PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 106th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

Vol. 145 WASHINGTON, THURSDAY, JULY 22, 1999 No. 105

Senate

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable MICHAEL D. CRAPO, a Senator from the State of Idaho.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, thank You for this moment of quiet in which we can reaffirm who we are, whose we are, and why we are here. Once again, we commit ourselves to You as the sovereign Lord of our lives and of our Nation. Our ultimate goal is to please and serve You. You have called us to be servant leaders who glorify You in seeking to know and do Your will in the unfolding vision for America.

We spread out before You the specific decisions that must be made today. We claim Your presence all through the day. Guide the Senators' thinking and their speaking. May their convictions be based on undeniable truth which has been refined by You. Bless them as they work together to find the best solutions for the problems before our Nation. Help them to draw on the supernatural resources of Your Spirit. Give them divine wisdom, penetrating discernment, and indomitable courage.

When the day draws to a close, may our deepest joy be that we received Your best for us and worked together for what is best for our Nation. In the name of our Lord and Savior. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CRAPO) led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF THE ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. THURMOND).

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, today the Senate will be in a period of morning business until 10:30 a.m. Following morning business, the Senate will resume debate on the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill with 1 hour of debate on the Gregg amendment regarding the crime reduction trust fund. Further amendments to the bill will be offered, debated, and voted on throughout the day today. Therefore, Senators should be prepared to vote during the day and into the evening. The majority leader would like to reiterate that there will be no break in action on the bill.

I thank my colleagues for their attention.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. There will now be a period for the transaction of morning business not to extend beyond the hour of 10:30 a.m. with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 5 minutes each. Under the previous order, the Senator from Georgia, Mr. COVERDELL, is recognized for up to 10 minutes.

The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, you have already enumerated we have now entered into a period of morning business for up to an hour. I believe I have been recognized for up to 10 minutes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is correct.

F–22 FUNDING

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, the F–22 has become a matter of great interest and controversy over the last several days because the House Appropriations Defense Subcommittee voted to bring a pause to the program; it took $1.8 billion out of it and redistributed it to other priorities. The problem is, if I might just take a moment to characterize it, nobody had any knowledge of the potential of this act—not the Defense Department, not the Air Force, not the contractors, not any parties who have been involved in development of the aircraft.

To step back for a moment, the decision as to this highly advanced weapons system and the decision to commit the Nation to its development is well over a decade old. The actual development of the aircraft began in 1991. We have now as a nation invested $20 billion in the development of this system; two of these unbelievable instruments of warfare are being tested in the air, and there is movement now to production of the first fighters.

My point is that after responsible commitments are made through three administrations and we have invested everything in its preparation and now we are ready to harvest that decision, the only words that come to mind are, it is bizarre that out of the blue, with no hearings, no reflection, this decision just drops like a lead brick into the middle of all these circumstances.

I am going to read the letter written by Secretary Cohen on July 15 to Congressman BILL YOUNG, chairman of the Appropriations Committee. I think it begins to encapsulate the shock of what has happened. He says:

I was dismayed to learn about House Appropriations Defense Subcommittee's mark last Monday that cut $1.8 billion in procurement funding for the F–22 aircraft. The Department of Defense cannot accept this decision. This decision, if enacted, would for all practical purposes kill the F–22 program, the cornerstone of our nation's global air power in the 21st century.

For fifty years, every American soldier has gone to war confident that the United States had air superiority. Canceling the F–22 means we cannot guarantee air superiority in future conflicts. It would also have a significant impact on the viability of the Joint Strike Fighter Program. The F–22 will enable the Joint Strike Fighter to carry out its primary strike mission. The Joint Strike Fighter was not designed for the air superiority mission, and redesigning it to do so will dramatically increase the cost. An upgraded F–15 will not provide this dominance and will cost essentially the same as the F–22 program.

It goes on to say:

I know the difficult budget environment the Congress has to deal with these days. I support your efforts to give our nation the best possible defense at an affordable cost. However, I believe the nation's defense requires the F–22. The proposed cut jeopardizes our future warfighting capability and will place our forces at higher risk.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the letter from Secretary Cohen be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE,
Washington, DC, July 15, 1999.

Hon. C.W. BILL YOUNG,
Chairman, Committee on Appropriations, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I was dismayed to learn about the House Appropriations Defense Subcommittee's mark last Monday that cut $1.8 billion in procurement funding for the F–22 aircraft. The Department of Defense cannot accept this decision. This decision, if enacted would for all practical purposes kill the F–22 program, the cornerstone of our nation's global air power in the 21st century.

For fifty years every American soldier has gone to war confident that the Unties States had air superiority. Canceling the F–22 means we cannot guarantee air superiority in future conflicts. It would also have a significant impact on the viability of the Joint Strike Fighter program The F–22 will enable the Joint Strike Fighter to carry out its primary strike mission. The JSF was not designed for the air superiority mission, and redesigning it to do so will dramatically increase the cost. An upgraded F–15 will not provide this dominance and will cost essentially the same as the F–22 program.

I know the difficult budget environment the Congress has to deal with these days. I support your efforts to give our nation the best possible defense at an affordable cost. However, I believe the nation's defense requires the F–22. The proposed cut jeopardizes our future warfighting capability and will place our forces at higher risk.

I pledge my strongest effort to ensure the program will be delivered within the cost caps that we've agreed to with the Congress. I am confident the Department has the proper management controls to ensure the success of the F–22 program. As always, I would be pleased to discuss these matters with you at any time. But I must tell you that I cannot accept a defense bill that kills this cornerstone program.

Sincerely,

BILL COHEN.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, an article appeared on July 21 in the Marietta Daily Journal which further illuminates the nature of the Secretary's letter. It says:

Defense Secretary William Cohen criticized a House panel Tuesday—

This is the point I want to make—for not consulting with the Pentagon before voting to suspend development of the Air Force's F–22 stealth fighter jet.

''Neither I nor anyone in this building—or anyone in the Air Force—was aware of the effort underway on the part of the committee,'' Cohen told reporters during a photo-taking session [at the Department of Defense].

This underscores the point I was making that something of this magnitude, something of the sophistication of this system, something that we have invested $20 billion in, something that we have spent almost two decades getting ready to launch, is not managed in this manner. It is bizarre that you would find yourself at this point, and suddenly a subcommittee decides to overturn almost two decades of thought and preparation and planning.

As I said a moment ago, we have invested about $20 billion in this system up to this point. If you were to carry out and carry through to the end what the subcommittee has done—and it reappropriated $1.8 billion—we would lose another $6.5 billion. This House Appropriations Committee action would deteriorate and jeopardize the program and violate current contractual agreements between the Air Force and the contractor.

One Pentagon source told Defense Daily yesterday:

The $1.8 billion cut would result in $6.5 billion in total growth, $5.3 billion in production costs and $1.2 billion in engineering and manufacturing development costs.

In other words, you would not be saving $1.8 billion; you would have to bleed out another $6.5 billion. So by this time we would have $26, $27 billion in this weapons system—almost two decades—but no fighters.

Anytime you develop a system of that magnitude, there have been issues that surround it. But they have all been managed. Extensive congressional oversight has been very significant over the development of the aircraft. Its problems have been dealt with and managed. As I said, we are at the point of actually inheriting this unique fighter.

There was an article in the Washington Post this morning by Richard Hallion. I will read a couple paragraphs.

There was some irony in the House Appropriations Committee's canceling production funding last week for the Air Force's next generation fighter—the Lockheed-Martin F–22 Raptor. The action came only weeks after America's military forces proved—for the third time since 1990—that exploiting dominant aerospace power is the irreplaceable keystone of our post-Cold War strategy for successful quick-response crisis intervention.

I believe everybody at this point, after the Persian Gulf, after Iraq and Kosovo, is looking anew at traditional war strategy. Who would have ever thought you could have flown the thousands of sorties that were involved in Kosovo with no combat casualties?

No issue has been more misunderstood than the F–22. The plane links radar-evading stealth with the ability to cruise at supersonic speeds and to exploit and display data from various sources to better inform the pilot about threats and opportunities.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, I think the other Senators are here for their prearranged time, so I will not go on. I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

Mr. DORGAN. I yield myself such time as I consume under the 30 minutes allocated to this side.

TAX CUTS

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, we now turn to another agenda in the Senate. By direction of the majority party, we turn to the subject of tax cuts. It is a corner that we have navigated before in this Congress. I was thinking that it might be useful to have had Daniel Webster in this Chamber to say to Members, as he said many years ago: ''Necessity compels me to speak the truth rather than pleasing things. I should indeed like to please you, but I prefer to save you, whatever be your attitude toward me.''

It certainly must be pleasing to say to constituents that we would like to give tax breaks as far as the eye can see, upwards of a half a trillion, three-quarters of a trillion, and some say $1 trillion. What a wonderful thing.

This country is doing quite well. Its economy is moving ahead with significant health. Unemployment is way down. Inflation is way down. There are a lot of things in this country to be thankful for.

Part of the reason to be thankful for that is, in 1993, some of us in Congress had the vision to steer this country to a different course. If we remember, in 1993, we were facing a $290 billion Federal deficit—$290 billion. The economists told us that for the rest of the decade we would have anemic economic growth and deficits.

We passed a piece of legislation in this Congress. I voted for it. I was proud to do so. When people said: We're going to blame you for voting for that, I said: Don't blame me. Please give me credit for it. I won't run away from that vote.

It was a tough, hard vote. It increased some taxes, mostly on those in top 1 or 2 percent, and it cut some spending. It was tough economic medicine, but it signaled to the country we were going to put this country back on track with a responsible fiscal policy that would lead someday to a balanced budget.

We passed that by one vote in the House and one vote in the Senate—one vote. We did not get one vote from the majority side—not one. We provided all of the votes to pass that legislation at that point. We were widely criticized for it. In fact, we had Members on the other side predict that it would lead to a depression; it would lead to massive unemployment; it would collapse our economy; it would be awful for our country.

This country has had unprecedented economic growth, declining unemployment and low inflation. There are more people working and there is more home ownership. And now we find, instead of a $290 billion budget deficit, budget surpluses ahead.

What happens at the first sign of surplus from this bridge on the ship of state? At the first sign of surplus, the majority party decides it is time to abandon the bridge and go down and get the champagne, pop the corks and pass out money to everybody—well, not to everybody—pass out money to all the friends from the ship's crew.

Let's talk about what all this means.

They rely on some vision for the next 10 and 20 years that we will have surpluses forever. Of course, this comes from economists that cannot remember their home phone number—telling us what is going to happen 3, 5, and 10 years from now. Those in the majority party say: Because we have all of this good economic news, although we didn't participate in helping make that happen—we voted against that economic plan in 1993—we are now deciding we are going to offer tax breaks of unprecedented size.

This is what is proposed. The tax breaks that will come to the floor of the Senate and will be on the floor of the other body today have as their priorities that we will not provide any money to make Medicare solvent. We won't provide any money for our domestic priorities: education, health care, defense, and other key investments. We will provide no money for debt reduction. One would expect when times are good, we ought to be able to begin reducing the indebtedness we incur when times are bad, but there is no money for debt reduction and no money for Social Security solvency. We are going to have a tax cut of $792 billion.

That is the GOP priority. That is not new. That has always been their priority. It is full speed ahead on our priority, and everything else can wait.

If you have a pie and you show who get the tax breaks, here is how the pie gets cut. If you are in the top 1 percent of the income earners of this country, you get this large piece. If you are in the next 4 percent, between 95 and 99, you also get a large piece of the pie. But the lowest 20 percent of the income earners of this country get this little sliver, just a crumb off the corner. It is always the same, and it never changes. The big tax breaks go to the upper-income folks, and the rest are left with tiny crumbs, if any at all.

This chart shows the same thing. The top 1 percent get a $23,000-a-year average tax cut. The bottom 60 percent of the wage earners in this country get a $139 a year tax cut. This chart shows what is going to happen over the next 20 years. The period of time 2000–2004, 2005–2009, the cost of the GOP tax grows substantially. In the second decade, it literally explodes. It will head us right back to the same circumstance we had before of huge Federal deficits.

This chart shows the same thing in a different style. These are back loaded, exploding tax breaks that benefit the upper-income folks and will, in my judgment, lead to very significant risks for this country.

I will ask this question over and over again: If this is your priority, just tax cuts above everything else, and tax cuts that go largely to the upper-income folks in this country, do you decide, then, that Head Start, for example, is not important because the domestic discretionary portion of this budget is fixing to be shrunk like a prune? You look at the kind of cuts that are necessary in all of the programs that make this a good country, the investment in our children, the investment in nutrition, the investment in health care, you will find massive cuts in all of those programs in order to pay for tax breaks that say to the folks in this country: We believe if you are in the top 1 percent, you ought to get $22,900 back in tax refunds each year because we think you contribute the most to this country. And if you happen to be in the lowest 20 percent of the income earners of this country, we have designed a plan that says you are going to get about a $1.59 a month.

Is that surprising? No. It is the GOP plan from the beginning of political time. It is what they have always proposed. It is what they always fight for. It is always at the expense of every other priority.

We are going to have a big debate about this and should have a big debate. I believe some tax cuts are appropriate, if they are fashioned the right way and they don't put this country's economy at risk. But I believe they ought not come at the expense of Head Start, education, health care and so many other key priorities, and especially paying down the debt during good economic times and making sure we extend the life and solvency of Medicare and Social Security. That ought to be part of the priority that comes out of this Chamber as well. That is what we will try to force in this debate on tax breaks in the coming days.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. JOHNSON addressed the Chair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, does the Senator from North Dakota control the time?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Illinois controls the time.

Mr. DURBIN. I inquire of the Senator from South Dakota how much time he would like to have.

Mr. JOHNSON. I ask the Senator from Illinois for 10 minutes.

Mr. DURBIN. I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from South Dakota.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, on the floor of the other body today and coming to the floor of the Senate this coming week is going to be legislation having to do with taxation, having to do with tax cuts. Just when we think we have seen just about everything in terms of irresponsibility and foolishness, we see something literally taking the cake. We are seeing some pandering irresponsibility of record proportions that would be so serious and so injurious to this Nation's economic future and to the priorities of this country that we simply have to begin to speak about this issue today.

What does this issue revolve around? It revolves around the Congressional Budget Office's projections that we will have about a $964 billion budget surplus over the coming 10 years, over and above what is needed for Social Security. Those are projections 10 years out, incredibly tenuous given the fact that in the past we haven't been able to make projections for a year out that have been accurate, much less for 10 years. But nonetheless, that is the baseline for this debate.

Given the economic prosperity this administration has brought us, particularly the 1993 Budget Act, passed without a single Republican vote in either body, we do have a unique opportunity now to do some extraordinary things for ourselves and for the coming generation of Americans in terms of eliminating the accumulated Federal debt, make some key investments and, yes, assisting with some targeted tax relief to those families who need it most.

But what do we see coming to us from the other body? What do we see coming on this floor this coming week? We see a tax plan from our Republican majority friends suggesting that with this $964 billion, if you even believe it is going to happen, first of all, nothing be set aside for the preservation and the strengthening of Medicare, nothing.

Second, in order to give essentially this entire amount of money back as tax relief—primarily to the most wealthy people who are making the political contributions in this body; the typical American family gets about a buck a week tax relief—we will have to then reduce over the coming 10 years defense spending buying power by about 17 percent, at a time when we are having a hard time trying to figure out how to maintain our security responsibilities around the world as it is. This tax package would assume, then, that we will have a 23-percent reduction in domestic spending buying power over the coming 10 years.

If you buy into this tax package, that means you close veterans hospitals. That means you have significant reductions in Head Start programs, education programs. That means you give up on the idea we will have some sort of partnership for rebuilding our schools and bringing new technology into our schools. It means gutting education and agricultural programs. It means severe cuts in parks, law enforcement, in medical research, all the things most Americans think are crucial to our Federal, State and local, public and private partnerships that make this the great country it is.

On top of that, if you think that is not bad enough, there is zero set aside for the reduction of the accumulated Federal national debt we have accumulated over the 200-year history of this country but which primarily came about during the 1980s, during the Reagan and Bush years and now stands at $5.6 trillion. It does nothing to buy down that existing debt.

And if the decision is made down the road we are not going to knock defense spending down by 17 percent, then the consequence of that, under this plan, would be that we would have to reduce domestic spending—Head Start, education, parks, law enforcement, medical research, VA hospitals, agriculture, all that range of initiatives, by 38 percent.

This is a radical, extremist agenda for the Nation. The American people deserve better than this.

Just when you think that is as bad as things can get, you look at the way this tax package is constructed, with the tax reductions, especially back loaded for the very wealthy, and then what do you find on the next page? Not only have you given up your entire domestic agenda, not only have you done nothing to reduce the accumulated Federal deficit, not only have you done nothing for Medicare, but the cost of this recipe explodes to double the cost in the next 10 years. What a radical agenda. It would be foolish, were it not so serious and so injurious to our Nation.

Then one last thought: The Federal Reserve has recently raised interest rates by about a quarter percent. Some are attempting in this tax package to put one foot on the gas while the other foot is on the brake. If we were to do this, the obvious next consequence would be a significant increase in interest rates by the Federal Reserve. There is already a rise in interest rates now, without any tax cut whatever. That is a silent tax on every American.

On every parent who wants to send a child to college or a vocational school, and on everyone who wants to buy a house, or buy a car, or a farmer who wants to finance his operation, or a businessperson who wants to expand his business and create new jobs, that is a killing tax. It is a higher interest rate as a consequence of this incredible irresponsibility that we see going on in the House today and coming to the Senate this coming week.

Thank goodness for the future of America President Clinton has indicated he will veto this nonsense. But wouldn't it be better if we could work together in a bipartisan fashion on a constructive, positive agenda that, yes, would provide some tax relief to working class people, working families, the families who struggle to make a car payment, a house payment, and to keep jeans and tennis shoes on the kids, the people who make the economy go. Let's provide tax relief there, but let's pay down some of the national debt, which is probably the single-best thing we can do in any kind of budget plan. We should make sure we make key investments in education, in Head Start, in medical research, and keep the VA hospitals open. We can do all of these things with thoughtful balance and moderation. But moderation seems to be the last thing in the world our Republican friends want to bring to either the other body or this floor in terms of tax and budget agendas.

I think where you put your money says a great deal about the character of any government because rhetoric is cheap. Everybody is for everything around here, until it is time to put some money where your mouth is and do the balancing that needs to be done. That is what we see not happening on the other side. What we are seeing is pandering and irresponsibility and radical agendas that may make a statement for the coming elections. Who knows? It seems to me it makes a very negative statement.

