. They are now clearly the senior partner in Kosovo. That is the right thing. We want our allies to be senior partners and the United States to be the junior partner. Many times we are not the senior partner. That is a very good development.

It would be a mistake, and this body voted it would be a mistake, to put in an automatic withdrawal date because of the uncertainty that would create, the weakening of the NATO alliance which would be created, and the negative impact of morale on our men and women who would then believe, somehow or other between now and that automatic removal date, that our troops may be removed. That kind of uncertainty is not healthy either in terms of who our adversary was and could still become theoretically; it is not healthy in terms of the NATO alliance; it is not healthy in terms of the morale of our men and women in uniform.

We have all put pressure on our European allies to do more. It is something in which many of us, if not most of us, believe. They are now doing more. Our response should be a positive response rather than this automatic threat that unless they meet a specified numerical target by a fixed date, something would automatically happen without any further action of the Congress.

The process in the House bill, which was rejected by the Senate after a lengthy floor debate, but adopted by the House, would have led to the automatic withdrawal of our forces, even if there was no action in the future by Congress. That at least, in my judgment, would not have been a responsible exercise of congressional authority but rather its abdication. Putting this on automatic pilot would not have been the best way to exercise congressional authority.

We have the power of the purse, and we have a right to exercise it. If we want to withdraw troops, we have the right to do that. If we have troops in too many places, we have the right to say: Pull them out, don't spend any money to keep them there. We have that responsibility. If we are in too many places, we are the ones with the power of the purse. We can say: Pull forces out of here, pull forces out of there.

The specific effort to do that was made relative to Kosovo. It was rejected. I am glad, by the way, that both the candidates for President rejected that approach. But if we are going to do it, we ought to be accountable ourselves for doing it and not put something on automatic pilot so that something will happen in the future even if we do nothing between now and then. That is not the way I believe the power of the purse should be used.

I believe very deeply in the power of the purse, and I believe there are occasions when we want to say we believe that troops should not be in a certain place and we are not going to provide money for it. But that ought to be done directly and not be done at a future date in the absence of a decision by the Congress.

The conferees also rejected a provision that would have placed burdensome restrictions on our efforts to support the antidrug effort in Colombia. We rejected a provision that undermined our ability to implement agreements designed to prevent development of nuclear weapons by North Korea. We rejected a provision which implied that a national missile defense would be deployed immediately without regard to the system's operational effectiveness or affordability or the impact that it might have on our overall national security. Those were unwise provisions, in my judgment, and I am pleased they were not included in the conference report. I am pleased the conferees did adopt a series of provisions implementing the agreement between President Clinton and the Governor of Puerto Rico regarding the status of training exercises by the Navy and Marine Corps on the island of Vieques. Training on Vieques, as we know, was suspended last year after the tragic death of a security guard at the training range. The Secretary of the Navy, the Chief of Naval Operations, and others have testified that there is just no adequate substitute for that training on the island of Vieques.

As of today, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico has lived up to its obligations under the agreement. The training range on Vieques has been cleared of protesters with the assistance of the government of Puerto Rico, and Navy training exercises have now resumed on the island with the use of inert ordnance, as provided for in the agreement.

The Navy is working with the citizens of Vieques and others throughout Puerto Rico towards the resumption of live-fire training on Vieques. This bill, hopefully, provides the framework for the resumption of that training.

The President's budget request added $12 billion of defense spending to last year's appropriated levels, and the Congressional Budget Resolution added an additional $4.5 billion. For the most part, the conference report spends this money wisely, to meet needs that were identified as priorities by the Joint Chiefs of Staff or to accelerate items that are included in the Future Years Defense Plan.

The bill also provides funding support and legislative guidance for key Department of Defense priorities, including the Army's transformation plan and the Joint Strike Fighter Program.

On the first point, the conference report provides appropriate support for the Army transformation plan, the plan that was put forward by Secretary Caldera and General Shinseki. The conferees concluded that the Army needs to transform itself into a lighter, more lethal, survivable, and tactically mobile force. We approved all of the funds requested by the Army for this purpose, and we actually added some research money to the amount requested to help the Army in the long-term transformation process.

At the same time, we directed the Army to prepare a detailed roadmap for the transformation initiative and to conduct appropriate testing and experimentation to ensure that the transformation effort is successful.

Mr. President, I have a few more minutes but I have taken a little longer than I expected. I would like, at this point, if the Senator from Minnesota is ready, to yield to him for his presentation.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I do not want to break up the flow of my colleague. I am pleased to follow the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Actually, if the Senator from Minnesota is ready to speak at this time, it will work to my convenience if I interrupt myself at this moment and yield to the Senator, but I ask unanimous consent I then be given back the floor for perhaps 10 more minutes of remarks following the Senator from Minnesota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there an objection?

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I understand Senator ROBERTS was seeking to speak. Perhaps with that exception? The two of you could talk about that, perhaps.

Mr. LEVIN. I will be happy to comment on the request of the Senator from Alabama because he is correct. As I understand it, the order now is that at the end of my remarks Senator WELLSTONE is to be recognized, the Senator from Alabama is to be recognized, and then the Senator from Kansas is to be recognized.

What I am suggesting is that the remarks of the Senator from Minnesota come now in the middle of my remarks, I then complete my remarks following the Senator from Minnesota, and then we go back to the Senator from Alabama and the Senator from Kansas; if that is all right?

Mr. SESSIONS. That is fine. I have no objection.

Mr. LEVIN. It will just take me 10 minutes more when Senator WELLSTONE has finished. I thank my friend from Alabama.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, let me again thank Senator WARNER of Virginia for his statement about the crew of the U.S.S. Cole. My understanding is four American sailors have lost their lives, others have been injured. As a Senator from Minnesota, I want to express my support and my concern. I do not think we have as yet knowledge of who is behind this. It certainly looks like a well-planned terrorist attack, but I echo the words of my colleague from the State of Virginia.

The chair of the committee, Senator WARNER, and the ranking minority member, Senator LEVIN, are two of the best Senators in the Senate. Therefore, I want to speak with a little bit of humility because I don't want this to come off as arrogant. I want to express my opposition to this bill. I don't think there will be many opposed, but I want to give this at least my best effort.

Let me start out with my own framework. I believe part of the definition of real national security for our Nation is a strong military, but I also think part of the definition of real national security is the security of our local communities—whether it is affordable housing, whether it is affordable child care, whether it is good health care for citizens, or whether we have the best education for every child. It is within this framework that I rise to speak against this bill.

The bill provides $309.8 billion for the military. That is $4.5 billion more than the administration's request and $19 billion above fiscal year 2000 levels. Yet the majority party could not find the additional money for more school counselors, could not find additional money for Head Start. One of the scandals is we keep talking about how important the early years are, we keep talking about how important the Head Start Program is to give children a head start. Yet I think we provide funding for about 3 or 4 percent of the children who could benefit from the Early Head Start Program.

The majority party could find the additional $4.5 billion, above and beyond the administration's request, but they could not find the additional money for affordable housing. They could not find additional money up to this time for prescription drug benefits for elderly people. It is a matter of priorities. I think as long as our country is first in the world when it comes to spending on the military but ranks 10th in the world when it comes to spending on education, we will never achieve our strength and our greatness.

The cry for more money, the rallying cry from some of my colleagues for more Pentagon funding, was for readiness. We have heard about the crisis in readiness, lack of spare parts, inadequate training funds, difficulty retaining pilots and other key personnel, declining quality of life. I am all for the part of this budget that increases funding in these decisive areas. But if you look at the category of spending with the largest increase from fiscal year 2000 to fiscal year 2001, it is procurement of weapons. It is not military readiness, with an 11-percent increase; or operations and maintenance, which funds most of the readiness programs, which goes up 4 percent; or family housing, on the other hand, which actually declines by 3 percent; military construction declines by 6 percent. These figures are from the Pentagon budget authority.

But the real increase in the funding—if you look at fiscal year 1999 to fiscal year 2005, procurement increases 39 percent. This is the largest increase in this Pentagon budget. In fact, 53 percent of the increase in budget authority during this 6-year period goes to new weapons.

I have to ask the question in this post-cold war period, in an opportunity to redefine some of our priorities and to redefine national security and to have a strong military, but also to make sure that we concern ourselves with national security as in the security of local communities—good education, good health care, good jobs, affordable housing. It seems to me this budget does much more for the military contractors than it needs to do, is beyond the President's request. And, frankly, we are in a zero sum game. You cannot have it all. Money spent in one area is money not spent in another area.

I believe that overall what we have before us in this piece of legislation, and the amount of money it calls for, for the Pentagon and military, reflects some distorted priorities. It is for that reason I will oppose this conference report.

Related to this question I have raised about budget priorities is an amendment which was dropped from the conference report. This was an amendment I offered, which was accepted, which asked that we in the Congress do a careful study of child poverty under welfare ''reform'' to find out how children are doing, to find out whether not only has there been a decrease in poverty of children but among those children who are poor—from the last report we received—we have an increase in poverty among children who are poor. I wanted us to do an honest policy evaluation.

Over the last 2 years I have offered this amendment four or five times, and every time it is dropped in conference committee—every single time. It seems to me we would want to know, as we move into the reauthorization of the welfare bill, what this dramatic decline in the welfare roll means. Any fool can throw people off the welfare rolls. That is easy. The question is, Where are the mothers and where are the children and are they better off?

Some I think are better off. For that I am grateful. Some have living-wage jobs and can support their families, and that is what it was supposed to be about. But I am telling my colleagues, I traveled some of the country—I am going to do more over the next 2 years because obviously we need to know what is happening out there—and it is my observation that the vast majority of the women and children are in the following situation: These women are working but now they are working poor. These jobs do not provide anywhere close to our salaries or even close to what would be called a living wage; in other words, on what they can support their families.

From the studies of Families USA and what I have seen with my own eyes, too many of these women no longer have medical assistance for themselves and their children and in all too many situations—Yale and Berkeley did a study on the child care situation—2- and 3-year-olds—these are mothers with children—are in child care situations which at best are inadequate and quite often are dangerous.

We have seen, roughly speaking, a 25- to 30-percent decline in food stamp participation, the major safety net for poor children.

I want to know what is happening out there. I would think colleagues would want to know, but sometimes we do not want to know what we do not want to know.

For the fourth or fifth time, this amendment has been dropped, and I have come to the floor to express my opposition to the dropping of this amendment. The majority party found $4 billion more than the administration requested, I am sorry, but is unwilling to do an honest policy evaluation of the welfare bill, its effect on children, the poverty of children, and whether we can do better for poor children. That is a misplaced priority.

When we come back next year—we will be moving into the period of time of reauthorization of this welfare bill—one of my commitments as a Senator from Minnesota is to do everything I can to focus the Senate, Democrats and Republicans, on an honest policy evaluation of what is happening to poor women and poor children in our country.

I can think of better uses for some of this money in the Pentagon budgets as opposed to new weapons systems, for example. I can see putting more into child care. I can see putting more into education. I can see putting more into expanded health care coverage. I can see putting more into affordable housing. I can see putting more into making sure there is long-term care so elderly people are able to stay at home and live at home with dignity as opposed to being forced into nursing homes. I can see some other priorities.

The Hate Crimes Prevention Act, which was passed by the Senate as an amendment, was taken out of the conference. In the United States of America, surely we as a people no longer accept the proposition that a citizen can be killed or injured because of his or her race, national origin, religion, gender, disability and, yes, sexual orientation.

Not that long ago, James Byrd was dragged to death by the most vicious of racists, and he was killed for only one reason: He was black.

It was less than a year ago that two men were killed and three others were injured in Pittsburgh when a gunman shot them down for only one reason: They were white.

It was only a few months before that when a man went on a shooting spree in Chicago aiming at people for one reason and one reason alone, and that was because they were either black, Asian or Jewish.

Let's not forget Matthew Shepard who was killed in Wyoming for one reason and one reason only: He was gay.

The amendment we adopted in the Senate with 57 votes and was taken out of this conference report would have permitted Federal intervention in serious violent crimes. In addition, the crimes that would have been covered would have included gender, disability, and sexual orientation.

There is not one Senator who can say that Matthew Shepard was not murdered because of hate. By failing to keep this amendment in this conference report, we have communicated a message that says we still tolerate these hate crimes; we are not willing to take strong action.

The majority party took that amendment out of this conference report. The majority party took the hate crimes amendment out of this conference report, and I think we have communicated a terrible message to the country.

Hate crimes are a kind of terrorism. They are not just meant to intimidate the victim but all those who belong to the group and make all of the people victims. They are meant to instill fear. They are meant to communicate the idea that one group of people has supremacy over others. They are meant to dehumanize people. They say not just to the victim but to all those who are like the victim: You are vulnerable and you could be next because you are gay, lesbian, transgender, or bisexual; you could be next because of your disability; you could be next because of your religion; you could be next because of the color of your skin; you could be next because of your national origin. And they took this amendment out of this conference report. I believe that is shameful, and that is another reason I am going to vote against this conference report.

Mr. President, I have 30 minutes reserved. How much time do I have left?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 15 minutes 47 seconds.

STATE DEPARTMENT AUTHORIZATION

Mr. WELLSTONE. I say to my colleague from Alabama, I will take a couple more minutes to speak on one other related issue, not so much to this conference report.

While I am on the floor of the Senate, I express my disappointment—I have to do this with a little bit of a twinkle in my eye—at the eleventh hour attempt by some of my colleagues to ram through—and this is not, I say to the Senator from Virginia, in this conference report; this is separate—an ill-conceived, unjust, and unbalanced ''bankruptcy reform'' through the Senate by co-opting an unrelated conference report, although I am not surprised.

The fact that the House and the Senate Republican leadership is willing to trample the traditions of the Senate in their rush to pass this legislation speaks to the tremendous clout and the financial resources of the financial services industry.

Make no mistake about it, that is why I say I have to have a twinkle in my eye. This is a tactic straight out of ''Invasion of the Body Snatchers.'' Listen to this. House and Senate Republicans have taken a secretly negotiated bankruptcy bill—I am sorry; I do no damage to the truth when I say this—and they have stuffed it into a hollowed-out husk of the State Department authorization bill. Not one provision of the original State Department bill remains.

Of course, the State Department authorization is the last of many targets. The majority leader has talked about doing this on an appropriations bill, on a crop insurance bill, on the electronic signature bill, on the Violence Against Women Act. So desperate are we to serve the big banks and the credit card companies that no bill has been safe from this controversial baggage.

Colleagues, there is no question that this is a significantly worse bill than the one that passed the Senate. In fact, there is no pretending that this bill is designed to curb real abuse of the bankruptcy code.

Does the bill take on wealthy debtors who file frivolous claims and shield their assets in multimillion-dollar mansions? No. Let me repeat that—no. It guts the cap on the homestead exemption which was adopted by the Senate. Nor does this bill contain another amendment adopted by the Senate, that Senator SCHUMER worked on, that would prevent violators of the Fair Access to Clinic Entrances Act—which protects women's health clinics—from using the bankruptcy system to walk away from their punishment.

Indeed, colleagues, this legislation would deny a fresh start to low- and moderate-income families who file bankruptcy out of desperation. It has an arbitrary test making it very hard for people to go to chapter 7. But at the same time, this legislation has no balance, does not hold the credit card industry accountable, does not hold the financial institutions accountable. It has now been stuffed into a hollowed-out State Department bill, and it is going to come over to the Senate, I suppose, sometime around Wednesday.

I just want to say—I could go into all of the detail, but I will not—should the majority leader follow through on this strategy, I announce I will use my procedural rights as a Senator, of course, as any other Senator would, to slow down this conference report. The conference report would be hard to stop, but we could take at least a couple of days of the Senate's precious remaining time to consider the ramifications of this legislation on working families.

And finally——

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, could I ask my distinguished colleague, on my time—I was momentarily off the floor due to the unfolding crisis in regard to one of our Navy's ships in the Middle East. He made reference to the hate crimes legislation.

Mr. WELLSTONE. That is correct.

Mr. WARNER. At an appropriate time, I would like to give to my distinguished friend and colleague from Minnesota, and also to inform the Senate precisely, my role as chairman of the conference and what I did in that context. So at the appropriate time, I would like to do that. And perhaps the Senator would like to make a reply to what I have to say. Indeed, perhaps my distinguished friend and colleague, the ranking member, would like to make a comment. But I think that should be made a part of the RECORD.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I would be pleased to hear from my colleague from Virginia.

To expedite matters, included with my statement about this so-called bankruptcy reform bill I just will include a letter from the White House. This is from John Podesta, announcing that the President will veto this bankruptcy bill that has been stuffed into a hollowed-out State Department authorization bill. The President just makes it clear that none of the fundamental problems with this piece of legislation has been addressed and that he fully intends to veto this. I thank the White House for their very strong support. The President is doing the right thing.

So I ask unanimous consent that this letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, October 12, 2000.

Hon. J. DENNIS HASTERT,
Speaker of the House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: I understand that the House will take up today the conference report on H.R. 2415, which apparently incorporates the text of S. 3186, a recently filed version of bankruptcy legislation. if this bankruptcy legislation is sent to the President, he will veto it.

Over the last few months, this Administration has engaged in a good faith effort to reach agreement on a number of outstanding issues in the bankruptcy legislation. The President firmly believes that Americans would benefit from reform legislation that would stem abuse of the bankruptcy system by, and encourage responsibility of, debtors and creditors alike. With this goal in mind, we have pursued negotiations with bill proponents on a few key issues, notwithstanding the President's deep concern that the bill fails to address some creditor abuses and disadvantages all debtors to an extent unnecessary to stem abuses by a few.

An agreement was reached in those negotiations on an essential issue—limiting homestead exemptions—with compromises made on both sides. Unfortunately, H.R. 2415 fails to incorporate that agreement, instead reverting to a provision that the Administration has repeatedly said was fundamentally flawed. The central premise of this legislation is that we must ask debtors, who truly have the capacity to repay a portion of their debts, to do so. This would benefit not only their creditors but also all other debtors through lower credit costs. Unlimited homestead exemptions allow debtors who own lavish homes to shield their mansions from their creditors, while moderate-income debtors, especially those who rent, must live frugally under a rigid repayment plan for five to seven years. This loophole for the wealthy is fundamentally unfair and must be closed. The inclusion of a provision limiting to some degree a wealthy debtor's capacity to shift assets before bankruptcy into a home in a state with an unlimited homestead exemption does not ameliorate the glaring omission of a real homestead cap.

Moreover, the President has made clear that bankruptcy legislation must require accountability and responsibility from those who unlawfully bar access to legal health services. Yet the conference report fails to address this concern. Far too often, we have seen doctors, health professionals and their patients victimized by those who espouse and practice violence. Congress and the States have established remedies for those who suffer as a result of these tactics. However, we are increasingly seeing the use of the bankruptcy system as a strategic tool by those who seek to promote clinic violence while shielding themselves from personal liability and responsibility. It is critical that we shut down this abusive use of our bankruptcy system and prevent endless litigation that threatens the court-ordered remedies due to victims of clinic violence. The U.S. Senate was right in voting 80–17 to adopt an amendment that would effectively close down any potential for this abuse of the Bankruptcy Code. We fail to understand why the bill's proponents refuse to include this provision and shut down the use of bankruptcy to avoid responsibility for clinic violence.

I repeat President Clinton's desire to see balanced bankruptcy reform legislation enacted this year. The President wants to sign legislation that addresses these known abuses, without tilting the playing field against those debtors who turn to bankruptcy genuinely in need of a fresh start. He will veto H.R. 2415 because it gets the balance wrong.

Sincerely,

JOHN PODESTA,
Chief of Staff to the President.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

Mr. WARNER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order——

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed, as the manager, on my time, to address this issue for such time as I believe may be necessary.

Mr. LEVIN. Reserving the right to object, and I will not object, I just want to, while the Senator from Alabama is on the floor, alert him that this will delay his place. He has been very patient here.

Mr. WARNER. I know he has been patient, but this is important. It will be put in the RECORD. I shall probably not take more than 3 or 4 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, the annual Armed Forces bill should really become almost an omnibus bill because so many amendments can be attached under the rules of the Senate, which I support. I do not criticize any Member exercising his or her rights under the rules of the Senate to put on bills, subject to a vote, such legislation as they deem appropriate.

There are other rules that preclude that in certain areas, but in this instance we had a freestanding, amendable piece of legislation on the floor. Senator KENNEDY courteously informed me, the ranking member, and others that he was going to raise the issue of what is generically referred to as the hate crimes legislation. Senator HATCH likewise said he had a version and he was going to put it before the Senate. Both Senators brought those bills. Both bills passed. Both bills went to conference as a part of the Senate bill.

My decision, as chairman of the conference, was made to drop those pieces of legislation—both of them; Senator KENNEDY's bill, Senator HATCH's bill—because I looked upon it as my duty to get this bill passed and enacted into law. That is my principal responsibility as chairman of the Armed Services Committee, working with my ranking member and other members of the committee.

I have been here 22 years. I understand Senators quite well. I respect their rights, and I know when they speak with sincerity. I was advised, not by one, not by two, but by many Senators on both sides of this issue, of the gravity of the issue and the seriousness of the issue. It was made clear to me that if this legislation—either Senator KENNEDY's bill or Senator HATCH's bill—were left in the conference report, in all likelihood we would have a series of filibusters. And given the very short period of time which is remaining in this session—even though we have been active as a committee and got the bill timely to the Senate; even though we were on the floor for weeks intermittently, having to have it laid aside—we are here in the final hours of this session of this Congress. If we do not act on this bill tonight, and if we do not pass this bill tonight, it is questionable whether the leadership will find additional time for consideration. And, as we say, it may be that pieces of it would be put into some appropriations bills or a CR or something—some parts—but much of it could well be lost, unless this conference report is enacted. So I made the decision. I take full responsibility for the decision of urging the conferees to drop this legislation.

My distinguished colleague, the ranking member of the committee, I presume, will address the Senate in a moment on this point. Exercising his rights in a very courteous way, he said he wished for me to convene the full Committee on Armed Services and have a vote: That we did. By a narrow margin, my recommendation was sustained by the full committee, I might add, in a bipartisan exchange of votes.

So that is the history as to why this legislation was dropped, I say to my colleague from Minnesota. I take responsibility. I believed it was necessary that this bill should be passed. On this day when the world is in such a tragic situation, whether it is the violence in the Middle East or the attack on an American ship, all of America expects Congress to do its duty on behalf of the men and women of the Armed Forces, and this is the most important piece of legislation done every year.

So I do not regret for a minute the decision I had to make in the face of representations, fairly and honestly made to me, by colleagues on both sides, as to the tactics that would be used if this bill would be brought up in a conference report before the Senate with either pieces of that legislation contained in the bill.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LEVIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, first, on the hate crimes legislation issue, my good friend from Virginia has accurately presented the facts. There are some additional facts, though, which should also be brought to bear.

I can't remember a time, although there may have been one, when the Senate has adopted language, as we did by a vote of 57–42, and when the House of Representatives has adopted language, as they did by 30 or 40 votes—when I say ''adopted language'' in the House, let me be clear, what the House of Representatives did was even more precise than adopt the hate crimes language; they instructed their conferees to agree to our hate crimes language by 30 or 40 votes—I cannot remember a time when one body has adopted language and the other body has instructed their conferees to yield to the first body's language where that language has then been dropped in conference.

I am not saying that has never happened because I haven't checked the records to be sure. I can say I can never remember it happening. Think about it. We had a big debate on this issue. We adopted Senator KENNEDY's hate crimes language by a vote of 57–42 in this body. Then the House had a debate, instructing their conferees to agree to our language, and somehow or other it is dropped in conference.

Let it be clear as to what happened. The House conferees would not accept our language, despite the instruction from the House of Representatives. Then we were faced with the question, Do we then give it up, despite the vote in the Senate?

There was a vote among Senate conferees. Ten Republicans and one Democrat voted basically to give it up, which was the 11-vote majority. Eight Democrats and one Republican voted not to give it up; let us maintain this fight; let us bring this language back in the conference report. If someone wants to filibuster a conference report, they have that right. But this legislation is too important. This is the hate crimes bill that this body adopted. It is simply too important a subject to be dropped because of the threat of a filibuster after being adopted in the Senate and having the House telling their folks to yield to us. If we refused to adopt important legislation around here whenever there was the threat of a filibuster, we would never adopt anything important. The civil rights legislation of the 1960s was adopted after weeks of debate, a filibuster that lasted weeks, with numerous cloture votes, because it was important legislation.

Let me say this about our chairman: He is absolutely correct that he felt that his responsibility was such that he had to bring a bill to the floor. He made the judgment, as he indicated, and it was a good faith judgment. I may disagree with him, which I do, but I don't in any way disagree with the fact that the chairman made a good faith judgment that it was necessary to drop this language because the House would not accept it. And even though I disagree with it and think we should have put this language in here and let someone filibuster, nonetheless, I surely agree that as always he acts in the best of faith.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, may I express to my colleague my respect for his acknowledging the fact that my judgment was predicated on sound facts.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, the Senator from Virginia was gracious enough to say I may want to respond. Other colleagues want to speak, and I believe the exchange between my two colleagues covered the ground and spoke to the question I raised. If I had spoken, I would have said what Senator LEVIN said. I just wouldn't have said it as well. I appreciate the forthrightness of the Senator from Virginia, his directness and, as always, his intellectual honesty.

Mr. WARNER. I thank my colleague. I only say to him, the fervor with which he addresses issues and pursues his goals in the Senate for this cause, be it hate crimes in favor, I think he will recognize that that same fervor is matched by others who have a different point of view very often. Therein lies the issue which I had to take responsibility to resolve, and this bill was of paramount interest to anything else before the Senate.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I apologize to my good friend from Minnesota. I assumed he had yielded the floor. Has the Senator yielded?

Mr. WELLSTONE. I yield back my time.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank him for his contribution to this debate, so many debates of this body.

I am going to be briefer than I had actually planned to because our good friends from Alabama and Kansas have been waiting for some time. I do want to spend a couple more minutes.

One of the items in this conference report which should be noted is the fact that we have agreed to the language in the Senate bill that would replace the Army's School of the Americas with a new Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation. This new institute is going to provide professional education and training to military personnel, law enforcement personnel, and civilian officials of Western Hemisphere countries in areas such as leadership development, counterdrug operations, peace support operations, disaster relief, and human rights.

The legislation specifies that the curriculum of this institution include mandatory instruction for each student of a minimum of 8 hours of instruction on human rights, the rule of law, on due process, on civilian control of the military, and the role of the military in a democratic society. In a very significant addition, we have a Board of Visitors, which includes, among others, four Members of Congress and six members from academia, the religious community, and the human rights community, to review the institute's curriculum and its instruction. The Board of Visitors will submit an annual report to the Secretary of Defense, and the Secretary of Defense, after consultation with the Secretary of State, will submit an annual report to Congress on the operation of the institute.

I am hoping that this will be a positive, new chapter and that some of the controversial history of the School of the Americas can now be, in fact, in the history books and that we can turn to a new approach in terms of our relationship with the leadership, both civilian and military, in the democratic countries of the Western Hemisphere.

We have some important beliefs that we want to share with others in democratic societies about civilian control of the military and human rights. These and other subjects, such as due process, are vital to us and, we believe, vital to the success of any democratic institution. They have been under challenge, under stress in too many countries in the Western Hemisphere. They have been too often violated. We have a positive role to play in this area. This provision, particularly now with the kind of Board of Visitors we are going to have that includes members of the religious community, human rights communities, and Members of Congress, I think is now going to make it possible for us to have a new Western Hemisphere Institute which is going to have a proud record of achievement.

Second, the bill contains an amendment that I offered to prohibit DOD from selling to the general public any armor-piercing ammunition or armor-piercing components that may have been declared excess to the Department's needs. This prohibition was enacted on a one-year basis in last year's Defense Appropriations Act, and Senator DURBIN has introduced a bill in the Senate to make the ban permanent. There is no possible justification for selling armor-piercing ammunition to the general public, and I am pleased that we have taken this step toward enacting the ban into permanent law.

Third, the conferees rejected House language that would have effectively restricted the bidding when DoD privatizes its utility to the sole utility authorized by a state government to operate in that particular area. The conference agreement requires competitive bidding, with a level playing field for all bidders, when DoD privatizes these assets, and allows DoD to determine the rates they will pay after privatization as a matter of contract rather than by state regulation. The conference agreement also protects people on military installations by requiring DoD to enforce prevailing health and safety standards.

Mr. President, this is a good bill as far as it goes. But I am deeply disappointed, however, by the failure of the conference to include several important provisions that were added in the Senate.

First, I am disappointed that conferees refused to include title XV of the Senate bill—the Kennedy hate crimes legislation—in the conference report despite the clear support of a majority of both Houses for this legislation.

Hate crimes are a special threat in a society founded on ''liberty and justice for all.'' Too many acts of violent bigotry in recent years have put our nation's commitment to fairness to all our citizens in jeopardy. When Matthew Shepard, a gay student was severely beaten and left for dead or James Byrd, Jr., was dragged to his death behind a pick-up truck, it was not only destructive of the victims and their families, but threatens more broadly to others, and to the victims' communities, and to our American ideals.

When a member of the Aryan Nations walked into a Jewish Community Center day school and fired more than 70 rounds from his Uzi submachine gun, and then killed a Filipino-American federal worker because he was considered a ''target of opportunity,'' it not only affected the families of the victims and their communities, but the broad group of which they were a part of.

The conferees had an opportunity to address this problem and send a message that America is an all-inclusive nation—one that does not tolerate acts of violence based on bigotry and discrimination. Sadly, we failed to do so.

Despite a 232–192 vote in the House of Representatives instructing the conferees to adopt the Senate provision, the House majority refused. And then despite a 57–42 vote in the Senate to make the hate crimes legislation part of the bill, the Senate conferees voted 11–9 to drop the legislation.

Mr. President, this issue will not go away. If this Congress will not pass legislation addressing the acts of hatred and violence that terrorize Americans every day, I am confident that another Congress will, and I will continue to work toward that objective.

The Senate bill also included landmark legislation authored by Senator CLELAND that would have permitted our men and women in uniform to extend the benefits of the GI bill to family members in appropriate circumstances, and would have addressed an inequity toward disabled veterans by eliminating the requirement that disability pay be deducted dollar-for-dollar from retirement pay. I am disappointed that we were unable to find a way to include these important provisions.

Overall, however, this is a bill which should become law. Once again, I want to thank our chairman, Senator WARNER, all of the members of the Senate Armed Services Committee, and the staff on both sides of the aisle, for their long hours of hard work on this legislation. I hope the Senate will join us in passing this bill and sending it to the President for signature.

I thank my good friend, the chairman of the committee, for his fine leadership, and all the members of the committee and our staffs.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I join with my colleagues in expressing my support for the Defense authorization bill. I salute Senator WARNER and Senator LEVIN, the ranking member, for the work they have given in creating a bill that strengthens our Nation's defenses and allows us to be more efficient and innovative as we move forward into the future. I wish we could have done more, but irregardless, we will in the future. I must give Senator WARNER credit. Under his leadership, for the last 2 years, we have produced a defense budget with real increases in defense spending. A defense spending increase that has outpaced the inflation rate.

For 15 consecutive years, we had a net reduction in the defense budget. As a result, we have some real problems today, as the Joint Chiefs of Staff told us 2 weeks ago in a very important Armed Services Committee hearing. We need to focus on the It is also important for us, all of us who care about the men and women in uniform, to pause and remember the men and women of this Nation who risk their lives daily, including the five who were killed in a dastardly attack by terrorists in the Middle East today. Unfortunately, this is the kind of world we live in. I wish it weren't so.

This is a $310 billion bill. In fact, it is $4 billion above what the President requested. It is above what the Joint Chiefs, who are appointed by the President, said they needed to maintain an adequate force, although they told us after the budget had been written they really needed a lot more over a sustained period of time.

Two weeks ago, in the Armed Services Committee, which I am honored to be a member of, we had the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Shelton, and the Chiefs for each of the service branches—Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marines. They were asked by Senator WARNER: Tell us the truth, what is the situation in with the military?

Each one of these men were appointees of this administration, but under oath they came forward and told the truth. That is, they testified that they have thankfully restored and maintained the readiness of two Army divisions that had fallen to the lowest readiness rating possible last fall. In other words, the Chiefs in the past were forced to take resources from other areas to maintain readiness. I believe Senator ROBERTS, who will speak in a minute, used the phrase, ''The point of the spear then is OK, but it is the shaft that is wrong.'' That is what they agreed to. At least three of the five used the phrase, ''We are mortgaging our future.''

What did they mean by that? They meant that this Nation has been robbing research and development, recapitalization, new equipment, and the kinds of things we need to maintain the greatest military in the world. But to maintain that, you have to continue to invest in those requirements. We are not doing that. The Chiefs stated it plain and simple, and I emplore anybody who doubts it to read the transcript of that hearing. They agreed with the phrase that one Senator used, quoting the Clinton Assistant Secretary of Defense, that the defense budget is in a death spiral. What he meant by that was that when you spend more and more money to try to maintain equipment that is worn out, you are pouring money down a bottomless pit. What we should have done, and what we have not done these past 8 years when we have had good economic times, is increase this defense budget. We could have recapitalized and replaced wornout equipment. But we haven't been doing that. As a result, we will face a future readiness crisis.

The Secretary of Defense, Bill Cohen, testified earlier this year that this Nation has been living off Ronald Reagan's military buildup of the 1980s. He said we are going to be facing a crisis in the years to come. That is testimony by the Secretary of Defense and this administration has not listened to that warning. They are going to let this burden fall on the American people in the immediate future. The Secretary of Defense says it, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff says that, and the chairman of our committee who has been involved in these issues for so many years says that. It has been complicated, as they testified, with our excessive and unusually high number of deployments of our men and women around the world. This wears out equipment, it drains additional resources, and it tires our men and women in uniform. In addition, it separates them from their families for extraordinary periods of time.

We have a real problem because we have a peace dividend. Oh, they say, President Bush cut the Defense Department when he was in there. Well, of course, he did. We had a legitimate peace dividend. The Berlin wall fell. We had a tremendous change as a result of the will of President Reagan and President Bush to maintain an unwavering stand against the Soviet Union. Consequently, we were able to save a lot of money.

So, yes, he was cutting; yes, we wanted to reduce manpower and reduce any costs we could, and use those savings to strengthen this country. But he didn't pretend to have it go on forever.

So that is where we are. I have to say that we have not yet faced up to the challenges of our future. I am reminded by the gulf war and our soldiers taking on the Iraqis. Our fighting men and women did an outstanding job. At that time, I heard the Senator from Minnesota, Mr. WELLSTONE, say we needed more preschool teachers and we needed more guidance counselors, and anything else you can think of that he would spend money on, but when we committed those men and women in the desert, what did they use? They used the finest equipment the world had ever seen. We were able to put missiles in the windows of buildings and our tanks were able to destroy the enemy's before they new it.

Our forces were able to defeat the enemy and devastate them with minimum loss of life on our side. That is what we want to do. We do not want to get into a war in which this Nation is not able to carry out its just national interests and suffer a huge loss of life. We want to be able to carry out our just national interests effectively. We do not want to over extend ourselves and become engaged in conflicts all over the world. But we need to be ready to execute to defend our legitimate national interests. We can't do that if we don't spend some money on it.

We are heading to a time where we can't live off the Reagan buildup anymore. We are going to be at a time where we will have to do something about it. We will be at a time when we need to improve our cruise missiles and our smart bombs and during the gulf war, we had superiority in the Middle East. We avoid wars by being strong.

Senator STEVENS, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, understood these issues and fought for them. When the conflict occurred, we prevailed at minimum loss of life to American citizens.

I agree with Senator WARNER. This bill does not need to be jeopardized by adding such measures as hate crimes legislation, that should have come out of Judiciary on a law enforcement bill, rather than on a Defense bill. This type of ploy only adds to the complication on these matters.

I think we are making a solid step forward. It would have been better if the Commander in Chief had told us we needed more money and challenged us to find more. It is hard for Congress to find more money when the President says, as Commander in Chief, he doesn't need it. Nevertheless, we spent $4 billion more than he asked for, which is hard to do. But the core function of Government ultimately is to defend our national sovereignty. We have a leadership role in this world, whether we want to have it or not. We have the ability to lead this world into the greatest century in the history of mankind. We can avoid wars if we remain strong. If we have competent leadership, we can maintain peace. We need a steady, mature funding of defense so that we are always above and ahead of our competitors. We do not want to go into a war on a level playing field. If we do have to go to war, we must have the resources available to prevail at a minimum loss of life.

All of this could create a more stable world order, and promote peace. Goodness knows, the events in the last few days are enough to make an impact and to see what happens in Belgrade, to see what happens in the Middle East, to see what happens now with an attack on our warship. Doesn't that tell us we live in a very dangerous world? The history of the world hasn't changed. There will always be struggles, fights, and wars, it seems. But if we are prepared, if we lead, and if we have a strong military that allows us to speak softly but carry a big stick, we can do great things. We can fulfill our destiny at this point in time; that is, to lead this world into a peaceful future.

I will just say this: We need to maintain the ability to act unilaterally when we need to. This Nation cannot allow some multinational group to decide for us how to use the power that we have. Of course we want the support and friendship of every nation in the world, but we don't need to be in a position where we have to have NATO votes to tell us whether or not we can deploy our forces. We don't need to have the U.N. voting with a single veto in the security council stopping us from deploying either. Would that be wiser than the leadership within the United States? Not at this point in time. I believe we can help the world. We need to maintain our independence. We need to maintain a strong national defense.

If I haven't used my time, I will yield it back and thank the chairman for giving me this opportunity.

Once again, I thank Senator WARNER and Senator LEVIN for their leadership and bringing a bill that I believe will help preserve this Nation's strength in the future.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, as chairman of the committee, I thank the Senator from Alabama for his service on the Senate Armed Services Committee. He has only recently joined the committee. But his voice and his wisdom are brought to bear on many key issues. His attendance at the hearings is among the highest. I thank him for the time that he has been working for our committee. We very much value his judgment and his wisdom as we deal with these tough issues.

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank the chairman. I am honored to serve with him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I would be happy to yield to my colleague, the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, and the chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Construction.

At this time, may I say, Mr. Chairman, it is essential that the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, and most specifically the chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Construction, and the chairman of the Armed Services Committee, and, indeed, our two ranking members—Senator BYRD, is on the Armed Services Committee, as well as the Appropriations Committee—our ability to work together as a team is essential. In my many years on their committee, I can recall where the relationships between the chairman and the various committees was somewhat strained. I say to Senator STEVENS that he has been an exemplary and wonderful working partner on our two bills in tandem on behalf of the men and women of the Armed Forces. I thank him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I yield all of my time, or such time as our distinguished colleague and a very valuable member of the Armed Services Committee may wish to take

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. President, I believe the regular order is that I have the time. But I ask unanimous consent that the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee be recognized prior to my remarks at this time, and I would be delighted to have him speak, or I will yield to the distinguished chairman, whatever is his preference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I thank both Senators. I am delighted that I was able to be here at the time Senator SESSIONS made his remarks. I thank him for his kind remarks about my service, and I am delighted that he is on the Armed Services Committee because I like very much what he said.

I had intended to make a statement on the Defense bill. But I have been engaged this week in sort of herding turtles around this place. If it is agreeable to my friend from Virginia, I will make my statement concerning the Defense bill next week and ask it be printed in the permanent record as part of this RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. ROBERTS. I yield to my distinguished friend and colleague from Oklahoma for a unanimous consent request.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent I be recognized at the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from Kansas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. President, there has been some discussion on the floor in reference to this bill, the Defense authorization bill, on the merits of including a hate crimes provision. I am struck by the fact that we have just witnessed an international terrorist hate crime with the attack on the U.S.S. Cole, leaving, according to my notes, 5 dead and 36 wounded, 12 missing. All of our U.S. military are on alert in terms of force protection. Our intelligence services are working full time to make sure that we have the proper force protection as they do their duty. In fact, I think that is a hate crime to which this particular bill speaks.

I associate myself with the remarks of the distinguished chairman. While Members on both sides have strong feelings about the hate crimes bill, in no way should this defense authorizations bill be further held up or impeded.

I express my sincere condolences, as my colleagues have, to the families and friends of the crewmembers of the U.S.S. Cole who were killed and injured today in the Port of Aden in Yemen. They died or they were injured in the services of this Nation, and we all feel their sacrifice. The apparent—I say ''apparent''; I think we all know it was—terrorist attack on the U.S. ship was brutal, it was unprovoked, it was an act of terrorism. All the information is not yet available to determine the source and the motivation of the attack. The Government of Yemen has said they are certainly not involved, so we have to reserve judgment on the response, if this is a terrorist strike.

No matter what the cause of the explosion, this again points out the risks that our service men and women face every day. We have to be ready every day. There is no strategic response to terrorism in regard to the service they provide to our Nation.

We must never forget that we ask the members of the military to be on the front line of U.S. diplomacy, and, unfortunately, they are the obvious targets of terrorist groups.

I have the privilege of being the chairman of the Emerging Threats and Capabilities Subcommittee on the Armed Services Committee. As has been indicated by Senator LEVIN and others, we have the responsibility to make sure we are ready and we have the proper resources to combat terrorism.

I can make a solemn promise to the families involved and to our military: We are going to continue to do our very best budgetwise and our very best in regard to legislation and policy to assure the force protection that we must have to protect our troops.

I rise to add my compliments to the chairman and the distinguished ranking member, Senator LEVIN, of the Armed Services Committee on a job that I think is well done. Through their hard work and their perseverance over the last legislative year, and in particular in regard to the conference with our colleagues in the House, we are presenting to the Senate a bill that will make significant progress.

Senator SESSIONS has made what I consider to be an excellent speech on the state of military readiness, the problems and the challenges we face. I see the distinguished chairman of the Readiness Subcommittee, the Armed Services Committee, Senator INHOFE, who does a splendid job in that regard. He has been sounding the alarm for years in regard to the readiness problems we face. We will make significant progress toward stopping what I call the readiness drain now facing our military. It is not enough, but this bill does actually lay down a marker that the Congress is very serious, that the committee is very serious about its commitment to reversing the damaging readiness cuts. We owe the men and women of the Armed Forces nothing less.

Over time, the last several years, we have authorized significant increases in pay. We have certainly done a better job in regard to the retirement system. We reformed that. As the distinguished chairman and the ranking member have pointed out, under the health care banner, we are now providing health care for the military retired. That is an obligation we must keep.

As I have indicated, I have the privilege to serve as the chairman of the Emerging Threats and Capabilities Subcommittee. I am very proud of our accomplishments this year in the subcommittee. I thank the distinguished Senator from New Mexico, Mr. BINGAMAN, for his assistance, as well as all the members of the subcommittee, working in a bipartisan fashion to produce this work product.

Behind the success was the hard work of our staff. I have always said that there are no self-made men or women in public office today. It is your friends who make you what you are. I put staff in that category. We are only as good as our staff in terms of the work product we are able to pass. I take this opportunity to thank them. They are not expecting this, but I want to take this opportunity to present: The head of our Emerging Threats and Capabilities ''posse,'' if I can refer to us in that vein, and who I consider to be the iron lady and the iron fist of the science and technology world, Ms. Pam Ferrell; Mr. Military Transformation, who did an outstanding job, Mr. Chuck Alsap; the strong duo dealing with counterterrorism, the very subject we are dealing with today, even as I speak, as the 250 members of the U.S.S. Cole try to right the ship and save the ship, is Mr. Ed Edens and Mr. Joe Sixeas; the guy, the young man or the staffer that the drug cartels probably fear as much as anybody, Mr. Cord Sterling; our cyber warrior, Mr. Eric Thommes; and our tough negotiator in dealing with the Russian programs, the counterthreat reduction programs, an investment for us, and we think an investment for the Russians, as well, Miss Mary Alice Hayward; and the cleanup hitter, Miss Susan Ross.

I thank each and every one of them for their hard work, their professionalism, and the work product we were able to produce.

There are many successes for this year I want to address, but time is an issue. I know the Senators from Oklahoma and Iowa want to make some remarks, but there are four areas I would like to highlight of which I am especially proud.

First, we have two educational programs designed to increase research and the number of technically trained Americans. We have a technology personnel gap. I do not know what the acronym is for that. We hear about gaps in the past in terms of arguments in regard to the military. But, boy, this is a gap that is real and it is a gap that must be filled.

We have authorized $15 million to establish what is called an Information Security Scholarship Program for the Secretary of Defense to award grants to institutions of higher education to establish or improve programs in information security and to provide scholarships to persons who would pursue a degree in information assurance in exchange for a commitment of service within the Department of Defense. That is a breakthrough.

Senator WARNER gave his personal leadership to this. As a matter of fact, it is his initiative. I like to think I had something to do with it, as well as all members of the committee in a bipartisan fashion.

We have also authorized $5 million to establish something called an Institute for Defense Computer Security and Information Protection. This institute will conduct research in technology development in the area of information assurance and to facilitate the exchange of information with regard to cyber threats, technology tools, and other relevant issues.

Again I go back to the technology personnel gap. This will assist us to really close that gap. As a matter of fact, when we asked the experts in our subcommittee, What keeps you up at night? they mentioned a lot of things, but they mentioned two things of priority interest. No. 1 is the possibility of the use of biological weaponry by some state-supported terrorist or nonstate-supported terrorist. The second thing they worry about is cyber attacks, information warfare. So we think this institute is long overdue. We have authorized $5 million. That is going to get it started.

The second thing I would like to mention is that we ensure that the Department of Defense will focus real coordination in their responsibilities to combat terrorism activities through a single office. We had four people before the subcommittee testifying in regard to DOD responsibilities and the challenge they face in regard to terrorism, so I asked the witnesses: Would you sit in order of your authority. Nobody knew where to sit—No. 1, 2, 3, 4—because they didn't know. We had so many people within the DOD who shared partial responsibility for this that we did not find one person in charge. So that is what we are going to have after this bill passes.

We made a suggestion on the Senate side; we really singled it out and put it in a particular person's area of responsibility. The House came back and said let's let the Secretary of Defense decide that. But I will tell you again, we are going to ensure the Department of Defense is focused in regard to their responsibilities to combat terrorism through one single office.

We included a provision that would designate one Assistant Secretary of Defense as the principal civilian advisor to the Secretary for Department of Defense activities for combating terrorism—one guy in charge, one lady in charge, one person in charge. This provision ensures there is a single individual within the Department responsible for providing focused and comprehensive and well-funded DOD antiterrorism policy.

I have said that about three times now, but three times I want to say how important that is. I think it is a real step forward.

The third area is to reduce the risk of the expansion of weapons of mass destruction and to help provide opportunities to Russian scientists outside of their weapons development. We authorized over $1 billion for nonproliferation and threat reduction programs for the Departments of Defense and Energy to assist nations of the former Soviet Union in preventing the expansion of their weapons of mass destruction and dissemination of their scientific expertise. This is a program really started by Senator Nunn and Senator LUGAR. Conferees included several initiatives to obtain greater Russian commitment to these programs—these programs are not without controversy—and the necessary U.S. access to ensure these programs do achieve their threat reduction goals.

We authorized $443.4 million for the Department of Defense Cooperative Threat Reduction Program for fiscal year 2001 to reduce the threat posed by the former Soviet Union weapons of mass destruction. So, let's see, there is $443.4 and $1 billion for the nonproliferation and threat reduction programs. That is quite an investment to assist the Russians, to work together with the Russians to reduce that kind of capability.

Last, I would like to say to help the military continue to put a solid effort in the invaluable area of science and technology and to ensure we are ready to address the emerging threats, we added $209 million for the Defense Science and Technology Program; that is the S&T programs, the science and technology programs. We focused on revolutionary technologies to meet the emerging threats. And we required the services to undertake a comprehensive planning process to identify long-term technological needs in consultation with the warfighting and the acquisition communities, and to ensure that the services' programs in regard to science and technology are appropriately designed to support these needs.

I could list some other significant accomplishments in the joint warfighting area, in the continued focus on helping our military communities prepare for the possibility that they may have to handle the consequences of a terrorist attack on our homeland.

We all know about the U.S.S. Cole. That threat exists in regard to our domestic situation as well and in several other key areas where we have jurisdiction. But I am going to let that go. I will probably put something in the RECORD at a later date in regard to what I think we have done in meeting our responsibilities in that area.

Again, I thank the chairman, Senator WARNER, who has labored long and hard. We did this several months ago. We have been in conference for 2 or 3 or 4 months. In the rush to complete our business, we had all sorts of things pop up out of the woodwork, almost a gauntlet to get this bill done. I thank Senator WARNER, Senator LEVIN, all members of the committee for their leadership, their guidance, their help during the development of this year's Defense bill.

There is no more important bill. Our first obligation as Members of this body is to do what we can in behalf of our national security. Today's events certainly prove that is the case. That has been spoken to by the distinguished chairman.

I think it is a good bill. We need to get it passed, and it needs a big vote. It needs a big, solid vote for the responsibility we have to our men and women in uniform.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, if I may interject, I thank Senator INHOFE for the work he has done on Vieques. I ask unanimous consent that, following the remarks of Senator INHOFE, Senator

HARKIN be recognized for up to 10 minutes and Senator ROBB then be recognized for up to 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I join in the remarks that were made by the Senator from Kansas about the U.S.S. Cole, the tragedy that took place. We are all so saddened to hear about that. It was a complete surprise to all of us. Also, his comments about our chairman—our chairman, the Senator from Virginia, has done just an incredible job of leading the way and getting this bill done.

I see this bill we are about to vote on as turning the corner. After 7 years of neglecting our military, we are actually starting to improve some things. We have some things in this bill that I think are long overdue. In our readiness funding, the conferees add more than $888 million to the primary readiness accounts. That included areas of neglect: $125 million to the war reserves and training munitions. We have places where they actually do not have enough bullets, enough ammunition to train with; $222 million for spare parts—that is not nearly enough, but there is a trend going up in the right direction now.

I go around as chairman of the Readiness Subcommittee of the Senate Armed Services Committee to quite a few of the places around the country and around the world and find the cannibalization rates, getting spare parts out of engines. I have seen them open up a new, crated F–100 engine just to pull off spare parts. That becomes very labor intensive. As a result of that, we are having terrible retention rates.

We hear about the pilots, but we don't hear about the mechanics and some of the other MOS, military occupational specialties, where we really are having a crisis.

This bill also goes a long way to try to get us back into opening up the live range on the island of Vieques.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. President, will my distinguished colleague yield for a question?

Mr. INHOFE. Certainly.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. President, I ask the Senator if he is familiar with the statement made by the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Technology—this is somebody who appeared before his subcommittee and mine—Secretary Jacques Gansler?

Mr. INHOFE. Yes, he has appeared before our committee on three occasions I can recall.

Mr. ROBERTS. He made a recent statement in regard to the very issue the Senator from Oklahoma is pointing out. I think it will be helpful if I read this, if the Senator from Oklahoma will permit me. This is somebody from the administration. He stated this:

We are trapped in a death spiral.

I do not think one could make it any more plain than that.

We are trapped in a death spiral. The requirement to maintain our aging equipment is costing us more each year in repair costs, down time, and maintenance tempo. But we must keep this equipment in repair to maintain readiness. It drains our resources—resources we should apply to modernization of the traditional systems and development of new systems.

Then the Secretary went on to say:

So we stretch out our replacement schedules to ridiculous lengths and reduce the quantities of new equipment we purchase, raising the cost and still further delaying modernization.

I do not think one can be any plainer than that. So the Senator's remarks are backed up not only from what we hear in testimony but also from the many bases at home and overseas. I thank my distinguished colleague for all the effort he makes from his personal time and other duties to go to bases all over the world. He checks with the enlisted; he checks with the NCOs; he checks with the officers; and he checks with the commanders and shows them his candor and integrity. We talked about this at great length.

In terms of readiness, there is no other person in the Congress of the United States or, for that matter, whom I know in this city who knows better the readiness problems we have, and it is backed up by this statement by a Secretary of the administration. We owe the Senator from Oklahoma a debt of gratitude.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I appreciate very much getting that into the RECORD because that testimony came out in our committee meetings. The Senator from Kansas is right. Sometimes when you sit in a committee meeting in Washington, everything is filtered. You do not really get the truth you find in the field.

This bill is going to put $449 million in real property and maintenance. The RPM accounts are accounts that are mandatory that we have to get down, and yet I have been down to Fort Bragg during a rainstorm. Go into the barracks and one will see our soldiers are actually covering up their equipment with their bodies to keep it from rusting. It is a crisis. We are addressing that crisis with this bill. It is a start. We should be doing more than we do with this particular bill.

Mr. WARNER. Will the Senator yield on my time?

Mr. INHOFE. I yield to the chairman.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I wish to express not only my appreciation but that of the whole committee, on both sides of the aisle, for the amount of travel the Senator has done. I heard the Senator talk about how he made these inspection trips. He spent a great deal of his time traveling to our military bases in the continental United States and abroad. There is no one who pulls harder on their oar than the Senator from Oklahoma.

I especially credit him with trying to resolve in a very fair and balanced manner the diversity of positions regarding the Vieques issue. The President had his views, the Government of Puerto Rico had its views, colleagues in the Senate had their views, and the Senator worked his way through that problem, and I know in this bill we have a fair and good solution to that difficult problem. I thank him.

Mr. INHOFE. I thank the chairman. Also I thank the ranking member, Senator LEVIN, who was very helpful on this whole issue. I believe we addressed it properly in this bill.

If we let an agreement go that had a financial motivation for the 9,000 residents of the island of Vieques to vote to kick out the Navy forever and lose that as a range, that had to be changed. This bill does that. We changed it so that the western land is not going to the Governor of Puerto Rico but to the people of Vieques.

A lot of people do not realize that Vieques is like a municipality in Puerto Rico, and the people of Vieques are very fond of the Navy. I am the first one to admit the Navy had some PR problems, but I say to our chairman, they have worked very hard, and I see a change in attitude there.

I was recently in Vieques meeting with a group of people. I left firmly convinced that if we have this referendum and if the referendum has a motivation for them to vote right—and that is to accept the Navy and the live firing range—then I believe they are going to do it.

The other day, I was on a talk show and someone called in. Actually, it was someone who was on the other side of this issue. They said: How would you like to have a live range in your State of Oklahoma?

I said: Let me tell you about Fort Sill.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I know the answer to that question. It is the same thing with the State of Virginia. Less than 30 miles from this Chamber is a live-fire range for the U.S. Marine Corps.

Mr. INHOFE. That is exactly right. My concern has been, I hope and I will go on record right now and I am already on record saying, if we have this referendum, this will be the last time that we should allow a referendum to take place on closing a live range. When one stops and thinks about the domino effect this will have on other places, such as Capo Teulada in Sardinia or Cape Wrath in northern Scotland, it would be a real crisis if we lose those, and yet they logically ask the question—I have seen it in print in Scotland: Wait a minute, if they do not allow the training to take place on land they own, why should we let them come here to our country and bomb it?

Mr. WARNER. I thank my colleague.

Mr. INHOFE. The western land now will go not to the politicians in Puerto Rico but to the residents of the island of Vieques, and in the event something should happen that they should vote to reject the Navy, then it is not going to go into some developer's hands where someone is going to stand to get rich over this.

We have done a good job——

Mr. ROBB. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield for a very brief comment?

Mr. INHOFE. Yes, I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. ROBB. Mr. President, I add my voice to that of my senior colleague in thanking our colleague from Oklahoma for the way he has worked on this particular problem. For a number of months, this seemed to be one of those intractable problems that was probably not going to be resolved.

I know the very strong feelings the Senator from Oklahoma has and brought to bear on this question in particular. We may disagree on other matters, but on this question in particular, he struck just the right balance, represented the long-term interests of the United States in a way that allowed us to come to closure on an issue that might not have closed at all and certainly would have created all kinds of difficulty for the United States in our long-term relations in the hemisphere with the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and others.

I add my voice to others in thanking the chairman of the Readiness Subcommittee for his very important and tireless work on this issue.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Virginia, who is the ranking member on the Readiness Subcommittee, for the contributions he has made. The Senator from Virginia is in the same position I am in, having live ranges in his home State.

I can recall going out on one of the carriers before one of the deployments from the east coast to the Persian Gulf. They have this integrated training on the island of Vieques. They have F–14s and F–18s doing air work; they have the Marine expeditionary, with which the Senator is familiar, since he was a marine, doing their work, and at the same time they have live Navy fire. They say they can get that training elsewhere but not at the same type of place. The analogy was called to my attention by someone who was on one of the deploying battle groups. It is like you have the very best quarterbacks, the very best offensive line, and the very best defensive line. If one is training over here, one is training over here, and one is training over here, but they never train together. On the day of the big game, of course, they lose. The integrated training is necessary.

I believe the language in this bill is going to offer the self-determination of the people of Vieques to support the Navy live range, and I have every expectation that is exactly what is going to happen. American lives are at stake.

I want to make one last comment. I have mentioned several times we should have probably gone further with this bill. I have been concerned about our state of readiness, and we outlined some of these things in the real property and maintenance accounts and others.

But I was reading, the day before yesterday, in the Wall Street Journal, an editorial by Mark Helprin. Mark Helprin is a contributing editor to the Journal but is also a senior fellow of the Claremont Institute. He talks about the crisis that we are going to have to take care of, and that we should not be talking about the fact that we right now, today, are better equipped than we have been. We are not better equipped than we have been before. He goes on to talk about the fact that in Kosovo, 37,000 aerial sorties were required to destroy what Gen. Wesley Clark claimed were 93 tanks and 53 armored fighting vehicles. That is approximately 8 percent and 7 percent, respectively, of which Milosevic actually had.

He goes on to say:

Twenty percent of carrier-deployed F–14s do not fly, serving as a source of spare parts instead. Forty percent of Army helicopters are rated insufficient to their tasks. Half of the Army's gas masks do not work.

It goes on and on.

I ask unanimous consent that this entire editorial be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. INHOFE. Lastly, let me just say I am glad that defense has become prominent in this Presidential election. We have had a degradation in what has happened to our defense. We have great troops, but right now we are operating at roughly one-half the force strength we were during the Persian Gulf war. And that can be quantified.

So often when people stand up politically and say we are stronger now than we were, or as strong as we were back during the Persian Gulf war, that just isn't true. We are approximately 60 percent of where we were in terms of force strength. That can be quantified.

I am talking about 60 percent of the Army divisions, 60 percent of the tactical air wings, 60 percent of the ships floating around, going from a 600-ship Navy to a 300-ship Navy. It is true some of that was from the previous administration. The Bush administration wanted to go down from 600 to 450 ships. But now we are far below that.

I think this administration has done a bad job the last 8 years. We are going to have to turn that around and do a massive rebuilding in the next administration. I think we are probably going to do it. I think we are going to see our Defense authorization committees of the House and the Senate do that. As well the Appropriations Committees are primed and ready, as is evidenced by the bill we are discussing today that we are going to pass. We are going to turn that corner and start rebuilding America's defense again.

With that, I yield the floor.

EXHIBIT No. 1

[From the Wall Street Journal, Oct. 10, 2000]

MR. CLINTON'S ARMY

(By Mark Helprin)

Many people have come to believe that thinking about war is akin to fomenting it, preparing for it is as unjustifiable as starting it, and fighting it is only unnecessarily prolonging it. History suggests that as a consequence of these beliefs they will bear heavy responsibility for the defeat of American arms on a battlefield and in a theater of war as yet unknown. Theirs are the kind of illusions that lead to a nation recoiling in shock and frustration, to the terrible depression of its spirits, the gratuitous encouragement of its enemies, and the violent deaths of thousands or tens of thousands, or more, of those who not long before were its children.

They will bear this responsibility along with contemporaries who are so enamored of the particulars of their well-being that they have made the government a kindly nurse of households, a concierge and cook, never mind a resurgent Saddam Hussein or China's rapid development of nuclear weapons. They will bear it along with the partisans of feminist and homosexual groups who see the military as a tool for social transformation. And they will bear it with a generation of politicians who have been guilty of willful neglect merely for the sake of office.

ABJECT LIE

So many fatuous toadies have been put in place in the military that they will undoubtedly pop up like toast to defend Vice President Gore's statement that ''if our servicemen and women should be called on to risk their lives for the sake of our freedoms and ideals, they will do so with the best training and technology the world's richest country can put at their service.'' This is an abject lie.

To throw light on the vice president's assertion that all is well, consider that in Kosovo 37,000 aerial sorties were required to destroy what Gen. Wesley Clark claimed were 93 tanks, 53 armored fighting vehicles, and 389 artillery pieces; that these comprised, respectively, 8%, 7%, and 4% of such targets, leaving the Yugoslav army virtually intact; and that impeccable sources in the Pentagon state that Yugoslav use of decoys put the actual number of destroyed tanks, for example, in the single digits.

To achieve with several hundred sorties of $50-million airplanes the singular splendor of destroying a Yugo, the United States went without carries in the Western Pacific during a crisis in Korea, and the Air Force tasked 40% of its intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance assets, and 95% of its regular and 65% of its airborne tanker force, in what the chief of staff called a heavier strain than either the Gulf War or Vietnam.

One reason for the ''inefficiency'' of Operation Allied Force is that this very kind of farce is funded by cannibalizing operations and maintenance accounts. Such a thing would not by itself be enough to depress the services as they are now depressed. That has taken eight years of magnificent neglect. Case in point: The U.S. Navy now focuses on action in the littorals, and must deal with a burgeoning inventory of increasingly capable Third World coastal submarines that find refuge in marine layers and take comfort from the Navy's near century of inapplicable blue-water antisubmarine warfare. But our budget for surface-ship torpedo defense will shortly dip from not even $5 million, to nothing in 2001.

The reduction of the military budget to two-thirds of what it was (in constant dollars) in 1985, and almost as great a cut in force levels, combined with systematic demoralization, scores of ''operations other than war,'' and the synergistic breakdown that so often accompanies empires in decline and bodies wracked by disease, have produced a tidal wave of anecdotes and statistics. Twenty percent of carrier-deployed F–

14s do not fly, serving as a source of spare parts instead. Forty percent of Army helicopters are rated insufficient to their tasks. Half of the Army's gas masks do not work. Due to reduced flying time and training opportunities within just a few years of Bill Clinton's first inauguration, 84% of F–15 pilots had to be waived through 38 categories of flight training. The pilot of the Osprey in the December 1999 crash that killed 19 Marines had only 80 hours in the aircraft, and the pilot who sliced the cables of the Italian aerial tram in 1998, killing 20, had not flown a low-altitude training flight for seven months. It goes on and on, and as the sorry state of the military becomes known, the administration responds by doing what it does best.

In the manner of Gen. Clark presenting as a success the—exaggerated—claim of having destroyed 8% of the Yugoslav tank forces in 78 days of bombing, the administration moved to ''restructure'' the six armored and mechanized divisions by shrinking force levels 15% and armor 22%, while expanding the divisional battle sector by 250%, the idea being that by removing 3,000 men and 115 tanks and Bradley Fighting Vehicles while vastly expanding the area in which it would have to fight, a division would somehow be made more effective.

The two failed Army divisions cited by George W. Bush in his acceptance speech were returned to readiness with speed inversely proportional to the time it takes the White House to produce a subpoenaed document, perhaps because, according to the Army, ''new planning considerations have enabled division commanders to make a more accurate assessment,'' and ''the timelines for deployment . . . have been adjusted to better enable them to meet contingency requirements.'' In 1995, brigade officials told the General Accounting Office that they felt pressured to falsify readiness ratings, and that the rubric ''needs practice'' was applied irrespective of whether a unit scored 99% or 1% of the minimum passing grade.

But there is more. Mainly by coincidence but partly by design, several broader measures exist. The Army rates its echelons. In 1994, two-thirds of these were judged fully ready for war. By 1999, not one of them was. More than half the Army's specialty schools have received the lowest ratings, as did more than half its combat training centers (although the chaplains are doing very well). These training centers serve as an instrument that illuminates the character of all the units that pass through them. By examining their ratings it is possible to get a comprehensive view of the Army's true state.

I have obtained National Training Center trend data that are the careful measure of unit performance in 60 areas over three years. Of 200 evaluations, only two were satisfactory. This 99% negative performance, stunning as it is, is echoed in the preliminary findings of a RAND study that, according to sources within the Army, more than 90% of the time rates mission capability at the battalion and the brigade levels as insufficient. RAND has voluminous data and doesn't want to talk about it until all the t's are crossed, long after the election.

If Gov. Bush becomes president, the armies his father sent to the Gulf will not be available to him, not after eight years of degradation at the hands of Bill Clinton. Given that their parlous condition is an invitation to enemies of the United States and, therefore, Mr. Bush might need them, and because the years of the locust are always paid for in blood, he should take this issue and with it hammer upon the doors of the White House at dawn.

In the Second World War, Marine Brig. Gen. Robert L. Denig said, with homely elegance, ''This is a people's war. The people want to know, need to know, and have a right to know, what is going on.'' Nothing could be truer, and the vice president of the United States does not speak the truth when he characterizes as he does those forces that for two terms his administrations have mercilessly run down. The American military does not deserve this. It is not a cash cow for balancing the budget, a butler-and-travel service for the president, an instrument of sexual equality, or a gendarmerie on the model of a French Foreign Legion with a broader mandate and worse food.

CAESAR'S LEGIONS

If we are, in effect, the enemies of our own fighting men, what will happen when they go into the field? The military must be redeemed. Should Gov. Bush win in November he should bring forward and promote soldiers and civilians who understand military essentials and the absolute necessity of readiness and training, people both colorful and drab, but who would, all of them, understand that these words of Gen. George S. Patton are the order of the day:

''In a former geological era when I was a boy studying latin, I had occasion to translate one of Caesar's remarks which as nearly as I can remember read something like this:

'' 'In the winter time, Caesar so trained his legions in all that became soldiers and so habituated them in the proper performance of their duties, that when in the spring he committed them to battle against the Gauls, it was not necessary to give them orders, for they knew what to do and how to do it.'

''This quotation expresses very exactly the goal we are seeking in this division. I know that we shall attain it and when we do, May God have mercy on our enemies; they will need it.''

Mr. HARKIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMITH of Oregon). The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, this conference report contains a number of provisions of great importance to our troops and our veterans. First, I am very glad that one of the top priorities of this conference report is improving the military health care system. The expansion of TRICARE, the military health care system, to Medicare-eligible retirees provides a permanent comprehensive health care benefit to military retirees, regardless of age. All military retirees and their families will now be able to remain in the TRICARE health program for life.

At least as important, military retirees will now have complete prescription drug coverage. With this new benefit, there is an even stronger case for Congress passing a Medicare prescription drug plan for all seniors this year before we go home.

I am also pleased that this bill provides our troops a significant pay raise as well as supplementary benefits for troops on food stamps and increased WIC nutritional support for troops overseas. These are issues on which I have worked for several years on the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee.

I am especially pleased that we have overcome significant opposition among the House majority to provide compensation to some of those who were harmed by dangerous conditions at our nuclear weapons plants. I am sure that by now all my colleagues are aware that many of our citizens were exposed to radioactive and other hazardous materials at nuclear weapons production plants in the United States. While working to protect our national security, thousands of workers were subjected to severe hazards, sometimes without their knowledge or consent.

I would like to address in more detail another provision that is important for former workers at our nuclear weapons facilities. The dangers at these plants thrived in the darkness of Government secrecy. Public oversight was especially weak at a factory for assembling and disassembling nuclear weapons at the Iowa Army Ammunition Plant in Middletown, IA. I first found out about the nuclear weapons work there from a constituent letter from a former worker, Robert Anderson. He was concerned that his non-Hodgkins lymphoma was caused by exposures at the plant. But when I asked the Department of Energy about the plant, at first they denied that any nuclear weapons work took place there. The constituent's story was only confirmed when my staff saw a promotional video from the contractor at the site that mentioned the nuclear weapons work.

The nuclear weapons production plants were run not by the Defense Department but by the Atomic Energy Commission, which has since been made part of the Department of Energy. The Department of Energy has since acknowledged what happened, and is now actively trying to help the current and former workers in Iowa and elsewhere by reviewing records, helping them get medical testing and care, and seeking compensation.

I compliment Secretary Richardson for his foresight and for taking this matter very seriously and making sure that the Department of Energy is forthcoming in regard to getting testing and care and compensation.

I was pleased this past January to host Energy Secretary Richardson at a meeting with former workers and community members near the plant in Iowa. The Department specifically acknowledges that the Iowa Army Ammunition Plant assembled and disassembled nuclear weapons from 1947–1975. And their work has helped uncover potential health concerns at the plant, such as explosions around depleted uranium that created clouds of radioactive dust, and workers' exposure to high explosives that literally turned their skin yellow.

And while the Department of Energy is investigating what happened and seeking solutions, the Army is stuck, still mired in a nonsensical policy. It is the policy of the Department of Defense to ''neither confirm nor deny'' the presence of nuclear weapons were assembled in Iowa without admitting that there were nuclear weapons in Iowa. So they write vaguely about ''AEC activities,'' but don't say what those activities were.

There have been no nuclear weapons at the Iowa site since 1975, but it is well known that weapons were there before that. The DOE says the weapons were there. A promotional video of the Army contractor at the site even says the weapons were there. But the Army can't say it.

What this does is, it send the wrong signal to the former workers. These workers swore oaths never to reveal what they did at the plant. And many of them are still reluctant to talk. They are worried that their cancers or other health problems may be caused by their work at the plant. But they feel that they can't even tell their doctors or site cleanup crews they worked there or what the tasks were they did. They don't want to violate the oaths of secrecy they took. One worker at the Iowa plant said recently: There's still stuff buried out there that we don't know where it is. And we know people who do know, but they will not say anything yet because they are still afraid of repercussions. Instead of helping these workers speak out, the Army has forced them to keep their silence.

I am pleased that the conference report includes a provision I offered to help these workers. It is narrowly targeted to require the Defense Department, in consultation with the Energy Department, to review their classification and security policies to ensure they do not prevent or discourage workers at nuclear weapons facilities from discussing possible exposures with their health care providers and other appropriate officials. The provision specifically recognizes that this must be done within national security constraints. It also directs the Department to contact people who may have been exposed to radioactive or hazardous substances at former Defense Department nuclear weapons facilities, including the Iowa plant. The Department is to notify them of any exposures and of how they can discuss the exposures with their health care providers and other appropriate officials without violating security or classification procedures.

I thank the chairman and the ranking member of the conference committee for joining with me in a colloquy to clarify that this provision applies to all workers at such facilities, and not just DOD personnel.

I am pleased we are passing this provision today. I thank the managers of the bill for including this provision and for the fine work they have done on all aspects of this bill.

Lastly, I am very concerned about the recent upsurge of violence in the Middle East. I strongly support the efforts of President Clinton and U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan to negotiate a cease-fire. This cycle of killings and destruction must end so there can be a return to the negotiating table to achieve a comprehensive and lasting peace agreement in the Middle East.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I thank Senator HARKIN for his wonderful commitment to the workers, particularly in his State, but really the workers in America. He noticed something in our bill which inadvertently could have left out some workers we wanted to cover and he wanted to cover.

We worked out the colloquy with Senator HARKIN which will be made a part of the RECORD. I thank Senator HARKIN for his intrepid effort on behalf of the workers of America and Iowa. It has really paid off.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I join my colleague. The three of us signed the colloquy. I thank the Senator. He does look after his people.

Mr. HARKIN. If I might reciprocate, I thank the chairman and Senator LEVIN, the ranking member, for including this in the bill. These were hard workers. They were good people. They work for a contract employer, not the Department of Defense. With this change, it makes it clear they are covered also. I thank them both.

Mr. WARNER. I thank the Senator.

While I have the floor, Mr. President, I would like to advise Senators that there is an effort being made to try and get the vote on first, presumably, a point of order that will be raised and then, following that, on final passage. We hope to begin to move to those votes possibly as early as 6 o'clock. So we are condensing down the period of time prior to the vote that Senators wish to speak.

Of course, we can arrange for such time after the votes as Senators desire. This is to accommodate both sides of the aisle and many Senators. I thank my colleagues for working with me to achieve these goals. We now have in place two Senators ready to speak, then I will consult with our leadership.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, if the Senator from Virginia will yield for an additional minute, I ask unanimous consent that Senator ALLARD be recognized immediately after Senator ROBB for up to 5 minutes, and then that Senator BYRD be recognized immediately after Senator ALLARD. I will talk to Senator BYRD about the time situation in which we find ourselves.

Mr. WARNER. Senator BYRD is a member of our committee and he has a key piece of legislation in here. It is my hope that we can have Senators speak briefly so that we can get on to the issue by Senator KERREY.

Mr. LEVIN. I will speak with Senator BYRD about the amount of time.

Mr. WARNER. And Senator ROBB, our valued colleague, a member of the committee, is about to address his issues.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia is recognized.

Mr. ROBB. Mr. President, the defense authorization bill before us today has historic qualities. It represents another year of real growth in our commitment to national defense and the readiness of the men and women who serve this Nation in uniform. It represents our reinvigorated and growing national consensus on the importance of American military power, and our military's continuing relevance to world peace, stability, and prosperity. Friends and allies around the world will see in this bill America's commitment to leadership and our willingness to keep our military the most powerful ever and equal to the challenge.

This bill continues to chip away at the quality of life issues that make service in today's military a greater sacrifice than it needs to be. This bill raises pay, improves housing, authorizes additional bonuses to improve retention, and improves medical care for servicemembers and their families.

I am particularly proud that this bill at last acknowledges the promise of lifetime health care made to America's thousands of military retirees and their families. The program put in place by this bill sets the conditions for keeping our promise, but we should have no illusion that this fulfills our debt. The devil, as usual, is in the details and there is much work ahead ensuring that the system we create is up to the requirements of this benefit and accomplishes its purpose. In a respect our real work lies before us, now that we are over the political and budgetary hurdles of keeping the promise.

This bill, thankfully but modestly, also increases our procurement, readiness, and research and development accounts. Anyone reading this bill will see our clear intent to deal with our daunting maintenance challenges. Anyone reading this bill will see our clear intent to modernize our tactical aircraft. Anyone reading this bill will see our clear intent to increase shipbuilding rates necessary to sustain a globally capable 300-ship Navy. Anyone reading this bill will see our clear intent to accelerate research and development to bring forward the next generation of aircraft—manned and unmanned, ships, and combat vehicles necessary to our future readiness and security.

Unfortunately, the rush, early this year, to massive tax cuts and political fears over new spending worked against us in making the kinds of real and significant increases necessary to address the challenges to our readiness today and tomorrow.

There is no doubt that significant increases in the defense top line are ahead. But regrettably, we have missed an opportunity to apply additional resources this year to some of our more chronic military requirements such as aviation spare parts and ship depot maintenance.

Equally regrettable, we fail again, in my judgement, to take on the issue of excess infrastructure.

One of the best ways we can help pay for current readiness is through reducing the DOD's large ''tail'' of infrastructure and support, which is taking away critical funding for the teeth—our warfighting troops and equipment that will fight the next year.