But we deserve better than that. This Nation deserves better, and this Nation needs better than that. We need to come up with a budget and tax reduction package that is moderate, thoughtful, and deals with some of the tax relief that is needed but makes investments that are needed and pays down the accumulated Federal debt. That will keep the cost of money down and make it easier to send a kid to college or vocational school, buy a house, buy a car, or keep a farming or ranching operation going, all of those things, if we make the right decisions.

But this is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. Many of us thought, in the years we have had the opportunity to serve in Congress, several things would never happen in our lifetime: The fall of the Berlin Wall, the collapse of the Soviet Union, and the possibility that we would ever be on the floor arguing about what to do about budget surpluses. We have that opportunity. Let's not waste that opportunity.

Let's take a thoughtful, constructive, positive approach to how to use those dollars as we embark on this next millennium and revisit this tax package so we emerge from this debate with a package that, in fact, does address the priorities that I think the American people want us to address, and that does it, hopefully, in a bipartisan fashion and in a way that will leave our economy stronger and leave our families stronger going into the coming century than we are now and, certainly, far stronger than what would happen if we tragically actually passed and enacted the tax agenda that we see occurring on the House floor today and is coming to this body next week.

I yield back my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBERTS). The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, how much time remains on the Democratic side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 11 minutes 30 seconds.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I thank the Chair and I thank the Senator from South Dakota.

Yogi Berra, one of the greatest ''political philosophers'' of all time, may have said, ''This is deja vu all over again.'' If he didn't say it, he should have because this debate that you are hearing on the floor of the Senate is almost a carbon copy of the debate of 1981. Think about that for a moment. We were in the first year of the Reagan Presidency. We had accumulated, in the entire history of the United States of America, $1 trillion in debt, and the Republican Party came to the floor and said now is the time for a massive tax cut. Their supporters cheered, they enacted their massive tax cut, and what happened? Two significant things:

First, we saw a dramatic increase in the national debt. A $1 trillion accumulated debt in the entire history of the United States grew into more than $4 trillion over the span of the Reagan and Bush Presidencies because of that 1981 decision.

Second, it was such a bad decision that the American economy struggled from recession to recession. That is what happened the last time the Republican Party brought their vision of America to the floor of the Congress.

In 1992, the American voters said: Enough; this isn't working. We want a change. And they elected the Clinton-Gore administration, which, in 1993, came to Congress and said: Let us try to get back on the right track; let us try to reduce the deficits on an annual basis, and let us try to get the economy moving again.

You should have heard the Republican Senators who came to the floor—the same ones who begged for a tax cut when the Clinton plan was debated.

Remember, not a single Republican Senator or House Member voted for that plan. Some of the things they said are absolutely classic. The Senator from Texas, PHIL GRAMM, who is very outspoken in favor of this tax cut, said of the Clinton plan:

I want to predict tonight that if we adopt this bill, the American economy is going to get weaker and not stronger, the deficit 4 years from today will be higher than it is today.

That was PHIL GRAMM of Texas, August 5, 1993. Completely wrong. Completely wrong.

The Clinton plan passed, and two things happened. Annual deficits started to come down, and, in addition to that, the economy started moving forward. Just look at the news. You don't have to believe a politician. Unemployment is down. Housing starts are up. Business starts are up. Inflation is under control. America is moving forward, and we can feel it. Consumer confidence and business confidence is at an all-time high.

Two years ago, if you would have come to this Senate Chamber, the Republican Members were so despondent over the deficits that they wanted to amend the Constitution. That isn't done very often in America, but they said: We need to pass a balanced budget amendment. Why? So the Federal courts can force Congress not to overspend. A constitutional amendment to give a Federal judge the power to stop Congress from spending because deficits were out of control. That was only 2 years ago.

Now what debate do we hear on the floor? It isn't about deficits and constitutional amendments; it is about the surplus and tax cuts. And I have to tell you, quite honestly, the Republican agenda is out of control. What they are suggesting now is a $1 trillion tax cut that, frankly, will not only imperil the state of our economy but also could drive us right back into deficits again. How will we pay for that?

I would like to yield to the Senator from California because she made an observation that I think should be part of the record of this debate. I yield to her for a question.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I thank my colleague very much for his very fine summation of where we are.

It is amazing to me to see how far we have come in this economy, from the worst of all days when people were despondent. I remember when President George Bush went to Japan and he became ill, and it became kind of a symbol of what was wrong with this country. We went to Japan to find out how they were doing it and what was wrong with our country. Why could we not get our economy under control? Now we finally have it under control. It is in the best place it has been for generations, as my friend has shown us, in terms of employment, in terms of job creation, in terms of no more deficit, in terms of being able to finally pay down the debt, in terms of housing starts and business starts—you name it—inflation. It is all going right.

What do our friends say? Whoops. Let's change course. We finally have it right, but let's turn around and go back to the bad old days.

It is amazing to me. I want to ask my friend a question about the so-called surplus. I was rather stunned to see my chairman, Senator DOMENICI, of the Budget Committee, for whom I have great respect, hold a press conference yesterday and tell the press that there is a $3 trillion surplus. I sort of thought maybe I misheard it. He repeated it four times, at least. He said there is a $3 trillion surplus. Therefore, all we are giving is a $1 trillion tax cut. It is a very small part of the overall surplus. Don't the American people deserve a refund?

I want to ask my friend a couple of questions. Is it not true that $2 trillion of that $3 trillion so-called surplus is Social Security? It isn't anyone else's; it belongs to Social Security. Is my friend in agreement with me on that point?

Mr. DURBIN. The Senator from California is right because we are not dealing with a real surplus. We are dealing with a surplus in the Social Security trust fund which the Republican Party now wants to give away as a tax cut. Does that make sense? Does it make sense to any of us paying into Social Security, or those who hope to derive some benefit from it, at this point in time to decide to spend Social Security funds to give a tax cut?

I might say to the Senator from California: Look at the tax cut. There they go again. The Republicans cannot leave well enough alone. The economy is moving forward. Annual deficits are coming down. They want to put a tax cut package in place.

And look carefully at the winners under the Republican tax cut plan. For Mr. Bill Gates, good news. If you are in the top 1 percent, for the Republican tax, a cut of $22,000 a year—not bad. Will he notice?

But, look, if you are in the lowest 20 percent of average wage earners in America, under the Republican tax cut plan, listen to this, $22 a year—not bad—$22 a year for the average working family in America, and $22,000 for Mr. Trump and Mr. Gates.

There they go again.

Mrs. BOXER. Will my friend yield? I want him to know something. That $22,000 a year, back to the top 1 percent, is an average, I say to my friend. I can assure you that Mr. Trump and Mr. Gates will get far more than that in a refund.

As we discussed yesterday on this floor, when you think of people who work at the minimum wage and get dirt under their nails, and work hard and sometimes have two jobs, that average refund to the top 1 percent is twice as much as they earn in 1 year. There they go again. It is right on target.

I want to ask another question of my friend. We don't have a $3 trillion surplus because we already agreed that $2 trillion belongs to Social Security. That leaves $1 trillion. We know Medicare is in trouble. We know Social Security and Medicare are the twin pillars of the safety net. What good does it do someone on Social Security if they know they get that but their Medicare premium is going to go up so high that they can't afford to buy their food or pay their rent? So we need to take care of Medicare. How much is in the Republican plan to save Medicare?

Mr. DURBIN. The answer is clear. Zero. Medicare is a word about which the Republicans don't want to talk. They don't want to use it. Yet we all know that, unless we do something significant for the Medicare program, by the year 2015 this program will be bankrupt and 40 million Americans, elderly and disabled, who rely on Medicare for their health insurance have a time of reckoning that is just over the horizon.

We on the Democratic side believe that if there is going to be any surplus, as the President has suggested, we should dedicate it, first, to any surplus we realize to Social Security; second, to Medicare; and, third, to reducing the national debt.

I ask you: Which is the party of fiscal conservatism?

Listen to this debate: $1 trillion taken out of funds such as the Social Security trust fund to give away to the wealthiest of Americans, which is the Republican plan, or the Democratic plan, which says to take care of priorities—reducing our debt, reducing our need to appropriate money each year for interest on the debt, and making sure that Medicare and Social Security are strong enough to survive.

I think our position is not only fiscally conservative but I think it is fiscally sane. Others will characterize an alternative.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DURBIN. Yes.

Mr. DORGAN. I wanted to ask the Senator from Illinois if it is not the case that the proposal by the Republicans for very significant tax cuts, much of which will go to the upper income folks, would mean that they have nothing for debt reduction? Isn't it the case that in tough economic times—for example, when we passed the Deficit Reduction Act in 1993, with no help from the other side and not one vote even—in tough economic times your debt increases? During good economic times, you ought to reduce the debt. Isn't it the case that this fiscal policy plan of theirs provides nothing for debt reduction during good economic times? Is that fiscal conservatism?

Mr. DURBIN. It is fiscal insanity. I would say to the Senator from North Dakota that we hope this economy will continue to progress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the distinguished Senator has expired.

Mr. DURBIN. I ask unanimous consent for 30 additional seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. I say to the Senator from North Dakota that if we are going to prepare ourselves for the future, we have to prepare for the possibility of a reduction. I don't think that is wild-eyed thinking.

The Republican plan makes no contingency plan that suggests we might have a downturn in the economy. We should be reducing the debt and pledging our surplus, whatever it may be, to reducing that debt and making certain Social Security and Medicare are there for years to come.

I yield the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Maine is recognized to speak for up to 10 minutes.

The distinguished Senator is recognized.

Ms. COLLINS. Thank you, Mr. President.

I further ask unanimous consent that the time reserved for the Senator from Ohio, Mr. VOINOVICH, be given to the Senator from Ohio, Mr. DEWINE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The remarks of Ms. COLLINS and Mr. DEWINE pertaining to the introduction of S. 1412 are located in today's RECORD under ''Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.'')

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceed to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

DEPARTMENTS OF COMMERCE, JUSTICE, AND STATE, THE JUDICIARY, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume consideration of S. 1217, which the clerk will report.

The legislative assistant read as follows:

A bill (S. 1217) making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Gregg amendment No. 1272, to extend the Violent Crime Reduction Trust Fund through fiscal year 2005.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending business is amendment No. 1272, on which there will be 1 hour of debate equally divided.

The distinguished Senator from New Hampshire is recognized.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, under the unanimous consent agreement from last night, we were going to reserve 30 minutes of the time for two Democratic Members of the Senate, Senator LEAHY and Senator BIDEN. Senator BIDEN and Senator LEAHY had 30 minutes of this time. I now ask unanimous consent that the final 10 minutes of the time be reserved for myself, and prior to that, the 10 minutes prior to that, be reserved for the Senator from South Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum and ask the time be allocated to the underlying amendment and charged equally against both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, on behalf of the Senator from Delaware, Mr. BIDEN, I ask that Andrew Kline be granted the privilege of the floor during consideration of this measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I suggest the absence of a quorum under the same arrangement, the time charged to both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DEWINE). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to speak as in morning business for 7 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. HARKIN. First of all, I take this time because I want to talk a little bit about the plight of American agriculture and our Nation's farmers and to talk about a bill that I will be introducing shortly.

U.S. CAPITOL POLICE

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, like so many of my fellow Senators, I just came from the memorial service that took place in Statuary Hall for the two police officers, Detective Gibson and Officer Chestnut, who gave their lives 1 year ago defending the Capitol and those of us who work in these hallowed Halls.

I just got to thinking, when I was there watching all of the uniformed police officers standing so gallantly up on the platform, what a tough job these policemen have, what a terribly tough job they have.

On the one hand, because of the very nature of our jobs, we have to be accessible; we have to expose ourselves to the public on a daily basis, whether it is out in the front of the Capitol or over in the grass or walking between offices. We have to be available and accessible to the public. The police officers have to let us be accessible. We cannot put a shield around us.

On the other hand, it is the police officers' sworn duty to protect us and to keep us safe from harm.

All police officers have a tough job in this country. I think, above all, the police officers who work in and around the Capitol have the toughest job of all because they have these two conflicting responsibilities—to make us accessible, to not put shields around us, to keep this an open, public place, to be the shrine of freedom, and, on the other hand, to protect us and defend us from harm.

I just must say, I am as guilty as anyone; I never take the time to thank the police officers who protect us. We pass by them every day. We go in and out of the doors. We see them on the subway. We exchange pleasantries.

I am going to make an extra special effort from now on just to say thank you to these police officers, the men and women who protect us daily in the Capitol and who, as Officers Chestnut and Gibson showed a year ago, are willing to lay down their lives for us. We should thank them every day. I do so now and will make a special effort to do so in the future.

(The remarks of Mr. HARKIN pertaining to the introduction of legislation is located in today's RECORD under ''Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.'')

TRIBUTE TO JOHN F. KENNEDY, JR., CAROLYN BESSETTE KENNEDY, AND LAUREN BESSETTE

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise with great sadness today to pay tribute to the lives of John F. Kennedy, Jr., his wife Carolyn, and her sister, Lauren Bessette. My thoughts and prayers are with these families, for at this very moment, as we know, they are at sea to bring these wonderful, outstanding young Americans to a final rest.

We in the Senate, of course, feel very close to this tragedy because of our affection for our own colleague, Senator TED KENNEDY. We in Maryland feel very close to this family because we are the home to Eunice and Sarge Shriver, to Mark Shriver, who has taken his place in the House of Delegates, and our own Lt. Gov. Kathleen Kennedy Townsend, who lost a brother just a few months ago. As the eldest of the Kennedy cousins, she has endured much. She is living a life of service that certainly would make her father as proud as those of us in Maryland.

The entire Kennedy family has suffered so much. They have also given so much. It is a family of war heroes, Senators, Congressmen, and a President of the United States. They are also defenders of the poor, environmentalists, educators, and artists. They fight to give every American an opportunity to build better lives for themselves and to build stronger communities.

Many of us in this Senate were inspired to lives of public service because of John F. Kennedy. As a young social worker, I thought he was talking to me when he called our generation to service. When he said, ''Ask not what your country can do for you—but what you can do for your country,'' I believed it. I wanted to do something. That is why I committed myself even more forcefully to my own career in social work.

He practiced passionate, active idealism that was different from anything we had seen before in politics. That is why we hoped his son would continue that legacy. In many ways he had already begun to do that.

John Kennedy, Jr., could have lived the life of the idle rich, but he did not. He worked several years as a D.A. in New York, and recently he created a magazine to bring young people into politics who were indifferent to it. He endured intense press interest with grace and good humor. It seemed as if he understood his family was a part of the lives of all Americans.

While we all know the Kennedys, we cannot forget the Bessette family. They are suffering unimaginable pain with the death of two of their daughters. Carolyn Bessette Kennedy also lived in the spotlight. She, too, handled the attention with grace and charm. She had the same passion for life as her husband. Her sister Lauren was also making her own career in investment banking.

Wherever we turn, the Kennedys have touched America. We have been there for their hopes, their dreams, and their good days. We want our dear friend, Senator KENNEDY, the entire Kennedy family, and the Bessettes to know they are not alone today. We mourn with them, and we thank them for their contributions to America and for their own call to duty and to public service.

God bless them and God bless America that we have in our midst a great legacy.

I thank the Chair.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today to join my colleagues in expressing grief over the passing of John F. Kennedy, Jr., his wife Carolyn Bessette Kennedy, and Lauren Bessette; as well as extending condolences to the Kennedy and Bessette families over their losses.

It is difficult to express the sense of tragedy and loss that all of us feel over the passing of these three young, dynamic, and charismatic individuals. Clearly, John F. Kennedy, Jr. captured the hearts and imagination of millions of Americans, and his untimely and violent end has saddened all those who felt some sort of connection to this promising and handsome young man. Certainly the tremendous outpouring of sympathetic gestures we are witnessing in Massachusetts, New York, and here in Washington stand as testament to the high regard in which he was held.

To be frank, I did not know John F. Kennedy, Jr. all that well, though I have certainly been well acquainted with his family through the years. Here in the United States Senate, I have had the distinct pleasure and honor of serving with his father and both his uncles; and in years past, I worked closely with Representative JOE KENNEDY on an issue of great mutual concern. Clearly this is a family that values public service and has sought to make a contribution to the nation through policy, politics, and activism. The passion and intensity which the Kennedys—particularly John, Bobby, and TED—brought to Washington and directed toward their policy goals are commendable and enviable. Few people have approached their careers in government with the same vigor and enthusiasm than have the members of the Kennedy family.

Though John F. Kennedy, Jr. had not entered politics, he was someone who shared his family's desire to make a difference. He was involved in any number of philanthropic and charitable undertakings, and typical of a family that seeks to help others, he was personally involved in these endeavors. His reputation was of a sincere, kind, and high minded man. There is little doubt that had John F. Kennedy, Jr. decided to follow the path that his father, uncle, and cousins had taken and sought elected office, he would have had a bright political future and would have made an even greater mark on society and history.

There is great sadness in the fact that this tragedy not only snuffed out the promising light of John F. Kennedy, Jr., but took the lives of his wife and sister-in-law as well. It is impossible to comprehend how fate could be so cruel to these families, for these young individuals deserved to enjoy long and rich lives. Certainly, this tragedy is only intensified for the Bessettes who lost two daughters suddenly and unexpectedly, and it is impossible for any of us to truly know the grief they are feeling. Hopefully with time, they will come to some sort of peace and understanding with this inexplicable event.

Earlier today, the ashes of John F. Kennedy, Jr., his wife, and sister-in-law were committed to the sea and a sad chapter of American history is drawn to a close. To our friend and colleague, Senator TED KENNEDY, we extend our deepest condolences on the loss of your nephew and we commend you on your stoicism in exercising your responsibilities as the patriarch of your family. This was an unenviable task, yet one you carried out with dignity, strength, and reserve.

Coming to terms with death is never an easy or pleasant task, but I have always found that it is best to remember a person for the things he or she did during their life, keep that person in your heart and mind, and to try and honor their memory in your actions. If people follow this course with John F. Kennedy, Jr., I think that they will remember a man who tried to make a difference with his life, and hopefully they will be inspired to emulate his commitment to public service.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, for several days, we have waited anxiously for evidence of news I did not want to believe. I did not want to believe that tragedy could come again to the Kennedy family. I did not want to believe that the Bessette family could lose two beautiful daughters in one tragic accident. But as of yesterday afternoon, I was confronted with reality. I am profoundly saddened by the tragic death of John F. Kennedy, Jr. and his wife, Carolyn Bessette Kennedy, and her sister, Lauren.