And the best place to reduce tail is to cut more bases.

I am encouraged by the Armed Services Committee chairman's commitment to making additional BRAC legislation his first priority for our next session. It is time to get over the history of this issue and get on with supporting defense establishment requirements.

Mr. President, there are very exciting days ahead for America's Armed Forces. The benefits of a strong national economy with projected budget surpluses provide a historic opportunity across the range of national priorities—from paying off our national debt to tax relief. But we also enjoy a historic opportunity to address today's military challenges and reach deeply into the future assuring our continued peace and prosperity.

At the same time, we must be careful and have the courage to make tough choices where necessary ensuring that we get the most for our defense dollars. We must not become embroiled in an arms race with ourselves. We are the best already, we need only stay ahead of our greatest threats.

Mr. President, for the last couple years one of our greatest readiness challenges has been recruiting and retention. I believe a young American today should see not only a tremendous opportunity to join the best military in the world, but an opportunity to join a military that will get the resources it needs to stay trained and ready. And, more importantly, a military that will get even better.

In addition, Mr. President, I rise to talk about events earlier today.

The explosion and loss of life this morning aboard the U.S.S. Cole is deeply disturbing and has affected all of us. The U.S.S. Cole, her crew, and their families are homeported in Norfolk, VA, and are proud members of Virginia's Navy family. Our prayers go out to those sailors killed and injured or missing. Our prayers go out to the courageous crew members right now dealing with the aftermath of this attack, and our prayers go out to the families of the U.S.S. Cole who live, as Navy families always have, with quiet courage, with this kind of danger, and in the face of this kind of tragedy.

I can confidently report that the extended Navy family in Virginia and around the country is coming together in this tragic moment to support and comfort the families of the U.S.S. Cole. The resources of this Nation will be there for them in this time of great sorrow and need.

The U.S. Navy sails into harm's way every day around the world protecting America and her interests. Today's attack is a painful reminder that the world is still a dangerous and uncertain place. America's young men and women in uniform are truly on freedom's frontier. As the CNO reminded us this afternoon, the U.S.S. Cole is one of 101 warships that are currently deployed.

We stand ready to provide the Navy whatever support is necessary at this painful time. We are doing everything we can to ensure the rapid evacuation of our casualties, to ensure the security of the crew and ship, to determine who is responsible for this attack, and to take appropriate action in response.

Even in the best of conditions, service in the U.S. Navy, afloat or ashore, is inherently dangerous, difficult work. Ships and aircraft at sea in all types of weather, during the day and during the night, are, over the long haul, as hazardous as any conditions we ever ask Americans to serve under. We owe these men and women and their families the best possible leadership, a reasonable quality of life, modern ships, aircraft and equipment, and realistic training. We owe them a fighting chance to serve in harm's way and to come home safe and proud.

The Navy is appropriately treating this as a suspected terrorist attack and has responded with antiterror-capable Marine security forces, in addition to the medical support flowing to the aid of the ship and her crew. If we determine that this was a terrorist attack, we should respond in a manner that guarantees that anyone or any state that might use terror against our military or civilians understands that they will pay a heavy price for misjudging either our capability or our will.

The U.S. Navy provides an indispensable contribution to world peace and stability. This incident cannot deter us from our commitment to defend our interests wherever they are, anyplace in the world. America will never retreat from our responsibilities, and we will take steps to bring to justice those responsible for this tragic loss of American life.

In this time of shock and sorrow, American resolve is called upon once again. We will meet this challenge.

I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I join with my colleague from Virginia in his expression of concern about the crew and members of the U.S.S. Cole. It still shows that we do live in a dangerous world, and our fighting men and women are exposed to danger every day they do their job.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I would like to also make reference to the remarks of my colleague from Virginia. He and I have a very special responsibility in this tragedy. We will undoubtedly, working together on that, do what we can on behalf of the families, particularly, in this instance.

Mr. ROBB. I thank my senior colleague from Virginia. We will be doing everything we can to respond to this tragedy.

Mr. WARNER. The Senator is aware of the availability at 6 o'clock of the briefing on this matter?

Mr. ROBB. Mr. President, I say to the senior Senator, I am and I have already availed myself of other briefings today.

Mr. WARNER. Thank you.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, before I begin my statement regarding the conference report, I want to say that my heart goes out to the families of the crewman of the U.S.S. Cole in the Aden Gulf who were killed, injured, or are missing. Let it be said, that if this was a terrorist attack, the United States shall not allow this to stand without a strong response by the United States and no matter where these terrorists go, they will be found and they will be held accountable.

Now to the conference report, I want to thank Chairman WARNER for allowing me the opportunity to speak in strong support of this essential Defense authorization conference report which provides the needed resources for our men and women in the armed services. I believe this bill is a fitting tribute for those who served, are serving, and will serve in armed services in the future.

The Fiscal Year 2001 Defense Authorization Act conference report has been a bipartisan effort and for the second year in a row we have reversed the downward trend in defense spending by increasing this year's funding by $4.6 billion over the President's request, for a funding level of $309.9 billion.

As the Strategic Subcommittee chairman, I would like to point out a few key provisions in the subcommittee's jurisdiction, plus a few of keen interest to myself.

As has been the pattern over the last several years, we had to increase the funding for our ballistic missile and space programs. This bill increases the ballistic missile defense programs by $391.8 million, a very important increase of $78 million for military space research and development programs, an increase of $91.2 million for strategic nuclear delivery vehicle modernization, and $80.5 million increase for military intelligence programs.

Regarding a few specific items—an increase of $85.0 million the Airborne Laser Program which requires the Air Force to stay on the budgetary path for a 2003 lethal demonstration and a 2008 deployment; an increase of $10 million for the Space Based Laser Program; a $129 million increase for National Missile Defense risk reduction; an increase of $80 million for Navy Theater Wide; an extra $8 million for the Arrow System Improvement Program; and for the Tactical High Energy Program an increase of $15 million.

Beyond the budget items, there four very important legislative provisions I would like to point out.

First, the Secretary of Defense is required to conduct comprehensive review of our nuclear posture—the first major review since 1994. Second, the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Secretary of Energy, must develop a long range plan for the sustainment and modernization of the U.S. strategic nuclear forces. We are concerned that the Department does not have a long term vision beyond their current modernization efforts.

Third, in 2002, the Space-Based Infrared System Low or the SBIRS Low program will be transferred from the Air Force to the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization. And fourth, in order to assess an emerging threat, a commission has been established to assess the threats to the United States from an electromagnetic pulse attack.

This conference report also authorizes the activities at the Department of Energy in regards to their defense activities. In order to ensure that America's nuclear weapon stockpile is safe and reliable and that our nuclear waste is managed responsibly, we have authorized $13 billion for Atomic Energy Defense activities at the Department of Energy.

However, unfortunately, DOE has had a few problem areas in keeping and protecting our nation's most valued nuclear secrets. That is why we established in the fiscal year 2000 authorization bill the National Nuclear Security Administration or the NNSA and this year's bill provides a total of $6.4 billion for the NNSA. This total includes $4.8 billion for weapons activities, $877.5 million for defense nonproliferation activities, and $695 million for naval reactors activities.

A priority for me is the timely and efficient cleanup and closure of formerly used DOE weapons facilities, such as Rocky Flats in my State of Colorado. This bill moves the cleanup and closure of these forward with strong funding lines and some key legislative provisions. For example, DOE believed it would be best if they moved all the security and safeguards funding into one line and into one office at the DOE Washington, DC, headquarters. The problem is that this would have taken the responsibility away from the people who are responsible for the safeguards and security at each individual site, plus would have removed the needed flexibility to manage the sites effectively. For instance, once the material requiring security are removed from Rocky Flats, the savings from the reduction of these security needs would then be used to accelerate the cleanup and closure at the site. That is one of the reasons why we have a provision which would keep the funding and responsibility at each Environmental Management site.

In regards to the workers at Department of Energy sites, we provide employee incentives for retention and separation of federal employees at closure project facilities. These incentives are needed in order to mitigate the anticipated high attrition rate of certain federal employees with critical skills.

Another key provision which is very important not just for the workers I know at Rocky Flats, but for workers throughout the DOE sites in the United States is the establishment of an employee compensation initiative for DOE employees who were injured, due to exposure to radiation, beryllium, or silica, as a result of their employment at DOE sites. These workers performed a unique, important, but sometimes thankless task, of producing and testing our nuclear weapons arsenal.

Finally, I would like to mention a few important highlights of the conference report outside of the Strategic Subcommittee. In last year's authorization bill, we enacted a much needed and deserved pay raise for our military personnel. This year's bill continues that progress with a 3.7-percent pay raise beginning January 1, 2001. Along with the last year's pay raise, we also made major retirement reforms, including a Thrift Savings Plan for our service personnel. After many delays at the Pentagon, this year's bill directs the Department to implement the Thrift Savings Plan, in order to allow our military to prepare for life after their military service is complete.

Let me finish with a provision that by no small measure is the most expensive but couldn't be more deserving for those who have served. Beyond the many changes we have made in the pharmacy benefit and extension of benefits for active duty family members, we provide a permanent comprehensive health care benefit for Medicare eligible military retirees. This has been a priority for this committee and Congress and I believe we are doing the right thing for our military retirees who have served and protected this Nation.

I want to thank Chairman WARNER for the opportunity to point out some of the highlights in the bill which the Strategic Subcommittee has oversight and to congratulate him and Senator LEVIN in the bipartisan way this bill was developed and ask that all Senators strongly support the Defense Authorization Conference Report. I also want to congratulate the chairman in the way he shepherded this conference report down the long arduous road this bill saw.

One of Congress' main responsibilities is to provide for the common defense of the United States and I am proud of what this bill provides for men and women in uniform. I see this bill as a tribute to the dedication and hard work of these young men and women. I ask for a strong vote on this bill in order to get that much needed and well deserved resources to our military personnel.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia is recognized.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, consideration of the annual Defense Authorization conference report is generally an occasion for celebration and congratulation in the Senate as we reflect on the strength and superiority of America's armed forces. The report that we are considering today is indeed a solid achievement in our efforts to keep this nation on the right track as we work to bolster America's military readiness and national security.

Unfortunately, the circumstances under which we are taking up this report offer no cause to celebrate. The United States today is mourning the loss of at least five American sailors, a death toll likely to rise, and the injury of dozens more in an apparent terrorist attack on the destroyer U.S.S. Cole in Aden, Yemen. At the same time, the Gaza Strip and the West Bank are in chaos as the escalating violence between the Israelis and the Palestinians threatens to erupt into all-out war.

Our thoughts and our prayers are with the crew of the Cole and their families, and with the entire Navy family. The attack on the Cole was a vile and contemptible act. We must leave no stone unturned in working to determine the origins of this attack, to bring those responsible to justice, and to redouble our efforts to protect our forces overseas. And we must renew our calls to the Palestinian and Israeli leaders to quell the violence in the Middle East, to stop the fighting between the two sides from spiraling out of control. Too many lives have been lost already in this latest round of violence, too many children have been sacrificed to the disputes of their governments. It is time for the Israelis and Palestinians to each accept responsibility for their actions, to stop the fighting, and to resume talking.

These grave crises are a stark reminder of the importance of maintaining a strong and ready U.S. military, and the FY 2001 Defense Authorization conference report that we considering today does a good job in meeting that goal. Like the Defense Appropriations conference report that was passed earlier this year, this authorization measure provides needed funding increases and policy directives to meet the changing nature of our national security challenges and to respond to crises affecting our national security as they arise.

With the current focus on the readiness of America's military, this is a timely package that makes a clear statement about the Senate's commitment to our men and women in uniform. There is no question that this is a big bill, topping out at $309.9 billion—$4.6 billion over the President's budget request. It is a broad and complex measure, affecting virtually every facet of our nation's military forces and readiness capabilities. It has not been an easy task to finalize the conference and reach this point. Many controversial issues had to be confronted and resolved along the way. Conferees began their work before the August recess, and have labored intensely over the past several weeks to complete the conference. I commend our Chairman, Senator WARNER, and Ranking Member, Senator LEVIN, for their guidance, skill, and leadership during the conference. While not every Senator may agree with every provision of this conference report, all Senators can be assured, thanks to the leadership of Senators WARNER and LEVIN, that the conferees never lost sight of the essential purpose of this legislation, which is to provide for America's national security and military readiness.

I am particularly pleased that the authorizers concurred with the appropriators in funding a 3.7 percent pay raise for military personnel. We can never adequately compensate our men and women in uniform for their dedication and service to this nation, but we must always strive to provide the best pay and benefits package that we can. In that regard, I also welcome the comprehensive package of improved health benefits for Medicare-eligible military retirees, although I understand the concern that has been raised over the cost of the so-called ''TRICARE for life'' provision that was included in this conference report. The cost of health care for aging Americans, be they military or civilian retirees, is an issue that this nation is going to have to confront, and that Congress will have to provide for in future budgets. I have no doubt that whatever we do, as we have seen in this measure, the price tag will be steep.

I am also pleased that the conferees agreed to accept the provision that I offered on behalf of myself, Senator WARNER and Senator LEVIN establishing a United States-China Security Review Commission to monitor and assess the national security implications of the U.S.-China trade relationship. In the wake of the recent enactment of legislation to extend Permanent Normal Trade Relations to China, this Commission can play a key role in assuring that an enhanced economic relationship between the United States and China does not undermine our national security interests.

The purpose of the U.S. China Security Review Commission is to determine whether China, which is working hard to gain entry to the World Trade Organization, or WTO, and to extend its economic dominance throughout the hemisphere, will use its enhanced trade status within the WTO and income from increased international trade to compromise the national security of the United States. Given the circumstances—including the fact that the Chinese Central Committee just this week approved an economic plan that calls for doubling China's economy over the next decade—this is a timely and serious issue to address.

Mr. President, we have good reason to be wary. I think it is significant that even before the President signed the PNTR legislation into law, the Chinese started waffling on promises they had made to secure entry to the World Trade Organization. I note that the President's top trade negotiator was dispatched to Beijing this week, shortly after the PNTR signing ceremony, to attempt to nail down China's commitment to reduce tariffs on imports and open markets to foreign companies.

Let me read from an item in Wednesday's New York Times, entitled ''Clinton Warns China to Abide by Trade Rules.''

I will read from the article.

Mr. Clinton sent Charlene Barshefsky, the United States trade representative, on her mission on the same day that he signed into law the legislation to grant China permanent normal trade relations, the culmination of 14 years of negotiations and a protracted struggle on Capital Hill.

But even as administration officials and bipartisan Congressional leaders gathered on the White House lawn to hail what they called China's integration into the world economy, American officials acknowledged that China was slipping on pledges to open its markets that it had made as part of its efforts to join the World Trade Organization.

I wish I could say I was surprised by China's apparent backing away from its WTO commitments, but I was not. I predicted this. China's record on trade agreements is abysmal. Since 1992, six trade agreements have been made, and broken, by China. In addition to its record of broken promises on trade agreements, China also has a history of weapons proliferation, religious repression, poor labor protections, and aggressive foreign policy postures. Is this the kind of behavior we want to reward with permanent normal trade relations?

I opposed PNTR for China, and I have grave reservations over the impact of China's membership in the WTO. We are entering uncharted waters in our economic relationship with China, and it is absolutely essential that we do so with our eyes open. We gave away our only means to bring the issue of trade with China before the Congress on an annual basis when we passed PNTR.

I believe there were 13 Senators who had their eyes open when they voted on that matter and they voted against it. I was one of the 13.

This U.S.-China Security Review Commission will restore a vital measure of scrutiny to the economic relationship between the United States and China. It is a fundamental safeguard, and I am glad that we are moving forward with it.

It is not a trade commission. It is a national security commission.

Let's have some group that will advise the Congress as to what impact the trade engaged in by China with the United States might have on our national security. We are not depending upon the administration. We are not depending upon the executive branch. We have a commission that will advise the Congress so that we will know, we will have some idea as to what the impact on national security is of this permanent normal trade relations legislation.

So it is a fundamental safeguard, and I am glad that we are moving forward with it.

Once again, we stand at a time when tensions throughout the world are high. In the span of only a few days, we have ricocheted from the euphoria of democracy—this is the way of making China a democratic nation. We will have great influence upon China. It is laughable that we, the people of 212 years, will have influence upon the people of 5,000 years. No. We have ricocheted from the euphoria of democracy sweeping through Yugoslavia, to the despair of escalating violence in the Mideast, to the horrific images of dead and injured American soldiers on the U.S.S. Cole, the victims of an apparent anti-American terrorist attack. We are reminded that peace remains an elusive goal, and that America must remain vigilant.

The first order of business is to ensure that the United States maintains the finest, the best equipped, the best protected, and the best managed military in the world; a military force—but we will have to make it all of these things—a military force suited for the emerging challenges of the 21st century. This conference report goes a long way to meet that test. It is a good package.

I urge its adoption, and I again commend Senators WARNER and LEVIN for having led the way for others of the conferees to the final development of this package.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, first, let me thank our dear friend from West Virginia for his nice remarks about the chairman and myself. I am wondering if we could line up some speakers. We have Senator REED of Rhode Island and Senator CLELAND on our side who need some time on the conference report before we get down to the point of order. I have not had a chance to talk to Senator HOLLINGS on that issue. But I am wondering if we could set up a line of speakers with Senator REED for 5 minutes on our side.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I want to make sure I hear because I have Senator DOMENICI and Senator GRAMM of Texas.

I, first, want to thank our very valued Member, Senator BYRD, of the committee. I was privileged to join him on the legislation on the China Commission. I can't tell you how our committee benefits from his work and wisdom that he has given us through the many years.

I thank the Senator.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Virginia was a sterling and very steadfast advocate of this legislation. I am deeply in debt to him for his leadership in the committee, and also to my friend, Mr. LEVIN, for his support of this commission.

Mr. WARNER. We thank the Senator.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, let me join our chairman in commending Senator BYRD for the way in which he worked so hard for this commission, and for the valuable function this commission is going to perform for all of us. Whichever side of that debate we were on in terms of PNTR, and however we voted on it, this commission is going to be very helpful to all of us.

I thank my friend from West Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, Senator LEVIN and I will endeavor to see what we can do to convenience the Senate and keep this bill moving.

Our esteemed colleague, Senator KERREY, has his time reserved. We want to have several others before we get to his issue, if that is agreeable. Senator REED has been waiting, Senator GRAMM, and Senator DOMENICI.

Mr. LEVIN. Senator CLELAND.

Mr. WARNER. Senator CLELAND, a member of the Armed Services Committee.

Let's alternate between sides.

Mr. LEVIN. Senator REED, who has been waiting the longest, wishes 5 minutes.

Mr. WARNER. Senator DOMENICI, on my time for another 5 minutes.

Mr. LEVIN. And back to Senator CLELAND for 10 minutes.

Mr. WARNER. Then we go to Senator GRAMM, who has his time under the unanimous-consent agreement.

It would be our hope the Senator will consume less than the allocated amount under the unanimous consent.

Mr. GRAMM. I was hoping our distinguished chairman would consume less than allocated on the budget but he consumed 10 times as much.

Mr. WARNER. We will have the opportunity, Mr. President, to have a few words on that subject.

Mr. LEVIN. If the chairman will yield, it is my understanding under the existing unanimous-consent agreement after the 2 hours under your control, either used or yielded back, 2½ hours under my control, either used or yielded back, the 1 hour under the control of Senator GRAMM of Texas, either used or yielded back, and Senator WELLSTONE, I believe, has already utilized his time, at that point we then turn to the point of order, and Senator KERREY would be recognized for that purpose.

Mr. WARNER. That is correct. For those who are following this, you will make a point of order, at which time I will seek recognition to have that point of order waived.

Mr. LEVIN. We jointly ask unanimous consent the order of speakers be followed for such length of time that we outlined.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Rhode Island is recognized.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I rise to express my support for the fiscal year 2001 Defense authorization conference report.

I believe this bill contains many excellent provisions which will ensure that our military remains the finest in the world.

As to personnel benefits, this bill also takes great steps to improve health care, pay and benefits for armed services personnel.

For the second year in a row, Congress approved a pay raise for military personnel. This year's 3.7 percent pay raise will go into effect on January 1, 2001.

This bill directs the Secretary of Defense to implement the Thrift Savings Plan for active and reserve service members.

Many Members of Congress have been outraged to learn that a number of active duty service members qualify for food stamps. This bill addresses that issue by directing the Secretary of Defense to implement a program which provides additional special pay of up to $500 per month for those service members who qualify for food stamps.

This bill also eliminates co-payments for active duty family members for health care received under TRICARE Prime. In addition, Congress extended TRICARE Prime to families of service members assigned to remote locations.

For military retirees, this bill goes far to fulfill the promise made to our military retirees when they enlisted that they would be given lifetime healthcare.

Congress approved a permanent comprehensive health care benefit for Medicare-eligible retirees which effectively makes all military retirees eligible for health care within TRICARE.

Under this plan, military retirees and family members may keep their Medicare coverage and use Tricare as a Medicare supplement to pay costs not covered by Medicare.

This provision can save military retirees thousands of dollars in out-of-pocket costs.

Congress also expanded the comprehensive retail and national mail order pharmacy to benefit all Medicare eligible retirees and their eligible family members, without enrollment fees.

On submarines, this bill also provides significant resources for the Navy's submarine fleet, a military asset very close to the hearts of the residents of my home state Rhode Island:

Authorizes funding for the construction of the third Virginia class submarine, the U.S.S. Hawaii;

Authorizes a block buy of submarines from FY03–06 which will greatly increase the efficiency and lower the cost of our next generation of submarines.

In transforming for future threats, the Navy will soon be faced with a decision on whether to refuel old Los Angeles class submarines or convert four Trident submarines which are scheduled to be retired to special operations boats. I believe that this decision must be made very carefully and so I am pleased that this report contains language directing a study of the advantages of Trident conversion over refueling.

I am also pleased that significant funding has been authorized for countermine measures. I believe this is a necessary program that has been woefully underfunded in recent years.

As to Army transformation, in October 1999, senior Army leaders announced a new vision to enable the Army to better meet the diverse, complex demands of the 21st century.

At present, in some instances the Army faces strategic deployment challenges that inhibits its ability to negotiate rapidly the transitions from peacetime operations in one part of the world to small-scale contingencies in another.

Army heavy forces have no peer in the world, but they are a challenge to deploy.

The Army has the world's finest light infantry, but it lacks adequate lethality, survivability, and mobility once in theater.

The Army Transformation Strategy will result in an Objective Force that is more responsible, deployable, agile, versatile, lethal, survivable and sustainable than the present force.

A force with these capabilities will allow the Army to place a combat capable brigade anywhere in the world, regardless of ports or airfields, in 96 hours.

It will put a division on the ground in 120 hours. And it will put 5 divisions in theater in 30 days.

This bill supports the Army Transformation efforts by authorizing an additional $750 million for the initiative, of which $600 million is for procurement requirements and $150 million for R&D requirements.

On impact aid, I am also pleased that the conference report contains language I authored to address the considerable financial strain on school districts educating military children with severe disabilities and help military families get the best education for their children with severe disabilities.

As many of my colleagues are aware, military personnel with children with severe disabilities often request and receive compassionate-post assignments to a few districts known for their special education programs.

The cost of providing such education is disproportionately high for these communities. In fact, for some of these children, the cost is upwards of $50,000 to $100,000 a year (as compared to an average per pupil expenditure of $6,900).

In my home state, Middletown, Portsmouth, and Newport are districts with many military children with disabilities. This year, Middletown alone is providing education to 66 high need military children with disabilities at a total cost of nearly $1 million.

This experience, however, is not unique to Rhode Island. In fact, districts ranging from San Diego and Travis Unified in California to Fort Sam Houston Independence in Texas also face considerable financial strain in their endeavor to educate military children with disabilities.

Section 363 of the conference report, Impact Aid for Children with Severe Disabilities, requires a report containing information on military children with severe disabilities, and authorizes funding to ease the strain on local communities providing education to high numbers of such children.

Mr. President, this critical program will help ensure that military families get the best education for their children with disabilities, while providing needed relief to school districts, and I am very pleased that it has been adopted.

I look forward to working with my fellow committee members, the Department of Defense, impact aid organizations, military personnel, and affected communities to press for funding for this program next year.

Under the Montgomery G.I. bill, Mr. President, I would now like to turn to some items that I regret have not been included in the conference report.

First, I would like to mention the expansion of Montgomery G.I. bill benefits that have been advocated for years by our colleague, Senator CLELAND.

One of the most innovative provisions he proposed would have allowed service members to transfer Montgomery G.I. bill benefits to family members.

I believe this transferability would have been an effective tool for recruiting new members and retaining trained and skilled service members.

This provision would have had a negligible impact on the budget: The provision was not written as an entitlement, but rather would have been implemented at the discretion of the service Secretaries.

However, this provision, which was included in the Senate bill, was ultimately eliminated from the conference report because it was too expensive.

Yet while this provision was considered too expensive, in conference, majority leaders created and approved a greatly expanded entitlement for retirees which will cost $60 billion over ten years.

I am disappointed that we were not able to include both of these worthy items in this conference report and I will continue to work with Senator CLELAND to ensure it is included next year.

As for hate crimes, Mr. President, I would like to express my extreme disappointment regarding the stripping of the hate crimes legislation from the Department of Defense (DOD) authorization conference report.

Fifty-seven United States Senators voted to add this important legislation to the DOD authorization bill, 232 Members of the House of Representatives instructed the conferees to keep the hate crimes legislation in the DOD authorization bill, and both the President and Vice-President have expressed unwavering support for this legislation.

Although some argue that hate crimes legislation has nothing to do with authorizing our nation's defense programs, a majority of the Senate added it to the DOD authorization bill because we were never given the opportunity by the Republican leadership to vote on it as a stand alone bill.

I support this legislation because it sends a message that society finds crimes motivated by bias especially heinous and worthy of punishment.

Hate crime laws recognize that a violent act committed against someone just because of who they are, is intended to intimidate and frighten people other than the immediate victim. While a hate crime might be targeted at one person, it is really directed at an entire community.

Considering the intent behind a person's action in committing a crime is not a new development. Deeply ingrained in our nation's laws is the recognition that intentions count when it comes to crime. That's why premeditated murder is punished more severely than manslaughter.

Hate crime laws express society's judgment that a violent act motivated by bigotry deserves greater punishment than a random crime committed under the same circumstances.

The Local Law Enforcement Act does not trample on our nation's ideals of free speech and equal justice under the law.

The Supreme Court has held constitutional state legislation that enhances penalties for hate crimes, respecting findings that hate crimes often provoke retaliatory crimes, inflict distinct emotional harms on their victims, and incite community unrest. The Court affirmed that it is reasonable to have greater punishments for crimes that cause greater individual or societal harm.

Hate crimes are very real offenses, combinations of uncontrollable bigotry and vicious acts of personal injury. These crimes not only inflict physical wounds, but wreak mental and emotional devastation by attacking a person's identity.

People who hurt or kill someone because that person represents a certain community, deserve harsher penalties.

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., said that he hoped that one day all people will be judged by the content of their character.

A majority of the U.S. Senate, a majority of the House of Representatives and the President and Vice President believe this to be the case. Our nation's hate crime laws should be extended so that we—that all people can have the freedom to be themselves without fear of being attacked for who or what they are.

Mr. President, I regret that we were not able to accomplish all that we set out to do with this conference report.

However, I believe that it is ultimately a solid legislative effort that will help our military and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. President, I commend Chairman WARNER and the ranking member, Senator LEVIN, for their great work in bringing to the floor a comprehensive and critically needed reauthorization of our defense programs. This is legislation which recognizes the extraordinary sacrifices of our military personnel around the globe—sacrifices which were certainly highlighted today in the gulf.

One part of this legislation is an enhancement of personnel benefits, both pay and health care. There is a sentiment which I subscribe to, frankly, as a veteran and as an American, that we cannot reward our service men and women enough for what they do each day. There is a very practical consideration, and that is the limits of our budget.

This legislation does many good things, but it raises an important question. It raises the question of whether we are reaching the limits of resources that we can effectively devote to personnel concerns, not only in terms of overall economic strategies in the country but also in terms of the inherently limited defense dollars because dollars we commit to personnel force cannot be used for operations, cannot be used for modernization, cannot be used for a host of programs that give us the qualitative education, and give our service men and women serving today the tools to do this very critical job. That question keeps emerging in the context of this legislation. For those personnel enhancements, certainly no one deserves more recognition or reward than our men and women in uniform.

Let me speak about several other topics included within this legislation. First, I am pleased to see that submarines have been recognized. This is a very valuable aspect of our national security. This legislation would authorize funding for the construction of a third Virginia class submarine, the U.S.S. Hawaii, and authorize a block buy program of submarines for fiscal years 2003 to 2006. It is more efficient, a better way to spend our dollars to get the quality submarines we need. It also recognizes the requirements to augment our submarine fleet by either new construction or by refueling existing 688 attack submarines.

This legislation, I am pleased to say, contains legislation language that directs a study of conversion of Trident over refueling, conversion of certain submarines over refueling, and that type of study is inherently positive and useful for future deliberations.

What is happening to our services today as we speak is a profound transformation based upon new threats, a transformation based upon new political realities in the post-cold-war world. It is a transformation we have to undertake with each service. I believe this legislation lays out some good guidelines for the transformation.

With respect to the Army, it does support the Chief of Staffs' commitment to forming five to six new interim Army brigades that would be more mobile, better able to be positioned around the world. It also sets up testing requirements that will ensure these new concepts are thoroughly tested.

With respect to the Air Force, it recognizes what has already been done in terms of organizing 10 aerospace expeditionary forces in providing resources and certainly support for that.

With respect to the Navy, it recognizes and, again, as evidenced today, the Navy now has responsibilities close in shore, along the littorals. They have to be prepared to meet the hostile fleet at sea. But more often they are called upon to be close in, supporting operations, supporting political and diplomatic issues. That, too, is recognized here.

So we have legislation that is comprehensive, legislation that recognizes the need to reward our service men and women, legislation that recognizes the need to transform our military services because of our new world, and legislation that I think goes a long way in building those vital programs, such as submarines, but there are others, that are critical to our future national security.

There are several regrets, though, and one regret is that included within the Senate version of the legislation was the hate crimes bill—important legislation that could match our ideals with our legislative intent. We all profess, indeed, would say stoutly and without reservation, our abhorrence for hate crimes, the need to condemn them. Unfortunately, this language which was included in the Senate version, and which the House also favorably supported for at least an instruction of the conferees, could not be included in the final version of the legislation. I regret that.

What it means is that we have to return next January with a commitment to pass this legislation. Hopefully we can pass it standing alone; hopefully, if that is not the case, on some legislative vehicle. But this legislation is necessary. Certainly I will be supporting this legislation because it will make us more capable, it will help us modernize our forces, and will reward those forces who are serving so valiantly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is next to be recognized under the unanimous consent agreement.

Mr. DOMENICI. I believe I have 5 minutes.

Mr. President, I rise today to support for the Defense Authorization Conference Report of 2001. The conferees have worked very hard to achieve consensus or reach compromises on the provisions found in this year's report.

The conference report contains many positive things for ensuring America's continued military dominance; in addition, it also includes several authorizations for defense activities in the state of New Mexico. I thank the Chairman and Ranking Minority Member for their contributions.

I would like to specifically address what has been achieved in this bill with respect to laser programs and directed energy technologies. I strongly believe that lasers, like THEL and Airborne Laser, will offer offensive and defensive military means far beyond our current capabilities. These programs deserve our full support. At the same time, we need better coordination of our nation's efforts in lasers and other directed energy technologies.

I am pleased the Committee accepted my amendment that requires the Secretary of Defense to implement the High Energy Laser Master Plan and authorizes up to $30 million for these vital technologies. This amendment also requires selection of a site for the Joint Technology Office (JTO) by the Secretary of Defense. The JTO will perform a critical role in achieving better coordination and execution of our nation's laser programs. The bill also underscores the vital role of the High Energy Laser Test Facility at White Sands Missile Range and the importance of DoD's close coordination with other federal agencies, academia and industry in creating a stable foundation for further progress in these technologies.

Although my original legislation encompassed all directed energy technologies, including microwaves, in this defense-wide effort, the conferees would not support this position. Instead, the legislation will require the Pentagon to take a hard look at integrating all other directed energy technologies into the current structure for High Energy Laser programs. From my perspective this would be a logical next step in the Pentagon's efforts to streamline and better coordinate its research programs. This would also accelerate progress and maximize efficiencies for these related technology areas.

The conferees also addressed shortfalls in some specific ongoing laser weapons programs. They authorized $85 million to restore the most of the Airborne Laser (ABL) program funding. The Air Force's ABL program is the only missile defense system currently contemplated that would strike and kill missiles in their boost phase.

In addition, the conferees reached a reasonable compromise on the control of funding for Airborne Laser after the Air Force radically cut that program's budget. The Air Force will retain funding control for ABL; however, it must have the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization's (BMDO) approval before making any changes to any aspect of the program, including its budget.

The Tactical High Energy Laser (THEL) was authorized at $15 million for FY2001. THEL represents one of the first weapons systems being tested that utilizes high energy lasers for the purposes of missile defense. I led the charge to obtain an additional $5.7 million in FY00 funding for continued testing of this weapon system this year. Since the passage of the Senate bill earlier this year, THEL has shown that lasers can provide effective, speed of light defenses against Katyusha rockets. In the coming months, THEL will be tested against other targets and will provide us additional insights into the lethality of this particular type of system.

I am committed to addressing the shortfalls in the science and technology funding to ensure more rapid development and fielding of high energy laser weapons. However, I am also committed to expanding these efforts to all directed energy technologies. While I appreciate the Committee's attention to these vital programs, more must be done to ensure the directed energy science and technology is fully streamlined and sufficiently funded. These technologies can assist in countering some of the most prevalent threats confronting us.

This long-awaited conference report will have a positive impact on the day-to-day concerns confronting our military. For example, quality of life received much needed attention. I applaud the 3.7 percent pay raise for military personnel and the comprehensive health care for Medicare-eligible military retirees. The conference report also retained the extension of the TRICARE Prime benefit to families of service members assigned to remote locations and the elimination of co-payments for services received under TRICARE Prime.

This legislation contains landmark provisions with respect to healthcare for our military retirees. Many complicated and situation-specific problems currently exist with the health care programs for active and retired military members as well as for veterans. It will take more than one year of fixes to find the right combination of policies and ensure that the funding for military health care is not forced to compete with other defense priorities.

These will aid in addressing the health care crisis within our military and provide proof of our desire to keep our promise. I applaud the conferees for enacting sweeping reform to a broken system.

Military Construction and family housing is authorized at $8.8 billion, an increase of $788 million over the Administration's request. I am pleased that projects critical to the operational effectiveness and well being of the service members and military families residing in New Mexico were addressed in this bill. These are not glamourous projects. These authorizations will replace critical crumbling infrastructure, such as repair of the Bonito pipeline between La Luz and Holloman Air Force Base.

Five additional Weapons of Mass Destruction Civil Support Teams were included at a cost of $15.7 million. This will provide us with a total of 32 Civil Support Teams by the end of fiscal year 2001. These teams are comprised of full-time National Guard personnel trained and equipped to deploy and assess suspected nuclear, biological, chemical, or radiological events in support of local first responders. One such team is currently being trained and fielded in New Mexico, ensuring that New Mexico constituents and its vital assets have better protection against such attacks.

The bill authorizes a total of $13 billion for Atomic Energy Defense activities of the Department of Energy. A total of $6.4 billion of this funding is for the National Nuclear Security Administration.

Over $1.0 billion is authorized for the nonproliferation and threat reduction programs of the Departments of Defense and Energy. These programs continue to make great strides in the critical process of securing weapons of mass destruction and retaining scientific expertise in the former Soviet Union. To further ensure that these threat reduction programs achieve their goals, the committee has also included several initiatives to obtain greater commitment and necessary access from Russia.

Earlier this year I introduced a bill to improve the structure and signal a meaningful U.S. commitment to DOE's nuclear cities initiative. I strongly believe that without significant restructuring in nuclear weapons production complex of Russia the progress in strategic arms reductions could readily be reversed. Further, the proliferation threat of underemployed and underpaid Russian weapons scientists could create a direct, negative impact on international security. I thank the Committee for focusing efforts on this issue.

While I am pleased with the authorization levels to support stockpile stewardship and nonproliferation, I am dismayed that the conferees took it upon themselves to adopt additional provisions on polygraphs. These new requirements will entail polygraphs for an estimated 5,000 additional persons working in our nuclear complex. I find it astounding—especially in light of the findings in the Baker/Hamilton Report—that the conferees included these provisions. That report stated unequivocally that ''(t)he current negative climate is incompatible with the performance of good science. A perfect security system at a national laboratory is of no use if the laboratory can no longer generate the cutting-edge technology that needs to be protected . . .''

There is little evidence that polygraphs administered as a screening technique is an effective use of security resources. The Conferees apparently view mass polygraphs of everyone at the Labs as a silver bullet that will ensure no future security breaches. That is a naive view of security that fails to recognize that polygraphs are simply one tool among many, that must be wisely and judiciously used to ensure a strong security culture that will allow science to thrive. Otherwise, the silver bullet of mass polygraph will end up killing the labs, not protecting them.

In sum, security is a moot point if our national laboratories fail to achieve scientific advances worth protecting. The Baker/Hamilton Report clearly indicated that we should avoid further ''made in Washington'' rules that frustrate scientific pursuits and only serve to further demoralize laboratory personnel. I believe these provisions will only make a bad situation worse.

Finally, $38.9 billion is provided for the defense research, development, test and evaluation programs—an increase of $1.1 billion over the President's budget. This funding will focus on the revolutionary technologies to address emerging threats and ensure that America's military remains dominant in the future.

In years past I have repeatedly emphasized the need to stop the ebbing tide and end the lengthy decline in defense budgets. We must not tire in our efforts to maintain a strong, ready and professional military. Quality of life is central to recruitment and retention. Combat readiness of our armed forces must never be at risk. And we must ensure that we are developing and leveraging new technologies to the maximum extent. Our soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines require the means necessary to respond to international uncertainty and address different and diffuse security threats. We must not fail them or U.S. citizens in rising to this challenge.

One of the most dangerous things confronting the United States of America is the current situation of morale at the three nuclear laboratories of the United States. These are the three labs that for three generations we have sent the greatest scientists in America, the best young scientists who wanted to go because it was a great place to work. We used to get the top graduate Ph.D.s from Texas A&M in physics. They would cherish going to one of the nuclear laboratories for 10 or 12 years. From MIT, from Harvard, from Cal Tech, everywhere.

We were being told about a current report available to this committee, while it was in conference, the committee that produced this bill, called a Baker-Hamilton report, named after Senator Baker and Representative Hamilton. It is about 6 weeks old. They were asked to check the current situation in our laboratories. They are more worried about the morale of the scientists there than any other single thing. They have concluded that the recruitment of young, bright scientists is off in excess of 50 percent because of the constant bombardment of those laboratories over the last 18 months with references to security, some of which has been corrected.

They also concluded that a laboratory which is perfectly secure but cannot maintain the highest degree of science in the world is not a very good laboratory. They maintain that we should do less polygraphs, not more, be more targeted, and more efficient and more effective.

Guess what the bill does. This bill permits 5,000 additional laboratory employees. This may even permit them to go down to a janitor, I don't know, and submit polygraph tests to them. And believe it or not, they provide a waiver for the Secretary of Energy. Then they say you cannot use the waiver if, in fact, the reason for it is that the laboratory is having morale problems and cannot keep its personnel to stay alive. That is paraphrasing.

I read the exact words: This amendment would prohibit the Secretary from using the waiver to maintain the scientific viability of a DOE laboratory. That is the precise reason you should be able to use a waiver, the viability of the laboratories.

Frankly, I am not at all sure everyone who signed this conference report and produced the bill that they really think is a great bill knows that provision is in there.

I say to my good friend, the chairman of the committee, I worked hard and fast and side by side with the Senator from Virginia to get a new law to create a new, semiautonomous agency with which he helped so much. It is now known as the National Nuclear Safety Administration, headed by a great general whom you know, General Gordon. If you asked him, Can these laboratories work under these kinds of conditions? he would tell you: Please don't do that. He would say: Please don't do that. That is the wrong thing to do.

Frankly, all I am asking is that the Senate take heed of what I am saying. I am not asking for anything more. I am not even asking the distinguished chairman for anything today. I only hope he is listening and next year, early on, when the Senator from New Mexico tries to change this provision consistent with the Baker-Hamilton report—and almost everybody who has looked at our National Laboratories since the Wen Ho Lee case would agree, too—I hope the distinguished chairman and the chairman's staff will consider, early in the year of the next Congress, something that will fix this provision; 5,000 additional polygraph employees is not the way to go with the laboratories in the position they are in now.

There is no evidence that polygraphs of the type they are talking about have anything to do with security, veracity, or anything else. I know the people who work there. It is somewhat of an insult to consider the average employee, some of whom have been there 30 years, has to be subject to a polygraph because security has gone awry in the laboratories.

I really wish I had had a chance to present this issue. I think it is exactly the kind of thing we should not be doing. I am going to do everything I can, starting next year with the first legislation that is around, to change this. In the meantime, I am glad the Secretary does not have to go next month and start immediately imposing these polygraphs. He has a little bit of time. I hope he squeezes the time so next year we can fix it. That is all I have on this subject.

I say to the distinguished chairman, thank you for yielding me time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, on my time I thank my colleague for bringing this to our attention. I commend him for the fervor with which he has taken the interest of these very vital laboratories, some of which are in his State, and spent inordinate amounts of time in his Senate career trying to strengthen them and look after the employees. I know how difficult it was for him to work through the complicated case which was recently disposed of.

I worked with the Senator in the creation of this new entity in the Department of Energy. I am about to get some new documents. Once I get them, I want to show them to you and we may find a little time to amplify this record. But I am advised, subject to the documents coming, we did take into consideration the concerns the Senator has expressed, and we do have a letter from the individual primarily responsible for security saying they could work with this proposal, this language.

Until I get that letter, I will withhold. But I may ask unanimous consent to have documents printed in the RECORD, should I get them in my possession, after showing them to my good friend and colleague, the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. LOTT. I know the Senator from Georgia is prepared to speak. Will he allow me to intervene for a moment? I do not want to take away from time that may be reserved, so I yield myself such time from my leader time as is necessary.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I will be brief. I want to commend Senator WARNER for the effort he and his staff have put into this bill. I am hoping we can wrap up the debate and get to the votes that are going to be required on the point of order and final passage before too late in the evening.

This has been a long time coming. It has been a laborious process. Senator WARNER stuck with it. Obviously, he had help from his colleague on the other side of the Capitol, the gentleman from South Carolina, Congressman SPENCE. He worked with Senator LEVIN, the ranking member. But this is a monumental achievement.

There are some people who have the idea we do not need the Defense authorization bill if we have already done the Department of Defense appropriations bill and military construction appropriations bill, but we need this bill because it authorizes important programs; it authorizes important changes in the law; it authorizes the money that we need. I want to touch on a few of those very briefly.

The funding level for new budget authority for the Department of Defense in this bill is $309.9 billion, which is $4.6 billion above the President's budget request. It is an increase over what was requested for procurement, for research, development, test and evaluation, and operations and maintenance. It also has a 3.7-percent pay raise for our military personnel effective January 1, 2001.

Last year, when we had a pay raise for our military men and women, the word I got from the rank-and-file troops, and also from the Joint Chiefs, including specifically the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, was that it absolutely transformed the attitude of our military men and women who were leaving and were not ''reuping,'' as the saying goes in the military, because they really wondered if we appreciated them and knew they were there. At least by improving their pay, by dealing with their retirement benefits, and now in this bill, another pay raise, and dealing with this question of health care, it is going to have a good effect on morale. Obviously, we want the morale to be good. We want quality of life in the barracks. We want the ships and tanks and everything we need. But if we do not begin with decent living arrangements for our military men and women, then all is lost.

This bill comes at a critical time. Just today we see what the risks are—the U.S.S. Cole, built in my hometown of Pascagoula—I believe I was there when it was commissioned—300 sailors on the ship, and now we see 3 dozen or more of them are killed or injured and others are missing. Yet this is one of the most sophisticated ships in the world. But it shows once again, if we have kamikazes who are willing to put it all on the line, to get killed, to do damage, they can do damage to our equipment and to our men and women. This is no time to nitpick this bill and turn away from it.

There are those who say we should not be starting these new programs or make them permanent. But for our military men and women, active duty and retirees, and for their families, we need to address this health care question. For our military people to be told, at 65, you are off, you are off this program, go there and get on Medicare or find some other arrangement, is wrong. When we talked to our military personnel and our retirees and we said: what is really the thing that you want the most in helping you deal with your health care needs, they cited the pharmaceutical problem, the need for pharmacy benefits, either mail order or, in this bill, through retail.

This is a major achievement. I have already had military retirees and veterans call my office literally in tears to say thanks for what we are doing here. Maybe it was not done exactly the prettiest way, or in the way it should have been done early on, but this is a major achievement. I do not want to be the one to explain to some veteran, because of a procedural issue or a point of order, that we don't address this need of our military men and women and their families and our retirees. I am not going to explain that. I am going to vote for this bill, and I am going to do it proudly.

Then there is another provision that objections have been raised about, and that is the Department of Energy employees who were injured due to exposure to radiation and other problems at our DOE facilities and nuclear facilities. Again, there may need to be more work on it. Maybe it should have been handled in a different way. But who wants to tell these people who have been injured by our Government operation, ''There is no program for you.'' Not me. I do not think we should walk away from this at this point.

This is a reasonable compromise. Both the retirement and the DOE program that was added as we went along, and expanded, while it may present certain difficulties for some of our people, in the end it is the right thing to do. Also, it is attached to a bill that we need desperately—a good bill, a bill that has been a long time coming.

I thank all those involved. There are so many parts of it I could refer to that are important, but I didn't want us to get to final passage without me saying we should do this bill—we should defeat the point of order, and we should pass this bill. It is the right thing for the defense of our country, for our veterans, and the right thing for people who have been injured and haven't been properly compensated. We can fine tune the program as we learn more about the extent of the damages and how much they are injured and the proper way to deal with it, but for now I urge my colleagues, vote for this legislation.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I commend our distinguished majority leader. This bill had a long and tortuous course through the Senate, but he stood by our side, not only me, as chairman, but the members of the committee from both sides of the aisle, and the Democratic leader likewise.

I see the presence of the distinguished Senator from Nevada. On those days when we were on again and off the next, you stood by. Last year, you were the first one to cosponsor the bill on the pay raise, the first one this year to cosponsor the bill on the medical benefits. While you are no longer a member of our committee, having once been one, you have stood with us throughout this whole process. I thank you.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia is recognized.

Mr. WARNER. I inquire how much time our distinguished colleague and very valuable member of the committee, without whose wit and function I doubt we could function, requires.

Mr. CLELAND. I thank the Senator. Two minutes.

Mr. CLELAND. Mr. President, I come before the Senate to remind Members that the news today reminds us why we need a Defense authorization bill; why we need pay increases for our military men and women abroad; why we need our Armed Forces to be strong; why we need to take care of our military retirees, especially in terms of their health care needs; why we need a defense of this country at all.

Our young men and women are in 121 nations around the globe, and they stand on watch in defense of this country. In doing so, they voluntarily, every one of them, place themselves in harm's way. We saw the cost today of that terrible price that is exacted from time to time on our service men and women. All of us have in our hearts and in our thoughts and in our prayers the families of those service men and women on board the U.S.S. Cole as they struggle with taking care of their dead, their wounded, and their missing.

This year's Department of Defense authorization conference report represents months of hard work and compromise on behalf of our Nation's military, as has been discussed. I thank Chairman WARNER and ranking member CARL LEVIN for their leadership throughout this entire process this year and for their support particularly of my initiatives to enhance the GI bill. Stephen Ambrose, the historian, particularly of the greatest generation of World War II, said the GI bill is probably the finest piece of legislation ever devised by the Federal Government.

I thank Senator HUTCHINSON, chairman of the Personnel Subcommittee, with whom I have worked closely this year on issues pertaining to the quality of life of our service men and women.

This conference report has been a long time coming, as has been discussed. We began the authorization process earlier this year. Here we are in the closing days of this session of the Congress and finally debating the conference report for the DOD authorization bill.

The extended time we have taken on this year's bill has been worthwhile, though. It represents our continued effort in the Senate to build upon a firm foundation by providing a substantial increase in funding for the U.S. military, and Lord knows we need it.

Last year was the first step in addressing some of the pressing needs of those who defend our Nation by providing pay increases—and by the way, with last year's pay increase and this year's 3.7-percent pay increase, we will have provided just in the last 2 years the biggest pay increase in a generation.

This bill not only provides pay increases but reform of the military retirement pay system, targeted bonuses, critical investments in spare parts, and continued support for the next generation of weapons systems.

We have taken an even bigger step this year throughout this process. We have talked with our men and women in uniform. This year I have been to Kosovo. I personally have been to Japan and the Korean peninsula. I talked with our men and women in uniform serving around the world. I consulted with the leadership of the services. We have taken yet another step to fulfill the promises to support those who put on the uniform and carry our flag every day.

Our people, as we now know, and are so painfully reminded today, face dangers every day in what seems the most routine of tasks. Our hearts do go out to the sailors and families of those serving, especially on the U.S.S. Cole, tonight in the Middle East. Those sacrifices are just a recent reminder of what our men and women face every day.

This year we continue the support of the modernization of our Armed Forces by funding the next generation of weapons systems, such as Joint Strike Fighter providing critical funding for the F–22 aircraft. We have authorized additions to some of our most trusted aircraft systems by increasing the funding for C–130s made in my home State of Georgia and funding additional JSTARS aircraft, without which we could not conduct modern warfare.

Also included in this bill is increased funding to support the Army's plan to transform itself into a leaner, more mobile fighting force. We have authorized funding of $222 million for our spare parts accounts and over $407 million for equipment maintenance accounts to address such critical readiness issues.

This year, as with last year, we have increased funding in support for the most critical weapon in our arsenal—our military men and women. It is their hard work and selfless service that make America's military the strongest force in the world.

This year, we provided that 3.7-percent pay increase to all military personnel. We have eliminated TRICARE copayments for our military families and extended TRICARE Remote to active duty family members assigned to remote locations who do not have access to military treatment facilities.

We have authorized almost $9 billion for military construction and provided improvements to family housing, which is much needed. We have included full implementation of a thrift savings plan for service members.

We have also authorized those military families eligible for food stamps to qualify for an extra $500 a month. Most importantly, this year, we have taken an enormous step by providing health care access for our military retirees. Since my election to the Senate, I have heard from military retirees in Georgia and across the Nation regarding health care benefits. When they were asked to serve their country, they did not turn their backs on our country. Time and again, we have heard their call for keeping this country's promises to them.

This year, we are living up to that promise. In this conference report, we have authorized the Warner-Hutchinson provisions granting TRICARE for seniors as a lifetime benefit for our retirees over the age of 65. For the first time, we are granting health care insurance for military retirees over 65. Though in the beginning this was a 2-year pilot program to be fully implemented and fully funded in the outyears, we worked to make this benefit permanent.

Additionally, I worked with my colleagues to provide a prescription drug benefit, prescription drugs being the biggest out-of-pocket expense for military retirees, for our Medicare-eligible retirees. This is the first prescription drug benefit to be offered by the Federal Government.

Our military retirees have earned these benefits, and I am proud to support both of these vital provisions.

One quality of life issue I have been working on during the past 2 years has been educational benefits. I was pleased that two provisions of my educational initiative are included in the conference report: authorizing the services to pay 100 percent of tuition assistance for going to school while in the military and allowing VEAP participants to buy into the Montgomery GI bill. However, we have to do more. I will continue to work to address the quality-of-life issues, especially educational benefits. I still believe we must make the GI bill more family friendly. We must work to offer a transferability option to our military families, as recommended by the congressionally mandated Principi Commission.

I note this conference report is subject to a budget point of order. There are important concerns about the increases in mandatory spending that are included in the legislation. However, this spending which is mainly for health care benefits is needed and justified. Therefore, I will not support the budget point of order and will support final adoption of this conference report.

In the next congressional session, we have to continue to work hard to establish meaningful benefits for service members who serve our great Nation by taking additional steps along the road to maintaining the finest military in the world. We must honor the soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines who serve this country. They deserve it.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BENNETT). The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I again thank our distinguished colleague from Georgia. His knowledge of the military and his real love and deep respect for them to this day is an invaluable contribution to our committee. I thank him for his hard work and his extensive travel to military bases and installations in the United States, as well as abroad.

Mr. LEVIN. If I could just ask my friend from Virginia to yield, let me join in his thanks to our good friend from Georgia for the really not only invaluable but unique contribution based on his experience, as well as his judgment, on so many issues that come before us.

It is hard to imagine the committee without the Senator. I just want to add my thanks.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, we should add to that—Senator LEVIN and I—how hard the Senator fought with respect to amendments on the GI bill for portability of the benefits, enabling the service person to have a quantity of those benefits—whatever fraction might be agreed on in law—to be passed on to a spouse or a child. I supported that and fought that battle with you, I say to the Senator. We did not win. We lost in conference. But, I say to the Senator, we will start that next year.

Now I would like to refer to the UC agreement which is governing this debate. I will read from it: That following the debate just outlined—that is basically what we have had to date—Senator BOB KERREY be recognized to make a point of order, and that the motion to waive the Budget Act be limited to 2 hours, equally divided in the usual form.

It also states: I further ask unanimous consent that following the use or yielding back of time on the motion to waive, the Senate proceed to vote on the motion and, if waived, a vote occur immediately on adoption of the conference report, without any intervening action, motion, or debate.

The one remaining thing is, I intend to fairly—and I am sure my colleague from Michigan does as well—deal with Senator PHIL GRAMM, who unavoidably had to leave the floor. But let us proceed now under this order with the recognition of our colleague, Senator KERREY.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I do not know if that is a unanimous consent request or not.

Mr. WARNER. No, I didn't put it in the form of a UC.

Mr. LEVIN. If my good friend from Nebraska would yield for one moment for me to comment on that, the situation we are in is the following: We were to use all of the time on the conference report prior to turning to the point of order. We were to either use it or yield it back. We have not done that yet. Yet the Senator from Virginia is suggesting we turn to the point of order.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, the Senator raises a correct point. But I want to protect Senator GRAMM of Texas.

Mr. LEVIN. If I could just finish my thought, I fully agree with the determination to protect the Senator from Texas. On the other hand, I do not know where that leaves us in terms of this unanimous consent agreement. And if I could complete my thought, everyone reasonably wants to have some idea as to when the votes will begin, and to a large extent that is going to depend upon Senator GRAMM's decision of how much time he wants to use of his time.

I want to, as a factual matter, see if my good friend from Virginia has the same understanding. Both of us have time remaining, I believe, on our time.

The 2 hours under the control of the chairman, how much of that time, if I may ask the Chair, is remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fourteen minutes is remaining under the control of the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. LEVIN. How much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-nine minutes.

Mr. LEVIN. Is that time now still remaining under the approach we are taking, if we turn to——

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, it would be, because I have not yielded back time on the UC. I was just trying to keep this thing moving in an informal way, protecting our colleague from Texas. I would be willing to yield back my 14 minutes. I presume the Senator would be willing to yield back his 59. Because the two of us have time under the debate of the motion of the Senator from Nebraska. So I think we are adequately protected. That would move this forward and shorten the time between now and the vote.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I would concur in that approach that we yield back the remainder of our time on the conference report. I understand Senator WELLSTONE has yielded back the remainder of his time. That would leave 1 hour under the control of Senator GRAMM. We would then modify the unanimous consent agreement so that hour, in effect, would be placed into this second tier of debates.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. WARNER. Reserving the right to object, I want to clarify, I am not certain at what juncture Senator GRAMM would be recognized. Again, he is unavoidably away from the floor. But we could proceed, presumably under Senator KERREY's motion and my motion that I would make, and really have the vote on that, and then Senator GRAMM could be recognized if he can't be recognized beforehand.

So I am prepared to yield back 14 minutes. As I understand it, the Senator from Michigan yields back 59 minutes. Let's have action on that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Would the Senator from Virginia restate his unanimous consent request?

Mr. WARNER. The unanimous consent request is that I yield back my 14 minutes remaining under the existing unanimous consent agreement, and the Senator from Michigan yields back 59 minutes, with the understanding that the UC agreement which provides 1 hour under the control of Senator GRAMM remain intact.

Mr. LEVIN. I have no objection to that. I think that is a good course.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I make a point of order the pending Defense authorization conference report violates section 302(f) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I move to waive the relevant provisions of the Budget Act with respect to the conference report to accompany H.R. 4205, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. KERREY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, the 106th Congress appears to be heading towards an ending which will be regarded by many as an orgy of spending. Over the past 12 years when I was approached by citizens who sought additional spending I would invariably reference the spending caps contained in the Budget Act as a way to encourage restraint. But this year, the total spending contained in thirteen FY2001 appropriations bills will be $100 billion over the original spending caps. By drastically increasing the spending baseline, we are adding more than $1 trillion in additional spending over the next ten years. This additional spending is in excess of one dollar of every ten dollars in total U.S. Gross Domestic Product which we propose to collect in taxes and spend. This will be done with nary a debate about the wisdom of our actions.

In addition, there are active discussions under way about spending more to ''fix'' the changes we made in the 1997 Balanced Budget Act, to cut taxes, and to create a prescription drug benefit for seniors. Before we go any further, we need to step back and take a look at the choices we are making about the budget surplus.

The Defense authorization conference report is our first opportunity to do so. Contained in this bill is an authorization that drastically expands the health care entitlement of military retirees over the age of 65—a provision that costs more than was allocated to the Armed Services Committee under current law. The cost of this provision violates our budget rules because it mandates $60 billion in new mandatory spending beyond what is authorized in our budget resolution. Because this provision violates the Budget Act, at least 60 Senators must vote to ignore the budget resolution. While fully I expect 60 Senators will vote to do just that, I hope the debate this afternoon provides us with a better perspective on what we are about to do with the people's money.

The provision we are debating about increases health care spending on 1.2 million military retirees and will cost, according to CBO, $60 billion over the next 10 years. But this number is deceiving. By 2010, the annual cost will be nearly $10 billion. I think we have a duty to ask ourselves what problem are we attempting to solve at an eventual annual cost of $10 billion? The provision in the conference report would allow military retirees to remain in TriCare when they turn 65 and would allow these retirees to continue to receive health care provided by the Department of Defense. Currently, when military retirees turn 65, they must transition from a more generous health insurance program called TRICARE to a less generous program called Medicare where co-payments and deductibles are higher. By changing the law, we will in essence be providing a subsidy for military retiree health insurance coverage that contains no deductibles or co-payments and a generous prescription drug benefit. Imagine the cost if we did the same for all Medicare beneficiaries.

I oppose the provision both for policy and budgetary reasons. First, the rhetoric in support of this spending exaggerates the promise that was made to the men and women who volunteered and served in our Armed Forces. Worse, it undermines and reduces the value of the motivation of millions who volunteered with no expectation or desire of being repaid with taxpayer-financed benefits. Our motivation was that it was our duty, and that the service would be good for the nation and for us. In my case, I got a bargain and I do not like the feeling I get when I hear former comrades-in-arms claim they are entitled to some benefit on account of their service.

A second objection to this provision is that it is in essence an admission that Medicare is an inadequate program whose coverage is unacceptably poor. Military retirees are not the only former employees in America who must transition from health care provided in the work place to Medicare. You could probably find millions of current Medicare beneficiaries who would stand in line to have their co-payments and deductibles paid as this provision will do for military retirees. If we grant this benefit to military retirees, how soon do you think it will be before non-military retirees will be asking Congress to do the same for them?

My third objection is based upon considering the source of the money we will use to pay this subsidy. The source of the money will, of course, be individual and corporate income taxes. Please don't tell me the government is paying for this. That is a euphemism used by politicians and military retirees alike to hide the truth: we will be collecting individual income taxes from millions of working families who cannot afford to buy health insurance in order to subsidize the purchase of Medigap coverage for millions who could afford to pay their premiums.

Unfortunately—as is often the case—beneficiaries of this income transfer are better organized and better informed than those who will be paying the bills. As a consequence, there will likely be 60 votes to waive the budget point of order. I doubt there would be 60 votes if the transfer of funds was in the opposite direction: from those who have health insurance to those who do not.

My final objection is that the extension of this benefit conflicts with the need we have to invest in our current forces: their salaries, their training, their equipment, and their benefits. Every dollar we commit to increased spending on the mandatory side of our budget—which currently represents two-thirds of total spending—comes at the expense of appropriated spending, defense and non-defense alike.

It is very possible that this business of breaking the budget caps may become a habit. If that's the case, then the conflict between mandatory and discretionary spending may become moot. That's the good news. The bad news is, if this happens we will have spent our way back into fiscal deficits.

Under the budget law that governs our spending, we should be spending no more than $540 billion on defense and non-defense appropriations. The budget resolution enacted by Congress earlier this year allowed for $600 billion in spending. The appropriations bills we are trying to finish will contain at least $40 billion more.

Most Members of Congress are aware—even if most Americans are not—that we cannot do this under the law. To appropriate $640 billion, 60 Senators will have to vote to waive our own budget act to lift the spending caps or to waive the imposition of $100 billion sequester of all defense and non-defense appropriated accounts.

My fear is that we will likely take this action as a consequence of our desire to get out of town quickly. We will have minimal debate and will hope that the American people do not notice what we have done until after the election. However, if we were to have an actual debate on this issue, I believe there would be at least two positive outcomes beyond informing the American people of what we are doing. First, domestic spending levels dictated by our budget act are too low. Second, in less than ten years, the pressure of mandatory spending, even presuming lower interest costs, will become enormous.

Mr. President, I do not expect to win this vote given the margin of victory when it was considered in the Senate earlier this year. Therefore, I will not take more of my colleague's time with further arguments against this provision. Instead, I want to present a case for increasing defense and non-defense spending, but against the willy-nilly process which will lead to the greatest expansion of domestic spending since Lyndon Johnson was President. After I make this case, I will briefly describe the looming problem of mandatory spending.

The good news on spending is that a synergistic combination of federal fiscal discipline and economic growth has shrunk domestic spending as a percentage of total U.S. income to its lowest levels since the middle 1970s. Ten years ago, total Federal spending consumed 22 percent of U.S. GDP. This year, federal spending will be 18 percent of our GDP. According to CBO, if current law is unchanged, total spending will fall to 16 percent in ten years, the lowest percentage of our income since the Eisenhower administration.

In current dollars, each 10 percent of GDP represents nearly $1 trillion. It is a tremendous amount of money that causes the people of most other nations on this earth to shake their heads and wonder at our good fortune. Leaving $4 trillion in the economy over the next 10 years for private sector purchases and investments adds a lot of constructive steam to our economy. This fact gets too little attention when we are debating how to sustain our current economic recovery.

Mr. President, this is why we need to stop and to consider what we are doing before we quietly agree to spend $1 trillion beyond the original discretionary spending caps. We would be better-served if we made this decision to increase the caps with a coherent and holistic debate about how to invest the surplus. A spending strategy that would increase the productivity of our work force by increasing the percentage of college graduates, and by increasing the number of high school graduates who have the necessary technical training to succeed in the American economy. A thoughtful debate on our spending strategy would no doubt also lead to higher spending levels on early childhood education and adult education. A thoughtful debate on our spending strategy would no doubt recognize the need to invest in our non-human infrastructure of roads, research, sewer and water. And a thoughtful debate on our spending strategy would no doubt contain safeguards to make certain that we do not throw good money after bad.

Instead, we are going to commit ourselves to dramatic increases in discretionary and mandatory spending without any unifying motivation beyond the desire to satisfy short term political considerations. To be clear, Mr. President, I do not believe most of these considerations are bad or unseemly. Most can be justified. But we need a larger purpose than just trying to get out of town.

On the mandatory side of the spending equation we have allowed the heady talk of surpluses as far as the eye can see to prevent us from seeing the wave of baby boomers that will begin to become eligible for taxpayer subsidized health and retirement benefits in less than 9 years. In less time than our most senior colleagues have served in the Senate, the ratio of American workers being taxed to pay the benefits for those who are eligible will shrink from 3 workers per retiree to 2 workers per retiree. If we continue to vote for more and more spending—as a percentage of our income—on Americans over the age of 65 and less and less on Americans under the age of 18 we will create two terrible problems: workers who do not have the skills to earn the money needed to support their families and a collective working population whose total income is smaller than needed to avoid higher payroll taxes.

And yet that is exactly what we are doing with this provision in the Defense authorization conference. We obligate another $60 billion of tax revenue to reduce the burden of buying Medigap insurance. Just this year, a majority of the Senate has voted for a prescription drug benefit, an end to the Social Security earnings test, a decrease in the income tax of Social Security income, and this military retiree provision. Together, these mandatory spending items will cost the American taxpayer more than $500 billion over the next ten years.

These spending levels may in fact be justified and affordable. However, they could also end up squeezing our domestic spending further as a percent of GDP. Because entitlement spending programs are locked into law, because those who favor these benefits are well organized and easily provoked come election time, they tend to be protected from spending cuts forever.

I ask my colleagues to consider how many votes there would be for a proposal to waive the budget act in order to spend $60 billion more on our children to improve the quality of their health, their education, their lives. How many votes would there be for such a proposition? Less than 60, I assure you.

Mr. President, I regret the proposed expansion of tax payer subsidization of military retirees' health benefits will not take place in the context of a more thorough debate of current and future Federal spending. In my view, it would be far less likely that this entitlement expansion would occur if we understood how it will add to the problems created by rapidly growing mandatory spending that begins again just as the full cost of this new benefit kicks in. And it would be far more likely that if we did vote for such an expansion we and the American people would understand the future consequences of our actions.

Mr. President, let me say, I regret this may be my last speech on the Senate floor and that it be a speech against extending additional benefits to my fellow veterans or, stated another way, which I think needs to be thought about as we do this, asking other taxpayers to pay some things that I currently pay for myself by asking them to subsidize me even more for the service.

I am military retired, let me fully disclose to my colleagues. I will benefit from this provision regardless of what my income is, regardless of what my need is. I say to you, I am personally offended by some of the rhetoric around this. I did not volunteer for the U.S. Navy in order to get anything. And you take away the most important value that I have from my service: I served; I volunteered. You did not have to buy that. You did not have to give me a health care benefit.

If you want to give me a health care benefit, give it to me, but please do not say you owe it to me. You may decide it is necessary, but I got more from my service than my country got from me. I am the one who benefited from my service. And I am much less likely to benefit if all of a sudden I become a mercenary. You would owe me money because what this bill does is it says that when our veterans reach age 65, Medicare is not good enough; Medicare will not be good enough for the 1.3 million veterans over the age of 65 who are military retirees; it is not good enough.

We are going to buy their Medigap insurance. Oh, no, Medigap isn't good enough. It has to have a prescription benefit in it. That is what this does. It asks one group of taxpayers to pay the Medigap insurance for another group of Americans who say Medicare is not good enough.

Look, I know it is a hot issue. I have received lots of phone calls already from people who say: Gee, KERREY is down here trying to stop this.

I do not expect to get more than 40 votes. I hope there aren't 60 votes to waive the Budget Act. I say to my colleagues, nothing would send a better signal from this Congress right now than for us to say that we will not waive the Budget Act—that we will not waive the Budget Act.

We are not getting much leadership down at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue. And there is a spending orgy going on. We are going to have another vote to waive the Budget Act on appropriations. The cap, prior to the budget resolution, was $540 billion. The budget resolution raises it to $600 billion. We all sort of privately know it is going to be $640 billion or $645 billion. That is $100 billion over the previous cap. That is $1 trillion over 10 years. There is a meeting going on amongst Senate Democrats on the Finance Committee, talking to Secretary Summers about a tax cut package. There are lots of discussions going on about putting more money back in, as a consequence of the BBA of 1997, for health care providers.

I do not know what it all adds up to, but I will tell you, I have never been in a situation where I took a phone call from somebody who said: Senator, this only costs $60 billion over 10 years—it only costs $60 billion over 10 years. That is what I am getting from people right now.

So I think we would send a very important signal, right now, saying that we will not waive the Budget Act, we will not waive the Budget Act that has created the fiscal discipline that enabled us to get to where we are today. I think it would send a very important signal. I understand that you would have to take this thing back to conference tell the House Members we are coming back next week anyway. Isn't it worth $60 billion to spend a little more time to get this thing right?

Let me get into the substance of this. I think it is important for us to send a signal that we will not waive the Budget Act to spend only $60 billion over the next 10 years.

Let me make the case against the provision. First of all, I reiterate, you don't owe me any additional benefits. This Nation doesn't owe me anything. I will make that case, and I will make it repeatedly because I have heard an awful lot of rhetoric here that implies that I am a mercenary.

I am a better person because of my service. I learned from my service. I believe I am a part of a nation as a consequence of my service. I wasn't just in the Navy; I was in the U.S. Navy. It has enriched me. It has benefited me. You didn't have to pay me to get me to do it. I did it as a consequence of believing that it was my duty. I thought I was going to be the one who came out ahead, and I have.

Please, in the rhetoric you are using to describe why this is necessary, don't tell me it was a promise. I am one of the beneficiaries of this language, and I wasn't promised any benefit when I signed up. If you want to give it to me, fine, but please don't tell me that you owe it to me.

Secondly, it is important for us to do some sort of evaluation of need. The last time I checked, I didn't see an awful lot of military retirees out there foraging in the alley for food. We need to do some sort of evaluation of need. Remember, we are taking $60 billion over the next 10 years from one group of Americans, and we are going to pay for the Medigap insurance, including a prescription drug benefit, for another group of Americans.

I don't know how many Americans we are going to tax who are out there right now saying, I don't have enough income to pay for my health insurance, but there are a number who are. They are sitting out there, hard-working families, paying their bills, who are an important part of our country as well, who are an important part of our society.

We are not saying to them, you are entitled to Medigap insurance. We are not saying to them, you are entitled to a prescription drug benefit. What you are entitled to is to pay somebody else's bills. Remember, the Government doesn't pay for anything. All we do is collect the money and pay the bills for somebody else. We are obligating $60 billion over 10. In the tenth year, this thing is knocking on the door of being $10 billion a year at the very moment—which is my third point—at the very moment when we have this unprecedented baby boom generation that begins to retire.

I know this surplus goes as far as the eye can see. I understand that it has gotten more difficult to say no to people as a consequence of that; the fiscal discipline is lucid. But we are not going to change this demographic boom that is heading our way. It is not going to be altered. There aren't enough H–1B visas we can issue to immigrate our way out of this problem. We aren't going to have three people working who we tax to pay the retirement and health care benefits of those who aren't working. We are only going to have two. We are going to have two workers per retiree. You don't get to pick Warren Buffet and Bill Gates to tax. You tax an average.

As a consequence of taxing that average, we are going to have a very difficult time paying the bills. Everybody who has examined this says that is the case. It is true that right now, under the previous CBO evaluation, we have stabilized the cost of mandatory programs, but not for long. We are going to be right back off to the races again starting in 2009. Our Federal Government, unless we exhibit some restraint, is going to become an ATM machine. We are going to be collecting money from one group of taxpayers and shipping it on to another group of taxpayers.

The reason it is a problem can be seen in the way our authorizers had to deal with this. They didn't want this money to come out of Defense appropriations. They didn't want it to come out of readiness accounts. They didn't want it to come out of our ability to be able to recruit, to train, and equip our forces. No. They want to protect that. So they push it all over into mandatory.

Well, you can only push it so far. I am sure the chairman of the Budget Committee will say at some point you have a limited amount of money you can extract from the U.S. economy. If you have a limited amount of money and you have mandatory programs going, it is going to eventually put pressure on appropriated accounts. The paradox, in my view—not shared by all—is that we probably are underinvesting right now in things that will increase productivity and will increase the strength of our economy. It is a paradox because we are going to be taxing the very people in whom we are underinvesting because we don't have a sufficient amount of resources in the appropriated accounts.

As I said, on the basis of policy, I think on the basis of fiscal discipline, on several other bases I could talk about, this sounds good. Again, I understand the pressure. Nobody organizes better than Americans over the age of 65 in order to get something they think they are entitled to. In a relatively short period of time, I have generated well over 75 phone calls, including one misguided human being who said he was going to do everything in his power to make sure that my Medal of Honor was taken away from me. Well, more power to him; have at it. It is not likely. I am not offended by that. It is just an indication of the intensity of people's feelings, to which they are entitled. They don't tell us where we are going to get the money. The Government is going to pay for it; that is as far as they will go. Let the Government pay for it.

The Government—I say again, for emphasis—doesn't pay for anything. It collects. It taxes one group of people in order to pay the benefits for another. That is what we are doing. You have a very difficult time, either on the basis of promise or on the basis of need, making the case that this group of Americans needs to have us pay their Medigap insurance, including a prescription drug benefit.

I hope my colleagues, at this moment when we seem to have lost our fiscal discipline, will come to the floor and say: I might have, under normal circumstances, liked to be able to help these military retirees, but we have to stand up and say, no, we are going down a road where, when the smoke clears, we are going to find ourselves looking pretty foolish for having spent all the money or committed all the money that we have done.

I hope my colleagues, even those who might say they like this benefit, will not vote to waive the Budget Act. The Budget Act has given us the discipline that enabled us to get this far. To sort of willy-nilly come down here and say, fine, my phone is ringing off the hook, I will not be able to stand up to that, I have to say, yes. The Budget Act allowed us to turn to our citizens and say, we have to be disciplined. It gave me, for 12 years, a method by which I could say, look, I support what you are doing, but we don't have the money. We have to say no sometimes to things we want to spend money on.

I hope my colleagues will come to the floor and muster the will to vote no on waiving this Budget Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I know there are moments in the life of a Senator that they will never forget. This is one I will not forget. I don't have a better friend in the Senate than my good friend from Nebraska. I don't know of any Senator—well, perhaps Senator INOUYE, of course—who has more rightfully earned the respect of this body and, more specifically, the men and women of the Armed Forces for his courageous acts in the field of battle in Vietnam. I was privileged to be in the Navy Secretariat with our recently departed, beloved former Senator Chafee, who was then Secretary when the Medal of Honor was awarded my good friend.

I have to say to my friend that, yes, in law, it is not clear about their entitlement, but in every other respect—sometimes the law is silent—these people were, time and time again, told they would have for life their health care.

I want to draw a distinction which was not clear in the Senator's otherwise very able presentation. He talked about his service, indeed my service, which was very insignificant compared to his, but we both served in the Navy at different times. I think I have some faint recollection of this, but it was long ago; I won't rest my laurels on that.

You went in initially not with the idea of becoming a careerist, and there may have been a point in your career when you did think about staying for 20 years.