My relationship with President Kennedy goes back almost 40 years. In 1960, I formed the first Young Democrats organization at Utah State University and worked hard as a young college student for the election of President John F. Kennedy. On the wall in my Senate office, I have a letter from Senator Kennedy written a few weeks written a few weeks before his inauguration as President in 1961. That letter is a thoughtful and considerate note thanking me for my efforts as a campus organizer.

As a young law student in Washington, I worked at night as a Capitol Police Officer. On more than one occasion, I remember President Kennedy's visit to the Capitol. In fact, in my capacity as a police officer, I walked past President Kennedy's casket while it laid in state in the Capitol Rotunda.

For three generations, the Kennedy family has contributed much to the political and cultural life of our Nation. Three members of the Kennedy family have served the Nation as U.S. Senators, and other members have served in the U.S. House of Representatives, the Ambassadorial Corp and other important positions of state. They also serve as leaders, in business and in the world of cultural affairs.

Historians will one day write that the Kennedy family is the most remarkable family in our Nation's history. They have endured tragedy after tragedy. But despite adversity, this family has persevered and found the will and strength to make our nation a better place. Since the presidency of John F. Kennedy, the Kennedy family has become part of the American family. For us in government, the Kennedy family is synonymous with the finest in American politics. They inspire us to dream; they teach use to enjoy life; they make us feel noble.

John F. Kennedy, Jr. had large shoes to fill as the son of a great President and a beautiful, elegant and strong mother. While John F. Kennedy, Jr. was born into the privilege and the fame of his family, he handled it better than anyone I know. His dignity, his sense of style, his connection to ordinary people was unsurpassed.

Finally, I admire the strength and courage of my friend and colleague, Senator TED KENNEDY. Senator KENNEDY is the patriarch of this great family. He has served the Nation and the people of Massachusetts with distinction in the U.S. Senate for almost four decades and the people of Massachusetts have repeatedly shown their gratitude for his service. Senator KENNEDY has given much to this country and yet he has never forgotten the legacy of his distinguished family. To Senator KENNEDY, to the entire Kennedy family, and to the Bessette family, I extend my condolences.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, our State of New York has lost three of its finest citizens. I want to add my voice to the condolences to John Kennedy's sister Caroline, to his entire family, and to his wife's family, as well, for their double loss. Anyone who knew these three people knew they were the finest of New Yorkers and the finest of Americans. They were decent people; they were concerned people; they were people who cared about average folks.

As was noted, John, in particular, would never go by somebody and make them feel they were less significant than he was, despite his enormous wealth, attractiveness, good looks, his grace, and everything else about him. He and his wife were a man and woman of grace. I am told that her sister was as well, although I did not know her.

So we in New York particularly mourn our loss. John had become a real New Yorker, and the Bessette girls always were. There is nothing we can do but pray that they have met their final reward, and that the wounds that are so deep in their families, with God's help, heal quickly.

AMENDMENT NO. 1217

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. What is the business of the Senate now?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is the Gregg amendment No. 1217.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I understand I have a few minutes to speak, and I will take only a few minutes right now and reserve the remainder of the time when I have completed.

I want to be very brief at this point. Mr. President, I want to separate out two aspects of the Gregg amendment: One I wish to compliment him on, and one I am going to remain silent on. The one part I want to compliment him on is that I think the reauthorization of the violent crime trust fund for another 5 years is the single-most significant thing we could do to continue the war on crime.

In 1994, when we introduced the Biden crime bill, which eventually became the crime bill of 1994 which had the 100,000 cops in it, the Violence Against Women Act, and many other things, toward the end of that debate, with the significant help of the senior Senator from Texas, Mr. GRAMM, who didn't like many aspects of my bill, and the senior Senator from West Virginia, Mr. BYRD, who did like the bill, we all agreed on what was viewed as sort of a revolutionary idea—that crime control was the single-most undisputable responsibility of the Federal Government domestically. We can argue about whether there should be welfare. We can argue about whether we should be involved in education. But no one can argue about the requirement of the Government of the United States to make the streets safe. That is the starting point for all ordered society.

So we had an idea, and the three of us joined together to set up a violent crime trust fund. The way we did that was not to raise taxes for America because everybody kept saying: BIDEN, your bill, over the next 5 years, is going to cost over $30 billion. They were right. Putting 100,000 cops on the street costs a lot. Building thousands of new prison cells costs a lot. Spending money on prevention costs a lot. The total of the Biden crime bill was about $30 billion over 5 years in 1994 when I introduced it.

They said: How are we going to pay for it? None of us likes telling the citizens the truth. We all like lying to you, telling you we are going to find a magic way to do this that is not going to cost you any money. The American public wants safer streets, and they have gotten them, I might add. Crime has gone down significantly every year since the crime bill was introduced. I am not claiming it is only because of that, but it is in large part because of that.

So the way we reached this accord was Senator GRAMM, who wanted to see the size of the Federal Government cut even more urgently than—I will speak for myself—even more urgently than I did—we codified, as part of this deal, the agreement that we would let 250,000 Federal employees go. We would shrink the size of the Federal Government. And we did.

The second part of the agreement I wanted was that the paycheck we used to pay the person working in the Justice Department or in the Defense Department or at IRS, who was not going to be rehired, we take John Jones' paycheck and put it into a trust fund to do nothing but deal with violent crime in America. Not an innovative notion—that concept of a trust fund—but it is fairly radical in terms of applying a Social Security-type trust fund—only this does have a lockbox—a trust fund of dedicated revenues to deal with nothing but crime.

The good news about that and the reason I felt so strongly about that at the time I wrote the bill was it is the one place no one can compete. If it is in general funds—and to people who don't share my view about the single-most important responsibility of Government is to maintain order—it is in competition. If it is general revenues, the COPS Program or the prevention programs or building prisons is in competition with money for education, money for the space program, money for the Defense Department, and money for every other function of the Government. By having this trust fund, though, it is not in competition with anything. It is there. It is set aside. It is similar to a savings account to fight crime.

I respectfully suggest that it worked. Now, under the Biden crime bill, which is due to expire this year, the trust fund will end. This special, dedicated pot of money that nobody can compete for, which is not paid for by raising taxes, is paid for by not lowering taxes because it is legitimate to say: BIDEN, if you eliminate the trust funds, you can take John Jones' paycheck, the guy who left the Treasury Department in 1997, and you can give it back to the taxpayers as a tax cut.

That is true. But I choose safe streets over tax cuts. The tax cut would be minuscule, I might add.

So when I heard that my friend from New Hampshire was taking language essentially the same as the Hatch-Biden bill that passed out of here in juvenile justice, the same as the language I have been reintroducing everywhere I can and in every bill I can in the last 4 years, I thought not only is he an enlightened fellow but there has been a bit of an epiphany, that, my Lord, the powerful chairman of the subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee has seen the Lord, has seen the light, and I was overjoyed.

So I said to my staff: I am going to go up there and compliment him. Literally, I said this this morning. They said: Don't be so quick. I said: Why? They said: There is a little kicker here. The kicker is once this amendment that you, BIDEN, have fought so hard for over the last 12 years, even before the crime bill was passed—once it is adopted, there will be a little amendment attached to it that has to do with the way this place functions procedurally, affecting how we can move substantively.

I will not speak to that. I will only say and plead with my friend from New Hampshire, if and when the second issue is resolved, however it is resolved, that he not walk away from the substantive beauty of his amendment as it relates to the trust fund. I don't want to get into a fight with him about legislating on appropriations and second amendments and the rest. I want to say to him publicly that I truly appreciate the practical impact of reestablishing the violent crime trust fund, if we can do it.

I hope in this procedural fight that is above my pay grade right now, which is about to take place, that a casualty of this fight will not end up being us committing for another 5 years to do what we did in the last 5 years—bringing crime in America down. The way to do that is to guarantee that the law enforcement agencies of the United States for 5 years do not have to compete with anybody, and we don't have to raise anybody's taxes. We are taking those old paychecks, and we are going to continue to make a deposit, similar to a trust fund in a family, for cops, for prisons, and for prevention.

Mr. GREGG. If the Senator will yield, I appreciate the kind words of the Senator, and I am duly thankful for those words. As a result, I can tell the Senator I am committed to trying to get this authorization, in some manner, in this bill when it returns to Congress—should this bill ever make it to conference, which is very much an issue at this time.

Mr. BIDEN. I truly appreciate that because I, quite frankly, think—and this is presumptuous of me to say because you know as much about these issues as I do, clearly—this is the single-most significant thing we can do to continue the successful fight against crime. I authored it, so you might say there is pride of authorship here. But I didn't do this alone. The distinguished Senator from Texas and the distinguished Senator from West Virginia were really the ones who made it happen. I hope, in a bipartisan way, we can continue the funding mechanism. I thank him for his comments. If I have any time, I reserve it.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time continue to run on this amendment equally divided, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, how much time is left on the amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Approximately 5 minutes.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, at the end of that 5 minutes, I understand there will be 20 minutes, 10 minutes for the Senator from South Carolina and 10 minutes for myself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHCROFT). Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Dan Alpert, who is a fellow in my office, be granted privileges of the floor during the consideration of S. 1217.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to speak for up to 10 minutes as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I have come to the floor to speak about what I see as a funding shortfall for the 2000 census.

First, I compliment Chairman GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS for their work on this bill. I fully appreciate the very tight budget constraints under which they have been working. However, I want to make sure all Senators also know that, even though we will soon pass this appropriations bill, our work is not yet finished.

Census day, which is April 1 of the year 2000, is less than 9 months away. Still today, at this late date, this bill lacks sufficient funding to adequately conduct the 2000 census.

The Founding Fathers recognized the importance of a fair and accurate count of the population. Article I, section 2 of the Constitution provides that Congress is to conduct a decennial census ''in such Manner as they shall by Law direct.'' In fact, the census is one of the few actions that is mandated by the Constitution.

Let me take a few minutes to discuss the importance of a full and accurate census for all Americans.

Data from the 2000 census will be used to apportion House seats among the States for the 108th through the 112th Congresses. The States also use census data to draw legislative districts for congressional seats as well as for State and local representatives. In addition, Federal, State, and local governments use census information to guide annual distribution of the $180 billion of Federal funds for critical services such as child care, Social Security, Medicare, education, and job training.

By now, we have all heard details of the serious shortcomings of the 1990 census. In fact, at the time of the 1990 census, many of us spent many days and hours trying to ensure that a fair census was taken. Mr. President, 8.4 million people were missed in that census, and 4.4 million were counted twice.

In my State of New Mexico, we suffered the highest undercount of any single State. There were nearly 50,000 New Mexicans left out of the census in 1990 and 20,000 of them were children. The worst undercounts were among our Native American and Hispanic communities. A recent General Accounting Office estimate found that the 1990 census shortchanged my State of New Mexico at least $86 million in much-needed Federal grants.

The Census Bureau has made substantial efforts to avoid a repetition of the undercounts that have hurt my State in the past decade. I applaud the Bureau's efforts to reach out to every resident in New Mexico, particularly the extra efforts they have made to count everyone in the Hispanic and the Native American communities. In Spanish, the motto is: ''Hagarse Contar!''—''make yourself count.'' For Native American communities, I cannot give you the Navajo or Taos version of that, but clearly the slogan is ''generations are counting on this; don't leave it blank.''

So I think everyone agrees that a full and fair census must be our goal. Congress must appropriate all of the funds necessary to produce that full and fair census. The census is not a place where we should be cutting corners. It is time to put partisan politics aside to give the professionals in the Census Bureau the resources they need to get the job done.

Indeed, the appropriations bill on the floor today does provide nearly $2.8 billion for the 2000 census. This is the full amount in the President's original budget. I thank the chairman for providing the Census Bureau's full initial request.

However, as all Senators know, the Supreme Court ruled that under current statutes only a traditional head count may be used for apportionment of House seats among the States. In response to the ruling, the Census Bureau requested an additional $1.7 billion to provide the best census possible using only the traditional method.

The additional funds were requested to cover the Bureau's additional workload, advertising, staffing, and data processing required to perform this actual head count which the Supreme Court has interpreted the Constitution to require.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a detailed list of the additional costs for a head count be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See Exhibit No. 1.)

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, at this point this appropriations bill does not provide any of the additional funding that the Census Bureau has requested in response to the Supreme Court's January ruling. In fairness to the chairman and the ranking member, and the members of the committee, the Census Bureau's revised request did not arrive until very late in the process. Consequently, the subcommittee may not have had sufficient time to review the supplemental request and conduct the normal oversight hearings. I understand the subcommittee intends to consider the Census Bureau's supplemental funding request in the near future. I thank the chairman for moving forward promptly and for working on this issue in a spirit of bipartisanship.

What worries me is that even with the additional funds required for a head count, in all likelihood we will still fall well short of counting everyone and, as in the 1990 census, the undercount will hurt certain population groups the most. However, I have not come to the floor today to debate which enumeration method the Census Bureau should use. Except for apportionment, the Bureau will alleviate the undercount problem by using modern scientific methods. This is the only way to assure that States such as New Mexico will not be shortchanged again.

The Supreme Court ruled the 2000 census must include a full head count. I believe Congress has an obligation to provide all the funds required.

I appreciate the very tight budget situation in which we find ourselves. Time is getting short. Again, I thank the chairman and the ranking member for their continued bipartisan work on this appropriations bill, and I hope that they can move quickly to provide the supplemental funds required for the 2000 census.

ADDITIONAL COSTS FOR A NON-SAMPLING CENSUS

On January 25, 1999, the Supreme Court ruled that the Census Act bars the use of statistical sampling for purposes of apportionment. Additional funds are therefore needed to cover the increased workload of a non-sampling census, principally follow-up visits to an additional 16 million households (50 percent more than under the sampling design).

The President's Budget requests $2.8 billion in FY 2000 to conduct a sampling-based decennial census. The budget amendment will request $1,723 million. Major elements of the $1,723 million are discussed below:

$954M for non-response follow-up.—To get responses from all households that do not answer the mail survey, Census will hire more enumerators and will expand non-response follow-up to ten weeks, four weeks more than expected in the previous census design. Training will be increased by half a day to sustain quality with a larger workforce, and each of the 520 Local Census Offices will be provided additional staff. For purposes of quality control, Census will randomly re-interview addresses to verify the data gathered during non-response follow-up.

$268M for data collection infrastructure.—The larger workforce also requires that Local Census Office have additional space, phone lines, information technology support, supplies, recruiting materials and advertisements, and related items.

$219M for a variety of data collection operations, including:

$96M in rural areas without street addresses (where surveys are delivered to households by Census rather than the Postal Service) for quality checks before the census date and related activities. Census has learned through its address listing program that this workload will be five million household units larger than originally estimated.

$56M for activities including special enumeration methods in remote areas and field verification for the ''Be Counted'' program (which distributes census forms in post offices and other public places) to reduce duplicate and erroneous responses.

$42M for enumerating soup kitchens, shelters, and similar facilities. This work will require advance visits as well as two enumerators per facility at census time.

$25M to redeliver questionnaires where the Postal Service designated forms as undeliverable (e.g., areas where zip code boundaries have changed recently). The Census Bureau anticipates a workload of five million addresses.

$14M to keep all the data processing centers open longer.—The four data processing centers will remain open through September 30, 2000, and process a higher volume of data.

$89M for advertising and promotion efforts.—Additional advertising and promotion, including more materials for schools, non-profits, and Sate and local governments, are intended to increase the speed and rate of response and public cooperation.

Offsets from reduced sample size.—Because the sampling portion of the census will now be based on larger geographic units, the sample size for the Accuracy and Coverage Evaluation (A.C.E.) program (i.e., sampling) can be reduced without compromising accuracy. Reducing the sampling size for A.C.E. will save $214M relative to the request in the President's Budget.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss my concerns about appropriations for the census—an issue that is critical for the State of California and for the Nation.

The Commerce, Justice, and State Appropriations bill for FY 2000 allocates $2.8 billion for census operations. It does not include the additional $1.7 billion that the Administration requested to pay for its revised census plan. This funding shortfall will certainly result in an undercount in the 2000 Census.

In the 1990 Census, California lost $2.2 billion because not everyone was counted, and that's not fair. Although the Administration's request was submitted late in the appropriations process, it is crucial that we equip the Census Bureau with the funds necessary to make the Census 2000 as accurate as possible. How can the Census Bureau do its best to carry out an accurate census in 2000, if they do not have the appropriate resources? We can be sure that the Census 2000 will fail if the Census Bureau does not have the extra $1.7 billion it needs for this operation.

The census has real impact on the lives of people across the Nation. Information gathered from the census count determines how nearly $200 billion of federal funds are allocated. In addition, census information is used by states and local governments to plan schools and highways, and by businesses in making their economic plans.

The 1990 Census undercounted the U.S. population by more than eight million Americans (mostly children, the poor, and communities of color), and more than four million Americans were counted twice. In California alone, the 1990 Census missed more than 834,000 people. A disproportionate number of those undercounted in California were minorities: Nearly half the net undercount—47 percent—were Hispanic-American. Twenty-two percent were African-American and eight percent were Asian Pacific-American. Such differences in census coverage introduce inequities in political representation and in the distribution of funds. Communities from these undercounted ethnic minority populations have been disadvantaged by not receiving the resources they need for various government programs.

A recent study by the General Accounting Office estimates that the economic consequences of the undercount in California caused my state to lose over $2.2 billion in federal funds, more than any other state and more than the additional appropriations requested by the Administration. As a result, the state did not get its fair share of funds for Medicaid, Child Care and Development, Rehabilitation Services, Adoption Assistance, and Foster Care, to mention only a few of the federal grant programs affected. Each person missed in the census cost California $2,660 in Federal funds over the decade.

Some of the top 10 undercounted cities in the 1990 census, two of which are from my state, include:

Los Angeles (138,808); San Diego (32,483); Chicago (68,315); Houston (66,748); Dallas (37,070); Detroit (28,206); and Philadelphia (23,365).

Unless the Census Bureau is allowed to carry out its plan to produce a more accurate count than that which was produced in 1990, California and other states will again lose billions of dollars in federal assistance and will again have to subsidize federal programs with state and local tax dollars.

Since the flawed 1990 population count, the Census Bureau has worked with experts from across the country to design a more accurate census for 2000. The National Academy of Sciences, in three separate reports, concluded that the key to improving accuracy in the census is the use of sound statistical methods. Earlier this year, the Supreme Court ruled that the Census Bureau could not use statistical sampling for apportionment purposes.

Because the Census Bureau cannot use sampling, it has revised its census plan and requested additional appropriations to carry out a full enumeration census, using mail-back census forms and employing an army of bureau workers to personally and repeatedly visit those who do not respond. The Census Bureau's operational plan for carrying out the 2000 Census will be the largest peacetime effort in our nation's history, and will employ more than 860,000 temporary workers.