The people who are entitled under this legislation are the ones who devoted their careers—a minimum of 20 years and often more years of service—to the military. It is not those like myself who served for briefer periods in World War II and brief periods in Korea. This legislation doesn't cover them. It would not cover you, regardless of your injuries which entitled you to other medical care that you received that was service connected. My point is, the person who goes in for one hitch as an enlisted man, one tour as an officer, they are not the beneficiaries under this. It is that class of individuals who, together with their families, have dedicated a career, who have moved, who responded to the call to go overseas many times, in most instances. That is what this legislation is for. I would like to have the Senator comment on that.

Mr. KERREY. I am pleased to, Mr. President. First of all, I am a retired Naval officer for medical reasons. The Senator is quite right; there is a difference between the reason I signed up, how I did it as a reserve officer, and somebody who signs up for 20 years. No question, that is true. I don't mean to imply there isn't a difference; there is a significant difference. When I hear people describing what this benefit does, that we are only talking about people who are in 20 years, the rhetoric is far afield on this.

I feel like I can't go home and talk to friends and neighbors and say I am getting one more thing from my Government here. I am just telling you that I don't feel as if this country owes me anything. I want my colleagues, especially those who didn't have any military service, to know that. I have gotten more out of it than my Nation got. You say, well, somebody who has been in 20 years should be promised health care. There are employees we promised health care to. I say this to the Senator from Virginia: Medicare is health care. What do you say to somebody who has been in the workforce who says, ''My employer promised me health care, and I get to be 65 and I have to have Medicare.'' Do we say we are going to pick that up as well? That will be the next thing knocking on our door.

Mr. WARNER. It should be knocking on our door.

Mr. KERREY. Are we going to pay the Medigap insurance for every single Medicare beneficiary?

Mr. WARNER. It is the obligation of the Congress to fix Medicare and, indeed, I know of initiative——

Mr. KERREY. I don't disagree, but to fix Medicare by saying there will not be copayments or deductibles, I don't think there is anybody on the floor who would argue that eliminating copayments and deductibles is the way to save money in health care. Quite the opposite. The argument on the other side of the aisle—joined by me in 1997—is we should go in the opposite direction. This eliminates copayments and deductibles.

Mr. WARNER. It was intentionally devised that way. When I made reference to the nonmilitary people in this country who are not, of course, eligible because of absence of a career in military service, Congress should be addressing that issue. I know of initiatives time and again to try to do that. Regrettably, it will probably not be done in the waning days of this Congress, but we have an obligation to these people. Do you realize if we had not made this program permanent, we would be casting on these individuals—most of whom are over 65 to 70, and some are medically retired—they would be forced to make a decision to drop their private insurance, which they had to go out and buy? They have to make other decisions because they would not be certain that Congress at some future date would make it permanent. So that is why we had to go down this road.

I will yield in a moment. First, I want to show my good friend something that I found. I went out and did some research on this because I have spent endless hours trying to figure out the facts. I have found this recruiting poster for the U.S. Army. Can the Senator read it from there?

Mr. KERREY. I can imagine.

Mr. WARNER. ''Superb health care. Health care is provided to you and your family members while you are in the Army, and for the rest of your life if you serve a minimum of 20 years of active Federal service.'' This is an actual official recruiting document. I daresay there are many others like it from World War II to this date. If you are a young man or a young woman enlisting today and this is printed by the U.S. Army, you believe it.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WARNER. Yes.

Mr. KERREY. It will take 30 seconds to respond. On that basis, my Government owes me a lot of travel. They promised me I was going to see the world. All I saw was Vietnam, right? So I go to OCS for, they told me 16 weeks; it was 18 weeks. Guess what they said. ''We lied to you. Big deal.'' We have a lot of promises we have to keep if we are going to fulfill every promise made at every recruiting office in the United States. Come on, this is about deciding how much we can afford. There is a limit. I know the chairman understands there is a limit. There is a point beyond which one can't go. Are we going to do long-term care? Are we going to promise to pay for that? There are lots of things we can pay for and say we have an obligation.

The question before us is, Are we going to waive the Budget Act? This Defense conference authorization requires $60 billion worth of spending beyond the budget resolution. That is the question, not do you like what this is. You may like this particular provision. But I am telling you, with just a couple of days left in this Congress, we are on a spending orgy. I am having people saying to me: Don't worry about waiving the budget resolution on appropriations; don't worry about waiving the budget resolution on Defense authorization; don't worry, we have to get out of town. Well, we are going to get out of town having done an awful lot of damage if we take that attitude.

Mr. DOMENICI. Does the Senator from Nebraska have any time to yield me?

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, first, if I might reply, I respect the Senator from Nebraska. I associate myself with his remarks that the military did more for him than he gave to the military. That is certainly true in my case. I don't think it is true in his. I think he served with the greatest distinction, and this country is everlastingly in the Senator's personal debt. Certainly, for this humble soul, the military did more for me than I did for it. I have said that on the floor a dozen times.

There is living proof of promises made. I have shown you the difficulty facing the aged people over 65 and into their seventies who have to make a decision depending on the vote about to be taken in this Senate. They were made to commit one way or another by their Nation. I think they are deserving, having given their careers, families, spouses, whatever. I urge that Members of the Senate join me in waiving this Budget Act.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DOMENICI. Will the Senator from Nebraska yield briefly?

Mr. KERREY. I yield.

Mr. DOMENICI. First, I will be as quick as I can because I understand Senator GRAMM wants to comment at more length than I. Let me say to the Senator from Nebraska, when you came to the Senate, I had already been here a while. I didn't know anything about you. I didn't know you were a Medal of Honor recipient of the United States. I know you don't like to hear this, but I want to tell you that what you are doing tonight shows that you have something about you that is intuitively or instinctively courageous because what you are down here doing is not so easy for many Senators because, obviously, there is going to be a lot of guff for what you have proposed tonight, asking that we not waive the Budget Act.

I wish to also say to everyone that neither of us—including Senator GRAMM—are saying we should not do what we are doing tonight for our veterans. What we are saying is, with 2 days left in the session, neither the House nor the Senate having any detailed hearings, nor the Medicare people having detailed hearings on this, we come out of a conference with an agreement and propose a little item that over a decade will cost $60 billion.

That may be something veterans are entitled to, but I believe we are all thinking that there is no end to American prosperity and to American surpluses. I think we have come to the conclusion that they will be here forever and they are in quantities beyond anything we can imagine—and whatever goes in the waning moments goes. I think I can support this; I just don't believe we ought to do it now, with 2 days left, without sufficient hearings on the effect on the rest of Government. I might say, without trying to figure out who we are going to give prescription drugs to under Medicare, who are also people who are hurting very much and who think Medicare should have covered them better—there are millions of those people.

I believe the Budget Act singularly permitted the Congress to get its deficit under control. There are benefits from that. Every single American, every single veteran, and everyone in this country participates in a prosperity movement, with low interest rates and things people thought they would never acquire because when we used to stand up and say, ''Don't waive the Budget Act,'' nobody waived it. In fact, I didn't check tonight to see how many years had gone by when neither Senator DOMENICI, nor Senator GRAMM, nor Senator KERREY, nor whomever would say that violates the Budget Act to see if you could get 61 votes. That is why the decade of the 1990s became the decade of discipline.

Do you know the Government of the United States, on average, for the decade of the 1990s grew 3.3 percent, the most formidable in terms of small growth in the last 50 years? There is no reason other than that as to why this deficit has come down the way it has and prosperity has grown the way it has.

I believe next year is a year to look at the big picture, to fit this into all of the other things we have to do. But I don't believe we ought to waive a Budget Act which has protected our people, protected our veterans, and protected the cost of military equipment because of inflation coming down.

Those are all great big benefits that we don't quite understand, but they are very important.

Again, tonight by insisting that we comply with the Budget Act, you are showing me a degree of courage that makes me understand who you are.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LEVIN. Will the Senator yield for 1 minute for a question of the chairman of the Budget Committee?

Mr. GRAMM. Yes.

Mr. LEVIN. While the good chairman is here, I ask a factual question: What is the estimate as to how much the appropriations bill that we are about to vote on in the next few days will go over the discretionary ceiling in the budget resolution?

Mr. DOMENICI. I don't know.

Mr. LEVIN. We predict it is $40 billion for 1 year.

Mr. DOMENICI. No. I don't. If you say that is the case, I disagree.

Mr. LEVIN. I say it is not the case. We have heard the figure. Is it clear that there will be a point of order that will lie against one of these appropriations bills coming up?

Mr. DOMENICI. Surely.

Mr. LEVIN. For exceeding the caps of the budget resolution.

Mr. DOMENICI. That is correct.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, at some point there will be a vote on a waiver of the Budget Act for that purpose—I don't want to estimate the number of billions because I am not privy to it—but for a significant amount of money. I want to put that in this context. This is not going to be the last time this year that there is going to be a vote on whether to waive the Budget Act because the ceiling is exceeded.

I fully agree with Senator DOMENICI. I couldn't agree more in terms of what his comment was about Senator KERREY's instincts. As always, he seems to me honest and open. That is what this point of order is going to force. Even though I will vote for waiving the Budget Act—I am going to vote that way on this point of order—I must say that I think it is very important that this point of order be made. It is so important that if Senator KERREY had not made it, I was going to make it, because I think the Senate has got to understand what we are doing. I think we are doing the right thing. But we are not going to be doing it quietly in a closed way, which is hidden. We are going to be doing it openly or we are not going to do it at all. Maybe there will not be enough votes to do it at all.

But the important point that Senator KERREY and others are making, it seems to me, No. 1, is in their judgment we should not do it. That is the matter of disagreement. But where I think there is agreement is when we do it and when we consider it, we should not be burying it in some bill that nobody knows about. That is why this point of order is valuable, in my judgment.

I thank the Senator for his comments.

One other point: That the size of this item is a 10-year item. The question I asked the Senator from New Mexico, chairman of the Budget Committee, was approximately how much will the appropriations bills for just 1 year go above the budget ceiling and discretionary spending. It is that figure which perhaps by the end of the evening I can try to get an estimate of from the staff of the Appropriations Committee. But it will be a significant amount. We are going to have to vote on it. I hope we vote on that explicitly. I hope we vote on that in that final appropriations bill just as openly as we are going to vote on this. I hope it is not just going to be buried in the final appropriations bill and fly through here without a conscious decision on whether or not to waive the Budget Act. Otherwise, there is no fiscal discipline at all. If it is not done openly, there will be even less fiscal discipline.

I want my comments to go against my time, Mr. President.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I am stunned that we are talking about fiscal discipline and asking whether a bill is over the budget when we have a bill before us where we set out funds in the budget knowing that this was a problem that needed to be dealt with. We set out $400 million in the budget to try to begin to deal with this problem. The bill before us creates a brand new program never debated anywhere and which no Member of this Senate can really explain how it will work. It has never been tested anywhere. It will cost $59.9 billion.

Let me quote from Senator WARNER's letter and his initial cost estimate, which is now out of date because additional benefits were added to this bill. But let me quote from his letter of September 27. ''The cost of this proposal is scored by the Congressional Budget Office at $42.4 billion in mandatory spending over 10 years.'' That has now risen to $59.9 billion. ''In addition, the Treasury would accept a $200 billion liability that would be amortized over 70 years.''

Not only is this bill a budget buster—it will win the blue ribbon in Congress this year. There will be no bill in this Congress that will approach this bill in terms of fiscal irresponsibility and lack of financial discipline. And all of this was done not in a committee, not in a public debate, but by a group of conferees who got together in closed sessions. The House entered that conference with a program that cost $945 million. The Senate went into the conference with a program that cost $466 million. They came out of conference with a program that cost $60 billion, and committed us to a 70-year debt of $200 billion.

I believe there is no parallel in the history of appropriations and authorizations in America to the bill before us in terms of a bill which has never been debated and a program that has never been discussed.

Let me make a couple of points.

First of all, it is obvious that all of us here tonight should praise our dear colleague, Senator KERREY, who is retiring. You can get a lot of praise around here by dying or retiring. Given the choice between the two, he has chosen the right one.

Let me say that many people have congratulated Senator KERREY for his physical courage. I don't know much about that type of courage. So far as I know, nobody has ever shot at me. Nor do I have any reason to believe I would have been shot at. I don't know much about that kind of courage.

But there is a different kind of courage that I know a little bit about. It is a courage that has to do with standing up to peer group pressure. There is something very human about the fact that somewhere around the first or second grade we start caring terribly about what people around us think. It is something we never escape from until they lower us in the grave. One would think grown men and women, Members of the Senate, the greatest deliberative body in the history of the world, would be immune to it. But as my colleagues know, we are not immune to it. We want to be loved. We want to be accepted by our colleagues. You don't get love by opposing this giant expenditure of money. You don't get appreciated by your colleagues by standing up to it. Senator KERREY is getting a lot of praise tonight. My guess is when the votes are counted, we may have three votes to sustain this point of order. But I don't know. I wasn't there when Senator KERREY won the Congressional Medal of Honor, but I was there when he stood up in this Congress and pointed out to America and to this Congress that the largest federal entitlement programs tax young working people who are just starting out, and give that money to seniors, many of whom have built up retirement savings over a lifetime.

And it's being done because older people vote and younger people don't vote. We are digging a hole in Medicare and Social Security that can destroy America and that will destroy our prosperity if we don't do something about it.

The Senator from Nebraska has been a leader in that and I want to say I appreciate it. I believe America does, but America is not embodied in the way it can speak and, since it hasn't been elected, it couldn't speak on the floor of the Senate anyway. On behalf of working people in my State and my country, I thank you, BOB KERREY. I'm sorry you are retiring. I want to thank you for what you have said and what you have stood up for.

Now, let me try to put all this in perspective. First of all, I agree with Senator WARNER's poster. I hope my colleagues will forgive me because I want to give a little bit of history to establish my bona fides on this issue, if I can.

First, my dad was a career soldier. He joined the Army on his 15th birthday in his brother's clothes. He was in the Army for 28 years, 7 months, and 27 days. He believed when he joined the Army that part of what the Government had committed to him was that if he served for 20 or more years, they were going to take care of him and his family and their health care needs. I am proud to say—and I say it with certainty because I know; I was born in the same hospital my dad died in, and it was a military hospital at Ft. Benning, GA—the Government never, ever took that benefit away from my dad.

We are here today for two reasons. We are here in part because the policies of our Government changed. They changed in a remarkable way, and it is an interesting thing how benefits are lost. They changed because Medicare was going broke. So our government made everybody join Medicare, including men and women in the Armed Services. This problem came about because people who retired from the service qualified for two medical programs: One, by paying Medicare taxes; and two, by serving 20 or more years. The military health care benefit was a right not to Medigap insurance or any of the things we are talking about today, it was a right to go to a military hospital on a space-available basis and get military medicine.

What happened—which was terribly wrong, in my opinion—is that, in the midst of a period of very tight budgets, the military gave retirees their military health benefit until they turned 65 when they became qualified for Medicare. As they got close to their 65th birthday—I know this because I have a brother who is a career soldier. I don't know whether he likes military medicine because they know his name—''Colonel.'' He goes to a regular hospital and they call him ''Mister'' although, obviously, they don't know who he is. They don't know anything about him. So I don't know whether it is that or whether he just is comfortable with having been a career soldier and having served in the Army for some 27 years—the point is, as he gets closer to 65, under the current system he will get a sheet when he goes in, and members of the staff know this, he will get a referral sheet. And they will say, ''Colonel, you are going to turn 65 in August. So these are the medical areas that we are aware of that are relevant to you, and these are private practitioners in Dallas, Texas, that you can go to under Medicare.''

Here is a person who got military medicine on active duty for 27 years, and then he retired and continued to get it up to the day he was 65, but because he earned two benefits, they shoved him out the door when he turned 65.

My disagreement with Senator WARNER is not about that recruiting poster. I believe that poster is true. And I believe the benefit is owed. Where we split company is on what we are doing here tonight.

Let me explain. Just to complete the history, because I felt that I had some personal knowledge about this problem, I was the leader in Congress in putting together a test program called Medicare Subvention. The idea was simple. A lot of simple ideas don't work. It is not clear how well this one is working. In some ways, I think it is working well although costs are up because utilization is up. But the basic idea was simple. Let's pick ten facilities in America that have big retirement populations near them and let people stay in military medicine and let Medicare pay what they would pay had they gone to the private sector. We are in the midst of a test of that program right now.

Earlier this year, while Medicare Subvention was still being tested, this bill came up, and while we were debating military retiree health care, a proposal was made to spend $92 billion. Senator DOMENICI will remember that. That proposal failed. And it should have. I voted against it.

During that debate, Senator WARNER offered a 2-year program to build on the test that we had underway. Senator WARNER's program cost $466 million. I supported it. In fact, I think all the rest of us supported it. I am not sure Senator KERREY did, but I think Senator DOMENICI supported it.

The Senate had put in the budget enough money that to try Senator WARNER's program out for 2 years. Why was it important to do it in 2 years? I will talk about the money, but let me talk about the policy. What is wrong with committing to $60 billion worth of new programs that have never been debated, never been tested, and committing to a $200 billion liability over the next 70 years? What is wrong is, as anybody who has ever served in public office knows, once this program is in place, a vested political interest will build up around it in the medical sector, in the retirement sector, and in the communities where it is provided. What happens is even if this program doesn't work, even if it is terribly inefficient, even if people are unhappy with it, the chances of ever getting rid of it or fundamentally changing it are very low.

We have in Medicare, as Senator KERREY, better than anyone else knows having served on the Medicare Commission, we have a 1965 medical care system. In Medicare, we have an old Edsel. Yet we can't change it. We tried to change it on the Medicare Commission as the Senator remembers. But the vested interest in it, even though it is inefficient, even though it doesn't serve the public well, even though it costs tremendous amounts of money, once it is in place, it is hard to change.

Here is the point. The first problem with this huge program is that was never debated, never discussed, and was written by a handful of people that, quite frankly, are very intelligent people, very knowledgeable people about defense. As far as I am aware, it was never discussed in the Finance Committee, which has jurisdiction over Medicare. It was never debated in any public forum. It has never been tested anywhere. The point is, tonight on the verge of adjournment, we are getting ready to commit $60 billion in spending on a program that may or may not work, may or may not satisfy people, and which is going to be virtually irreversible.

The second point I want to make is the House went into conference with a program that extended the Medicare Subvention demonstration, made it permanent within 6 years, and costs $945 million. So the Senate went to conference with a temporary program of $466 million to build on a concept, that basically, we had started in the test; and the other House of Congress went with a program that made a judgment to move toward full implementation of the test, and it cost $945 million. But what happened?

What happened—and Senator KERREY was making the point, I thought very effectively—they got to conference and suddenly somebody said, ''The sky's the limit. We have a huge surplus. This is an election year.'' So what happened is one House, with a program for $466 million, and the other House, with a program for $945 million, got together and suddenly we have a $60 billion entitlement program. Actually the new program is $39 billion, but the committee just gratuitously took existing health care programs and said let's just put $21 billion on automatic pilot in a permanent entitlement program so we do not have to account for spending it.

That is what happened. Why did it happen? Because the surplus is burning a hole in our pocket. This surplus is the greatest danger we face in terms of our economic stability—not just now, but 10 or 12 years from now when the baby boomers start to retire. It is not just happening here. I am not just being mean to our dear friends on the Armed Services Committee, a committee I had the privilege to serve on for 6 years. It is happening everywhere.

We have a railroad retirement proposal that lowers the retirement age. We are raising the retirement age in Social Security. Yet, we would lower it in railroad retirement. We have a proposal to give Amtrak $10 billion.

We have proposals—we are giving back Medicare savings that we have previously adopted at a rate where, in 10 years, we will have given back more than we ever had in savings, yet Medicare is going broke every day. What is happening to us? What is happening to us is this surplus is affecting our judgment and we are spending it as fast as we can spend it.

Let me sum up. I want to make a point about the economy, one I had not thought of until I was talking to Alan Greenspan today, and I want to bring it up because I think it is relevant.

What is my position? My position is we do have an obligation to military retirees and we have to find a way to fix the health care system for military retirees. But I think we need to do it so we know what we are doing, so we know what it costs, so we know it is going to be efficient, and we have to do it after there has been a clear, effective, public debate and where we have actually tested the program so we know what we are doing.

The problem here is this bill is immensely popular, as my colleagues know if any of you have paid any attention to your telephone calls today, but it is popular because we are spending massive amounts of money.

My point is I do not disagree with Senator WARNER. We owe these benefits, and we are going to have to provide a way for our military retirees to have quality medical care, which we promised. But the idea of doing it by busting the budget by $59.9 billion on a program nobody ever debated, nobody ever tested, nobody has ever seen work, I think is clearly the wrong way to do it.

We have a point of order that is going to be raised by Senator KERREY. What is the point of order about?

Mr. DOMENICI. He has already raised it.

Mr. GRAMM. Well, he has raised it. What it is about is, in our budget we agreed we were going to spend $400 million to begin to try to fix this problem. The committee with jurisdiction to fix it was not willing to abide by that budget, and they came up with a program that did not cost $400 million, they came up with a program that cost $59.9 billion and committed us to a $200 billion debt to be amortized over 70 years.

So Senator KERREY has raised a point of order saying: This may be wonderful, this might actually be the right thing to do someday, but this violates what we voted to do and the constraints we imposed on ourselves.

I do not suffer any delusion. My guess is we are going to get 3 or 4 or 5—maybe 10 votes here. We are going to waive this point of order, and we are going to spend this $60 billion. We are going to spend it on a program which was never debated, never tested, never analyzed in any systematic way. My fear is that we are going to have a very difficult time fixing it. I am afraid 10 years from now we may be here debating how we can fix it, but with the vested interests that have built up, it will be very difficult to do.

So I believe this point of order should be sustained. I am going to vote to sustain it.

Why should we care about this spending? I was talking to Chairman Greenspan today about the economy and about the stock market. We were talking about spending. I basically had raised the issue with him, was he worried about this runaway spending? He made a point to me that, in April and May, something clearly started happening because long-term interest rates started going up in America. Some people say that is caused by Fed policy. No, the policy of the Fed, as our colleagues know, affects short-term interest rates. But the economy affects long-term interest rates.

Let me tell you what was happening in May. What was happening in May is it started to become clear we were not going to abide by our budget. It started to become clear we were losing control of spending. These long-term rates went up and the economy started to cool, and that is being reflected in the stock market today, in my opinion.

I am not saying we are going into a recession. But I am saying the interest rates went up on the long-term because we are losing control of spending. We are losing fiscal discipline. They went up until the economy slowed down enough that they started to back off.

I think we ought to be concerned about spending this surplus. I think we need to make rational decisions about it. It may very well be, after a debate, we write a budget and we spend $60 billion on this problem. I do not think I would do it this way. I think we need efficiency, I think we need copayments, I think we need incentives for cost consciousness. I don't think I would support doing it this way, but I might support a program that costs this much, more or less.

But doing it this way, where two or three people put together this proposal, is fundamentally wrong and is dangerous. This is a noble cause, and a cause that I support—military retirees were promised a benefit. They weren't promised these kinds of benefits, but they were promised access to military medicine. I want them to have it.

As bases have closed and as people now do not live near military bases, we have to come up with another program. But I think it ought to be a rational program. I think it ought to be one we look at over time. So I am going to vote to sustain this point of order.

I think this bill is simply an outward and visible sign of what is happening in our Congress. I wish America could be awakened to it. We are on a spending binge that has no precedent in my period of service in Congress. You have to go all the way back to Lyndon Johnson to find spending at the level we are now talking about in the Congress. At first it was just discretionary spending. Now we are into entitlements. As we all know, these things start out small. This one didn't start small, but a lot of them do. But they get bigger and bigger and bigger.

I appreciate my colleagues' listening. I think this is an issue such that you have to explain to people what you are trying to do. I think it is a very easy issue to say, boy, I am trying to deliver on the commitment in that recruiting poster. I believe in the commitment in the recruiting poster, but you don't deliver on it with a huge program that has never been tested, that was put together by people who do not specialize in this area of government, and where there has never been a debate. I think this is a mistake, and I think we are going to end up regretting it.

I think we will someday come back and fix it, but we will not fix it, in my opinion, until we have spent a lot of money and until we have produced a system that—unless we are extraordinarily lucky—is not going to provide the kind of efficient care we need.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I say to the chairman and ranking member, I am not going to make any additional arguments on the specifics. I want to make some closing comments. I am prepared to yield back time and go to the vote. I don't know where they are, but I will start talking so they understand that is where I am.

The Senator from Texas made an effort to establish his bona fides and did a very good job referencing his father, who was a career military officer.

In my closing, I need to do a little subtracting in my bona fides. I have received the Medal of Honor, as was mentioned several times. The Senator from Texas said he was not there that night and does not know what happened. When I saw the citation, I didn't know if I was there that night. I didn't receive the Medal of Honor because of my heroism. I received it because of many men out there, heroic beyond me, who did not have a witness or had a witness who did not like them or could not write or something got lost in the food chain, as some of these sometimes do. I am a recipient for others, and I do not say that in any sense of false modesty at all. I say it sincerely and genuinely.

I understand Reserve officers, which I am, and career officers are substantially different. I praise the chairman and the ranking member of the Armed Services Committee and all the members of the Armed Services Committee, some of whom already spoke, for their efforts to make certain we take care of the men and women who volunteer and say: I will make a life career. I do not want anything I said previously to subtract from the enormous respect and admiration I have for them. Indeed, many times I have been moved to tears to see the risks the men and women who wear the uniform of the Army, Air Force, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard take for all of us, and we have a painful example of it today in sailors who are trying to keep an embargo in place on Iraq.

We started that embargo many years ago, and we take it for granted. All of a sudden, we have 5 dead, 10 missing, and another 30 or so who are injured executing a mission. My guess is many of those people in question are lifers, as we call them, people who have made a life commitment.

I appreciate very much the chairman making an effort. It may be he is right, that he has a provision here that ought to be done. I tried to argue as to why I think it goes beyond. He is the chairman of this committee. Senator LEVIN spent a lot of time on it. I supported them almost every time in the past when they tried to get benefits in line with what we need in order to recruit and retain. I do not want anything I said previous to this to be interpreted by anybody either on this floor or out in America that I have any disrespect at all for the commitment that men and women make when they say: I will make a life career.

Again, I will use the observation of the Senator from Texas that you can support this provision and still say at some point you have to say no. We all understand that. We are asked to spend the taxpayers' money on many things, and you need a method by which at some point you say no. You can't say yes to everything. There are a lot of things I would like to spend money on, but there is a limit, and you have to figure out what that limit is.

For years we had a Budget Act. For years we had budget caps. The Senator from New Mexico is right. It used to be, not that long ago, when you came down to the floor and there was a motion to waive the Budget Act, that was a tough vote. It was tough to waive the Budget Act. All of a sudden, it is not anymore. It used to be a mechanism that enabled us to have the fiscal discipline.

I am proud of many things in which I had the opportunity to participate. One of them is the opportunity to help get rid of the fiscal deficit over the last 12 years. The only way that was possible was for us to have a mechanism by which we could look at a friend, look somebody in the eye who deserves to have more spending, and say: No, I just can't do it.

At this moment, we are poised to spend far beyond what we intended when this year started. I hope colleagues will vote against the motion to waive the Budget Act and send this bill back to conference and say to the House Members: We cannot get it in because we have to say no, and we have to reassert the fiscal discipline that got us to where we are today.

Mr. President, I am prepared to yield back my time.

Mr. WARNER. I think we are all prepared to yield back time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SESSIONS). The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. I yield back my time as well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, the conference report on the National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 2001 contains direct spending that far exceeds the Armed Services Committee's allocation of mandatory spending under the fiscal year 2001 budget resolution.

According to the Congressional Budget Office, this conference report would increase mandatory spending by over $19 billion over the next 5 years, and by $61 billion over the next 10 years.

Most of this increased spending is for the new ''Medigap'' entitlement for Medicare-eligible military retirees. This new benefit would add $18.7 billion in new direct spending over the next 5 years, and $59.9 billion in new direct spending over the next 10 years. This year's congressional budget resolution established a $400 million reserve fund for mandatory spending on military health care benefits over the next 5 years; the mandatory spending on health care in this conference report would exceed that allowance by $18.3 billion.

The net cost to the federal budget is somewhat less, because current, discretionary spending must be subtracted out. While the net cost to the federal budget—that is, the amount of the projected future surpluses that these health care benefits would consume—is somewhat smaller, it is still a very substantial amount of money. The health care provisions in this conference report, when both the mandatory and discretionary components are added together and the costs that are moved from one category to another are netted out, would require $14 billion of new spending over the next 5 years and $40 billion of new spending over the next 10 years. That is a lot of money.

This new spending was not contemplated in this year's congressional budget resolution. When Congress enacted the budget resolution earlier this year, we provided only $400 million for new military health care benefits over the next 5 years. So this conference report contains over $13.6 billion over the amount of direct spending on health care that was approved in the budget resolution.

I support the new medical benefits provided by this conference report. I support them because I believe that it is incumbent upon the Congress to answer the call of Secretary Cohen and the Joint Chiefs of Staff to address shortcomings in the health care that we provide for our military personnel, military retirees, and their families. The Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Henry Shelton, told the Armed Services Committee earlier this year.

> For years our recruiters have promised health care for life for career members and their families. As we all know, that is not what they receive. . . . Keeping our promise of ensuring quality health care for military retirees is not only the right thing to do, it also is a pragmatic decision because it sends a strong signal signal to all those considering a career in uniform.

General Shelton went on to point out that we have actual recruiting posters that specifically state that military members and their families would receive health care for life. That, he said, is ''basically what we committed to at the time they were recruited to the armed forces.''

Last year, we enacted pay and retirement reform provisions to send a strong message that we recognize the demands that we place on our men and women in uniform, the circumstances in which they must live and work, and the fact that we often pay them less, and expect them to do far more, than employes in the private sector. The health care provisions in this year's bill should send an equally strong message, and will hopefully have an equally strong positive impact on military recruitment and retention.

I believe that providing these health care benefits is the right thing to do, and that we should use the waiver open to us to provide them. At the same time, however, Senator KERREY has done the right thing in raising a point of order relative to these provisions under the Budget Act. We have the responsibility, if we are going to spend tens of billions of dollars on a new benefit, to do so openly and in accordance with our budget rules. Those rules allow us to exceed the spending limits we set for ourselves should we deem it wise and prudent to do so.

We do so by voting to waive the Budget Act. That is our way of standing up openly and acknowledging what we are doing, acknowledging that we are about to use some of our surplus for a benefit that was not included in the fiscal plan the Congress adopted in April. We owe it to ourselves and our constituents to be willing to stand up and say either we think this is a good idea worth doing and we should waive the Budget Act, or to say we shouldn't be doing this and voting not to waive it.

There is one other significant new entitlement in this conference report and that is the compensation program for contract and federal employees of the Department of Energy who became ill due to their exposure to radiation, beryllium, or other hazardous materials while working to build our nuclear weapons. While much less expensive than the health care benefit, this compensation program also entails direct spending of $1.1 billion over 5 years, and $1.6 billion over 10 years, that was not provided for in the Budget Resolution. As with the health coverage for our military retirees, I think this is the right thing to do, but we have to be willing to waive the Budget Act to do it.

Either this bill is wrong, or the congressional budget resolution was wrong in the limitations that it placed on Federal spending. In my view, the problem is not with this bill, but with the budget resolution itself, which was never realistic in the amount of money that it provided for this and other purposes. I believe that the American people would want us to provide improved access to health care and a comprehensive pharmacy benefit for military retirees—and that they would want us to take similar action on behalf of other retirees.

Others may disagree, but we cannot have it both ways. We cannot say that we support the strict spending limits in the congressional budget resolution and that we also support the new entitlement programs in this conference report, which would violate those spending limits. The two are inconsistent, and we must make a choice. That is what this vote is about.

I commend Senator KERREY for raising a point of order under the Budget Act. For the reasons that I have stated, I will vote to waive the point of order and allow this conference report—and the new benefits that it includes—to become law.

I again quote from the testimony of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff when he told us earlier this year:

> For years our recruiters promised health care for life for career members and their families. As we all know, that is not what they receive. . . . Keeping our promise of ensuring quality health care for military retirees is not only the right thing to do, it also is a pragmatic decision because it sends a strong signal to all those considering a career in uniform.

Last year, we increased the retirement benefit to where it previously had been 10 years before when we said it would be 50 percent of your base pay when you retire, rather than the 40 percent which it had been reduced to 15 years ago. We did not make that subject to people's earnings. There is no earnings test. That was an entitlement. It was a retirement benefit. It was a recruiting aid. It was a retention aid. So is this.

Most important, it is keeping a commitment which has been made to the people who joined the service. I know very well Senator KERREY did not join for that purpose. Indeed, many do not join for that purpose. But the expert recruiters and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs tell us this is a very important recruiting and retention tool, No. 1. No. 2, it keeps a commitment which has been made, and when the Government makes that commitment, we should keep it. Whether or not the private company keeps it or not, we may not have any control over it. Senator KERREY raised the question of what happens if a private company breaks a commitment. That is very different from when we, the people, make a commitment to our men and women in the military.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, the Senator is right. Let's move forward and vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, all Senators recognize that we are drawing to a conclusion this session of Congress. We have had an excellent debate. I urge Senators to support my motion to waive. Were this to fail and the Budget Act is not waived, the entire Defense authorization conference report will fail. Conferees will have to be appointed for a new conference. The Senate will appoint conferees and send the bill back to the House. The House will appoint conferees and a new conference will have to be convened. A new conference report will then have to be passed by both the House and the Senate. We will have opportunities next year to readdress this problem.

I close by saying, with all due respect to my dear friend from Nebraska, this is the living proof which says for the rest of your life, if you serve a minimum of 20 years active Federal service, you earn your retirement. That is a commitment that has been made by this Nation since World War II, Korea, Vietnam, and continues to be made today. Now it is the obligation of the Senate to confirm the credibility of this country and to give to these people what they have earned rightly.

I yield back my time. Have the yeas and nays been ordered?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They have been ordered.

The question is on agreeing to the motion to waive the Budget Act. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. GRAMS), the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. HELMS), and the Senator from Arizona (Mr. MCCAIN) are necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN), the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY), the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. LIEBERMAN), and the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. TORRICELLI) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) would vote ''aye.''

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The yeas and nays resulted—yeas 84, nays 9, as follows:

NAVY HRSC'S

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I wish to enter into a colloquy with Senator OLYMPIA SNOWE of Maine and Senator JOHN WARNER of Virginia, two of my colleagues on the Senate Committee on Armed Services, to clarify a provision concerning a U.S. Navy Benefits Center as referenced in Senate Report 106–292 which accompanies S. 2549.

As my colleagues are aware, the Department of the Navy's Human Resources Service Centers, HRSCs, located in eight geographical locations worldwide, serve as the regional Human Resources Management, HRM, processing centers for activities and Human Resources Offices in its service area. The HRSCs also provide various centralized HRM programs and services.

S. 2549, the Fiscal Year 2001 National Defense Authorization Act, authorizes $3.0 million for a contractor-supported national employee benefits call center located in Cutler, Maine. According to Senate Report 106–292, this center is to provide a full range of benefit and entitlement information and assistance to civilian employees of the Department of the Navy. The report notes that the call center would replace eight separate Human Resources Service Centers now in operation throughout the country.

Based on conversations with the Department of the Navy, it is my understanding that these HRSCs are not to be replaced by the new center to be established in Cutler, Maine. Instead, the new Navy Benefits Center will complement the services performed by the eight HRSCs.

Mr. WARNER. The Senate understands these HRSCs are not to be replaced by the new benefits center to be established in Cutler, Maine. Instead, the new Navy Benefits Center will complement the services performed by the eight HRSCs. The conferences believe that the new U.S. Navy Benefits Center will add a new capability which supplements the resources inherent in the existing HRSCs. That is, the new center will not replace the eight existing Navy HRSCs but will enhance efforts to provide information to civilian employees of the Navy.

I also want to bring to the attention of my colleagues that there is an error in the Conference Report tables. Three million dollars for this initiative should have been authorized to match the appropriations provided in the fiscal year 2001 DoD Appropriations Conference Report. I have been in contact with the Chief of Naval Operations this afternoon. I have his assurance that the Navy will execute this program as we intended.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I want to thank the distinguished Chairman of the Armed Services Committee, Senator WARNER, for his support of this initiative. I agree with him and my colleague, Senator SANTORUM, and they are correct in their understanding of the intent of this authorization and the benefits center itself.

Cutler has a history of admirable and noteworthy support of the U.S. Navy. For nearly 40 years, the United States Navy's Computer and Telecommunications Station resided in Cutler and set standards for excellence in performing its vital national security mission. The civilian men and women of Cutler who contributed so much to this success personify Maine's celebrated work ethic.

Now, the residents of Cutler eagerly await the establishment of the new benefits center and will once again showcase their loyalty, work ethic and stalwart support for the United States Navy.

SPECIFIED CANCER

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment to clarify the definition of ''specified cancer'' as defined by this provision with my colleague from Ohio. When we drafted this definition, we intended to cover cancers that were likely to be caused by exposure to radiation, isn't that correct?

Mr. VOINOVICH. Yes, we did intend to cover radiogenic cancers. The definition of specified cancer includes those cancers covered by the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act and Bone cancer. According to the medical text ''Cancer Epidemiology and Prevention'' by Doctors Schottenfeld and Fraumeni, cancers of the bone include cancers of the cartilage, including radiosensitive cancers that originate in cartilage such as chondrosarcoma.

Mr. DEWINE. I would also like to add that both the Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee and the Government Affairs Committee have heard testimony from the Department of Energy on worker exposure to ionizing radiation at the Portsmouth uranium enrichment plant in Portsmouth, Ohio, and we became aware that chondrosarcoma has afflicted some in the workforce. The chapter on bone cancer in the Schottenfeld and Fraumeni medical text should provide helpful guidance as the Administration implements this proposal. I ask for unanimous consent to include a portion of that text for the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CANCER EPIDEMIOLOGY AND PREVENTION

(Edited by David Schottenfeld, M.D., and Joseph F. Fraumeni, Jr., M.D.)

BONE CANCER

(By Robert W. Miller, John D. Boice, Jr., and Rochelle E. Curtis)

Cancers that arise from bone or cartilage account for about 0.5% of all malignant neoplasms in the human. As with other neoplasms, much more research has been devoted to diagnosis and therapy than to causation. This chapter reviews the epidemiologic observations on bone cancer that have provided clues to its origins.

DEMOGRAPHIC CHARACTERISTICS

Descriptive studies in the past have been handicapped by the use of a single code number in the International Classification of Diseases, which groups all cell types of bone cancer. The three main subtypes are osteosarcoma, which arises most often from the growing ends of long bones; chondrosarcoma, which develops in cartilage; and Ewing's sarcoma, which according to recent evidence may arise from primitive nervous tissue (Cavazzana et al, 1987; Ewing's Tumour Workshop, 1990; Horowitz et al, 1993), most commonly in the shafts of the axial skeleton.

The cell types should be studied separately, because they have marked demographic differences that are of etiologic significance. Histologic diagnoses are thus required, as from population-based cancer registries. Of particular value in this regard are data from the Surveillance, Epidemiology and End-Results (SEER) Program of the National Cancer Institute (Percy et al, 1995), which has covered about 10% of the U.S. population since 1973. Ninety-five percent of bone cancers were histologically confirmed. The geographic areas covered and distribution by cell type are shown in Table 44–1.

Of the 1961 cases among whites and 163 among blacks registered in the SEER Program from 1973 through 1985, osteosarcoma was reported in 36%, chondrosarcoma in 26%, and Ewing's sarcoma in 16%. Age-adjusted rates by histologic type are presented in Figure 44–1 (charts are not reproducible in the RECORD.)

Age, Sex, and Race-Specific Incidence

Osteosarcoma has a bimodal age distribution, with peaks in adolescence and late in life (Fig. 44–2). It is rare early in life, but the rate increases rapidly in late childhood. In 1950–1959, before improved therapy increased survival, mortality and incidence rates were similar. There were enough deaths in the United States during this ten-year interval to allow study of the distribution by single year of age (Fig. 44–3). At age 13 the rate for males rose higher than that for females, and remained elevated for a longer time, suggesting that bone cancer is related to the adolescent growth spurt. (Price, 1958; Fraumeni, 1967; Glass and Fraumeni, 1970).

Chondrosarcoma is rare in childhood and rises with advancing age, for unknown reasons (Young et al, 1990). The age distribution of Ewing's sarcoma resembles that of osetosarcoma early in life, but rarely develops over 35 years of age (Fig. 44–2). Apparently, malignant change of the primitive tissue from which it arises does not occur later in life.

There is a male predominance of each major form of bone cancer among whites and blacks (Fig. 44–1). The two races have similar incidence rates for childhood osteosarcoma, but blacks have almost no cases of Ewing's sarcoma, either in the United States (Figs. 44–1 and 44–1) or Africa (Parkin et al, 1988). Rates of Ewing's sarcoma are also low among Asians, but less so than in blacks. A possible explanation for these racial differences is that a gene for osteosarcoma is equally mutable among the various races, but that for Ewing's sarcoma resists mutation in blacks and Asians.

Table 44–1 shows an absence of chordoma, when about 10 cases were expected if blacks had 12% of the total, as they did for osteosarcoma. Among blacks there is also a rarity of giant cell and blood-vessel tumors. These racial differences have not previously been recognized, and need further investigation.

[c] For a given subtype, % that were Black; e.g., osteosarcoma = 93/(666+93) 100 =12.3%.

Table 44–2 summarizes SEER data concerning the distribution of the seven main bone cancers among whites with respect to age, sex, and anatomic site. It shows that osteosarcoma most often arises from long bones of the lower limbs, whereas chondrosarcoma and Ewing's sarcoma most often arise from flat bones. Chordoma, presumbly arising from remnants of the embryologic notochord, is a tumor of the flat bones of the trunk and head, and of the lower limbs. The lower limbs are the principal sites for fibrosarcoma, giant cell tumors, and malignant fibrous histiocytoma, which has recently gained attention as a clinical entity, especially as a complication of Paget's disease.

Geographic Variation

Little geographic variation is seen worldwide in the incidence of bone cancer, all forms combined (Muir et al., 1987). Incidence rates that differ by more than 2-fold are rare in the few populations of sufficient size to ensure stable estimates. No clues to etiology are apparent from international comparisons of age-adjusted rates. With few exceptions, rates are higher among males than females, with ranges of 0.8 to 1.6 and 0.6 to 1.2 per 100,000, respectively.

Time Trends in Mortality and Incidence Mortality rates for bone cancer, all forms combined, in the United States (Fig. 44–5) and other countries have declined steadily from the 1950s to the mid-1980s, largely attributable to improved diagnosis and treatment (Pickle et al, 1987; Miller and McKay, 1984; Decarli et al, 1987; La Vecchia and Decarli, 1988; Ericsson et al, 1978). Using SEER incidence data, Hoover et al (1991) found that between 1973–1980 and 1981–1987 there was an unexplained increase in the annual incidence rates of osteosarcoma in males under 20 years of age, from 3.6 to 5.5 cases per million people. Among females the corresponding annual rates were 3.8 and 3.7 cases per million.

Figures 44–6 and 44–7 show survival rates for the three main cell types for males and females, respectively (SEER data, 1980–1989, all races combined). Survival was by far the best for chondrosarcoma, and, for all 3 cell types, was substantially better in females than in males.

ENVIRONMENTAL FACTORS

Radiation

Ionizing radiation is one of the few environmental agents known to induce certain bone cancers, particularly osteosarcoma, chondrosarcoma, and fibrosarcoma. In 1935, Maryland linked bone cancer to occupational exposure to radium. In subsequent studies (see Table 44–3) an excess risk of bone cancer was found following brief exposure to high-dose radiation therapy (Robinson et al, 1988) and following continuous exposure to internally deposited radionuclides injected to treat bone disease or to provide a contrast medium in diagnostic radiography (Mays, 1988). Investigations of radiogenic bone cancer have enabled researchers to develop an elegant theory of the induction of osteosarcoma (Marshall and Groer, 1977); models in which genetic-environmental interactions can be evaluated (Knudson, 1985); and guidelines for protecting against the effects of internally deposited radionuclides, especially plutonium (Healy, 1975).

SECRECY AND WORKER HEALTH

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I would ask the distinguished Chairman and Ranking Member to engage in a brief colloquy on section 1078 of the Department of Defense Authorization Conference Report regarding secrecy and worker health. This originally passed the Senate as an amendment I sponsored that was agreed to by all parties. The amendment referred to workers at former nuclear weapons facilities. The provision in the conference report was rewritten, and now defines these workers to be ''employees and former employees of the Department of Defense'' at defense nuclear weapons facilities. However, at least one such facility, the Iowa Army Ammunition Plant, is owned by the Defense Department but operated by a contractor. Thus virtually all employees at the facility were and are employees of the contractor and not directly of the Department of Defense. Is it the understanding of my colleagues that this provision is intended to refer to all employees at such facilities, including those employed directly by the Department of Defense and indirectly through contractors?

Mr. LEVIN. Yes, you are correct. As indicated in the report language, the conferees are concerned about all employees affected by the defense Department policies, and we intended this provision to cover all affected employees at the Iowa facility and similar facilities. We will join with you to make sure the Defense Department implements this provision according to these intentions.

Mr. WARNER. I agree with Senator HARKIN and the distinguished ranking member, and I too am committed to ensuring the Defense Department implements this provision to protect all workers including those of contractors.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I have strong reservations about the fiscal year 2001 Defense Authorization Conference Report that is before the Senate today. The concerns I have are the same that led me to vote against the Defense Authorization bill when it was before the Senate earlier this year.

This conference report would increase Defense spending by more than $20 billion over last year's authorized level. It is $4.6 billion over the President's request. I am particularly troubled that most of this $4.6 billion increase is for weapons systems that were not requested by the Department of Defense.

While I support many provisions of this bill, including a 3.7 percent pay raise for military personnel and additional pay for troops on food stamps, I strongly believe that military spending is increasing at a rate beyond what is necessary to meet our security needs.

Today, however, our military has been attacked—presumably by those who believe that acts of terrorism might somehow deter the United States from defending our interests of promoting peace and security throughout the world.

At this time, it is important to vote for this bill to send a signal to the rest of the world that America stands united in the face of such threats and supports the men and women who so bravely serve this Nation.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I am pleased that the Conference Report for the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 includes a program that I championed in the Senate during its consideration of this bill, along with Senator THOMPSON and others. This program addresses occupational illnesses scientifically found to be associated with the DOE weapons complex, that have occurred and are now occurring because of activities during the Cold War.

This new program was a joint effort of a bipartisan group of Senators and House Members. I would like to knowledge the hard work by my staff and by the staff for Senator FRED THOMPSON, Senator GEORGE VOINOVICH, Senator MIKE DEWINE, Senator MITCH MCCONNELL, and Senator TED KENNEDY. We worked with the Administration, with worker groups, with manufacturers, and with staff from the House of Representatives.

The workers in the DOE nuclear weapons complex, both at the production plants and the laboratories, helped us win the Cold War. But that effort left a tragic environmental and human legacy. We are spending billions of dollars each year on the environmental part—cleaning up the physical infrastructure that was contaminated. But we also need to focus on the human legacy.

This program is an attempt to put right a situation that should not have occurred. But it proposes to do so in a way that is based on sound science.

The amendment focuses federal help on three classes of injured workers.

The first group is workers who were involved with beryllium. Beryllium is a non-radioactive metal that provokes, in some people, a highly allergic lung reaction. The lungs become scarred, and no longer function.

The second group is workers who dug the tunnels for underground nuclear tests and are today suffering from chronic silicosis due to their occupational exposures to silica, which were not adequately controlled by DOE.

The third group of workers are those who had dangerous doses of radiation on the job.

Along with the workers who are covered by the compensation program being created by this legislation, we are reaching back to the uranium miners and millers who were compensated under the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act, or RECA, and providing them with a similar benefit of a total of $150,000 and ongoing medical care. I think that this is only a matter of simple justice, and I strongly supported its inclusion in the current legislation. Early in this Congress, I introduced legislation that would have provided $200,000 in compensation for the uranium miners and millers—the same financial payment that was initially proposed for the DOE workers in this legislation. I am glad that the final result is a better deal for the persons being compensated under RECA, as well as the persons being compensated under this new program.

For the workers who were employed at numerous current and former DOE facilities, we have included a general definition of DOE and other type of facilities in the legislation, in lieu of including a list that might be incomplete. For purposes of helping in the implementation of this legislation, I would like to ask unanimous consent that a non-exclusive list of the DOE-related facilities intended to be covered under this amendment be printed in the RECORD following my statement.

For beryllium workers, there are tests today that can detect the first signs of trouble, called beryllium sensitivity, and also the actual impairment, called chronic beryllium disease. If you have beryllium sensitivity, you are at a higher risk for developing chronic beryllium disease. You need annual check-ups with tests that are expensive. If you develop chronic beryllium disease, you might be disabled or die.

This amendment sets up a federal worker's compensation program to provide medical benefits to workers who acquired beryllium sensitivity as a result of their work for DOE. It provides both medical benefits and a lump-sum payment of $150,000 for workers who suffer disability or death from chronic beryllium disease.

For radiation, the situation is more complex. Radiation is proven to cause cancer in high doses. But when you look at a cancer tumor, you can't tell for sure whether it was caused by an alpha particle of radiation from the workplace, a molecule of a carcinogen in something you ate, or even a stray cosmic ray from outer space. But scientists can make a good estimate of the types of radiation doses that make it more likely than not that your cancer was caused by a workplace exposure.

The original legislative proposal passed by the Senate put the Department of Health and Human Services, HHS, in charge of making the causal connection between specific workplace exposures to radiation and cancer. Within the HHS, it was envisioned that the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, or NIOSH, take the lead for the tasks assigned by this legislation. This assignment followed a decision made in DOE during the Bush Administration, and ratified by the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1993, to give NIOSH the lead in identifying levels of exposure at DOE sites that present employees with significant health risks. While in the final legislative text, the President was assigned these responsibilities, I think it is clearly the intent of the Senate proponents that he delegate these authorities as laid out in the original Senate amendment.

HHS was also given a Congressional mandate, in the Orphan Drug Act, to develop and publish radioepidemiological tables that estimate ''the likelihood that persons who have or have had any of the radiation related cancers and who have received specific doses prior to the onset of such disease developed cancer as a result of those doses.'' I would like to ask unanimous consent that a more detailed discussion of how the Senate proponents envision these guidelines being used be included as an exhibit at the end of my remarks.

Under guidelines that would be developed and used under this legislation, if your radiation dose was high enough to make it at least as likely as not that your cancer was DOE-work-related, you would be eligible for compensation for lost wages and medical benefits.

The HHS-based method will work for the many of the workers at DOE sites. But it won't work for a significant minority who were exposed to radiation, but for whom it would be infeasible to reconstruct their dose.

There are several reasons why reconstructing a dose might be this infeasibility might exist. First, relevant records of dose may be lacking, or might not exist altogether. Second, there might be a way to reconstruct the dose, but it would be prohibitively expensive to do so. Finally, it might take so long to reconstruct a dose for a group of workers that they will all be dead before we have an answer that can be used to determine their eligibility.

One of the workers who testified at my Los Alamos hearing might be an example of a worker who could fall into the cracks of a system that operated solely on dose histories. He was a supervisor at what was called the ''hot dump'' at Los Alamos. All sorts of radioactive materials were taken there to be disposed of. It is hard to reconstruct who handled what. And digging up the dump to see what was there would not only be very expensive, it would expose new workers to radiation risks that could be large.

There are a few groups of workers that we know, today, belong in this category. They are specifically mentioned in the definition of Special Exposure Cohort. For other workers to be placed in this special category, the decision that it was infeasible to reconstruct their dose would have to be made both by the President (or his designee) and by an independent external advisory committee of radiation, health, and workplace safety experts. We allow groups of workers to petition to be considered by the advisory committee for inclusion in this group. Once a group of workers was placed in the category, it would be eligible for compensation for a fixed list of radiation-related cancers.

The program in this amendment provides for a lump-sum payment, combined with ongoing medical coverage under language identical to that used to provide medical coverage under the Federal Employee's Compensation Act, or FECA, in section 8103 of title 5, United States Code. Since Congress has consciously mirrored FECA for one important part of this new program, I hope that the Administration, in implementing our legislation, looks to FECA as a precedent for establishing other parameters for this program.

The legislation before us also invites the Administration to submit further legislative proposals to help implement this new program. In my view, it was not a good policy call for Congress to enact this program without more direction on the details of how it should operate, as was the case in the original legislative proposal passed by the Senate. I believe that the flexibility that the Congress has provided to the Executive Branch should be used to the fullest extent by the President to put the necessary implementing framework in place by Executive Order. If there are changes needed to the law that we have passed, they should be sent up by the President forthwith. But I do not have much confidence that Congress will be able to enact additional legislation on this program before the deadline date of July 31, 2001.

We have a duty to take care of sick workers from the nuclear weapons complex today. It is a doable task, and a good use of our national wealth at a time of budget surpluses. I congratulate my colleagues on having achieved a successful result from our initial bipartisan amendment.

EXHIBIT 2.—DETERMINING ''CAUSATION'' FOR RADIATION AND CANCER

Different cancers have different relative sensitivities to radiation.

In 1988, the White Office of Science and Technology Policy endorsed the use by the Veterans Administration of the concept of ''probability of causation'' (PC) in adjudicating claims of injury due to exposure to ionizing radiation. Given that a radiogenic cancer cannot be differentiated from a ''spontaneously'' occurring one or one caused by other dietary, environmental and/or lifestyle factors, the PC—that is, the ''likelihood'' that a diagnosed cancer has been ''caused'' by a given radiation exposure or dose—has to be determined indirectly.

To this end, the National Institutes of Health (NIH) was tasked to develop radioepidemiology tables. These tables, which are currently being updated by the NIH, include data on 35 cancers compared to the 13 cancers in the original tables from 1985. These tables account for the fact that different cancers have different relative sensitivities to ionizing radiation.

The determination of a PC takes into account the radiation dose and dose rate, the types of radiation exposure (external, internal), age at exposure, sex, duration of exposure, and (for lung cancer only) smoking history. Because a calculated PC is subject to a variety of statistical and methodological uncertainties, a ''confidence interval'' around the PC is also determined.

Thus, a PC is calculated as a single, ''point estimate'' along with a 99% confidence interval which bounds the uncertainty associated with that estimate. If you have 99% certainty that the upper bound of a PC is greater than or equal to 0.5 (i.e., a 50% likelihood of causality), then the cancer is considered at least as likely as not to have been caused by the radiation dose used to calculate the PC.

For example, for a given worker with a particular cancer and radiation exposure history, the PC may by 0.38 with 99% confidence interval of 0.21 to 0.55. This means that it is 38% likely that this worker's cancer was caused by this radiation dose, and we can say with 99% confidence that this estimate is between 21% and 55%. Since the upper bound, 55% is greater than 50%, this person's cancer would be considered to be at least as likely as not to have been caused by exposure to radiation, and the person would be eligible for benefits under the proposed program.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. President, as chairman of the Personnel Subcommittee I worked hard this year, along with Senator MAX CLELAND, our ranking member, to develop a defense authorization bill that is responsive to the manpower readiness needs of the military services; supports numerous quality of life improvements for our service men and women, their families and the retiree community; and addresses in a comprehensive manner, the health care needs of military retirees.

The subcommittee focused on the challenges of recruiting and retention during each of our hearings this year, including the health care hearing. The important legislation contained in this bill will have a positive impact on both recruiting and retention as those who might serve and those who are serving see our commitment to provide the health care benefits promised to those who serve a full military career. I am proud of this bill and I believe the initiatives it contains will result in improved recruiting and retention within the military services.

The most vigorously pursued and most prized provisions in our bill will extend TRICARE, the military health care system, to all military retirees without regard to their age. We have eliminated the statutory language that kicked military retirees out of the military medical system when they became eligible for Medicare—just at the time of their lives when these retirees need medical help the most and can afford it the least.

We were fortunate during conference to be able to include a permanent funding mechanism for the retiree health care benefit. This funding mechanism will ensure that the important health care benefit will be financed in perpetuity rather than being subject to annual budget exigencies. I am delighted that we have stepped up to fulfill the commitment to those who served our nation over a full career.

Of course, health care is not the only issue on which the Personnel Subcommittee focused this year. In the area of military personnel policy, there are a number of recommendations intended to support recruiting, retention and personnel management of the services.

Among the most noteworthy, is a provision that would, effective July 1, 2002, require high schools to provide military recruiters the same access to a high school campus, student lists and directory information as is provided to colleges, universities and private sector employers, unless the governing body—school board—decides by majority vote to deny military recruiters access to the high school.

When I asked military recruiters what I could do to assist them in meeting the challenges they face recruiting the best young men and women in America, they asked me to help them get access to high schools on the same basis as the colleges and universities.

Other initiatives to support recruiting are: a pilot program in which the Army could use motor sports to promote recruiting; implement a program of recruiting in conjunction with vocational schools and community colleges; and a pilot program using contract personnel to supplement active recruiters.

This conference report authorizes the expansion of Junior ROTC programs. We have added $13.5 million to expand the JROTC programs. When combined with the funds in the budget request, this add will maximize the services' ability to expand JROTC during fiscal year 20001. I am proud to be able to support these important programs that teach responsibility, leadership, ethics and assist in military recruiting.

In military compensation, our major recommendations include a 3.7 percent pay raise for military personnel and a revision of the Basic Allowance for Housing to permit the Secretary of Defense to pay 100 percent of the average local housing costs and to ensure that housing allowance rates are not reduced while permitting increases as local housing costs dictate.

The bill directs the Secretary of Defense to implement the Thrift Savings Plan for active and reserve forces not later than 180 days after enactment. The Thrift Savings Plan will be a very positive recruiting and retention tool assisting the military services in attracting high-qualified personnel and encouraging them to remain until retirement.

We included a provision that will dramatically reduce the number of military personnel eligible to receive food stamps. Under this provision, military personnel determined by the Secretary of Defense to be eligible for food stamps would receive an additional special pay sufficient to raise their income level to where they would no longer need food stamps. This special pay will reduce the number of military personnel eligible to receive food stamps from the current DOD estimate of about 5,000 to less than 2,000. No United States military personnel should be forced to use food stamps to feed his or her family. When you combine the food stamp assistance in this bill with the increased pay raises we have directed over the next 5 years, we should practically eliminate the need for any service member to seek assistance from food stamps.

We also modified the basic pay tables for non-commissioned officers effective July 1, 20001 to give these deserving leaders a well deserved pay raise. When we adjusted the basic pay tables for all military personnel last year, we discovered that the non-commissioned officers—the key element in our military units—did not receive an equitable pay raise with the officers. We were able to correct that situation this year.

Other health care provisions include: the elimination of co-payments for those active duty family members enrolled in TRICARE Prime; an initiative that would provide recipients of the Medal of Honor, and their families, life-time military health care; and a provision that would direct the Secretary of Defense to implement a patient care reporting and management system to reduce medical errors.

Mr. President, I am proud of this bill. It will provide the resources and authority the military services need to maximize their readiness and to improve the quality of life for active and retired military personnel and their families.

Before I conclude, I would like to take this opportunity to thank the hardworking staff members of the Personnel Subcommittee: Charlie Abell, Patti Lewis, and Michele Traficante. I am proud of the work they have done this year, and every man and women who wears our nation's uniform, and every military retiree, is better off today because of their efforts. I thank you.

I will vote for the bill and I urge my colleagues to support the bill as well.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I will once again oppose the Department of Defense authorization bill, as I have done each year I have been a Member of this body.

As I stated earlier this year when the Senate passed the fiscal year 2001 Department of Defense appropriations bill, my opposition to this conference report should not be interpreted as a lack of support for our men and women in uniform. Rather, what I cannot support is the cold war mentality that continues to permeate the United States defense establishment.

I strongly support our Armed Forces and the excellent work they are doing to combat the new threats of the 21st century and beyond. However, I am concerned that we are not giving our forces the tools they need to combat these emerging threats. Instead, this conference report, like the corresponding defense appropriations bill that has already been enacted, clings to the strategies and weapons that we used to fight—and win—the cold war.

The cold war is over. It is past time that we undertake a comprehensive review of the threats currently facing the United States and formulate a strategy on how best to combat them before we continue to commit billions of dollars to programs that were created to fight an enemy that no longer exists.

As we reexamine our defense priorities, we should assess the changing roles and missions of both our active duty and our reserve components. The National Guard and Reserve are integral parts of overseas missions, with recent and ongoing missions in places including Iraq and the Balkans. According to statements by Department of Defense officials, Guardsmen and Reservists will continue to play an increasingly important role in our national defense strategy as they are called upon to shoulder more of the burden of military operations both at home and abroad. The National Guard and Reserves deserve the full support they need to carry out their duties.

One crucial part of that support is providing adequate compensation to these dedicated men and women. I am pleased that this conference report includes a modified version of an amendment I offered during Senate consideration of this bill which authorizes special duty assignment pay for members of the National Guard and Reserve not on active duty. This provision will provide a measure of pay equity to National Guard and Reserve personnel by making them eligible for special duty assignment pay for special duties performed during drill periods.

The men and women who serve in the Guard and Reserves are cornerstones of our national defense and domestic infrastructure, and they deserve to be adequately and equitably compensated for their dedicated service to this country. This provision is a step in that direction. I thank the chairman and the ranking member of the Committee on Armed Services for their cooperation and support on this important issue.

On another matter, I am also delighted that this bill permanently extends the authority of the General Services Administration, GSA, to convey surplus property to local governments for law enforcement purposes. This provision builds on an amendment I offered when this measure was before the Senate, and I am pleased that the conferees have retained the language and expanded its scope. This section will help a number of communities across the country seeking to use surplus property to protect their citizens and provide safe, secure facilities for their police departments. Without this amendment, the authority to convey surplus property for law enforcement purposes would have expired this year. Communities that want to use the GSA process, and have counted upon doing so, to negotiate the use of property for law enforcement purposes at a reduced cost would have been shut out.

In fact, I have just such a situation in my own home State. The city of Kewaunee, WI wants to acquire the city's Army Reserve Center, which is a former Federal armory building. The city intends to use the property as a municipal building in which they would house their police force and other municipal offices.

Congress has specified a number of public purpose uses for which property can be transferred to local governments at a reduced cost. The Federal Property and Administrative Services Act, FPASA, allows property to be transferred to public agencies and institutions at discounts of up to 100 percent of fair market value for a number of purposes: public health or educational uses, public parks or recreational areas, historic monuments, homeless assistance, correctional institutions, port facilities, public airports, wildlife conservation, and self-help housing. This type of transfer is called a public interest conveyance.

I strongly believe that law enforcement is an important public purpose for which surplus property should be used. Moreover, in fairness to local communities with tight budgets, Congress today is acting to permanently preserve this option for communities that are counting on being able to use this authority.

Mr. President, I again thank the bill's managers, the Senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. WARNER] and the Senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. LEVIN], as well as the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. THOMPSON], for assisting me in ensuring this provision becomes law.

In closing, I reiterate my concern about the excessive spending contained in this conference report, including millions in taxpayers' dollars for planes, ships, and other equipment that the President did not request.

We should reexamine our defense priorities, and we should do it as soon as possible.

I thank the Chair.

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President, I want to express my support for the Defense Authorization conference report and to thank the Chairman of the Armed Services Committee, Senator WARNER, and the Ranking Member, Senator LEVIN, for their assistance in ensuring that the conference report includes a provision to provide compensation to Department of Energy nuclear weapons workers whose health was harmed in the course of their service to our country.

Back in June, when the Senate first considered this measure, I offered an amendment along with Senator BINGAMAN, Senator VOINOVICH, Senator KENNEDY, Senator DEWINE and others to establish an occupational illness compensation program for these DOE workers who helped us win the Cold War. We offered the amendment after my Committee and others heard testimony and reviewed evidence that showed that, for decades, the federal government—and specifically the Department of Energy—failed to adequately protect its workers or to properly inform them of hazards associated with the important work they were performing.

In some cases, we simply did not know then what we know now about the links between some of the materials used to make weapons and certain illnesses. But in some cases, the government did know—and yet it covered up and kept people in the dark and failed to adequately protect them. We cannot go back and right that wrong. I wish we could. But we can face up to the mistakes that were made and begin to try to remedy them. That is what the Senate is about to do today.

This conference report will establish a compensation program for Department of Energy and contractor employees who were exposed to beryllium, silica, or radiation in the course of their employment, and who are now suffering from illnesses that can be linked to those exposures. The program will employ eligibility criteria based on expert judgement and sound science.

Under the compromise that was reached with the House, the President will be required to send to Congress by March 15th of next year a specific proposal detailing the level of compensation and benefits he believes should be paid. Congress will then have until July 31st to enact specific compensation levels. However, if Congress does not act by July 31st, a default benefit level of $150,000 plus medical benefits will take effect. Therefore, covered employees are guaranteed to receive at least that amount unless Congress enacts legislation stating otherwise by next July.

I believe this is a good compromise, Mr. President. It is not everything that the Senate sponsors wanted, but it is a start. It will get a program in place, allow the Administration to begin to identify those who are eligible, and guarantee a minimum benefit level without further action by Congress. Those are important victories for these Cold War veterans to whom we owe a debt of gratitude. Today we acknowledge that debt of gratitude, as well as a responsibility to remedy mistakes we made.

So again I want to thank Chairman WARNER for his support of this important provision. It would not have been included without his efforts. I also want to thank Senators BINGAMAN, VOINOVICH, KENNEDY, DEWINE, MCCONNELL, and BUNNING for working with me on this issue, and I urge my colleagues to support the conference report.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I rise today to strongly support the fiscal year 2001 National Defense Authorization Conference Report which we are considering today. As a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee and the chair of the Seapower Subcommittee, I enthusiastically endorse this legislation, and further would like to particularly note its name as the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 2001 in recognition of the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee's long and distinguished service.

I also want to acknowledge the senior Senator from Virginia, Senator JOHN WARNER, the chairman of the Armed Services Committee for the superb leadership he has provided in support of the committee in the context of the entire authorization bill, and our ranking member, Senator CARL LEVIN, for all his work on this conference report and for his contribution to the committee and its deliberations.

The Seapower Subcommittee addressed significant issues this year and we did so with the bipartisan support of the members of our subcommittee. I want to thank Senator KENNEDY, the ranking member of the Seapower subcommittee, and the other subcommittee members, Senators JOHN MCCAIN, BOB SMITH, JEFF SESSIONS, CHUCK ROBB, and JACK REED, for their contributions and their bipartisan support of not only this legislation but also of the work by the subcommittee throughout this year.

This conference report takes great strides toward modernizing our armed services, meeting their operational and maintenance funding requirements, and improving the quality of service for our dedicated and valuable men and women of the military.

Because we recognize that the service members are our most valuable asset, this bill makes a solid investment in substantive healthcare provisions which will improve the coverage and quality of healthcare for our active duty military members, retirees, and their family members.

Significantly, this legislation initiates a permanent program to provide ''healthcare for life'' to our military retirees age 65 and older by supplementing Medicare with TRICARE, the military's healthcare program. It also includes a provision, originally the Kennedy-Snowe amendment, which complements the ''healthcare for life'' legislation by expanding prescription drug coverage for all our retirees—to provide a comprehensive healthcare benefits program that our military retirees so richly deserve.

This conference report also reflects the Seapower Subcommittee's hard look at Navy and Marine Corps operations and the equipment our men and women require to carry out those operations. And, Mr. President, what we have found in testimony from our operational commander is that our Navy and Marine Corps continues to be the nation's 9–1–1 force. Our sailors and marines are forward deployed, carrying out the national military strategy, and they continue to function at a high level of operations.

In fact, between 1980 and 1989, the Navy/Marine Corps team alone responded to 58 contingency missions. However, between 1990 and 1999 that number had increased to 192 contingency missions—a remarkable threefold increase in operations! What makes this figure even more astounding is that this increase in missions occurred while the number of ships was reduced from 500 in 1980 to the current fleet of 316 ships.

The subcommittee recognizes the critical and unique role that the Navy and Marine Corps team filled in pursuing the national military strategy, and worked to create a bill that would support these diverse missions. To that end, I am pleased that this conference report authorizes an increase of $749 million to the Seapower Subcommittee procurement programs—on top of the President's budget request of $21.6 billion.

Furthermore, this conference agreement includes all of the original Seapower Subcommittee legislative provisions I referenced during my June discussion of these issues on the floor of the Senate, as well as several positive additions which will enhance both our national security and the readiness of our naval forces.

I want to highlight several capabilities and programs that we addressed after receiving testimony from the service chiefs and operational commanders and after visiting and talking with our service men and women.

The Seapower conference report aggressively addresses the future of our nation's Navy and the importance of recapitalization of our fleet by authorizing the construction of eight new ships. This includes $4 billion for a Nimitz class aircraft carrier; $2.7 billion for three DDG–51 Arleigh Burke class destroyers—the most advanced surface combatant in the world; $1.5 billion for two LPD–17 San Antonio class amphibious ships which will begin to reduce lifecycle costs in our amphibious fleet; $339 million for one ADC(X) auxiliary supply ship; and $1.2 billion for one Virginia class attack submarine

It also authorizes the President's request of $357 million for the advance procurement of seven DDG–51 Arleigh Burke class destroyers, $508 million for SSN–774 Virginia class attack submarines, and $22 million for one CVN(X) nuclear powered aircraft carrier.

The subcommittee recognized this need to modernize the fleet and, as a result, invested in future ship research and development as the seed corn of the future Navy by approving the budget request of $38 million for CVN–77—the last aircraft carrier of the Nimitz class; $274 million for CVN(X); $207 million for the SSN–774 Virginia class attack submarines; and $535 million for the revolutionary DD–21 land attack destroyer.

This conference report also approves the President's request for $1.1 billion for the procurement of sixteen MV–22 Osprey Marine Corps tilt-rotor aircraft, $2.2 billion to procure twelve C–17 aircraft, and $176.4 million for contained research, development, test, and evaluation of the C–17 strategic airlift program.

I am pleased that $560 million of the total procurement authorization increase is for new ship construction and will assist the Navy in achieving potential savings of over $1 billion. This increase includes $460 million for advanced procurement of the LHD–8 amphibious assault ship and an increase of $100 million for advance procurement of DDC–51 Arleigh Burke class destroyers.

For the Navy and Marine Corps aviation communities the conference report authorizes an increase of $52.4 million to re-manufacture two additional SH–60 helicopters and a $41.8 million increase to procure two additional CH–60 Navy helicopters, an increase of $22 million for additional P–3 Anti-Surface Warfare Improvement Program Kits, and an increase of $17 million for modifications and night operations upgrades to the Marine Corps UH–1 and AH–1 helicopters.

The conference agreement authorizes a $179.5 million increase to the President's budget request of $4.5 billion for the research, development, test, and evaluation of Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force programs under the jurisdiction of the Seapower Subcommittee to include a $12.5 million increase for an additional Advanced Amphibious Assault Vehicle prototype, a $20 million increase to develop advanced shipboard simulators for Marines embarked on amphibious ships, a $15 million increase for a multi-purpose acoustic processor for anti-submarine warfare, a $10 million increase for development of command and decision software to be used throughout the surface Navy to improve communication among commanders, and an $8.4 million increase for the development of a defense system to protect our surface ships from torpedoes.

Mr. President, I want to emphasize that these increases were authorized by the Seapower Subcommittee to begin to provide much needed relief to the operational commanders who testified that they were being ''stretched too thin.'' This added funding supports critical programs that will provide commanders with the equipment and the modernized systems they require to successfully and safely accomplish their mission.

I say to my colleagues, this entire defense bill takes a positive step toward modernizing our armed services, meeting their operational and maintenance funding requirements, and improving the quality of service for our committed men and women of the military. I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of passage of the final version of the FY 2001 National Defense Authorization Act.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I rise in support of the conference report for H.R. 4205, the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001.

The conference report contains a provision on an issue that I have been working on—the concurrent receipt of military retired pay and VA disability compensation.

A law enacted in 1891 requires a disabled career military veteran to waive the amount of his retired pay equal to his VA disability compensation. Military retirees are the only group of federal retirees who must waive retirement pay in order to receive VA disability compensation. If a veteran refuses to give up his retired pay, he will lose his VA disability benefits. Our government is effectively requiring career military retirees to fund their own disability benefits. This inequitable offset affects over 437,000 military retirees.

Section 666 of the Senate version of this legislation would have eliminated the current offset entirely. The provision was very similar of H.R. 303, which has 321 cosponsors in the House. The provision was supported by numerous veterans' service organizations, including the Military Coalition, the National Military/Veterans Alliance, the American Legion, the Disabled American Veterans, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Paralyzed Veterans of America, and the Uniformed Services Disabled Retirees.

Some members were concerned that the provision was too expensive, and consequently, many felt that we could not include a provision to completely eliminate the current offset in the conference report. In my opinion, no amount of money can equal the sacrifice our military men and women have made in service to their country. This is a small price to pay to show our appreciation to those who have sacrificed so much for our great nation.

While I am extremely disappointed that we did not take advantage of this opportunity to correct this long-standing inequity, I am pleased that the conference report does contain language that will take us one step closer to correcting this injustice once and for all.

The Fiscal Year 2000 National Defense Authorization Act included a provision, to authorize a monthly allowance to military retirees with severe service-connected disabilities rated by the Department of Veterans Affairs at 70 percent or greater. The provision authorized payments of $300 per month to retirees with 100 percent disability, $200 per month to retirees with 90 percent disability and $100 per month to retirees with 70 and 80 percent disability. To be eligible, retirees had to have at least 20 years of service and have their VA disability rating within four years of their retirement. Only individuals retired for longevity qualified for the monthly benefit.

The conference report for H.R. 4205 expands the eligibility for these special payments to those individuals retired for disability by their service. These individuals are also known as ''Chapter 61'' retirees. The payments will begin in fiscal year 2002.

I want to thank Senator WARNER and Senator LEVIN for their assistance in including this provision in the conference report. I would also like to acknowledge Congressman BILIRAKIS, who assisted as an outside conferee on the conference report which made it possible for us to debate concurrent receipt in this session of the 106th Congress. Congressman BILIRAKIS has been a vocal advocate for concurrent receipt in the House for over fifteen years.

The original law is 109 years old and discriminates against service members who decide to make the military their careers. Military retirees with service-connected disabilities should be able to receive compensation for their injuries above their military retired pay. The elimination of this offset is long overdue, and I will continue to pursue this issue in the 107th Congress.

I urge my colleagues to support the conference report for H.R. 4205.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I am proud to serve on the Senate Armed Services Committee that developed the Senate version of the National Defense Authorization bill for fiscal year 2001. I am equally proud to have served as a Conferee to resolve differences between our bill and the one that passed the House of Representatives.

This bill is important to our men and women who serve this Nation every day. As the explosion today in Yemen demonstrates, America's great military men and women put their lives on the line for us every day. That sacrifice demands our attention and our support.