Mr. President, Congress must make every effort to support the Census Bureau's plan to count all Americans in 2000. The census should not be about politics. This is an issue of fairness, that impacts Americans nationwide. I urge my colleagues to support the additional $1.7 billion appropriation that the Census Bureau needs to carry out an accurate census in 2000. We must do everything we can to ensure that everyone is included in the count, and that our communities are provided with the resources we need.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RULE XVI

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, in order to explain what is not happening now, I will use some leader time to advise Senators what our hopes are and why we are having a quorum at this time.

First of all, we are respecting the request of the Democratic leader to not go forward to the conclusion of the statements and any action or votes on the pending resolution so they can have a conference to discuss how to proceed.

What is involved here is my continuing effort to have the Senate correct a mistake that was made a few years ago with regard to rule XVI. Rule XVI prohibited legislation on an appropriations bill. A precedent was set, and I confess I helped set that precedent. I mistakenly voted to overrule the ruling of the Chair, and so did others, because we were so committed to the issue. It has certainly been a problem for the Senate ever since.

Both sides of the aisle use appropriations bills for every legislative amendment or bill that they might be sponsoring or something they may be harboring to get a vote on. It has really gotten to be a problem in moving appropriations bills forward. The right thing to do for the institution, the right thing to do in terms of legislative sanity, and the right thing to do for the people of this country is to have that precedent established again which would say that Senators cannot offer legislation on appropriations bills without a point of order being in order. Keep in mind, if you get 51 votes, that could be overturned, but I think it will add additional pressure on Senators not to abuse that process.

The matter pending is the Commerce, State and Justice appropriations bill, a very important bill. It provides the funds, obviously, for the Departments of Commerce, State, and Justice. A major portion of law enforcement money is in this appropriations bill. We need to move it forward.

The Senate does not always move with dispatch, but sometimes we do. On an appropriations bill, obviously, involving billions of dollars, Senators want to have a chance to review it carefully and amendments will be in order. Amendments would be in order after the vote that we are about to have or could have reestablishing rule XVI. Senators could offer amendments that relate to the bill, that take money out or put money in, or strike out sections. All of that would still be in order.

Senator DASCHLE and I have basically agreed—in fact, we have exchanged pleasantries on this rule XVI issue several times over the past few years—that this is a precedent we need to go back and correct. We had a colloquy a month or so ago in which we said, yes, this needs to be done, and we need to work together to get it done.

There is concern that the way this was done, the minority had not been given notice. But earlier this summer, the minority was aware we were going to try to reverse this precedent, and 2 or 3 days were spent trying to block us from getting an opportunity.

I don't necessarily feel we have to do it this way or do it on this bill or do it right now, but my question is, if not now, when? If not in this way, in what way?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. LOTT. I will be glad to yield, when I complete the point. I am willing to work with both sides to try to find a way we can get this done. If there are suggestions by the Senator from South Carolina or the leader, I certainly am very interested in that.

I am not interested in any kind of a surprise action, but I am interested in trying to get some results on this which would help Senators on both sides of the aisle get the appropriations bills done. That is my only intent.

I yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. If the distinguished leader will yield, the truth is, on the contrary, we were given notice. We were told this particular violent crime trust authorization was just a place setter, a gatekeeper, so to speak, in the first degree, and we were going to voice vote it.

We were given notice that it was going to be voice voted and not use this particular maneuver to have a time agreement and, thereby, not be able to debate the rule change. So we were given notice in the other direction. We were totally misled. We were totally misled. I resent it.

Let me go back—there is no use in getting all excited. I am going back to Mississippi with the Governor, Ross Barnett. He was the first fellow to take the door off the capitol on Wednesday afternoon, and he lined them all up. Any and every citizen could come in and express his grief. And one day the trustee who cleaned up the capitol stood in line, and he said: I have to go to a funeral; my aunt just died.

And Governor Barnett said: When is that?

He said: Saturday.

I am hastening it along.

He said: All right. You can go Saturday; be back here on Monday.

And the trustee, Phillips, said: Yes, that is the truth. I will be back.

And so 2 months had passed. Phillips hadn't come back, and the press all agreed, let's just jump on Ross and get him this time. And so they said: Governor, wait a minute; where is the trustee and everything else? And old Ross just laid back and said: If you can't trust the trustee, who can you trust?

If I can't trust the chairman and the chairman can't trust the ranking member, then who can I trust? We were given notice wrongly.

Mr. LOTT. If I could reclaim my time, I don't know exactly what was said between the two Members, but I know there is no desire on either side to mislead. I want to make it clear that I have suggested to the chairmen of our subcommittees that we need to find a time and have a way to address this rule XVI issue. It is in the interest of the Senate. It is in the interest of both parties. But I am told that you have to get a time agreement to set up this process.

If we don't do it here, then, unless we get cooperation on both sides, we may never get an opportunity to reinstate rule XVI. I will bet the Senator from South Carolina would like to see us do that. I will bet he would like to have the appropriations bills be appropriations bills. If we are going to do all of our legislating on appropriations bills, let's just get rid of the legislative committees. Let's just all get on appropriations. I would like to be on the Senator's committee. He is on Commerce, and I would enjoy serving there. I would like to be on the Commerce, State, Justice appropriations bill. That would work nicely.

I don't think we need to do that, though. We don't want to do it.

I want to make it clear, my instructions to our chairmen have been: Find a way, find a time for us to get this rule XVI reconsidered and corrected. A mistake was made.

I say to the Senator from South Dakota, who is here now, the distinguished Democratic leader, I am using leader time. I was trying to explain why we haven't been having votes, what is going on. I was reviewing the bidding of why we need to make this change, and I had not attributed any quotes or impugned anybody's integrity in their absence. I was trying to get this process going forward.

That is what is involved. I have been trying to find a way to get this done. I believe the Democratic leader wants to join me in getting this done. We have talked about it privately and publicly. If this is not the time, this is not the way to do it, then I am open to other times or other ways to do it. But this needs to be done so we can get our work done and not have everything in the world offered to every appropriations bill, whether it is Commerce, Transportation, Interior, or Defense. It is not something that is abused just on the Democratic side. As long as this mistake is not corrected, Senators will come in, as they are entitled to, from both sides and offer amendments involving who knows what on transportation—it could be an energy issue on transportation or on energy it could be a defense issue. We need to correct that.

So that is my intent, my goal. And where we have other issues, I know my colleagues on both sides are interested in other issues. I want to say publicly what I said to Senator DASCHLE last night. I am going through the process to appoint conferees to juvenile justice. I am going to ask consent. If it is objected to, I will file cloture today, and we will come back and vote Monday on that issue.

With regard to an amendment—or amendments, I think—with regard to agriculture and the pending problems across the Nation for our farmers, we need to address that. I will work with all Senators to find a way to do that. I think we ought to do it on the agriculture bill. I don't think we ought to do it on Commerce-State-Justice. It will mess up the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill. It will delay it. Let's do it on agriculture.

I am willing to work with Senators on both sides of the aisle to call up the agriculture appropriations bill and have this issue addressed. If there is a problem with it procedurally, we will work to overcome that. I don't think we ought to duck that issue; it is too important. It is important to South Dakota, it is important to Mississippi, and to people all over America.

I am not interested at all in trying to duck issues. I think we ought to do them in the proper way. I have made those commitments to Senator DASCHLE, and I plan to keep them. It will take cooperation on both sides because we never know, as leaders, when one of our worthy Members will come swooping in with an objection. We had a unanimous consent agreement locked up and ready to sign off; in fact, it was done actually on the campaign finance issue. A Senator had not had a chance to look at it and he objected. That is his right. Basically, we had it all done.

So we have to work with Senators on both sides who have particular problems. If we have one Senator who objects that we had not anticipated, that presents a problem. If we work together, we can get it done. That is what I am trying to do. I would like to get the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill done. The chairman and ranking member overcame a lot of things and got agreements on a lot of problems in that bill. But their problem is all the extraneous, nongermane legislative stuff we are going to see drift in here to be thrown up on their bill. Every appropriations bill has somewhere between 40 and 100 amendments, and half of them are legislating on an appropriations bill. Let's correct this problem.

Senator DASCHLE has been kind enough to wait while I went through those things. I think it answers some of the questions he and his Members have. I thought it would be better to go ahead and address them.

Mr. President, parliamentarily, how can we proceed at this time? I have a limit on my leader time.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I would be prepared to use my leader time if the Senator is finished.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota is recognized.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I thank the majority leader for his explanation and the discussion we have had this morning. I think it is fair to say there is no question we were misled about the situation we are in today. That is undeniable. I had the opportunity to discuss matters yesterday with regard to the legislative schedule with our majority leader, and this did not come up. We were misled with regard to what the intent of the procedure would be. So, clearly, there is a bitter taste in the mouths of the minority as we find ourselves in this situation this morning.

The problem is not legislating on appropriations; the problem is legislating. We are not able to legislate in large measure because on virtually every bill cloture is filed prior to the time amendments are offered. Every bill. And so what has happened is the minority is relegated to a set of circumstances that requires us to use whatever vehicle becomes available. That isn't the way it used to be, but that is the way it has been for the last few years.

So I am sympathetic, as I have noted to the majority leader, with this institutional concept of going back to the time when we respected appropriations as appropriations bills and also respected the authorization process. But the Senate virtually has eliminated the authorization process, in part, because we don't have the opportunity to offer amendments once authorization bills come to the floor. So we have been forced to use the appropriations bills as authorizing, appropriating, legislating, the whole gamut, the whole array, the universe of legislative actions that come with our responsibility. So I have indicated to the majority leader that I would like to find a way to overturn the mistake made by Republicans 4 years ago. I am glad they have acknowledged it was a mistake, but I must say, since that mistake was made, we have been driven into a new set of legislative circumstances that make it very difficult to do the people's business.

Senator BYRD noted in our caucus that it isn't just this particular issue that is troubling. Frankly, there are a number of other issues. One I will mention is the scope of conferences. The majority overruled the Chair on the scope of conference issue. The majority now has the ability in a conference committee to put anything in a bill, whether or not it was added on the floor of the House or Senate. Anything. It is wide open. That, too, is something we ought to be looking at. There is a huge array of problems, procedurally, I think we ought to address. This is one of them. It seems to me in that context we ought to be looking at whether or not overturning the Chair now is what we need to do.

I will say the majority leader has indicated a willingness to work with us in addressing these problems. I am personally concerned about the agriculture appropriations emergency supplemental we have to pass. Once a point of order is reestablished, we are completely locked out. There is no other way to do it. So from both a practical, as well as a procedural, and, frankly, a personal point of view, I am troubled by how we got here this afternoon.

I will also note that one of our colleagues who uses the rules as successfully as anybody ever has in all 220 years of our history, the senior Senator from Massachusetts, is not here. How ironic it would be that while he is tending to family matters, we took away his rights. So I suggest to the majority leader that we schedule another time for a good debate about all the things we should do.

I will work with my caucus to find the time, and we will need to have the votes. We know how the votes—I am quite sure I know—will turn out.

I am prepared to work with the majority leader to schedule a day, but not this afternoon. This is not the moment, for all the reasons I have outlined. I think we deserve an opportunity to debate this and all of its ramifications, and why it is that we find ourselves here in the first place, and how we might work—as the majority leader has noted, cooperatively. Cooperation is a two-way street. I want to cooperate with him. And I will in every way that I can. But I hope the majority will cooperate with the minority in giving us an opportunity to offer amendments and not fill the tree and not play the parliamentary game out to the extreme so that we are forced to do things we would rather not do.

I guess that would be my suggestion—that we find the time, perhaps early next week, to vote. We would agree to a timeframe within which this could be debated and a vote set.

I would be happy to discuss either on or off the floor a refinement of that recommendation with the majority leader.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Or, Mr. President, I will reclaim any leader time I might have so that I can respond and pick up on what the Senator said.

We are somewhat on the horns of a dilemma. If we take extended time to debate those issues, then it further delays our ability to get appropriations bills done. Conversely, if we don't do it soon, all of the appropriations bills will hopefully be done, and we still will not have addressed this issue.

So I would like to pick up on what Senator DASCHLE said.

The suggestion was made that we not do this here but that we do it early next week.

I would like to discuss the possibility of having this debate on Monday or Tuesday morning and having a vote on this issue.

Is that something that would be acceptable to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I would want to consult first with the senior Senator from Massachusetts to be sure he could be back that early. I assume he might be back by then. I would want to consult, as well, with my caucus. But that is in keeping with the recommendation that I made.

I am not averse necessarily to doing it on Monday or Tuesday, and to setting, as I noted earlier, a timeframe within which we could debate it and vote.

But, again, this is a matter which I think may require a little more consultation than the time we have this afternoon.

Mr. LOTT. If I could respond to that and make an observation, if we don't do it Monday or Tuesday, we will be under the rule that we passed for the budget reconciliation provisions. Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday will be on the reconciliation-tax cut bill. If we don't do it Monday or Tuesday, then it is not done next week.

We agreed that we wanted to get this done, but we have not had the time to get together and decide how we were going to get it done.

So I am in the position that if I give the Democratic leader notice that we want to get this done, he blocks it, or if we set it up to get it done without advance notice, the Democratic leader says, well, that is not fair.

We need to get it done. Everybody knows we need to get it done.

I would propose publicly that we do this Monday and vote Tuesday, and I will work with the Democratic leader on the specifics of getting that done early next week so that we will not go through this on the agriculture bill, on the transportation bill, on the Interior bill, on the HUD, and the Veterans Administration bill, and bill after bill.

I think that would be timely. I would be willing to go forward with the CJS without forcing the vote on overruling the Chair at this point but with the understanding that we are going to find the time so we can get this done.

Can I get that commitment from the Democratic leader?

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, the leader can get that commitment in spirit.

Let met give the leader three qualifications, and I am sure the leader will accommodate me on all three qualifications.

First, if Senator KENNEDY has to be away for family business or personal family matters—the tragedy that he is facing—certainly the majority leader would understand that, and I hope he would accommodate Senator KENNEDY's needs as we schedule.

Second, he noted on more than one occasion, privately and publicly, that he is willing to work with us to ensure that, even if the Chair is overturned, we will find a way—and there are no misgivings about finding a way on either side, I hope—to pass an emergency agriculture appropriations measure. Clearly we will be denied that once this vote occurs. So I know—he told me privately and again alluded to it this morning—that he will work with us to do that.

Third, it would seem to me we would have to have a period of time—no less, at least, than 5 or 6 hours, 3 hours equally divided—to discuss this matter and then have the vote.

If he is willing to accommodate this Senator on those three matters, I would certainly, for the record right now, indicate my willingness to work with him to set a time certain for the vote.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I don't think we need 6 hours, 3 hours equally divided on each side, to discuss this.

What that guarantees is that we wipe out another day next week and we further delay doing the people's business on the appropriations bills.

But if that is what is insisted on, if this is an effort—again, that appears to me to be eating up time so we don't get our work done, but if that is what it takes, I am prepared to consider that.

Let me go back to a couple of things.

No. 1, every Senator in this body knows I am very meticulous about trying to be sympathetic to Senators' needs when they have family problems or deaths or religious holidays. Nobody can take that away from me. I would never do anything to take away any Senator's rights while he is attending to a very sad, personal family problem.

Having said that, I don't view this as having taken something away from Senator KENNEDY or anybody else. I think this is giving something back to the Senate, and that is the ability to get our work done.

But if that is what is taking place here, if you believe you don't want to do this while he is involved obviously in a very necessary family responsibility, I will honor that.

Also, I must say everybody in this Chamber knows I work very hard to keep my word. It is used against me sometimes on both sides. I try to get Senators to vote on Mondays and Fridays. You wouldn't believe the effort that is put underway by Senators on both sides for that not to happen.

If we don't get our work done, you are going to say, well, why didn't we get our work done? While I am trying to get the work done, sometimes with the Democratic leader's help, Senators try to find a way not to vote on Mondays and Fridays.

I don't know how in the world you get your work done if you do not do anything on Mondays and Fridays, and you have people show up and say: Gosh, I want to vote in the middle of the day Wednesday. How do you get this thing done?

In terms of keeping my word and how it has been used against me, for instance, being able to offer amendments, I said, yes, we will go to juvenile justice. And I said we are doing it on a particular date with the clear impression that we would get it done within that week in 4 days. It took 2 weeks. After a lot of going back and forth, we worked out an agreement on Patients' Bill of Rights, but we kept our word. We got it done. We had the debate, and it worked out fine, I thought.

But those 2 weeks took away 2 weeks that should have been spent on appropriations bills. But I kept my word. I really believe my word was used against me.

I have to try to force action on these things because we agreed we were going to deal with rule XVI. We have to find time to do that.

We agreed we would work out something where we would have a Social Security lockbox. We haven't done it. We have to find a way to do that. The American people want a Social Security lockbox. Everybody agreed that we need it. Let's get it done. I don't think we need to do it with 75 amendments in 45 hours. It is a little procedural fix that we can agree on with regard to Social Security being protected.

I filed cloture on those bills because every bill which we ought to bring up, somebody is threatening to filibuster it. Sometimes it is on our side. Sometimes it is on the other side.

Intelligence authorization: We wanted to try to get that up, and get the Department of Energy issue considered. We had a heck of a time getting it up to get it completed. Yet when we got through it, it passed 96–1.

Transportation appropriations bill: I want to get the transportation bill up. I am told in advance now that we are going to filibuster that.

What option do you have but to file cloture?

They don't want to bring it up because there is a provision in there that a couple or half dozen Senators do not like, or four Senators.

Let's get it up. Let's debate it. Let's have a vote on it and then move forward.

In fact, then, at that point, if Senators do not like the result, they have the option to filibuster. But when I am told if you try to bring up the transportation appropriations bill we are going to filibuster the motion to proceed, what option do you have?

There are explanations for these things.

I am interested in legislating. But I also have responsibilities as majority leader to legislate on issues the majority is interested in. I also have a responsibility—I think both leaders have a responsibility, all leaders—to get our work done.

Included right up front on that list of getting our work done is passing the appropriations bills.

I am doing my job. Most of these appropriations bills I don't particularly like, to tell you the truth. It doesn't necessarily make me feel real good to be worrying about all the appropriations bills, but it is part of the job, part of the process.

There is not a single bill that comes through here where a single Senator likes everything in it, but we move the process along. I can think of a whole bunch of things in State, Justice, and Commerce I would like to knock out, and a lot of things I would like to add, but I will not do that because the Senator from New Hampshire and the Senator from South Carolina put their work in there, it was passed by the committee, probably unanimously, and we ought to move it forward.