This bill is another step to help us pull the U.S. military out of the nosedive created by this Administration. The number of deployments the Clinton/Gore administration committed us to has forced the military to use its limited funds for operations vice maintaining our forces. Readiness is at an all-time low. We are cannibalizing parts of our forces to keep the other parts running. That is wrong. Our men and women in uniform deserve better. This bill is a step in the right direction, but we still need more. I will fight for more again next year.

My colleagues on the Armed Services Committee have lauded the benefits of this bill, so I will not repeat them all here. However, several points I feel are very important to note for the American people.

This bill authorizes $309.9 billion in military spending, $4.6 billion above the President's budget request. It authorizes $63.2 billion for procurement, $2.6 billion above the President's budget request. It authorizes $38.9 billion for research and development, $1.1 billion above the President's budget request.

This bill provides a decent pay raise—3.7 percent. It approves permanent comprehensive health care benefits for military retirees and benefits for military families. It also provides pharmacy benefits. When our military men and women put their lives on the line for our freedom, we owe them this commitment.

This bill is a start, but we must do better. We need to expand our missile defense capabilities to fully leverage land, sea, air, and space options. Our ship-building rate is below that needed to sustain our aging naval force in the long term. We also need to be investing in space power programs. For 8 years, this Administration has ignored programs like the Kinetic Energy Anti-Satellite system and the military space plane.

I also want to mention two important items which I fought vigorously for in this Bill that my colleagues have not mentioned.

First, this bill attempts to right a grievous wrong that was committed over 50 years ago when Captain Charles Butler McVay III was tried and convicted—unjustly I believe—for the sinking of his ship, the U.S.S. Indianapolis, shortly before the end of the Second World War. This remains the greatest sea disaster in the history of the U.S. Navy. 880 of the 1,197 men aboard perished. Many of those who survived the actual sinking were left without lifeboats, food, or water and faced shark attacks for 4 days and 5 nights.

This legislation recognizes Captain McVay's lack of culpability for the tragic loss of the ship, urges a correction of his military record to reflect his exoneration, and prompts the Navy to award a Navy Unit Commendation to the U.S.S. Indianapolis and her final crew.

Captain McVay was not given intelligence reports about Japanese submarine activity in the ship's path; he was not granted an escort to help protect his ship; and he had taken prudent steps to protect the vessel. Not all of this information was made available to the court-martial board. Several hundred U.S. ships were lost in combat to enemy action during World War II, yet only Captain McVay was subjected to a court-martial.

This language does not erase the conviction of Captain McVay from his record. We in Congress do not have the authority to do that. It must remain on his record as a stain upon the conscience of the Navy until this or some future President sees fit to order that it be expunged. This resolution does, however, represent acknowledgment from one branch of the Federal Government he served so capably that Captain McVay's conviction was morally wrong and that he should no longer be viewed by the American people as responsible for the horrible tragedy which haunted him to the end of his life.

Second, this bill closes a loop hole in our national security regarding the granting of security clearances. Everyday, we entrust our national secrets to individuals to develop weapon systems, intelligence capabilities, war plans, and the like to defend this nation in war and peace. The American people demand these individuals be of the highest integrity. Yet, it came to my attention that we have not been maintaining that standard. Persons with criminal track records have been granted security clearances. We have even granted clearances to murderers.

The addition I fought for in this bill is simple. It would prevent the Department of Defense from granting security clearances to those who have been convicted in a court of a crime punishable by imprisonment for a term exceeding one year.

As I have said, this bill will strengthen our military. It is a step in the right direction, but we are not finished. I urge my colleagues to approve the conference report.

(At the request of Mr. DASCHLE, the following statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD.)

• Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise to discuss provisions (Section 934) in the fiscal year 2001 National Defense Authorization Act (H.R. 5408) aimed at supporting efforts within the Department of Defense to develop a set of operational concepts, sometimes referred to as 'Network Centric Warfare', that seek to exploit the power of information and U.S. superiority in information technologies to maintain dominance and improve interoperability on the battlefield. I am reiterating points here that I made in a longer and more detailed statement this past summer on June 20 on this legislation. The concept of Network Centric Warfare calls for a military that links sensors, communications systems and weapons systems in an interconnected grid that allows for a seamless information flow to warfighters, policy makers, and support personnel. I am very pleased to see that our House and Senate Conferees have made a strong statement as to the importance of this emerging theory of warfare. They have joined a chorus of voices, including experts from the Naval War College, Office of the Defense, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff to push for an acceleration of DoD efforts to analyze, understand, and implement the concepts of Network Centric Warfare. In fact, Joint Vision 2020 set the goal for the Department of Defense to pursue information superiority in order that joint forces may possess superior knowledge and attain decision superiority during operations across the spectrum of conflict.

After extensive discussions with a variety of Agency and Service officials, I believe that although there are many innovative efforts underway throughout the Department to develop network centric technologies and systems, as well as to develop mechanisms to integrate information systems, sensors, weapon systems and decision makers, these efforts are too often underfunded, low-priority, and not coordinated across Services. In many cases, they will unfortunately continue the legacy of interoperability problems that we all know exist today. To paraphrase one senior Air Force officer, we are not making the necessary fundamental changes—we are still nibbling at the edges.

The legislation in Section 934 of H.R. 5408 explores many of the facets of this novel Joint vision of a networked force and operations. Section 934 (b) clearly states the policy of the United States with respect to Network Centric Warfare. The legislation makes it the goal of Department of Defense to fully coordinate various efforts being pursued by the Joint Staff, the Defense Agencies, and the military departments as they develop the concepts of Network Centric Warfare. The legislation then also calls for DoD to provide two reports to Congress detailing efforts in moving towards Network Centric forces and operations. The conference language reflects the fact that both the Senate and the House had compatible provisions on Network Centric Warfare in their respective bills. The final conference language essentially reflects the more detailed Senate version; it consolidates the wording while retaining the intent and each key element of the Senate bill's proposals. Therefore the points I made in a more extended statement this past summer remain applicable to the final provision, and what follows is merely a reiteration and elaboration from that statement. At this point I also particularly want to note my appreciation for the strong support, cooperation, and contributions on this provision from my friends and Committee colleagues, Senators ROBERTS and BINGAMAN.

Section 934(b) calls for a report focusing on the broad development and implementation of Network Centric Warfare concepts in the Department of Defense. The Secretary of Defense and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff are asked to report on their current and planned efforts to coordinate all Dod activities in Network Centric Warfare to show how they are moving toward a truly Joint, networked force. The report calls for the development of a set of metrics as discussed in Section 934(c)(J) to be used to monitor our progress towards a Joint, networked force and the attainment of fully integrated Joint command and control capabilities, both in technology and organizational structure. These metrics should allow Congress and DoD to evaluate technology development and acquisition programs that are related to Network Centric concepts and enable policy makers to set priorities and to make difficult resource allocation decisions.

The legislation also requires the Department to report on how it is moving toward Joint Requirements and Acquisition policies and increasing Joint authority in this area to ensure that future forces will be truly seamless, interoperable, and network-centric, as described in Section 934(c)(G). These Joint activities are critically necessary to achieving networked systems and operations. Unless we move away from a system designed to protect individual Service interests and procurement programs, we will always be faced with solving interoperability problems between systems. For example, strengthening the Joint oversight of the requirements for and acquisition of all systems directly involved in Joint Task Forces interoperability would provide a sounder method for acquiring these systems. We need to move away from a cold war based, platform-centric acquisition system that is slow, cumbersome, and Service-centric. As part of this review, DoD should examine the speed at which it can acquire new technologies and whether the personnel making key decisions on information systems procurement are technically training or at least supported by the finest technical talent available. The report should, as part of this review, evaluate how to ensure that Service acquisition systems are responsive to the establishment of Joint interoperability standards in networking, computing, and communications, as well as best commercial practices.

As described in Section 934(c)(I), the report must also address the need for coordination of Service and Agency Science and Technology (S&T) investments in the development of future Joint Network Central Warfare capabilities. In moving towards a more Joint, networked force we must continue to ensure that we provide our nation's warfighters with the best technologies. The review should evaluate where we must increase our investments in areas such as sensors, networking protocols, human-machine interfaces, training, and other technologies, especially in the face of constrained S&T budgets. The Secretary of Defense should explain how S&T investments supporting network centric operations will be coordinated across the Agencies and Services to eliminate redundancy and how and where investments will be made to better address critical warfighting technology needs. This is more important than ever as we develop our next generation of weapon systems—better coordination and establishment of common standards in the technology development stages can only help to alleviate future interoperability problems.

Any investments in S&T for a network centric force must also address the role of the operator in a network centric system. The report must pay attention to the training of our combat and support personnel so that they can make the best use of information technologies, as well as investing more in research on learning and cognitive processes so that our training systems and human-machine interfaces are optimized. The recommendations on investments in the report should also accommodate the incredible pace of change in information technologies that is currently driven by the commercial sector. Dodd must analyze the commercially driven revolutions in information technology and modify the investment strategy to best leverage those developments through cooperative R&D and utilization of dual-use technologies.

Section 934(d) describes the second report, which requires an examination of the use of the Joint Experimentation Program in developing Network Centric Warfare concepts. Network Centric Warfare is inherently Joint, and the Commander in Chief of Joint Forces Command is in the best position to develop new operational concepts and test the new technologies that support it. The report calls for a proposal on how the Joint Experimentation Program and the results of its activities are to be used to develop these new operational concepts, especially with regards to the design of optimal force structures for Joint operations.

The Joint Experimentation process should also be used to develop Joint Requirements, Doctrine, and Acquisition programs to support network centric operations. It should serve to identify impediments to the development of a joint information network, including the linking of Service intranets, as well as redesigning combat support functions to leverage new network centric operation concepts. The review should evaluate each of these issues. This of course does not detract from the critical role that existing Service experimentation programs will play in developing new technologies and doctrine to make our fighting forces more efficient and interoperable, which should be a part of this analysis.

This legislation will help focus the Pentagon and Congress' attention on the need to move our military into a more information savvy and networked force. We ask that these reports set forth the needed organizational, policy, and legislative changes necessary to achieve this transformation for decision makers in the military, Administration, and in Congress. The realities of the information technology revolution will force our future military operations to be network centric. We must act now to ensure that we stay ahead of the curve in technology and, more importantly, in thinking. I look forward to receiving plans and proposals to help get us there efficiently and effectively.●

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I am pleased that the Senate will vote today on the fiscal year 2001 Department of Defense Authorization Conference Report. This defense bill contains historic improvements in health care coverage for the approximately 12,600 military retirees, their families, and survivors currently living in South Dakota. In addition, the defense bill contains much-needed quality of life'' improvements for men and women in active duty and several improvements to the TRICARE health care system for active duty personnel and their families.

On the first day of this legislative session, I introduced the Keep Our Promises to America's Military Retirees Act to restore the broken promise of lifetime health care for military retirees and their dependents. Men and women were promised lifetime health care for themselves and their families upon completion of 20 years in the military. However, military retirees are currently kicked out of TRICARE once they become eligible for Medicare. The current situation breaks a promise our country has made with its veterans and military retirees. The lack of adequate health care coverage for military retirees also impacts retention of qualified military personnel and sends a negative signal to young men and women considering a career in the military.

My bipartisan legislation received the endorsement from military retiree and veterans organizations as well as from a grassroots organization of thousands of military retirees across the country. My legislation called for military retirees to have the option of staying in their TRICARE military health care program or electing to participate in the Federal Employees Health Benefit Program, FEHBP. The Keep Our Promises to America's Military Retirees Act would also allow military retirees who entered the military prior to June 7, 1956 (the date military health care for retirees was enacted into law) to enroll in FEHBP with the United States paying 100 percent of the costs.

I offered my legislation as an amendment during Senate consideration of the fiscal year 2001 Defense Authorization bill. Although the amendment failed on a procedural motion, I was pleased that Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman JOHN WARNER agreed to include one part of my bill—the expansion of TRICARE to Medicare-eligible military retirees—in both the Senate defense bill and the final conference report that will be sent to the President.

The conference report also extends full DoD pharmacy benefits for Medicare-eligible military retirees. Military retirees will now be able to use DoD retail and mail-order pharmacy programs. A 20 percent copayment is required for retail, and a $8 copay is required for a 90-day supply of mail-ordered drugs. As you recall, this pharmacy provision was included in the Senate defense bill after I was successful in creating a special military retiree health care reserve fund'' in the fiscal year 2001 budget resolution.

The fiscal year 2001 Defense Authorization Conference Report includes a number of other health care and ''quality of life'' improvements for men and women in active duty and their families. I am pleased this bill eliminates TRICARE Prime copayments for active-duty family members as well as increasing reimbursement rates for TRICARE providers. In my numerous meetings in the state on TRICARE, low reimbursement rates have been of particular concern because the low rates make recruitment of TRICARE health care providers in rural areas difficult. With my support, the bill also includes efforts to improve TRICARE through good business practices, increased technology, and reduced administrative waste.

The conference report includes a much-deserved 3.7 percent pay raise for active duty and reserve personnel. I am pleased the bill also begins the process of eliminating the mandatory out-of-pocket housing costs incurred by servicemembers. Recruitment and retention efforts will be enhanced with incentives to join ROTC and increased enlistment bonuses, as well as a provision that allows VEAP conversion to the Montgomery GI Bill for servicemembers currently on active duty who had previously contributed to VEAP.

While I am pleased that a number of health care issues have been addressed in this year's defense authorization bill, there is more work that needs to be done. I will continue to work with cosponsors of my Keep Our Promises legislation to provide military retirees with the option of using FEHBP and to address the broken promise of free lifetime health care to those military personnel who entered the military prior to June 7, 1956. I am also disappointed that the bill failed to adequately address a rule that prohibits disabled vets from receiving their retired pay and disability compensation concurrently. I am a cosponsor of legislation that would correct this injustice, and I will continue to work with my colleagues to ensure its eventual passage. Finally, I will continue to fight for increased veterans education benefits through a strengthened Montgomery GI Bill and passage of my Veterans Education Opportunities Act.

The health care improvements and ''quality of life'' improvements included in this year's defense authorization bill are a testament to the hard work and grassroots organization of thousands of military retirees across the country. One particular military retiree, Fred Athans from Rapid City, recently completed his term as national president of The Retired Enlisted Association. Fred and countless others from South Dakota and around the country were essential in the passage of this legislation.

● Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, first, I would like to say that the attack on the U.S.S. Cole is a tragedy for the nation. My thoughts are with the families and loved ones of the sailors who lost their lives, and I pray for the full recovery of those who were injured. I also urge an immediate investigation of this brutal terrorist act against our country in order to identify the terrorists and their backers and bring them to justice as soon as possible.

I support the conference report to the Fiscal Year 2001 Defense Authorization Bill. It represents major progress in our commitment to defending our country and caring for the dedicated men and women who serve so well in our armed forces.

I commend my colleagues on the Armed Services Committee for their skillful work in producing this consensus and bipartisan conference report. We have made worthwhile progress on many important issues affecting our armed forces.

The nation owes a special debt to the men and women of the armed forces for their unwavering commitment to our country and their excellent performance in the challenges they faced in this past year. They stand in harm's way. They have helped end the aggression in Kosovo, enforced the peace in Iraq, and helped provide the foundation for a free and independent nation in East Timor.

The contributions of our armed forces in those conflicts captured headlines, but it is important to recognize that our service members are preparing for and responding to a variety of contingencies. From defending the United States and our allies to participating in peacekeeping missions, to conducting counter-drug operations, to providing humanitarian assistance, the members of our armed forces today are prepared to carry out a wide range of duties in an efficient and professional manner.

This conference report includes a number of important provisions that demonstrate the commitment by Congress to improving the quality of life of those serving our country today as well as those who have completed their service in the past. For those currently serving, the conference report includes a 3.7 percent pay raise, a full half-percent above the rate of inflation.

Our commitment is not only to the soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines who defend our country but also to their families. The conference report authorizes the construction of new housing for 2,900 families. For families who live off-base, we have taken steps to meet our goal of reducing out-of-pocket housing expenses to zero within five years.

The conference report helps to make the armed forces a more attractive career by implementing a program to allow active and reserve service members to enroll in the Thrift Savings Program, encouraging them to plan and save for their retirement.

One of the most important accomplishments in this legislation is a prescription drug benefit for military retirees, their spouses and widows. It is a long overdue step toward making good on the Nation's promise to provide career personnel with lifetime health benefits. And we intend to continue the on-going effort to provide all retirees with affordable, comprehensive prescription drug coverage through Medicare.

When we first considered the DOD authorization bill earlier this year, Senator SNOWE and I drafted a proposal to create a comprehensive drug benefit. We worked closely with Chairman WARNER and others to make coverage of prescription drugs a priority in this legislation. I am pleased that our legislation prevailed and was expanded in the conference. It is now clear to all that Congress has heard and heeded the needs of our military retirees, and addressed their number one priority—the cost of prescription drugs.

As a result of our efforts, nearly 1.4 million Medicare-eligible military retirees and their spouses and widows—including more than 21,500 in Massachusetts—will have access to affordable prescription drugs, effective upon enactment.

Under this legislation, military retirees will receive a retail and mail-order pharmacy benefit. Almost one-third of them—450,000—already have this benefit under the base closing agreement. The bill provides a 90-day supply of prescription drugs by mail for an $8 co-payment, or a 30-day supply of prescription drugs from a retail pharmacy for a 20 percent co-payment. There are no deductibles, and no additional premiums. Military retirees and their spouses and widows will receive the prescription drugs that their doctors prescribe. It is a generous benefit for those who have given so generously to the country during their working years.

The legislation also assures comprehensive Medicare supplemental coverage through TRICARE. Together, these new benefits assure health security in retirement for those who have served in the armed forces.

These benefits send a strong message to all men and women in uniform that we care about their service. It lets military retirees know that Congress listens, cares, and will act on their behalf.

Despite success here today for military retirees, we must not forget the millions of other senior citizens who need help with prescription drugs, too.

It's long past time for Congress to mend the broken promise of Medicare. Medicare is a compact between the government and America's senior and disabled citizens. It says work hard and pay in during your working years, and you will receive health coverage in your retirement years. But every day that promise is broken, because Medicare does not cover prescription drugs. It is time for Congress to make good on that promise, too.

When Medicare was enacted in 1965, only three percent of private insurance policies offered prescription drug coverage. Today, virtually all private health insurance policies provide prescription drug coverage.

Up to 20 million elderly and disabled Medicare beneficiaries—one-half of the total—have no prescription drug coverage throughout the year. Almost 14 million have never had drug coverage.

Those who have coverage find that too often it is unreliable, inadequate or unaffordable. In fact, the only senior citizens who have stable, secure, affordable drug coverage today are the very poor, who are on Medicaid. The idea that only the impoverished elderly should qualify for needed hospital and doctor care was rejected when Medicare was enacted.

Governor Bush and Congressional Republicans say they want to subsidize prescription drugs for the poor. But senior citizens deserve Medicare, not welfare.

Too many seniors today must choose between food on the table and the medicine they need to stay healthy or to treat their illnesses.

Too many seniors take half the pills their doctor prescribes—or don't even fill needed prescriptions—because they cannot afford the high cost of prescription drugs.

Too many seniors are ending up hospitalized—at immense cost to Medicare—because they aren't receiving the drugs they need at all, or cannot afford to take them correctly.

Pharmaceutical products are increasingly the source of miracle cures for a host of dread diseases. In 1998 alone, private industry spent more than $21 billion in research on new medicines and to bring them to the public. Congress is well on its way to doubling the budget for the National Institutes of Health. The miracle drugs developed by these public and private sectors investments save lives—and they save dollars too, by preventing unnecessary hospitalization and expensive surgery. But millions of Medicare beneficiaries are left out and left behind from the benefits of 21st century medicine because they cannot afford the price of admission.

Elderly Americans need and deserve prescription drug coverage under Medicare. Any senior citizen will tell you that—and so will their children and grandchildren. It is time to make the needs of all seniors a priority as well.

As a party, Republicans have always disliked Medicare. It was one of the first votes I cast when I came to the Senate, and it's still one of the best votes I've ever cast.

Senator Bob Dole, however, once boasted that he voted against Medicare's enactment, and never liked it. According to historian Robert Dallek, Ronald Reagan saw Medicare as the advance wave of socialism that would ''invade every area of freedom in this country.'' House Majority Leader DICK ARMEY has said that it's a program he would ''have no part of in a free world.'' Newt Gingrich wanted Medicare to ''wither on the vine'' in the GOP effort he led to privatize Medicare and reduce its funding in order to pay for tax breaks for the rich.

In contrast, under the leadership of the Clinton-Gore Administration, Medicare's financial outlook is the healthiest it has ever been. According to the most recent Trustee's Report, the Medicare Trust Fund will remain solvent for the next quarter century.

Democrats want a universal, voluntary prescription drug benefit under Medicare. All beneficiaries would be eligible for affordable coverage within one year of enactment. In contrast, George Bush passes the buck to the states and private insurance companies. His flawed two-part program would force seniors to wait too long and do too little for too few.

Phase One of the Bush plan would be a state block grant program similar to one of the proposals by Senator ROTH. Eligibility is limited to senior citizens whose incomes are below $14,600—which leaves 70 percent of all Medicare beneficiaries with no coverage. Senior citizens want Medicare, not welfare. They have spent their working years building our country, and they should not have to beg for prescription drugs in their golden years.

It would take years to implement the Bush block grant program. Last February, the National Governors Association unanimously rejected this approach in a resolution that said, ''If Congress decides to expand prescription drug coverage to seniors, it should not shift that responsibility . . . to the states.'' States should not be asked to pick up the slack for Congress' failure to fill Medicare's biggest gap.

Phase Two of the Bush plan picks up where Newt Gingrich left off. Under the guise of Medicare ''reform,'' the Bush proposal relies on private insurance companies to provide Medicare benefits. Prescription drug coverage under phase two would not start until 2004. It is contingent on passage by Congress of broad Medicare changes that would create a ''premium support'' program, which would eliminate the government's obligation to contribute 75 percent of the premium for individuals enrolling in Medicare. A similar plan was estimated to raise premiums for the elderly in traditional Medicare by up to 47 percent in the first year. Bush claims that the elderly could keep their current Medicare, but many would be forced to join HMOs, because conventional Medicare would quickly become unaffordable. The Bush plan will turn many senior citizens over to the tender mercy of the private insurance industry, and force them to give up their doctors and join HMOs to have access to an affordable drug benefit.

In addition, under Governor Bush's plan, the government would subsidize only 25 percent of an undetermined premium that could vary drastically from state to state. Never in the history of Medicare have senior citizens been asked to pay such a high proportion of the cost of any benefit. According to CBO estimates for a similar plan, the Bush proposal costs so much and provides so little that it is unlikely to help even half of the senior citizens who are currently without drug coverage.

The ongoing revolution in health care makes prescription drug coverage more essential now than ever. Coverage of prescription drugs under Medicare is as essential today as was coverage of hospital and doctor care in 1965, when Medicare was enacted. Senior citizens need that help—and they need it now.

So I say to my colleagues—while we are making good on broken promises, it's long past time to cover prescription drugs under Medicare for all elderly Americans. If we can cover military retirees, we can cover other senior citizens too.

Another major achievement in this bill is the inclusion of the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Act, a gratifying breakthrough for basic fairness. These workers deserve this compensation, and it is decades overdue.

As we now know, the nuclear buildup in the Cold War years exposed many hard-working, patriotic employees in the nation's defense plants to dangerous radioactive and chemical materials at far greater levels than employers were willing to admit. Many of these workers now suffer from debilitating and fatal illnesses directly related to that exposure. For too long, the government shamefully ignored the plight of these workers and failed to accept responsibility for it.

I commend Secretary of Energy Richardson for his leadership in bringing this issue to light and dealing so effectively with this tragic chapter in our recent history. I also commend Senators THOMPSON, BINGAMAN, VOINOVICH, MCCONNELL, DEWINE, and BUNNING for their leadership and persistence in achieving this bipartisan compromise.

This workers' compensation program is based on sound science and traditional principles of workers' compensation. It is designed to make the claimants whole by paying medical benefits and compensating them for lost income due to death or disability that resulted from work for the federal government or one of its contractors. I supported giving workers the option of choosing to receive their actual lost wages, instead of a lump sum payment, and I am disappointed that the House Republicans refused to include this provision in the final bill. Despite this oversight, this new program is a substantial victory for these energy workers. They made great sacrifices for our country during the Cold War, and they have already waited too long for this relief.

Another important provision in the conference agreement is a new GAO study of the effectiveness of existing disability programs in the military health system in meeting the needs of disabled dependents. Too often, active military personnel are forced to turn to Medicaid as the only way they can get good health care for their disabled child—even though there are programs authorized under the military health system to assist disabled dependents. In some cases, choosing Medicaid makes it impossible for active duty parents to accept a military promotion—because they would earn too much money for their child to qualify for Medicaid. It is time to overhaul these programs and make them more effective, so that no military personnel have to impoverish themselves and their family in order to obtain needed health care for their disabled children.

I am pleased that this legislation also includes a provision that at long last lifts the unfair stain placed on Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and General Walter C. Short in the wake of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941. Admiral Kimmel and General Short were the Navy and Army commanders at the time of that attack. Despite loyal and distinguished service, they were unfairly scapegoated for the nation's lack of preparation for that attack and the catastrophe that took place.

They were the only two officers eligible for advancement under the 1947 Officer Personnel Act who did not receive advancement when they retired. The provision in this bill asks the President to advance them posthumously, so that now, at this late date, these two men will finally be treated fairly like their peers. This provision moves us another step forward on the path of justice and equality, and I am delighted by its inclusion.

Although the conference report makes progress on many issues, I am very disappointed that this legislation fails to take strong and needed action on the important issue of hate crimes.

Earlier this year, with the support of a broad group of law enforcement organizations, civil rights groups, and community and religious organizations, strong, bipartisan majorities in both the Senate and the House voted to include a needed anti-hate crimes provision in the defense authorization bill. By stripping the hate crimes provision from the bill in the conference, the Republican leadership has callously ignored these votes and the clear will of Congress. On hate crimes, the Republican leadership has failed the leadership test and turned its back on the need to protect all our citizens from bigotry and prejudice.

Hate crimes are a national disgrace—an attack on everything this country stands for. They send a poisonous message that some Americans are second class citizens who deserve to be victimized solely because of their race, their ethnic background, their religion, their sexual orientation, their gender or their disability. For too long, the federal government has been forced to stand on the sidelines in the fight against these senseless acts of hate and violence. If America is to live up to its founding ideals of liberty and justice for all, combating hate crimes must be a national priority.

If the national outcry is loud enough, we still have a chance to act on this issue in the remaining days of this Congress.

We also have a responsibility to address the problem of unexploded ordinance on active and formerly live-fire training facilities. On the Massachusetts Military Reservation, UXO poses a contamination threat to the soil and groundwater in the area. It is time to take action on this problem now, before it causes tragic and irreparable harm to the environment and the people who live in the area.

The conference report authorizes $8 million to develop and test new technologies to detect UXO and map the presence of their contaminants. While this is a good step, it cannot be the last step. The Department of Defense should take on the task of removing UXO from current and former training facilities. This step would ensure the continued operation of live-fire ranges and make former ranges safe for their communities and future reuse.

In addition, we must deal with the new generation of threats faced by our service members and the American public at large. As we enter the 21st century, our country is faced with new challenges from the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, the risk of terrorist attacks both at home and abroad, and cyber-warfare. This legislation takes steps to protect us from each of these dangers.

The conference report authorizes the creation of five additional Civil Support Teams, comprised of National Guard personnel specially trained to detect and respond to the suspected use of chemical, biological, radiological, or other weapons of mass destruction against cities and people.

Strong support is given to threat reduction programs to continue work with the nations of the former Soviet Union to reduce the dangers of proliferation. These steps include an additional $25 million above the President's request to eliminate strategic nuclear weapons in Russia.

The number of cyber-attacks against the Department of Defense increased dramatically last year, totaling 22,000 raids on DOD computer systems. With computers being an essential part of the command, control, communications and intelligence functions of our armed services, it is easy to see how disruptive these attacks, if successful, could be. The conference report recognizes the seriousness of this threat and creates an Institute for Defense Computer Security and Information Protection to ensure our military can protect itself from this type of threat.

The Seapower Subcommittee, under the leadership of our distinguished chair, Senator SNOWE, heard testimony over the past year on concerns about the Navy's force structure, shipbuilding rate, and the readiness of our fleet. The conference report supports the Secretary of the Navy's decision to increase research and development on DD–21 to begin the next generation of our destroyer fleet, and asks the Navy to report on the feasibility of receiving delivery of this advanced ship by 2009. But many of us are concerned about the delays that the program has already faced, as well as the effects of the delays on the fire-support requirements of the Marine Corps and on our country's shipbuilding industrial base.

The conference report authorizes the extension of the DDG–51 multi-year procurement through fiscal year 2005. The extension of this procurement will ease the strain placed on many of our shipyards, and could raise the Navy's overall shipbuilding rate to an acceptable level of nine ships for each of those years. This provision is good for the taxpayer as well, as it can save the American public almost $600 million compared to building these ships at a slower rate.

In closing, this legislation makes progress on many of the serious challenges facing our armed services, and makes important commitments to those in uniform and those who have retired from the services. I urge my colleagues to join me in voting to approve the conference report.●

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment to thank my colleagues who have worked very hard over the last several months on a proposal to compensate eligible workers in nuclear energy facilities who have been exposed to hazardous materials. Without the extraordinary effort of so many members and their staffs, including Senators THOMPSON, MCCONNELL, VOINOVICH, BINGAMAN, and KENNEDY, we would not have been able to create this compensation program. I especially appreciate the patience of Chairman WARNER and Ranking Member LEVIN for working with us on the initiative and including it in the Defense Authorization bill.

For more than 50 years, Ohio has been home to numerous facilities that performed work for the Department of Energy's nuclear programs. During the Cold War, hundreds of Ohioans, as well as thousands of Americans, were exposed to hazardous and radioactive materials as a result of their employment. Often, workers were unknowingly exposed to these materials, and if workers became ill, they had no relief. Our federal government directed, and even paid for, contractors and subcontractors to fight worker compensation cases. A worker had to prove his or her case on evidence that the government would not make available.

A little over a year ago, things began to change. Stories started appearing in the press about what workers were exposed to and how the government ignored evidence. Several Senate Committees, such as Government Affairs; Energy and Natural Resources; and Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions, have held hearings the issue of harmful exposure and proposed remedies. I believe that we have a good understanding of the problem now, as well as a solution.

However, Mr. President, we all fully understand that no level of benefits can compensate these workers for what they have endured. But we are trying to reimburse them for their financial loss. The agreement in the Defense Authorization bill provides eligible victims with a lump sum payment of $150,000, plus health care coverage.

This agreement also defines those workers who are eligible based on the latest scientific evidence on beryllium disease, beryllium sensitivity, and radiogenic cancers. Mr. President, we have created stringent guidelines to determine eligibility. However, there are instances when the administering agency will not be able to recreate an employee's radiation dose exposure. We have reversed the burden of proof for exposure to employees at the Gaseous Diffusion Plants in Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee, because their radiation exposure doses cannot be assessed.

More than likely, there will be other instances of extremely poor record keeping, where it will be nearly impossible to determine employees' radiation exposure levels. Therefore, the administering agency may propose additions to the definition of ''special cohort'' under this agreement. Once a new cohort is proposed, Congress will have one hundred eighty days to act to reverse the decision to add the cohort. If Congress fails to act within that time, the cohort will be accepted and eligible for benefits.

Eligible employees will have seven years from either the enactment of this bill or from the date on which the employee learned that his or her illness was related to work in which to apply and collect the benefits provided by this program. Like a traditional worker compensation program, compensation under this program will be an exclusive remedy to an employee for claims against the United States, its contractors, and subcontractors—but not against beryllium vendors.

The benefits under this program are completely voluntary. Eligible individuals with beryllium disease must decide whether to litigate a claim or receive the benefits provided under this plan. Individuals who currently have pending lawsuits against beryllium vendors are eligible for benefits under this plan. Those individuals have two-and-one-half years from today to decide whether to dismiss their lawsuit and accept the benefits under this plan or to continue with litigation. During that two-and-one-half year window in which litigants must decide whether or not to drop their litigation, plaintiffs may begin an eligibility review with the agency administering this program, so the plaintiff knows whether he or she is eligible for compensation under this program. Nothing in this agreement prohibits plaintiffs or the administering agency from determining whether a plaintiff is eligible under this new program, allowing them to make an informed decision whether or not to pursue litigation.

Mr. President, this is a reasonable proposal. It will help people, like Sam Ray, who worked at the Portsmouth

Gaseous Diffusion Plant in Ohio as an operator and instrument mechanic. It was there that Sam was exposed to technetium, plutonium, neptunium, and heavy metals. He has consequently developed chondrosarcoma—a rare type of bone cancer. As the medical text, Cancer Epidemiology and Prevention, by Doctors Schottenfeld and Fraumeni, points out, cancers of the bone include cancers of the cartilage, including radiosensitive cancers that originate in cartilage, such as chondrosarcoma.

Mr. President, let me conclude by thanking my colleagues once again for supporting this program. I also want to thank the many, many workers who came to Washington, DC, or to Columbus to testify on why a compensation measure is needed. They worked tirelessly with my office and other offices to get us to where we are today. They deserve a great deal of the credit for the program contained in this bill.

I thank the Chair and yield the Floor.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I rise today in support of H.R. 4205, the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001. The bill that passed today includes several amendments that significantly improve the lives of active duty and Reserve servicemembers, military retirees, veterans, and their families.

I am pleased that the conference agreement includes some key legislative provisions that I had introduced in the Senate during the course of the normal legislative process. Some of these provisions included in the conference report will: remove servicemembers from food stamps; increase pay for mid-grade Petty Officers and Non-Commissioned Officers; assist disabled veterans in claims processing; expand pay benefits to some disabled military retirees; authorize a low cost life insurance plan for spouses and their children; enhance benefits and retirement pay for Reservists and National Guardsmen; authorize back pay for certain World War II Navy and Marine Corps Prisoners of War; and provide for significant acquisition reform by eliminating domestic source restrictions on the procurement of shipyard cranes.

One of the areas of greatest concern to me, however, regarding military retirees and their families is the broken promise of lifetime medical care, especially for those over age 65. Last year, the Joint Chiefs proclaimed that this would be the year for major health care reform for our military forces, especially our medicare-eligible military retirees who were promised lifetime military medical care. Despite the assurances of the Joint Chiefs, the President proposed a fiscal year 2001 defense budget without any major medical care reforms, and all but ignored those military retirees who are older and in greatest need of health care.

The Republican Congress, however, responded to military retirees' needs and provided several major military health care reforms as well as a plan in this year's bill to provide all Medicare-eligible military retirees, family members, and survivors with lifetime military health care coverage, including full pharmacy benefits in military, retail, and mail order pharmacies. This conference report will establish ''TRICARE-for-life'' as a permanent entitlement that will be funded through a ''Military Retirees Health Care Trust Fund,'' a legislative provision adopted from S.2013, a military health care reform bill that I introduced earlier this year. This new, critical lifetime benefit will mean huge savings for military retirees by eliminating the need for them to buy expensive Medicare supplemental policies.

Separately, with severe recruitment and retention problems still looming, we must also better compensate our mid-grade enlisted servicemembers who are critical to leading the junior enlisted force. We have significantly underpaid enlisted servicemembers since the beginning of the All Volunteer Force. The value of the mid-grade NCO pay, compared to that of the most junior enlisted, has dropped 50 percent since the All Volunteer Force was put in place by Congress in 1973. The provision for the mid-grade enlisted ranks, up to $700 per year, plus the food stamp pay provision of up to an additional $500 per month for servicemembers, provides a significant increase in pay for enlisted servicemembers.

In addition, the National Guard and Reserves have become a larger percentage of the Total Force and are essential partners in a wide range of military operations. Due to the higher deployment rates of the active duty forces, the Reserve Components are being called upon more frequently and for longer periods of time than ever before. We must stop treating them like a second class force. It is tremendously important that we enact meaningful improvements for both our active duty and Reserve service-members, their families, and their survivors. They risk their lives to protect our freedom and preserve democracy. We should compensate them adequately, improve the benefits to their families and survivors, and enhance the quality of life for the Reserves and National Guard in a manner similar to the active forces.

This bill goes far in correcting some of the inconsistencies, with regard to Reserve Component policies, that previously only benefited the active duty components. Additionally, in order to ensure that reservists receive full credit for the time and effort they commit to attending drills, performing annual training, and completing correspondence courses, the conference report increased from 70 to 90 the maximum number of days per year that reservists may accrue as credit towards retirement benefits.

Each year the number of disabled veterans appealing their health care cases continues to increase. Furthermore, it takes an average of 275 days to get some sort of reply from the Department of Veterans Affairs' regarding claims filing. Disabled veterans are forced to leave the service because of their disabilities. It is Congress's duty to ensure that the disability claims process is less complex, less burdensome, and much more efficient. I am pleased that the final conference agreement includes legislation necessary to fully restore the Department of Veterans Affairs' duty to ensure efficient and timely veterans claims processing and remove onerous court-imposed procedures.

I commend the conference leaders for including some minimal improvements to the egregious regulations that strip retirement pay from military retirees who are also disabled, and cost them any realistic opportunity for post-service earnings. We should do more to restore retirement pay for those military retirees who are disabled. With respect to concurrent receipt, clearly, retirees who have incurred significant disabilities over the course of a military career deserve better than how they are treated currently.

Many such servicemembers are compelled to forfeit their full-retired pay under current rules. I have stated before on the Senate floor, and I am compelled to reiterate now, retirement pay and disability pay are two distinct types of pay. Retirement pay is for service rendered through 20 years of military service. Disability pay is for physical or mental pain or suffering that occurs during and as a result of military service. In this case, members with decades of military service receive the same compensation as similarly disabled members who served only a few years—with no recognition at all for their extended, clearly more demanding careers of service to our country. This is patently unfair and even more must be done to correct this problem.

I would also like to point out that this year's defense authorization bill contained over $2 billion in unrequested add-ons to the defense budget that will rob our military of vital funding on priority issues. While this year's total is less than in previous years, and is far less than the $7 billion in the defense appropriations bill, it is still $2 billion too much. We need to, and can do, better. I ask that the detailed list of pork on this bill be included in the Congressional RECORD following my remarks.

I have to wonder, Mr. President, about the wisdom of permitting the Navy to potentially violate public law with respect to the status of the last two battleships, the only current means of providing high-volume gunfire support for land forces ashore, while simultaneously continuing to provide millions of dollars from the defense budget for the recovery and preservation of Civil War vessels.

Over the past six years, Congress has increased the President's defense budgets by nearly $60 billion in order to address the military services' most important unfunded priorities. Still, it is sufficient to say that the military needs less money spent on pork and more money spent wisely to redress the serious problems caused by a decade of declining defense budgets. Those of us who have been criticized for sounding alarm bells about military readiness now have the empty satisfaction of seeing that there is more to maintaining a strong defense than a politician's history of falsely promising to do so.

We also must reform the bureaucracy of the Pentagon. With the exception of minor changes, our defense establishment looks just as it did 50 years ago. We must continue to incorporate practices from the private sector—like restructuring, reforming, and streamlining to eliminate duplication and capitalize on cost savings.

More effort must be made to reduce the continuing growth of headquarter staffs and to decentralize the Pentagon's labyrinth of bureaucratic fiefdoms. Although nearly every military analyst shares these views, the conference agreement took great measures to increase the size of headquarter staffs, thereby eliminating any incentive for the Pentagon to change its way of doing business with its bloated staffs and its outdated practices.

In addition, more must be done to eliminate unnecessary and duplicative military contracts and military installations. Every U.S. military leader has testified regarding the critical need for further BRAC rounds. We can redirect at least $3 billion per year by eliminating excess defense infrastructure. There is another $2 billion per year that we can put to better purposes by privatizing or consolidating support and maintenance functions, and an additional $5 billion can be saved per year by eliminating ''Buy America'' restrictions that only undermine U.S. competitiveness overseas. Despite these compelling facts, the conference agreement did not address any of these critical issues. On the contrary, it includes several provisions that move demonstratively in the opposite direction.

Sections designed to preserve Army depots and funnel work in their direction irrespective of cost are examples of the old philosophy of protecting home-town jobs at the expense of greater efficiencies. And calling plants and depots ''Centers of Excellence'' does not, Mr. President, constitute an appropriate approach to depot maintenance and manufacturing activities. Consequently, neither the Center of Industrial and Technical Excellence nor the Center of Excellence in Service Contracting provide adequate cloaks for the kind of protectionist and parochial budgeting endemic to the legislating process. Similarly, whether the Centers of Academic Excellence in Information Assurance Education is worthy of the $15 million earmarked in the budget is open to debate.

The Defense Appropriations bill, already signed into law, included a provision statutorily renaming National Guard armories as ''Readiness Centers,'' a particularly Orwellian use of language. By statutorily relabeling ''depot-level activities'' as ''operations at Centers of Industrial and Technical Excellence,'' we further institutionalize this dubious practice, the implications of which are to deny the American public the most cost-effective use of its tax dollars.

In conclusion, I would like to reiterate my belief in the importance of enacting meaningful improvements for active duty and Reserve servicemembers. They risk their lives to defend our shores and preserve democracy, and we can not thank them enough for their service. But, we can and should pay them more, improve the benefits for their families, and support the Reserve Components in a manner similar to the active forces. Our servicemembers past, present, and future need these improvements. However, we can not continue with this ''business as usual'' mindset. We must reform the Department of Defense and we must not fall prey to the special interest groups that attempt to warp our perspective and misdirect our spending. We owe so much more to our men and women in uniform who defend our country. They are our greatest resource, and I feel they are woefully under-represented. We must continue to do better.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the attached list of items added to the defense authorization bill by Congress be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I rise today to express my profound disappointment that the Conference Report to the Fiscal Year 2001 Department of Defense Authorization bill does not contain language that was in the Senate passed bill to expand Federal jurisdiction in investigating hate crimes.

The language in the Senate passed bill was adopted by the Senate on June 20th by a vote of 57–42, and endorsed in the House on September 13th by a vote of 232–190. This language would expand Federal jurisdiction in investigating hate crimes by removing the requirement in Federal hate crime law that only allows federal prosecution if the perpetrator is interfering with a victim's federally protected right like voting or attending school. It would also extend the protection of current hate crime law to those who are victimized because of their gender, sexual orientation, or disability.

Mr. President, any crime hurts our society, but crimes motivated by hate are especially harmful. Many states, including my state of Vermont, have already passed strong hate crimes laws, and I applaud them in this endeavor. An important principle of the amendment that was in the Senate-passed bill was that it allowed for Federal prosecution of hate crimes without impeding the rights of states to prosecute these crimes.

The adoption of this amendment by the Senate was an important step forward in ensuring that the perpetrators of these harmful crimes are brought to justice. The American public knows that Congress should pass this legislation, and it is unfortunate that the conferees did not retain this important language.

Congress should pass this legislation, and I will continue to work to ensure that this legislation is enacted into law.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, as the Senate completes action on this important legislation, I want to again congratulate the chairman of the Committee, Senator WARNER, for his leadership and determination in completing this important bill.

I also want to thank and congratulate all of the members of the Armed Services Committee for their hard work on this bill over the past year. The subcommittee chairpersons and ranking members carried the brunt of the workload in conference, but the fact is that every member of the committee played an active and constructive role in this legislation, from the committee and subcommittee hearings in the spring to the committee markup, to floor action and finally in conference.

Finally, Mr. President, I want to say a special word of thanks to the staff of the Armed Services Committee. The majority staff under the capable leadership of Les Brownlee works very cooperatively with the minority staff under David Lyles. The Committee's long tradition of bipartisanship among the members extends to the staff as well. They truly work together as a single team for the benefit of the men and women of the armed forces and for the national security of our nation.

In addition to David Lyles, I want to thank all of the members of the Armed Services Committee minority staff for their efforts this year: Peter Levine, Rick DeBobes; Richard Fieldhouse;

Creighton Greene; Mike McCord; Gary Leeling; Dan Cox; Chris Cowart; and Jan Gordon. I also want to recognize the efforts of the associate staff members of all of the Democratic members of the committee for their efforts this year.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today to express my gratitude to Chairman WARNER and Senator LEVIN for bringing to the Senate a strong Defense Authorization conference report. While I have long had the greatest respect for my friends from Virginia and Michigan, the task they complete today is a testament to their legislative skill, managerial expertise and leadership. Over the last year—and for many years—Senators WARNER and LEVIN have listened to our troops needs, and the needs of our troops' families. They have listened to our commanders and identified the equipment and modernization requirements needed to carry out the missions we, as a nation, expect of our military. They have listened to their colleagues, literally working through hundreds of amendments and incorporating many of them into this conference report. And today we consider a conference report which reflects all these influences and effectively balances the current national security requirements of our country with an eye toward the future needs of our military.

Broadly speaking, the Defense Authorization report we adopt today properly places the fighting men and women of this country at the heart of our military priorities. It increases pay, extends special pay and bonus programs to facilitate troop retention and it begins to address the housing, health care and educational needs of troops and their families. In addition this report extends retirement benefits including, most notably, the TRICARE-for-life program which will provide a prescription drug benefit and reduce out-of-pocket medical expenses for our Medicare-eligible military retirees—making a lifetime health care commitment to our fighting men and women. Taken as a whole, this report is a significant step in the right direction.

This conference agreement will ensure that the United States remains the world's preeminent superpower well into the 21st century. The report authorizes $38.9 billion for research, development, training and evaluation, including $4.8 billion for Ballistic Missile Defense, ensuring that we remain the most technologically advanced fighting force in the world and enabling our country to pursue a policy that will provide the greatest level of security in an ever-changing global environment.

I am proud of the central role Connecticut has earned when it comes to providing the men and women of our armed forces with the cutting edge in military equipment. I feel this conference report reflects that continued preeminence.

As many of my colleagues are aware, today is the 100th anniversary of the commissioning of the U.S.S. Holland, the United States Navy's first submarine. Today we mark 100 years of submarine operations by the United States Navy. I feel it is altogether appropriate that the Congress christen the next 100 years of submarine operations with a 21st century new attack submarine, the Virginia Class. It will be the most capable and most cost effective submarine class ever built.

Therefore, I commend the conferees for recognizing the growing need for, and expanding role of, our submarine force by authorizing the block buy of five New Attack Submarines, including $1.7 billion in fiscal year 2001 for a new Virginia Class submarine. I am proud to have the U.S.S. Virginia, the first of its class, taking shape in Connecticut today. The commitment we make here today will continue this essential program for years to come.

It is also encouraging that further planning and study for another innovative program, the conversion of four Trident submarines into guided missile submarines, remains a national priority, having been authorized for $37 million.

Further, in response to a force level requirement report produced earlier this year by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, this conference report requires the Secretary of Defense to report to Congress on how our country might maintain at least 55 fast attack submarines through 2015. I fully support this initiative.

The H–60 helicopter platform is once again recognized in this report for its unique versatility and combat-proven track record of survivability and performance. The agreement authorizes $206 million for 16 UH–60Ls and two UH–60Qs, and $280 million for 17 CH–60s. With respect to the demonstrated need of our armed forces, this authorization level represents an appropriate increase over the 21 helicopters requested by the Administration.

The conference agreement also authorizes $310 million for F–15 engine upgrades and $305 million for F–16 engine upgrades. This will extend the life and improve the performance of these vital air supremacy assets.

The New London Submarine Base is authorized to receive $3.1 million for much needed dry-dock construction which will enhance the base's ability to service and maintain our fighting force.

I might also mention a number of other authorizations which are contained in this conference report, including for the C–17 cargo aircraft program, the JPATS program, the Joint STARS ground surveillance aircraft program, the Comanche helicopter development program, the F–22 fighter engineering and development program and the ongoing, but slowed, Joint Strike Fighter development. All of these important national security priorities will draw upon the ingenuity and strength of the citizens of Connecticut.

I would also like to note the language in this conference report that will convey the national defense reserve fleet vessel Glacier to the Glacier Society of Bridgeport. The ship will be refurbished and docked in Bridgeport Harbor, becoming a museum to educate students and the general public about military service and the exploration of the North and South Poles. One of only a few ships to have served under both the U.S. Navy and the Coast Guard, the icebreaker Glacier made 39 trips to the North and South poles, including the deepest penetration of the of the Antarctic by sea in 1961. The Glacier will become a valuable civic asset for Bridgeport, and I am pleased to see the inclusion of this provision in the report.

And finally, I would like to take a moment to comment about one last provision. Senator DEWINE and I worked on the Firefighter Investment and Response Enhancement, FIRE, Act, which was designed to help reduce injuries among firefighters across the country. The original House version of the bill had previously been introduced by Congressman BILL PASCRELL, Jr. of New Jersey. Senator DEWINE and I worked hard to move the FIRE Act and we were pleased when Chairman WARNER and Senator LEVIN agreed to accept the FIRE Act as an amendment to the DOD Authorization bill.

Our original amendment has been modified by the Conference Committee, but the FIRE provision offered here today as part of this Conference Report authorizes more than $460 million dollars worth of federal assistance to local fire departments and for related research. This legislation represents a major step in developing an effective partnership between the Federal government and the men and women who every day put their lives on the line to protect Americans from all sorts of man-made and natural disasters.

The FIRE Act, is designed to provide local fire departments with the resources they need to keep firefighter safe and to protect the public. The bill is modeled on the very successful ''COPS'' program, which has helped towns and cities hire tens of thousands of police officers and to buy equipment to protect lives and property from crime. Now, under the FIRE Act the federal government will make a similar commitment to help protect lives and property from the ravages of fire, chemical spills, accidents, and natural disasters.

Each day, a million U.S. firefighters put their lives on the line to protect our families, our homes, and our businesses. Unfortunately, under the current funding regime, these unselfish men and women aren't always as well-equipped as they should be.

And in many ways the problems are getting worse. As our population grows, as our buildings and infrastructure age, as our suburbs expand and our highways and waterways become more congested, our firefighters and emergency medical technicians are being asked to respond to an increasing number and variety of dangerous situations.

There is a bright side, as well. Technology has kept pace with the increasing demands. We now have high-tech equipment, like thermal-imaging devices, that allow firefighters to see inside a building without going into the blaze. And modern science has produced incredible materials that can be integrated into protective gear that can shield firefighters from heat and falling debris. Unfortunately, technology is not cheap. And local governments are seldom able to fund the purchase of all of the wonderful tools becoming available.

There is a gap—a widening gap—between the leading edge of modern technology and our ability to put that technology to work to protect the public and our firefighters. I believe the Federal Government has an obligation to bridge the gap and help ensure that local firefighters have the financial resources they need to protect the public.

We can't eliminate all of the dangers that confront firefighters, but we can at least ensure that our local fire companies have up-to-date, safe and reliable equipment and today we are doing something about the problem.

By passing the FIRE Act today, Congress is saying to every firefighter in America: ''We have taken you for granted for too long. We won't ignore your needs any longer. We stand with you and we are committed to working together to ensure that America is as safe and as prepared for any catastrophe as it can be.''

Passage of the FIRE Act has been one of my highest legislative priorities this year. I want to thank Senator WARNER, Senator LEVIN, and Senator MCCAIN, Senator HOLLINGS, and, of course, Senator DEWINE for their vigilance and commitment on this most important issue. I also want to thank the experts at the National Safe Kids Campaign, International Association of Fire Fighters, International Association of Fire Chiefs, National Volunteer Fire Council, International Association of Arson Investigators, International Society of Fire Service Instructors, the National Fire Protection Association, and The Safety Equipment Association for all of the assistance and insight they have provided over the course of the last year.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, today's final passage of the Defense Authorization Conference Report is a significant achievement. It fulfills past commitments, provides the necessary funds for our present obligations, and makes significant investments toward a secure future. I want to commend Senator WARNER and Senator LEVIN for the tremendous job they have done providing for our national defense. This bill authorizes $310 billion for the Department of Defense and the Department of Energy's defense related activities. This is $4.5 billion more than requested by President Clinton, and represents the first real increase in defense spending in 14 years.

One provision in the Defense Authorization bill of particular importance to the people of Missouri is that of military retiree health care. For generations, our military's career men and women have dedicated their lives to the protection of freedom and prosperity in America. One of the promises this country made to these men and women was a pledge that career members of the Armed Forces, their spouses, and dependents would have health care benefits on active duty and in retirement. While these benefits were not authorized by Congress, they were promised by the United States government, specifically, by the Department of Defense and its recruiters. Promises made need to be kept. Career members of the Armed Forces acted in good faith and relied on the statements of their government's representatives.

Mr. President, until recently, military retirees were provided with health care in military facilities here and abroad. However, due to major changes in the military health care program, multiple base closings, and a risky downsizing of the military by the current Administration, too many military retirees have been shut out of military facilities. Many have sought Medicare coverage or private insurance, or have been forced to do without access to care. In Missouri, where we have 76,439 military retirees, retiree family members, and survivors, this is a significant problem. Although we are fortunate to have Fort Leonard Wood and Whiteman Air Force Base close at hand in Missouri, and Scott Air Force Base in Illinois and Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, both nearby, many military retirees in Missouri have told me that it is virtually impossible to get an appointment at these bases for a routine physical, let alone for critical care. It is clear that Washington is not keeping its promise to these patriotic men and women.

Through the strong and dedicated leadership of Senator WARNER, America's military retirees will again have access to quality health care, as promised. This Defense authorization bill includes a provision to expand the popular TRICARE Senior Prime demonstration project. It eliminates the current restrictions that require military retirees to lose their military health care benefits under the CHAMPUS and TRICARE programs after they reach age 65 and become eligible for Medicare. Military retirees will not be able to receive TRICARE Senior Prime, or ''TRICARE-for-life''—an HMO-type coverage plan for retirees that includes partial payment of the costs from Medicare. This program will finally ensure that all military retirees have access to quality health care throughout their life. This bill will also establish a military health care trust fund to ensure that retiree health care remains solvent for years to come. This valuable retiree health care provision is endorsed by most of the major veteran and military retiree organizations, and I support its inclusion in this legislation.

In addition to ''TRICARE-for-life,'' the Defense Authorization bill also extends to military retirees access to prescription drugs, by restoring the full DoD Prescription drug benefit, including mail order and retail pharmacy, to all Medicare-eligible uniformed services beneficiaries.

These break-through provisions for military retirees are not the only important provisions of the Defense Authorization bill. This bill includes several critical active-duty provisions including measures to bring our military families off the food-stamp roles, provide a well-deserved 3.7% pay increase, and eliminates the statutory requirement that service-members incur out-of-pocket housing costs, thus permitting the Deputy of Defense to increase housing allowances immediately. This will eliminate out-of-pocket cost for housing by October 1, 2004.

This bill also makes significant progress towards ensuring a strong defense for our country in the years to come. The legislation includes authorizations for additional F–15s and a new Extended-Range Cruise Missiles, as well as provides $63 billion dollars for other new weapons procurements. Furthermore, the bill provides an additional $1 billion in funding for key readiness accounts. These amounts are necessary to ensure our military is not only ready to fight today, but will remain ready for any challenges our country may face in the future.

Again, I want to thank Senator WARNER for his leadership in the area of national defense. I urge the Senate to support this bill, and to support our men and women in uniform, especially those who gave their lives in service today on the U.S.S. Cole, in far away Yemen. We extend our thoughts and prayers to their families and friends.

MIDDLE EAST CRISIS

A COUNTRY UNITED

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I want to take 5 minutes at this time to speak on the events occurring in the world today.

I stand here with the melancholy that any Senator would feel as a result of the loss of lives of our U.S. military men and women due to a despicable act of terrorism.

I say to the terrorists: You underestimate the United States. Right now we are in an orderly constitutional process to begin the transition of the executive branch to a new leader. Do not think because we are beginning a transition that we are weak.

I say to the terrorists anywhere in the world: When any American is under attack, all Americans are under attack. We will check our party hats at the door. We will be united as one nation. I believe the Congress and the American people will stand as one behind President Clinton to aggressively pursue and punish the terrorists who have engaged in this despicable act. You might have gotten away with this one, but do not think again about the next hour, the next day, or the next week. The United States of America is coming after you, and we are all together on this.

In addition, to our friends in the Middle East: We are deeply troubled by the violence that is ongoing. A peace agreement was within reach. Indeed, it was fragile. We say now, please, take a timeout, end the violence, let's step back to see if we cannot come forward under the leadership of the United States as an honest broker to move ahead. We are plunging into chaos. Chaos only means further retreat. It means that maybe for years violence will continue.

We say: Please, Mr. Arafat, do not work behind the scenes; work on the front lines; end your violence.

To the people of Israel: We know that the first act is the act of self-defense. We understand that. It is human. Please, we ask restraint, and we ask all to come back to the bargaining table. Let's put down the stones. Let's put down the guns. Let's see if we can move forward.

I come back to what has occurred on the Senate floor today. I say to people around the world: This is democracy. Good people who have been good friends differ. We can conduct ourselves with civility. We can have intellectual arguments. We can quote our lawyers and our National Academy of Sciences, and so on. Ultimately, the Congress will work its will. This is democracy. We invite the whole world to participate in it. War only leads to more war. Violence only leads to more violence. But democracy leads to more democracy, and democracy means ultimately peace and prosperity.

We invite the world: Please, constitutional governments, treaties, rules of law are what this 21st century should be all about.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished colleague for her very eloquent statement. I know she and others and all of us extend our deepest sympathies to the families, the loved ones of those sailors who were killed in the cowardly act in the Gulf of Aden today. The cause of peace and international security is one that is worth a major effort, and it is not without sacrifices, as we saw today.

I share the concerns and I share the strong commitment that we shall do everything in our power to identify the people behind this cowardly deed and take appropriate responsive action. We do not intend as a democracy committed to freedom and human rights to be deterred from our continuing efforts by these acts of terrorism. These do nothing but bring sorrow and heartache to the families and loved ones left behind, and they strengthen the will of the rest of us to say that we will not bow to the terrorists acts. They will not deter us. They only strengthen us not only in our prayers for those who have given the ultimate sacrifice but in our commitment to ensure it does not deter our activities.

A TRAGIC ACT OF TERRORISM ON THE U.S.S. COLE

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, we are all now aware of a terrible tragedy, an act of despicable terrorism has taken place on the U.S.S. Cole and American lives have been lost.

All of us are appalled. On behalf of all of us, our thoughts and prayers go out to the family members of those on the U.S.S. Cole. We hope we can get all the information as quickly as possible.

The United States has the ability to find out who perpetrated this outrage. We will find those people. There will be a heavy price to pay. We cannot allow these kinds of acts of terror to take place. I am confident the President of the United States will ascertain who these individuals and organizations are, and the heaviest price must be paid for this outrage. In the meantime, our thoughts, hopes, and prayers go out to those who were injured, those missing in action, and those killed in this tragedy.

TERRORISM

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, first, let me concur with the remarks of my colleague, Senator MCCAIN. I join him in expressing concern for those families who have lost Americans in connection with the terrorist attack on the U.S.S. Cole.

I call upon my colleagues who are holding up my antiterrorism legislation to stop holding up this important piece of legislation and allow us to get it passed this year and sent to the President for his signature. The National Terrorism Commission made some very important recommendations about how we should deal with terrorists attacks, and the only response has been the legislation that Senator FEINSTEIN and I have proposed. I hope those who are holding this legislation as a result of this attack will recognize we can't wait for the next terrorism attack. We need to act now.

MIDDLE EAST TENSIONS

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, my heart is so heavy this morning as we learn of the increasing tensions in the Middle East.

I join my friend from Arizona, Senator KYL, in expressing our condolences to those American families who are grieving at the loss of their children by an unprovoked attack on one of our ships off the coast of Yemen. We are not exactly sure who did this. We suspect that it was terrorism.

But, as Senator MCCAIN said on one of the shows this morning as I listened to him, we will find out, and we will respond. The world should make no mistake about that.

This morning I also want to call on Yasser Arafat to take control of the situation in the Middle East. There has been an incident where four Israeli soldiers were in Ramallah—the Israelis say that they had taken a wrong turn. They certainly weren't provoking anything. They were captured, and taken to the Palestinian authorities and to a detention center. Then a mob overtook the center and killed at least two of them. The reports vary. One report I heard said there was a lynching. I don't know that is accurate, but one report said that. You have now no rule of law. It is very difficult to negotiate a peace agreement when there is no rule of law on one side of the equation.

I had been closely following this. I was very hopeful yesterday. Things looked as if they were going in a better direction. The word was that Yasser Arafat was, in fact, calming his people down. But it is time for him to do this now publicly. It is one thing to quietly work behind the scenes; it is another thing to come out publicly and say enough of mob rule.

As I say, I come here with a very heavy heart, but always hopeful that the goodness in people will overcome everything else.

My heart is with the American families who will be grieving. My heart is with all the families in the Middle East who are suffering so much.

I believe Dwight Eisenhower once said—I may stand corrected—that people want peace so much that one of these days governments had better get out of the way and let them have it. I think people want peace. The vast majority of people want peace. How tragic it is that we can't seem to grasp that.

I praise President Clinton and Vice President GORE for doing everything they can. I give them my best. I offer myself as someone who will do what I can. I am on the Foreign Relations Committee. This is an area that we know is always a tinderbox. Yet we have faith that the peace process can get back on track.

BREAKDOWN OF CAMP DAVID PEACE PROPOSALS

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, the news from the Middle East is deeply painful to all who pray for the peace of Jerusalem. Three months ago at Camp David the State of Israel offered the Palestine Authority unprecedented concessions in an effort to end the cycle of violence and hatred. The rejection of these proposals has tragically led to the loss of numerous lives and the resumption of the cycle of violence and hatred. Our Government must tell the Palestinian leadership that the destruction of holy sites and mob violence have no place in civilized society.

EVENTS IN THE MIDDLE EAST

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise to offer my sincere condolences to the families of the U.S. Navy personnel killed in what appears to have been a terrorist attack on the U.S.S. Cole, and to express my outrage at this cowardly act of murder. This deplorable incident is a tragic reminder of the risk and sacrifice assumed by all of our men and women in uniform, and by their families. I know that the administration will be using all of the resources at its disposal to discern who is responsible for the attack, and that the U.S. will resolutely take appropriate action in response to this incident.

My certainty about that last point is based on a simple and irrefutable truth. No country would stand by while its soldiers and sailors are targeted and killed. The U.S. will certainly not stand for it and will not be intimidated in the wake of the cowardly attack on the Cole. By the same token, it should surprise no one that Israel retaliated in response to the brutal murder of Israeli soldiers at the hands of a mob in Ramallah.

But as difficult as it is, as raw as emotions are right now, we cannot afford to lose sight of one fundamental fact. All of us—we Americans, the rest of the international community, the Israelis and the Palestinians—know that there is no military solution to the terribly difficult issues that have made the Middle East a region of tension and violence for far too long. In recent days the promise of peace has been obscured by terrible violence in Jerusalem and elsewhere. Nearly 100 lives have been lost, including the lives of children. For the Israeli and Palestinian children who remain, in the name of providing them a future free from these horrors, I hope that the Israeli and Palestinian people will find the courage and the strength to stop the violence, and that they will find their way back on a path toward peace.

SITUATION IN ISRAEL

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, the United States commitment to Israel is strong. It has stood the test of time, and has only strengthened. It is strong because it is grounded in our shared principles of freedom and democracy. It is also strong because we respect and appreciate Israel's commitment to preserve and protect those religious sites considered by all people of the world to be holy.

I am very disturbed over recent events in the Middle East. America's response to Israel must be clear and reflect our total support. What we are witnessing is not, as it is often called, an ''outbreak of violence.'' What we are witnessing is a concerted attack against Israel; and this is occurring on the heels of the Israeli government taking the most conciliatory stance ever toward the Palestinians.

After the Camp David summit, President Clinton correctly blamed Palestinian Authority Chairman Yassir Arafat for rejecting the compromises that Israel was willing to consider. Since Camp David, Arafat has compounded his rejection of peace proposals with an embrace of violence. The United States must maintain its pressure on Arafat and the Palestinian leadership, and avoid retreating into the moral swamp of ''evenhandedness.'' We must stand with Israel.

I am deeply disappointed in the shameful U.S. abstention on a UN Security Council resolution that our own ambassador called ''unbalanced, biased, and really a lousy piece of work.''

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Jerusalem Post editorial of October 10, 2000 be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Jerusalem Post News & Feature Service, Oct. 10, 2000]

BETRAYAL AT THE U.N.

(Editorial)

The United States made a grave mistake in failing to veto what Secretary of State Madeleine Albright called a ''one-sided'' U.N. Security Council resolution condemning Israel. The U.S. abstention was a mistake, despite the three seemingly cogent arguments used to explain it: that a worse resolution was blocked, that Israel was consulted all along, and that ''U.S. interests'' dictated the move.

The U.N. resolution deplored ''the provocation carried out at al-Haram al-Sharif in Jerusalem on 28 September 2000, and the subsequent violence there and at other holy places, as well as in other areas throughout the territories occupied by Israel since 1967, resulting in over 80 Palestinian deaths and many other casualties.'' The resolution, which passed 14 to 0 with the U.S. abstaining, also condemned ''acts of violence, especially the excessive use of force against Palestinians.'' An innocent observer reading the resolution might reasonably conclude the Palestinians were quietly minding their own business when, out of the blue, Israeli forces decided to throw seven years of talks out the window and attack their negotiating partners. The opposite is the case.

After weeks of official Palestinian broadcasts encouraging violence and lionizing martyrs, and after attacks against Israelis in which both soldiers and civilians were killed, Yasser Arafat took advantage of Likud leader Ariel Sharon's visit to the Temple Mount to turn the flames on full burner.

In any case, the twisted nature of the resolution is not at issue—U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Richard Holbrooke called it ''unbalanced, biased, and really a lousy piece of work.'' This recognition begs the question, which was leveled at Albright and Holbrooke repeatedly over the weekend: If the resolution was so lousy, why did the U.S. not exercise its right to veto?

Standard answer No. 1—that a worse resolution was blocked—does not wash, because it is a truism. The Arab lobby at the United Nations always asks for the moon, in the hopes of passing a slightly less outrageous version after negotiations. According to Holbrooke, the U.S. would have vetoed an ''operational'' resolution, but it could oppose what was watered down to ''just empty rhetoric.'' Far from ''empty,'' the Security Council resolution was exactly what Arafat needed: an international judgment saddling the blame for his attack against Israel squarely on Israel's shoulders. Now the international commission of inquiry that Arafat fought for in Paris is redundant. The inquiry is over and the verdict is in: Israel is guilty.

The next line of defense used by Albright and Holbrooke was that Israel was closely consulted and ''understood'' the U.S. position. That the Israeli government ''understood'' this failure of American will and judgment is itself unfortunate, but in no way excuses U.S. behavior.

Having taken every ''risk for peace'' expected by the U.S. and more, Israel is now a victim of U.S. weakness, even betrayal. As a tactical matter, Israel may have had to choose its battles with the U.S., and therefore decided not to more openly resist the U.S. position. But an Israel under siege should not have been forced into giving the U.S. a pass in the Security Council, one of the few arenas where the U.S. has a decisive voice.

Albright argues that ''our role in the Middle East is to try to be the negotiator, the mediator, the honest broker.'' Could Albright mean that the U.S. must be an 'honest broker' in the face of a wholesale attack by the party that has rejected their peace proposals on the party that accepted them? An ''honest broker'' that cannot differentiate between aggressor and victim is not doing the peace process any favors. An ''honest broker'' role makes sense in the context of negotiations, not when the negotiating track has been unilaterally tossed out the window by one party.

Finally, Albright alludes to America's ''larger responsibilities within the whole region''' in explaining the U.S. abstention. This is veiled allusion to the risk of riots against American embassies and relations with the Arab world, but again the logic is backwards and dangerous.

A U.S. veto would have signaled to Arafat and the Arab world that this round of blaming the victim is over. Now Arafat, Hizbullah, Saddam Hussein (who just called again for Israel's destruction), and anyone else who wants to jump on the absurd bandwagon that Israel is threatening al-Aksa Mosque can see that Israel's great ally, the United States, is unwilling to come to her defense. This can only be bad for Israel, bad for the United States, and bad for peace.

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, we must speak the truth and stand on principle, so that Arafat cannot continue blaming Israel for the completely unjustified attack that he initiated. There is a word for a policy of rewarding violence, and that word is ''appeasement.''

Appeasement is not just wrong; it also does not work. Events of recent days have led many Israelis to conclude that their government's generosity toward the Palestinians has—far from being reciprocated—been taken as weakness and invited the beating of war drums against Israel throughout the Arab world.

As Israel begins to rethink its course, the United States must not push Israel towards appeasement. We must help Israel find the strength to stand up to aggression and continue the principled fight for justice.

As citizens of a democracy that desperately wants peace, Israelis are as pained as anyone by the heart-wrenching pictures of Palestinian children caught in the crossfire. Israel can be counted on to search its soul as to whether she could have defended herself and claimed fewer Palestinian casualties. The result of such an inquiry, however, will not shift the overarching burden of responsibility from the party that chose to abandon the negotiating table and open a shooting war—Palestinian leader Yassir Arafat.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the article by Natan Sharansky in today's Washington Post appear in the RECORD immediately following my statement.

Now is the time for us to publicly reaffirm our commitment to the freedom-seeking people of Israel. During Israel's time of need, we know that they will make the right choices—take the right actions for peace with freedom. And we will stand with Israel.

AFRAID OF THE TRUTH

(By Natan Sharansky)

JERUSALEM.—Nearly 20 years ago, confined to an eight-by-ten cell in a prison on the border of Siberia, I was granted by my Soviet jailers the ''privilege'' of reading the latest copy of Pravda, official mouthpiece of the Communist regime. Splashed across the front page was a condemnation of Ronald Reagan for having the temerity to call the Soviet Union an ''evil empire.''

Tapping on walls and talking through toilets, prisoners quickly spread the word of Reagan's ''provocation'' throughout the prison. The dissidents were ecstatic. Finally, the leader of the free world had spoken the truth—a truth that burned inside the heart of each and every one of us.

For decades, with few exceptions, the moral authority of the Soviet Union had rarely been challenged. Some, particularly those who saw in communism's egalitarian ideals the antidote to all the ills of capitalism and democracy, were simply duped by a totalitarian society that could so easily manipulate the picture it presented to the outside world.

But sadly, most were not blind to the truth—they were just frightened by it. They understood what the Soviet Union represented but, knowing the price of confrontation, preferred to close their eyes to it.

Rationalizing their cowardice with morally comforting words such as ''peace'' and ''coexistence,'' they pursued the path of appeasement.

Today the nations of the free world also prefer to close their eyes to the truth in the Middle East in general and the Arab-Israeli conflict in particular. While in practice the Arab states do not pose the threat of a belligerent superpower, the West's attitude toward these authoritarian regimes is all too familiar. Some, who see Palestinian stone throwers as David to Israel's Goliath, are again duped by the manipulations of a brutal dictator who sends children to the front lines to achieve through tragedy what he cannot achieve through diplomacy.

But most people are not so easily duped. They simply choose to blindfold themselves rather than confront a discomforting truth. Instead of pressuring Arab tyrants to free their own peoples from the yoke of oppression, the West prefers to view them as a ''stabilizing'' force.

When the peace process began, Israel and the West had a remarkable opportunity to use their influence to ensure that the emerging Palestinian society could evolve into a liberal, democratic state. Instead they spent the better part of 10 years subsidizing tyranny.

The goal was to strengthen Yasser Arafat and his PLO, supposedly a force for modernization and compromise. With his 40,000-man armed police force, Arafat was supposed to serve as Israel's proxy in the war on terror, and would do it, as the late prime minister Yitzhak Rabin said, ''without a Supreme Court, without human rights organizations and without bleeding-heart liberals.''

This policy, support by the West, was not designed to solve a genuine Palestinian human rights problem but to export it.

In the past two weeks we have seen the consequences of this folly. The man who promised at Oslo to renounce the violent struggle against the Jewish state once again uses violence as an instrument of negotiation. His police have turned their guns against the state that armed them, while his kangaroo courts have released dozens of Hamas terrorists drenched with the blood of his ''partner'' in peace.

Needing an external enemy to justify internal repression, he continues to incite against Israel. With new textbooks depicting a map of Palestine that stretches from the Mediterranean to the Dead Sea but does not include a Jewish state, he is educating the next generation of Palestinians that they will soon take up arms in a holy jihad.

In response to all this, the world can summon sufficient courage only to condemn a democratic Israel for defending itself against enemies within and without who seek its destruction. It is assailed for provoking the Palestinians by visiting our people's holiest site, when the real provocation is not our sovereignty over a Temple Mount that is the soul of the Jewish people but our sovereignty, period.

No doubt a government that is prepared to make far-reaching and dangerous concessions will soon be pressed to make more, so that the free states can remain safely behind their blindfolds. The only free state in this vast region to tyranny will be asked to concede more in the name of ''peace'' and ''coexistence'' to an Arab world that wants nothing of the sort.

Thirty years ago, Democratic Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington state courageously stood against the bipartisan forces of appeasement and issued a moral challenge to an immoral state. By speaking the same truth a decade later, Republican President Ronald Reagan helped free hundreds of millions of people around the world, and sparked a democratic flame that continues to engulf and threaten tyrannies. Who will speak the truth today and allow freedom to reach this region where only one nation carries its torch?

CURRENT SITUATION IN ISRAEL

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, over the past two weeks, the Middle East has been in a state of grave turmoil and violence. With almost 100 people reported dead, Israel is dangerously close to internal war between the Jews and Palestinians. Even this morning, two Israeli soldiers were brutally murdered in Ramallah in connection with this ongoing violence. Although there are some reports of a decrease in violence, this conflict demonstrates how complex and difficult it will be to have real peace for the people of the Middle East.

Throughout the West Bank, Gaza Strip, and even Arab towns inside Israel proper, Palestinians have taken to the streets. They are demanding Israeli capitulation and withdrawal of Israel troops from Arab regions. Although the Palestinian Authority has claimed that the flashpoint for the violence was a visit to the Temple Mount by Israeli political leader Ariel Sharon, the violence's widespread and intense nature of the violence, along with Palestinian reaction, indicates that the violence may not be a simple and uncoordinated reaction.

Since the initial incident, the violence has rapidly spread with incredible fervor. According to published reports, ''The internal riots stunned Israeli police officials by their size and intensity.'' A simple incident was radically and almost instantaneously transformed into a dire situation that threatens the entire Middle East peace process. Although this outrageous reaction may appear isolated, Mr. Arafat has threatened over the years to cross out the peace accords and unleash a new uprising against Israel. He has often described the peace accords as simply a temporary truce.