I will be glad to work with the Senator to try to lock in a time next week to get this issue debated. I am glad to debate it. I don't know how many times we will hear: You Republicans caused this problem. I am saying: All right, OK, we acknowledge it. Let's fix it.

I bet when the vote comes, it will be overwhelming. Both sides know this needs to be corrected. Let's get on with it. I don't know what the final vote will be, but I will be surprised if it is not 80–20. It will probably be more than that, 90–10. Why not do it? It is the right thing to do. It is good for the institution.

I thank Members for their patience while I responded. If we are ready, we can go forward and set up a time to have this issue debated and voted on. Hopefully, it will be within a reasonable timeframe.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I have to respond to a couple of points made by my friend, the distinguished majority leader.

First, with regard to the Social Security lockbox, if ever our point was made on a particular bill, it is this one. This is exactly why we are here. I am amused and completely appreciate what it is Senator LOTT has just said once more: Why do we need so many amendments? This is a simple little idea—Social Security lockbox. Why do we need so many amendments? This is just a simple idea.

Mr. President, a simple idea can have profound consequences. There may be one or there may be more than one way to enact a simple idea.

Senator LAUTENBERG offered on the Senate floor an agreement that said we will limit ourselves—and here we are again, the minority—we will limit ourselves to 12 amendments. Our Republican colleagues objected. That wasn't good enough. Twelve amendments was too many.

We find ourselves, time and time and time again, not filibustering a bill. I do not remember the last time the minority filibustered a bill because we didn't want it to pass. The only time I can recall we have filibustered—and fortunately we have never lost—is on our procedural right to offer amendments. That is the only time, that I am aware of, we have fought, because our rights need to be protected. I am compelled to set the record straight, and I am compelled again to respond. This is why we are in this box.

Ideally, what will happen is, a bill could get laid down, Democrats and Republicans could offer amendments; if it got out of line, Senator LOTT and I could say: People, we have to get this bill done. We have to get this bill done. Will you limit yourself? Let's develop a finite list of amendments.

Often that works. I have some of the best lieutenants I could hope to have, and when I sic them on the caucus, it is amazing how responsive the caucus is. It works. I come back and report to the majority leader, we can do this in 15 amendments, and we can do this tonight, and it works. That is one model.

The other model is, we are presented with a confrontation. A bill is filed, the tree is filled, a cloture vote is taken. That is the other model. That model doesn't work, and it will never work. I don't care whether it is an appropriations bill or an authorization bill, we will not allow that to work.

We can continue to play that out until we die of old age. It is not going to work, not as long as we are here. If we are going to get cooperation, then I am willing to look at that Social Security lockbox again. Twelve amendments doesn't seem too many to me. Yes, there may be some irrelevant amendments—not irrelevant, but nongermane amendments. They are certainly relevant to us.

I think the Republicans demonstrated last week, with the Patients' Bill of Rights, they can deal with it if we offer amendments. They can deal with it. They are in the majority. They have the votes to defeat our proposals. I am not sure I know what they are afraid of.

In any case, I have spoken long enough. As the majority leader has noted, the time has come to move on. I am willing to work with him to make the most of the time remaining this week and certainly next week.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, briefly, I note that in the presence of the President I was led to believe that, on the Social Security issue, two or three amendments would be enough on the lockbox. Then I am told later, well, we need 12 or 15. That is what I have to deal with all the time.

We can go back and forth as to what happened. We need a Social Security lockbox. We need to find a way to do it. The Senate is the only impediment to having that done.

What I propose to do with regard to rule XVI is ask consent —I am not doing it now—that when the Senate convenes on Monday, the 26th, we proceed to the original resolution to be placed on the calendar by the majority leader, immediately following the asserting of this agreement, and the resolution be considered under the following time constraints—this is the resolution; obviously, it is very short and very simple—that the resolution be limited to 3 hours for each leader or his designee, no amendments or resolutions be in order, and final adoption be in order prior to recess or adjournment of the Senate on Monday. We could have that vote at the same time we have the vote on the juvenile justice conferees cloture, if necessary.

I ask the Democratic leader to consider that. If the Senator can check to see when Senator KENNEDY will be back—I talked to him myself early this week, and I had the impression he would be back early next week, but I didn't press him in terms of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, whenever.

That is, I think, a fair way to do this. That is how it was outlined to me. I think we ought to do it. Hopefully, we can make some progress now on the underlying commerce bill.

Mr. LOTT. I ask unanimous consent to lay aside the pending amendment until 4 p.m. today, with no call for the regular order served to bring back the amendment before that time. That way, we will have time to talk, and meanwhile our managers can go forward.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, while the two leaders are on the floor, the original point of order was made by me, so I believe I have a right to talk about this.

I am not going to talk about the substance of the amendment but talk about our two leaders. Speaking for Democrats and Republicans, we are very proud of our leadership. The majority leader and the minority leader, I think, do an outstanding job of representing their respective interests. The legislative branch of government depends on these two men leading their respective caucuses.

We should be doing less procedural battling and more substantive battling. I hope the majority leader hears what the Democrats are saying. We want to legislate. We are not trying to stop anything from going through. We want our rights to be protected. We want the ability to offer amendments. That is all we are saying.

This was proven in the very good debate we had. We were allowed to have the debate as a result of the work done by our minority leader. I think it is important we have more issues debated here. I hope during this weekend the two leaders realize, as I know they do, the importance of having the Senate act as the Senate and that we start debating substantive issues.

I think this colloquy between the two leaders was very substantive and informative. I hope it will lead to a much better and more productive Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GORTON). Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BUNNING). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be 2 hours of debate, equally divided, on the amendment that is about to be offered by the Senator from Delaware.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. No second degrees.

Mr. HOLLINGS. No points of order, no second degrees.

Mr. GREGG. No second degrees. And at the end of that time, we are prepared to accept it.

Mr. HOLLINGS. We are prepared to accept it. And as I said, no points of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, let me begin by thanking the chairman of the subcommittee and the ranking member. This is a bit unusual. I am violating what the Senator from South Carolina would recognize as the Russell Long rule.

When I first came to the Senate, Russell Long, the distinguished Senator from Louisiana, was chairman of the Finance Committee. One day I walked up to him because I had an amendment to a finance bill. He said: I will accept it. I said: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Then I got back to my seat in the back row, and a staff person who had worked here longer than I had—I had only been here about 3 months—said: Senator, you really want a rollcall vote on that.

So I went ahead and I did my little spiel. Then I asked for the yeas and nays. The roll was called, and Russell Long voted against the amendment and encouraged others to vote against it. It was defeated. I walked up to him and said: Mr. Chairman, my Lord, you told me just 15 minutes ago you would accept my amendment. He said: Yes, I would accept your amendment. But I did not say anything about a rollcall vote.

We are not going to have, I hope, a rollcall vote on this amendment. I want to thank the chairman of the subcommittee for accepting the amendment. I apologize to him for speaking on something that is going to be accepted. But I think this is of such consequence that it is important to remind our colleagues of what we are about to redo.

A few weeks ago, the Appropriations Committee zeroed out all funding for the COPS Program, nearly closing the doors of what I believe to be the most successful Federal-State cooperative law enforcement program of our time.

This amendment corrects the committee's elimination of the funding for the COPS office in the fiscal year 2000. It restores funding for the COPS office to perform many of the significant functions in support of law enforcement—particularly in getting more cops out on the street.

In doing so, it supersedes—or, basically, makes void—the language in the committee report on pages 62 and 63 that would have directed the Justice Department to take steps to dismantle the COPS office. Under this amendment, the COPS office will remain alive and well for fiscal year 2000.

I am pleased today we have put aside partisan politics in support of this effective law enforcement program. Let me make it clear, although some of my colleagues on the Republican side worry a little bit about this being a Democratic program, it is not a Democratic program. It is a bipartisan program. It is a program where even this amendment has garnered the cosponsorship of four Republicans and the commitment of another several to vote for it. I predict there will be more Republicans to vote for it as well.

I am glad that we have listened to the police officers on the street, the police chiefs, the prosecutors, the mayors, the citizens of our communities, and our constituents about why they think the COPS Program has worked so well.

As I said, today, joined by 42 of my colleagues, including four Republicans, I offer this amendment to restore the COPS Program for fiscal year 2000. This amendment restores $495 million in funding for the COPS Program for the year 2000.

This is just one-third of the $1.43 billion that was appropriated in 1999. But it preserves this vitally important program that has thus far funded over 100,000 cops in communities across the country.

Here is how it will work: $170 million will come from unobligated balances for this fiscal year for the COPS office; $5 million in unobligated funds from the Bureau of Prisons; $140 million are shifted back to the COPS office for programs that it already has successfully administered in the past.

These include the Cops Connect Program, which provides equipment and upgrades so that officers from different jurisdictions can talk to each other and share vital information; it also includes targeted funding for equipment that protects police officers, such as bulletproof vests; and for training to identify and take down methamphetamine and other drug laboratories.

And $180 million are put back into the COPS Program to fund the hiring of up to an additional 2,400 officers in our public school system.

Most importantly, this amendment restores to the COPS office its primary function: putting more cops on the street. Under this amendment, there will be funding sufficient to put 1,500 additional local law enforcement officers out on the streets in our communities.

I think we can all agree that this is a small price to pay for lower crime rates, safer communities, safer schools, more advanced law enforcement equipment, and more responsive police departments.

I am thrilled to be joined by so many of my colleagues. As I said, there are 42 cosponsors. I ask unanimous consent that a list of the cosponsors be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. BIDEN. It is a challenge for us to apply the lessons we have learned over the past years. More cops on the street means crime goes down. Law enforcement knows this. The American public knows this. We know this. And we must act now.

We all recognize the importance to communities across our country of ensuring the continued success of lowering crime rates.

Look at this chart. Since the COPS Program began as part of the 1994 crime bill, arrests have gone way up.

This is total arrests. Look at all the support we have on this. All the law enforcement organizations endorse this program. The mayors endorse this program. I thank, by the way, these organizations for their continued support of the COPS Program and for their extraordinary help with this amendment in particular.

To the law enforcement community, I say thank you. We should all say thank you. We could not have done this without your hard work and support, your phone calls, your letters. Your personal appearances have resonated with all of us. You are always on the frontline on this, and you have always taken a stand against crime. You should be proud.

I am proud of them. In a recent survey done for the National Association of Police Organizations, 85 percent of those surveyed think we should extend the COPS Program. The American people don't want the program to end. Although we do not extend the COPS Program beyond its authorized period through this fiscal year, my friend from New Hampshire and my friend from South Carolina know that I have continually attempted to extend the program. I will be back in another fora trying to extend the COPS Program so that we continue this beyond the year 2000.

For years, when I first wrote this crime bill, back in the early 1980s, we would debate this, and we would debate it and debate it. The editorial writers in this country, primarily from the most established newspapers, were very critical of my notion that we should vastly increase the number of cops. They would write editorials. One—I think it was one of the major papers, the New York Times, Washington Post, LA Times, but I don't recall which—said: Been there, done that.

Well, the truth is, we were never there. The truth is, for the previous 20 years, before the Biden crime bill, we did not add appreciably to the number of cops in America. If my memory serves me, in the 20 largest cities in America over the previous 20 years, although crime had grown significantly, we only added about 1 percent more cops than existed 20 years earlier. We had never done this before.

After all the hearings I held as chairman of the Judiciary Committee, being exposed over all those years to the leading criminologists in the country, the psychologists, psychiatrists, law enforcement officers, social workers, all the experts, I came away convinced of only a few things.

One is, if there is a cop on one corner of the street and no cop on the other corner and a crime is going to be committed on a corner, it is going to be committed where the cop is not. Sounds pretty basic. It is basic. This single most important reason why, beyond the sheer numbers, this COPS Program has worked, in my view, is because in order to get Federal money to hire local cops under this program, local law enforcement departments had to decide, as my friend from Virginia knows, to set up community policing. When he was Governor, he talked about this. When he was Governor, a lot of the Governors and mayors knew about this.

It was hard to do. Cops didn't want to get out of their cars and walk on the beat, figuratively and literally. There was resistance. So we said: Look, if you want another cop paid for in part by the Federal Government, your whole department has to be a community policing department. You have to go back and interface with the community. You have to know who owns the corner store. You have to know who lives in the house in the middle of the block. You have to know where the drug trafficking takes place. You have to know where the gymnasium is where the kids hang out. You have to know where the swimming pool is. You have to know the people.

And so one of the reasons, I argue, for the extraordinary success of the program is not merely the added numbers of cops but because of the way in which they are required to utilize their existing police forces in order to get any new cops.

Now, granted, in one sense this is a small victory in that it only continues the program through the time it was intended to continue it.

I hope we can reach some bipartisan consensus before we get to fiscal year 2001 to extend, as my friend from New Hampshire has proposed in an amendment we will vote on later today, the violent crime trust fund that pays for these cops, the Federal share. I hope we can get some bipartisan support on extending the program that continues to put more local law enforcement on the ground with the help of Federal dollars.

I will reserve the remainder of my time in a moment, but I want to make it clear that I truly appreciate the willingness of the Senator from New Hampshire to reinstate, at least in part, the funding for this program which would allow the office to continue through the year 2000. I see my friend has risen, and I am happy to yield to him at this time.

Mr. GREGG. I thank the Senator from Delaware. I appreciate his fine comments. We are going to accept his amendment at the point when all the folks who want to speak on it have had an opportunity.

Mr. BIDEN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware is recognized.

Mr. BIDEN. I yield 10 minutes to my friend from New York.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York is recognized.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Ben Lawsky, a detailee from the Judiciary Committee, be granted full floor privileges during the remainder of consideration of S. 1217.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I am proud to join my colleagues, the Senator from Delaware and the Senator from Virginia, in offering this amendment to preserve the COPS Program for fiscal year 2000.

Three days ago, we received the latest news on crime in America, and the news is good. According to the latest National Crime Victimization Survey, nonfatal, violent crime fell 7 percent from 1997. Other figures recently released by the FBI indicate that murders dropped about 8 percent between 1997 and 1998. Overall, the Nation's crime rate has fallen more than 21 percent since 1993 and now is at its lowest level since 1973.

My home State of New York has been a shining example of crime reduction. Crime is down from one end of New York State to the other. In Buffalo, it has fallen by more than 30 percent; in Albany, it is down 24 percent; in Nassau County, it is down 24 percent; in New York City, overall crime declined 44 percent and murder dropped more than 60 percent.

Why the continued good news on crime? Well, I would be happy to concede to those on the left that a strong economy has something to do with it. I would be happy to concede to those on the right that tougher punishment for violent offenders and aggressive crime fighting by both Republican and Democratic mayors have played a significant role. But just as clearly, enhanced community policing and the COPS Program deserve their share of the credit.

I say to anyone in America, ask your local police about the drop in crime in the neighborhoods they patrol. Ask the local neighborhood and civic associations. They will tell you, inevitably, about new partnerships between police and neighborhood residents. They will tell you about successful efforts to deter vandalism, loitering, and disorderly conduct—the seeds of more serious neighborhood deterioration.

As pleased as we all should be about the crime fighting successes of the past years, now is no time to stand pat. Old and new law enforcement challenges require us to maintain our vigilance and our efforts. Indeed, the war on crime is sadly a war that never ends. The surest way to prevent a return to the bad old days of untamed streets and unsafe schools is to do what works: Yes, lock up violent offenders; yes, invest in prevention programs; and yes, hire and retain community policing officers.

When I authored the COPS Program in the House of Representatives and worked with the Senator from Delaware—we worked in tandem then because I was a House Member and he a Senator—I knew that not only the increased number of police, but the change in the type of policing, to community policing, was going to work. And work it did.

There is almost unanimous agreement from law enforcement, from people on both sides of the criminal justice argument, on the left and on the right, that the COPS Program has been a shining success. So when I read the words in the committee report, ''The Committee directs that from within available funds the COPS office close by the end of the fiscal year 2000,'' I was distressed, perturbed, and I was shocked because this is a Government program that works. This is not an ideological program, and it has such broad support.

The police agencies, the mayors, and town councils that have put COPS funds to such good use over the past 6 years felt the same way. I have received many letters from New York police chiefs and mayors over the past few weeks about this appropriations bill, and every one contains a similar refrain: Please keep the COPS Program in business.

As the Senator from Delaware knows, we made special efforts when we wrote the law to make sure small towns, villages, and counties were included. There was a special set-aside so that not all the money would go to the big cities. I was then a city representative—and, of course, I represent the whole State—representing the people who were most fervently for the program, the small town mayors and local county people, who could not have afforded these police but for the COPS Program.

It also has let us accomplish so much. In addition to hiring officers, it purchased new technology and implemented innovative programs to stop domestic violence, all because we created in this program the flexibility that if you could take cops off the desks and put them on the streets, patrolling the streets, it would work.

Well, 10,505 newly funded officers later, even the most skeptical New Yorkers—and we have many skeptics in our State—are converts to the cause of the COPS Program.

I am proud of this amendment which would keep the COPS Program in business for this fiscal year, negating the report language to the contrary. That is certainly an improvement over the committee's bill, which didn't provide any funding of the program. At the same time, I believe the COPS Program deserves even greater funding for fiscal year 2000 than provided in this amendment because fighting crime is a key to building strong communities. In my State, many of the communities have rebounded, including New York City, because it is much safer.

So I believe it should be a top priority for this Congress to reauthorize the COPS Program. Senator BIDEN and I already tried to do it as an amendment to the juvenile justice bill. We will soon introduce, along with the Senator from Virginia, Mr. ROBB, a freestanding bill to reauthorize the program, and we will not rest until we get the job done.

But this is an important step forward. I congratulate my friends from Delaware and Virginia for their hard work on the issue. I also thank my friend, the Senator from South Carolina, Mr. HOLLINGS, for his invaluable assistance with this amendment. Again, we will not rest until we get the job done.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to my friend from Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. ROBB. Mr. President, first let me thank my friend and colleague from Delaware, as well as my friend and colleague from New York, for their support.

As a cosponsor of the Biden amendment, I would like to express my strong support for the effort to preserve and restore funding for the COPS Program.

I believe many of our colleagues share my view that protecting our Nation's citizens from all enemies, foreign and domestic, is a critical obligation of the Federal Government. We are committed to try to make all of our communities safer from the threat of crime. Today, by supporting this amendment and the COPS Program, all of us can make good on this commitment.