Mr. Arafat's response to the recent situation raises many concerns. It appears he has done little to nothing to quell the violence. The Palestinian Authority's official media arm, the Palestinian Broadcasting Corporation, has consistently broadcast incitement against Israel, including a children's program where martyrdom as ''suicide warriors'' is glorified. Palestinian television is also running a story about an alleged brutal killing of a Palestinian by Jewish settlers. The audience is told that the 40-year-old man's skull was crushed, his bones broken and his body burned by the settlers. Pictures of a charred and mutilated body are being used continually to incite already combative protesters and mourners. Although Israeli officials have stated that the man, Isam Hamad, 36, died in a car crash north of Ramallah and that the Palestinians chose to exploit the terrible condition of his body, Palestinian officials have refused to investigate the real cause of death and instead some have stated that the killing justifies an ''open season on settlers.''

Hassan Asfour, a Palestinian cabinet minister, told the Reuters News Service that, ''The settlers must now be a target by every Palestinian in order to stop their terrorism and they must be uprooted from our Palestinian occupied lands.'' These are not the words of a leadership that wants peace.

Mr. President, we must continually remember that Israel is in one of the most dangerous and unstable regions of the world. Since the beginning of the Oslo process in 1993, Israel has lost more than 280 of its citizens to terrorist violence (a portion of the Israeli population comparable to 15,000 Americans) in over 1,000 terrorist attacks. That death toll is worse than in the 15 years prior to Oslo. Rather than eradicate terrorist infrastructure in Palestinian territory, the Palestinian Authority apparently has maintained its revolving door policy in detaining terrorists. Over 20 prominent terrorists have been released since President Clinton's visit to Gaza in December 1998. Israeli reaction to violence must be seen in this context.

During this current situation, President Clinton has failed to stand firm with our long-time friend and ally, Israel. Although I appreciate the President's interest in bringing about peace in the Middle East, his desire to play the role of the ''honest broker'' is sadly misguided. Until Mr. Arafat begins to demonstrate otherwise, it appears clear that the Palestinian Authority is simply not an ''honest player''.

Mr. President, it is time to stand with Israel in the effort to find real and lasting peace. We must continue to work with our friends and allies around the world, including moderate Arab countries, to bring the Palestinian Authority into line with appropriate international behavior that will contribute to the process of peace, not to war. I call on Prime Minister Barak and Chairman Arafat to honestly work towards an end to this latest violence and come back to the negotiating table with the goal of reaching a workable and lasting peace.

MIDDLE EAST TRAGEDY

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, there is a tragedy ongoing in the Middle East, and the first thing I want to do is express heartfelt sorrow for the families of those who have lost their lives.

The events of the last two weeks are deeply disturbing, and the clear first step is to find a way to calm the violence. The onus is on Yasser Arafat and the Palestinian Authority to call a cease fire. If the Palestinian leadership and the Palestinian people are in the midst of a quest for a state, and are trying to prove they have the maturity to lead more than a terrorist organization, the moment of truth has come and gone. What many have long suspected about the Palestinian leadership is being confirmed: They are not committed to peace, they are committed to victory.

Unfortunately, the reaction of the international community to the violence in the Middle East has only emboldened Yasser Arafat. For proof we need look no further than the one-sided, dishonest U.N. Security Council resolution that passed last weekend. The resolution ignores the role of the Palestinians in the violence now taking place. It unfairly blames Israel for sparking the violence, forgetting that it is the right of any person of any religion to visit the Temple Mount. The United States' failure to veto this resolution is an embarrassment—a sell-out of our friends, a sell-out of the peace process.

Arfat insists on an international inquiry into the violence before he will call for its cessation. But is it any wonder that Prime Minister Barak is reluctant to accept such an inquiry when the international community has ranged itself so clearly on one side. Condemn first and ask questions later.

The actions of Arafat and the Palestinian Authority on the question of treatment of holy sites are equally troubling. First, the use of Ariel Sharon's visit to the Temple Mount and the use of that holy site to incite violence: How can we believe any commitment to allow access to all people of all faiths when the Palestinians believe it is their right to sow mayhem after one visit?

Second, the sacking of Joseph's Tomb. Palestinian police stood by as a mob of Palestinians destroyed Joseph's tomb in Nablus—a location from which Israeli forces had retreated in an attempt to calm the situation. They ripped apart Torah scrolls and desecrated a holy place. I have heard it said that the authenticity of the site has been questioned. I can just picture the mob looking for that certificate of authenticity before they went ahead and destroyed a holy book of the Jews.

There is no excuse—no excuse—for the behavior of the Palestinians or their leadership. Prime Minister Barak has offered concessions previously through taboo by most Israelis. Chairman Arafat has responded by demanding yet more and using violence to get it when negotiations failed. He has broken every agreement made in the past months and years, and has released dozens of notorious Hamas and Islamic Jihad terrorists in recent days. Perhaps Israel's intensified reaction following the mob killing of three Israeli soldiers will convince Arafat that he cannot win with violence. But I wonder.

And for the United States, being an honest broker does not necesitate our staying neutral. It should mean embracing a policy of honesty and telling one side when enough is enough. Instead, the Clinton-Gore Administration has shied away from the kind of frankness needed from our nation, and has stood aside in the face of an international political assault on our most important friend in the Middle East.

That lack of resolve is noticed. It has been noticed by those who defy sanctions on Iraq. It has been noticed by the Palestinians. And it was surely noticed by those who attacked the U.S.S.Cole and murdered six, maybe more American servicemen. When will this nation show the resolve needed to crush the cowards and criminals who threaten us and our allies?

I hope that the diplomatic efforts underway can lead to a calming of the situation and that the future will see a lasting peace between Israel and the Palestinians. However, for this peace to be truly lasting—and truly be peace—it must come when the parties are ready, on a timetable agreed by them. More important, it can only come when the Palestinians are ready to take upon themselves the mantle of nationhood and abandon their legacy of terrorism. And finally, peace will come when those who stand with the United States know that they have a forthright and loyal ally and those who stand against us fear our resolve.

ALASKAN SLED DOGS

Mr. STEVEN. Mr. President, I wish to speak about some Good Samaritans.

Recent fish disasters in Alaska have made it extremely difficult for Alaskans along the Yukon River and the surrounding areas of that river.

Dog mushers rely upon protein-rich chum salmon to feed their families, as well as their sled dogs. It takes about 100 chum salmon a year to feed one sled dog.

As a result of the fish disaster, an alarming dilemma has confronted the dog mushers. They watch their sled dogs starve or they shoot them. Now that is a terrible dilemma. Healthy Alaskan sled dogs ought not to lose their lives because of a shortage, but that is the situation that we faced. The alternative to end their misery is not one that a dog musher wants to face. It is totally unacceptable as far as I am concerned. Working with my staff, I have tried to find a solution to this problem.

Villages along the Yukon rely upon sled dogs for the transportation of goods. Use of sled dogs in rural Alaska is equivalent to the use of a vehicle in most of our Nation. Today I am able to announce, thanks to the generosity of Jim von der Heydt, executive vice president of Ralston Purina, 22½ tons of dog food will be donated by that company to Alaska's Native people from Purina's Iowa plant. It is the plant in Clinton, IA.

That food is now going to be shipped to Alaska by Lynden Transport with the assistance from the Totem Ocean Trailer Express, which we call TOTE, and the Alaska Railroad. I am extremely grateful to Jim Jansen of Lynden, Robert McGee of TOTE, and our former Governor, Bill Sheffield, who is now the head of the Alaska Railroad, for agreeing to deliver this relief to the dog mushers.

The dog food will be distributed to the dog teams by the Alaska Federation of Natives. Julie Kitka, the head of the Alaska Federation of Natives, has agreed to take on this task. I am grateful for her support and cooperation.

Lastly, let me commend James Lee Witt, the head of FEMA, for his personal assistance in this effort.

I think this is good news. I am happy to be here to talk about good Samaritans for a change.

I yield the floor.

TRANSPORTATION RECALL ENHANCEMENT ACCOUNTABILITY AND DOCUMENTATION ACT

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, yesterday, the Senate took an important and critical step forward to improve our Nation's motor vehicle safety laws by passing H.R. 5164, the Transportation Recall Enhancement Accountability and Documentation (TREAD) Act. The bill is in response to the more than 100 deaths associated with defective Bridgestone/Firestone tires. During the debate, I intended to include a letter from Congressman BLILEY, chairman of the House Commerce Committee clarifying the intent of a provision of the bill relating to the ability of the Department of Transportation to request material from manufacturers. I ask that the letter be included in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks. The letter makes it clear that the provisions would not enable manufacturers to conceal or destroy information requested by the Secretary.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, COMMITTEE ON COMMERCE,
Washington, DC, October 11, 2000.

Hon. JOHN MCCAIN,
Chairman, Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, Washington, DC.

DEAR JOHN: I am writing to clarify the intent of section 3(b) of H.R. 5164, the TREAD Act, as passed by the House last night.

I understand that there are concerns about the Committee's construction of the amendment to section 31066(m)(4)(B) of title 49, United States Code, relating to the Secretary's ability to request information not in possession of the manufacturer. This provision provides, in relevant part, that the Secretary may not ''require a manufacturer * * * to maintain or submit records respecting information not in the possession of the manufacturer.'' This restriction was not intended to provide manufacturers with an easy way to withhold information from the Secretary by destroying or transferring the possession of records; rather, it is intended to ensure that the Secretary does not promulgate requirements that require the manufacturer to submit information not reasonably within its possession or control.

Further, any orchestrated effort to withhold information from the Secretary with the intent to mislead him, whether through an intentional ''transfer'' of possession or other method, is precisely the kind of activity that could potentially subject a manufacturer to the criminal penalties under section 4 of the bill. The fundamental purpose of this legislation is to ensure that the Secretary receives the information he needs to identify defects related to motor vehicle safety at the earliest possible opportunity.

I hope that you find this explanation helpful.

Sincerely,

TOM BLILEY,
Chairman.

NEED FOR ACTION ON DEBT RELIEF

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, in the last days of this Congress, as we scramble to compete our work, I am worried that one of the most important issues before us may slip through the cracks.

Last week, I attended an extraordinary meeting at the White House, where President Clinton called together religious and political leaders to discuss the urgent need to provide debt relief for the poorest countries of the world. Looking around the table, it was clear that this was no ordinary issue, no ordinary meeting.

Just a partial list of the people in that room speaks volumes about this issue. There were bishops of several denominations, and a rabbi. The Reverend Pat Robertson was there, as was the Reverend Andrew Young. Democratic Congresswoman MAXINE WATERS was at the table, not far from Republican Congressman SPENCER BACHUS. A few seats from the President himself sat near the rock star Bono, who has become one of the most prominent spokesmen for the cause of debt relief.

President Clinton called us together because the need for debt relief is great, the logic of debt relief is compelling, and time left for us to pass debt relief legislation is alarmingly short. Failure to act now would be nothing less than a failure of the United States to lead what could be the most important international effort to bring the poorest nations of the world into a more positive, constructive role in the world economy.

Here are the facts, Mr. President. Around the world today, many poor nations actually pay more in interest payments to advanced industrial nations, and to international development banks, than they do on childhood immunizations, primary education, and other essential services.

Tragically, Mr. President, many of these countries are suffering through an AIDS epidemic that dwarfs any public health crisis the world has ever seen. No responsible person can argue that we have no interest in helping such countries fight against communicable diseases that are just a jet flight away from our cities. No moral person can argue that we should sit idly by while a continent loses a generation to disease.

The debts these countries owe are often the legacy of earlier governments, propped up by lending that suited the purposes of Cold War geopolitics, but that did precious little for the poorest of the poor in those countries. Today, the prospects of repayment by these countries is so small that the loans are now carried on our books at just a few cents on the dollar. A sensible business decision—made every day in this country and around the world—is to simply write off bad debts, and let both borrower and lender move on.

Following that sound economic logic, with the leadership and commitment of the United States, the major creditor nations of the world agreed several years ago to forgive some of the debt owed by the poorest of these countries. That program, known as the HIPC Initiative—for the ''Highly Indebted Poor Countries''—requires significant commitments by the poor countries if they are to qualify. They must commit to market-oriented economic reforms, reduce corruption, and use the savings from debt relief for essential poverty reduction programs.

Already under way in several countries, the HIPC program has achieved tangible results—the kind of results we all want to see, and the kind of results that will be put at risk if we fail to fully fund our participation. In Uganda, money saved by debt relief under the HIPC program has allowed the government to end the fees for primary school students, fees that had kept enrollment down. Over the last four years, primary school enrollment there virtually doubled. That is what a well-designed debt relief program can do.

Because those debts are such a large part of the poor countries' income—often as high as thirty or forty percent—and because those same debts are realistically worth so little to us, a relatively small financial commitment on our part buys important economic assistance many times over. And because we are the leading economy in the world, Mr. President, our leverage is even greater. Other nations are waiting for us to act—the only prudent course for creditors working out this kind of deal—and that means that our relatively small contribution will trigger a major international initiative.

But that leverage works both ways. Without us, the viability of the whole initiative remains in doubt. Our inaction has stalled any further action on debt relief in Latin America, and will prevent all but a few eligible African countries from participating.

Something more than sensible, effective foreign policy is at stake here, Mr. President, which brings me back to that extraordinary meeting at the White House. The world's religious leaders, from the Pope to Billy Graham, in an interfaith, ecumenical unanimity rarely seen on any issue, have joined to challenge our nation's conscience. They have asked us to face the embarrassing fact that while we talk about providing assistance to the poorest nations—while in fact we do send a tiny fraction of our own record income and wealth abroad—at the same time we continue to collect interest payments on those nations' old debts.

They have challenged us to follow the Biblical injunction to lift the burden of debt, in effect to put our money where we say our values are. They call on us to deal with the least fortunate in the way all of the world's great religions command. Now, when we are enjoying the best economic times in our history, as we stand as the most fortunate of nations, surely we can underwrite less than four percent of the overall cost of debt relief. That's right, Mr. President: our share is less than four percent of the total cost of the whole HIPC program.

For that contribution, we will assure the full implementation of nearly 30 billion dollars of debt relief for the poorest 33 countries of the world.

This program presents us with a powerful combination of economic logic and moral imperative. Here, in the last days and hours of this session of Congress, we must not let this opportunity slip away.

Earlier this year, the Foreign Relations Committee passed full authorization of two key funding mechanisms for our participation in the HIPC program. First, we authorized use of the balance of the funds made available through a revaluation of the IMF's gold holdings, to provide them with the resources to finance their share of the debt forgiveness—an action that will have no budgetary impact, that will not cost us a dime.

The Foreign Relations Committee also authorized the appropriation of $600 million for our share, between 2000 and 2003, of the HIPC initiative. Senator HELMS, Senator HAGEL, and Senator SARBANES and I agreed on a set of conditions that would hold the Administration accountable for policies that will promote more focused, better monitored international financial institutions. But we agreed, in the end, that the program was too important to impose unworkable conditions or to require the kind of delay that could be fatal. It took compromise and good faith to achieve that agreement, which was reported out of our committee unanimously.

Mr. President, I am here today to say that those principles must guide any final agreement. That means there must be no new, unworkable demands for overhauling international financial institutions like the IMF and the World Bank before debt relief can go forward. That will require the spirit of bipartisan accommodation that we achieved in our committee.

So far the Senate has only appropriated $75 million for debt relief. This is only a place holder for a final amount, now under negotiation. The House has done somewhat better, but is still far short of the mark. One of the problems is that full authorization has not reached the Senate floor, where I am confident it would receive overwhelming bipartisan support.

Right now, as I speak, there is still hope that we can reach an accommodation on authorizing language that the Appropriations Committee is seeking before it provides the full amount of debt relief needed to make the HIPC program a reality.

But time is running out, Mr. President, and we are dangerously close to forfeiting our international leadership on this issue. That means forfeiting not just our leadership in international financial affairs, Mr. President. If we fail to provide full funding for our participation in the international debt relief effort, we will forfeit something even more valuable: our moral leadership.

IN REMEMBRANCE OF THE HONORABLE SID YATES

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, Sid Yates, former Congressman from Ohio and a long-time friend of Indian country passed away last week.

I am particularly saddened because in the last 2 years, we have lost Morris Thompson, the Alaska Native tribal leader and one of the instrumental leaders in Alaska politics, Dr. Helen Peterson one of the founders of the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI), and now our long-time friend Sid Yates.

Indian country is losing far too many friends and most unfortunate is that we seem to be losing more friends than we are gaining.

As a Congressman from the State of Ohio with no federally-recognized Indian Tribes Sid Yates had no political reason to become the champion for Indian causes that he was known for. His dedication was not part of constituent service and he stood to lose more than he gained from his advocacy. Nonetheless, Sid Yates' commitment and determination to do the right thing never wavered.

I am saddened to be making this statement because all who knew or came in contact with Sid Yates were awed by his generous heart and humbled by the patience he showed with his colleagues and with the public—even when they disagreed with him.

His patience and focus in the legislative realm were legendary. Sid Yates started what I believe an appropriate protocol in the House Subcommittee by affording every Tribal Leader wishing to come before the subcommittee the brief opportunity to describe the most pressing needs of his or her Tribe.

When I came to the House of Representatives in 1986, I became deeply involved in issues that affect my State of Colorado, natural resource issues and of course issues that affect American Indians. In pursuing and working on these matters, I worked with Sid Yates time and again and benefitted from that association both as a legislator and as a man.

Sid Yates also knew when generosity of spirit and patience were not the appropriate response. In the mid 1980's a series of newspaper articles appeared in the Arizona Republic that revealed a breathtaking level of corruption and waste in the Federal Bureau of Indian Affairs. Millions of dollars were being siphoned off or wasted and were not getting to the Indian beneficiaries as Congress intended.

As Chairman of the House Subcommittee on Interior Appropriations, Sid Yates took bold steps to ensure that this would not happen again and launched the Tribal Self Governance Demonstration Project. I am proud to say that in August the President signed legislation that I sponsored in the Senate to make permanent Self Governance in Health Care.

The auditorium in the U.S. Department of Interior was appropriately named the ''Sid Yates Auditorium'' and his name will carry with it the kind of dedication and honesty that was his hallmark.

It is customary and protocol to add the prefix ''The Honorable'' when talking of elected leaders and if there was ever a man who fulfilled that moniker it was the Honorable Sid Yates.

TAXPAYER PROTECTION AND CONTRACTOR INTEGRITY ACT

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, yesterday I introduced the Taxpayer Protection and Contractor Integrity Act. This legislation, which was introduced concurrently by Rep. PETER DEFAZIO in the House, is intended to crack down on fraud and abuse in government contracts. It would say to federal government contractors that have been convicted or had civil judgement rendered against them at least three times for procurement fraud and related offenses: you do not deserve further taxpayer support; you are suspended from new contracts for three years. Three strikes and you're out.

A recent report by the General Accounting Office on procurement fraud by the 100 largest Department of Defense contractors during the years 1995–1999 found: 8 criminal cases in which contractors pled guilty and paid fines totaling $66 million, and 95 civil cases, including 94 settlements and one judgment, in which awards totaled $368 million. The offenses included overcharging, kickbacks, defective products, procurement fraud, misuse/diversion of government furnished materials, cost/labor mischarging, and others. A number of companies, including some of the largest DOD contractors, had several criminal convictions or civil judgments for similar offenses over a few years. This clearly demonstrates a pattern of misconduct.

But the Department of Defense continued to conduct business with contractors even after these companies had committed multiple frauds against the government. Not one of the top military contractors guilty of procurement fraud was barred from future contracts. According to a recent Associated Press analysis, there are 1,020 contractors government-wide that were sued or prosecuted for fraud in the past five years. Of these, 737 remain eligible for future contracts.

It is disgraceful that the Pentagon and other agencies seem to hear and see no evil in the criminal fraud committed by contractors. Now it's up to Congress to step in and start cracking down on big contractors who have been swindling the federal government out of billions of dollars. I am hopeful that the bill we're introducing today will force all contractors to play by the rules and stop ripping off American taxpayers.

Under current law, a contracting officer is required to make a determination regarding the integrity and responsibility of a potential contractor prior to awarding a new contract. In making this determination, prior convictions can be taken into account, but even with several convictions an individual or company may still be granted a contract award.

The bill I introduced would require contractors to disclose the number of convictions or civil judgments, the nature of the offense, and whether any fines, penalties, or damages were assessed. Any contractor who has three or more convictions or civil judgements for fraud and similar offenses related to government contracts would be prohibited from receiving future contracts. Existing contracts would not be impacted. The prohibition on future contracts would last three years. If, during that period, the contractor demonstrates a satisfactory record of ethics and integrity by avoiding additional criminal convictions, the contractor may become eligible for future federal contracts. The bill also allows a waiver by the President in the interest of national security or to prevent serious injury to the government. Note that the bill does not prevent debarment under current procedures for fewer than three violations or broader consideration of ethics under the proposed OMB regulations. But recognizing that some agencies will not use these discretionary procedures, the bill sets a firm limit.

The bill was crafted much like the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994, which made life in prison mandatory for criminals convicted of their third federal felony. That's why we sometimes call this the ''Three strikes and you're out'' bill. This bill, however, is much softer, as the suspension can be lifted after three years. We've made a commitment in this country to be tough on crime. That resolve should apply to federal contractors too. It is time to stop rewarding criminal contractors with American taxpayers' hard-earned dollars.

GAMBLING

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I would like to make a few remarks todays regarding the recent proposals put forth by the Nevada Gaming Commission yesterday that would place a $550 cap on all legalized gambling on college sports and prohibits all gambling on high school and the Olympic sporting events. I believe that the proposed rule changes in Nevada are a significant first step in protecting our student athletes and the integrity of college sports.

The Chairman of the Nevada Gaming Commission stated yesterday that the changes proposed ''will provide protection for Nevada athletes and for Nevada games. They will also protect athletes in the other 49 states. The proposals are intended to discourage illegal bookmakers and fixers from attempting to use Nevada's legal sports books as a place to place bets.''

It is obvious from these proposals that the Nevada Gaming Commission knows that gambling has an unseemly influence on our colleges and universities. Ironically, while Nevada is the only state where legal gambling on collegiate and Olympic sporting events occurs, Nevada's own gaming regulations currently prohibit gambling on any of Nevada's teams because of the potential to jeopardize the integrity of those sporting events. The frequency of gambling scandals over the last decade is a clear indication that legal gambling on college sports stretches beyond the borders of Nevada, impacting the integrity of other state's sporting events.

While I am encouraged by the proposed rule changes from the Nevada Gaming Commission, I do not believe it goes far enough. I will continue to insist that the Senate take up and pass, The Amateur Sports Integrity Act, which is in response to a recommendation made by the National Gambling Impact Study Commission (NGISC), which last year concluded a two-year study on the impact of legalized gambling on our country. The recommendation called for a ban on all legalized gambling on amateur sports and is supported by the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA), coaches, teachers, athletic directors, commissioners, university presidents, school principals and family groups from across the country.

Banning all legalized gambling on amateur sports serves notice that betting on college games or student athletes are not only inappropriate but can result in significant social costs. The National Gambling Impact Study Commission Report recognized the potential harm of legalized gambling by stating that sports gambling ''can serve as gateway behavior for adolescent gamblers, and can devastate individuals and careers.''

Some of its findings include: more than 5 million Americans suffer from pathological gambling; another 15 million are ''at risk'' for it; and about 1.1 million adolescents, ages 12 to 17, or 5% of America's 20 million teenager engage in severe pathological gambling each year.

According to the American Psychiatric Association: Pathological gambling is a chronic and progressive psychiatric disorder characterized by emotional dependence, loss of control and leads to adverse consequences at school and at home. Teens are more than twice as vulnerable to gambling addictions than adults because they are prone to high-risk behaviors during adolescence. Ninety percent of the nations compulsive gamblers start at an adolescent age. According to the Minnesota Council on Compulsive Gambling, gambling on sporting events is a favorite preference of teenage gamblers.

A study conducted by the University of Michigan found that most student athletes gamble. According to this study, ''72% of students athletes have gambled in some way since entering college (80% among male student athletes).'' Many student athletes gamble on sports. This study found ''35% of all students athletes have gambled on sports while attending college (45% among male student athletes).'' This study found that a considerable number of student athletes acted in ways that call into question the integrity of their contests. ''Over 5% of male student athletes provided inside information for gambling purposes, bet on a game in which they participated, or accepted money for performing poorly in a game.''

A study recently conducted by the University of Michigan found that ''84% of college referees said they had participated in some form of gambling since beginning their careers as referees. Nearly 40% also admitted placing bets on sporting events and 20% said they gambled on the NCAA basketball tournament. Two referees said they were aware of the spread on a game and that it affected the way they officiated the contest. Some reported being asked to fix games they were officiating and others were aware of referees who ''did not call a game fairly because of gambling reasons.''

Gambling on college kids is banned in 49 states. Prior to 1992 when any state could have allowed gambling on amateur sporting events, they didn't. No states have asked to have this federal law repealed. Why do you think that is? It is because it is inappropriate.

The bottom line—it is inappropriate to bet on college kids. This is about protecting the integrity of amateur athletics, it is about the effect that legal, government sanctioned betting has on the games, it is about the gateway college sports betting provides youth gamblers, and most importantly, it is about the impropriety of betting on teenagers.

SUPPORT WILDLIFE CONSERVATION

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I rise today to request that the provisions of Title III of H.R. 701, the Conservation and Reinvestment Act be included in the Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations conference report. The Interior Appropriations conference report passed last week included increased funding for land, water and wildlife conservation programs. While the bill is a positive first step towards providing permanent funding for these programs, I would have preferred to see enactment of the Conservation and Reinvestment Act, CARA, especially the wildlife conservation provisions in Title III of the bill. To this end, I am requesting that Title III of H.R. 701 be included in the conference report of the Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations bill. I was a strong supporter of CARA when it was reported out of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, of which I am a member. It is the most important conservation and wildlife measure that Congress has written in the last 50 years. In particular, I am very pleased with Title III of the bill, which addresses wildlife conservation. I was actively involved early in the process and worked with the Committee to see that the wildlife provisions were included in the final product.

Title III would provide funding for a diverse array of fish and wildlife species, with an emphasis on preventing species, both game and non-game, from becoming endangered. These goals would be achieved by conserving important wildlife habitat, funding wildlife inventories to design better management plans, and working cooperatively with private landowners in a non-regulatory, incentive-based manner. Moreover, it gives the States the flexibility to set their own goals to meet their needs in a way that works for them. In addition, the emphasis on preventing species from becoming endangered will go a long way to help private property owners. Addressing concerns for endangered species on their lands is a costly process. Preventing species now from becoming endangered later is an investment that will save landowners valuable time and money that would occur after the species have been depleted. In addition, CARA will make it easier on hunters and anglers—-more than 90 percent of all State fish and wildlife agency funding is from user fees. The passage of Title III and of CARA would create more equity in funding preservation efforts.

I am concerned that the language in the Interior bill, while providing funding for a new wildlife conservation fund'' does not provide enough funding for the States to meet their needs and leaves discretion to the Fish and Wildlife Service without giving States the proper flexibility to administer the programs. Wildlife conservation efforts have been chronically underfunded over the years. Including Title III of CARA would help to guarantee that sufficient resources are available so that States and the Nation can meet these important needs.

VICTIMS OF GUN VIOLENCE

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, it has been more than a year since the Columbine tragedy, but still this Republican Congress refuses to act on sensible gun legislation.

Since Columbine, thousands of Americans have been killed by gunfire. Until we act, Democrats in the Senate will read the names of some of those who have lost their lives to gun violence in the past year, and we will continue to do so every day that the Senate is in session.

In the name of those who died, we will continue this fight. Following are the names of some of the people who were killed by gunfire one year ago today.

October 12, 1999:

Michael S. Chambers, 43, Seattle, WA;

Rueben M. Clark, 22, Memphis, TN;

Kenneth Ditter, 30, Philadelphia, PA;

Charles Guerra, 28, Houston, TX;

Joel Holbrook, 33, Kansas City, MO;

Walton Jerry Holmes, 68, Euless, TX;

J.C. Jones, 48, Miami-Dade County, FL;

Gregory Mabrey, 27, Baltimore, MD;

Khidetra S. McBride, 22, Memphis, TN;

Jorge Millan, 40, Miami-Dade County, FL;

John Ray, 23, Fort Wayne, IN;

Michael SHELBY, 34, Detroit, MI;

Nicholas Singleton, 19, New Orleans, LA;

Honore Sissoko, 46, Philadelphia, PA;

George THOMAS, 19, St. Louis, MO; and

Duane G. Weigelt, 69, St. Paul, MN.

One of the victims of gun violence I mentioned, 19-year-old Nicholas Singleton of New Orleans, was shot and killed one year ago today by a 19-year-old friend while the two were having an argument.

We cannot sit back and allow such senseless gun violence to continue. The deaths of these people are a reminder to all of us that we need to enact sensible gun legislation now.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, the final version of the fiscal year 2001 Energy and Water Development appropriations provides $1 million for the Bureau of Reclamation to initiate a comprehensive Hopi/Western Navajo water development study. This funding was added to the bill at my request, and I would like to take this opportunity to detail the reason why I consider this to be a very important undertaking.

Efforts have been ongoing for several years to settle the various water rights claims of the Navajo and Hopi Indian tribes and other water users in the Little Colorado River watershed of Northern Arizona. Numerous proposals have been advanced in an effort to settle these water-rights claims, including identifying alternative sources of water, means of delivery and points of usage to help provide a reliable source of good-quality water to satisfy the present and future demands of Indian communities on those reservations. Cost estimates for the various existing proposals run into the hundreds of millions of dollars, the majority of which would likely be borne by the federal government. This study is needed to identify the most cost-effective projects that will serve to meet these objectives.

I have asked the Bureau to hire an outside contractor to complete this study to ensure that a fresh and objective analysis of existing studies and data is conducted. In addition, using a private contractor will enable the Bureau to complete the study in a timely manner without requiring the Bureau to divert personnel needed to accomplish other vital priorities. The study should be complete and submitted to the Senate Appropriations Committee as soon as possible, but no later than April 1, 2002.

I also want to assure the parties that this study is intended to be used to facilitate this settlement, and cannot be used for any other purpose in any administrative or judicial proceeding.

SECURITY AND PENSION REFORM ACT

Mr. L. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I rise today to express my support for H.R. 1102, the Comprehensive Retirement Security and Pension Reform Act.

In my short time in the Senate, I have supported pension and savings reform and expansion, including cosponsoring S. 741, the Pension Coverage and Portability Act, and voting in favor of a pension and savings amendment offered by Finance Committee Chairman ROTH during consideration of H.R. 8, the estate tax phase out bill. I strongly believe that enacting H.R. 1102 will benefit millions of Americans, help boost America's savings rate, and bolster long-term economic growth. Indeed, economists agree that the increased personal savings and investment that would result from expanding pensions hold the key to long-term economic growth, and would shore up the country's savings tendencies.

Currently, only half of all workers have a pension plan. That means about 75 million Americans don't have access to one of the key components to a comfortable retirement. Pension laws have become so convoluted and the annual contribution limit so diminished that many small businesses simply do not bother setting them up.

In fact, the contribution limits to Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs) have not changed since 1981. At that time, when the $2,000 limit was set, according to the U.S. Census Bureau the U.S. means the U.S. mean household income was under $23,000. In 1998, mean household income was almost $52,000, an increase of more than 130 percent. Still, the maximum IRA contribution hasn't budged from $2,000.

Setting aside $5,000, rather than $2,000, will provide the retiree with significant additional savings. For workers who don't have access to an employer-sponsored retirement plan, the IRA is their primary savings vehicle. Increasing the contribution to $5,000 helps put these people on a more equal footing with their fellow citizens covered by employer-sponsored plans. Also, it is estimated that more than 61 percent of IRA participants with incomes under $50,000 contribute the $2,000 maximum; and 69 percent of all IRA participants contribute the maximum. Workers are ready to invest more—if we in Congress will open the door for them.

H.R. 1102 includes an income tax credit to help those who might not be able to fund their retirement accounts without additional help, or who need more incentive to save. Under this legislation, joint filers of tax returns earning under $50,000, heads of households earning under $37,500, and all other taxpayers earning less than $25,000 will receive non-refundable tax credits for each of five years on a sliding scale from five to 50 percent for contributions to a broad range of existing retirement savings choices. In effect, the federal government will be matching these savers contributions dollar for dollar—through the tax credit—up to the maximum allowable based on their income and filing status.

Another provision will help workers approaching retirement age to jump start, or catch up with, their retirement savings. Many of our younger workers are limited in what they can invest toward retirement due to the other priorities such as saving for a house, starting a family, or setting aside funds for their children's education. With retirement beginning to loom as they turn 50, the current limits on contributions both to their IRAs and to their employer-sponsored retirement plans make catching up extremely difficult. H.R. 1102 allows taxpayers 50 and older to contribute $7,500 annually to an IRA, or $5,000 to their employees' retirement plan when fully phased in.

Today, it is commonplace for workers to switch jobs frequently. But, under current regulations, these workers often cannot carry the retirement benefits they have accumulated with one employer to a new job. Provisions in H.R. 1102 remove the final obstacles to full retirement portability, meaning that a worker easily can take his or her accumulated benefits to a new job. This component of the legislation is particularly important to state and local government employees who currently cannot roll over their qualified retirement savings to a new employer when they move to private sector jobs.

In Rhode Island, small businesses are the heart of the economy. Indeed, 98 percent of Rhode Island businesses are small. And, they are important forces in developing two emerging segments of the state's economy: service and technology. H.R. 1102 also will remove disincentives which currently prevent many small business owners from offering retirement plans to their employees. In addition, it will make it easier for long-serving union members to collect the full pension benefits they have earned.

Some provisions in the bill have stirred debate. One relates to cash balance pension plans. I recognize and appreciate the hard work that the Senate Finance Committee has done with respect to this issue, and understand that negotiations are still under way. I hope that the final product of these negotiations will help workers that are negatively affected by cash balance pension plan conversions.

The House approved H.R. 1102 by a vote of 401–25 on July 19th. I hope that we in the Senate act soon to approve this bill and send it to the President so that millions of hard working Americans will accrue its benefits.

HONORING HISPANIC HERITAGE MONTH

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the celebration of National Hispanic Heritage Month. As one of America's largest ethnic groups, the Hispanic American community embodies the true spirit of our country as a land where people from all over the world can come to for the chance to pursue their dreams.

For countless years, Hispanic Americans have played an integral role in American society. This has been characterized by a strong work ethic, deep sense of faith and unwavering commitment to both family and community. Throughout the history of our country, the contributions of Hispanic Americans in areas such as public service, business, entertainment, and the sciences have been lasting and have made America a stronger nation.

Today, there are more than 31 million Hispanic Americans living in the United States, and they represent nearly 12 percent of our total population. The Hispanic American community in New Jersey includes more than 1 million residents, with roots from all over the world, including Europe, the Carribean, and both South and Central America.

I am proud to have the opportunity to represent a State with one of the largest concentrations of Hispanic Americans in the entire country. The vibrant Hispanic American communities across the State have given New Jerseyans a window into their cultures and heritage. We have also been fortunate to have members of these communities take on important roles in our public life. In New Jersey, we have Hispanic Americans representing some of our nation's most diverse communities in both the State legislature and the United States Congress, and dozens more hold elected office at the county and local levels.

As we begin a new century, it is projected that nearly 25 percent of America will be of Hispanic origin by 2050. At the same time, the widespread influence of Hispanic Americans is touching all of our communities, transcending racial and ethnic boundaries on a daily basis. I have no doubt that as America's Hispanic American community grows, it will maintain the legacy that it has built while also adding a new chapter to its rich history as an important piece of the American mosaic.

TIRE STANDARDS

Mr. ASHCROFT. I would like to engage in a brief colloquy with Senator MCCAIN the Chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee. Yesterday, the Senate took an important step forward in improving our nation's motor vehicle safety laws. One of the most important aspects of that bill was a provision to require Department of Transportation to upgrade the Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard for tires for the first time in nearly 30 years.

Because it has been so long since the standards have been revised, they do not apply to tires used on sport utility vehicles (SUVs). In fact, SUVs weren't even around when these standards were last developed. Given the relationship of tires to the rollover propensity of SUVs, I would expect that the Department should first upgrade the standards for those tires used on SUVs. In addition, since the tire standard was put in place technology for the construction and design of tires has improved dramatically. For example, nylon ply caps can significantly improve the performance of tires. The types vehicles on the road has also changed as more and more people choose to drive sport utility vehicles. Chairman MCCAIN would you agree that the Department should consider new technologies that would improve tire safety as they establish the new tire standard and that they should also consider the different mix of vehicles on the road as they set their priorities for implementing the new standard.

Mr. MCCAIN. I concur with the Senator from Missouri that a variety of new technologies are available to improve the design and construction of tires. The improved federal motor vehicle safety standard for tires should take into account all of these new technologies to ensure that consumers are provided with safe tires. Additionally, the Department should implement the rule in light of the changing mix of types of vehicles that consumers are driving.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Well, I thank the Chairman for taking the time to answer my questions and the hard work he has done to get a bill passed this year.

FREIGHT RAIL TRANSPORTATION

●Mr. CLELAND. Mr. President, today I am addressing the Senate to express my view on a vital part of our Nation's transportation infrastructure—the freight railroads.

I am aware of concerns that have been raised by some companies that ship by rail about the service and rates available to them. Certainly, the ability to safely, economically and efficiently transport raw materials to plants and finished products to both domestic and international consumers is as critical as the actual production of these commodities and goods.

Since 1827 with the founding of the Nation's first commercial railroad, the B&O, we have depended on the rails to perform this function. In its heyday, the iron horse dominated transportation of goods and passengers. Today, after surviving nearly total collapse in the 1970s, a streamlined, modernized rail industry continues to play a role, albeit a considerably downsized one, in the transportation marketplace. Our transportation infrastructure has evolved—now trucks on the interstate highways are by far the predominant mode of transportation, and inland barges carry coal and grain on our nation's waterways.

As many of you know, I have always been interested in rail history. Indeed, Atlanta was originally known as Terminus because of the railroads which were sited there. What history has taught us is that the rails require a continuing, massive capital investment to operate safely. In the late 1970s, Congress faced the dilemma of a severely under-capitalized system with a dismal safety performance. The rails would have to be supported by massive federal subsidy or freed to compete in the marketplace in an effort to generate needed capital. Congress wisely chose the latter course, and the railroads have been able to generate the quarter trillion dollars needed since 1980 to support the infrastructure. In 1999 alone, the private investment was $16.2 billion, with $2.87 of assets needed for every dollar of revenue produced. The industry's vastly improved safety record in large part is a testament to the wisdom of that infrastructure investment. Let me add that although progress in this area has been significant, nevertheless this safety record can be further improved. It is my hope that management and labor will work together toward that end.

The world is not perfect, of course, and in the intervening years issues have arisen which must be addressed—issues such as the need to honor the hard earned collective bargaining agreements of railroad workers. Many of these issues have been brought to the attention of Congress, the Interstate Commerce Commission and now its successor, the Surface Transportation Board, STB. Indeed, the Congress took a comprehensive look at rail regulation in 1995 when it created the STB. I know some companies believe their rail rates are excessive. While rates have declined more than 50 percent since 1981, some customers have benefitted more than others, reflecting the differential pricing put into place by the Staggers Rail Act of 1980. This has led in part to complaints being heard from segments of the shipping public. Many have suffered from service disruptions following recent mergers and consolidations. While I am very concerned about these situations, I believe the STB has worked within its mandate to address them.

I have an open mind on whether these matters need to be examined further. If that is the case, I urge that we move carefully. We should not return to the very regulatory schemes that led to near disaster a generation ago. I would not favor policies that deprive the railroads of their ability to generate capital, resulting in the federal government—rather than the private sector—having to assume the costs of maintaining and operating the freight rail network.●

TRIBUTE TO LT. BOB DOUGLAS

● Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute to an outstanding Kentuckian, Lt. Bob Douglas (ret).

For almost 30 years, Bob has crusaded against the scourge of drugs and served the people of Kentucky, helping to make the Commonwealth a safer place to live.

Bob worked for 25 years as a member of the Erlanger, Kentucky Police Department. For the last nine of those years, he was the primary instructor for the anti-drug program, D.A.R.E. When Bob retired from the police force in 1998, he became the Executive Director of the Kentucky Crime Prevention Coalition. He is also a new member of the steering committee of the National Crime Prevention Council.

For his efforts, Bob was recently presented with a 2000 Mac Gray Award for his outstanding effort to promote the National Citizens' Crime Prevention Campaign. The award recognizes those who have made extraordinary contributions and pledged personal commitment to work with the media to promote anti-drug public service announcements and crime prevention education.

Some have kidded Bob about the Columbo-style overcoat he wears. But like Peter Falk's character, Bob gets results. For years, he visited children in schools to teach them about the dangers of drugs and to urge them to stay out of trouble. With his partner, the canine character, Officer McGruff, there is no doubt that Bob made an impression and steered more than a few children in the right direction.

Too often we hear about our problems and the trouble-makers in society, and we don't hear enough about our heroes and the everyday citizens who make a difference and improve our quality of life. Bob Douglas is one of those heroes, and he deserves our commendation.

I ask that an article on Lt. Douglas be printed in the RECORD.

The article follows:

DOUGLAS TAKES BITE OUT OF AWARD

(By Juli Hale)

With his Columbo-style overcoat, some might think Bob Douglas' long-time partner needs to call the fashion police. But one look at the partner's big brown eyes and black, wet nose is usually all it takes to draw in a crowd of kids to listen to the pair's message of drug resistance and crime prevention.

Douglas and Officer McGruff, the tough-talking cartoon canine, spent years visiting school classrooms trying to turn at least one student away from a life of drug abuse and crime, Douglas and others believe they did much more. Today, the pair appears at community events and keeps spreading the message.

For his efforts in drug and crime prevention and for sharing the spotlight with McGruff, Douglas was presented with a 2000 Mac Gray Award last week in Washington. The Mac Gray Award honors outstanding efforts to promote the National Citizens' Crime Prevention Campaign. It memorializes Berkeley McCabe ''Mac'' Gray II, the late executive deputy director of the National Crime Prevention Council.

The award was one of only two presented in the nation this year to officers who use McGruff as part of their message. The award recognizes two winners each year—one at the national/state level and one at the local/regional level—who have made extraordinary contributions and personal commitments to work with the media to secure donated advertising for public service announcements as well as promoting McGruff and crime prevention education. Douglas won for the national/state level.

''I personally see this as an Erlanger award and I wanted to share it with you,'' Douglas said to City Council Tuesday night after showing a short video presentation about the award. Obviously touched by the video, which showed Douglas working with students over the years, Douglas held the glass award high for everyone to see. The video also highlighted Douglas' other achievements, such as his having McGruff's image painted on the side of a new police cruiser and pushing for the McGruff message ''take a bite out of crime'' to be placed on billboards.

Douglas worked for the Erlanger Police Department for 25 years, the last nine as the primary DARE instructor. Douglas retired in 1998 and became executive director of the Kentucky Crime Prevention Coalition, which also used McGruff-related material. He was awarded the title of Kentucky DARE Officer of the Year in 1997.

''You never cease to amaze me,'' Mayor Marc Otto told Douglas. ''Keep up the good work.''

Douglas will continue his work both as the executive director of the Crime Prevention Coalition and as a new member of the steering committee of the National Crime Prevention Council. Douglas was asked to join that committee last week.●

CELEBRATING THE ARRIVAL OF THE ''BAT'KIVSHCHYNA''

●–Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise to speak of a special event taking place in my home State on Saturday. After much hard work and preparation, the people of the City of Norwich and the State of Connecticut will proudly welcome the Ukrainian schooner, Bat'Kivshchyna, and her dedicated crew to their winter port at The Marina at American Wharf in Norwich Harbor.

It is a great honor for the State of Connecticut to host the Bat'Kivshchyna and her crew. This past summer, the Bat'Kivshchyna was a popular participant in Operation Sail 2000, a millennial event that showcased numerous tall ships from around the globe in eight North American ports from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Portland, Maine. I had the opportunity to view these vessels when they visited New London, Connecticut, between July 12 and July 15. I was deeply impressed with the immense and graceful design of these ships and enjoyed visiting with the crews who hail from across the world.

The Bat'Kivshchyna hails from the Ukraine, a country which only ten years ago shed Soviet domination and embraced the principles of democracy. Led by her captain and owner, Dmytro Birioukovych, the Bat'Kivshchyna is on an ambitious multi-year mission called ''Discover Ukraine.'' The goal of this mission is to arouse local awareness and interest in Ukrainian culture and in the Ukrainian economy. Thus, the Bat'Kivshchyna, which is Ukrainian for ''Fatherland,'' has become an important ambassador for her nation as she makes ports-of-call in Europe, the Americas, Asia, and Oceania.

Much of the Bat'Kivshchyna's success is owed to Captain Birioukovych. Having purchased the Bat'Kivshchyna in 1988, he transformed an aging fishing vessel into a world-class tall ship. Encouraged by Ukrainian independence from the former Soviet Union in 1991, Captain Birioukovych co-founded ''Discover Ukraine'' with his Canadian son-in-law, Roy Kellogg, and decided to use his vessel to promote his nation's history and culture. When asked about his global expedition, Captain Birioukovych proudly calls himself, his crew and his ship ''folk ambassadors of good will.''

The Bat'Kivshchyna had a difficult journey from her home port in Kiev, Ukraine, to the Americas for the commencement of Operation Sail 2000. Regional political tensions, rough seas, and numerous technical difficulties threatened the Bat'Kivshchyna's mission in several instances throughout the late spring and early summer. However, the dedicated crew persevered and overcame each hurdle to arrive for their first OpSail2000 event in Miami, Florida.

In July, Captain Birioukovych put forth an appeal for a North American port in which to dock the Bat'Kivshchyna during the winter. With plans to attend the 2001 Great Lakes Sailing Expedition, it was economically unfeasible for the Bat'Kivshchyna to sail back to Kiev only to return to the United States in the following spring. With numerous offers from ports across the Northeast, I am proud to say that Captain Birioukovych chose the great city of Norwich as his ''winter refuge.''

Connecticut's honor of hosting the Bat'Kivshchyna in Norwich could not have been possible without the tireless effort of those in the Constitution State dedicated to providing a winter home for the vessel. I would like to thank especially Mr. Michael Lamperelli of the Connecticut Friends of the Ukraine Expedition, Mr. Ron D.

Aliano of The Marina at American Wharf in Norwich, and City Council President Mr. Richard Abele of Norwich. I would also like to thank all of those who are helping to prepare for Saturday's arrival of the Bat'Kivshchyna in Norwich Harbor: the Norwich Fire Department, the Norwich Police Department, the American Ambulance Service, Inc., the United States Coast Guard Academy, the Integrated Charter School of Norwich, and the Norwich Adult Education Center.

I know that Saturday's event will be a great day for the people of the City of Norwich and the State of Connecticut. The Bat'Kivshchyna's visit to the city will provide for a rich cultural exchange between the Ukraine and the State of Connecticut. I am proud that we, as a State, could provide a winter refuge for the Bat'Kivshchyna as she continues her global expedition, and I wish her crew success in future voyages.●

NINETY YEARS OF GIVING

● Mr. L. CHAFEE. Mr. President, next month a remarkable woman, who is a constituent of mine, will celebrate her ninetieth birthday; although, if you ask her, she will tell you that she still feels like a sixteen year-old.

Alice B. Dwyer—known to family and close friends as ''Lally'' and to literally thousands of Rhode Islanders, who learned in her classroom, as ''Miss Dwyer''—was born on November 12, 1910. She was the second of four children of Matthew S. Dwyer and Alice Barry Dwyer of Providence. Her older sister, Matt, suffered from crippling polio at a time long before public accommodations for people with disabilities. Nevertheless, they set off together for Manhattanville College in New York City.

Alice Dwyer shies way from any words of recognition for her part in enabling her older sister, who had an insatiable lust for learning, to attend college. Alice simply was doing what has always come most naturally to her, giving to others.

After college, Alice went on to receive a Masters Degree in English Literature from Brown University, my own alma mater. With degrees in hand she began a lifetime of service to children in the Providence Public School system. The majority of her years teaching were spent at Classical High School where she taught sophomore English.

Today's public opinion polls tell us that education is the number one issue on the minds of Americans. We hear and talk a lot about holding students to high academic standards. But Alice Dwyer never needed pollsters and politicians to tell her about the importance of high standards. The students who read Shakespeare in her classroom knew that she expected each of them to do his or her best.

In addition to her love of teaching, Alice always has been an avid admirer of acting. She was among the Rhode Islanders to answer the casting call for ''The Great Gatsby,'' starring Robert Redford and Mia Farrow. At sunset each evening for weeks, she would cross the bridge to Newport, where she would don a glittering 1920s flapper gown and join the guests at Hollywood's most recent rendition of Jay Gatsby's famed summer parties.

After retiring from the Providence Public School system, Alice took on various volunteer activities. She read to children and worked in the library of the Fox Point Elementary School in Providence, and she was a regular in the phone bank on New London Avenue in Cranston, making calls to turn out the vote for my father's 1982 Senate campaign. She worked relentlessly on the two unsuccessful campaigns of Fred Lippitt to be mayor of Providence.

In 1994 when my father ran for his fourth Senate term, difficulty walking kept Alice away from campaign headquarters. However, as a woman who cannot do enough for others, she found a way to help. Campaign workers would drop off box loads of envelopes and lists of names and addresses with her. When one box was done, it would be picked up and another delivered in its place.

Combining her love of reading with her natural tendency to help others, Alice spent a great deal of time taping textbooks for blind and visually impaired students.

Whether it's the young person working at the Newport Creamery on Wayland Square where Alice is known for liking her coffee piping hot, or the students (now middle-aged men and women) who recall the lessons they learned from her at Classical High School, or her own family members, all agree that Alice Dwyer has filled their lives with her own giving spirit.

Alice Dwyer will celebrate her ninetieth year with her sister, Rita Scotti, with her eleven nieces and nephews and their families, and with dozens of friends and neighbors. It is my great privilege to wish this woman, who has warmed so many hearts with her unfailing kindness and generosity, a very Happy Birthday.●

TRIBUTE TO VIRGINIA SHEHEE

● Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, on the evening of Friday, November 3, the people of Shreveport will gather to pay tribute to one of the most exceptional people the State of Louisiana has ever produced, Virginia Shehee. The tribute to Virginia is organized by the Biomedical Research Foundation of northwest Louisiana, whose establishment is but one of the remarkable achievements in the life of this remarkable woman.

It is my pleasure and honor to tell my colleagues in the United States Senate about my friend Virginia Shehee. She is a superb model for everything she has done: wife, mother, businesswoman, political leader, community activist and economic visionary. My former colleague, Senator Bennett Johnston, once said, ''In a state that is blessed with an abundance of natural resources, Virginia Shehee may be Louisiana's single greatest natural resource.'' I certainly know that is a view shared by many of those who know Virginia best and who have benefited from her lifetime of dedication to improve lives in Shreveport and northwest Louisiana.

Nothing better exemplifies her accomplishments than the creation of the Biomedical Research Foundation, and the construction of the Biomedical Research Institute that today stands proudly adjacent to the LSU Medical Center in Shreveport. It is an understatement to say that none of this would have been possible without the foresight, determination and hard work of Virginia, and other community leaders nearly 20 years ago.

Like so many advances in today's new economy, Shreveport's move into the world of biomedicine and biotechnology emerged from the difficulties caused by the decline of the old economy. In northwest Louisiana, where the steadily declining price in oil in the early 1980's caused community leaders to conclude that efforts had to be undertaken quickly to produce other economic sustenance for the area, they of course turned to Virginia Shehee.

In a matter of a few short years, Virginia had formed the Biomedical Research Foundation and gathered several million dollars in local support. She leveraged local dollars into a much larger state support and then converted that into significant support by the Congress and the Department of Energy. As a result, a 10-story, $40 million, state-of-the-art wet-lab research facility was built that today houses world-class researchers and serves as a growing economic engine, producing knowledge-based jobs for northwest Louisiana.

Beyond the work taking place in its own facilities, Biomed can point with great pride to the growing number of companies it has attracted to Shreveport's own technology park, InterTech, with technologies ranging from manufacturing and diagnostics to telemedicine and orthopedic devices. We in the Louisiana delegation often point to the success of Biomed as a textbook model of partnerships between Washington and local communities looking to build a better future for their citizens.

It is true, Mr. President, that Biomed has become a success because it has merit on its side. But all of us who have played some small part in this effort know that a big reason for the success is Virginia Shehee is someone who long ago learned not to take no for an answer. Her efforts have led to a mighty legacy in science and economic development in Shreveport. It is fitting the facility is now the ''Virginia K. Shehee Biomedical Research Institute,'' and it is fitting the community is gathering next month to say thanks. It is my pleasure to join so many in saying how blessed Louisiana is to have Virginia Shehee's generous service and how fortunate I am to have her friendship.●

IN RECOGNITION OF THE RETIREMENT OF MR. DONALD W. JENSEN

● Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize Mr. Donald W. Jensen, who is retiring on January 1, 2001, after 13 years of service as a member of the Oakland County Board of Commissioners. Since 1987, Commissioner Jensen has represented the citizens of District 15 to the best of his ability, which has been in an exemplary manner.

Commissioner Jensen graduated from the University of Detroit with a degree in Business Administration. He spent much of his work career with Burroughs Corporation, where he served as Director of Advertising and Public Relations. His primary responsibility was the design and production of promotional and technical literature, though he was also responsible for media advertising, the public relations department, and the operation of their international literature distribution facility. While at Burroughs, Mr. Jensen was a Board Member and President of the National Trade Show Exhibitors Association.

Public service has always played an essential role in Commissioner Jensen's life. Prior to being elected to his current position, he served for nine years as a member of the Birmingham, Michigan, City Commission and then later as Mayor of Birmingham. He was a Founder and Board Member of the Foundation for Birmingham Senior Residents, an organization which enables seniors to remain in their homes. He has also served on the Board of numerous other organizations, including the American Cancer Society and the Center for Independent Living.

As a County Commissioner representing the Cities of Berkley and Birmingham and a portion of the City of Royal Oak, Mr. Jensen has served as Chairman of the General Government Committee from 1993–94, as Vice Chairman of the Finance Committee, and has been a member of the Oakland Livingston Human Service Agency, the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments, the Oakland County Board of Commissioners' Public Services Committee, and the Health and Human Services Committee. He has also been a Trustee of the County Library Board for 12 years, and served on the Taxation and Finance Committee of the National Association of Counties.

I would like to thank Commissioner Jensen for his dedication and many efforts throughout his career in public service. His leadership during this time has been exceptional and will be dearly missed. On behalf of the entire United States Senate, I congratulate Mr. Donald W. Jensen on a wonderful and successful career, and wish him the best of luck in retirement.●

A TRIBUTE TO JIM HURD

● Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, I wish to take a moment to pay tribute to Jim Hurd, the founding CEO of Planar Systems, who passed away this summer after a year-long battle with leukemia. Jim was a pioneering technical and business leader in the U.S. flat panel industry, and led Planar Systems of Beaverton, Oregon to become one of the largest flat panel display companies in the U.S. and Europe. Jim was actively involved at the national level in helping to shape federal policy on flat panel displays, and worked on the national flat panel initiative and in the formation of consortia to address critical issues for the flat panel display industry.

Mr. Hurd was a leader in Oregon's business community, serving as the Chair of the Oregon Council of the American Electronics Association. During his term in 1992, he helped develop the Oregon technical benchmark annual survey and conference. He was also active in supporting technical education efforts in Oregon, and was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Oregon Graduate Institute. For services to the industry and community, the American Electronics Association awarded Jim Oregon's technology executive of the year award in 1993.

A native of the Pacific Northeast, Jim was born in 1948 in Spokane, and grew up in Kennewick, Washington. He received his bachelors's degree in physics from Lewis & Clark College in Portland in 1970, where he met his wife Alice. Jim joined Tektronics Corporation soon after graduation. In 1983, Jim left Tektronics to co-found Planar Systems with Chris King and John Laney. Today, Planer employs over 850 people in the United States. Jim also lent his wisdom to help other start-up companies achieve success by serving on the Board of the Oregon Resource and Technology Development Fund, a state-sponsored venture capital fund.

Jim had a rare ability to balance his successful professional life with an active private life that included mountain climbing, running, bicycling, tennis, scuba diving and a love for auto racing. He was a wonderful husband to Alice and a terrific father to his sons, Owen and Peter.

Mr. Hurd will be missed by all of us who knew him.●

IN RECOGNITION OF THE RETIREMENT OF MR. GEORGE W. KUHN

● Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize Mr. George W. Kuhn, who is retiring this year after a 60-year career during which he split time between the United States Navy, the Ford Motor Company, and being a public servant. Whatever the forum, he has been a leader and an inspiration to those around him.

Mr. Kuhn graduated from Central Michigan University, majoring in business administration, economics, and political science. In 1943, he entered the Naval Service and served aboard the Tender U.S.S. Pelias as a Finance Officer. He returned to active duty during the Korean War and served at U.S. Naval Stations in New York and in the Panama Canal Zone. Ultimately, he retired as a Navy Captain after completing 39 years of service, both on active duty and in the Naval Reserves.

Following the Korean War, Mr. Kuhn completed Ford Motor Company's Management Training Program. He served on the staff of the Vice President of Product Development for 20 years, coordinating the development phases of styling, engineering, purchasing and manufacturing of future car programs.

Mr. Kuhn's passion has always been in public service, though. He has been a leader within the Oakland County Republican Party for nearly 50 years, since his involvement in Eisenhower's first presidential campaign. In 1959, he was elected Mayor of the City of Berkley, Michigan. He served as Mayor until being elected to serve as a State Senator in 1966. During his four year tenure in the Michigan State Senate, he served as Chairman of the Corporations and Banking Committee, Chairman of the Senate Municipalities and Election Committee, and as Senate Majority Whip in 1970. In November of 1972, he was elected Oakland County Drain Commissioner, and he has served admirably in this position for the past 28 years, making him the longest active member of the Oakland County Parks and Recreation Commission.

Mr. Kuhn has often been recognized for his efforts. He has received the Ford Outstanding Citizen of the Year Award, the Distinguished Alumni Award at the 75th Anniversary of Central Michigan University, he has been honored by the Michigan Associated Underground Contractors, Inc., in appreciation of his contributions to the underground construction industry, and is a recent recipient of the Oakland County's annual Quality People, Quality County (Q2) Award which recognizes outstanding service to the community.

I applaud Mr. Kuhn on his extraordinary service to Oakland County, the State of Michigan, and our Nation. His leadership in all phases of his 60 year career has been exceptional and will be dearly missed. On behalf of the entire United States Senate, I congratulate and thank Mr. George W. Kuhn on a wonderful and successful career, and wish him the best of luck in retirement.●

TECKLENBURG NAMED PRESIDENT OF BELL ASSOCIATION

● Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize an outstanding South Carolina native, Michael Tecklenburg, who has been named president of the Alexander Graham Bell Association for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing. I have had the privilege of knowing Michael and his family in Charleston for many years and I can't think of an individual more deserving of this honor.

As a young child, Michael was initially diagnosed as being mentally disabled, but his parents recognized their son's abilities and did not give up until doctors discovered his true condition—deafness. Michael went on to excel in his studies at St. Joseph Institute for the Deaf in St. Louis and later at the University of South Carolina Honors College. In 1989, he became the first deaf graduate of Columbia Law School.

Since 1999, Michael has been the Washington, D.C. director of the South Carolina Governor's Office. Prior to joining the Governor's staff, Michael practiced law with the Washington firm of Verner, Liipfert, Bernhard, McPherson and Hand. He has also served as litigation counsel of the U.S. Department of Justice's anti-trust division and as assistant counsel in the Presidential Personnel Office.

At 37, Michael is the youngest person to serve as the Bell Association's president, a small fact that attests to his very large talent. I have no doubt that he will guide the Association to many successes during his two-year tenure. He is a credit to South Carolina and to the Nation.●

IN RECOGNITION OF THE RETIREMENT OF THE HONORABLE GUS CIFELLI

● Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the Honorable Gus Cifelli, who will retire later this year from a career which has included a Purple Heart, a world championship, and nearly 30 years of exemplary service as a District Court Judge in the State of Michigan. Throughout each phase of this career, he has been a leader and an inspiration to those around him.

During World War II, Judge Cifelli served in the United States Marine Corps in the Pacific theater of operations, and was awarded the Purple Heart for bravery. Upon returning home, he attended school at the University of Notre Dame, where he played tackle for four undefeated football teams. Following graduation, he played professional football, and was a member of the 1952 World Champion Detroit Lions, the Green Bay Packers, the Philadelphia Eagles and the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Following his professional football career, Judge Cifelli worked as a casualty insurance agent and investigator and a labor relations representative for the Ford Motor Company. In 1972, the citizens of the State of Michigan's 48th District elected him to serve as their District Court Judge.

During his time on the bench, Mr. Cifelli has been credited with initiating and implementing the Court's small claims mediation procedures, staffed by volunteer attorneys. He has also created the Volunteer in Probation Program, which involves citizens as probation officers, and been responsible for the establishment of many procedures and standards for the Court's operation. To say the least, he has indelibly left his mark upon the 48th Circuit Court.

Judge Cifelli is a member of the American and Michigan Bar Associations, the American Judges' Association, the Justinian Society of Jurists and the American Judicature Society. He is also a member of the Italian American Foundation, the Oakland County Association for Retarded Citizens, and is a former board member of Families in Transition and the Jewish Association for Residential Care.

Judge Cifelli has often been recognized for his efforts. In 1994, he was named Italian American Man of the Year. In 1997, he was the recipient of the Eleanor Roosevelt Humanitarian Award from the State of Israel Bonds. And in 1998, he received the Law Enforcement Award.

I would like to thank Judge Cifelli for a lifetime of extraordinary achievement. Wherever he has gone, he has stood as a role model within the community, and his leadership will be dearly missed. On behalf of the entire United States Senate, I congratulate the Honorable Gus Cifelli on a wonderful and successful career, and wish him the best of luck in retirement.●

IN RECOGNITION OF BEN JOHNSON

● Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, it gives me great pleasure to acknowledge a distinguished public servant and tireless advocate for our nation's cities, Ben Johnson. The people in my hometown of Detroit, Michigan, realize that ours is a nation of cities. Later this month, many individuals will gather there to celebrate the career of this man who devoted his life to ensuring that all Americans are able to share in our nation's wealth and prosperity.

Ben Johnson has dedicated his professional life to expanding opportunity for all Americans. For over two decades, he has tirelessly worked to assist communities, particularly minority communities, in their efforts to fully participate in the pursuit of the American dream.

Since 1993, Mr. Johnson has honorably served in the Clinton Administration. During his tenure in this Administration, he worked in the Office of Public Liaison, and served as both a Special and a Deputy Assistant to the President. Currently, Ben Johnson serves as the Assistant to the President and Director of The White House Office on the President's One America Initiative. The One America Initiative office he oversees is the first free-standing White House office established to close opportunity gaps that exist for minorities and the underserved in this nation. In all of these capacities, he has shown a steadfast commitment to ensure economic opportunities for all people.

Serving in the Clinton Administration was not Mr. Johnson's first job at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. During the Carter Administration he was Director of Consumer Programs and Special Assistant to Esther Peterson, the Special Assistant to the President for Consumer Affairs. In the years between his service at the White House, Mr. Johnson served in a variety of capacities within the District of Columbia's city government, and worked to ensure that the residents of our nation's capital lived in an efficient, safe and clean city.

Ben Johnson can take pride in his long career of service and dedication to assisting minorities and the underserved in our nation. He has been a vocal advocate for the people of Detroit and all the United States. I know my colleagues will join me in saluting Ben Johnson, and in wishing him well in the years ahead.●

GLENN W. LEVEY MIDDLE SCHOOL NAMED 1999–2000 BLUE RIBBON SCHOOL

● Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, in 1982, the United States Department of Education initiated its Blue Ribbon Schools Program. In each year since, the Department has recognized schools throughout the country which excel in all areas of academic leadership, teaching and teacher development, and school curriculum. In other words, Blue Ribbon Schools are recognized because they are the finest public and private secondary schools our Nation has to offer. They are the schools that set the standard for which others strive. I am very proud to report that nine of the 198 Blue Ribbon Schools named by Secretary Richard W. Riley for 1999–2000 are located in the State of Michigan, and I rise today to recognize Glenn W. Levey Middle School in Southfield, Michigan, one of these nine schools.

Glenn W. Levey Middle School takes pride in its tradition of addressing the learning needs of the whole child at a crucial stage in his or her development. The staff is firmly commited to educating all students through a challenging curriculum, a strong academic program, and a collaborative professional development program. This program takes into account the multiple needs of a middle-school population, needs which Levey has long worked to meet.

Levey was one of the first schools in the district to implement interdisciplinary teaming, block scheduling, and to align its curriculum with state and national standards. It is one of a select group of schools in the United States to successfully implement an IMAST (Integrated Mathematics, Science and Technology) Program. As a result of its success in these areas, Levey was one of the first schools in its district to acquire North Central Accreditation, NCA, receiving the highest scores in every NCA category.

The staff and students of Levey Middle School are proud of its history as a leading middle school, and the fact that it has been a catalyst for change inside the district and beyond. The staff and the community continue to set higher standards and hold greater expectations. With supportive parents, hardworking students, and a skilled and dedicated staff, I am confident that Levey Middle School will continue to set the precedent for years to come.

I applaud the students, parents, faculty and administration of Glenn W. Levey Middle School, for I believe this is an award which speaks more to the effort of a united community than it does to the work of a few individuals. With that having been said, I would like to recognize Dr. Linda Paramore-Ford, the Principal of Glenn W. Levey Middle School, whose dedication to making her school one of the finest in our Nation has been instrumental in creating this community. On behalf of the entire United States Senate, I congratulate Glenn W. Levey Middle School on being named a Blue Ribbon School for 1999–2000, and wish the school continued success in the future.●

LAKE ORION HIGH SCHOOL NAMED 1999–2000 BLUE RIBBON SCHOOL

● Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, in 1982, the United States Department of Education initiated its Blue Ribbon Schools Program. In each year since, the Department has recognized schools throughout the country which excel in all areas of academic leadership, teaching and teacher development, and school curriculum. In other words, Blue Ribbon Schools are recognized because they are the finest public and private secondary schools our Nation has to offer. They are the schools that set the standard for which others strive. I am very proud to report that nine of the 198 Blue Ribbon Schools named by Secretary Richard W. Riley for 1999–2000 are located in the State of Michigan, and I rise today to recognize Lake Orion High School in Lake Orion, Michigan, one of these nine schools.

In fall of 1992, Lake Orion High School set about to create school improvement that was purposeful to the lives of teachers and students. Their goals included a desire to maintain high academic standards, engage the learner, relieve stress, facilitate networking, expand curricular opportunities, curb attendance problems, and raise the responsibility of the student for his or her own learning. Ultimately, the mission was to reach the students of today and help them become the leaders of tomorrow.

All this required an enormous amount of time and extensive research. First, a staff committee devised a minimum restructuring of their normal six period days by allotting three hours on Wednesday morning for professional development, a program which was implemented in the fall of 1994. In February of 1994, the Vision of Hope staff committee was formed to investigate the restructuring of the school day. Extensive research, visitations, debate and discussion followed and, in the fall of 1996, a 4 by 4 block schedule was adopted. The block system has resulted in better teacher cooperation, greater flexibility in scheduling, increased student choices and a more meaningful and relevant curriculum for Lake Orion High School students.

Lake Orion High School moved into a new building in the fall of 1997, a state of the art facility which has become an ideal setting for the many innovative changes that have become a part of the curriculum. More importantly, the new building stands as the perfect representation of the overall growth that has occurred at Lake Orion High since the fall of 1992, growth which is a tribute to the shared goals and shared vision that administration and faculty together committed themselves to eight years ago.

I applaud the students, parents, faculty and administration of Lake Orion High School, for I believe this is an award which speaks more to the effort of a united community than it does to the work of a few individuals. With that having been said, I would like to recognize Dr. John S. Kastran, the Principal of Lake Orion High School, whose dedication to making his school one of the finest in our Nation has been instrumental in creating this community. On behalf of the entire United States Senate, I congratulate Lake Orion High School on being named a Blue Ribbon School for 1999–2000, and wish the school continued success in the future. ●

L'ANSE CREUSE MIDDLE SCHOOL—NORTH NAMED 1999–2000 BLUE RIBBON SCHOOL

● Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, in 1982, the United States Department of Education initiated its Blue Ribbon Schools Program. In each year since, the Department has recognized schools throughout the country which excel in all areas of academic leadership, teaching and teacher development, and school curriculum. In other words, Blue Ribbon Schools are recognized because they are the finest public and private secondary schools our Nation has to offer. They are the schools that set the standard for which others strive. I am very proud to report that nine of the 198 Blue Ribbon Schools named by Secretary Richard W. Riley for 1999–2000 are located in the State of Michigan, and I rise today to recognize L'Anse Creuse Middle School - North in Macomb, Michigan, one of these nine schools.

The mission of L'Anse Creuse Middle School—North, MSN, is for each student, with the support of staff, parents and the community, to ''attain measurable growth intellectually, physically, and socially in a safe, positive environment.'' Being recognized as a Blue Ribbon School is a tribute to the success that MSN has achieved in this regard.

Increased staffing, thoughtful scheduling and a dedicated staff have been the primary keys to this success. They have also been the keys to MSN completely ''teaming'' its students, the only school in its district to have done so. Teachers also work as parts of instructional teams—most academic teachers have been teammates for at least three years. This fact illustrates one of the greatest strengths of the school, which is the high level of cooperation that exists between members of the faculty, cooperation which in turn facilitates student learning.

The administration and faculty at MSN quickly realized the advantages that technology offered to their new learning program and made a strong commitment to improving the ability of their students to access computers. Indeed, this commitment to technology has revolutionized the teaching process and the management of the school. Two computer laboratories are now available to staff and students. Students can also sign out laptop computers for overnight use to help them with their homework. In addition, telephones have been placed in each classroom, which allow teachers to better communicate with parents and school offices, as well as with one another.

The administration and faculty of MSN recognize that a truly successful middle school is one that takes elementary school students and prepares them to succeed in the adult world of high school. Their philosophy is represented in this statement from the book The Middle School—and Beyond: ''High quality middle schools result from the creative balance between elementary and secondary perspectives, between specialization and generalization, between curriculum and community, between equity and excellence, between teaching the mind and touching the heart.'' This is the core belief of all MSN faculty and administration, and the programs they have adopted, which have been so successful, reflect their commitment to this belief.

I applaud the students, parents, faculty and administration of MSN, for I believe this is an award which speaks more to the effort of a united community than it does to the work of a few individuals. With that having been said, I would like to recognize Mr. Erick Alsup, the Principal of MSN, whose dedication to making his school one of the finest in our Nation has been instrumental in creating this community. On behalf of the entire United States Senate, I congratulate L'Anse Creuse Middle School—North on being named a Blue Ribbon School for 1999–2000, and wish the school continued success in the future.●

RETIREMENT OF THE HONORABLE ROMAN S. GRIBBS

● Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the Honorable

Roman S. Gribbs, who will retire this year after a long and successful career of service to the State of Michigan. As Sheriff of Wayne County, Mayor of Detroit, and, for the last 18 years, a judge on the State of Michigan Court of Appeals, Judge Gribbs has been a statewide leader for over 30 years, and he has led with a strong and fair hand.

Judge Gribbs was born on December 29, 1925. After graduating from Capac High School in the Michigan Thumb area, he enlisted in the United States Army, from which he received an honorable discharge in 1948, having attained the rank of Sergeant. In 1952, he graduated Magna Cum Laude from the University of Detroit with a degree in Economics and Accounting, and in 1954 he graduated from the University of Detroit Law School with a Juris Doctor degree.

Following graduation, Judge Gribbs remained at the University of Detroit Law School for two years as an instructor. He then spent two years as Assistant Wayne County Prosecutor before moving into private practice with the firm of Shaheen, Gribbs and Shaheen. In 1966, he was named Presiding Traffic Court Referee for the City of Detroit, and in June of 1968 he was appointed Sheriff of Wayne County.

In November of 1970, Judge Gribbs was elected Mayor of the City of Detroit. In his four years as Mayor, he became known not only as a solid leader, but a solid man, who was willing to work with individuals from both sides of the aisle to get things done. He played a large role in helping the city put the unruliness of the late 1960's behind it, and once again begin to move in a forward direction. During this time, he also served as President of the National League of Cities, a fact which illustrates that his leadership capabilities were well recognized by his colleagues.

Following his term as Mayor, Judge Gribbs briefly returned to private practice before being appointed to serve as a Judge for the Third Judicial Court in 1976. In 1982, he was elected to the State of Michigan Court of Appeals, and he has served in this position ever since. Judge Gribbs brings to the bench a keen understanding of the law. More importantly, he carries with him an approach to its application that is deeply rooted in common sense. He makes many difficult decisions each year, and he makes these decisions with his first and foremost priority being to find a just solution to the problem at hand. It is for this reason that he has become a well respected Jurist.

Judge Gribbs is a member of numerous organizations, which will allow him to remain an active member of society following his retirement. These include the Michigan Judicial Institute, the Detroit Institute of Arts, the Michigan Judges' Association, and the Friends of the Archbishop of Detroit. He has also been very active in the Boy Scouts of America, the American Judicature Society, the Family Conciliation Court, the Michigan Commission on Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice, the Michigan Youth Commission, the World Trade Club of Detroit and the Slavic American National Foundation. In addition, he is presently on the Board of Directors of the Thomas M. Cooley Law School, the Public Administration Foundation and the Northville Township Community Foundation.

Mr. President, Judge Gribbs' contributions to the City of Detroit and the State of Michigan are truly immeasurable. I would like to thank him for his dedication and his many efforts throughout his career. His leadership during this time has been exceptional, and it will be dearly missed by the State of Michigan. On behalf of the entire United States Senate, I congratulate the Honorable Roman S. Gribbs on a wonderful and successful career, and wish him the best of luck in retirement.●

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The following petitions and memorials were laid before the Senate and were referred or ordered to lie on the table as indicated:

POM–628. A resolution adopted by the National Conference of Lieutenant Governors relative to a national dialogue on long term car financing reform; to the Committee on Finance.

POM–629. A concurrent resolution adopted by Legislature of the Assembly of the State of Ohio relative to the funding of the employment security system; to the Committee on Appropriations.

H. CON. RES. NO. 60

Whereas, Employers pay a federal tax under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA), 53 Stat. 183 (1939), 26 U.S.C.A. 3301, as a payroll tax that produces revenue dedicated solely to use in the federal-state employment security system; and

Whereas, These employers' payroll taxes pay for administering the employment security system, providing veterans' reemployment assistance, and producing labor market information to assist in matching workers' skills with the employment needs of employers; and

Whereas, Congressional appropriations do not return dollar-for-dollar funds to states, despite adequate availability of funds from dedicated employer taxes, and only thirty-nine cents of every dollar of FUTA taxes paid by Ohio employers is returned to Ohio for dedicated employment security purposes; and

Whereas, Congressional appropriations do not provide adequate, predictable resources and have not kept pace with the fixed costs of operating the employment security system, administering the employment security system, providing veterans' reemployment assistance, and producing labor market information; and

Whereas, The Ohio General Assembly has been forced to provide state general revenue funding to maintain quality service and make technological enhancements because of the unavailability of FUTA tax revenue dedicated for this purpose; now therefore be it

Resolved, That the General Assembly of the State of Ohio urges the Congress of the United States to propose and pass legislation to return adequate funding to states to fund the employment security system, ensuring a fair return to employers for the FUTA taxes they pay; and be it further

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House of Representatives transmit duly authenticated copies of this Resolution to the members of the Ohio Congressional delegation, to the Speaker and Clerk of the United States House of Representatives, to the President Pro Tempore and Secretary of the United States Senate, and to the news media of Ohio.

WHISTLEBLOWER PROTECTION ACT

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, as the ranking member of the Federal Services Subcommittee, I am pleased to introduce legislation to amend the Whistleblower Protection Act, WPA, one of the cornerstone of our nation's good government laws. Enacted in 1989, the WPA is intended to protect federal employees from workplace retaliation when disclosing waste, fraud, or abuse. The law was passed unanimously in 1989, and strengthened through amendments in 1994, again with unanimous support of both houses of Congress. I am joined today by Senator LEVIN, who was a primary sponsor of the landmark 1989 Act and the 1994 amendments.

A key goal of the Whistleblower Protection Act was to close the loopholes that had developed under prior law. Back in 1978, Congress passed the Civil Service Reform Act, which included statutory whistleblower rights that elevated certain disclosures to absolute protection due to their public policy significance. The 1978 Act protected ''a'' disclosure evidencing a reasonable belief of specified misconduct, with certain listed statutory exceptions—classified or other information whose release was specifically barred by other statutes. Despite statutory language, the Federal Court of Appeals, the Merit Systems Protection Board, and the Office of Special Counsel—all created in 1978 to investigate and adjudicate the WPA—appeared to interpret the law as discretionary rather than absolute.

This removed the law's foundation. Congress, in 1978, had intended to create absolute categories of protection to end the inherent chilling effect in constitutional balancing tests that required employees to guess whether they were covered by the First Amendment. Congress sought to eliminate the confusion by resolving the balance in favor of free speech rights for serious misconduct listed in the statute. Unfortunately, the Federal Circuit and administrative agencies did not respect this mandate and created loopholes based on factors irrelevant to the public, such as whether an employee had selfless motives or was the first to expose particular misconduct.

As a result, a cornerstone of the Whistleblower Protection Act was to close these loopholes that arose under prior law by amending protection of ''a'' disclosure to ''any'' disclosure which meets the law's standards. The purpose was to clearly prohibit any new exceptions to the law's coverage. Only Congress has that authority. Again, however, in both formal and informal interpretations of the Act, loopholes continued to proliferate.

Congress responded to this reluctance to abide by congressional intent through the passage of the 1994 amendments. The Governmental Affairs Committee report on the amendments rebutted prior interpretations by the Federal Circuit, the Merit Systems Protection Board, and the Office of Special Counsel that there were exceptions to ''any.'' The Committee report concluded, ''The plain language of the Whistleblower Protection Act extends to retaliation for 'any disclosure,' regardless of the setting of the disclosure, the form of the disclosure, or the person to whom the disclosure is made.''

I am pleased to note that since the enactment of the 1994 amendments, both the Office of the Special Counsel and the Merit Systems Protection Board generally have honored congressional boundaries. However, the Federal Circuit continues to disregard clear statutory language that the Act covers disclosures made to supervisors, to possible wrongdoers (Horton v. Dept. of Navy 66 F.3d 279, 1995), or as part of their job duties. (Willis v. Dept. of Agriculture, 141 F.3d 1139, 1998).

In order to protect the statute's cornerstone that ''any'' lawful disclosure evidencing significant abuse is covered by the Whistleblower Protection Act, our bill would codify the repeated and unconditional statements of congressional intent and legislative history. It would amend sections 2302(b)(8)(A) and 2302(b)(8)(B) of title 5, U.S.C. to protect any disclosure of information. This would be without restriction to time, place, form, motive or context, made to any audience unless specifically excluded in section 2302(b)(8) by an employee or applicant, including a disclosure made in the ordinary course of an employee's duties, which the employee or applicant reasonably believes evidences any violation of any law, rule, or regulation, or other misconduct specified in section 2302(b)(8). These include gross waste, gross mismanagement, abuse of authority, or a substantial and specific danger to public health or safety. Consistent with current law, if the disclosure evidences a prohibited personnel practice against the employee making the disclosure, his or her remedy will continue to be available through section 2302(b)(9), rather than section 2302(b)(8).

The exceptions resulting from the Federal Circuit's rulings defeat the underlying good government goals of the Whistleblower Protection Act by removing protection where it counts the most: for federal employees, who acting as public servants, are carrying out their responsibilities to the public as employees of their agencies. By stripping protection from in-house disclosures, the Federal Circuit imposed loopholes that chill employees from working within their agencies to address potential waste, mismanagement, or abuse issues. If employees seek to solve problems within the chain of command, they could forfeit their rights to whistleblower protection from subsequent retaliation under the Court's rulings in Horton and Willis. To maintain protection against reprisal, federal employees must now bypass normal organizational activities responsible for implementing the law. Moreover, the loophole created by Willis removes protection when employees are performing their job duties. Because of the Court's rulings, the intent of the Act to create an environment where federal employees can safely serve the public on the job has been compromised.

Secondly, the legislation would institutionalize a principle currently expressed by a ban on spending on enforcement of any nondisclosure agreement that does not contain language specifically protecting an employee's rights under various open government statutes. This includes the Whistleblower Protection Act, the Military Whistleblower Protection Act, and the Lloyd Lafollette Act, which prohibits discrimination against government employees who communicate with Congress. This prohibition has been passed on an annual basis since 1988 as part of the yearly appropriations process. Our bill would make it a prohibited personnel practice to take a personnel action implementing or enforcing nondisclosure rules without specific notice of the listed statutes and their supremacy in the event of a conflict.

The appropriations provision, known as the ''anti-gag statute,'' has proved effective against attempts by agencies to override the Whistleblower Protection Act through prior restraint. The law originally passed as a spending control against abuses of national security secrecy, in which as a procedural prerequisite for security clearances, employees had to waive their constitutional and statutory free speech rights. Since its passage, however, it has been useful against gag orders in broad areas of specific and generic public concerns, including gag orders imposed as a precondition for employment and resolution of disputes, as well as general agency policies barring employees from communicating directly with Congress or the public. Prior restraint not only has a severe chilling effect, but strikes at the heart of this body's ability to perform its oversight duties by negating the repeatedly reaffirmed unequivocal congressional policy that whistleblowers have the right to make protected disclosures anonymously as a way to prevent retaliation.

Disclosing classified information is prohibited by law except to specific audiences listed in section 2302 and would not be a protected disclosure under this legislation. Nor would this legislation require the Merit System Protection Board to review security clearance determinations. The Supreme Court clearly spoke on this issue in Dept. of the Navy v. Egan, 484 U.S. 518 (1988), which found that denial of a security clearance is not . . . an ''adverse action.'' The Court upheld the Board's jurisdiction over due process procedures underlying a clearance decision. Egan stands as a bright line test, and if an employee requests review of the substantive judgments underlying a security clearance, OSC examiners, administrative judges, and members of the MSPB would be justified in denying jurisdiction. However, the Board could have jurisdiction if an employee complained that he or she suffered a prohibited personnel practice, because he or she was forced to sign an illegal nondisclosure agreement or its terms were enforced, regardless of context.

Congress repeatedly has reaffirmed its intent that employees should not be forced to sign agreements that supercede an employee's rights under good government statutes. Moreover, Congress has unanimously supported the concept that federal employees should not be subject to prior restraint from disclosing wrongdoing nor suffer retaliation for speaking out.

Lastly, the bill provides the Special Counsel with authority to appear and represent the interests of the Office of Special Counsel in civil actions brought in connection with the exercise of its authority to protect the merit system against prohibited personnel practices under section 2302(b)(8) and violations of the Hatch Act. It also gives the Special Counsel the right to seek review of decisions by the Merit Systems Protection Board before the Federal Circuit where the Special Counsel determines that the Board issued an erroneous decision in a whistleblower retaliation case or in a case arising under the Hatch Act, or that the Board's decision will have a substantial impact on the enforcement of those laws.

Under the bill, in Board cases in which the Special Counsel was not a party, the Special Counsel must first petition the Board for reconsideration of its decision before seeking review. The Court of Appeals shall grant petitions for review by the Special Counsel at its discretion.

This additional authority would enable the Office of Special Counsel to fulfill its statutory missions more effectively to protect federal whistleblowers against retaliation and to enforce the Hatch Act. While OSC, under current law, has a central role as public prosecutor in cases before the Merit Systems Protection Board, it in no way authorizes OSC to seek judicial review of an MSPB decision that the Special Counsel considers erroneous. Our legislation recognizes that providing the Special Counsel the authority to seek such review—in precedential cases—is crucial to ensuring the promotion of the public interests furthered by these statutes.

Moreover, under existing law, the Special Counsel cannot appear to represent himself or herself as a party, or even as an amicus curiae, where another party has invoked the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeals in a whistleblower retaliation or Hatch Act case. As a result, the Special Counsel, who Congress intended would be a vigorous, independent advocate for protection of the merit system, cannot participate at all in the arena in which the law is largely shaped: the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. This bill reflects our conviction that the public interests underlying the whistleblower retaliation laws and the Hatch Act are best served by ensuring that the Special Counsel's views are considered by the Court in important cases.

Mr. President, there is significant history that defines congressional intent with respect to ensuring that federal whistleblowers are protected from retaliatory measures. It is my intention that this bill will begin the needed dialogue to guarantee that any disclosures within the boundaries of the statutory language are protected. As the ranking member of the Federal Services Subcommittee, I will seek hearings in the next Congress on the Whistleblower Protection Act and the amendments I am proposing today. It is my intention to request a hearing that would be independent of any reauthorization hearing held for the MSPB and the OSC, both of whose authority expires in 2002.

There is strong support for the legislation Senator LEVIN and I are introducing today. I ask unanimous consent, in addition to the text of the bill, that I be allowed to insert into the RECORD immediately following my statement, a petition signed by the heads of 72 organizations urging Congress to restore the Whistleblower Protection Act to its 1994 boundaries. Among the 70-plus groups that support this effort are the AFL-CIO, American Federation of Government Employees, Blacks in Government, National Association of Treasury Agents, National Treasury Employees Union, Common Cause, and the Federation of American Scientists. I also wish to extend my appreciation to the Special Counsel and the Acting Chair of the Merit Systems Protection Board for the technical assistance they provided. Lastly, I would like to commend the Government Accountability Project for its dedication and perseverance over the years. Since 1977, GAP has sought to protect the public interest and promote government accountability by defending whistleblowers.

I urge my colleagues to join me in the effort to ensure that congressional intent embodied in the Whistleblower Protection Act is codified to ensure that the law is not weakened further.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3190

The granting of the petition for judicial review shall be at the discretion of the Court of Appeals.''.

WHISTLEBLOWER PROTECTION ACT PETITION—SIGNERS AS OF OCTOBER 3, 2000

Whereas: The undersigned organizations believe that freedom of speech is the foundation of democracy, and agree with Congress' repeated judgment that it is sound public policy to prohibit reprisals against whistleblowers who challenge Executive branch misconduct through disclosures of illegality, mismanagement, abuse of authority, gross waste and substantial and specific danger to public health or safety; and

Whereas: The Whistleblower Protection Act (WPA) is the nation's premier good government statute to protect federal workers who risk retaliation by disclosing betrayals of the public trust; and

Whereas: There is an overwhelming legislative mandate for this law, which Congress passed unanimously in 1989 and unanimously strengthened in 1994; and

Whereas: The law needs to be further strengthened, rather than weakened. Government surveys have confirmed that some half million employees annually witness serious government misconduct but choose to do nothing; and

Whereas: The Federal Circuit Court of Appeals, which has a monopoly of judicial review for the Act, has functionally overturned the law since congressional approval of 1994 amendments strengthening it; and

Whereas: The Court has created a series of loopholes in the WPA removing the Act's coverage in the most common scenarios where it is needed:

when employees blow the whistle to coworkers, superiors or others in the chain of command, or to suspected wrongdoers;

when employees' disclosures challenge policies that are illegal or otherwise improper, or when employees make disclosures in the course of doing their jobs.

These loopholes flatly contradict explicit 1989 statutory language, which protects disclosures in ''any'' context, and 1994 legislative history warning the Federal Circuit that ''any'' means ''any,'' without restrictions and defining it to ban exceptions for ''time, place, motive or context;'' and

Whereas: In 1999 the Court made it practically impossible or anyone to be recognized as deserving whistleblower protection regardless of circumstances. Under the Act passed by Congress, whistleblowers qualify for protection if they make disclosures that they ''reasonably believe evidences'' wrongdoing. However, without an explanation of the basis for overturning some twenty years of prior precedent, the Court ruled that an employee does not qualify for protection without ''irrefragable proof'' of the alleged wrongdoing. Webster's Dictionary defines ''irrefragable'' as ''incontrovertible, undeniable, incapable of being overthrown;'' and

Whereas: The practical impact of the decision is that if there are two sides to a story about alleged misconduct, it is not possible for a federal employee to be protected as a whistleblower. In light of this decision, no organization can responsibly advise whistleblowers that they have a realistic chance of defending themselves; and

Whereas: In the same 1999 decision, the Court ordered that every employee who exercise Whistleblower Protection Act rights must be investigated to determine whether the employee had a conflict of interest for raising the issue in the first place. As a result, the Act actually subjects whistleblowers to intimidation and harassment rather than protecting them from it. This violates Congress' 1994 ban on retaliatory investigations for engaging in protected activity such as exercising appeal rights; and

Whereas: There has never been any expression of legislative support either for the loopholes created by the Court or its requirement that whistleblowers prove their charges ''irrefragably.'' The court' extremist activism overturned the repeatedly stated unanimous intent. Restoring the congressional mandate does not require opening any new debates on previously resolved issues; and

Whereas: A cornerstone of any free speech law is prohibiting prior restraint, threats and pre-emptive strikes that silence employees through mandatory nondisclosure agreements and gag orders. For over 12 years Congress has passed an annual spending ban on enforcing such gag orders. The time has come to eliminate the uncertainty of annual renewal for this free speech cornerstone.

Therefore: We, the undersigned organizations, petition Congress to restore the Whistleblower Protection Act to its 1994 boundaries, prevent recurrence of judicial activism that neutralizes the value of this good government law and permanently pass the prohibition on gag orders. This can occur by codifying current appropriations language and prior WPA legislative history to cancel judicial decisions that unraveled the law, and by restoring normal judicial review in any U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals—the normal course under the Administrative Procedures Act and the structure approved by Congress when the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978 was passed.

S. 3191. A bill to create a Federal drug court program, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

FEDERAL DRUG COURTS FOUNDATION ACT OF 2000

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the ''Federal Drug Courts Foundation Act of 2000.'' This legislation will usher in an new era in the struggle against drug-related crime by establishing a system of federal drug courts. These courts will help bring an end to the cycle of repeated and escalating crimes committed by small-time drug offenders. As General Barry McCaffrey has said: ''The establishment of drug courts . . . constitutes one of the most monumental changes in social justice in this country since World War II.''

Mr. President, I have long fought against the scourge of drug-related crime that has plagued this nation. The legislation I introduce today will continue that fight by creating a three-year pilot program establishing federal drug courts in ten cities selected by the Department of Justice.

Drug courts are a response to the fact that more than fifty percent of state parole violators were under the influence of drugs, alcohol, or both when they committed their new offense. They represent a creative new way to address this disturbing fact and are aimed at cleaning up first-time, small-time offenders through comprehensive supervision, drug testing and treatment.

Drug court programs have been successfully implemented at the state level. Since 1989, more than 100,000 drug offenders have participated in drug court programs at the state level and there are now more than 400 drug courts in existence. These drug courts have proven to be both effective and cost-efficient. A study in one New York drug court showed that only 11% of offenders were rearrested as compared to 27% in the general prison population. And while the incarceration of a drug offender costs between $20,000 and $50,000 annually, a drug court costs less than $2,500 per offender.

Drugs continue to be one of the greatest threats to our children and to the well-being of our communities. For this reason, we must continue to fight against the scourge of illegal drugs ravaging our communities. To that end, I am introducing the ''Federal Drug Courts Foundations Act of 2000,'' legislation designed to sensibly combat the epidemic of drug-related crime. I hope that this much-needed legislation will enjoy your support and I look forward to working with each and every one of you in order to get this legislation enacted into law.

I ask unanimous consent the text of the legislation be included in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3191

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Drug Court Act of 2000''.

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) DRUG COURTS.—The term ''drug courts'' means a Federal district court of general jurisdiction in a high drug crime district, as defined by the Department of Justice, that will—

(A) expedite the criminal justice process for eligible offenders until such time as they are declared ineligible or selected for inclusion in a drug court program; and

(B) maintain jurisdiction over the offenders' cases before, during, and after participation in the program.

(2) DRUG COURT PROGRAM.—The term ''drug court program'' means a program for substance abuse treatment and rehabilitation for eligible offenders that—

(A) requires a successful plea agreement immediately following conviction or in lieu of incarceration; and

(B) is operated by a drug court in a State criminal justice system that has agreed to accept, for a fee per offender, all offenders selected for inclusion in such a program by a Federal drug court.

(3) ELIGIBLE OFFENDER.—The term ''eligible offender'' means a person who meets the requirements established in section 4 of this Act.

(4) OFFICE.—The term ''Office'' means the Office of Justice Programs of the Department of Justice.

SEC. 3. AUTHORIZATION OF DRUG COURTS.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF DRUG COURTS.—10 Federal district courts in the United States, as selected by the Office, are authorized to establish drug courts under this Act.

(b) DRUG COURT RESPONSIBILITIES.—Each Federal drug court shall enter into an agreement with a State drug court program that will allow all eligible offenders to participate in the drug court program of that State, in exchange for the payment of a fee equal to the amount of the cost of the program for that offender. Each such agreement shall be subject to the approval of the Office.

(c) OVERSIGHT.—Except as specified in this Act, rules governing drug courts will be promulgated separately by each participating Federal district court, with the advice of the Office, and subject to Department of Justice approval.

SEC. 4. ELIGIBLE OFFENDERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—An ''eligible offender'' means a person who, by virtue of a Federal crime committed and other factors that the drug court may consider, may be considered for inclusion in the drug court program.

(b) PROGRAM PARTICIPANTS.—Drug court program eligibility under this Act shall not be available to any offender who—

(1) is accused of violent criminal offenses;

(2) is not accused of drug, drug-related, or drug-motivated offenses;

(3) has previously been convicted of a Federal or State violent felony offense; or

(4) for any other reason within the discretion of the court, does not meet all requirements of the applicable drug court.

(b) ADDITIONAL ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS.—In addition to the criteria in subsection (a), no offender will be considered eligible for participation in a drug court program unless, following a reasonable investigation conducted according to standards set by the court, and one or more hearings before the court, consensus agreement is achieved among the prosecutor, the defense counsel, and the presiding judge, that the offender is a person who—

(1) currently suffers from a drug dependency;

(2) would benefit from the drug court program; and

(3) is appropriate for inclusion in the drug court program.

(c) INELIGIBLE OFFENDER HANDLING.—If at any point before admission into the drug court program, an offender is found ineligible for participation in a drug court program under this Act, the case of that offender shall be processed by the Federal district court under the applicable rules of procedure and sentencing.

(d) REQUIREMENTS FOR DRUG PROGRAM PARTICIPANTS.—Each eligible offender shall understand, sign, and acknowledge understanding of drug court documents, including—

(1) a waiver of the right of the offender to a speedy trial;

(2) a written plea agreement that sets forth the offense charged, the sanction to be imposed in the event of a breach of the agreement, and the penalty to be imposed, if any, in the event of a successful completion of the drug court program, except that incarceration may not be imposed upon successful completion of the program;

(3) a written treatment plan that is subject to modification at any time during the drug court program;

(4) a written performance contract requiring the offender to enter the drug court program as directed by the court and participate until completion, withdrawal, or removal by the court; and

(5) a limited applicability waiver of confidentiality for information relating to the treatment program of the offender, and progress in that program, limited only to agencies and parties participating in the drug court program, and agencies and parties participating in oversight of the case of the offender by the drug court.

SEC. 5. DRUG COURT OPERATIONS.

(a) IDENTIFICATION OF DRUG PROGRAM PARTICIPANTS.—The Office of the United States Attorney office in a Federal drug court, through the Office, shall establish procedures for the identification of eligible offenders not later than 30 days after the date of arrest of the alleged offender.

(b) PARTICIPANT FITNESS EXAMINATION.—A United States Attorney, defense counsel, and a treatment professional affiliated with the drug court program in which the offender would be placed, shall separately conduct investigations regarding the eligibility of an offender for inclusion in the drug court program. Upon a finding by any of the examining parties that the offender is ineligible to participate in the drug court program, the alleged offender shall be subject to prosecution under the applicable rules of procedure and sentencing.

(c) HEARING.—Upon agreement of the prosecutor, defense counsel, and treatment professional that an offender is eligible for the drug court program, the prosecutor, defense counsel, treatment professional, and offender shall appear for a hearing before a drug court judge, who shall receive testimony from each of the examining parties.

(d) JUDICIAL DISCRETION.—Upon a finding by the judge that the offender is eligible for inclusion in the drug court program, the judge shall obtain from the offender all appropriate drug court documents, and the offender shall immediately be removed to the custody of the drug treatment program. Should the offender not agree to any of the conditions of participation in the drug court program, the offender shall be subject to prosecution under the applicable rules of procedure and sentencing.

(e) DRUG COURT RESPONSIBILITIES.—The drug court shall—

(1) assign to the drug court program responsibility over all treatment, supervision, education, job skills training, and other ancillary services incidental to the program;

(2) hold regular hearings, attended by the judge, prosecutor, defense counsel, and treatment professional to assess the progress of the offender within the drug court program; and

(3) assess any and all disciplinary sanctions, penalties, and fines resulting from a violation by the offender of the drug court program plea agreement.

(f) DISCIPLINARY SANCTIONS.—The drug court shall establish methods for measuring application of disciplinary sanctions, which may include—

(1) short term confinement;

(2) reintroducing the offender into the drug court program after a disciplinary action for a minor violation of the treatment plan; and

(3) removal from the drug court program and reinstatement of the criminal case.

(g) DRUG COURT RECORDS.—All drug courts shall maintain records regarding rates of recidivism, relapses, restarts, sanctions imposed, and incentives given. All such data shall be collected and reported annually by the Office.

(h) ADMINISTRATIVE FEES.—For each offender admitted to the drug court program, the drug court shall pay to the drug court program an amount agreed upon at the outset of the relationship between the drug court and drug court program. This amount shall represent payment for the cost of treatment, supervision, rehabilitation, education, job skills training, and other ancillary services that the program of the offender shall require.

SEC. 6. DRUG COURT PROGRAM PARTICIPANT SUPPORT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Each drug court program shall provide all participating offenders with a personalized program, including elements of treatment, supervision, rehabilitation, education, and job skills training, and other ancillary services that the program of the offender shall require.

(b) PARTICIPANT DEVELOPMENT.—Each drug court program shall ensure, at a minimum—

(1) strong linkage between all agencies participating in the drug court program, and the drug court judge, prosecutor, and defense counsel responsible for oversight of the case;

(2) access for all participating agencies to information on the progress of the offender within the program, notwithstanding normally confidential treatment and counseling information;

(3) vigilant supervision and monitoring procedures;

(4) random substance abuse testing not less frequently than weekly;

(5) provisions for noncompliance, modification of the treatment plan, and revocation proceedings;

(6) availability of residential treatment facilities and outpatient services; and

(7) methods for measuring performance-based effectiveness of the services of individual treatment providers.

SEC. 7. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Subject to an appropriations Act, there is authorized to be appropriated for each of fiscal years 2000 through 2004, the following amounts:

(1) $15,000,000, to the Office, to carry out a pilot program to establish a Federal drug court in each of 10 cities in the United States that are statistically considered high drug crime areas.

(2) $5,000,000 to the Department of Justice, for additional prosecutorial resources, including personnel, dedicated to drug enforcement in each of the 10 cities in which a Federal drug court is established under this Act.

By Mr. TORRICELLI:

S. 3192. A bill to provide grants to law enforcement agencies to purchase firearms needed to perform law enforcement duties; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

POLICE GUN BUYBACK ASSISTANCE ACT

Mr. TORRECELLI. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill that will reduce the number of firearms on the street and help guns out of the hands of criminals. In the wake of the tragic shootings this year in Michigan and Pennsylvania, we are reminded of what happens when the wrong people have access to guns. These tragic shootings become even more troubling when they involve a former police gun or firearms previously involved in a crime.

It is vital that law enforcement agencies have the very best equipment available to ensure their safety and to protect America's communities, but purchasing new weapons can be expensive, particularly for cash-strapped municipalities. To deal with this problem, for almost two decades law enforcement agencies have been reselling their old guns to dealers or auctioning them off to the public to offset the cost of purchasing new guns. However, this practice has led to an unintended result—increased risk that these guns would end up back on the streets and in the hands of criminals.

In the past nine years, firearms once used by law enforcement agencies have been involved in more than 3,000 crimes, including 293 homicides, 301 assaults and 279 drug-related crimes throughout the United States. Just last year, Bufford Furrow, a white supremacist, used a Glock pistol that was decommissioned and sold by a police agency in the State of Washington to terrorize and shoot children at a Jewish community center in Los Angeles and then kill a postal worker. Members of the Latin Kings, a violent Chicago street gang, used guns formerly owned by the Miami-Dade Police Department in Florida to commit violent crimes in Illinois. And a 1996 investigation by the New York State inspector general found that weapons used by New York law enforcement officers had been used in crimes in at least two other states.

In is time that we help our law enforcement agencies do what they have long tried to do—get out of the business of selling guns. Under the bill I introduce today, law enforcement agencies will no longer be forced to resell their old guns or guns seized from criminals to help them obtain the new weapons that are necessary to carry out their duties. Instead, this bill would provide grants to state or local law enforcement agencys to assist them in purchasing new firearms so that they will no longer be forced to sell their decommissioned firearms to anyone. In order to receive these grants, the law enforcement agencies must simply agree to either destroy their decommissioned guns or not sell them to the public.

A growing number of states and cities have already decided to ban the practice of pouring old police guns into the consumer market. They recognize that the extra money gained from selling old police guns is not worth the price of possible human suffering or loss of life. It is simply bad policy for governments to be suppliers of guns and potentially add to the problem of gun violence in America. Regardless of where one stands on gun control, logic, and common sense and decency demand that we also recognize this simple truth and unite behind moving this bill to passage.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the legislation appear in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3192

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Police Gun Buyback Assistance Act''.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Buford Furrow, a white supremacist, used a Glock pistol decommissioned and sold by a law enforcement agency in the State of Washington, to shoot children at a Jewish community center in Los Angeles and kill a postal worker.

(2) Twelve firearms were recently stolen during shipment from the Miami-Dade Police Department to Chicago, Illinois. Four of these firearms have been traced to crimes in Chicago, Illinois, including a shooting near a playground.

(3) In the past 9 years, decommissioned firearms once used by law enforcement agencies have been involved in more than 3,000 crimes, including 293 homicides, 301 assaults, and 279 drug-related crimes.

(4) Many State and local law enforcement departments also engage in the practice of reselling firearms involved in the commission of a crime and confiscated. Often these firearms are assault weapons that were in circulation prior to the restrictions imposed by the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994.

(5) Law enforcement departments in the States of New York and Georgia, the City of Chicago, and other localities have adopted the practice of destroying decommissioned firearms.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this Act is to reduce the number of firearms on the streets by assisting State and local law enforcement agencies to eliminate the practice of transferring decommissioned firearms to any person.

SEC. 3. PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.

(a) GRANTS.—The Attorney General may make grants to States or units of local government—

(1) to assist States and units of local government in purchasing new firearms without transferring decommissioned firearms to any person; and

(2) to destroy decommissioned firearms.

(b) ELIGIBILITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), to be eligible to receive a grant under this Act, a State or unit of local government shall certify that it has in effect a law or official policy that—

(A) eliminates the practice of transferring any decommissioned firearm to any person; and

(B) provides for the destruction of a decommissioned firearm.

(2) EXCEPTION.—A State or unit of local government may transfer a decommissioned firearm to another law enforcement agency.

(c) USE OF FUNDS.—A State or unit of local government that receives a grant under this Act shall use such grant only to purchase new firearms.

SEC. 4. APPLICATIONS.

(a) STATE APPLICATIONS.—To request a grant under this Act, the chief executive of a State shall submit an application, signed by the Attorney General of the State requesting the grant, to the Attorney General in such form and containing such information as the Attorney General may reasonably require.

(b) LOCAL APPLICATIONS.—To request a grant under this Act, the chief executive of a unit of local government shall submit an application, signed by the chief law enforcement officer in the unit of local government requesting the grant, to the Attorney General in such form and containing such information as the Attorney General may reasonably require.

SEC. 5. REGULATIONS.

Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall promulgate regulations to implement this Act, which shall specify the information that must be included and the requirements that the States and units of local government must meet in submitting applications for grants under this Act.

SEC. 6. REPORTING.

A State or unit of local government shall report to the Attorney General not later than 2 years after funds are received under this Act, regarding the implementation of this Act. Such report shall include budget assurances that any future purchase of a firearm by the law enforcement agency will be possible without transferring a decommissioned firearm.

SEC. 7. DEFINITION.

For purposes of this Act—

(1) the term ''firearm'' has the same meaning given such term in section 921(a)(3) of title 18, United States Code;

(2) the term ''decommissioned firearm'' means a firearm—

(A) no longer in service or use by a law enforcement agency; or

(B) involved in the commission of a crime and confiscated and no longer needed for evidentiary purposes; and

(3) the term ''person'' has the same meaning given such term in section 1 of title 1 of the United States Code.

SEC. 8. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this Act $10,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 2001 through 2005.

By Mr. MURKOWSKI:

S. 3193. A bill to amend section 527 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to exempt State and local political committees from required notification of section 527 status; to the Committee on Finance.

FINANCE DISCLOSURE LEGISLATION

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, in our desire to close the so-called 527 loophole involving campaign financing earlier this year, I believe we may have gone too far in the disclosure requirements.

In the bill ultimately creating P.L. 106–230, we essentially adopted the House language without any amendments. When it became law on July 1, 2000, one of the provisions required candidates for state and local offices to file Form 8871 by July 31, 2000.

The goal of the new law is to find out who is contributing to 527 political organizations that have proliferated in recent years. The organizations. including the Sierra Club's 527, were taking in large size donations and yet not have and to reveal who the donors were.

Under the new law, contributions in excess of $200 by a single person must be disclosed. Expenditures by a 527 organization in excess of $500 also would have to be disclosed. However, these financial disclosures—the heart and soul of the bill—do not apply to candidates for state and local elections. Clearly, the rules for state and local elections are to be regulated by the states, not the federal government.

Yet, under the new law, candidates for state and local offices must file Form 8871 with the IRS. This form essentially notifies IRS that state or local officeholder has established a 527 organization. It must also list the name and address of the organization, the purpose of the organization; the names and addresses of its officers and highly compensated persons and identify a contact person and custodian of records and its Board of Directors (if any).

Since we have exempted state and local candidates from having to file financial disclosure statements, I see no reason why they should be burdened with filing Form 8857. This requirement serves no purpose except to create needless paperwork for both the candidates and the IRS.

That is why I am introducing legislation to exempt state and local candidates from this burden just as the current law exempts 527 Organizations that do not expect that they will raise $25,000 do not have to file this information.

My bill is retroactive so that some candidates for local office who were caught unaware of the filing requirement do not face any penalties.

It is my hope that after this election, when campaign finance reform will be debated in a less political environment, that this common sense technical amendment will be included in reform legislation.

By Mr. AKAKA (for himself, Mr. MURKOWSKI, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. BAYH, Mr. REID, and Mr. INOUYE):

S. 3196. A bill to reauthorize and amend the Spark M. Matsunaga Hydrogen Research, Development, and Demonstration Act of 1990, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources

GEORGE E. BROWN, JR. HYRODGEN FUTURE ACT

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I rise today with Senator MURKOWSKI and Senator BINGAMAN, Chairman and Ranking Member of Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, my colleague on the Committee, Senator BAYH, my friend from Nevada, Senator REID, and my senior colleague from Hawaii, Senator INOUYE, to introduce legislation that will accelerate the ongoing efforts for the development of a fuel for the future—hydrogen. Hydrogen is an efficient and environmentally friendly energy carrier that can be obtained using conventional or renewable resources. There is strong evidence that hydrogen can be a solution for America's long-term energy needs.

All indications suggest that America's summer of discontent is going to continue and become the winter of discontent with respect to energy prices. Americans have paid record-breaking prices at the pump this summer. They will continue to suffer escalating prices this winter too. Higher energy prices hit most those Americans who can afford it the least.

Our Nation is heavily dependent on fossil fuels. We rely on imports to meet our needs. Our dependence on imported oil has been increasing for years. Oil imports have been rising for the past two decades. The combination of lower domestic production and increased demand has led to imports making up a larger share of total oil consumed in the United States. In 1992, crude oil imports accounted for approximately 45 percent of our domestic demand. Last year crude oil imports amounted for 58 percent. The Energy Information Administration's Short-Term Outlook forecasts that oil imports will exceed 60 percent of total demand this year. EIA's long-term forecasts have oil imports constituting 66 percent of U.S. supply by 2010, and more than 71 percent by 2000.

Continued reliance on such large quantities of imported oil will frustrate our efforts to develop a national energy policy and set the stage for energy emergencies in the future.

Mr. President, the way to improve our energy outlook is to adopt energy conservation, encourage energy efficiency, and support renewable energy programs. Above all, we must develop energy resources that diversify our energy mix and strengthen our energy security.

Now is the time to increase our efforts to develop new sources of energy. Growing evidence points to hydrogen as a fuel to resolve our energy problems and satisfy a wide variety of the world's energy needs.

Hydrogen as a fuel is not a new concept. For more than two decades there has been global interest in hydrogen as a renewable fuel. Progress is being made at an accelerating pace. Fuel cells for distributed stationary power are being commercialized and installed in various locations in the United States and worldwide. Transit bus demonstrations are underway in both the United States and Europe. Major automobile companies are poised to deploy fuel cell passengers cars within the next few years. All these activities involve government and private sector cooperation.

But many problems and challenges remain. Hydrogen production costs from both fossil and renewable energy sources remain high. Attractive low-cost storage technologies are not available. There is an inadequate infrastructure.

We need to address these challenges and barriers if we are to enjoy the fruits of an efficient and environmentally friendly energy source. This Senator believes that an aggressive research and development program can help us overcome many of these challenges such as bringing down the production costs from fossil and renewable sources, by advancing storage technologies, and addressing safety concerns with efforts in establishing codes and standards.

Our Nation needs an active and focused research, development, and demonstration program to make the breakthroughs necessary to make hydrogen a viable source of energy.

My predecessor, Senator Spark Matsunaga was one of the first to focus attention on hydrogen by sponsoring hydrogen research legislation. The Matsunaga Hydrogen Act, as this legislation has come to be known, was designed to accelerate development of domestic capability to produce an economically renewable energy source in sufficient quantities to reduce the Nation's dependence on conventional fuels. As a result of Senator Matsunaga's vision, the Department of Energy has been conducting research that will advance technologies for cost-effective production, storage, and utilization of hydrogen. The Hydrogen Future Act of 1996 expanded the research, and development, and demonstration program under the Matsunaga Act. It authorized activities leading to production, storage, transformation, and use of hydrogen for industrial, residential, transportation, and utility applications.

My good friend and former colleague in the House, Representative George E. Brown, Jr., was instrumental in the introduction and passage of the Hydrogen Future Act. Serving as the Chairman and Ranking Member of the House Science Committee, Congressman Brown earned a reputation as a true champion and advocate for science. He was an early supporter of hydrogen as a source of energy. He was the principal sponsor of the companion legislation to Senator Matsunaga's bill in the House. Congressman Brown passed away on July 15, 1999.

Mr. President, the legislation I am introducing today reauthorizes and amends the Hydrogen Future Act of 1996. I propose that Congress dedicate this legislation to George Brown's memory and cite the Act as George E. Brown, Jr. Hydrogen Future Act.

The legislation I am introducing today is consistent with the thinking of experts who have looked at this issue. The President's Committee of Advisors on Science and Technology (PCAST) issued a report titled ''Federal Energy Research and Development for the Challenges of the Twenty-First Century'' in response to a request from President Clinton to review the national energy R&D portfolio and make recommendations on how to ensure that the U.S. has a program that addresses its energy needs for the next century. In its report issued in November 1997, PCAST proposed a substantial increase in Federal spending for applied energy technology R&D, with the largest share going to energy efficiency and renewable energy technologies. This was a major change in focus. With this new R&D emphasis, the PCAST report acknowledges and supports advances in a wide range of both hydrogen-producing and hydrogen-using technologies. The bill I am introducing today supports the recommendations of PCAST.

The Hydrogen Technical Advisory Panel (HTAP) was established pursuant to the Spark Matsunaga Hydrogen Act. The panel's primary functions are to advise the Secretary of Energy on the implementation and conduct of the Department of Energy's Hydrogen Program and to review and make recommendations on the economic, technical, and environmental consequences of deploying hydrogen energy systems. The Hydrogen Future Act gave additional functions to HTAP. The Act requires HTAP to evaluate the effectiveness of the Department's Hydrogen Program and make recommendations for improvements. HTAP is also required to make recommendations for future legislation.

The panel, appointed by the Secretary of Energy, has broad representation from industry, government, and academia. While some members of the panel represent the hydrogen community, others represent fossil energy, industrial gases, transportation, and environment groups—areas affected by the development and deployment of hydrogen energy systems. This mix provides the panel with a balanced perspective that allows diversity of viewpoints. Members serve on a pro-bono basis.

HTAP, in its report to Congress has strongly endorsed reauthorizing the Hydrogen Future Act. Today's bill reflects most of the recommendations of this expert body.

The long-term vision for hydrogen energy is that sometime well into 21st century, hydrogen will join electricity as one of our Nation's primary energy carriers, and hydrogen will ultimately be produced from renewable sources. But fossil fuels will be a significant long-term transitional resource. In the next twenty years, increasing concerns about global climate changes and energy security concerns will help bring about penetration of hydrogen in several niche markets. The growth of fuel cell technology will allow the introduction of hydrogen in both transportation and electricity sectors.

We are a long way from realizing this vision for hydrogen energy. But progress is being made and many challenges and barriers remain. Sustained effort is the only way to overcome these challenges and barriers. We need to support a strategy that focuses on mid-term and long-term goals. We must support development of technologies that enable distributed electric-generation fuel cell systems and hydrogen fuel cell vehicles for transportation applications. For the long-term, we should look to hydrogen technologies that enhance renewable systems and offer society the promise of clean, abundant fuels.

Significant forces are coming together that may accelerate wider acceptance of hydrogen as an energy source. Industry is moving ahead with fuel cell developments at a rapid pace. Many companies are forming partnerships to bring new technologies to the market place. Daimler-Chrysler, Ford, and Ballard have formed a partnership and pledged $1.5 billion for commercialization of automotive fuel cells. Edison Development Company, General Electric, SoCal Gas, and Plug Power have agreement to commercialize residential fuel cells. There are other companies pursuing the same market sector and are developing high performance fuel cell technology for automotive and electrical generation systems.

Initiatives for controls of emissions from automobiles such as California's zero emissions vehicle requirements favor early introduction of hydrogen powered vehicles. There is significant industry interest in bringing fuel cell technology to mining operations.

The Department of Energy administers the Hydrogen Program that supports a broad range of research and development projects in the areas of hydrogen production, storage, and use in a safer and less expensive manner in the near future. Progress in several research and development areas shows promise that some of these new technologies may become available for wider use in the next few years. Some of the promising technologies include advanced natural gas- and biomass-based hydrogen production technologies, high pressure gaseous and cryogas storage systems, reversible PEM fuel cell systems. Others lay the groundwork for long range opportunities.

The Hydrogen Program utilizes the talents of our national laboratories and our universities. National Renewable Energy Laboratory, Sandia, Lawrence Livermore, Los Alamos, and Oak Ridge, as well as Jet Propulsion Laboratory are involved in the program. DOE Field Office at Golden, Colorado, and Nevada Operations Office in Nevada are also involved. University-led centers-of-excellence have been established at Florida Solar Energy Center at University of Miami and University of Hawaii. The U.S. participation in the International Energy Agency contributes to the advancement of DOE hydrogen research through international cooperation.

The DOE Hydrogen Program is well managed and run by dedicated managers and capable and talented technologists. The program has also built strong links with the industry. This has resulted in strong industry participation and cost sharing. HTAP, in its review of the program reached similar conclusions.

The legislation I am introducing today reauthorizes the Hydrogen Future Act and adds provisions for the demonstration of hydrogen technologies at government facilities. It highlights the potential of hydrogen as an efficient and environmentally friendly source of energy, the need for a strong partnership between the Federal government, industry, and academia, and the importance of continued support for hydrogen research. It fosters collaboration between Federal agencies, state and local governments, universities, and industry. It encourages private sector investment and cost sharing in the development of hydrogen as an energy source.

The legislation authorizes $250 million over the next five years for research and development of technologies for hydrogen production, storage and use. This will allow advancement of technologies such as smaller-scale production systems that are applicable to distributed-generation and vehicle applications, advanced pressure vessels, photobiological and photocatalytic production of hydrogen, and carbon nanotubes, graphite nanofibers, and fullerenes.

It also authorizes $50 million for conducting integrated demonstrations of hydrogen technologies at government facilities. This will help secure industry participation through competitive solicitations for technology development and testing. It may encourage integration of renewable energy resources with hydrogen storage in distributed power scenarios. It will test the viability of hydrogen production, storage, and use. It will lead to development of hydrogen-based operating experience acceptable to meet safety codes and standards.

By supporting the development of hydrogen technologies, we will be ushering in an era of a non-polluting source of energy that will reduce our dependence on foreign oil. The price we will pay for development of this clean and renewable energy is minuscule compared to the benefits. And Mr. President, if we develop hydrogen technologies, we will be less likely to be held hostage by our friends in the Middle East.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

By Mr. KERREY (for himself, Mr. SANTORUM, Mr. MOYNIHAN, Mr. GRASSLEY, and Mr. BREAUX):

S. 3200. A bill to amend the Social Security Act to provide each American child with a KidSave Account, and for other purposes: to the Committee on Finance.

KIDSAVE ACCOUNTS

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, many of the things we do in the Senate involve making investments in America's future. Investments in research through the National Science Foundation or investments in infrastructure development through the Department of Transportation reap great rewards for the citizens of tomorrow.

Today, I am pleased to be joined by Senators SANTORUM, MOYNIHAN, GRASSLEY, and BREAUX in introducing a piece of legislation that represents a remarkable new investment in the financial security of future generations of Americans.

This proposal, called KidSave, aims to give every American a stake in the growth of the American economy, to help all Americans accumulate wealth and assets, and to teach all Americans firsthand the value of savings and compounding interest. Not only will this legislation promote savings and investments across all income levels, but it will also help to close the growing wealth gap.

One of the discoveries I have made in researching this idea is that the most important variable in compounding interest rates is time. The earlier you start, the more wealth you build.

One of the poster children for understanding the value of compounding interest is Osceola McCarty. Osceola was a Hattiesburg, Mississippi, washerwoman, who after more than seven decades of low-wage work donated $150,000 to the University of Southern Mississippi—wealth she had built by saving a little bit of money over a long period of time.

Wealth has also empowered the Federal employees I talk to in the halls of the Senate, who are excited about their ability to participate in their government Thrift Savings Plan, TSP, and who talk more knowledgeably than me about index funds and the difference between a stock and bond. These employees, and other workers across the country who are able to participate in employer-sponsored pension plans and IRAs, feel more confident about their own futures and their own retirement security. They are confident that they won't face poverty in their final years.

Our KidSave proposal will gave that same sense of confidence and pride in one's future to all future generations of Americans.

How does KidSave work? The KidSave program would use part of the surplus to provide each newborn child with a $2,000 KidSave retirement savings loan to jumpstart his or her retirement savings. Each KidSave loan will be deposited into a qualified KidSave account. The KidSave program will be administered by the Thrift Savings Plan, TSP, Board. Future KidSave loans will be adjusted for inflation, CPI, beginning in 2008.

Parents and grandparents will be able to add $500 per year to each KidSave account for each child under the age of 19.

A KidSave loan recipient—with no additional account contributions—can expect to generate future retirement savings of $250,000 by the age of 67 (assuming an 8 percent rate of return). Furthermore, since KidSave accounts are personal property, they can be willed on to an heir as part of an estate.

How will these KidSave loans be financed? Our legislation uses Social Security surpluses to finance the loans in the early years of the program. But, as older KidSavers begin to repay their KidSave loans, the program will virtually become self-funded, as the loan repayment revenues are used to fund the KidSave loans of a new generation.

Since the $2,000 KidSave loan is—just that—a loan, KidSavers are expected to pay back the loan amount at the CPI inflated rate starting at age 30. The KidSave loan repayment mechanism is designed in such a way to allow future KidSavers to pay back 20 percent of the loan each year for five years, beginning at the age of 30. In the rare event that an individual's KidSave account may perform poorly, no individual will have to pay more than 20 percent of his total account value back in any given year.

Building upon existing investment structures in the Federal government, KidSave accounts will be managed and administered through the Federal employees' Thrift Savings Plan (TSP). Investment options will be determined by the TSP Board. KidSave account holders and guardians will have the same flexibility in changing their investment distributions as current TSP participants.

As I noted earlier in my remarks, one goal of this proposal is to close the growing wealth gap. Despite all of the glowing media reports about the booming American economy, most of the economic gains of the last decade have gone to families who have owned financial assets. Ed Wolff, the wealth data guru, has reported that the wealthiest 10 percent of households enjoyed 85 percent of the stock market gains between 1989 and 1998. Since 1989, the share of wealth held by the top 1 percent of households grew from 37 percent to 39 percent, while the net worth of the bottom 40 percent of households dropped from .9 percent to .2 percent.

An editorial by the Progressive Policy Institute has called this proposal a democratization of the ownership of financial assets''. I think they've hit the nail on the head. This proposal will create universal access to the tools of wealth creation and asset accumulation. It will make future workers less dependent on the Federal government for their retirement income security.

This proposal is also aimed at improving the personal savings rate in the United States. In fact, unlike other spending programs, KidSave loans will not only generate wealth, but also improve national and personal savings rates.

It has been widely reported that the personal savings rate has been in a long and steady decline in the U.S.—according to the Bureau of Economic Analysis, it has dropped from 11 percent in 1981 to 2 percent in 1999. Many workers are spending beyond their means, accumulating more and more consumer debt, while others simply can't afford to save because of high payroll tax rates and low wages. Many of these same workers are relying on Social Security to be their sole or primary source of income at retirement.

But the co-sponsors of this bill recognize that a Social Security retirement check isn't enough to live on. The average Social Security check in Nebraska is $766 a month. Nationwide, eighteen percent of beneficiaries have no other source of income. Another 12 percent rely on Social Security for more than 90 percent of their income, and nearly two-thirds overall derive more than half their income from that small check. For many of them, it's not enough. Our proposal is based on the idea that retirees need both income and wealth.

And Mr. President, that opportunity to hold assets and create wealth is an opportunity we can open today to every baby born in America. Guaranteed. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

By Mr. BIDEN:

S. 3202. A bill to amend title 18, United States Code, with respect to biological weapons; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

DANGEROUS BIOLOGICAL AGENT AND TOXIN CONTROL ACT OF 2000

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Dangerous Biological Agent and Toxin Control Act of 2000. Similar legislation was originally submitted by the Administration in 1999 as part of a larger anti-crime proposal.

Today a terrorist attack in the United States using chemical or biological weapons is one of the most significant terrorist threats we face. In recent years, through the ratification of the Chemical Weapons Convention and the enactment of the related implementing legislation, we have provided several statutory safeguards designed to prevent and deter against an attack using chemical weapons. But gaps remain in our laws regulating biological pathogens. It is essential not only that America be fully prepared to respond to such an attack, but also that we take steps to prevent them from happening in the first place.

Currently, federal law bans only the development and possession of biological agents for use as a weapon. But there are sensible things that we can do in the near term to give federal law enforcement the tools that they need to protect our country from these threats—before they materialize into unspeakable scenarios.

Earlier this year, the National Commission on Terrorism reported to Congress. Among its conclusions was that the federal laws regarding the possession of dangerous pathogens are currently insufficient. The Commission specifically recommended, among other things, that Congress make it illegal for anyone not properly certified to possess certain critical pathogens. And they were right.

The bill I introduce today fill several gaps in the law.

First, the bill will make it unlawful for anyone to possess biological agent, toxin or delivery system of a type or in a quantity that under the circumstances is not reasonably justified by a prophylactic, protective or other peaceful purpose. Second, the bill makes it unlawful to handle a biological agent with conscious disregard of an unreasonable risk to public health and safety. Third, the legislation makes it unlawful to knowingly communicate false, but believable information, concerning an activity which would constitute a violation of this statute. Finally, the bill requires people to report to the federal government their possession of listed biological agents, prohibits the transfer of a listed biological agent to a person who is not registered and makes possession by certain restricted persons—such as convicted felons—unlawful.

Closing these gaps in the law would be a modest but important step to prevent and deter a terrorist act involving biological agents. This should not be a partisan issue. This is an issue of governance, not politics. From Wilmington to Washington State, our constituents need protection and expect and deserve nothing less.

Mr. President, I recognize that the Congressional session is about to end, and therefore it is too late for the bill to be considered this year. But I wanted to introduce the bill now so that it would be available for review by my colleagues and other interested parties inside and outside of government. In particular, I invite comment by interested parties in the scientific community, the business community, and the civil liberties community. I regard the bill I introduce today as an initial draft that is a work in progress, and I welcome constructive comments and suggestions for improvement. I look forward to working with my colleagues on the Committee on the Judiciary early in the next session of Congress.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3202

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Dangerous Biological Agent and Toxin Control Act of 2000''.

SEC. 2. EXPANSION OF THE BIOLOGICAL WEAPONS STATUTE.

(a) FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.—

(1) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(A) certain biological agents and toxins have the potential to pose a severe threat to the Nation's public health and safety, and thereby affect interstate and foreign commerce;

(B) the Secretary of Health and Human Services has published a list of biological agents and toxins that pose a severe threat to the Nation's public health and safety as an appendix to part 72 of title 42, Code of Federal Regulations;

(C) biological agents and toxins can be used as weapons by individuals or organizations for the purpose of domestic or international terrorism or for other criminal purposes;

(D) terrorists and other criminals can also harm national security, drain the limited resources of all levels of government devoted to thwarting biological weapons, and damage interstate and foreign commerce by threatening to use, and by falsely reporting efforts to use, biological agents and toxins as weapons;

(E) the Biological Weapons Convention obligates the United States to take necessary measures within the United States to prohibit and prevent the development, production, stockpiling, acquisition, or retention of biological agents and toxins of types and in quantities that have no justification for prophylactic, protective, or other peaceful purposes;

(F) the mere possession of biological agents and toxins is a potential danger that affects the obligations of the United States under the Biological Weapons Convention and affects interstate and foreign commerce; and

(G) persons in possession of harmful biological agents and toxins should handle them in a safe manner and, in the case of agents and toxins listed by the Department of Health and Human Services as posing a severe threat to the Nation's public health and safety, report their possession and the purpose for their possession to the appropriate Federal agency in order to ensure that such possession is for peaceful scientific research or development.

(2) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this section are to—

(A) strengthen the implementation by the United States of the Biological Weapons Convention and to ensure that biological agents and toxins are possessed for only prophylactic, protective, or other peaceful purposes;

(B) establish penalties for the false reporting of violations of chapter 10 of title 18, United States Code (relating to biological weapons); and

(C) improve the statutory definitions relating to biological weapons.

(b) ADDITIONAL MEASURES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 175 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(c) ADDITIONAL PROHIBITIONS RELATING TO BIOLOGICAL AGENTS, TOXINS, AND DELIVERY SYSTEMS.—

''(1) UNLAWFUL POSSESSION.—Whoever knowingly possesses any biological agent, toxin, or delivery system of a type or in a quantity that, under the circumstances, is not reasonably justified by a prophylactic, protective, or other peaceful purpose, shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 10 years, or both. Knowledge of whether the type or quantity of any biological agent, toxin, or delivery system is reasonably justified by a prophylactic, protective, or other peaceful purpose is not an element of the offense. For purposes of this paragraph, the terms 'biological agent' and 'toxin' do not encompass any biological agent or toxin that is in its naturally occurring environment, if such agent or toxin has not been cultivated, collected, or otherwise extracted from its natural source.

''(2) UNSAFE HANDLING.—

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 150—RELATING TO THE RE-ESTABLISHMENT OF REPRESENTATIVE GOVERNMENT IN AFGHANISTAN

Mr. BROWNBACK (for himself and Mr. TORRICELLI) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. CON. RES. 150

Whereas Afghanistan has existed as a sovereign nation since 1747, maintaining its independence, neutrality, and dignity;

Whereas Afghanistan had maintained its own decisionmaking through a traditional process called a ''Loya Jirgah'', or Grand Assembly, by selecting, respecting, and following the decisions of their leaders;

Whereas recently warlords, factional leaders, and foreign regimes have laid siege to Afghanistan, leaving the landscape littered with landmines, making the most fundamental activities dangerous;

Whereas in recent years, and especially since the Taliban came to power in 1996, Afghanistan has become a haven for terrorist activity, has produced most of the world's opium supply, and has become infamous for its human rights abuses, particularly abuses against women and children;

Whereas the former King of Afghanistan, Mohammed Zahir Shah, ruled the country peacefully for 40 years, and after years in exile retains his popularity and support; and

Whereas former King Mohammed Zahir Shah plans to convene an emergency ''Loya Jirgah'' to reestablish a stable government, with no desire to regain power or reestablish a monarchy, and the Department of State supports such ongoing efforts: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the United States—

(1) supports the democratic efforts that respect the human and political rights of all ethnic and religious groups in Afghanistan, including the effort to establish a ''Loya Jirgah'' process that would lead to the people of Afghanistan determining their own destiny through a democratic process and free and fair elections; and

(2) supports the continuing efforts of former King Mohammed Zahir Shah and other responsible parties searching for peace to convene a Loya Jirgah—

(A) to reestablish a representative government in Afghanistan that respects the rights of all ethnic groups, including the right to govern their own affairs through inclusive institution building and a democratic process;

(B) to bring freedom, peace, and stability to Afghanistan; and

(C) to end terrorist activities, illicit drug production, and human rights abuses in Afghanistan.

SENATE RESOLUTION 371—EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE THAT A COMMEMORATIVE POSTAGE STAMP SHOULD BE ISSUED TO HONOR SCULPTOR KORCZAK ZIOLKOWSKI

Mr. DASCHLE (for himself, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. LEVINE, and Mr. CONRAD) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Governmental Affairs:

S. RES. 371

Whereas Korczak Ziolkowski was born in Boston, Massachusetts on September 6, 1908, the 31st anniversary of the death of Lakota Sioux warrior Crazy Horse;

Whereas, although never trained in art or sculpture, Korczak Ziolkowski began a successful studio career in New England as a commissioned sculptor at age 24;

Whereas Korzcak Ziolowski's marble sculpture of composer and Polish leader Ignace Jan Paderewski won first prize at the 1939 New York World's Fair and prompted Lakota Indian Chiefs to invite Ziolkowski to carve a memorial for Native Americans;

Whereas later that year, Korzcak Ziolkowski assisted Gutzon Borglum in carving Mount Rushmore;

Whereas while in South Dakota, Korczak Ziolkowski met with Chief Henry Standing Bear who taught Korczak more about the life of the brave warrior Crazy Horse;

Whereas at the age of 34, Korczak Ziolkowski temporarily put his sculptures aside when he volunteered for service in World War II, later landing on Omaha Beach;

Whereas after the war, Korczak Ziolkowski turned down other sculpting opportunities in order to accept the invitation of Chief Henry Standing Bear and dedicate the rest of his life to carving the Crazy Horse Memorial in the Black Hills of South Dakota;

Whereas on June 3, 1948, when work was begun on the Crazy Horse Memorial, Korczak Ziolkowski vowed that the memorial would be a nonprofit educational and cultural project, financed solely through private, nongovernmental sources, for the Native Americans of North America;

Whereas the Crazy Horse Memorial is a mountain carving-in-progress, and once completed it will be the tallest sculpture in the world;

Whereas since his death on October 20, 1982, Korczak's wife Ruth and the Ziolkwoski family have continued to work on the Memorial and to expand upon the dream of Korczak Ziolkowski; and

Whereas on June 3, 1998, the Memorial entered its second half century of progress and heralded a new era of work on the mountain with the completion and dedication of the face of Crazy Horse: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That—

(1) the Senate recognizes—

(A) the admirable efforts of the late Korczak Ziolkowski in designing and creating the Crazy Horse Memorial;

(B) that the Crazy Horse Memorial represents all North American Indian tribes, and the noble goal of reconciliation between peoples; and

(C) that the creation of the Crazy Horse Memorial, from its inception, has been accomplished through private donations and without any Federal funding; and

(2) it is the sense of the Senate that the Citizens' Stamp Advisory Committee should recommend to the Postmaster General that a commemorative postage stamp be issued in honor of sculptor Korczak Ziolkowski for his upcoming 100th birthday.

SENATE RESOLUTION 372—A RESOLUTION EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE WITH RESPECT TO UNITED NATIONS GENERAL ASSEMBLY RESOLUTION 1322

Mr. LOTT (for Mr. GRAMS (for himself and Mr. BROWNBACK) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. RES. 372

Whereas in an Emergency Special Session, the United Nations Security Council voted on October 7, 2000, to approve Resolution 1322, which unfairly blames Israel for the outbreak of violence and politicizes the Geneva Convention;

Whereas Resolution 1322 singles out Israel for the use of excessive force against Palestinians while ignoring identical acts perpetrated by Palestinians against Israelis;

Whereas Resolution 1322 incorrectly labels the September 28, 2000, visit of Israeli opposition leader Ariel Sharon to Temple Mount, a holy place open to all members of all faiths, as the ''provocation'' for violence;

Whereas there is clear evidence this violence was a premeditated and coordinated action by the Palestinian Authority and Palestinian militias;

Whereas Israeli army officials noted a sharp increase in attacks against security forces and Israeli civilians in the weeks before September 28, 2000, including the killing of one soldier and the wounding of another in a Gaza Strip ambush on September 27;

Whereas the Palestinian Authority has used official Palestinian television and the Voice of Palestine radio to incite violence;

Whereas there is evidence that Fatah leader Marwan Barghouti, Chairman Arafat's top political lieutenant in the West Bank, has been orchestrating the rioting of armed uniformed police and civilians;

Whereas the United States refused to veto Resolution 1322, although United States Ambassador to the United Nations Richard Holbrooke reportedly declared it ''unbalanced, biased, and really a lousy piece of work''; and

Whereas the United States has vetoed three anti-Israel Security Council Resolutions since the 1993 Oslo Accords and has still played a constructive role in the peace process as an ''honest broker'': Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate hereby—

(1) denounces the United States failure to vote against United Nations Security Council Resolution 1322;

(2) condemns the United Nations Security Council for its discrimination against the State of Israel and its efforts to manipulate the Fourth Geneva Conference for the sole purpose of attacking Israel; and

(3) urges the leaders of the Israeli and Palestinian peoples to seek a secure future through the end of violence and the resumption of the peace process.

SENATE RESOLUTION 373—RECOGNIZING THE 225TH BIRTHDAY OF THE UNITED STATES NAVY

Mr. LUGAR (for himself and Mr. MCCAIN) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Armed Services:

S. RES. 373

Whereas on Friday, October 13, 1775, the Continental Congress, representing the citizens of 13 American colonies, passed a resolution which stated ''That a swift sailing vessel, to carry ten carriage guns, and a proportionable number of swivels, with eighty men, be fitted, with all possible dispatch, for a cruise of three months, and that the commander be instructed to cruise eastward, for intercepting such transports as may be laden with warlike stores and other supplies for our enemies, and for such other purposes as the Congress shall direct.'';

Whereas the founders recognized the essential nature of a Navy to the strength and longevity of the Nation by providing authority to Congress ''To provide and maintain a Navy'' in article I of the Constitution;

Whereas a Naval Committee was established to build a fitting Navy for our fledgling country, acquire and fit out vessels for sea, and draw up regulations;

Whereas the Continental Navy began a proud tradition, carried out for 225 years by our United States Navy, to protect our island Nation and pursue the causes of freedom we hold so dear;

Whereas, for the past 225 years, the central mission of the Navy has been to protect the interests of our Nation around the world on the high seas, to fight and win the wars of our Nation, and to maintain control of the sea lines of communication enabling this Nation and other free nations to grow and prosper;

Whereas, whether in peace or at war, United States citizens around the world can rest assured that the United States Navy is on watch, ever vigilant, and ready to respond;

Whereas, for the past 225 years, Navy men and women, as both ambassadors and warriors, have won extraordinary distinction and respect for the Nation and its Navy on the high seas, among the ocean depths, on distant shores, and in the skies above;

Whereas the core values of ''Honor, Courage, and Commitment'' are the guides by which United States sailors live and serve;

Whereas the United States Navy today is the most capable, most respected, and most effective sea service in the world;

Whereas 75 percent of the land masses in the world are bounded by water and 75 percent of the population of the world lives within 100 miles of the sea, assuring that our Naval forces will continue to be called upon to respond to emerging crises, to maintain freedom of the sea, to deter would-be aggressors, and to provide our allies with a visible reassurance of the support of the United States of America; and

Whereas, no matter what the cause, location, or magnitude of future conflicts, the Nation can rely on its Navy to produce well-trained, well-led, and highly motivated sailors to carry out the missions entrusted to them: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) recognizes the historic significance of the 225th birthday of the United States Navy;

(2) expresses the appreciation of the people of the United States to the Navy, and the men and women who have served in the Navy, for 225 years of dedicated service;

(3) honors the courage, commitment, and sacrifice that Americans have made throughout the history of the Navy; and

(4) gives special thanks to the extended Navy family of civilians, family members, and loved ones who have served and supported the Navy for the past 225 years.

SENATE RESOLUTION 374—DESIGNATING OCTOBER 17, 2000, AS A ''DAY OF NATIONAL CONCERN ABOUT YOUNG PEOPLE AND GUN VIOLENCE''

Mrs. MURRAY (for herself and Mr. WARNER) submitted the following resolution, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. RES. 374

Whereas young people are our Nation's most important resource, and we, as a society, have a vested interest in enabling children to grow in an environment free from fear and violence;

Whereas young people can, by taking responsibility for their own decisions and actions, and by positively influencing the decisions and actions of others, help chart a new and less violent direction for the entire Nation;

Whereas students in every school district in the Nation will be invited to take part in a day of nationwide observance involving millions of their fellow students, and will thereby be empowered to see themselves as significant agents in a wave of positive social change; and

Whereas the observance of October 17, 2000, as a ''Day of National Concern About Young People and Gun Violence'' will allow students to make a positive and earnest decision about their future in that such students will have the opportunity to voluntarily sign the ''Student Pledge Against Gun Violence'', and promise that they will never take a gun to school, will never use a gun to settle a dispute, and will actively use their influence in a positive manner to prevent friends from using guns to settle disputes: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates October 17, 2000, as a ''Day of National Concern About Young People and Gun Violence''; and

(2) requests that the President issue a proclamation calling on the school children of the United States to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

SENATE RESOLUTION 375—SUPPORTING THE EFFORTS OF BOLIVIA'S DEMOCRATICALLY ELECTED GOVERNMENT

Mr. LUGAR (for himself, Mr. DODD, Mr. HELMS, Mr. DEWINE, and Mr. GRAHAM) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. RES. 375

Whereas the stability of democracy in Latin America and the eradication of illegal narcotics from the Andean nations are vital national security interests of the United States;

Whereas the democratically elected Government of Bolivia has taken dramatic steps to eradicate illegal narcotics under the Dignity Plan, resulting in the elimination of 80 percent of the illegal coca crop in just two years, a record of achievement unmatched worldwide;

Whereas the Government of Bolivia is now approaching the completion of coca eradication in the Chapare and will begin eradication operations in the Yungas regions in 2002;

Whereas there are indications that narcotics traffickers from outside Bolivia are stepping up efforts to keep a foothold in Bolivia by agitating among the rural poor and indigenous populations, creating civil disturbances, blockading roads, organizing strikes and protests, and taking actions designed to force the Government of Bolivia to abandon its aggressive counter narcotics campaign; and

Whereas the government of Bolivian President Hugo Banzer Suarez has shown remarkable restraint in dealing with the protesters through dialogue and openness while respecting human rights: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That (a) the Senate calls upon the Government of Bolivia to continue its successful program of coca eradication and looks forward to the Government of Bolivia achieving its commitment to the total eradication of illegal coca in Bolivia by the end of 2002.

(b) It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the United States, as a full partner in Bolivia's efforts to build democracy, to eradicate illegal narcotics, and to reduce poverty through development and economic growth, should fully support the democratically elected Government of Bolivia;

(2) the release of emergency supplemental assistance already approved by the United States for sustainable development activities in Bolivia should be accelerated;

(3) on a priority basis, the President should look for additional ways to provide increased tangible support to the people and Government of Bolivia;

(4) the Government of Bolivia should continue to respect the human rights of all of its citizens and to continue to discuss legitimate concerns of Bolivia's rural population; and

(5) Indigenous leaders should enter into serious discussions with the government on issues of concern and cease provocative acts that could lead to escalating violence.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Senate shall transmit a copy of this resolution to the President.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I rise to introduce a resolution in support of democracy and drug eradication in Bolivia. I'm pleased that I have been joined by several colleagues in a bipartisan initiative to applaud and support one of the most successful drug-eradication programs in the world.

Our resolution recognizes that extraordinary achievements of Bolivia's narcotics elimination program. It urges the Government of Bolivia to continue its program of drug elimination while upholding the rule of law and safeguarding human rights. It also urges the indigenous leaders to cease provocative acts and begin discussions with the Government of Bolivia to resolve outstanding issues.

For nearly two weeks now, Bolivia has been confronting one of the worst social upheavals the country has endured in the past two decades. The turmoil has been perpetrated by diverse forces in Bolivia, particularly those who wish to reverse the drug eradication program in the country.

A destabilization campaign, initiated by drug traffickers, has resulted in a number of protests that have virtually paralyzed the country. Roads that connect the major cities of the country were destroyed and blockaded and the flow of food to the urban centers has been interrupted. Nearly a dozen people have died and more have been injured by acts of violence. Economic losses are estimated at more than $160 million and growing.

The protesters, who are led by coca growers, were demanding the resignation of the President, the suspension of the anti-drug strategy, and the elimination of plans to build a U.S. funded military installation in the Chapare region—the region where most illegal coca has been cultivated. They also demand that the Government allow peasants of the Chapare to replant about 6,000 hectares of coca, which, if that is allowed to happen, would yield roughly 42 tons of cocaine.

President Banzer has flatly rejected most demands to changes in the Bolivian drug strategy, the Dignity Plan. He has, nevertheless, agreed to suspend plans for the construction of a new military installation in the Chapare and proposed to refurbish the existing installation instead.

Other groups in Bolivia have added a number of unrelated demands which appeared to be coordinated by or to be in concert with the coca leaders. Teachers, for example, have demanded pay raises, inmates have asked for better jail conditions, peasants demanded a modification of laws on land ownership, doctors requested better pay, and agitators exploited the current state of affairs to amplify racial division. Isolated by themselves, these may be reasonable requests but when they are raised or orchestrated by drug traffickers, the goals become more malevolent.

The protesters formed a coordinated block with the intent to make the government deal with all the demands together, in the form of a comprehensive package.

There is little doubt that the largest risk for the country lies with the ''cocalero'' movement—the peasant coca growers—that is supported by regional drug trafficking interests. The drug traffickers are embarking on a desperate effort to reverse the anti-drug plan being waged by the Bolivian Government and turn back the remarkable progress in drug eradication that has been accomplished in the past few years.

Coca leaders and the drug traffickers are aware that their leadership and the ill-gotten riches they derive from illegal narcotics will end if the final 1,800 hectares of coca in the Chapare are destroyed. This helps explain the intransigence of its leaders. During this crisis, the government has demonstrated a steady dedication to seek agreements through dialogue while retaining a respect for human rights.

It is important to keep in mind that the current turmoil in Bolivia is occurring at a time when Bolivia is set to complete its program of coca eradication while simultaneously facing a serious economic crisis. Of the 40,000 hectares which have been used for the cultivation of coca, only 1,800 hectares remain.

The Bolivian economy have taken a big hit from its effort to combat drug trafficking. The fight against drug trafficking alone has resulted in the loss of 3% of Bolivia's GDP. The fight against contraband and customs reforms have absorbed another 3% of the GDP of Bolivia. This is all the more remarkable because this pan to eradicate drugs has taken place in a country where 7 out of 10 Bolivians live on $2 a day, an income which is very much below the poverty line.

For these and other reasons, the Government of Bolivia has called on the international community to do everything possible to ensure that the hard won efforts in the fight against drug trafficking are not turned back.

Mr. President, let me conclude by saying that our resolution congratulates the Government of Bolivia for its successful drug elimination program and urges the government to continue its commitment to eradicate illegal coca by the end of 2002. It applauds the government's efforts to pursue its anti-narcotics strategy and urges the government to do what it can to uphold the rule of law and democratic practices, despite the strains the drug traffickers have imposed on the government. The resolution also stresses the view that human rights must continue to be safeguarded and urges the indigenous leaders to terminate provocative acts and negotiate the outstanding issues with the government of Bolivia.

I urge our colleagues to take note of the successful drug eradication program in Bolivia and encourage the democratically-elected government in La Paz to sustain its commitment for total coca eradication by the end of next year.

SENATE RESOLUTION 376—EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE THAT THE MEN AND WOMEN WHO FOUGHT THE JASPER FIRE IN THE BLACK HILLS OF SOUTH DAKOTA SHOULD BE COMMENDED FOR THEIR HEROIC EFFORTS

Mr. DASCHLE (for himself and Mr. JOHNSON) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 376

Whereas the Jasper Fire started at 2:30 p.m. on Thursday, August 24, 2000, near Jasper Cave in the Black Hills National Forest and was contained at 6:00 p.m. on September 8, 2000;

Whereas two days after it started, the Jasper Fire nearly quadrupled in size in a matter of hours, burned as fast as 100 acres per second, and ultimately became the worst forest fire in the history of the Black Hills, consuming 83,508 acres;

Whereas the Jasper Fire threatened private homes in the Black Hills, including the South Dakota communities of Deerfield, Custer, and Hill City, Jewel Cave National Monument, and Mount Rushmore National Memorial, and forced the evacuation of many residents in northwestern Custer County and southwestern Pennington County;

Whereas volunteers from 76 community fire departments from across South Dakota made up a substantial part of the 1,160 men and women who worked around the clock to contain the Jasper Fire;

Whereas the Tatanka Hotshot crew, an elite 20-person firefighting team based in the Black Hills, came from fighting fires in western Wyoming to help fight the Jasper Fire;

Whereas while the Tatanka Hotshot crew has fought several fires throughout the country, the Jasper Fire was the first major fire they fought in their home forest;

Whereas the outpouring of support for the firefighters by local residents and communities, such as Hill City and Custer, helped boost firefighter morale; and

Whereas, in spite of the rugged terrain and the intense speed and size of the fire, the Jasper Fire was contained successfully with only one home lost and with no injuries to any firefighters or local citizens: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the Jasper Fire was the largest forest fire in the history of the Black Hills National Forest, consuming 83,508 acres;

(2) the volunteer firefighters from across South Dakota played a crucial role in combating the Jasper Fire and preventing it from destroying hundreds of homes;

(3) the Tatanka Hotshot crew was instrumental in providing the effort, expertise and training necessary to establish a fire line around the Jasper Fire; and

(4) the men and women who fought the Jasper Fire are commended for their bravery, their extraordinary efforts to contain the fire, and their commitment to protect lives, property, and the surrounding communities.

(3) the System is the only network of Federal land dedicated singularly to wildlife conservation and where wildlife-dependent recreation and environmental education are priority public uses;

(5) each year the System provides millions of Americans with opportunities to participate in wildlife-dependent recreation, including hunting, fishing, and wildlife observation;

(6)(A) public visitation to national wildlife refuges is growing, with more than 35,000,000 visitors annually; and

HIGH STEENS AREA OF SOUTHEASTERN OREGON

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I will not speak but a minute, along with my colleague, Senator WYDEN. He and I come to the floor to celebrate what Senator CRAIG will do later this evening by unanimous consent, and that is passage of H.R. 4828. It has to do with the high Steens area of southeastern Oregon. It is a beautiful and pristine area.

What we have done is truly bipartisan and truly historic in that the Sierra Club and the Oregon Cattlemen's Association enthusiastically support it. They support it because this has been a product of dialog and not Executive dictate. This has come about because people of good will have said: How can we protect the environment and protect the people as well? We have accomplished that in this bill. We are creating 170,000 acres of wilderness and providing other places for people to pursue their ranching lifestyles, and we are preserving the economy of Harney County.

I thank all of my colleagues—my colleague in the Senate, Senator WYDEN; Congressman WALDEN; all of the Oregon Congressmen, Republicans and Democrats alike; and the Governor of Oregon as well; and Secretary Bruce Babbitt who worked with us in good faith to make this possible. I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, my friend and colleague, Senator SMITH, has said it extremely well, and I know our colleague Senator REED is waiting to speak, so I, too, will be very brief.

My view is that this Steens legislation is a monumental wilderness triumph. This legislation creates for the first time in statute cow-free wilderness. In the past, wilderness designations allowed the continuation of historic grazing practices, but because the ranchers in the Steens recognize the delicate nature of this ecosystem and because they were willing to work with Democrats and Republicans in our congressional delegation, Congressman GREG WALDEN, Congressman PETER DEFAZIO, and so many of our colleagues, we were able to build a coalition for a truly historic approach to protecting our wilderness.

We were able to find acceptable alternative grazing sites. Almost 100,000 acres of the total wilderness designation is now going to be by law cow free. In my view, this is just an example, a precedent of how communities can work together to protect our treasures.