The Biden amendment will prevent the COPS Program from expiring as the underlying bill provides. Over the next year, the $495 million in funding provided by the amendment will put 1,500 new officers on the beat, hire 2,400 school resource officers to reduce violence in schools, keep hundreds more officers out in their communities rather than behind their desks, purchase bulletproof vests, and provide better communications equipment and technology. In short, this amendment will make a difference to the safety of our communities.

I am particularly gratified to see the resources devoted to school safety. Even before the tragic killings in schools across the Nation, I worked to amend the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill in 1997 to permit the use of COPS funding for school safety grants. The following year, with the help of Senators GREGG and HOLLINGS, we expanded that program. As a result, this year more than $167 million in school safety grants, including funding to hire school resource officers, is going to communities across the Nation.

More generally, the Community-Oriented Policing Services program, or COPS, is one of our best strategies for fighting the war on crime. The rationale is straightforward, and the results are impressive. In the simplest terms, COPS funding means more police on the beat, which means less crime.

The dynamics of COPS in community policing are, of course, more complex. The goal is not simply more bodies but better neighborhoods. By giving law enforcement the resources to actively engage their communities, we develop trust and better communications; we allow officers to be proactive and prevent crime before it occurs.

The bottom line is that the COPS program works. This Nation has the lowest crime rate in 25 years. The murder rate is at the lowest point in 30 years.

In my home State of Virginia, we provided funding to put nearly 2,000 additional officers on the streets. As we have added those officers, we have seen a drop in crime. Between 1992 and 1997, murders declined by 17 percent in Virginia Beach, by 30 percent in Norfolk, and by 48 percent in Newport News.

With these statistics, it is not surprising how many are urging the Senate to step up to the plate again. My colleagues have already mentioned the many organizations asking us to continue COPS funding, including the Fraternal Order of Police and the United Conference of Mayors.

In a letter to Majority Leader LOTT, Sheriff Dan Smith, president of the National Sheriffs Association, stated:

It is imperative to effective crime control that the COPS program survive. It is a program that is vital to effective law enforcement, and to sheriffs in both rural and urban jurisdictions.

I urge my colleagues to support the Biden amendment. We should not be satisfied with the lowest crime rate in 25 years. We should work for the lowest crime rate ever. This important amendment will help us to achieve that goal.

I again thank my distinguished colleague from Delaware for his continued leadership in this important area. I am delighted to work with him and with others, and I look forward to the continuation of this vital program.

I yield any time I may have remaining to the principal sponsor of the amendment, the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. I thank the Senator from Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I now yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Iowa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished colleague, the Senator from Delaware, for yielding me this time.

I am pleased to be a cosponsor of this important amendment to restore funding for the successful COPS Program. We know it works and it should be continued. Later on, I will also be offering an amendment to restore funding for the Edward Byrne Memorial Grant Program—another vital resource for local law enforcement.

I voted against this bill in committee for one main reason: it drains the critical funding needed by our local and state law enforcement to help them do their jobs—to fight the drug problems in our communities and to keep our streets safe. The bill before us cuts the Byrne grants by more than 18 percent. The local law enforcement block grant is cut by 24 percent. Neither of these cuts makes sense.

Our communities need them to beef up their drug and violent crime task forces. These grants go straight to the state and local agencies. Why would they be cut? Violent crime has gone down, but does that mean we should give up the fight? Drugs and crime are a continuous battle and now is not the time to let up.

I've received dozens of letters from Iowa police chiefs and sheriffs describing the kind of setbacks that they would suffer if these cuts go through.

This amendment which restores just about a third of the fiscal year 1999 level funding for Community Oriented Policing Services Program, would be a good first step to giving our local communities the support they need to do their jobs. Police chiefs and sheriffs from across the country have told us loud and clear—the COPS Program is one of the 1994 Crime Act's most effective programs.

Consider this: Serious crime is retreating all across the United States. Since the COPS Program began, violent crime across the nation has dropped 21 percent—in part because local law enforcement used these federal grants to hire more officers to keep our streets safe, and to upgrade their operations with new technology. In Iowa, the murder rate has plummeted 34 percent from last year. Now is not the time to cut back on our efforts to fight illegal drugs and violent crime.

Rural America will pay the heaviest price if this amendment is not adopted. The COPS Program made a special commitment to include small towns and rural areas. Half of all COPS funding goes to agencies serving jurisdictions of under 150,000 in population. And its making a difference. I hear it all the time from sheriffs and police chiefs throughout Iowa.

I got a letter just the other day from Police Chief Douglas Book of Forest City, Iowa—a town of 4,500 people. He said zero-funding COPS would be detrimental to his operation. He wrote:

* * * COPS, by the addition of one officer, has allowed us to provide a school resource officer for 20 hours per week. Something that was non-existent before COPS. Through the addition of the COPS funded officer we were able to be proactive in various areas of our community. One very successful operation resulted in a 75 percent drop in juvenile assaults * * * This funding literally deals with the quality of life in America. Results, not politics, must be the guiding factor * * * COPS works. Fund it. [Douglas Book, Forest Hill Police Chief, 6/23/99]

Here's another letter I received from Coralville, Iowa Police Chief Barry Bedford:

Without the COPS Program, we would not have been able to keep up with the tremendous increase in the calls for service and crime-related activities, nor would we be able to obtain the vitally needed mobile data computers. This is a program that needs to continue if we are going to keep our communities safe.

The chiefs are right. Community policing works. It's a flexible program that is responsive to law enforcement needs. More cops on the beat have an undeniable effect on crime and a community's sense of security.

Funds to hire more than 100,000 officers have been awarded since 1994 by the COPS to more than 11,300 state and local law enforcement agencies across the nation. That's more than half the policing agencies in the country. As a result, these officers are joining agencies that serve more than 87 percent of the American public.

Iowa alone has received over $37 million to hire 544 officers. COPS funds have also been used to put computers in police cars in Dubuque, help officers in Grundy Center deal with vandalism and help Waterloo police fight drugs. COPS grants have helped community and county police departments hire civilians to do paperwork so more officers can be out on the streets. In short, COPS has made our streets and communities safer.

It makes no sense to block such a successful program that directly benefits our communities and makes them safer for our families. While crime is down—this is not the time to claim victory and retreat. So I urge my colleagues to support our amendment that restores this crucial law enforcement funding and I also urge that any language in this bill that mentions closing down the COPS office this year be deleted.

I compliment my colleague from Delaware for being a great leader on this program. This amendment should be supported and adopted if we truly want to support our police officers and our sheriffs' departments throughout this country.

I yield the floor.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I thank my friend from Iowa, and I compliment him for his continued support and early support for this program.

I now yield 5 minutes to my friend from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Delaware. I am delighted to join with him as an original cosponsor of the amendment. I am pleased to work with him with respect to this question of the funding of the COPS Program nationally.

As the Senator from Delaware knows well, back in 1994 I brought the original amendment to the floor for the 100,000 police officers at a time when people said we weren't going to be able to find the money.

We managed to reach an agreement through the ingenuity of the distinguished Senator from West Virginia, Mr. BYRD, and an agreement with Senator GRAMM back then to split some money with respect to prisons, which ultimately became the foundation of a rather remarkable increase in funding for police officers on a national basis.

The Senator from Delaware, then chairman of the Judiciary Committee, had spent many long years working and fighting to recognize the need to have police officers in the streets of America. My own experience as a former prosecutor brought me to the Senate with a long-term understanding of and commitment to the notion that crimes usually aren't committed right in front of a police officer. On too many streets in America, and too many corners of our communities, we were literally, only a few years ago, abandoning those streets to criminals. The ratio of police officer to a felony was diminishing. Felonies were going up; the police officers were going down. And there was a direct correlation to the disorder, even the chaos in some places, that we were inheriting as a result of the lack of capacity for enforcement.

Having run one of the largest district attorney offices in America, one of the 10 largest counties in the country, Middlesex County in Massachusetts, I learned firsthand it is not just a police officer on a street at a particular moment of time who is going to intercept a crime or break up a fight or provide order; those police officers who make arrests have to go to court. They have to be able to testify in cases. They have to have time to investigate cases. It takes an enormous amount of street work, of nonvisible work, to be able to adequately staff and supply the police force of the country, the investigative capacity of the country, in order to bring cases.

We too often were losing cases because we couldn't bring the officer to court. The officer needed to be out on the streets because of the shifts. Judges would dismiss cases because prosecutors were failing to put them together in time to meet the swift and speedy prosecution standards.

Finally, we got people to understand that it makes a difference to have a police officer walking a beat. That is another problem that occurred in America for a long period of time. We put police officers in a car; they drove around; criminals could pretty well predict when the car was going to come through. The car created a barrier between the officer and the street, so to speak. People didn't build relationships. They didn't build relationships with good citizens in the community, and they also didn't build relationships with bad citizens from whom they often learned who may have done one thing or another against the law.

Through awareness of that in 1994, we began an effort to put police officers back on the streets of America, to build those relationships, and to provide our departments with the indispensable foundation on which the life and economic development of a community exists. That is called the opposite of chaos. It is peace. That is why they are called peace officers.

The fact is, we have been on a wonderful trend line, an extraordinary trend line, where crime has been going down. Most violent crime has been going down, although not all; there are a couple areas that have gone up in the last year. The fact is, the kind of threat the average citizen felt in their community has diminished. In community after community after community, all across this country, police chiefs, police officers, mayors, everybody involved in the effort to provide order, will share stories of the remarkable ways in which the community policing program has made a difference in the lives of our fellow citizens.

It is extraordinary to me that plans were laid in the original Republican budget to eliminate funding for this, one of the most successful programs that we have had.

If you look at the city of Boston in the 1990s, we had a gang epidemic. There was a surge in youth violence. The Boston Police Department responded by developing a very innovative youth violence task force, an aggressive intervention strategy, and a program to control trafficking of firearms. However, much depended on the $750,000 COPS anti-gang initiative grant. That has become a model program in the country. Countless police chiefs and others have used that program as a way of instituting a similar effort in their own cities.

Every year since 1993, the number of juveniles killed by guns has decreased, a 60-percent decrease from 1990 to 1998. From July 1995 to December 1997 not one youth was killed with a firearm.

The rate of violent crime involving a firearm has decreased 43 percent since 1995. Property crime has dropped to its lowest levels since the 1960s and has been cut in half since 1990. House break-ins and car thefts have also hit a 35-year low.

The federal assistance through the COPS program has given local communities like Boston the tools to fight crime effectively. This makes our streets and schools safer, our homes more secure and improves the quality of life for everyone. In 1997, a Boston Public Safety Survey found that more than three-quarters of the residents feel somewhat to very safe alone in their neighborhoods at night, an increase of close to 20 percent just since 1995. Feeling save to walk the streets is a right, not a privilege for those who can afford it. Every community deserves the type of security that Boston residents currently enjoy. The COPS program has played an important role in fostering that security.

Listen to what Paul Evans, Commissioner of the Boston Police Department, has had to say. In a letter to me, which I will now read, Paul reminds us that

> Over the past five years, the COPS office has been a strong and effective partner in our efforts in Boston, and in cities across the country. COPS funds have supported the hiring of 109 new officers like Jamie Kenneally, who has quickly become a community fixture, walking his beat and serving as a one-man-anti-crime unit on Centre Street in Jamaica Plain.

Mr. President, other COPS initiatives have supported Boston's internationally recognized youth violence strategy, which yielded a 75-percent decrease in youth homicides. Also, COPS supported the citywide Strategic Planning and Community Mobilization Project that brought together more than 400 police and community stakeholders to create partnerships for public safety that have been replicated in communities across the country.

The effects of the COPS programs in Boston have been replicated across Massachusetts and across the nation. Here is a letter from Edward Davis, Superintendent of Police in Lowell, Massachusetts. In the letter, Superintendent Davis says the Lowell Police Department has seen a dramatic decrease in crime and the fear of crime over the past six years. Violent crimes have decreased more than 60 percent as a result of the hard work of police officers, citizens, and the support of the Federal Government.

Paula Meara, Chief of Police of Springfield, Massachusetts believes that COPS funding has unquestionably improved the quality of life for Springfield residents. In 1997 and 1998, Homicides in Springfield have declined by 40 percent and serious crime has dropped by 12 percent. Chief Meara believes that any reduction in funding for the COPS program will have catastrophic results and will be detrimental to the quality of life for every resident in Springfield.

The COPS program has been a demonstrated success in Massachusetts and across the nation. It deserves continued federal support. Adopting the Biden amendment is a good first step toward continuing federal assistance for local communities. However, there is much more that we need to do. First, we must find additional funds for the COPS program in conference to insure that communities that are currently plagued with crime and violence can fight back with a cop on the beat. Second, we must continue to work with local police departments to develop innovative community-based approaches to fighting crime. This approach will help allow evey community free itself of the crime and violence that lowers the quality of life and limits economic development. Mr. President, it is time we end the debate of whether to fund the COPS program, and move onto the far more important question of how to enlarge and expand this successsful program for the challenges before us today.

I ask unanimous consent a series of letters from police chiefs with respect to that program be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BOSTON POLICE DEPARTMENT,
Boston, MA, July 14, 1999.

Hon. JOHN F. KERRY,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR KERRY: I am writing to express my urgent opposition to efforts in the Senate to eliminate funding for the COPS Office. Like you, I strongly support Senator Biden's amendment to restore that funding.

Over the past five years, the COPS Office has been a strong and effective partner in our efforts in Boston, and in cities across the country. COPS funds have supported the hiring of 109 new officers whom we could not otherwise have put to work in Boston's neighorhoods, officers like Jamie Kenneally, who has quickly become a community fixture, walking his beat and serving as a one-man anti-crime unit on Centre Street in Jamaica Plain.

Other COPS initiatives have supported Boston's internationally-recognized youth violence strategy, which yielded a 75 percent decrease in youth homicides. Also, COPS supported the New England Regional Community Policing Institute, which is a training consortium led by the Boston Police Department and that delivers state-of-the-art community policing training across the region. As one of its first initiatives in Boston, COPS supported our citywide Strategic Planning and Community Mobilization Project, that brought together over 400 police and community stakeholders to create the partnerships for public safety that have been replicated in communities across the country. COPS supports our initiatives in reducing domestic violence and other key areas of our mission.

The COPS Office is a major success story from the 1994 Crime Act, which you were so pivotal in enacting. I add my voice to what I know is a chorus of police executives who want this important work to continue.

Please let me know if there are other ways I can support Senator Biden and you in your fight to save COPS.

Sincerely,

PAUL F. EVANS,
Police Commissioner.

LOWELL POLICE DEPARTMENT,
Lowell, MD, July 15, 1999.

Hon. JOHN F. KERRY,
U.S. Senate,
Boston, MA.

DEAR SENATOR KERRY: The Lowell Police Department (LPD) has seen a dramatic decrease in crime and the fear of crime over the past six years. Part I Crimes have decreased by over 60% as a result of the hard work of police officers, citizens, and the support of government officials. This support is most evident by the resources provided by the U.S. Department of Justice Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS) Office.

Since 1993, the COPS Office has provided well over 4 million dollars to the LPD for the hiring of sworn and civilian personnel, as well as the implementation of innovative problem-solving initiatives. Through the Universal Hiring Program, Lowell has been able to hire 37 additional police officers, and COPS More allowed for the redeployment of over 30 officers into the community. The Advancing Community Policing Initiative allowed for the development and implementation of innovative training and management initiatives. The Problem-Solving Partnerships grants support youth and neighborhood challenges. Furthermore, the Community Policing to Combat Domestic Violence grant supported efforts targeted and addressing domestic violence citywide.

Equally important is the impact that COPS Office resources have had on law enforcement across the country. The COPS Office has been instrumental in enhancing the profession of policing, and challenging law enforcement to think and act in a more strategic manner. Embedded in all of the COPS grant programs, is an underlying theme of building and strengthening community partnerships with public and private organizations.

It is without reservation that I support the continuing efforts of the U.S. Department of Justice COPS Office and their state and local law enforcement partners. I would be happy to provide further information from my agency as well as from the citizens of Lowell, Massachusetts if necessary.

Very truly yours,

EDWARD F. DAVIS, III,
Superintendent of Police.

THE CITY OF SPRINGFIELD, MA,
July 15, 1999.

Senator JOHN KERRY,
Russell Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR KERRY: The Springfield Police Department is a community oriented, full service, municipal Police Department. Community Policing was initiated in a pilot area of Springfield in 1993 and was expanded citywide thanks to the assistance provided through funding by the Department of Justice COPS Universal Hiring Grant Initiative. One hundred twenty-eight (128) officers have been hired thanks to the assistance of the Department of Justice and Federal Funding. Nationwide studies proved that traditional law enforcement strategies were insufficient and outdated when applied to today's complex law enforcement issues. After initiating community policing in 1993, the police department recognized immediate positive results. It became clear that when community police officers spent more time and focused more attention on the issues, calls for return service diminished substantially.

Community Policing was implemented ''city-wide'' in 1995 after a successful trial period, which included several pilot areas. The city was receiving high praise from residents for Community Policing efforts but expansion was hampered due to manpower constraints. The city was still recovering from economic depression and officer lay-offs in 1988. Community Policing in Springfield is both a philosophy and an organizational strategy that promoted new partnerships between people and their police. It is based on the premise that both the police and the community must work together to identify, prioritize and solve contemporary problems such as drugs, fear of crime, social/physical disorder and overall decay with the goal of improving the quality of life in our city. Without sufficient officer staffing Springfield was struggling to answer the constant need for immediate officer response to critical incidents while at the same time allowing officers the time necessary to commit to working with the community. Federal COPS funding provided the funds vital to hiring the essential additional officers to move forward and expand Community Policing in Springfield.

The City is organized into nine Community Policing Sectors. Management and services have been decentralized by transferring Captains out of headquarters into the sectors, assisted by Lieutenants, Sergeants and Officers—all assigned on a long term basis. Investigations have been organized to maximize sector responsibility with investigators from all of the Department's Bureaus assigned by Community Policing Sector. Neighborhood based beat management teams and regular community meetings comprise an essential component of this department's policing initiatives. The Springfield Police Department has worked continually toward enhancing its services to the residents of our city through collaborations with other services providers with the goal of meeting and exceeding citizen expectations. The Department of Social Services, Department of Youth Services, School Department, Springfield Health and Human Services, Department of Code Enforcement, District Attorney's Office, Hampden County Sheriff's Department (Corrections), Juvenile and Adult Probation Divisions, and Parole Department all work with our Community Policing Officers and have representatives assigned to Community Policing Sectors. Springfield is particularly proud of its Youth Assessment Center—named after Captain Joseph A. Budd, who commanded the Youth Aid Bureau and championed youth causes for many years. The Center became operational in 1997 and is among the first of its type in the nation. Funding supplied through the COPS Universal Award made this center possible. Any reduction in funding this center, which has become a national model, would jeopardize the health and welfare of our city's youth. It represents a collaboration of police and other major agencies, working together to better serve our city's children. Its primary focuses are: Early Intervention, Youth Diversion, and Prevention. Among the agencies that work with Youth Aid personnel at the Center on a daily basis are: Springfield School Department, District Attorney's Office, Department of Youth Services, Department of Social Services, Department of Youth Services, and the Center for Human Development (Project Rebound). Children in need of services, or youths that surface with law Enforcement Programs are brought to the center and not to the police station. At the center, trained investigators gather data relative to health, school and home issues—relating to drugs, sexual abuse, and domestic violence. If necessary, immediate and direct referral to the appropriate agency for assistance is provided.