All across this country when there are debates about national monuments, the sides go into opposing and what amounts to warring camps, the decibel level gets very high, and there is an awful lot of finger pointing and accusations.

In Oregon, we did it differently. We came up with an Oregon solution. Like Senator SMITH, I am very proud of what we have been able to achieve. This is a model that our delegation is going to use to tackle other critical natural resource questions and, frankly, we are especially proud tonight because we think that with our Steens bill, we set a model for other communities across this country.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

LIBERIAN IMMIGRANTS

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I want to take a moment to discuss the issue of Liberians in the United States who, up until a few days ago, faced an imminent threat of deportation. Today, through Executive action, that has been stayed at least for a year, but it is a community of people residing here who are literally living on the edge, not knowing if next year at this time they will, in fact, be deported back to Liberia, which is a country in great turmoil and crisis as we speak.

For the last several years I have tried with diligence and determination to do justice for these people, to give them a chance to become permanent residents of this country and ultimately citizens of this country. In my determination and my dedication, I have objected to the consideration of other legislation regarding immigrant groups, not because this legislation lacked merit, but because, in my view, it was unfair not to consider in some way the plight of the Liberians who are in the United States today.

I hope at this point, given assurances by the White House that this issue of justice for Liberians in the United States is a paramount issue for the President in the final days of this Congress in his negotiation with the congressional leadership, that the legislation I have objected to can and will move forward promptly.

Let me try to explain briefly the status of Liberians in this country.

In 1989, Liberia, which historically is a country with close ties with Africa and the United States—it was founded by freed American slaves; its capital is Monrovia, named after our President James Monroe—this country in 1989 was engulfed in a brutal civil war. This civil war over the next 7 years would claim 150,000 lives; it would displace the population; it would destroy infrastructure. In 1991, realizing the gravity of this crisis, the Attorney General of the United States granted temporary protective status to approximately 14,000 Liberians. They were allowed to remain in the United States. They could apply for work authorization, and they could work during this temporary protective status.

This status was renewed annually because of the crisis in Liberia until 1999. In that year, it was determined that since there had been at least an election of democratic reform in Liberia, and since the situation of armed conflict had subsided, temporary protective status was no longer required. But rather than immediate deportation, the President decided to authorize something which is known as deferred enforced departure, or DED, essentially telling the Liberian community in the United States: You are subject to deportation today, but we are simply deferring that for at least a year.

Just recently, again at the end of last month, we were able to get another Executive extension, but essentially what we are doing to these good people is putting their lives on hold one year at a time. They are unable to establish the same kind of permanency that we are seeking for other groups in this country.

They are good and decent people who have worked hard. They are a vital part of our community, and in the intervening almost 10 years, they have established themselves; quite literally many of them have children born here who are American citizens.

Yet each year we force these people to worry, to be concerned, to contemplate the very idea of leaving a home they have found and established here, taking with them children who know nothing of their native land, taking with them their skills which are not particularly useful, and going into a country that is violent.

Yesterday, the President of the United States and our Department of State declared the President of Liberia, Charles Taylor, persona non grata in the United States. He cannot get a visa to come here because of his deportations within Liberia, because of his support of a campaign of terror in Sierra Leone. We have all been horrified by the pictures of mutilated children in Sierra Leone. This is all part of his involvement there—his trading guns for diamonds, his attempt to destabilize the country, and defy international law.

That is the situation in Liberia, a situation, I might add, which we have also recognized is a threat to Americans. Our State Department is advising Americans they should not go to Liberia. We are withdrawing nonessential embassy personnel from Liberia. Yet we are unable to tell these Liberians in America: You can stay here and become permanent residents.

In fact, we are saying: We are prepared to deport you at the end of next year because that is the message that DED gives. I think it is wrong. I think it is unjust.

So I objected to certain measures. I think it is important to point out these measures.

First, there was legislation, H.R. 4681, to provide an adjustment status for Syrian Jews. These individuals came to the United States in 1992 through an arrangement between President Bush and President Assad of Syria. They were allowed to leave the country to seek refuge in the United States. But part of the negotiations, part of the fiction was that they would leave Syria on tourist visas. So they came to the United States. They did not come as refugees. They came as asylees. They sought asylum when they entered here.

Under our immigration law, there is a limit on the number of asylees that can adjust to permanent status each year. But it is important to point out, these individuals, these very good decent people, these Syrian Jews, are not in danger of being deported back to Syria.

Liberians are in grave danger of being deported back to Liberia. Essentially what this legislation would do—and I would support this legislation—is it would jump in ahead of other asylees who are waiting to fulfill the yearly quota of the number of asylees who can become permanent residents.

So this is a situation of concern and importance, but not the level of criticality, I believe, with respect to the Liberian community. Yet this legislation has moved through this House promptly, is on the verge of passage, while still the Liberian legislation languishes. I do not think that is right. I do not think it is just. I don't care. I certainly am pleased literally within a few days these Syrian Jews will have a chance to adjust to permanent status. Again, what about the Liberians?

There is another piece of legislation, the religious worker visa extension bill, which is also known as the Mother Teresa Religious Worker Act. This bill will allow the religious to come to the United States on a visa to do pastoral work.

It has been in effect for several years. It is a good program. About 2,500 workers come in a year. Very importantly, once these individuals are here, they can also adjust to permanent residency status, unlike the Liberians who now, under our DED, cannot do that. It is a worthy program, but it is a program, again, that I do not think has the same kind of compelling justice that the Liberians have in their case.

We again applaud the fact that this piece of legislation is likely to become law. But what about the Liberians?

There is also another piece of legislation that would grant immediate citizenship to children adopted internationally by the American public. Once again, these children are not in any danger of being returned to their homeland involuntarily. The Liberians are in such danger.

Each time now that a child is adopted, they come in on a visa. The adoptive parents can fill out an application for citizenship on behalf of the child and pay a $2,500 fee. The application is then considered with all other applications for permanent residency. It takes a few years, but these children are virtually assured of becoming American citizens.

Let me try to suggest the incongruity of not dealing with the Liberian legislation in the same way we are dealing with this type of legislation.

If we do not, next September, grant DED, we could be in the awkward position of having legislation which would allow an American couple to adopt a Liberian child and automatically make that child a citizen while at the same time we deport Liberian families in which the children are already American citizens having been born here. Again, not fair, not just. Even though this adoption bill is quite worthy—it will likely become law; I will support it—what about the Liberians?

So what we have seen is that legislation that has been introduced after legislation I introduced has already proceeded through the House and the Senate and will likely become law to the benefit of these good people, but what about the Liberians?

I have tried all I can to get a fair hearing for the Liberians in this country. I hope, in the last few days, we will get that hearing, through the intervention of the White House and through the consideration of my colleagues.

There are about 10,000 people here who have become important parts of our communities, who have sunk roots deep in our communities, many of whom have children who are Americans. It is not fair and it is not right that they are being ignored. I have tried to prevent at least that from happening, of them being completely ignored and being deported. They have suffered our indifference. I hope we can work this out in the next few days.

I thank my colleagues for their indulgence.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

PUERTO RICAN ELECTIONS COMMISSION

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, this Congress has taken a historic step to advance the process of self-determination of the American citizens of Puerto Rico by approving an appropriation of $2.5 million as requested by the President for a grant to the Elections Commission of Puerto Rico to be used for voter education and a choice among the island's future status options. As an advocate of that process and the need to resolve the island's political status after 102 years, I am pleased that we have acted.

This is historic because it represents the first authorization from Congress for the United States citizens of Puerto Rico to choose the ultimate political status for their island. Presidents since Truman have been seeking such an authorization and each house has passed similar language in the past, but the same language has never passed both houses and been enacted into law. Our approval of this appropriation should be read as Congress' determination to resolve the century-long question of the island's ultimate status and let Puerto Rican Americans choose a fully democratic governing arrangement if they wish to replace the current territorial status.

By adopting this provision as part of the unanticipated needs account of the Office of the President, it is Congress' intention that its support for a future vote in Puerto Rico be coordinated with the Administration's efforts to provide realistic options to be included on the ballot in the island's next referendum. In recent months the President has brought Puerto Rico's major political parties together in an unprecedented effort to define the available political status options. Our approval of the $2.5 million request evidences our expectation that the White House will provide realist options upon which to base a future status referendum. It can only responsibly allocate the funds for the consideration of options that are realistic.

Mr. President, the ultimate resolution of Puerto Rico's political status will require that Congress and the American citizens of Puerto Rico work together to make a choice based on clearly defined status options that are consistent with the U.S. Constitution. The action we have taken is a major contribution towards that goal.

CLIMATE CHANGE AND GLOBAL WARMING

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I would like to speak for a couple of moments on an issue that I know is important to many of us and has been addressed by both myself and the chairman of the Energy and Natural Resources Committee who has now joined us on the floor, Senator Frank MURKOWSKI of Alaska.

Last night, the Vice President stated his belief that global warming is caused by fossil fuel use. The Senator from Alaska and I have both introduced legislation to deal with the question of climate change and global warming. We have looked at this issue extensively over the last several years, and through the eyes of the committee by a resolution, expressed on the floor of the Senate, as it related to the Kyoto Protocol.

With all of that, the Vice President said one thing last night. Governor Bush said he was not certain that climate change was a direct result of fossil fuel use. In fact, he said, science would govern environmental decisionmaking in his administration, and he did not believe that science had yet fully resolved that fossil fuel use and the creation of greenhouse gases was, in fact, creating climate change.

I happen to agree with the Vice President. I say that because the scientists we have had before us may generally agree that our globe is gaining some heat, with some temperature change, but they do not yet agree that fossil fuel usage and the aftereffects, the greenhouse gases, are in fact the sole cause or are they causing climate change?

Which opinion is more supported by the scientists themselves? On Monday, the Washington Post reported, in unusual detail, a new theory of global warming that is being advanced by scientists from Denmark to UCLA. It goes like this:

First of all, they say, charged particles from space, better known as cosmic rays, cause cloud formation by changing atmospheric molecules with neutral charges into charged ions. The charged ions cluster, forming dense, low clouds.

Now, this may sound like a scientific lecture, but this was the kind of detail that the Washington Post was giving in this article.

They said, secondly, the Sun's magnetic field deflects much of the cosmic rays away from the Earth, reducing their ability to trigger cloud formation.

With less cloud cover to shade the Earth, the Earth gets warmer.

That seems like pretty reasonable logic, doesn't it?

It turns out that satellite data over the last 20 years reveal an uncanny correlation between changes in the Sun's magnetic field and cloud cover. Meanwhile, Greenland ice-cores show that cosmic rays have declined over the past century.

James Hensen of NASA, once a leading proponent of the human cause theory that the Vice President embraces to the exclusion of all others, now acknowledges in the Post that the Sun has probably been a significant contributor in past climate change. But Hensen would still like to see some convincing evidence. Hensen, by the way, has also published recent work suggesting that methane gases, many of which are emitted naturally, may be as large a contributor to climate change as CO_2.

A consortium of more than fifty scientists have petitioned CERN, the European particle physics facility in Geneva, to conduct an experiment that could help settle this theory, this argument, this general issue, as reported by the Washington Post.

> The researchers want to use one of CERN's particle beams as a source of artificial cosmic rays that would strike a ''cloud chamber'' containing the equivalent of air in the lower atmosphere. If there is a clear link between cosmic rays and cloud formation, the experience should reveal it.

The scientists proposing the experiment say:

> If this link is confirmed, the consequent global warming could be comparable to that presently attributed to greenhouse gases from the burning of fossil fuels.

In other words, what the scientists are saying is, if this theory and this test were proven accurate, then cosmic rays and their influence in the atmosphere and the formation of clouds could have equal or greater influence over the Earth's atmosphere and climate change or global warming.

How can we in the Senate use this information? If this experiment indicates that changes in solar magnetic fields account for all of the detected warming, then burning fossil fuel might account for none of it. Interrupting our economic growth by arbitrarily curtailing energy use either by taxing it or regulating it could be a far costlier experiment than the one these scientists have proposed at CERN. And because the human cause/effect is so weak and so few countries are likely to join our self-destructive experiment, useful scientific results may never materialize.

Let's do the real science, and do it now. In other words, I believe Gov. George Bush was right last night when he said, I believe there is a field of science we ought to understand and err on before we send this country down the road. He said his administration would make decisions on climate change based on science, not the politics or the popularity of the politics of the day.

Let's make science drive the issue. Science has to drive public policy in this area, not vice versa. We dare not let public policy drive science.

Meanwhile, let us hold off on dangerous experiments such as Kyoto that place our economy at risk in an attempt to prove one man right in the face of so much doubt. Truly, the kind of taxation the Vice President proposes and proposed but wouldn't own up to last night could certainly turn our economy into a recession and disadvantage our producers against other producers around the world.

In other words, what the Washington Post reported in great detail in an article well over a half a page long, on Monday, was exactly what Governor Bush was saying last night.

Mr. Vice President, the jury is still out. And the jury is scientists all over the world who have not yet confirmed, nor do they agree, that fossil fuels are the sole cause of a climate growing warmer.

Let's err on the side of science and not politics as we make these decisions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I share the concern expressed by my good friend from the State of Idaho with regard to the issue of global warming. Much of the rhetoric that has been used is not based on sound science. The reality that we have the technology, if given an opportunity to apply that technology, particularly in the developing Third World nations, results in a meaningful decrease of the concentrations of pollutants that we are all concerned about in association with clean air.

I commend my friend from Idaho for bringing this matter, again, to the attention of this body with the recognition that, indeed, through science and technology, we can make a significant difference in reducing overall the emissions, particularly from the emerging nations.

THE BREAKDOWN IN PEACE PROCESS IN MIDDLE EAST AND ITS EFFECT ON THE ENERGY CRISIS

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, my purpose in coming before the Senate at this late hour is to bring to your attention a rather catastrophic situation that is occurring in the world today.

We are all familiar with the devastation associated with the breakdown of the peace process in the Mideast and the tensions associated with the conflict between Israel and the Palestinians. I think it is important to recognize another significant factor that has occurred today; that is, the price of oil has increased about $3.40 a barrel in one day. Currently oil closed at roughly $36.40. That is just a few cents under the all-time high of 3½ weeks ago where oil closed at $37 a barrel.

Clearly, our increased dependence on Mideast oil, where we import about 58 percent of the total oil we consume, is a significant factor in recognizing that any conflict in the Mideast not only affects oil prices in the United States, because our supply is threatened, but it affects our stock market which has dropped rather dramatically today as well.

Let me highlight a few things that I think represent an inconsistency in the administration's policies towards developing a sound energy policy.

Perhaps you noticed, I am not wearing a dark shirt, a dark tie, the kind worn by Regis on ''Who Wants To Be A Millionaire?'' As you know, this is a TV show on ABC where contestants compete to win up to $1 million in prizes. It is my understanding that to win, contestants on the TV show must answer some questions, just as the administration has had to answer a series of questions regarding the lack of an energy policy.

If contestants on the TV show get stumped by a question, they can use a so-called lifeline. For example, they can phone a friend. Well, we have seen when oil prices rose, this administration phoned their friends. They phoned the Saudis and asked them for more crude oil, and the Saudis obliged.

Now, contestants can ask the audience—in other words, consult the polls—to see who has the right answers. Doesn't that sound familiar? The administration, of course, loves polls.

Finally, TV contestants can use a 50/50 where only two choices are presented, one of which is the right answer, helps them out a little bit, not unlike the two contrasting energy policies that were presented by the major Presidential candidates. Well, the administration has used about all of its lifelines and still doesn't have an answer with regard to the energy policy. Now we find we are playing the game ''Who Wants to be a Millionaire'' with the Strategic Petroleum Reserve at the expense of our national energy security.

Some of the lucky winners, speculators who bid on this crude oil released from SPR recently, stand to profit handsomely; there is no question about it. But we should reflect on what the purpose was. The purpose was to build up heating oil inventories in the Northeast. Well, it is pretty hard to make a case that anything realistic has been done as a consequence of the SPR sale to build up those reserves.

I recall that the Vice President called on the President a few weeks ago to authorize the release of 30 million barrels of oil from the SPR. That was on September 21. Interestingly enough, the President responded the very next day. It is important to grasp that the aim of the emergency release, according to the administration, was to increase heating oil stocks in the Northeast and prevent high heating oil prices this winter. But what has been the result, Mr. President? Heating oil stocks in the Northeast have actually declined. They have declined 600,000 barrels since the President made his announcement. Those figures, which we reviewed, came from the American Petroleum Institute. That is a very disturbing trend because we are entering the winter season. It is getting colder up there and the reserves, again, are 600,000 barrels less than when the President made his announcement on September 21.

One can question the motive. Was the motive to lower prices and provide an excuse, cover, throughout the winter heating season, and perhaps throughout the elections, to ensure that the administration was doing something about the energy problem, something about the price of oil, something about our dependence on the Mideast, something about meeting the obligation of having adequate heating oil reserves?

I think the administration's premise was flawed from the start. If you consider these realistic facts, at the time of the SPR release, our refineries were operating at between 95 and 96 percent of capacity. That is a fact. Now, the oil in SPR is crude oil. In order to refine it, it has to go to a refinery. Furthermore, our pipelines for crude and finished product are already operating to capacity. We haven't had a new refinery for nearly two decades. And 37 refineries have been closed in this country in the last 10 years. So what we have is a situation where we have a bottleneck at our refineries, regardless of how much crude oil we have.

New heating oil resulting from SPR releases can't be delivered until late November at the earliest because you have to take this oil out of the SPR in the salt caverns of Louisiana on the gulf coast and you can only recover about 4 million barrels a day maximum, and you have to move it through a pipeline, put it on a tanker, and transport it to a refinery that is already full. There would be no guarantee that the crude oil released from SPR would have to be turned into heating oil for use in the United States. In other words, when they made this sale, they didn't make any requirement that whoever was the successful bidder on the sale was prohibited from exporting it. As a matter of fact, they didn't even have to turn it into heating oil. There is no provision in the contractual terms that mandates if you are the successful bidder for the SPR oil, you have to either turn it into heating oil and put it in a reserve in the United States, or, for that matter, you can export the oil. You certainly don't have to refine the oil.

The Wall Street Journal reported last week that heating oil from the United States is now being exported to Europe. We checked on that and found out that that is true. The heating oil market there is 50 percent larger than the U.S. market. Stocks are tight and prices are a few cents a gallon higher. I mentioned this to some of the principals in the Department of Energy and they said: We are letting the free market work.

I said: It is certainly working because that is where it is going—to the highest return, which is Europe.

So refiners are able to ship heating oil over to Europe because they pay a premium price at a time when there is a real shortage here in the United States.

Another question is, Why didn't the administration, when it put up 30 million barrels, put in a prohibition on exporting that oil, a mandate that it had to be refined, a mandate that it had to go into a reserve? We took oil out of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, which was designed to address our needs should there be a curtailment of supply from the Mideast, and here we have a situation where no provision was even given to ensure that the action of taking 30 million barrels out of SPR resulted in any increase in our domestic heating oil supply for the Northeast part of the country.

And now the Department of Energy's Information Administration says that nearly two-thirds of the oil released from SPR—or 20 million barrels—will simply displace foreign imported oil. What that means is that we don't have the capacity in our refineries to take 30 million barrels; we are going to take 10. So instead of 30 million barrels, we will only get 10 million barrels of new crude actually from the SPR because of the displacement that I just explained.

Now, the Department of Energy claims that these 10 million barrels can still yield 3 million to 4 million barrels of heating oil. On the other hand, the industry tells us—and they are in the business because they have to refine it—that roughly 800,000 to 900,000 barrels of heating oil is all we are going to get out of the 10 million barrels that are refined. I don't know who is correct, but I suspect the industry is. In any event, recognize that the United States uses roughly 1 million barrels of heating oil a day.

So this pulldown of the SPR has either resulted in a 3-day supply or a 1-day supply. It sent a signal that we are so desperate that we are willing to reduce our Strategic Petroleum Reserve for the specific purpose of increasing the supply of heating oil, which we haven't achieved. One can question whether there was another motivation. Could that motivation have been to manipulate prices because prices did fall from $37 to about $32 after the announcement was made by the President that we were going to go in and sell 30 million barrels of SPR. But I point out where the price is today; the price closed at roughly $36.40 today. We are right back where we started.

As a consequence, the SPR release will, as I have said, likely end up representing less than 1 day's supply of heating oil. It is clear to me that the release of oil from the SPR won't help at all in increasing heating oil supplies in the Northeast this winter. If this had been the real concern of the administration, why would they turn away the invitation offered by Venezuela's state oil company, PDV, to produce heating oil for direct delivery to the United States? Well, we have asked the Secretary this. We asked him in an extended letter.

(Mr. CRAIG assumed the Chair.)

Mr. MURKOWSKI. This administration seems to have limited success in the real goal and, as I have indicated, it appears to be manipulating prices in the world market for, one can only conclude, a political effect. Crude oil prices, as I said, were at a 10-year high, $37 a barrel. After SPR, they hit $32. But today, as I have indicated, they are back up to $36.40. Along the way, they might be making some millionaires out of the speculators who were lucky enough to win a bid on SPR oil. We asked the Secretary to explain how those went out, who got them, how were they offered because if it is true, how did the administration, with this kind of an opportunity for speculators who didn't have to put up any financial requirement, prove a capability to get their bid? It appears that anyone was eligible to play.

Let's look at some of the bidders. Without being specific, very little was required of anyone who wanted to bid on the SPR oil. They did not have to show any financial capacity. The excuse was they were going to take care of that later. That was the official response from the Department of Energy. You didn't have to have any previous experience in the energy market; no track record. You didn't have to have any agreements with refiners who refine the oil. You didn't have any guarantee of even access to refiners and no guarantee that heating oil would be reserved specifically for the Northeast.

They made this bid proposal without any requirement that you could not export it, without any requirement that it be held in the United States for the Northeast reserve.

As a consequence, what have we really accomplished? All the winning bidders needed to do was promise to return more oil to SPR than the other bidders. You might have a pretty inexperienced bidder who wanted to get the bid and who didn't have to put up any financial responsibility proof, bid high, and get an award. Once you get an award, you can turn around and market it. For the larger companies that have the financial capacity, it is perhaps a little different.

I don't begrudge anyone for making a return on an investment. But it is a rather peculiar and I would suggest a poor way for government to do business.

As I think back at government sales, for example, in the forests, the Forest Service requires a participant who is putting up a bid to also show financial responsibility. You have to put up a letter of guarantee in your bank to even bid.

What happened here is we had the letters go out from the Department of Energy to prospective bidders. They simply bid and got an award. Then they have to put up the financial responsibility under a letter of credit after the fact.

In the meantime, if they are a broker, as a few of these folks were, with no experience and no refinery capacity, they are simply going to bid on the oil, and hopefully the price of oil will increase. They can sell their position to somebody else and walk away with a couple of million dollars.

I guess that is part of what makes America great. But, by the same token, you wonder to whom that profit should belong. Should it belong to the taxpayer or the speculator who puts up nothing for the opportunity to get a position and then be fortunate enough to sell it so he can make a few bucks?

We will have to see either today or tomorrow, when the letters of credit are due, whether some of these speculators have the financial capacity to actually meet the conditions after the fact. But I can tell you this. I have checked with several of the companies. These speculators have been busy trying to resell their positions. We will see how many are able to make good on their promises.

But it is important to recognize the winners. What do they get? I don't want you to misunderstand. But they basically get to borrow the crude from SPR. And, if the price goes up, they can sell it at a higher price. They can take the money and buy back cheaper oil in 10 to 12 months to replace what they have borrowed from SPR with interest and, of course, keep any profits as a result. There is potentially millions of dollars—at whose expense? The taxpayer.

I have a little bit of background in banking and business. I can tell you it is a poor way to do business, to put out a bid proposal without any financial requirement for performance. That is what the Department of Energy has done. I think it is totally inappropriate when other Government agencies such as the Forest Service have a proven list of bidders.

I want to make another observation.

Isn't it rather peculiar that we have a Strategic Petroleum Reserve with about a 56-day supply of oil in case this country finds its oil supplies in the Mideast, on which we are 58-percent dependent, cut off by some action and we don't have an approved list of bidders who have already proven their financial capacity or the wherewithal to refine the oil and get it to market so we can do this in a process of a very short time? If the supply is disrupted, we are going to need to move it in a short period of time. It doesn't appear to be the case.

The Department of Energy evidently doesn't have a standing list of bidders who are willing to take the oil at a price, refine it, and get it out to the market. It appears that what we have done here is put this out to the highest bidder, and some of these speculators say: I didn't have to put up anything. I have nothing to lose. If I get a position, I can turn around and try to sell my position hoping that the price of oil has gone up, as it has today $3.50, and make a few bucks without any risk individually—because they haven't had to put up anything.

Let's get this straight. I think this was done at a considerable risk to our national security, and as a consequence, the release of oil from SPR by this administration has not contributed one identifiable barrel to the heating oil reserve for the Northeast part of this country.

Remember what we have achieved so far in the sale is identification that perhaps we will get at least a day's worth of heating oil. But it is not going to arrive until sometime in November.

Further, most of the crude oil released from SPR appears to be going into the foreign markets because they are paying a higher price in Europe than we are paying in the United States. There is no prohibition against the export. The only folks who appear to benefit will be perhaps a few of the speculators and a few of the oil companies that hit the jackpot. I can't imagine the Vice President is going to generate any expanded support from it. But the losers are really the fuel-starved consumers in the Northeast, the people this was designed to help.

I think that raises a number of questions regarding the administration's ability to basically manage the SPR.

When I think of the situation, as I have seen it evolve, I think the Secretary and the administration owe us a few answers.

For example, who bid on crude oil from SPR and what did they offer?

Why were the winning bids selected?

Who didn't get selected and why?

Whom were the bids sent out to?

What assurances did the administration get that oil release from SPR would be turned into heating oil in the Northeast?

How did the winning bidders plan to refine SPR oil?

How will they get it to market?

Why didn't the Department of Energy have a preapproved list of bidders that might be required in a real supply emergency?

Why wasn't financial responsibility part of the bidding process, similar to the way the Forest Service puts up timber for bid with financial requirements to be part of the bid submission?

I have asked these questions of the Secretary. I look forward to his response.

With regard to our national energy security, I think this administration really needs to respond to this question. The question is: Is that your final answer? Because that is simply not good enough for the American people.

In conclusion, it is my intention, as chairman of the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, to hold a hearing, which I intend to call for next Thursday, on the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, to try to generate the factual information relative to just what has been accomplished and what assurances people of the Northeast have that this action will actually result in any increase in our reserves of heating oil for the coming winter in view of the circumstances that exist today—the conflict in the Mideast, the tensions, and the realization that, indeed, we are at a time when we have become so dependent on imported oil that our national energy security is dictated by the likes of Saddam Hussein, Iraq, and others who do not necessarily look for the best interests of the United States when they sell their product to us.

I am always reflective on Saddam Hussein and the realization that now we are importing about 750,000 barrels a day from Iraq. How quickly the American people forget that we lost 147 lives in 1992 in the Persian Gulf war; we had 437 wounded. The cost to the taxpayer was in the billions of dollars.

Now we are looking to Saddam Hussein as a savior for our addiction to oil. I think it is further interesting to note the action taken by Saddam Hussein in relationship to the demand on Iraq from the U.N. to begin to pay Kuwait for reparations from the conflict there in the invasion from Iraq into Kuwait. Saddam Hussein told the U.N., if you require payment now, I will reduce my oil production. It is my understanding that the U.N. said: We will talk about it next quarter.

If you look at where we are today, we find the world's production and the world's consumption are almost equal. There is a little bit more production than there is consumption—just about 1 million barrels a day. But Saddam Hussein is producing 2.9 million barrels a day. His threat to cut production could increase the price of oil from $36 today to $56 tomorrow.

I always recall the issue of Israel and our commitment to Israel's security. He ends virtually every speech with ''Death to Israel.'' If there ever is a threat to peace in the Middle East, it comes from Iraq. They are building up their missile-delivery capability, their biological capability, and as a consequence of what we are seeing today in the Middle East, the crisis is increasing by the hour, and as a consequence the threat is increasing.

So this is all coupled with dependence, an increased growing dependence on imported oil and the inability of the administration to face up to appropriate relief associated with reducing our dependence on imported oil by producing more oil at home in the overthrust belt in Wyoming, Colorado, Utah—areas where the Federal Government is now taking nearly 60 percent of the public land and putting it off limits.

In my State of Alaska, we are attempting to open up the small sliver of ANWR, roughly a footprint of 2,000 acres out of 19 million acres, a potential supply of 16 billion barrels that would replace what we import from Saudi Arabia over a 30-year period. These are the actions that could be taken as well as conservation and tax incentives to address our energy security.

If we were to take these actions, there is no question in my mind we would be sending a strong signal to the Middle East. We would see a very significant drop in oil, much more so than occurred the other day when the President announced the sale of 30 million barrels from the SPR. I suggest we could expect at least a $10 to $15 a barrel drop in the price of oil.

I was thinking about the remarks of the previous speaker relative to the political season we are in. I was reminded in the debate last night of a statement by the Vice President that he always opposed energy taxes. I guess perhaps the Vice President overlooked the fact that when the administration came in in 1993 the first tax they proposed was the Btu tax, British thermal unit, a tax on energy. It was defeated in this body.

However, shortly thereafter there was the effort by the Vice President, who was sitting in the chair of the Presiding Officer, and there was a tie vote in the Senate. The issue was the gas tax, 4.5 cents a gallon. The Vice President broke that tie and that gas tax went into effect.

In conclusion, I assume that the Vice President overlooked his record on increasing energy taxes and perhaps he should revisit his record and his memory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 4828) to designate wilderness areas and a cooperative management and protection area in the vicinity of Steens Mountain in Harney County, Oregon, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered read the third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statement relating to the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (H.R. 4828) was read the third time and passed.

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, moments ago, by unanimous consent, the Senate passed H.R. 4828, the Steens Mountain Cooperative Management and Protection Act. This bill, supported by the entire Oregon delegation, is a very unique piece of legislation to enhance the protection of Steens Mountain in Southeastern Oregon, while preserving the local ranching economy.

As the sponsor of the Senate companion bill, S. 3052, cosponsored by my colleague, Senator WYDEN, I am here to thank my colleagues for the swift consideration of the House-passed bill.This bill enjoys broad support, ranging from the local community officials and the Oregon Cattlemen's Association, to Oregon Trout and the Sierra Club.

For those of my colleagues who have not had the good fortune to visit this special place, the Steens Mountain area in southeastern Oregon is a unique geologic formation that is home to a wide diversity of flora and fauna. The Steens Mountain fault block stretches sixty miles. It rises to an elevation of 9,700 feet and drops 5,500 feet in three miles to the historic lakebed of the Alvord Desert.

The federal lands on Steens Mountain are managed by the Bureau of Land Management. There is significant private ownership in the area, with over 270 separate landowners controlling about one-third of the land. There are several large ranching operations that graze both public and private lands in the Steens Mountain area.

Faced with multiple landowners, and a wide range of views on how best to protect the land, we finally crafted a great bill that enjoys local and national support, and that the President has indicated he will sign.

Through this bill, we are going to designate over one hundred and seventy thousand acres of wilderness. We are permanently removing cattle from over a hundred thousand acres in the High Steens. We will permanently withdraw over 1.1 million acres, including the Alvord Desert, from mining and geothermal development. We are also creating innovative management tools, such as a Redband Trout reserve and a Wildlands Juniper Management Area, to respond to the diverse stewardship needs of the Steens and the wildlife that finds its home there.

Mr. President, it was no easy task to achieve such wide-ranging environmental protection in my state without decimating the way of life of an entire community, and without creating more distrust of federal land management policies. This solution, though, works for the land and the people, rather than trying to make the land fit an existing management classification.

The best way to preserve special places like Steens Mountain, with significant private ownership, is not to force people off the land or to buy them all out. It is to ensure that open spaces are preserved in private ownership, and to provide incentives for the preservation of these open spaces. After all, it is the stewardship of this area by the private landowners over the last one hundred years that makes Steens Mountain the special place that it is today.

For over a year now, the entire Oregon congressional delegation and the Governor have worked closely with the Secretary of the Interior and stakeholders to achieve one primary goal: the preservation of Steens Mountain for future generations of Americans while ensuring that the ranchers can pass their ranches down to their children and grandchildren.

At the risk of leaving someone out, I would like to take a moment to mention some of the people who have contributed to this landmark process. I want to thank all of the Members of the Oregon delegation, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Governor, and all the dedicated staff members who worked on this bill—especially Valerie West, my Natural Resources Director, as well as Kurt Pfotenhauer and Matt Hill of my staff; Lindsay Slater, and Troy Tidwell in Congressman WALDEN's office; David Blair, Josh Kardon, and Sarah Bittleman in Senator WYDEN's office; Amelia Jenkins with Congressman DEFAZIO; Chris Huckleberry with Congresswoman HOOLEY; Michael Harrison with Congressman BLUMENAUER; and working on behalf of Governor Kitzhaber—Kevin Smith and Peter Green. In the Secretary of the Interior's office, I want to extend thanks to Molly McUsic and Laurie Sedlmayr. I also want to recognize the work of Mike Menge, David Dye, and David Brooks of the Senate Energy Committee, who helped bring this legislation before the Committee and to the floor of the Senate.

There are also many in Oregon that have been essential to this process. First and foremost, those who live in the shadow and beauty of Steens Mountain, and who will continue to act as its stewards: Stacy Davies, Fred Otley and Charlie Otley. There are also those who have represented the various environmental groups in Oregon: Bill Marlett, Andy Kerr, Sybil Ackerman, Jill Workman, and Jim Myron.

Mr. President, this bill is a historic achievement that will protect a mountain and a way of life that are deeply intertwined in the spirit of the American west, and I thank my colleagues for their support.

LIBERTY MEMORIAL IN KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI

RELOCATING AND RENOVATING THE HAMILTON GRANGE, NEW YORK

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Energy Committee be discharged from further consideration of the following resolutions, and further, the Senate proceed to their considerations en bloc: S. Con. Res. 114, S. Res. 368.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolutions by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A concurrent resolution (S. Con.Res. 114) recognizing the Liberty Memorial in Kansas City, Missouri, as a national World War I symbol honoring those who defended liberty and our country through service in World War I.

A resolution (S. Res. 368) to recognize the importance of relocating and renovating the Hamilton Grange, New York.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolutions.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. I ask unanimous consent that the resolutions be agreed to, the preambles be agreed to, the motions to consider be laid upon the table, that any statement related to the resolutions be printed in the RECORD, with the above occurring en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolutions were agreed to.

The preambles were agreed to.

The resolutions, with their preambles, read as follows:

S. CON. RES. 114

Whereas over 4 million Americans served in World War I, however, there is no nationally recognized symbol honoring the service of such Americans;

Whereas in 1919, citizens of Kansas City expressed an outpouring of support, raising over $2,000,000 in 2 weeks, which was a fundraising accomplishment unparalleled by any other city in the United States irrespective of population;

Whereas on November 1, 1921, the monument site was dedicated marking the only time in history that the 5 Allied military leaders (Lieutenant General Baron Jacques of Belgium, General Armando Diaz of Italy, Marshal Ferdinand Foch of France, General John J. Pershing of the United States, and Admiral Lord Earl Beatty of Great Britain) were together at one place;

Whereas during a solemn ceremony on Armistice Day in 1924, President Calvin Coolidge marked the beginning of a 3-year construction project by the laying of the cornerstone of the Liberty Memorial;

Whereas the 217-foot Memorial Tower topped with 4 stone ''Guardian Spirits'' representing courage, honor, patriotism, and sacrifice, rises above the observation deck, making the Liberty Memorial a noble tribute to all who served;

Whereas during a rededication of the Liberty Memorial in 1961, former Presidents Harry S. Truman and Dwight D. Eisenhower recognized the memorial as a constant reminder of the sacrifices during World War I and the progress that followed;

Whereas the Liberty Memorial is the only public museum in the United States specifically dedicated to the history of World War I; and

Whereas the Liberty Memorial is internationally known as a major center of World War I remembrance: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Liberty Memorial in Kansas City, Missouri, is recognized as a national World War I symbol, honoring those who defended liberty and our country through service in World War I.

S. RES. 368

Whereas Alexander Hamilton, assisted by James Madison and George Washington, was the principal drafter of the Constitution of the United States;

Whereas Hamilton was General Washington's aide-de-camp during the Revolutionary War, and, given command by Washington of the New York and Connecticut light infantry battalion, led the successful assault on British redoubt number 10 at Yorktown;

Whereas after serving as Secretary of the Treasury, Hamilton founded the Bank of New York and the New York Post;

Whereas the only home Hamilton ever owned, commonly known as ''the Grange'', is a fine example of Federal period architecture designed by New York architect John McComb, Jr., and was built in upper Manhattan in 1803;

Whereas the New York State Assembly enacted a law in 1908 authorizing New York City to acquire the Grange and move it to nearby St. Nicholas Park, part of the original Hamilton estate, but no action was taken;

Whereas in 1962, the National Park Service took over management of the Grange, by then wedged on Convent Avenue within inches between an apartment house on the north side and a church on the south side;

Whereas the 1962 designation of the Grange as a national memorial was contingent on the acquisition by the National Park Service of a site to which the building could be relocated;

Whereas the New York State Legislature enacted a law in 1998 that granted approval for New York City to transfer land in St. Nicholas Park to the National Park Service, causing renovations to the Grange to be postponed; and

Whereas no obelisk, monument, or classical temple along the national mall has been constructed to honor the man who more than any other designed the Government of the United States, Hamilton should at least be remembered by restoring his home in a sylvan setting: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That—

(1) the Senate recognizes the immense contribution Alexander Hamilton made to the United States as a principal drafter of the Constitution; and

(2) the National Park Service should expeditiously—

(A) proceed to relocate the Grange to St. Nicholas Park; and

(B) restore the Grange to a state befitting the memory of Alexander Hamilton.

COMMENDING THE MEN AND WOMEN WHO FOUGHT IN THE JASPER FIRE

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Senate proceed to the consideration of S. Res. 376, introduced earlier today by Senator DASCHLE and Senator JOHNSON.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 376) expressing the sense of Senate that the men and women who fought the Jasper Fire in the Black Hills of South Dakota should be commended for their heroic efforts.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr President, I rise today in support of the Daschle-Johnson resolution that commends the men and women who valiantly fought the Jasper fire in the Black Hills of South Dakota. The fire that raged through the Black Hills caused considerable damage to the forests in these states. Almost 100,000 acres burned in the Black Hills alone. To the great relief of all of us in South Dakota, the fire has been brought under control. The firefighters in our state did a tremendous job in containing the fire. Their efforts have been nothing short of Herculean.

The fire started near Jasper Cave on the Black Hills National Forest on August 24, 2000 and was contained by September 8, 2000. By the second day, the fire had quadrupled in size and was burning as fast as 100 acres per second. The fire threatened private homes in the communities of Deerfield, Custer and Hill City, the Jewel Cave National Monument and the Mount Rushmore National Memorial. It also forced the evacuation of many residents on northwestern Custer County and southwestern Pennington County.

1,160 men and women worked around the clock, most of them volunteers who literally risked their lives and made great sacrifices to contain the fire. Special mention should be made of the Tatanka Hotshot crew, an elite 20-person firefighting team based in the Black Hills who came from fighting fires in western Wyoming the fight the Jasper fire. While the Tatanka crew has fought several fires throughout the country, this was the first major fire they fought in their home forest .

The firefighters were incredibly successful. In spite of the rugged terrain and the intense speed and size of the Jasper fire, it was contained with only one home lost and with no injuries to any firefighters or local citizens. This resolution commends the firefighters for their bravery, their extraordinary efforts to contain the fire, and their commitment to protect lives, property and the surrounding communities. Senator DASCHLE, myself, and the entire Senate are proud of their efforts. We can't thank them enough.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. I ask unanimous consent the resolution and preamble be agreed to en bloc, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table with no intervening action, and any statements relating thereto be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 376) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 376

Whereas the Jasper Fire started at 2:30 p.m. on Thursday, August 24, 2000, near Jasper Cave in the Black Hills National Forest and was contained at 6:00 p.m. on September 8, 2000;

Whereas two days after it started, the Jasper Fire nearly quadrupled in size in a matter of hours, burned as fast as 100 acres per second, and ultimately became the worst forest fire in the history of the Black Hills, consuming 83,508 acres;

Whereas the Jasper Fire threatened private homes in the Black Hills, including the South Dakota communities of Deerfield, Custer, and Hill City, Jewel Cave National Monument, and Mount Rushmore National Memorial, and forced the evacuation of many residents in northwestern Custer County and southwestern Pennington County;

Whereas volunteers from 67 community fire departments from across South Dakota made up a substantial part of the 1,160 men and women who worked around the clock to contain the Jasper Fire;

Whereas the Tatanka Hotshot crew, an elite 20-person firefighting team based in the Black Hills, came from fighting fires in western Wyoming to help fight the Jasper Fire;

Whereas while the Tatanka Hotshot crew has fought several fires throughout the country, the Jasper Fire was the first major fire they fought in their home forest;

Whereas the outpouring of support for the firefighters by local residents and communities, such as Hill City and Custer, helped boost firefighter morale; and

Whereas, in spite of the rugged terrain and the intense speed and size of the fire, the Jasper Fire was contained successfully with only one home lost and with no injuries to any firefighters or local citizens: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the Jasper Fire was the largest forest fire in the history of the Black Hills National Forest, consuming 83,508 acres;

(2) the volunteer firefighters from across South Dakota played a crucial role in combating the Jasper Fire and preventing it from destroying hundreds of homes;

(3) the Tatanka Hotshot crew was instrumental in providing the effort, expertise and training necessary to establish a fire line around the Jasper Fire; and

(4) the men and women who fought the Jasper Fire are commended for their bravery, their extraordinary efforts to contain the fire, and their commitment to protect lives, property, and the surrounding communities.

AMENDMENT NO. 4312

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, Senator SMITH of New Hampshire has an amendment at the desk, and I ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska [Mr. MURKOWSKI], for Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, proposes an amendment numbered 4312.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under ''Amendments Submitted.'')

DOG FIELD TRIALS

Mr. CRAPO. I would like to engage the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, Mr. SMITH, in a colloquy regarding the Federal Aid bill and concerns that have been raised with respect to the use of Pittman-Robertson Act-acquired lands for dog field trials.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. I am delighted to accommodate my friend from Idaho.

Mr. CRAPO. As the chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee knows, there is nothing that precludes the use Pittman-Robertson lands for dog field trials, and, that in fact, this is a legitimate use of these lands, provided that the field trials are consistent with the objectives of the Pittman-Robertson Act.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. I agree that Pittman-Robertson lands can certainly be used for field trials in a way that is consistent with the act.

Mr. CRAPO. Concerns have been raised that Pittman-Robertson lands should not be used for field trials. As the Senator from New Hampshire knows, the sportsmen who pay this excise tax have varied interests—they are hunters, field trialers, and shooting enthusiasts. The primary goal of the Pittman-Robertson Act is wildlife conservation, but it is also important that these lands support multiple uses.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. I agree with the chairman of the Fisheries, Wildlife, and Water Subcommittee.

Mr. CRAPO. Multiple uses of public lands necessarily require the balancing of occasionally competing interests and objectives. The most appropriate parties to make decisions regarding wildlife habitat development and other uses and activities are state wildlife managers who are most familiar with site specific conditions, habitat needs, and the impact of sporting activities.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. I agree wholeheartedly with the Senator from Idaho. It is those closest to the land who can help determine on a case-by-case basis how to balance wildlife needs with users who engage in various sporting activities, while remaining consistent with the objectives of the Pittman-Robertson Act.

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I want to make a point about one provision of the amendment and ask the committee chairman, Senator SMITH, whether he agrees. Section 132 of the bill establishes a new position, in the Fish and Wildlife Service, of Assistant Director for Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Programs. The provision also specifies the Assistant Director's responsibilities.

Although this provision is similar to section 302 of the version of the bill that passed the House, it differs in one significant respect. The House report said that ''individuals in the Regional offices who are responsible for administering the Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Programs will also report to the Assistant Director.'' We considered and rejected this approach. The Fish and Wildlife Service operates through a system of regional offices. Employees in the regional offices report to the regional directors, and the regional directors report to the Director of the Fish and Wildlife Service. In light of this, it would be potentially disruptive to require that individuals who are responsible for administering the federal aid program to report directly to the Assistant Director, in Washington, D.C., rather than to the regional director. We do not intend section 132 to mandate such a change. Does the chairman agree?

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Yes. By approving section 132, we intend to elevate the role of the head of the Federal Aid program, as part of our overall effort, in this bill, to give the program the full attention that it deserves. We do not intend, however, to mandate a change in the general Fish and Wildlife Service's administrative structure. No case has been made for such a change, and it could potentially be counterproductive.

FIREARM AND BOW HUNTER EDUCATION AND SAFETY PROGRAM

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, the manager's amendment amends the Firearm and Bow Hunter Education and Safety Program that was included in the bill as reported out of the Committee. It is my understanding that the manager's amendment authorizes $7.5 million for fiscal year 2001 and 2002, and $8 million for fiscal year 2003 and every year thereafter. The authorized funds would be provided to the States in the form of direct grants. Would you please briefly explain how this new grant program will impact the States, especially States like Montana and New Hampshire that are spending a considerable amount on these type of projects already?

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. As you know, under current law, States are authorized to use one half of the revenue collected from taxes on handguns and archery equipment for hunter education and the development of target ranges. Under our provision, any State that is fully utilizing the authorized amount for these purposes can spend the grant money on any project that is authorized in the Pittman-Robertson Act. States that are spending less than the authorized amount have to use the grant funds for hunter education and range development until they utilize the amount authorized by the Pittman-Robertson Act for those purposes. The States can then spend any remaining funds above the authorized level on hunter education, range development or any other project that is authorized in Pittman-Robertson. For example, say New Hampshire is authorized to use $270 thousand of Pittman-Robertson funds on hunter education and range development but is only spending $266 thousand. New Hampshire would be then required to spend $4 thousand of its grant money on hunter education and range development. After that New Hampshire could use any remaining amount on any project that is consistent with the purposes of the Pittman-Robertson Act.

Mr. BAUCUS. I think it is very important for us to recognize that the vast majority of states spend a considerable sum of money, both Pittman-Robertson and state funds, on hunter education and target range development.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I rise today to encourage my colleagues to support final passage of H.R. 3671, the Fish and Wildlife Programs Improvement Act. I believe that this bill will enhance State wildlife conservation programs across the country. I am proud to be a cosponsor of this important legislation.

The Pittman-Robertson Act and the Wallop-Breaux Act created user-pay benefit trust funds. Together, these programs are called the Sport Fish and Wildlife Restoration Programs and are known more generally as the Federal Aid Program. The States are primarily responsible for managing the Federal Aid Program. They identify eligible projects and then pay for the projects up front. The projects must be directly related to old and sport fish restoration efforts. Projects that are eligible for funding through the Pittman-Robertson and Wallop Breaux Programs include: acquisition and improvement of wildlife habitat; hunter education; wildlife population surveys; construction of facilities to improve public access; management of wildlife areas fish stocking, boating and fishing access; and facility development and maintenance. States are reimbursed for up to 75 percent of the total cost of each project from the Federal Aid funds.

I am offering a manager's amendment in the nature of a substitute that makes several important changes to the Federal Aid bill that reported by the Committee on Environment and Public Works. I believe that in adopting these changes, we will not only improve the bill, but will also ensure that this important legislation is signed into law this year. In addition, the manager's package includes the National Fish and Wildlife Refuge System Centennial bill, and reauthorized the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation. This package has been negotiated with the House Committee on Natural Resources.

Earlier this year, the Environment and Public Works Subcommittee on Fisheries, Wildlife and Water held a hearing on the Fish and Wildlife Service's Administration of the Wallop-Breaux and Pittman-Robertson Acts and what we discovered was shocking.

The Pittman-Robertson and Wallop-Breaux Restoration Funds were created over 50 years ago. Congress intended to allow sportsmen to contribute to the preservation and enhancement of the fields, streams and great outdoors that they enjoy so much. These two programs together authorize the collection of excise taxes from the manufacturers and importers of hunting and fishing equipment. Congress entrusted the Fish and Wildlife Service, through the Federal Aid Division, with the responsibility of managing these programs and distributing the funds to the States. Unfortunately, a report issued by the General Accounting Office indicates that the Fish and Wildlife Service has violated that trust.

These are significant wildlife programs, with substantial resources to fund them. Last year alone, sportsmen contributed over $430 million to the programs. Every time a hunter buys a gun, or an angler buys a rod, they know a portion of the cost is supposed to be given to the States to fund conservation projects, such as fish stocking or habitat restoration. I say ''supposed to'' because GAO recently found that not all of the money the States are entitled to is, in fact, being given to them. Both the Wallop-Breaux and Pittman-Robertson Acts allowed the Fish and Wildlife Service to reserve a percentage of the mounts received from the excise tax. However, the Acts also require that any excess amounts not needed for administration of the programs be distributed among the States. Unfortunately, for years, the Fish and Wildlife Service just ignored that requirement and shortchanged the States.

The problems that plague these programs are numerous. The Service created several grant programs which they had, at best, questionable authority to do. Initially, they failed to account for millions of dollars. They ignored their own established guidelines for approving travel. This is unacceptable behavior.

I believe that the manager's amendment will put an end to the mismanagement that plagues the programs today. At the same time, it will institute a more effective way in which to manage these programs in the future. We address the problems that were identified in the GAO report and in the hearing by making four fundamental changes to the wildlife restoration and sport fish programs. These changes are intended to enhance accountability within the Fish and Wildlife Service with respect to the administration of the Federal Aid Program; to provide further clarity regarding the use of administrative funds; to encourage safe hunting through education; and to provide additional flexibility to the States for regional conservation projects.

First, the manager's amendment authorizes $18 million in fiscal years 2001 and 2002, and $16.4 million in fiscal year 2003 and subsequent years, with an increase relative to the Consumer Price Index for the Secretary of the Interior to administer both the Pittman-Robertson and Wallop-Breaux Programs. I felt that it was extremely important for the Secretary to have enough resources to administer the program effectively, but not so much money that there would be an incentive to waste it needlessly. Although I am confident that the program can run effectively on the authorized amount, it is extremely important to revisit this issue in several years. This is particularly important because the administration was unable to justify many of its costs. The manager's amendment requires a biennial audit that will give the Committee additional information on whether or not the authorized amount needs to be adjusted.

Second, the manager's amendment enumerates legitimate administrative costs and limits the use of Federal Aid funds to those expenses. The General Accounting Office investigation found that the Fish and Wildlife Service, among other things, failed to maintain adequate controls over funds, expenditures, and grants, and used administrative funds inconsistently among different FWS regional offices. By specifically listing what constitutes appropriate administrative costs, these problems should not arise in the future.

Third, the manager's amendment creates a new Firearm and Bow Hunter Education and Safety Grant Program authorized at $7.5 million in fiscal years 2001 and 2002, and $8 million in fiscal year 2003 and every year thereafter. The authorized funds would be provided to the States in the form of direct grants. Under current law, States are authorized to use half of the revenue collected from taxes on handguns and archery equipment for hunter education and the development of target ranges. This new provision would allow any State that is fully utilizing the authorized amount for these purposes to spend the grant money on any project that is authorized in the Pittman-Robertson Act. States that are spending less than the authorized amount would be required to use the grant funds for hunter education and range development until they utilize the amount authorized by the Pittman-Robertson Act for those purposes. At that point, the States can spend any remaining funds above the authorized level on hunter education, range development or any other project that is authorized in Pittman-Robertson.

In my home State of New Hampshire, for example, the Department of Fish and Game is authorized to use $270 thousand of Pittman-Robertson funds on hunter education and range development, but is currently only spending $266 thousand. Under this bill, New Hampshire would be required to spend $4 thousand of its grant money on hunter education and range development; after that, however, the State would have the discretion to spend the remaining amount on any project that is consistent with the purposes of the Pittman-Robertson Act. This strikes a good balance between the interests of the hunting community that wanted states to spend the 50 percent level authorized under the law, and the States who want discretion to spend Pittman-Robertson funds to meet their priorities, both education and conservation programs.

Finally, the manager's amendment authorizes a new Multistate Conservation Grant Program at $6 million to allow for Federal Aid funds to be used for regional projects. The Multistate Grant program requires the International Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies International to submit a list to the Secretary of the Interior recommending projects that should receive funding. The bill as reported out of Committee prohibited the International from considering any grant submitted by an organization that opposes hunting or fishing. Shortly before the markup, we realized this approach raised First Amendment concerns, and I promised to work with interested parties to resolve this problem. The manager's amendment prohibits any grant funds from supporting, in whole or in part, any activity that promotes opposition to hunting and fishing. Any organization can apply for a grant but it can't use these funds in any activity that targets the individuals who pay the excise tax. This is a common sense solution that protects the first amendment rights of all, without penalizing sportsmen who help fund the programs.

This manager's amendment also reauthorizes the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation Establishment Act of 1984. The manager's amendment makes important changes in the Foundation's charter, changes that I believe will allow the Foundation to build on its fine record of providing funding for the conservation of our nation's fish, wildlife and plant resources.

The National Fish and Wildlife Foundation was established in 1984 to bring together diverse groups to engage in conservation projects across America and, in some cases, around the world. Since its inception, the Foundation has made more than 3,400 grants totaling over $435 million. This is an impressive record of accomplishment. The Foundation has pioneered some notable conservation programs, including implementing the North American Waterfowl Management plan, Partners in Flight for neotropical birds, Bring Back the Natives Program, the Exxon Save the Tiger Fund, and the establishment of the Conservation Plan for Sterling Forest in New York and New Jersey, to name just a few.

The Foundation has funded these programs by raising private funds to match federal appropriations on at least a 2 to 1 basis. During this time of fiscal constraint, this is an impressive record of leveraging federal dollars. Moreover, all of the Foundation's operating costs are covered by separate private sources, which means that Federal and private dollars given for conservation are spent only on conservation projects.

The National Fish and Wildlife Foundation has more than fulfilled the hopes of its original sponsors. It has helped to implement solutions to some difficult natural resource problems and is becoming widely recognized for its innovative approach to solving environmental problems. For example, when Atlantic salmon neared extinction in the U.S. due to overharvest in Greenland, the Foundation and its partners bought Greenland Salmon quotas. I, like many others in Congress, want the Foundation to continue its important conservation efforts.

This legislation is quite simple. The manager's amendment would expand the Foundation's governing Board of Directors from 15 members to 25 members. This will allow a greater number of individuals with a strong interest in conservation to actively participate in, and contribute to, the Foundation's activities. Also, it would authorize appropriations to the Fish and Wildlife Service and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration through 2003.

Finally, the manager's amendment would authorize the ''National Wildlife Refuge System Centennial Commemoration Act of 2000.'' This landmark provision commemorates the centennial of the first national wildlife refuge in the United States, established on March 14, 1903, by a great man and conservationist, President Theodore Roosevelt. By setting aside land at Indian River Lagoon on Pelican Island, Florida as a haven for birds, President Roosevelt began a conservation legacy known as the National Wildlife Refuge System.

Today, the National Wildlife Refuge System has evolved into the most comprehensive system of lands devoted to wildlife protection and management in the world—spanning nearly 93 million acres across the United States and its territories. By placing special emphasis on conservation, our nation's network of refuges ensures the continued protection of our wildlife resources, including threatened and endangered species, and land areas with significant wildlife-oriented recreational, historical and cultural value.

Currently, there are more than 500 refuges in the United States and its territories, providing important habitat for 700 bird species, 220 mammal species, 250 species of amphibians and reptiles, and over 200 fish species. The Refuge System also hosts some of our country's premiere fisheries, and serves a vital role in the protection of threatened and endangered species by preserving their critical habitats.

Approximately 98 percent of the Refuge System land is open to the public. Each year, the System attracts more than 34 million visitors to participate in a variety of recreational activities that include observing and photographing wildlife, fishing, hunting and taking part in system-sponsored educational programs. By providing the public with an opportunity to participate in these activities, refuges promote a sense of appreciation for the natural wonders of this nation and emphasize our important role as stewards of these lands.

The manager's amendment commemorates the Refuge System by creating a Commission that will oversee the Centennial anniversary and promote public awareness and understanding of the importance of refuges to our nation. Additionally, the manger's amendment directs the Fish and Wildlife Service to prepare a long-term plan for the Refuge System that will enable the Service to look ahead and determine the future needs and priorities of the system network.

Mr. President, I strongly urge my colleagues to support adoption of this bill.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, I rise today in support of H.R. 3671, the Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Programs Improvement Act of 2000. The bill we have before us today is the culmination of a bi-partisan, bi-cameral effort. I want to thank Chairman BOB SMITH, Ranking Member BAUCUS, and Senator BOXER for their hard work and recognition of how important it was to pass this bill this year. I also thank Representative DON YOUNG, Chairman of the House Resources Committee, for his efforts and investigation into the program.

I think we have a bill that everyone can support. It will reduce Government waste and prevent misuse of funds, while enhancing the program. The federal aid program has been a conservation success story. This bill will ensure that this success continues by restoring accountability and responsibility to the program. Ultimately, this legislation will restore trust in the program, without affecting the effectiveness of the program.

Senator CRAIG and I introduced the Senate version of this bill because there was a problem and America's hunters and fishermen needed trust returned to the administration of the Wildlife and Sport Fish Restoration Programs. The bill we have before us today restricts the amount of money that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service can spend on administrative expenses, while clearly identifying authorized expenses. The bill also improves the program by funding a multi-state grant program, and ensuring that hunter education and shooting range programs are funded at the level hunters and shooting enthusiasts expect and deserve. These changes are good for the program, good for hunters, fishermen, and shooting enthusiasts, and are simply good government.

Congressional investigations and a General Accounting Office audit of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service revealed that, contrary to existing law, money had been routinely diverted to administrative slush funds, withheld from states, and generally misused for purposes unrelated to either fisheries or wildlife conservation. In addition, the GAO called the Division of Federal Aid, ''if not the worst, one of the worst-managed programs we have encountered.'' As an avid outsdoorsman, I was particularly disturbed by this abuse. As a legislator, I am pleased to have an opportunity to prevent such abuses in the future.

This bill reestablishes the trust between the hunters and anglers who pay the excise taxes and the Federal Government. It is an opportunity to repair a system that has been lauded as one of the nation's most successful conservation efforts. I hope my colleagues will join me in passing this bipartisan effort to restore accountability and responsibility to the Federal Aid programs and the Fish and Wildlife Service.

I thank the Chair.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I support H.R. 3671, the Wildlife Sport Fish Restoration Programs Improvement Act of 2000, and the substitute amendment proposed by the chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee, Senator SMITH.

The Federal aid program, embodied in the Pittman-Robertson Act and the Wallop-Breaux Act, uses the revenue derived from the excise taxes on firearms and fishing equipment to support state efforts to promote wildlife conservation, sport fish conservation, hunter education, and related activities. It's a good program. It has provided more than $7 billion to support state wildlife conservation and sport fish projects. To give you a more specific idea about the benefits of the program, in 1999 Montana received almost $5 million dollars under these programs, for activities ranging from our hunter education program, to improving habitat for white tail deer, waterfowl, and upland birds, to acquisition of access rights to private land, to our program to reduce conflicts between grizzly bears and people. A few years ago, the program helped us complete the Gallatin land exchange.

Over the years, problems developed in the administration of the program. In particular, the General Accounting Office and others found that money that was set aside, by statute, for administration of the program was being used for unrelated activities. There also were considerable problems with budgeting and overall management.

The bill is designed to address these problems. It makes several reforms. Among other things, it reduces the amount available for administrative expenses, clarifies what constitutes a proper administrative expense, and establishes a new multistate grant program, in part, codifying a previous practice.

These reforms are important. They will assure that taxpayers' money is well spent and that states receive the funds that they are entitled to. In addition, both the bill reported by the Environment and Public Works Committee and the substitute amendment improve on the version of the bill that passed the House. The bill and amendment provide a level of funding for administration that, while significantly lower than the previous level, will fully fund the current activities of the federal aid office of the Fish and Wildlife Service. They also provide the Service with some limited flexibility in determining what is an appropriate administrative expense and avoid prescribing the Service's activities in such detail that we risk ''micromanaging.'' These changes make a good bill even better.

I am pleased that the bill also includes two other important provisions, one reauthorizing the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation and another establishing a program to recognize the upcoming centennial of the National Wildlife Refuge System. Both have previously passed the Senate.

I urge adoption of the amendment and passage of the bill.

MULTI-STATE CONSERVATION GRANT PROGRAM

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, as you know H.R. 3671 establishes a new Multi-State Conservation Grant program. This program requires the International Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies, representing State fish and wildlife agencies, to submit a list to the Secretary of the Interior of recommendation projects eligible for funding under this program prior to October 1 of each year. It is my understanding that the International submitted a list to the Secretary of the Interior prior to October 1 of this year for consideration. Senator SMITH, is it your understanding that the list should be considered submitted in accordance with the provisions of this bill?

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Yes, it is. I do not believe that the grant recipients, many of whom are States, should be penalized because we were unable to pass a bill prior to October 1.

Mr. BAUCUS. The multi-state grant program also requires the International to consult with the various non-governmental organizations and interests involved in this program in preparing this list. It is my understanding that this provision should ensure that these groups are involved both in preparing the request for grant proposals and in evaluating them. Is this also the view of the Chairman?

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Yes, it is. This bill requires that the various interests involved in the Sport Fish and Wildlife Restoration programs be fully and meaningfully consulted in the process, as indicated by the Senator. This should be carefully adhered to in the development of future recommendations.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be agreed to, the committee amendment, as amended, be agreed to, the bill, as amended, be read the third time and passed, the title amendment be agreed to, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements relating to the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 4312) was agreed to.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to.

The bill (H.R. 3671), as amended, was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read:

An Act to amend the Pittman-Robertson Wildlife Restoration Act and the Dingell-Johnson Sport Fish Restoration Act to enhance the funds available for grants to States for fish and wildlife conservation projects, to reauthorize and amend the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation Establishment Act, to commemorate the centennial of the establishment of the first national wildlife refuge in the United States on March 14, 1903, and for other purposes.

MAKING CERTAIN CORRECTIONS IN COPYRIGHT LAW

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of H.R. 5107, which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 5107) to make certain corrections in copyright law.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, with the imminent passage of the work made for hire legislation today, I believe a few comments are in order. Last year a technical amendment was included in the Intellectual Property and Communications Omnibus Reform Act of 1999 which added sound recordings to the list of works eligible for, or considered as having, the status of works made for hire under the Copyright Act. Works made within the scope of employment or large collaborative works such as motion pictures are most often accorded the status of works made for hire, and the copyright for those works resides in the employer or the corporation doing the hiring, such as the movie studio. The status of sound recordings had been in some doubt because sound recordings did not obtain the status of copyrighted works until relatively recently, and, when added to the list of copyrightable works was not added to the list of works made for hire.

When the technical amendment was raised for consideration in the conference, our research indicated that the practice of the Copyright Office has uniformly been to register sound recordings as works made for hire. The technical amendment therefore seemed a reasonable codification of the ongoing practice at the Copyright Office, and was adopted.

Soon thereafter, however, it became clear that while the technical amendment aligned the code with long-time Copyright Office practice, it was not uncontroversial. Indeed many recording artists had believed that the work-for-hire clauses of their contracts were unenforceable because contrary to the copyright code: i.e., sound recordings are not listed as works made for hire. They view their contracts as operating as assignments or transfers of copyright. This distinction is important because under work-for-hire, the copyright is owned by the record company for the life of the copyright and the artists' rights are extinguished; under a transfer or assignment, the artist may recapture his or her copyright after 35 years and then either renegotiate more favorable terms with the same company or sell the remaining copyright to another label on more favorable terms. The basic premise of this recapture is that the initial assignment of copyright might not fully reward the unproven artist who is an unknown quantity in a risky business. Once the artist's commercial value is better proven an opportunity is given the artist to reap the rewards of his or her creations that have stood the test of time. That the assumptions of the artists and labels about the status of these works have been diametrically opposed might not have appeared until 35 years after the 1978 effective act of the current Copyright Act, but for this technical amendment.

What ought the status of sound recordings be then? Sound recordings can be something of a hybrid art form lying on a continuum between the individual author writing a song or book and the motion picture where possibly hundreds of employees collaborate on the final work. Sound recordings can be more like the former or the latter, depending on the circumstances. Because the facts can vary so widely—some albums are primarily the product of the producer, some of one artist, some of a group, many have hired musicians or technicians who contribute but do so as part of their normal employment, some recordings are compilations of smaller recordings—it is not clear what general rule would be either most fair to all concerned or would most encourage the continued creativity of recording artists. Since it may take some time, and will require the input of all the affected parties, it seems reasonable at this time to undo last years' technical amendment without prejudice to either side in case litigation should arise later, while we explore whether a more comprehensive rule can be crafted. That is why we have made this change today, containing in the legislative language the congressional intent that neither enactment prejudice any future litigation.

It is my hope that the dialogue on this issue is beginning, rather then ending, with this legislation. I think it is important to avoid costly litigation if possible. And I believe it of paramount importance that artists are fairly compensated for the work they do. Without the creativity of the artist, the record companies would have nothing to market, and the audience would have nothing to enjoy. For the sake of the future of music, I hope that using new technologies, artists and audience can begin having a closer relationship, where artists are encourage to stretch themselves creatively and fans are enabled to enjoy artists' work more fully. I think a focused conversation on the relative roles of artists and label, as well as the artist's role in controlling their work in traditional and new media, can hasten that day. If the legislative roundabout on the work-for-hire issue concluded today can serve as such a beginning, then it has served a useful purpose.

I commend this legislation to my colleagues. At this time I also wish to thank my colleagues in the House and Senate who have supported this legislation, and the recording artists and labels who have worked together on this legislation and who will begin the task of exploring what more comprehensive settlement we might reach with regard to the status of sound recordings under the copyright law, which will allow them to continue their creative works.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, more than a week ago I came to the floor to be sure the record was clear that all Democrats had cleared for final passage H.R. 5107, the Work for Hire and Copyright Corrections Act of 2000. I urged the Senate to take up H.R. 5107 without further unnecessary delay. I am glad that the majority has finally decided that action on this consensus bill is appropriate. I still do not know what caused the unexplained 2-week delay on the Republican side.

Representatives BERMAN and COBLE deserve credit, along with the interested parties, for working out a consensus solution in this legislation. The purpose of this bill is to restore the status quo ante, as it existed before November 29, 1999 regarding whether a sound recording can qualify as a ''work made for hire'' under the second part of the definition of that term in section 101 of the Copyright Act, and to do so in a manner that does not prejudice any person or entity that might have interests concerning this question. The House held an oversight hearing to explore this matter earlier this year and originated this legislation. This bill restores the law to the same place it was before the enactment of section 1101(d) of the Intellectual Property and Communications Omnibus Reform Act of 1999, as enacted by section 1000(a)(9) of Public Law Number 106–113, so that neither side is prejudiced by what was enacted at the end of 1999 or by what is being enacted now. This bill does not express or imply any view as to the proper interpretation of the work made for hire definition before November 29, 1999. Thus, neither the enactment of section 1101(d) nor this bill's deletion of that language are to be considered in any way or otherwise given any effect by a court or the Copyright Office when interpreting the work made for hire definition.

I congratulate Congressmen BERMAN and COBLE on final passage of this measure.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (H.R. 5107) was read the third time and passed.

REMOVAL OF INJUNCTION OF SECRECY—TREATY DOCUMENT NO. 106–49

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, as in executive session, I ask unanimous consent that the injunction of secrecy be removed from the following convention transmitted to the Senate on October 12, 2000, by the President of the United States: International Convention for Suppression of Financing Terrorism (Treaty Document No. 106–49).

Further, I ask unanimous consent that the convention be considered as having been read the first time, that it be referred with accompanying papers to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed, and that the President's message be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The message of the President is as follows:

To the Senate of the United States:

With a view to receiving the advice and consent of the Senate to ratification, I transmit herewith the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism, adopted by the United Nations General Assembly on December 9, 1999, and signed on behalf of the United States of America on January 10, 2000. The report of the Department of State with respect to the Convention is also transmitted for the information of the Senate.

In recent years, the United States has increasingly focused world attention on the importance of combating terrorist financing as a means of choking off the resources that fuel international terrorism. While international terrorists do not generally seek financial gain as an end, they actively solicit and raise money and other resources to attract and retain adherents and to support their presence and activities both in the United States and abroad. The present Convention is aimed at cutting off the sustenance that these groups need to operate. This Convention provides, for the first time, an obligation that States Parties criminalize such conduct and establishes an international legal framework for cooperation among States Parties directed toward prevention of such financing and ensuring the prosecution and punishment of offenders, wherever found.

Article 2 of the Convention states that any person commits an offense within the meaning of the Convention ''if that person by any means, directly or indirectly, unlawfully and willfully, provides or collects funds with the intention that they should be used or in the knowledge that they are to be used, in full or in part, in order to carry out'' either of two categories of terrorist acts defined in the Convention. The first category includes any act that constitutes an offense within the scope of and as defined in one of the counter terrorism treaties listed in the Annex to the Convention. The second category encompasses any other act intended to cause death or serious bodily injury to a civilian, or to any other person not taking an active part in hostilities in a situation of armed conflict, when the purpose of the act, by its nature or context, is to intimidate a population, or to compel a government or an international organization to do or to abstain from doing any act.

The Convention imposes binding legal obligations upon States Parties either to submit for prosecution or to extradite any person within their jurisdiction who commits an offense as defined in Article 2 of the Convention, attempts to commit such an act, participates as an accomplice, organizes or directs others to commit such an offense, or in any other way contributes to the commission of an offense by a group of persons acting with a common purpose. A State Party is subject to these obligations without regard to the place where the alleged act covered by Article 2 took place.

States Parties to the Convention will also be obligated to provide one another legal assistance in investigations or criminal or extradition proceedings brought in respect of the offenses set forth in Article 2.

Legislation necessary to implement the Convention will be submitted to the Congress separately.

This Convention is a critical new weapon in the campaign against the scourge of international terrorism. I hope that all countries will become Parties to this Convention at the earliest possible time. I recommend, therefore, that the Senate give early and favorable consideration to this Convention, subject to the understanding, declaration and reservation that are described in the accompanying report of the Department of State.

WILLIAM J. CLINTON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, October 12, 2000.

Section 3011 of title 38, United States Code, establishes basic educational assistance entitlement under the All-Volunteer Force Educational Assistance Program (commonly referred to as the ''Montgomery GI Bill'' or ''MGIB'') Active Duty program. Section 3015 establishes the base amount of such educational assistance at the monthly rate of $528 for a 3-year period of service and $429 for a 2-year period of service. These amounts increased to $552 per month and $449 per month, respectively, on October 1, 2000.

House Bill

Section 2 of the House amendments to S. 1402 would increase the current monthly rate of basic education benefits to $600 per month effective October 1, 2000, and to $720 per month on October 1, 2002, for full-time students. The monthly rate for 2-year enlistees would increase to $487 per month effective October 1, 2000, and to $585 per month on October 1, 2002. This section provides parallel increases for part-time students and similar adjustments to the rates paid for correspondence and other types of training. No cost-of-living increases would be made in fiscal years 2001 and 2003.

Senate Bill

Section 4 of S. 1402 would increase the monthly rate of basic education benefits to $600 per month for 3-year enlistees and $488 per month for 2-year enlistees.

Compromise Agreement

Under section 101 of the compromise agreement, effective November 1, 2000, the basic education benefit would be increased from $552 per month (effective October 1, 2000) to $650 per month for a 3-year period of service, and $528 per month for a 2-year period of service.

UNIFORM REQUIREMENT FOR HIGH SCHOOL DIPLOMA OR EQUIVALENCY BEFORE APPLICATION FOR MONTGOMERY GI BILL BENEFITS

Current Law

To be eligible to receive educational assistance, section 3011(a)(2) of title 38, United States Code, requires that a servicemember complete the requirements of a secondary school diploma (or equivalent certificate) before the end of the individual's initial obligated period of active duty. Section 3012(a)(2) contains a similar requirement for servicemembers who serve 2 years of active duty as part of a 6-year Selected Reserve commitment.

Senate Bill

Section 111 of S. 1810 would create a single, uniform secondary school diploma requirement as a prerequisite for eligibility for education benefits—a requirement that, prior to applying for benefits, the applicant will have received a high school diploma or equivalency certificate, or will have completed the equivalent of 12 semester hours in a program of education leading to a standard college degree.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 102 of the compromise agreement follows the Senate language, modified to reflect a new 10-year eligibility period for individuals affected by this provision, which would begin tolling on such individual's last discharge (or release from active duty) or the effective date of this Act, whichever is later.

REPEAL OF REQUIREMENT FOR INITIAL OBLIGATED PERIOD OF ACTIVE DUTY AS CONDITION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR MONTGOMERY GI BILL BENEFITS

Current Law

Sections 3011(a)(1)(A)(i) and 3012(a)(1)(A)(i) of title 38, United States Code, set forth initial-period-of-active-duty requirements to earn basic educational assistance entitlement under the Montgomery GI Bill. The period within which a servicemember's eligibility for educational assistance can be established is currently restricted to the initial period of active duty service.

Senate Bill

Section 112 of S. 1810 would strike the requirement that MGIB benefit entitlement be predicated on serving an ''initial'' period of obligated service and substitute in its place a requirement that an obligated period of active duty be served.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 103 of the compromise agreement follows the Senate language with a clarifying amendment that for an obligated period of service of at least 3 years, the servicemember would have to complete at least 30 months of continuous active duty under that period of obligated service. In addition, the compromise agreement contains a modification to reflect a new 10-year eligibility period for individuals affected by this provision, which would begin tolling on such individual's last discharge (or release from active duty) or the effective date of this Act, whichever is later.

ADDITIONAL OPPORTUNITY FOR CERTAIN VEAP PARTICIPANTS TO ENROLL IN BASIC EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE UNDER MONTGOMERY GI BILL

Current Law

Section 3018C of title 38, United States Code, furnishes an opportunity for certain post-Vietnam-era Veterans' Educational Assistance Program (VEAP) participants to convert to the Montgomery GI Bill (MGIB) if the individual was a participant in VEAP on October 9, 1996, was serving on active duty on that date, meets high school diploma or equivalency requirements before applying for MGIB benefits, is discharged from active duty after the individual makes the election to convert, and during the 1-year period beginning on October 9, 1996, makes an irrevocable election to receive benefits under the MGIB in lieu of VEAP, and also elects a $1,200 pay reduction.

House Bill

Section 3 of the House amendments to S. 1402 would furnish individuals who have served continuously on active duty since October 9, 1996, through at least April 1, 2000, and who either turned down a previous opportunity to convert to the MGIB or had a zero balance in their VEAP account, the option to pay $2,700 to convert to the MGIB program; individuals would have 12 months to elect to convert and 18 months to make payment.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 104 of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

INCREASED ACTIVE DUTY EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE BENEFIT FOR CONTRIBUTING MEMBERS

Current Law

Section 3011(b) of title 38, United States Code, requires servicemembers who elect to participate in the Montgomery GI Bill program to participate in a voluntary pay reduction of $100 per month for the first 12 months of active service to establish entitlement to basic educational assistance.

Senate Bill

Section 6 of S. 1810 would allow servicemembers who have not opted out of MGIB participation to increase the monthly rate of educational benefits they will receive after service by making contributions, at any time prior to leaving service, over and above the $1,200 basic pay reduction necessary to establish MGIB eligibility. Under section 6, a servicemember could contribute up to an additional $600 in multiples of $4. The monthly rate of basic educational assistance would be increased by $1 per month for each $4 so contributed. Thus, MGIB participants who ''use up'' their full 36 months of MGIB benefits would receive a 9-to-1 return on their additional contribution investment. A maximum in-service contribution of $600 would yield an additional $5,400 of entitlement to the 36-month MGIB benefit.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 105 of the compromise agreement follows the Senate language with amendments to make this provision effective May 1, 2001, and to make eligible any servicemember who was on active duty on the date of enactment and subsequently discharged between date of enactment and May 1, 2001 to have until July 31, 2001. These individuals would have until July 31, 2001, to make an election to ''buy up'' additional benefits.

Subtitle B—Survivors' and Dependents' Educational Assistance

INCREASE IN RATES OF SURVIVORS' AND DEPENDENTS' EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE

Current Law

Section 3532 of title 38, United States Code, provides survivors' and dependents' educational assistance (DEA) allowances of $485 per month for full-time school attendance, with lesser amounts for part-time training. Generally, eligible survivors and dependents include unremarried spouses of veterans who died or are permanently or totally disabled or servicemembers who are missing in action or captured for more than 90 days by a hostile force or detained or interned for more than 90 days by a foreign government. Under section 3534, such benefits are also available for correspondence courses, special restorative training, and apprenticeship training.

House Bill

Section 4 of the House amendments to S. 1402 would increase DEA benefits for full-time classroom training students to $600 per month effective October 1, 2000, and $720 per month effective October 1, 2002, with parallel increases for part-time students and similar adjustments to the rates paid for correspondence and other types of training. Apprenticeship training would increase from $353 to $437 per month effective October 1, 2000, and $524 per month effective October 1, 2002. This provision also requires annual cost-of-living allowances for DEA benefits.

Senate Bill

Section 5 of S. 1402 would increase the full-time rate of DEA benefits by 13.6 percent to $550 per month, and make parallel increases in the benefit rates afforded to three-quarter time and half-time students. Increases of 13.6 percent in the amounts for correspondence courses, special restorative training, and apprenticeship training would also be afforded.

Compromise Agreement

Under section 111 of the compromise agreement, effective November 1, 2000, the basic education benefit for survivors and dependents would increase from $485 per month to $588 per month, with future annual cost-of-living increases effective October 1, 2001.

ELECTION OF CERTAIN RECIPIENTS OF COMMENCEMENT OF PERIOD OF ELIGIBILITY FOR SURVIVORS' AND DEPENDENTS' EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE

Current Law

Section 3512(a)(3) of title 38, United States Code, provides that if the Secretary first finds that the parent from whom eligibility for DEA benefits is derived has a total and permanent service-connected disability, or if the death of the parent from whom eligibility is derived occurs between an eligible child's 18th and 26th birthdays, then such eligibility period shall end 8 years after whichever date last occurs: (1) the date on which the Secretary first finds that the parent from whom eligibility is derived has a total and permanent service-connected disability, or (2) the date of death of the parent from whom eligibility is derived. ''First finds'' is defined in this section as either the date the Secretary notifies an eligible parent of total and permanent service-connected disability or the effective date of such disability award.

Senate Bill

Section 114 of S. 1810 would allow a child to elect the beginning date of eligibility for DEA benefits that is between (1) in the case of a child whose eligibility is based on a parent who has a total and permanent service-connected disability, the effective date of the rating determination and the date of notification by the Secretary for such disability, (2) in the case of a child whose eligibility is based on the death of a parent, the date of the parent's death and the date of the Secretary's decision that the death was service-connected.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 112 of the compromise agreement contains the Senate language.

ADJUSTED EFFECTIVE DATE FOR AWARD OF SURVIVORS' AND DEPENDENTS' EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE

Current Law

Section 5113 of title 38, United States Code, states that except for the effective date of adjusted benefits, dates relating to awards under chapters 30, 31, 32, 34, and 35, or chapter 1606 of title 10 shall, to the extent feasible, correspond to effective dates relating to awards of disability compensation.

House Bill

Section 4 of the House amendments to S. 1402 would permit the award of DEA benefits to be retroactive to the date of the entitling event, that is, service-connected death or award of a total and permanent service-connected disability. This provision would be limited to eligible persons who submit an original claim for DEA benefits within 1 year after the date of the rating decision first establishing the person's entitlement.

Senate Bill

Section 115 of S. 1810 would tie the effective date of award for DEA benefits to the date of the entitling event, i.e., the date of a veteran's service-connected death or award of a permanent and total disability rating. This provision would be limited to eligible persons who submit an original claim for DEA benefits within 1 year after the date of the rating decision first establishing the person's entitlement.

Compromise Agreement

Section 113 of the compromise agreement contains the Senate language.

AVAILABILITY UNDER SURVIVORS' AND DEPENDENTS' EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE OF PREPARATORY COURSES FOR COLLEGE AND GRADUATE SCHOOL REQUIREMENTS

Current Law

Sections 3002(3) and 3501(a)(5) of title 38, United States Code, define the ''program of education'' for which veterans and surviving spouses and children, receive educational assistance benefits. Section 701 of Public Law 106–118 modified section 3002(3) of title 38, United States Code, to permit a veteran to use benefits for preparatory courses. Examples of preparatory courses include courses for standardized tests used for admission to college or graduate school.

Senate Bill

Section 113 of S. 1810 would allow survivors'' and dependents' educational assistance benefits to be provided for use on preparatory courses.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 114 of the compromise agreement follows the Senate language with an amendment clarifying that qualifying persons may pursue preparatory courses prior to the person's 18th birthday.

Subtitle C—General Educational Assistance

REVISION OF EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE INTERVAL PAYMENT REQUIREMENTS

Current Law

Section 3680(a)(C) of title 38, United States Code, allows VA to pay educational assistance for periods between a term, semester, or quarter if the interval between these periods does not exceed one calendar month.

House Bill

Section 6 of the House amendments to S. 1402 would allow monthly educational assistance benefits to be paid between term, quarter, or semester intervals of up to 8 weeks.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 121 of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

AVAILABILITY OF EDUCATION BENEFITS FOR PAYMENT FOR LICENSING OR CERTIFICATION TESTS

Current Law

Chapters 30, 31, 32, 34, 35, and 36 of title 38, United States Code, do not currently authorize use of VA educational assistance benefits for occupational licensing or certification tests.

House Bill

Section 7 of the House amendments to S. 1402 would allow veterans' and DEA benefits to be used for up to $2,000 in fees for civilian occupational licensing or certification examinations that are necessary to enter, maintain, or advance into employment in a vocation or profession. This section would establish various requirements regarding the use of such entitlement and requirements for organizations or entities offering licensing or certification tests. This section also establishes minimum approval requirements of a licensing or certification body, requirements for tests, requirements for organizations or entities offering these tests, VA administrative authority (including a requirement to develop the computer systems and procedures to make payments to beneficiaries for these tests), and a seven-member, organization-specific VA Professional Certification and Licensing Advisory Committee.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 122 of the compromise agreement follows the House language with an amendment that the Secretary shall name seven individuals to the VA Professional Certification and Licensing Advisory Committee, an amendment that deletes specific names of organizations from which members shall be named, and an amendment that deletes the requirement that members shall serve without compensation.

INCREASE FOR FISCAL YEARS 2001 AND 2002 IN AGGREGATE ANNUAL AMOUNT AVAILABLE FOR STATE APPROVING AGENCIES FOR ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES

Current Law

Section 3674(a)(4) of title 38, United States Code, makes available amounts not exceeding $13 million in each fiscal year for duties carried out by State Approving Agencies.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 123 of the compromise agreement amends the amount available for State Approving Agencies to $14 million for fiscal year 2001 and fiscal year 2002.

TITLE II—HEALTH PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—Personnel Matters

ANNUAL NATIONAL PAY COMPARABILITY ADJUSTMENT FOR NURSES EMPLOYED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

Current Law

The rate of pay for VA nurses is determined using a mechanism contained in Subchapter IV of Chapter 74, title 38, United States Code. The law links changes in total pay to nurse compensation trends in local health care labor markets. This locality pay feature has not always produced the results envisioned by Congress. For example, even though many VA nurses received very substantial one-time increases as a consequence of the 1990 restructuring of basic pay, some VA nurses have not received any additional pay raises since that time.

House Bill

Section 101 of H.R. 5109 would reform the local labor market survey process and replace it with a discretionary survey technique. The bill would provide more flexibility to VA medical center directors to obtain the data needed to complete necessary surveys and also restrict their authority to withhold indicated rate increases. Directors would be prohibited from reducing nurse pay. In addition, the House bill would also guarantee VA nurses a national comparability increase equivalent to the amount provided to other federal employees. The bill also would require Veterans Health Administration network directors to consult with nurses on questions of policy affecting the work of VA nurses, and would provide for registered nurses' participation on medical center committees considering clinical care, budget matters, or resource allocation involving the care and treatment of veteran patients.

Senate Bill

Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 201 of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

SPECIAL PAY FOR DENTISTS

Current Law

Subchapter III of Chapter 74, title 38, United States Code, authorizes special pay to physicians and dentists employed in the Veterans Health Administration. This authority is intended to improve recruitment and retention of dentists and physicians.

House Bill

Section 102 of H.R. 5109 would revise and increase the rates of special pay for VA dentists. This is the first proposed change in these rates since 1991.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 202 of the compromise agreement contains the House language. The Committees urge medical center directors to utilize the full range of pay increases authorized, including increases in the higher range, to optimize dentist recruitment and retention efforts.

EXEMPTION FOR PHARMACISTS FROM CEILING ON SPECIAL SALARY RATES

Current Law

Under section 7455 of title 38, United States Code, VA has authority to increase rates of basic pay for certain health care personnel—either nationally, locally or on another geographic basis—when deemed necessary for successful recruiting and retention. Special rates may be granted in response to salaries in local labor markets, but may not enable VA to be a pay leader. With limited exceptions, the law restricts such ''special salary rates'' to a maximum pay rate, but exempts two categories of health care personnel from that statutory ceiling: nurse anesthetists and physical therapists.

House Bill

Section 103 of H.R. 5109 adds VA pharmacists to the existing categories of VA personnel exempted from such statutory pay ceilings. This amendment would enable VA to improve retention of the most senior members of the current pharmacy workforce and would improve its competitiveness in recruiting new pharmacists.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 203 of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

TEMPORARY FULL-TIME APPOINTMENTS OF CERTAIN MEDICAL PERSONNEL

Current Law

Section 7405 of title 38, United States Code, authorizes VA to provide temporary appointments of individuals in certain professions, including nursing, pharmacy, and respiratory, physical, and occupational therapy, who have successfully completed a full course of study but who are pending registration, licensure, or certification. Upon obtaining the required credentials, these professionals may be converted to career appointments. This temporary appointment authority provides VA a means of recruiting new health professionals still in the process of meeting the technical qualification standards pertinent to their fields.

However, VA must now limit physician assistants (PAs) waiting to take the PA certification examination to a general 1 year, nonrenewable appointment. Since the national certification examination is only offered once a year, this 1-year appointment limits VA's efforts to provide a smooth transition from a training appointment to a permanent appointment for such graduates.

House Bill

Section 105 of H.R. 5109 would amend section 7405(c)(2) of title 38, United States Code, to add the position of physician assistant to the existing group of professional and technical occupations for which VA may make temporary graduate technician appointments, provided these individuals have completed training programs acceptable to the Secretary. Under this appointment authority, graduate physician assistants would have up to 2 years to obtain professional certification or licensure.

Senate Bill

Section 203 of S. 1810 would accomplish the same ends as the above-described language with respect to physician assistant temporary graduate technician appointments.

Compromise Agreement

Section 204(a) of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

MEDICAL SUPPORT PERSONNEL

Current Law

Section 7405 of title 38, United States Code, permits the temporary appointment of certain medical support personnel who work primarily in the laboratories and other facilities of VA principal investigators who have been awarded VA research and development funds through VA's scientific merit review process. These technicians are appointed for a maximum term of 2 years. The normal VA cycle of 3-year research awards conflicts with the 2-year maximum term for appointments of these key personnel in VA's research and development program.

House Bill

Section 105 of H.R. 5109 would amend section 7405(c)(3) of title 38, United States Code, to authorize the Secretary to make and to renew temporary full time appointments for periods not to exceed 3 years.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 204(b) of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

QUALIFICATIONS OF SOCIAL WORKERS

Current Law

Section 7402(b)(9) of title 38, United States Code, requires that a VA social worker become licensed, certified, or registered in the state in which he or she works within 3 years of initial appointment in this capacity by the VA. Certain states, such as California, impose prerequisites to the licensure examination that routinely require more than 3 years to satisfy. Many states do not provide reciprocity in social work licensure, and thus will not grant a license in the absence of a new state licensing examination. At present, VA social workers are the only VA health care practitioners who cannot use their state licenses to gain credentials in other states' VA medical centers.

House Bill

Section 106 of H.R. 5109 would allow the Secretary, on the recommendation of the Under Secretary for Health, to waive the 3–year requirement in order to provide sufficient time to newly graduated or transferred VA social workers to prepare for their state licensure examinations.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 205 of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

PHYSICIAN ASSISTANT ADVISOR TO THE UNDER SECRETARY FOR HEALTH

Current Law

Section 7306 of title 38, United States Code, establishes the Office of the Under Secretary for Health and requires that the office include representatives of certain health care professions. VA is the nation's largest single employer of physician assistants (PAs), with over 1,100 physician assistants on VA's employment rolls. Nevertheless, PAs are not represented by a member of their field in the office of the Under Secretary for Health.

House Bill

Section 104 of H.R. 5109 would establish a PA consultant position which would be filled by a VHA physician assistant designated by the Under Secretary for Health. This individual could be assigned to the field with occasional official visits as needed to VHA headquarters or elsewhere as required to fulfill assigned duties of the position. The PA consultant would advise the Under Secretary on all matters relating to the utilization and employment of physician assistants in the Veterans Health Administration.

Senate Bill

Section 202 of S. 1810 would add an Advisor on Physician Assistants to the immediate Office of the Under Secretary for Health, would require this individual to serve in an advisory capacity and would require that the PA advisor shall advise the Under Secretary on matters regarding general and expanded utilization, clinical privileges, and employment (including various specific matters associated therewith) of physician assistants in the Veterans Health Administration.

Compromise Agreement

Section 206 of the compromise agreement incorporates portions of both the House and Senate language. The Committees call upon VA to provide the individual selected as Advisor on Physician Assistants with necessary support and resources to enable this consultant to fulfill the assigned responsibilities of the position.

EXTENSION OF VOLUNTARY SEPARATION INCENTIVE PAYMENTS

Current Law

Public Law 106–117, the Veterans Millennium Health Care and Benefits Act of 1999, authorized a temporary program of voluntary separation incentive payments to assist VA in restructuring its workforce. This program limited VA to a 15–month authorization period for such ''buyouts'' of VA employees, limited to 4,700 the number of staff who could participate, and required VA to make a contribution of 26 percent of the average salary of participating employees to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund. This provision also requires a one-for-one employee replacement for each such buyout approved under this policy.

House Bill

Section 107 of H.R. 5109 would amend title XI of Public Law 106–117 to increase the number of VA positions subject to buyouts to 8,110. The House measure would also adjust the contribution made by VA to the retirement fund to 15 percent, an amount equivalent to the amount that most other Federal agencies must contribute to the fund for their buyout participants. The measure extends VA's buyout authority from December 31, 2000 to December 31, 2002.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 207 of the compromise agreement follows the House language, but limits the number of VA positions subject to buyouts to 7,734 and allocates the positions for activities of the Veterans Health Administration, Veterans Benefits Administration, National Cemetery Administration, and VA staff offices.

Subtitle B—Military Service Issues

MILITARY SERVICE HISTORY

Current Law

No provision.

House Bill

Section 301 of H.R. 5109 would require VA to take and maintain a thorough history of each veteran's health, including a military medical history. Ascertaining that a veteran was a prisoner of war, participated directly in combat, or was exposed to sustained subfreezing conditions, toxic substances, environmental hazards, or nuclear ionizing radiation often facilitates diagnosis and treatment of veterans. The House bill would provide veterans assurance that such a policy becomes a matter of routine clinical practice in VA.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 211 of the compromise agreement adopts the intent of the House proposal, but in the form of a Sense of the Congress Resolution to express the sense of Congress that VA proceed to implement a system of record keeping to record veterans' military history.

STUDY OF POST-TRAUMATIC STRESS DISORDER (PTSD) IN VIETNAM VETERANS

Current Law

Public Law 98–160 directed VA to conduct a large-scale survey on the prevalence and incidence of PTSD and other psychological problems in Vietnam veterans. The study found that 15 percent of male and 8.5 percent of female Vietnam veterans suffered from PTSD. Among those exposed to high levels of war zone stress, however, PTSD rates were dramatically higher. Also, the study found that nearly one-third of Vietnam veterans had suffered from PTSD at some point after military service.

House Bill

Section 302 of HR 5109 would direct the VA to enter into a contract with an ''appropriate entity'' to carry out a follow-up study to the study conducted under Public Law 98–160.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 212 of the compromise agreement contains the House language. The Committees agree the new study should be kept distinct and independent from VA, as in the original. The compromise agreement is not intended to pre-judge the entity that will win this award.

Subtitle C—Medical Administration

DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS FISHER HOUSES

Current Law

Current law does not explicitly provide VA with authority to house veterans overnight to expedite outpatient care or next-day hospital admissions. Nor does current law provide explicit authority for VA to accept, maintain, or operate facilities for housing families or others who accompany veterans to VA facilities. However, most VA medical centers offer veterans who live some distance from a medical facility from which they are receiving care or services help with some form of lodging to facilitate scheduled visits or admissions. Indeed, more than 115 facilities offer lodging of some kind on VA grounds, and services are available in non-VA facilities at a number of other locations. Also, over the years, many VA medical centers have converted unused wards and other available space to establish temporary lodging facilities for use by patients. The Under Secretary for Health has encouraged medical centers to establish such facilities to avert the need for hospitalizing patients when outpatient treatment is more appropriate. This guidance to VA facilities suggested that facilities could provide lodging without charge to outpatients and their family members and others accompanying veterans when ''medically necessary.'' The guidance also sanctioned the use of a revocable license for family members under which an individual could be required to pay VA a fee equal to the fair-market value of the services being furnished.

House Bill

Section 404 of H.R. 5109 would clarify VA's authority to provide temporary overnight accommodations in ''Fisher Houses,'' built with funds donated by the Zachary and Elizabeth M. Fisher Foundation. Four such facilities are now being operated in conjunction with VA medical centers and other similar facilities located at or near a VA facility. These accommodations are available to veterans who have business at a VA medical facility and must travel a significant distance to receive Department services, and to other individuals accompanying veterans. Section 404 would also give VA clear authority to charge veterans (and those accompanying them) for overnight accommodations and apply fees collected to support continuation of these services. The measure would require VA to promulgate regulations to address matters such as the appropriate limitations on the use of the facilities and the length of time individuals may stay in the facilities.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 221 of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

EXCEPTION TO THE RECAPTURE RULE

Current Law

Section 8136 of title 38, United States Code, requires VA to ''recapture'' the amount of a grant to a state home for purposes of building or renovating a state veterans home, if, within 20 years, the state home ceases to be used for providing domiciliary, nursing home, or hospital care for veterans. This provision could be interpreted to require recapture of the grant if the state home allows VA to establish an outpatient clinic in the home.

House Bill

Section 406 of H.R. 5109 would clarify that establishment of an outpatient clinic in a state home would not constitute grounds entitling the United States to recover its grant.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 222 of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

SENSE OF CONGRESS CONCERNING COOPERATION BETWEEN THE DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS AND THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE IN THE PROCUREMENT OF MEDICAL ITEMS

Current Law

Under the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) and Department of Defense (DOD) Health Resources Sharing and Emergency Operations Act, Public Law 97–174, VA and DOD have the authority to share medical resources. In 1999, VA and DOD entered into sharing agreements amounting to $60 million dollars out of combined budgets of approximately $35 billion. This is resource sharing of less than two-tenths of one percent. On May 25, 2000, the General Accounting Office reported that greater joint pharmaceutical procurements alone could lead to as much as $345 million in annual recurring savings.

House Bill

H. Con. Res. 413 would encourage expanded joint procurement of medical items, to include prescription drugs.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 223 of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

Subtitle D—Construction Authorization

AUTHORIZATION OF MAJOR MEDICAL FACILITY PROJECTS

Current Law

Section 8104 of title 38, United States Code, provides that no funds may be appropriated for any fiscal year, and VA may not obligate or expend funds (other than for planning and design) for any medical construction project involving a total expenditure of more than $4 million unless funds for that project have been specifically authorized by law.

House Bill

Section 201 of H.R. 5109 would authorize the construction of a gero-psychiatric care building at the Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Center, Palo Alto, California ($26.6 million); the construction of a utility plant and electrical vault at the Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Center, Miami, Florida ($23.6 million); and, seismic corrections, clinical consolidation and other improvements at the Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Center, Long Beach, California ($51.7 million). Also, the House bill would authorize the renovation of psychiatric nursing units at the Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Center, Murfreesboro, Tennessee, using funds previously appropriated for this specific purpose ($14 million).

Senate Bill

Section 301 of S. 1810 would authorize construction of a 120-bed gero-psychiatric facility at the Department of Veterans Affairs Palo Alto Health Care System, Menlo Park Division, California ($26.6 million); and, construction of a nursing home at the Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Center, Beckley, West Virginia ($9.5 million). In section 302 of S. 1810, the Senate would amend section 401 of the Veterans Millennium Health Care and Benefits Act of 1999, Public Law 106–117, to add as a seventh project authorized by that act for fiscal year 2000–2001 the Murfreesboro construction project ($14 million).

Compromise Agreement

Section 231 of the compromise agreement incorporates each of the projects authorized by either body and includes specific authorization for the Murfreesboro project. Also, the compromise agreement provides that the authorizations for Palo Alto, Long Beach, and Beckley will be for 2 years, covering fiscal years 2001 and 2002, while the authorization for the Miami project will be only for fiscal year 2001. The compromise agreement also renews and extends the prior authorization of a project at the Lebanon, Pennsylvania VA Medical Center through the end of fiscal year 2002.

The Miami electrical plant and utility vault project is authorized only for fiscal year 2001. While the compromise agreement authorizes the project to proceed, we note that the current estimate to replace these facilities is $32 million. Given this level of anticipated expenditure, the Committees urge the Secretary to examine innovative ways to reduce VA's outlay, at least on an initial basis. For example, the Committees note that the Miami facility is located in the midst of a very densely developed community of health and public safety-related institutions, including the Jackson Memorial Hospital and Metro-Dade police headquarters, among others. Given the need for such crucial institutions, including the VA medical center, to have dependable, stable, weather-proof and even fail-safe electrical sources, the Committees urge the Secretary to consider a ''performance-based contract'' for these services through the local utility (Florida Power and Light), or by consortium with multiple partners in need of similar improvements, assurances and security of utilities. At a minimum, the Secretary must carefully examine the reported cost of this project to ensure that it is being planned to meet known needs, rather than planned for the ''highest possible use.''

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

House Bill

The House bill (H.R. 5109, section 202) would authorize appropriations for fiscal years 2001 and 2002 of $101.9 million for construction of the facilities authorized in section 201 thereof.

Senate Bill

S. 1810, section 303, would authorize appropriations for fiscal years 2001 and 2002 of $36.1 million for construction of the facilities authorized in section 301. Also, section 303 alters the authorization funding level of projects authorized in Public Law 106–117 by including the Murfreesboro project discussed above.

Compromise Agreement

Section 232 of the compromise agreement authorizes appropriations for the amounts indicated in each measure for these projects, affecting both fiscal year 2001 and fiscal year 2002, as follows:

[In millions of dollars]

Authorizations	Amount authorized
Beckley	$9.5
Lebanon [1]	14.5
Long Beach	51.7
Miami [2]	23.6
Murfreesboro	14.0
Palo Alto	26.6

[1] Indicates authorization of appropriation in fiscal year 2002 only.

[2] Indicates authorization of appropriation in fiscal year 2001 only.

EXTENSION OF CONSTRUCTION AUTHORIZATION AT THE LEBANON, PENNSYLVANIA VA MEDICAL CENTER

Current Law

Section 401 of Public Law 106–117 (113 Stat. 1572) authorized a major construction project at the Lebanon, Pennsylvania, VA Medical Center. The project was authorized for fiscal year 2000 and fiscal year 2001.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 232(a)(3) of the compromise agreement extends through fiscal year 2002 the prior authorization for construction of a long-term care facility at the Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Center, Lebanon, Pennsylvania, in an amount not to exceed $14.5 million.

Subtitle E—Real Property Matters

CHANGE TO ENHANCED USE LEASE CONGRESSIONAL NOTIFICATION PERIOD

Current Law

Section 8163(c) of title 38, United States Code, requires the Secretary to notify Congress of VA's intention to pursue an enhanced-use lease of unused VA property, then wait a period of ''60 legislative days'' prior to proceeding with the specific lease objective(s). In the Veterans' Millennium Health Care Act, Public Law 106–117, Congress eased limits in law on leasing underused VA property based on a finding that long-term leasing could be used more extensively to enhance health care delivery to veterans.

House Bill

Section 407 of H.R. 5109 would amend the waiting period for VA notifications to Congress from 60 ''legislative'' days, to 90 ''calendar'' days. This change would shorten the length of time VA must wait before entering into an enhanced-use lease.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 241 of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

RELEASE OF REVERSIONARY INTEREST OF THE UNITED STATES IN CERTAIN REAL PROPERTY PREVIOUSLY CONVEYED TO THE STATE OF TENNESSEE

Current Law

In 1953, by Act of Congress (67 Stat. 54), the federal government transferred certain property of the Veterans Administration (now Department of Veterans Affairs) in Johnson City (now Mountain Home), Tennessee, to the State of Tennessee, for use by the Army National Guard of the State of Tennessee. The act of transfer retained a reversionary interest in the land on the part of the government in the event that the State of Tennessee ceased to use the land as a training area for the guard and for ''other military purposes.'' The land is no longer being used by the Tennessee National Guard and has no practical use by the government. Local municipal officials desire the land as a site for a public park and recreation area, and the State of Tennessee has made a commitment to transfer the land for these purposes but may not do so absent a recision of the federal government's reversionary interest in the property.

House Bill

Section 407 of H.R. 5109 would rescind the government's reversionary interest in the Tennessee property.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 242 of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

TRANSFER OF THE ALLEN PARK, MICHIGAN, VA MEDICAL CENTER TO FORD MOTOR LAND DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

Current Law

In 1937, the Henry Ford family donated a 39-acre plot to VA expressly for the establishment of the Allen Park, Michigan VA Hospital. The conveyance provided that VA must return the land, in the same condition as it was received, if VA ceased to utilize it for veterans' health care. In 1996, VA activated a new VA Medical Center in Detroit.

House Bill

H.R. 5346 would transfer the land, the site of the former Allen Park, Michigan VA Medical Center, and all improvements thereon, to the Ford Motor Land Development Corporation, a subsidiary of Ford Motor Company. Having been replaced in 1996 by a new VA Medical Center in Detroit, the facility now is in disrepair. The bill would require up to 7 years of cooperation between VA and Ford in demolition, environmental cleanup (including remediation of hazardous material and environmental contaminants found on the site), and restoration of the property to its prior state. VA contributions would be limited to $2 million per year over the period, and Ford would be responsible for any amount over VA's total contribution ($14 million) required to complete the restoration. At the conclusion of restorative work, the Secretary would formally abandon the property, which would then revert to Ford Motor Land Development Corporation, in accordance with the reversionary clause contained in the original 1937 gift.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 243 of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

TRANSFER OF LAND AT THE CARL VINSON VA MEDICAL CENTER, DUBLIN, GEORGIA

Current Law

No provision.

House Bill

H.R. 5139 would convey to the Board of Regents of the State of Georgia two tracts of real property, including improvements, consisting of 39 acres at the Carl Vinson Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Center,

Dublin, Georgia. The bill also conveys to the Community Service Board of Middle Georgia three tracts of property consisting of 58 acres, including improvements, at the Carl Vinson facility. The bill requires these properties be used in perpetuity for education or health care.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 244 of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

LAND CONVEYANCE OF MILES CITY, MONTANA VETERANS AFFAIRS MEDICAL CENTER TO CUSTER COUNTY, MONTANA

Current Law

No provision.

Senate Bill

Section 312 of S. 1810 would transfer VA medical center facilities in Miles City, Montana, to Custer County, Montana, while authorizing VA to lease space in which VA would operate an outpatient clinic. Custer County would devote the transferred land to assisted living apartments for the elderly and to a number of other economic enhancement and community activity uses, including education and training courses through Miles Community College, a technology center, local fire department training, and use by the Montana Area Food Bank. VA, in turn, is relieved of the requirement to spend over $500,000 per year maintaining a facility that is poorly suited to provide health care to the veterans of eastern Montana. VA would devote the saved funds to expanding Montana veterans' access to care by activating additional community based outpatient clinics in Montana.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 245 of the compromise agreement follows the Senate language. The compromise agreement anticipates that VA will work with the civic leadership of Custer County, Montana in order to identify potential improvements that may be reasonably necessary to effectuate the transfer of the Miles City property to Custer County. Also, the compromise agreement calls for the Secretary to determine to what extent it may be necessary to stipulate any conditions about the transfer, or conditions for VA's future use of this property, prior to the transfer of ownership of this property to Custer County. The compromise agreement further envisions funds appropriated to VA for non-recurring maintenance may be used, as authorized by law, to facilitate the transfer of VA's interest in the Miles City VA Medical Center to Custer County.

TRANSFER OF THE FORT LYON, COLORADO, VA MEDICAL CENTER TO THE STATE OF COLORADO

Current Law

No provision.

Senate Bill

Sections 313 and 314 of S. 1810 would transfer the VA Medical Center, Ft. Lyon, Colorado to the State of Colorado for use by the State as a corrections facility. Under the terms of the bill, the conveyance would take place only when arrangements are made to protect the interests of affected patients and employees of the facility. With respect to patients, the bill would require VA to make alternate arrangements to ensure that appropriate medical care and nursing home care services continue to be provided, on the same basis that care had been provided at Ft. Lyon, to all veterans receiving such services at the medical center. Under the bill, the VA would be authorized to provide care in community facilities at VA expense, notwithstanding other statutory limitations—e.g., title 38, United States Code, section 1720, which limits to 6 months the duration for which such care might be provided to veterans for nonservice-connected disabilities—or by state homes where VA would pay full costs and reimburse the veterans' share of copayments. Further, VA would be authorized to offer voluntary separation incentive payments to eligible employees of the Ft. Lyon VA medical center. In addition, the State would be required to allow public access to the Kit Carson Chapel located on the grounds of the VA medical center. And, finally, the VA would report on the status of the VA health care system in southern Colorado, not later than 1 year after the conveyance.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Sections 246 and 247 of the compromise agreement follow the Senate language, except for the provision extending VA's authority to offer voluntary separation incentive payments [subsection (c) of section 314 of S. 1810].

The inclusion of this language in this legislation should not be misconstrued as an erosion of, or acquiescence in, the requirement enacted in Public Law 106–117, the Veterans Millennium Health Care and Benefits Act of 1999, for VA to maintain VA-provided long-term care capacity at the 1998 level. VA continues to be obligated by law to ensure that the cumulative effect of its actions does not result in a reduction in VA's ability to provide institutional long-term care.

It should be noted that section 207 of this bill provides a 2-year extension of VA-wide authority to offer voluntary separation incentive payments to VA employees. The Committees find that the provision specifically granting the Fort Lyon facility a 1-year authority to offer voluntary separation incentive payments is redundant. Further, the Committees were concerned that retaining the Fort Lyon-specific provision in final legislation could have the unintended effect of limiting the 2-year, VA-wide buyout authority, granted in section 207, to 1 year when applied in the case of Fort Lyon. The Committees expect VA to use the authority granted in section 207, as an important human resources management tool, in its conveyance of the Fort Lyon facility.

TITLE III—COMPENSATION, INSURANCE, HOUSING, EMPLOYMENT, AND MEMORIAL AFFAIRS PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—Compensation Program Changes

PRESUMPTION OF SERVICE CONNECTION FOR HEART ATTACK OR STROKE SUFFERED BY A MEMBER OF A RESERVE COMPONENT IN THE PERFORMANCE OF DUTY WHILE PERFORMING INACTIVE DUTY TRAINING

Current Law

Under section 101(24) of title 38, United States Code, guardsmen and reservists who sustain an ''injury'' during inactive duty training are eligible for certain veterans' benefits, but are not eligible to receive disability compensation for a condition characterized as a ''disease'' that is incurred or aggravated during such training.

House Bill

Section 201(a) of H.R. 4850 would amend section 101(24) to include an acute myocardial infarction, a cardiac arrest, or a cerebrovascular accident resulting in disability or death and occurring during any period of inactive duty training for the purposes of service-connected benefits administered by VA.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 301 of the compromise agreement contains the House provision.

SPECIAL MONTHLY COMPENSATION FOR WOMEN VETERANS WHO LOSE A BREAST AS A RESULT OF A SERVICE-CONNECTED DISABILITY

Current Law

Section 1114(k) of title 38, United States Code, authorizes a special rate of compensation if a veteran, as the result of a service-connected disability, has suffered the anatomical loss or loss of use of one or more creative organs, or one foot, or one hand, or both buttocks, or blindness of one eye, having only light perception, or has suffered complete loss of the ability to speak, or deafness of both ears. The special monthly compensation is payable in addition to the compensation payable by reason of ratings assigned under the rating schedule.

House Bill

Section 202 of H.R. 4850 would amend section 1114(k) by making veterans eligible for special monthly compensation due to the service-connected loss of one or both breasts due to a radical mastectomy or modified radical mastectomy.

Senate Bill

Section 103 of S. 1810 would amend section 1114(k) by making female veterans eligible for special monthly compensation due to the loss of one or both breasts, including loss by mastectomy.

Compromise Agreement

Section 302 of the compromise agreement contains the Senate provision.

BENEFITS FOR PERSONS DISABLED BY PARTICIPATION IN COMPENSATED WORK THERAPY PROGRAM

Current Law

Section 1151 of title 38, United States Code, provides compensation, under certain circumstances, to veterans who are injured as a result of VA health care or participation in VA vocational rehabilitation. Section 1718 of title 38, United States Code, authorizes the ''Compensated Work Therapy Program (CWT),'' which pays veterans to work in a variety of positions on contracts with governmental and industrial entities. CWT work is intended to be therapeutic by helping veterans re-enter the work force, enabling them to increase self-confidence and by improving their ability to adjust to the work setting. However, current law provides no mechanism to compensate CWT participants who may be injured as a result of participation.

House Bill

Section 402 of H.R. 5109 would allow VA to provide disability benefits under section 1151 to CWT participants injured while participating in this program.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 303 of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

REVISION TO LIMITATION ON PAYMENTS OF BENEFITS TO INCOMPETENT INSTITUTIONALIZED VETERANS

Current Law

Under section 5503 of title 38, United States Code, VA is prohibited from paying compensation and pension benefits to an incompetent veteran who has assets of $1,500 or more if the veteran is being provided institutional care with or without charge by VA (or another governmental provider) and he or she has no dependents. Such payments are restored if the veteran's assets drop to $500 in value. If VA later determines that the veteran is competent for at least 6 months, the withheld payments are made in a lump sum.

Senate Bill

Section 205 of S. 1076 would repeal the limitation on benefit payments imposed by section 5503 of title 38, United States Code.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Under section 304 of the compromise agreement, the amount of resources that an incompetent veteran may retain and still qualify for payments is increased from $1,500 to five times the benefit amount payable to a service-connected disabled veteran rated at 100 percent. If payments are withheld, they may be restored if the veteran's assets drop to one-half of that amount. The Committees expect that in notifying veterans and fiduciaries of the applicability of this requirement, VA will briefly indicate the assets that are counted or excluded in determining net worth. (See 38 C.F.R. §13.109)

REVIEW OF DOSE RECONSTRUCTION PROGRAM OF THE DEFENSE THREAT REDUCTION AGENCY

Current Law

VA provides service-connected compensation benefits to veterans who were exposed to ionizing radiation in service (due to participation in the occupation forces of Hiroshima or Nagasaki immediately after World War II, or in nuclear testing activities during the Cold War era) and who, subsequently, are diagnosed with the presumptive diseases listed in section 1112(c)(2) of title 38, United States Code. VA may also compensate radiation-exposed veterans with diseases not presumed to be service-connected if it determines that it is as likely as not that the disease is the result of exposure, taking into account the amount of exposure and the radiogenic properties of the disease; but VA utilizes dose reconstruction analysis provided by the Department of Defense to determine the estimated exposure.

Senate Bill

Section 171 of S. 1810 specifies that the Department of Defense (DOD) shall contract with the National Academy of Sciences (NAS) to carry out periodic reviews of the dose reconstruction program. NAS would review whether DOD's reconstruction of sampled doses is accurate, whether DOD assumptions regarding exposure based upon sampled doses are credible, and whether data from nuclear testing used by DOD in its reconstructions are accurate. The review would last 24 months and culminate in a report detailing NAS' findings and recommendations, if any, for a permanent review program.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 305 of the compromise agreement follows the Senate language.

Subtitle B—Life Insurance Matters

PREMIUMS FOR TERM SERVICE DISABLED VETERANS' INSURANCE FOR VETERANS OLDER THAN AGE 70

Current Law

VA administers the Service-Disabled Veterans Insurance (SDVI) program under chapter 19 of title 38, United States Code. SDVI term policy premiums increase every 5 years to reflect the increased risk of death as individuals age.

Senate Bill

Section 131 of S. 1810 would cap premiums for SDVI term policies at the age 70 renewal rate.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 311 of the compromise agreement follows the Senate language with an amendment requiring VA to report to Congress, not later than September 30, 2001, on plans to liquidate the unfunded liability in the SDVI program not later than October 1, 2011.

INCREASE IN AUTOMATIC MAXIMUM COVERAGE UNDER SERVICEMEMBERS' GROUP LIFE INSURANCE AND VETERANS' GROUP LIFE INSURANCE

Current Law

The Servicemembers' Group Life Insurance (SGLI) program provides up to $200,000 in coverage to individuals on active duty in the Armed Forces, members of the Ready Reserves, the Commissioned Corps of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the Public Health Service, cadets and midshipmen of the four service academies, and members of the Reserve Officer Training Corps. The maximum coverage of $200,000 is automatically provided unless the servicemember declines coverage or elects coverage at a reduced amount.

Senate Bill

Section 132 of S. 1810 would increase the maximum amount of coverage available through the SGLI program from $200,000 to $250,000.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 312 of the compromise agreement contains the Senate language.

ELIGIBILITY OF CERTAIN MEMBERS OF THE INDIVIDUAL READY RESERVE FOR SERVICEMEMBERS' GROUP LIFE INSURANCE

Current Law

Members of the Selected Reserve are eligible for enrollment in the Servicemembers' Group Life Insurance (SGLI) program. Members of the Individual Ready Reserve (IRR) are eligible for SGLI only when called to active duty.

Members of the IRR are currently eligible for Veterans Group Life Insurance, but only a small percentage participates.

House Bill

Section 301 of H.R. 4850 would provide those members of the IRR who are subject to involuntary call-up authority to enroll in the Servicemembers' Group Life Insurance program.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 313 of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

Subtitle C—Housing and Employment Programs

ELIMINATION OF REDUCTION IN ASSISTANCE FOR SPECIALLY ADAPTED HOUSING FOR DISABLED VETERANS HAVING JOINT OWNERSHIP OF HOUSING UNITS

Current Law

Under chapter 21 of title 38, United States Code, veterans with severe disabilities such as loss of ambulatory function are eligible for specially adapted housing grants of up to $43,000 to finance the purchase or remodeling of housing units with special adaptions necessary to accommodate their disabilities. No particular form of ownership is specified in current law. Under regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, co-ownership of the property by the veteran and another person is not relevant to the amount of the grant if the co-owner is the veteran's spouse. If, however, the co-owner is a person other than the veteran's spouse, the maximum grant amount is reduced by regulation to reflect the veteran's partial ownership of the property interest, e.g., if the veteran jointly owns the property with one other person such as a sibling, the maximum grant is $21,500. (See 38 C.F.R. §36.4403)

Senate Bill

Section 121 of S. 1810 would amend section 2102 of chapter 21 of title 38, United States Code, to allow VA to make non-reduced grants for specially adapted housing in cases where title to the housing unit is not vested solely in the veteran, if the veteran resides in the housing unit.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 321 of the compromise agreement contains the Senate language.

VETERANS' EMPLOYMENT EMPHASIS UNDER FEDERAL CONTRACTS FOR RECENTLY SEPARATED VETERANS

Current Law

Section 4212 of title 38, United States Code, requires that certain Federal contractors and subcontractors take affirmative action to employ and advance ''special disabled veterans'' (generally, veterans with serious employment handicaps or disability ratings of 30 percent or higher), Vietnam-era veterans, and other veterans who are ''preference eligible'' (generally, veterans who have served during wartime or in a campaign or expedition for which a campaign badge has been authorized).

Senate Bill

Section 151 of S. 1810 would add recently separated veterans (veterans who have been discharged or released from active duty within a 1–year period) to the definition of veterans to whom Federal contractors and subcontractors must extend affirmative action to employ and advance in employment.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 322 of the compromise agreement contains the Senate language.

EMPLOYERS REQUIRED TO GRANT LEAVE OF ABSENCE FOR EMPLOYEES TO PARTICIPATE AS HONOR GUARDS FOR FUNERALS OF VETERANS

Current Law

Section 4303(13) of title 38, United States Code, defines ''service in the uniformed services,'' as the performance of duty on a voluntary or involuntary basis. Section 4316 defines the rights, benefits, and obligations of persons absent from employment for service in a uniformed service.

House Bill

H.R. 284 would add to the definition of ''service in the uniformed services'' a period for which a person is absent from employment for the purpose of performing funeral honors authorized duty under section 12503 of title 10, United States Code, or section 115 of title 32, United States Code. An employer would be required to grant an employee who is a member of a reserve component an authorized leave of absence from a position of employment to allow the employee to perform funeral duties. For purposes of intent to return to a position of employment with an employer, H.R. 284 would stipulate that an employee who takes an authorized leave of absence to perform funeral honors duty would be deemed to have notified the employer of the employee's intent to return to such position of employment.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 323 of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

Subtitle D—Cemeteries and Memorial Affairs

ELIGIBILITY OF CERTAIN FILIPINO VETERANS OF WORLD WAR II FOR INTERMENT IN NATIONAL CEMETERIES

Current Law

Section 2402(4) of title 38, United States Code, provides that eligibility for burial in any open VA national cemetery include any citizen of the United States who, during any war in which the United States is or has been engaged, served in the armed forces of any government allied with the United States during that war, and whose last such service terminated honorably.

Senate Bill

Section 141 of S. 1810 would amend section 2402(4) of title 38, United States Code, to provide for the eligibility of a Philippine Commonwealth Army veteran for burial in a national cemetery if, at the time of death, the Commonwealth Army veteran is a naturalized citizen of the United States, and he is a resident of the United States.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 331 of the compromise agreement follows the Senate language with an amendment requiring that the veteran be a citizen of, or lawfully admitted for permanent residence in, the United States, and be receiving compensation or be determined to have been eligible for pension had the veteran's service been deemed to be active military, naval, or air service.

PAYMENT RATE OF BURIAL BENEFITS FOR CERTAIN FILIPINO VETERANS OF WORLD WAR II

Current Law

Former members of the Philippine Commonwealth Army may qualify for VA disability compensation, burial benefits, and National Service Life Insurance benefits, and their survivors may qualify for dependency and indemnity compensation. These benefits are paid at one-half the rate they are provided to U.S. veterans. (See 38 U.S.C. §107).

Senate Bill

Section 201 of S. 1076 would authorize payment of the full-rate funeral expense and plot allowance to survivors of Philippine Commonwealth Army veterans who, at the time of death, (a) are citizens of the United States residing in the U.S. and (b) are receiving compensation for a service-connected disability or would have been eligible for VA pension benefits had their service been deemed to have been active military, naval, or air service.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 332 of the compromise agreement follows the Senate language with an amendment that as an alternate requirement to citizenship, permanent resident status would suffice for purposes of establishing eligibility.

PLOT ALLOWANCE FOR BURIAL IN STATE VETERANS' CEMETERIES

Current Law

Section 2303(b)(1) provides a plot allowance of $150 for each veteran buried in a State-owned veterans' cemetery, provided that only persons eligible for burial in a national cemetery are buried in that cemetery.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 333 of the compromise agreement would allow a State to bury in a State veterans' cemetery members of the Armed Forces or former members discharged or released from service under conditions other than dishonorable—who are not otherwise eligible for burial in a national cemetery—without the State losing its eligibility for a plot allowance.

TITLE IV—OTHER MATTERS

BENEFITS FOR THE CHILDREN OF WOMEN VIETNAM VETERANS WHO SUFFER FROM CERTAIN BIRTH DEFECTS

Current Law

VA has authority to compensate veterans (including additional amounts of compensation for dependents) for service-connected disease or injury. VA may, pursuant to Public Law 104–204, provide benefits to children of Vietnam veterans born with ''all forms and manifestations'' of spina bifida except spina bifida occulta. Children with spina bifida born of Vietnam veterans currently are eligible for (1) a monthly allowance, varying by degree of disability of the person with spina bifida, (2) health care for any disability associated with that person's spina bifida, and (3) vocational training, job placement, and post-job placement services.

Senate Bill

Section 162 of S. 1810 would extend (with a single variation) to the children born with birth defects to women Vietnam veterans the same benefits as those now afforded to Vietnam veterans' children born with spina bifida under chapter 18 of title 38, United States Code.

House Bill

The House bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 401 of the compromise agreement generally follows the Senate language. The former chapter 18 has been redesignated as subchapter I, the compromise agreement from section 401 of S. 1810 has been designated as subchapter II of chapter 18 and certain general definitional and administrative provisions applicable to both subchapters I and II of chapter 18 have been placed in a new subchapter III.

The definition of ''child'' in the Senate bill has been moved to a general definitions section (new section 1821) contained in subchapter III. A separate definition of ''eligible child'' (for purposes of subchapter II) has been provided in a new section 1811. The definition of ''female Vietnam veteran'' contained in S. 1810 has been removed from subchapter II and replaced by general definitions of Vietnam veteran and Vietnam era in new section 1821.

S. 1810 would have excluded spina bifida from the definition of a covered birth defect in subchapter II. Thus, the Senate bill could have been interpreted so as to require a child to choose to receive a monthly monetary allowance and health care based only on spina bifida or based only on non-spina bifida disabilities, but not both. Because the Committees wish to include spina bifida with all other covered disabilities for purposes of rating the disabilities from which an eligible child may suffer, the prohibition in proposed section 1812(b)(2) has been deleted from the compromise bill. The compromise agreement is intended to ensure that children of women Vietnam veterans who suffer both from spina bifida and any other covered birth defect will have all of their disabilities considered in determining the appropriate disability rating and the amount of monetary benefits to be paid under subchapter II of chapter 18. If the only covered birth defect present is spina bifida, the eligible child would be compensated under the spina bifida provisions of subchapter I of chapter 18.

The requirement in S. 1810 that birth defects identified by the Secretary be listed in regulations has been omitted. In drafting this legislation, the Committees considered the report of the Department of Veterans Affairs, Veterans Health Administration, Environmental Epidemiology Service, entitled ''Women Vietnam Veterans Reproductive Outcomes Health Study'' (October, 1998). Because this report identifies a wide variety of birth defects identified in the children of women Vietnam veterans, the Committees concluded that it was not necessary to provide a rating for each separate defect. Thus, the Committees intend that, in addition to whatever specific defects the Secretary may identify, the Secretary may also describe defects in generic terms, such as ''a congenital muscular impairment resulting in the inability to stand or walk without assistive devices.'' Language authorizing the Secretary to take into account functional limitations when formulating a schedule for rating disabilities under the new subchapter was added to specifically allow for ratings based upon generic descriptions of functional limitations imposed by the disabilities.

The limitation contained in the Senate bill which barred assistance under the new authority to an individual who qualified for spina bifida benefits has been deleted to assure that children who suffer from spina bifida and any other covered defect may receive a monetary allowance under subchapter II and health care which takes into account the disabilities imposed by spina bifida and any other condition.

EXTENSION OF CERTAIN EXPIRING AUTHORITIES

Current Law

The following authorities expire on September 30, 2002: (1) VA's authority to verify the eligibility of recipients of, or applicants for, VA needs-based benefits and VA means-tested medical care by gaining access to income records of the Department of Health and Human Services/Social Security Administration and the Internal Revenue Service, (2) the reduction to $90 per month for VA pension and death pension benefits to veterans or other beneficiaries without dependents who are receiving Medicaid-covered nursing home care, (3) the Secretary's authority to charge borrowers who obtain VA-guaranteed, insured or direct home loans a ''home loan'' fee, and (4) procedures applicable to liquidation sales of defaulted home loans guaranteed by VA. The Secretary's (enhanced loan asset) authority to issue and guarantee securities representing an interest in home loans expires on December 31, 2002.

House Bill

Section 8 of H.R. 4268 would extend temporary authorities to 2008 that would otherwise expire on September 30, 2002, including: (1) VA income verification authority through which VA verifies the eligibility for VA needs-based benefits and VA means-tested medical care, by gaining access to income records of the Department of Health and Human Services/Social Security Administration and the Internal Revenue Service, (2) limitation on VA pension and death pension payments to beneficiaries without dependents receiving Medicaid-covered nursing home care, (3) VA-enhanced loan asset authority guaranteeing the payment of principal and interest on VA-issued certificates or other securities, VA home loan fees of ¾ of one percent of the total loan amount, and (4) procedures applicable to liquidation sales on defaulted home loans guaranteed by VA.

Senate Bill

The Senate bills contain no comparable provision.

Compromise Agreement

Section 402 of the compromise agreement contains the House language.

PRESERVATION OF CERTAIN REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

Current Law

The Federal Reports Elimination and Sunset Act of 1995 repealed a number of agency report requirements that Congress had imposed during the 20th century. The effect of that law, which otherwise would have taken effect last year, was temporarily suspended until May 15, 2000, by a provision in last year's omnibus appropriations act, Public Law 106–113.

House Bill

Section 10 of H.R. 4268 would reinstate the requirements that the Secretary provide periodic reports concerning equitable relief granted by the Secretary to an individual beneficiary (expires December 31, 2004); work and activities of the Department; programs and activities examined by the Advisory Committees on a) former prisoners of war (expires December 31, 2003) and b) women veterans (expires after biennial reports submitted in 2004); operation of the Montgomery GI Bill educational assistance program (expires December 31, 2004); and activities of the Secretary's special medical advisory group (expires December 31, 2004). It also requires the Secretary to include with any report that is required by law or by a joint explanatory statement of a Congressional conference committee an estimate of the cost of preparing the report.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS NOT ADOPTED

EXPANSION OF LIST OF DISEASES PRESUMED TO BE SERVICE-CONNECTED FOR RADIATION-EXPOSED VETERANS

Current Law

Section 1112(c)(2) of title 38, United States Code, lists 16 diseases which, if they become manifest in a radiation-exposed veteran at any time in his or her lifetime, would be considered to have been incurred in or aggravated during active service.

Senate Bill

Section 102 of S. 1810 would amend section 1112(c)(2) by adding lung cancer, colon cancer, tumors of the brain and central nervous system, and ovarian cancer to the list of diseases presumed to be service-connected if they are contracted by radiation-exposed veterans.

INCREASE IN MAXIMUM AMOUNT OF HOUSING LOAN GUARANTEE

Current Law

Under section 3703(a)(1)(A)(IV) of title 38, United States Code, VA guarantees 25 percent of a home loan amount for loans of more than $144,000, with a maximum guaranty of $50,750. Under current mortgage loan industry practices, a loan guaranty of $50,750 is sufficient to allow a veteran to borrow up to $203,000 toward the purchase of a home with no down payment.

Senate Bill

Section 122 of S. 1810 would amend section 3703(a)(1) to increase the maximum amount of the VA guaranty from $50,750 to $63,175.

TERMINATION OF COLLECTION OF LOAN FEES FROM VETERANS RATED ELIGIBLE FOR COMPENSATION AT PRE-DISCHARGE RATING EXAMINATIONS

Current Law

Section 3729(c) of title 38, United States Code, provides that a loan fee may not be collected from a veteran who is receiving disability compensation (or who, but for the receipt of retirement pay, would be entitled to receive compensation) or from a surviving spouse of any veteran who died from a service-connected disability (including a person who died in the active military, naval, or air service).

Senate Bill

Section 123 of S. 1810 would amend section 3729 to add an additional category of fee-exempt borrower; persons who have been evaluated by VA prior to discharge from military service and who are expected to qualify for a compensable service-connected disability upon discharge, but who are not yet receiving disability compensation because they are still on active duty.

FAMILY COVERAGE UNDER SERVICEMEMBERS' GROUP LIFE INSURANCE

Current Law

Spouses and dependent children are not eligible for any VA-administered insurance program.

Senate Bill

Section 133 of S. 1810 would create a new section 1967A within chapter 19 of title 38, United States Code. This section would provide to SGLI-insured servicemembers an opportunity to provide for coverage of their spouses and children. The amount of coverage for a spouse would be equal to the coverage of the insured servicemember, up to a maximum of $50,000. The lives of an insured servicemembers' dependent children would be insured for $5,000.

COMPTROLLER GENERAL AUDIT OF VETERANS' EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING SERVICE OF THE DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

Current Law

Not applicable.

Senate Bill

Section 152 of S. 1810 would require the Comptroller General of the United States to carry out a comprehensive audit of the Veterans' Employment and Training Service of the Department of Labor. The audit would commence not earlier than January 1, 2001, and would be completed not later than 1 year after enactment of this provision. Its purpose would be to provide a basis for future evaluations of the effectiveness of the Service in meeting its mission. The audit would review the requirements applicable to the Service under law, evaluate the organizational structure of the Service, and any other matters related to the Service that the Comptroller General considers appropriate.

ACCELERATED PAYMENTS OF BASIC EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE

Current Law

Current law does not provide for accelerated educational assistance payments in VA-administered education programs.

Senate Bill

Section 9 of S. 1402 would authorize VA to make accelerated payments under the terms of regulations that VA would promulgate to allow MGIB participants to receive a semester's, a quarter's, or a term's worth of benefits at the beginning of the semester, quarter, or term. For courses not so organized, VA could make an accelerated payment up to a limit established by VA regulation, not to exceed the cost of the course.

ELIGIBILITY OF MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES TO WITHDRAW ELECTIONS NOT TO RECEIVE MONTGOMERY GI BILL BASIC EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE

Current Law

Sections 3011(c)(1) (for active duty service of at least 3 years) and 3012(d)(1) (for active duty service of 2 years and 4 continuous years in the Selected Reserve) of title 38, United States Code, provide that any servicemember may make an election not to receive educational assistance under chapter 30 of title 38, United States Code. Any such election shall be made at the time the individual initially enters active duty. For servicemembers who elect to sign up for the Montgomery GI Bill, section 3011(b) requires a pay reduction of $100 per month for the first 12 months of active service.

Senate Bill

Section 8 of S. 1402 would authorize servicemembers who had ''opted out'' of MGIB participation (by electing not to receive MGIB benefits and whose basic pay during the first 12 months of service, therefore, had not been reduced by $100 per month for 12 months) to regain eligibility for MGIB benefits by making a $1,500 lump sum payment.

CODIFICATION OF RECURRING PROVISIONS IN ANNUAL DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS APPROPRIATIONS ACTS

Current Law

Each year the Congress appropriates funds to the Department of Veterans Affairs as part of the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, Independent Agencies Appropriations Act (VA–HUD appropriations bill). Although the amount of the appropriations varies from year to year, the purposes for which appropriations are made are generally fixed, and change little, if any, from year to year. Because the style of appropriations language discourages normal punctuation or sentence structure, some of the ''sentences'' making appropriations exceed a page in length. This approach appears to make the appropriations language difficult for the average person to read.

House Bill

Section 9 of H.R. 4268 would codify recurring provisions in annual Department of Veterans Affairs Appropriations Acts.

Compromise Agreement

The Committees take note of concerns registered by Members of both Houses over the pace and poor planning associated with an important project in the greater Boston VA environment. The most recent information on the Boston integration indicates that a new review—by the Capital Assets Restructuring For Enhanced Services (CARES) contractor for New England—will begin soon. The Committees expect VA to complete the Boston integration plan in an expedited manner. Further, the Committees expect the VA to submit a proposal, or a major construction authorization request, to address these infrastructure needs following completion of the CARES validation of bed need in the area. The Committees support this process and look forward to the results of the analysis and any proposal VA consequently may make.

PILOT PROGRAM FOR COORDINATION OF HOSPITAL BENEFITS

Current Law

No provision.

House Bill

Section 401 of H.R. 5109 would authorize a four-site VA pilot program. Under the program, veterans with Medicare or private health coverage (and a number of indigent veterans), who rely on a VA community-based clinic, could voluntarily choose nearby community hospital care for brief episodes of medical-surgical inpatient care. The VA clinic would coordinate care and cover required copayments.

UNIFICATION OF MEDICATION COPAYMENTS

Current Law

Under Section 1710(a)(2)(G) of title 38, United States Code, VA provides medical care, without imposing an obligation to make copayments for such care, to veterans who are ''unable to defray the expenses of necessary care. . . .'' This is determined by comparing the veteran's annual income against an income threshold that is adjusted annually. A separate provision of law, section 1722A of title 38, United States Code, mandates that VA charge a copayment for each 30-day supply of prescription medications provided to a veteran on an outpatient basis if that medication is for the treatment of a nonservice-connected condition.

Two categories of veterans are exempt from the copayment obligation: veterans who have service-connected disability ratings of 50 percent or higher, and veterans whose annual income does not exceed the maximum amount of ''means tested'' VA pension that would be payable if such veterans were to qualify for pension. Eligibility for pension is also determined by calculating countable income against an income threshold. This pension level is lower than the health care eligibility income threshold. As a consequence, veterans who are given priority access to VA health care and are exempted from making copayments for that health care under one measurement of their means are required to make copayments for medications under a different measurement of their means.

Senate Bill

Section 201 of S. 1810 would unify the copayment exemption thresholds at the health care eligibility income threshold.

EXTENSION OF MAXIMUM TERM OF VA LEASES TO PROVIDERS OF HOMELESS VETERANS SERVICES

Current Law

VA's Home Loan Guaranty Program assists veterans by facilitating their purchase, construction, and improvement of homes. VA does so by encouraging private lenders to extend favorable credit terms to veterans by guaranteeing repayment of a portion of the lender-provided home loan.

In some circumstances, veterans default on mortgage loans guaranteed by VA. In such cases, the lender will foreclose, and VA, as a guarantor, may come into possession of the property. Such properties, typically, are sold to the public by VA. VA, however, has the option of leasing such properties to public and nonprofit private providers of services to homeless veterans so that such service-providers may offer shelter and other services to homeless veterans and their families. However, such leases to the providers of services to homeless veterans may not exceed 3 years in term.

Senate Bill

Section 311 of S. 1810 would extend the maximum term of VA leases to providers of services to homeless veterans from 3 to 20 years.

House Bill

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, as the ranking member of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, I urge my colleagues to support this comprehensive bill which would make changes to a wide range of veterans's benefits and services. The bill represents compromise on both sides of the aisle and in both Houses of Congress, and many, many hours of staff and Members' work. For that, I thank everyone involved.

The bill covers a wide spectrum of issues—from new educational benefits for service members to improvement in VA nurses' and dentists' pay. I would like to address some of the major provisions.

Mr. President, S. 1402, as amended, represents a comprehensive effort to address the shortfall in the amount provided for veterans' education. The current basic GI Bill benefit is $536 per month, which, according to College Board data, pays for less than 60 percent of the costs of a public four-year university. The cost of tuition and fees for public and private educational institutions rose approximately 90 percent from 1980–1995, while the MGIB benefit rates only increased 42 percent from 1985 to 1995. S. 1402 will provide an increase for fiscal year 2001 of 22 percent, raising the basic rate to $650 per month.

Additionally, this compromise bill adopts a Senate ''buy up'' provision that will allow servicemembers to elect to contribute up to an additional $600 (above the $1,200 that they contribute over their first year of service), in exchange for receiving four times their contribution. This additional contribution can be made at any time prior to the servicemember leaving service. Thus, it is targeted at those who definitely plan to pursue additional education when they leave service.

Although these increases fall short of the full tuition recommended last year by the Commission on Servicemembers and Veterans Transition Assistance, they will nevertheless provide a substantial improvement in assistance to veterans. The basic monthly benefit increase to $650, when combined with the maximum ''buy up'' contribution, would yield a monthly benefit of $800 per month, an increase of 49 percent over the current benefit.

I believe that education is the key to success in today's high tech, fast-paced economy. We must ensure that our nation's veterans do not wind up on the wrong side of the ''digital divide.'' It should be our policy to always encourage servicemembers and veterans to strive for greater achievement. Aside from the benefits that accrue to the individual veteran, we cannot overlook the benefits that accrue to our Nation when we provide a substantial educational benefit to veterans, including increased tax dollars from better salaries, greater stability through higher levels of home ownership rates, and a stronger recruiting tool for future servicemembers.

We also must remember our commitment to take care of the families of servicemembers killed on duty and families of veterans who are totally disabled due to their service. S. 1402 provides a corresponding increase in the monthly educational benefit, Dependents' Educational Assistance (DEA), provided to survivors and dependents of these veterans. Part of the reason that DEA is so low when compared to MGIB is that the MGIB rate has been indexed to the inflation rate, while the DEA has not. That is why it was so important to me that we index DEA, as section 111 of S. 1402 provides. This will ensure that the education benefit to eligible dependents and survivors will keep pace with the cost of education and MGIB benefits.

Last year, we expanded VA's authority to provide education benefits to veterans by including payment for pre-admission exam preparatory courses (SATs, GREs, etc). This year, through section 114, we are extending this valuable benefit to the eligible survivors and dependents of veterans through DEA. At some of the nation's top schools, scores on entrance exams can count for half of the total application, creating enormous pressure to score well. Studies by national consulting companies have shown improvement of over 100 points on the SAT exam scores for students who take exam preparatory courses. However, many of these exam preparatory course are quite costly. One national provider charges as much as $750 for a two-month, part-time, SAT preparatory course. Fairtest, an educational advocacy group, argues that ''[t]he SAT has always favored students who can afford coaching over those who cannot. . . .'' To be able to compete, it is critical that veterans' survivors and dependents have access to such courses.

Last year, along with Senator MURRAY and Senator DASCHLE, I introduced legislation that will provide much needed benefits to the children born with birth defects to female Vietnam veterans. I am enormously pleased that this legislation has been incorporated in S. 1402.

Section 401 will provide health care and compensation to children born with permanently disabling birth defects to women Vietnam veterans. The legislation had its inception in a comprehensive study the VA conducted of long-term reproductive health outcomes of women Vietnam-era veterans. After analyzing the records of over 4,000 women Vietnam veterans compared with 4,000 women Vietnam-era veterans, the study found a ''statistically significant increase in birth defects,'' particularly moderate to severe birth defects, in the children of the women Vietnam veterans. According to the study, the risk to a woman Vietnam veteran of having a child with birth defects was significantly elevated, even after adjusting for age, demographic variables, military characteristics, and smoking and alcohol consumption of the mothers.

As VA does not have the authority under current law to provide health care or their benefits to the children of women Vietnam veterans disabled from birth defects other than spinal bifida, I worked with VA to craft legislation modeled after that groundbreaking spina bifida legislation to address this issue.

It is only fitting that we assist these children. Their mothers served our Nation with honor and courage, volunteering to be placed in harm's way, without knowledge of what effects their service may bring later. They were the nurses, mapmakers, air traffic controllers, clerical staff, Red Cross and USO workers, and others who supported our troops in the field. Unfortunately, some of their children have suffered because of their mothers' service, and it is time for them to begin to be repaid for that suffering.

Under the provisions of S. 1402, VA would be authorized to provide reimbursement for health care of the disabled children for their birth defect and associated conditions, vocational rehabilitation services, and a monthly allowance that is not countable as income for the purpose of other federal programs.

Women Vietnam veterans have waited 25 years for this acknowledgment of the special risks they faced. Helping their children born with birth defects is the logical extension of our policy to provide benefits for disabilities that result from service. It's the compassionate and the right thing to do, and I am enormously gratified that we are finally doing it.

S. 1402 contains a number of benefits provisions that will aid veterans.

Section 301 extends compensation to be paid to reservists on inactive duty for training who were disabled or died from heart attack or stroke during training or travel to/from training. Currently, guards members and reservists who sustain an injury during inactive duty for training are eligible for veterans benefits. However, they are not eligible to receive compensation for diseases incurred or aggravated during such training, while active duty servicemembers would be eligible for the same condition. This provision recognizes the special nature of strokes and heart attacks and how they may be triggered by the additional physical stress during inactive duty for training, and ensures that these servicemembers and their families will be taken care of.

Section 302 will provide special monthly compensation to female veterans who have lost a breast due to service-connected conditions. Special monthly compensation is an additional monthly monetary benefit provided above regular compensation for loss, or loss of use of a part of a veterans' body, that yields an additional disability that another loss would not, such as loss of sight or hearing, loss of use of the veterans' legs, or loss of a creative organ. The loss of a breast to a woman veteran is consistent with the other disabilities where special monthly compensation is provided.

I am very pleased that S. 1402 closes the final chapter on a 55-year-old injustice—the cause of Filipino veterans who fought under U.S. Command during World War II. When the decision to extend benefits to this group was initially made, the law authorized payments to Filipino veterans at the rate of 50 cents on the dollar of the amounts that American veterans receive. It is my understanding that the VA–HUD Appropriations bill will contain a provision that will provide full compensation benefits and extend health care to these Filipino veterans. Section 332 of S. 1402 will extend full burial benefits to the dependents of Filipino veterans, while section 331 will provide that Filipino veterans who are American citizens and in the U.S. at the time of their death can be buried in National Cemeteries. This is a long overdue correction of an old injustice.

I am enormously proud of the fact that S. 1402 includes a small provision that I introduced which removes the limit on adaptive housing grants to disabled veterans who own their home with someone other than a spouse.

I became aware that there was a problem with the adaptive housing regulations when I was contacted by the family of Darren Frederick, a West Virginia Gulf War veteran who lost his ability to walk when he developed ALS, also known as Lou Gehrig's disease. Darren owned a house with his brother and applied for a grant from VA to adapt his home for his wheelchair. But because he owned the house with someone other than a spouse, VA regulations required that the grant be reduced by half. Still, this young, disabled veteran needed a whole ramp, not half a ramp, into his home.

The regulation VA was applying was written in 1947 to protect veterans from unscrupulous people who might take advantage of them. However, I am certain that this provision has hurt far more people than it has helped. That is why I pushed to eliminate it, and am pleased to say that it is no longer going to be the law. Unfortunately, I am sad to say that this change came too late to help young Darren Frederick. Darren passed away while he was still dealing with the red tape caused by this provision.

I am very disappointed that last year we were unable to move the Senate provision overturning the ''$1,500 rule.'' Since 1933, the law has required VA to suspend the compensation or pension benefits of incompetent veterans who have no dependents and are hospitalized at government expense. This suspension is triggered when the veteran's estate (basically, his bank account) exceeds $1,500, and continues until the estate is spent down to $500. At that time, VA reinstates the veteran's compensation until the veteran is hospitalized again and the estate exceeds $1,500, when the benefits are cut off again. No similar suspension is made for competent veterans or for incompetent veterans who are not hospitalized or who have dependents.

The rationale for cutting off benefits was that these veterans might have been institutionalized for years, and that it was not good policy to allow their estates to build up when they have no dependents to inherit them. There was also a fear of fraud on the part of the veteran's guardian or fiduciary.

Today, veterans are generally being hospitalized for shorter periods of time, but even so, the rule often applies quickly because of the outdated low dollar limit. It takes VA an average of 66 days to restore the benefits to incompetent veterans once their estates have been spent down. The result is that a veteran may have been released from the hospital for quite some time before the benefit is restored, creating great hardships in paying for the expenses of daily living.

The dollar amounts of the limit have not changed since 1933, when $1,500 equaled almost three years' worth of VA benefits at a 100 percent rating level. In today's dollars, this is less than one month's benefit at a 100 percent rating level. Although I truly believe that this is an outdated and indefensible policy that discriminates against incompetent veterans—veterans who are least likely to be able to fight for themselves—we remain unable to fully eliminate the restriction, as I wish we could. However, we are doing the next best thing—raising the limits to a more realistic dollar amount and indexing it to account for future increases in compensation. Section 304 provides that the $1,500 will be replaced with the dollar value represented by five times the 100-percent service-connected compensation rate, and that amount will be indexed to include future cost-of-living adjustments. If we can't eliminate this type of discrimination, I am gratified that we could at least reduce its application and impact.

I am especially pleased that this legislation includes authorization for the construction of a $9.5 million nursing home in Beckley, West Virginia. With the World War II and Korean War veteran population aging, there is a increased demand for an alternative to private long-term care, which is often costly and beyond the reach of many veterans and their families. I fought so hard for this federally funded facility because it will be available to all veterans in need of care, regardless of income. It will also contain a 20-bed Alzheimer's unit, to meet the special needs of those suffering from this horrible disease. Long-term care for Alzheimer's patients is very limited in southern West Virginia, and the Beckley VA Medical Center must often send veterans outside the state for this specialized care. Quality long-term care for West Virginia veterans is long overdue.

Currently, the Senate is deliberating on a bill that would appropriate $1 million in design funds for this project. I am hopeful that we will get the full amount needed for completion of the facility in the near future.

I am very proud of the nurses' pay provision in section 201 of S. 1402, which finally gives a very valued segment of VA's health care staff their due. Since the inception of the locality pay system in 1990, which determined the rate of pay for nurses according to trends in local health care labor markets, only some nurses in the VA system nationwide have actually seen pay increases. This was an unjust consequence of implementing the locality pay system that I am very glad we can now rectify.

This bill prohibits directors from reducing nurses' pay, and guarantees VA nurses a national comparability increase equivalent to that provided to other federal employees. Additionally, it reforms the local labor market survey process currently used to determine wages. Finally, I am pleased that this provision also requires Veterans Health Administration network directors to consult directly with nurses on policy issues that involve the work of VA nurses, and allows registered nurses to participate on medical center committees considering clinical care, budget matters, or resource allocation involving the care and treatment of veteran patients.

Section 202, the dentists' pay provision of S. 1402, is one that I am very satisfied with as it seeks to improve the recruitment and retention of dentists within the VA, and, therefore, the level of dental care our veterans receive as well. The basic pay rates of dentists employed in the VHA are supplemented by special pay and incentive pay scales that were originally enacted with the intent of helping recruitment and retention rates. However, they were not sufficient enough to keep this vital sector of veterans' care secured. This bill will build on what was already started nearly 10 years ago by finally revising and increasing the rates of special pay for VA dentists.

Another important provision in this legislation that I am very proud of is the creation of a physician assistant advisory position within the Veterans Health Administration (VHA). This position will finally give voice to a very essential segment of the VA health care system.

Current law requires that the office of Under Secretary for Health in the VA include representatives of a variety of health care professions. However, despite the fact that the VA is the nation's largest single employer of physician assistants, physician assistants have not had any representation within this office.

That is why I am pleased to be able to provide these often underrated health care workers with their own representative advisor. The VA Under Secretary for Health will designate a VHA physician assistant to fill this position and charge that person with advising on all matters regarding the employment and use of physician assistants within the Veterans Health Administration. The advisor may be assigned out in the field with periodical visits as necessary to VHA headquarters for reports, so that they are able to keep in touch both with physician assistants working all over the country and the VA Under Secretary for Health in VA Headquarters. The language associated with this section specifically calls upon VA to provide this individual with the necessary support and resources to enable this consultant to fulfill the assigned responsibilities of this position.

Just over 15 years ago, the VA conducted a large-scale survey on the occurrence of PTSD and other psychological problems in Vietnam veterans. The study found that 15 percent of male veterans and 8.5 percent of female veterans suffered from PTSD. However, among those veterans exposed to higher levels of war zone stress, PTSD rates were significantly higher. In addition, the study found that nearly one-third of both male and female Vietnam veterans had suffered from PTSD at some point following military service.

Therefore, I am very gratified that this bill provides for a followup study to be conducted to monitor the effectivness of the PTSD programs and other psychiatric services the VA has provided over the years to help veterans cope with the symptoms of this debilitating disorder. The study is to be conducted by an independent contractor, but the VA is being encouraged to design the study protocol itself in order to secure high quality responses to the survey.

Mr. President, in closing, I want to acknowledge the work of our Committee's Chairman, Senator SPECTER, in developing this comprehensive legislation. Through his efforts, and that of his staff—Bill Turek, Staff Director; Chris Yoder, Assistant Staff Director; and Legislative Assistants Jon Tower and William Cahill, we are moving this significant piece of legislation today.

I appreciate the willingness of the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs, especially Chairman BOB STUMP and Ranking Member LANE EVANS, to work together to reach compromise on so many vital issues.

And I would be remiss if I did not acknowledge the efforts of my own staff: Jim Gottlieb, Minority Staff Director; Kim Lipsky, Professional Staff Member; and Mary Schoelen, Counsel. I am enormously grateful for their diligence, and for their commitment to the work we do in this Committee on behalf of our Nation's veterans.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment (No. 4314) is agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate concurs in the amendment of the House to the title of the bill with an amendment.

The title of the bill was amended so as to read: ''An Act to amend title 38, United States Code, to increase the rates of educational assistance under the Montgomery GI Bill, to improve procedures for the adjustment of rates of pay for nurses employed by the Department of Veterans Affairs, to make other improvements in veterans educational assistance, health care, and benefits programs, and for other purposes.''.

VETERANS' COMPENSATION COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENT ACT OF 2000

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 4850) to provide a cost-of-living adjustment in rates of compensation paid to veterans with service-connected disabilities, to enhance programs providing compensation and life insurance benefits for veterans, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.