COPS funding has provided officer staffing levels vital to proactively target the issue of school violence. Springfield has nineteen (19) officers and one Sergeant assigned full-time to patrol our Springfield's fifty-five (55) schools. These officers work with school officials, and numerous other service agencies to prevent incidents of violence. Student Support Officers are specially trained in mediation techniques and are a resource to school officials and students.

COPS funding has allowed us to develop many diverse programs to improve the quality of life in our Community.

Citizens Police Academy—Since 1996 we have held seven academies with approximately 175 residents attending twelve week interactive training sessions.

COP SHOP—Based on the Citizen Police Academy but directed at high school age youths who have shown an interest in Law Enforcement.

COPS AND KIDS—An after school program meeting three times a week at our Mounted Patrol facility targeting youths at risk, 12 to 14 years of age.

COPS IN SHOPS—Undercover officers posing as liquor store employees to target underage alcohol violations.

Community Chaplains on Call Program—A multi denominational volunteer group of clergy that respond to critical incidents within the City of Springfield and surrounding communities.

S.A.R.A Problem Solving Initiatives—Collaborative efforts by police and other stakeholders to prioritize and combat quality old life issues such as Open Drug Dealing, Auto Theft, Vandalism, Graffiti, and Youth Violence.

COPS Funding has unquestionably improved the quality of life for Springfield residents. Statistics show hard evidence that the Community Policing Initiatives financed by COPS Funding continues to be our most successful efforts to date.

From the period including 1995 to 1996 Springfield experienced 33 homicides. From the period including 1997 to 1998 as Community Policing expanded Springfield experienced a drastic reduction of homicides, with a total of 20. This is a 40% reduction over these two-year periods.

For the first six months of 1999 Springfield experienced one (1) homicide.

From the period 1997 to 1998 Springfield experienced an 11.98% reduction in UCR Part 1 Index Crimes. This category includes Rape, Robbery, Burglary, Aggravated Assault and Auto Theft.

For the same period Springfield experienced an 8% reduction in all other crimes not categorized in UCR Part 1 Index Crimes.

COPS funding is essential to the continued success of the Springfield Police Department's efforts to improve the quality of life for our citizens. Community Policing has become a way of life in the City of Springfield. Any reduction in funding will have catastrophic results and will directly effect public confidence in their Police Department and will be detrimental to the quality of life for the citizens of Springfield.

Very truly yours,

PAULA C. MEARA.
Chief of Police.

Mr. KERRY. I thank the Senator from Delaware for his leadership as well as for his courtesy.

Mr. BIDEN. I yield 5 minutes to my friend from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I thank Senator BIDEN for his great leadership on this issue. I hope I am an original cosponsor, and, if not, I certainly ask unanimous consent to be named a cosponsor.

I want to talk about a program that is extraordinarily important to the safety of communities. That's the COPS Program. In 1994, Congress enacted the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act. This act established a program known today as the COPS Program. This program has had unparalleled success.

The authority to hire officers under the COPS Program expires in fiscal year 2000. Although the President's Budget provided for an initiative that would allow a continuation of support for hiring police, the Senate Appropriations Committee markup does not include such funding.

This is not the time to cut back on funding police programs for our communities. The COPS Program authorized the hiring of 100,000 police officers and allowed states and localities to concentrate those officers on community policing. Funds were used for purposes such as: Training law enforcement officers in crime prevention and community policing techniques; development of technologies that emphasize crime prevention; linking community organizations and residents with police; and developing innovative programs.

In 1998, the COPS Program initiated the Safe Schools and Indian Country law enforcement improvements initiatives. The Safe Schools Initiative included $167.5 million for partnerships between law enforcement agencies and schools to improve safety in elementary and secondary schools and to hire school resource officers.

Under the Indian country law enforcement improvement initiative funding was available for hiring uniformed officers and assisting with other law enforcement improvements on tribal lands.

Under the COPS Program, the Youth Firearms Violence Initiative was developed to assist police departments in combating the rise of youth firearms violence.

As a result of the additional police officers in the community and the innovative programs funded by the COPS programs, we have seen historic crime reductions over the last few years. Crime is at its lowest rate in 25 years and has declined for 6½ consecutive years.

The COPS Program is strongly supported by every major law enforcement group. Why? Because it responds directly to their needs.

I want to share with you a number of examples of how different communities in my home State of Minnesota have successful used COPS funding and how their communities have benefited. The Anoka Police Department has refined its junvenile conferencing program—a program which essentially brings together youthful offenders with the victims of their offenses. The basic idea is that this confrontation will cause the young person to see the consequences of his/her actions and make it less likely to occur again. It also has eased the pressure on the court system.

In short, Police Accountability Conferencing is a non-traditional way of dealing with juvenile offenders. Modeled after a program in Australia, it brings the victim, the offender and their relatives together with an officer, who serves as a mediator, to discuss the ramifications of the offender's actions and decide on a mutually agreeable form of punishment.

This commitment to young people is a classic example of how COPS grants can be utilized effectively.

In addition, Anoka has a COPS officer who is also used as a school liaison officer. During the summer, this officer works with the landlords association in dealing with landlord-tenant issues.

Anoka Police Chief Ed Wilberg views the COPS Program as a very successful one—one which really does help to meet the needs of his community.

In both the St. Paul and Minneapolis, the Police Departments have been able to free up more officers so that they can do proactive work. Because of the COPS Program their work is not limited to responding solely to 911 calls.

For instance, Chief Robert Olson of the Minneapolis Police Department talks about being able to commit ''significant additional resources in both police officers and equipment'' to address the core cause of crime in Minneapolis. He reports that ''The catalyst for helping the city commit to those resources was the Federal COPS program.''

Chief Olson further states that

There is still a significant need for federal support of community-oriented policing services . . . . Law enforcement needs that federal support . . . and I hope that when these issues are presented that you will consider a continuation of the mission of the COPS Office in whatever form seems appropriate.

In St. Paul, this is what the Chief's office had to say:

The COPS grants have allowed us to hire police officers, increase efficiency through the use of technology, put greater emphasis on our problem solving efforts and enhance the linkage we have with our community. The COPS program is one of the best things President Clinton and Congress has done for law enforcement. We would like to see more funds for technology and support to further enhance our efforts.

In White Bear Lake, a rural community, COPS funding has enabled restructuring so that more officers are in the community. White Bear Lake has divided its community in 19 subcommunities with at least one officer assigned to each community. Quite simply, White Bear Lake jumped light years ahead because of the technology that the COPS grants allowed them to purchase—which has the direct result of police officers being in the community.

In the Shakopee Police Department, the COPS Program has been a godsend to an agency its size. It has allowed the department to hire additional officers in a diverse community that is growing every rapidly.

Within the last few months they were able to hire community service officers to provide services that ordinarily would have to have been performed by sworn officers. This means that additional sworn officers are freed up to do work in the community. Currently the Police Department is working to hire school resource officers. The school district has agreed to help with the cost. This would not be possible without COPS.

Here, I say to Senator BIDEN, is the quote I have been saving for you.

Police Chief Ken Froschheiser of Thief River Falls said that COPS ''has been so successful that if the citizens heard that it was going to be pulled, we would be hung.'' He also said that he jokes with the school district that he really doesn't have two officers, that the school district has two employees.

His school liaison officers are in the school 12 months of the year. They do things like bike patrols and help create block programs which allows his officers to be closer to the community, neighborhood by neighborhood. The COPS Program provided the resources to do the school work that he wanted to do. He also has noticed an increased collaboration with other city and county agencies, for example, the school district, social services and the court system.

The point is simple: under a community policing philsophy, law enforcement agencies recognize the need for cooperation with the communities they serve. Each community has numerous resources that can be used with law enforcement to solve problems.

The Upper Midwest Community Policing Institute, which is funded in part by COPS, is working in partnership with the Minneapolis Police Department to provide outreach and training to the large Somalian community in the Cedar-Riverside neighborhood and the officers who serve them.

In the near future, this Institute will be exploring community policing applications to the problem of domestic violence. Importantly, the Institute is working closely with a large number of Tribal Law Enforcement agencies to provide training and technical assistance. This work has included helping to facilitate the white Earth Tribe and Mahnomen County agreement to resolve jurisdictional issues. COPS allowed this to happen. This Institute is an important piece of the COPS picture. It exemplifies the success of a law enforcement approach that is tailored to community needs.

The success of the COPS story goes on and on. COPS provided resources which allowed departments throughout Minnesota to upgrade technology and to redevelop the whole notion of community policing.

At the national level: The United States Conference of Mayors states that the COPS Program has been critical in the significant reduction in crime and that the nation's mayors always cite the COPS Program ''as a working example of what can be accomplished when red-tape is reduced to a minimum in favor of results-oriented programming''. The nation's mayors urge reauthorization of the program.

The COPS Program also is supported by the National Sheriffs' Association, The International Brotherhood of Police Officers, the National Association of Police Organizations, The Police Executive Research Forum, The National Troopers Coalition, The Major Cities Chiefs, and the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Mr. President, why would we eliminate such a successful program? This is a time to build on our successes. This country needs additional resources to enhance crime fighting efforts. We need better communications systems in more communities to deter criminals, and to improve the ability of different jurisdictions to interact. We need to provide more communities with state of the art investigative tools like DNA analysis. We need to be able to target crime hot spots by making resources such as crime mapping available to more jurisdictions. We need new community based programs to ensure the safety of our school children.

The COPS amendment being offered today by Senators BIDEN and SCHUMER will enable us to continue the COPS Program which will expire next year. The amendment will support the hiring and training of up to 50,000 more cops over 5 years. It will support new technology to fight crime. It will provide funding for community prosecutors. The amendment puts cops in schools and supports partnerships between schools, law enforcement and the community. Communities and their students feel particularly vulnerable in the aftermath of the Littleton tragedy. It is important to continue our support of the dialogue between schools, law enforcement and the community so that communities can continue to fashion solutions to the problem of school violence.

This program has been a success over the last 5 years. It has benefited communities throughout this nation. It should be continued.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, as we prepare to agree to this amendment reauthorizing the COPS Program for an additional year, I wish to take a moment to recognize the work of the Senator from Delaware on this issue. The senior Senator from Delaware has offered an amendment that is very important to the country. He also, earlier this year, offered an amendment to the juvenile justice bill to reauthorize this program. That effort, supported by everyone in the minority, was defeated.

Fortunately, though, for the people of the State of Nevada and this country, we had the support of the police officers from all over the country, the district attorneys from all over the country, the sheriffs from all over the country. Law enforcement officers, officials, literally called upon us, their Senators, to express their overwhelming support for the reauthorization of this program. So I extend every bit of appreciation possible to the Senator from Delaware for his persistence and also for his ability to energize law enforcement officials in this country. It is because of their interest and their trust in the Senator from Delaware that we have reached this point.

I have in my hand four pieces of paper filled with the names of cities and towns, Indian tribes, universities from all over the State of Nevada, that have received help from this program, from Bolder City in the far southern tip of Nevada to the Yomba Shoshone Tribe in the northern part of the State. They received grants of money and police officers to allow the State of Nevada to be a more peaceful place.

Hundreds of police officers are now patroling the streets all over the State of Nevada as a result of the legislation that was previously passed. It is very important we move forward.

I speak as someone who has been a police officer, someone who has been a prosecutor, someone who has defended people charged with crime. I am convinced there are many important ways to cut back on crime, but there is nothing more important than having a police officer seen on the street. A police officer who is known to be in the area certainly will deter crime.

This program is good. We are fortunate we are now having another opportunity to make sure this program goes forward.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I am happy today to support continued funding for the Community Oriented Policing Services, or COPS program. During consideration of the Juvenile Justice Bill in May, I opposed Senator BIDEN's amendment which would have authorized the COPS Program for 5 more years. I took that position because I felt that Senator BIDEN's proposal, which would have cost taxpayers $7 billion, needed to be carefully scrutinized in the normal legislative process. His proposal would have more than doubled the current funding authorization, and did not address the serious problems that exist with the current program.

Today, however, I am happy to support continued funding of the COPS Program for FY 2000. Local law enforcement officers from across Tennessee have contacted me to let me know of their support for this program. Tennessee has benefitted from almost $120 million in Federal funds since the COPS Program began. Police Chief Jamie Dotson of Chattanooga told me that the COPS Program has assisted him in hiring an additional 76 police officers. The police chiefs of Memphis, Nashville and Knoxville all support the program.

I look forward to working with my colleagues on reauthorization of the COPS Program. I want to ensure that we build flexibility into the system, so that communities may use the Federal funds to best suit their needs, be they more policemen in schools, purchase of new technology, bullet proof vests, or overtime payments to keep policemen on our streets fighting crime. Additionally, I want to ensure that we carefully scrutinize the program to eliminate waste of scarce taxpayer resources. I am grateful that my colleagues have been able to work out a compromise so we can continue to fund this program, and I am proud to continue my support.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise today as a proud co-sponsor of the amendment offered by my distinguished colleague from Delaware, Senator BIDEN. Despite the proven track record of the Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS) Program and widespread support from the law enforcement community, the current version of the Commerce-Justice-State appropriations bill almost completely eliminates this important program. Senator BIDEN's amendment, however, corrects this terrible flaw in the bill. It would preserve the Office of Community Oriented Policing Services and fund the hiring of roughly 1,500 police officers through FY 2000.

Since its inception in 1994, the COPS Program has provided an unprecedented level of resources to communities across the nation in the fight against crime. The COPS Program has awarded $6 billion to 11,300 communities to fund the hiring of more than 100,000 police officers. The addition of 100,000 police officers represents a nearly 20% increase in the number of officers on the streets. And more cops on the streets means lower crime. Crime is at its lowest rate in 25 years and has declined for seven consecutive years. The COPS Program has a lot to do with that happy statistic.

What is community policing and how has it reduced crime? Community policing is a law enforcement strategy that emphasizes establishing community partnerships, putting more officers on the street, decentralizing command functions, and promoting innovative, community-oriented strategies to prevent crime. With the recent wave of schoolhouse shootings like those that occurred in Littleton, Colorado and Jonesboro, Arkansas, there is a growing sense among Americans that we are no longer safe in our homes, in our schools, in our communities. One sure way to reduce crime and restore peace of mind is through community oriented policing. The COPS Program does just that.

COPS has had a positive, and very tangible, impact on communities throughout the country, including in my home state of Wisconsin, by putting more police officers on our streets and making our citizens safer. In the state of Wisconsin alone, the COPS Program has funded the equivalent of over 1,100 new officers and contributed roughly $70 million to communities to make it happen. The COPS Program has succeeded because it helps individual officers to be a friendly and familiar presence in their communities. They are building relationships with people from house to house, block to block, school to school. This community policing helps the police to do their job better, makes the neighborhoods and schools safer and, very importantly, gives residents peace of mind.

The current Commerce-Justice-State appropriations bill, however, threatens the progress in community policing and the reduction of crime our nation has seen in recent years. First, it eliminates the federal funding for local law enforcement to hire additional, needed officers. Second, it eliminates the COPS office and transfers the administration of technology and school resource officer grants to the Office of Justice Programs. This is absurd and ignores the success of the COPS Program.

As I travel through Wisconsin and talk to sheriffs, police chiefs and other law enforcement officers, I hear the same refrain, time after time: the COPS Program is vital to their work and has enabled them to get more officers out from behind their desks and onto the streets. I agree. The COPS Program has been a shining example of an effective partnership between local and Federal Governments. It provides federal assistance to meet local objectives. It does not interfere with local prerogatives. It does not impose mandates. The program provides funding to counties, towns and cities to enable communities to put more police on the street. Individual police and sheriff's departments have discretion over how those funds are used, because they know what problems their communities face and the places they need help most.

Mr. President, zero funding for hiring officers means fewer cops on the streets. Shutting down the COPS office means local law enforcement will lose the ability to participate closely in determining what funds they receive and how they are used. Senator BIDEN's amendment, however, would provide for continuing the much-lauded COPS Program to ensure that we have an additional roughly 1,500 police officers in our communities in Wisconsin and throughout the nation. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this amendment and continuing our drive to put more police officers on the streets and to reduce crime in our communities.

I yield the floor.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I rise today to thank the Chairman, Senator GREGG, and the Ranking Member, Senator HOLLINGS, for accepting the one year extension of the Community Oriented Policing Services Program. This extension, being offered by Senator BIDEN, with my support, will allow communities in Maine and across the country, to continue receiving assistance from this very successful program.

The COPS program was created in 1994, when President Clinton signed into law the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act. Not only does it provide grants that help communities hire additional police officers to help with the war on crime, the COPS Program also provides funds to acquire new technologies and equipment and provides police with opportunities to work with schools to address persistent school-related crime problems. This program is so worthwhile that one of Maine's police chiefs said it is one of the most innovative programs he has seen in his thirty-five years in police work.

Since its creation, COPS grants have been awarded to more than half the policing agencies in the country. In Maine there are an additional 258 police officers in 90 city and county police forces as a result of the COPS Program. All across my state, from the Androscoggin County Sheriff's Department to the Town of Ft. Kent and from the Kennebunk Police Department to the Washington County Sheriff's Department, I am proud that the State of Maine has been able to utilize almost $18 million in COPS program funding to hire these new police officers. These new police officers have helped reduce the amount of violent crime in Maine and across the country. In fact, since 1994, violent crime in America has fallen by 13%.

By restoring $495 million for Fiscal Year 2000, the Community Oriented Policing Services program will be able to fund the deployment of almost 4,000 more police officers. These new additions to the front lines of the war on crime will allow our communities to continue to reduce violent crime in America.

Again, Mr. President, I appreciate Senator GREGG's willingness to accept this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VOINOVICH). The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I will make a few brief comments, and I am prepared to yield the remainder of my time. I thank my friend from New Hampshire for accepting the amendment.

This was part of an original bill called the Biden crime bill at the time. At the time, when we introduced the notion of all these new cops partially being paid for by the Federal Government, I was told a couple of things. One, local authorities would not like it because they would have to come up with part of the funding. Two, it would be cumbersome to administer. Three, we would find ourselves in the position where it really wouldn't make much of an impact on the community.

I suggest the reason I wrote the bill the way I did originally was to take into consideration all three of those concerns. First of all, everyone will know, from their home States, that there is no redtape in this program. The day after we passed the crime bill in 1994 in my office, I sat with the Attorney General of the United States and her staff, and, to her chagrin, I said we must get this application down to one single page. They looked at me as if to say: What do you mean, one single page? That is not possible for a Federal program which is going to cost $30 billion. But that is what it is. It is a page. That is the reason why there is an infinitesimally small portion of this COPS Program and the crime bill program money being spent for administration.

The second thing was, I remember my friend from South Carolina telling me at the time: If you don't do this the right way, this is going to get hung up in every State. That is why we didn't send this money to Governors. The Presiding Officer is a former Governor. We love former Governors. But this doesn't go through State legislatures. The local police chief in Columbus, OH, does not have to convince anybody in your State capital they need more cops. They can go directly to the source.

From a little town in Massillon, OH, they can go straight to the source. They do not have to go to the legislature; they can go straight downtown after their city council in Dover, DE, Smyrna, DE, Wilmington DE. It enabled local law enforcement agencies to determine their own needs and thereby eliminate the waste. By the way, I got in trouble with Governors for writing it that way, for not sending it through State legislative bodies.

The third thing it does, and there was criticism of this when it was done, it says you do not get any money unless you have a certain kind of police department. What do you have to do? If you have 10 cops in your police department, you cannot fire two and apply for Federal money to hire them back. That is what was done under the LEAA, the Law Enforcement Assistance Act, when I first got here. This program said there was a maintenance of effort. We would help you get the 11th cop, but you couldn't cut it to 9 to go back to 10.

We said: By the way, you have to have a community policing operation. Why is that important? Mayors and Governors do not want community policing. It is harder to do. It costs more money. The cops organizations—I love them all—didn't want it. It costs more money. If I am a cop in a tough district, I would rather be riding in a patrol car with another guy than I would be walking through by myself. So they did not want it. We said: No money unless this gets leveraged. If you have 10 cops and you want one of ours to raise your force to 11, all 11 have to be community cops. That is the key.

Why do I say this? If the Federal Government gets out of the business of helping here, it will not only be the loss of the money; I predict it will be the loss of the willingness to maintain community policing even though it works, even though every mayor knows it works and every county official knows it works. It is expensive and it is hard. Mark my words: The day the COPS Program ends, initially 5 percent, 10 percent of the communities in America will go away from community policing, and 10 years from now we will be back to where we were.

That leads to my second concluding point. People said back when the original bill was written: BIDEN, why are you only doing it for 5 years? I said, one of two things are going to happen. Maybe at the end of the 5 years those of us who support this concept are going to be right; it is going to be proven, as in the old expression, the proof of the pudding is in the eating. At the end of the 5 years, the pudding either tastes good or it tastes bad. If it tastes bad, all the king's horses and all the king's men will not keep the COPS Program going because it will be branded for what it is, a waste of time and money. But if the pudding tastes good, all the king's horses and all the kings's men cannot stop it from being reauthorized for another 5 years.

So far, the king's horses and king's men have stopped it from being authorized for another 5 years. It is a different issue. It is different than continuing it for this next year. But I want to say, I think the proof is in the eating. Our streets are safer. Go out and ask any of your mayors, any of your county executives, any of your town councils, any of your police departments. You come back and tell me anyone who said: Eliminate this program. They may have suggestions to make it better, and we should listen to them but not eliminate it.

This leads me to my exact last point. I am a Democrat. I take great pride in the fact that I wrote this bill. Originally, it was the Biden bill. When it passed and became law, I remember saying to President Clinton: Let's call it the Clinton bill.

We lost the Congress that year, and he thought we lost the Congress in part because of the gun amendments. He said: Keep it the Biden bill.

It started working really well, and now it is the Clinton bill. It is good it is the Clinton bill, but I want to make this the Republican bill, and I mean this sincerely. I want COPS to become like Social Security has become. Initially, Republicans hated Social Security and they were against it. Roosevelt came along, and Democrats supported it. Over the years, they have not only become politically committed, they are as committed as we are. They really understand how important it is, but for a long time it was not invented here.

This COPS bill was bipartisan in its inception. When the first so-called Biden crime bill that had this in it originally passed out of the Senate, it was called the Biden-Hatch crime bill until it got to the other side. Gingrich did not like the look of it politically, and even though it passed in the Senate with 97 votes originally—what passed the Senate originally was the same thing that ended up becoming law. It had 97 votes originally. It went over to the House of Representatives, and when it came back, I had to get seven Republicans to pass it. Only seven Republicans voted for it.

From that point on, the bad news about the crime bill has been: We Democrats beat our chests about how we did it, and the Republicans did not, which is literally true. And the Republicans have said: My Lord, we can't continue to support a program from which the Democrats are getting such benefit. Let's end this.

Let's go back and pretend this was part of the crime bill that passed out of here, which it did, with 97 votes. This is a bipartisan idea, and my plea is let continuing the program through its authorization period of the fiscal year 2000 be the first step, and the second step, that Republicans and Democrats join together and reauthorize for another 5 years this program and reauthorize for another 5 years, as my friend from New Hampshire has suggested, the trust fund.

It is time—and I know this sounds ridiculous in this atmosphere—to take the politics out of this. This is working. There is enough room for all of us to claim credit. There is enough room for everybody to say, look, listen to what Ronald Reagan used to say when he first became President: If it ain't broke, don't fix it. This ain't broke.

Now let's put a Republican stamp on it and a Democratic stamp on it—an American stamp—just as we do on Social Security. We will be doing the Nation a great favor, and maybe, just maybe, we will get back in the habit a little bit of cooperating as Democrats and Republicans.

I thank my friend from New Hampshire for being willing to accept the amendment. I appreciate his accommodation in allowing us to speak to it in spite of that, and I truly look forward to the possibility that in the coming months we will be able to move beyond this and have a bipartisan—a Republican amendment. I will sign on to a Republican amendment reauthorizing this and call it the Republican crime bill. I do not care what we call it. I sincerely mean that. But let's keep a good thing going.

I thank my friend, again, very much. I thank my friend from South Carolina who, when this bill was being written 5 years ago, was the major engine behind it. He was the one who allowed it to get through the committee in the first place.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I may take on this. I appreciate the comments of the Senator from Delaware and his commitment to this program.

The committee's decision to end this program was based on a number of factors. The first factor was our allocation, which was so low. We had to simply apply resources where we thought they were most needed.

The second factor was basically, in our opinion, the administration had taken the money to fund the COPS Program from some other very important law enforcement initiatives. For example, the administration did not fund the additional 1,000 Border Patrol which we think is critical. They did not fund the expansion of strike team efforts by the DEA. They did not fund the Boys and Girls Clubs initiatives. They did not fund the juvenile block grants. They did not fund the local law enforcement block grants. They did not fund the interagency drug enforcement grants. The money which came out of those accounts was essentially used to expand the COPS Program.

The funding which this committee has made to the COPS Program has been extraordinary, and it has been strong over the years. In fact, the original program called for 100,000 cops. This committee has funded 105,000 cops over the years and with our final funding we had in place.

We also as a committee, with the support of the Senator from South Carolina, initiated aggressive programs of mentoring in schools using police officers. We think this is an important effort, and in our bill we expanded that amount. That is how we arrived at the number we did.

I am willing to look at the extension of the COPS Program, but I think we have to look at it in the context of the resources available to us. When the administration sent up a budget as they sent up and essentially played games with the other law enforcement accounts, things which have to be done, which we knew had to be done and they knew had to be done, and then they underfunded those accounts, that is what created the basic problem in the initial bill.

Working with the Senator from Delaware, we have been able to work out this resolution, which I think is a reasonable one and one with which I know the Senator from South Carolina agrees.

If there is no further debate, I urge adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, the Senator from Delaware has made an outstanding presentation. I join in the comments of my distinguished chairman. We are ready to accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 1285) was agreed to.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. GREGG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, before we take up the next amendment, let me just comment briefly on the amendment already agreed to, offered by the Senator from Delaware, Mr. BIDEN.

I am pleased to be a cosponsor of this amendment. I am very pleased with the action taken this afternoon by the Senate. The amendment certainly signals our continuing strong commitment to this innovative approach to crimefighting; that is, the COPS Program.

The crime rate in the United States has gone down for 6 consecutive years—the longest period of decline in 25 years. And we received even more good news recently. This year's National Crime Victimization Survey reports that the number of Americans who were victims of violent crimes dropped 7 percent between 1997 and 1998.

That is great news. Of course, no one claims we have won the war against crime, but we are certainly winning some important battles. The 100,000 officers placed on the beat since the COPS Program began in 1994 have been on the front lines of this vital effort.

Why would we jeopardize that success? The additional officers put on the beat since 1994 have revolutionized community policing, and the COPS Program has helped foster an unprecedented crime-fighting partnership between communities and Federal, State and local law enforcement. Why should we let something that has proven to be so effective wither on the vine?

We should instead build on the success of this program, which has been endorsed time and again by every major law enforcement organization.

I have seen firsthand how valuable the COPS Program has been in communities in my home State. South Dakota's law enforcement officials are among the most well-trained and capable public servants in the country.

South Dakota's crime rate is low, and its streets are safe, but, just as in more populated States, South Dakota families still worry about the safety of their streets and neighborhoods.

In my State, and in rural America in general, the COPS Program can double the size of some police or sheriff's departments by providing funding to hire just one or two additional officers. Many of the small towns and counties in my State are faced with tight budgets, limiting the amount of resources they can devote to law enforcement personnel. By providing those resources, the COPS Program has had a profound impact on these communities.

Law enforcement officers in South Dakota have described that impact to me.

They have testified about how the COPS Program has helped them.

Let me share just one of those stories, because I think that it provides a vivid example of how this program can truly make a difference.

In the days immediately following the Littleton, CO, tragedy, parents throughout the Nation were terrified by a rash of bomb threats and a fear of ''copycat'' crimes. In South Dakota, we had to deal with over 30 bomb scares.

One of those threats was called into Tri-Valley, a school in a rural community outside of Sioux Falls, SD. Fortunately, Tri-Valley has a police officer, called a ''school resource'' officer. His name is Deputy Preston Evans, and his position is funded by a COPS grant.

On the day of the bomb threat, as students were being evacuated from the school, a number of students came up to Deputy Evans and told him they knew who had made the threat. By the end of the day, two suspects had been arrested.

Those students were able to confide in Deputy Evans for one reason they trusted him. And they were able to trust him because they knew him—they had a relationship with him. How many acts of violence or mischief are deterred in schools like Tri-Valley because the students can confide in such a person, who might not be there without the COPS Program?

In a video conference yesterday, I spoke with some of the law enforcement leaders in South Dakota—Minnehaha County Sheriff Mike Milstead and Sioux Falls Police Chief Clark Quiring, and many others. They told me how the COPS Program has provided them the flexibility to increase their presence in schools.

They mentioned how important it is for students to feel secure. As Sheriff Milstead so eloquently noted, ''there is not a bigger barrier to learning—than fear.''

For his generation, the greatest fear was going home that afternoon with a bloody nose, he told us.

Littleton reminds us that kids today have a lot more to worry about than just a fist-fight with a school-yard bully.

But thanks to the COPS Program, children today have someone they can turn to.

Dr. Bill Smith, the Instructional Support Services Director for the Sioux Falls School District, joined the law enforcement leaders in yesterday's video conference and told me that we now have evidence that officers in schools are welcome and helpful.

When students throughout the Sioux Falls district were asked in a year-end survey whom they would go to if they had a problem, 44 percent said they would confide in their school resource officer before anyone else.

That is a remarkable statistic:

44 percent of the students said they would go to their school resource officer before they would turn to their teacher or principal. I can think of no more compelling evidence of how this program can make a real difference than that.

Today, the Senate will help ensure that the COPS Program, and officers like Deputy Evans, will continue to make a difference—in our schools, on our streets, and in our neighborhoods.

The action taken by the Senate just now is a tribute to the men and women across the country who risk their lives every day to make our communities safer.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, one of the important items contained in the Commerce-Justice-State appropriations bill is the appropriation for the Census Bureau.

I think we all agree, a fair and accurate census is a fundamental part of our representative democracy and good government. As required by the Constitution, census results will determine how many members of the House of Representatives will come from each of the states. Those results will also determine how many federal dollars, funding a wide array of important programs, will return back to the state. We're talking about over $180 billion that will go to state and local governments and the distribution of additional billions in state funds. This same data is a vital component in determining where to build roads, hospitals, schools; even your local Wal-Mart or McDonald's location is based on this same information.

The Census Bureau projects that the U.S. population will near 266 million in 2000. Cost estimates for administering Census 2000 were projected to be anywhere between $4 and $4.8 billion. Those projections were based on the assumption that ''sampling'' would be used to provide the fairest and most accurate count to date.

The U.S. Supreme Court, however, this last year ruled by a narrow 5–4 majority that the use of sampling was prohibited by law for the purpose of apportioning seats in the House of Representatives. Since the Court decided the case on statutory grounds, it found no need to decide whether the Constitution also barred the use of modern statistical methods for purposes of congressional apportionment. The Court went on to affirm that the law requires the Secretary of Commerce to use modern statistical methods, where feasible, for all other purposes.

As a result of the Court's decision, the Administration is required, if feasible, to release two sets of population figures in 2001: one set of adjusted, unsampled numbers to be used for apportioning seats to the States, and a second set of adjusted or sampled, numbers to be used for all other purposes. The Court's decision has added the potential of $1.7 billion to the cost of the census. These funds will be used to hire census takers to handle the 50% increase in the number of households that must be visited.

This includes $954 million for non-response follow-up. To get responses from all households that don't answer the mail survey, the Census Bureau will hire more enumerators and will expand follow-up to any unprecedented 10 weeks. Training will be increased to sustain quality with a larger workforce that will total over 800,000 employees.

The Census Bureau will need an additional $268 million for data collection infrastructure, $229 million for coverage improvement efforts, and $219 million for a variety of data collection operations, things like rural area data collection, the ''Be Counted Program,'' enumeration of soup kitchens, shelters, and redeliveries.

Every single dollar the Administration is asking for is necessary. Without it, we will have a highly inaccurate census count. I believe we're on the path to another census nightmare similar to the 1990 experience. Nationwide, we missed 8.4 million people, mostly inner city and shanty town minorities; they double counted 4.4 million Americans, most of whom were white college students. My home State of Illinois suffered the eighth highest undercount in 1990; in the city of Chicago alone, they somehow didn't count 2.4 percent of the population. If you said they counted 97.6 percent of the population, it sounds good. But missing 2.4 percent is crucial. That's an astonishing figure considering the national average for undercount hovers around 1.6 percent. That may not sound like a lot but that 0.8 percent differentiation equals almost 70,000 people. The city of Chicago estimates that the undercount was significantly higher: maybe as much as 250,000 people. The Census Bureau missed 114,000 folks for the whole state.

What does that mean for my constituents back home in Illinois? The city of Chicago did a study last year and, if you follow the premise that the Bureau missed 68,000 people, estimated revenue loss for the city of Chicago would have totaled just under $100 million. If you follow the 250,000 undercount figure, the city of Chicago would have lost over $327 million. Let me give some figures that show why we're trying to raise awareness about this topic.

Head Start in the city of Chicago, a program to provide early education for kids, lost over $28 million because of the census undercount. The Older Americans Act for senior citizens lost over $5 million. WIC funds, nutrition funds for children, lost over $2.5 million. Child care funding, we lost over $3 million. This is no small affair. We have to remedy the situation.

I have a letter, dated May 7, 1997, from my colleagues Senator LOTT, Senator NICKLES, then-Speaker Gingrich, and House Majority Leader ARMEY. In this letter, the Republican leadership in both Houses state:

We are firmly committed to working with the House and Senate Budget Committees and Appropriations Committees to provide a level of funding sufficient to perform the entire range of constitutional census activities, with a particular emphasis on accurately enumerating all groups that had historically been undercounted.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have the letter printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, DC, May 7, 1997.

Dr. MARTHA FARNSWORTH RICHE,
Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce, Washington, DC.

DEAR DR. RICHE: We are writing about one of the most critical constitutional functions our government performs: the decennial census. Based on recent media reports, we are concerned that a misunderstanding of congressional priorities is driving the Census Bureau's plans for the 2000 census. Consequently, we fear that the Bureau is on the verge of formalizing plans that do not reflect the House and Senate's goal to perform the most accurate census possible that is consistent with the Constitution. We would like to take this opportunity to clarify the three main principles that comprise the congressional mandate for Census 2000 and which should guide the actions of both Congress and the Bureau as you finalize census preparations in coming months.

INCREASED ACCURACY

Accuracy and completeness are absolutely essential if the census is to provide the reliable data necessary to support the business of government. Despite criticism, the 1990 census was the most accurate in history. Still, we expect to improve on its success in 2000. To reach the level of accuracy we expect, to ensure that communities that have been undercounted in the past are fully and accurately counted in the future, we must physically count each and every American.

We cannot rely on statistical schemes that compromise accuracy for the sake of economy. Despite the Bureau's insistence that statistical estimation is more accurate than actually counting Americans, the fact remains that if statistical adjustment had been allowed in 1990, Pennsylvania would have erroneously lost a congressional seat to California. Voters should not be disenfranchised through the use of statistical guessing.

Census data must also be as valid at the census tract and block level as they are at the state and national levels. Under sampling, as the area gets smaller, the margin of error grows wider. Individuals who rely on accurate census data for reapportionment will receive census counts with a range of possible numbers to choose from in drawing lines for congressional, state and local elections. The result will be chaos in government, uncertainty for voters, lawsuits lasting for the better part of a decade, and worst of all, the further erosion of our citizens' confidence in their government's ability to do its job and do it right.

CONSTITUTIONALITY

Equally important is the constitutionality of Census methodology. Taxpayers are investing a minimum of $4.2 billion to conduct Census 2000. We must protect their investment by using only methods that are clearly and undisputably allowed by the Constitution. If the Census is conducted with methods that are later ruled unconstitutional, taxpayers will not only have lost their original investment in Census 2000, but will likely be asked to spend an additional $6 billion or $7 billion to do the entire census over again.

Legal experts who testified recently before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee agreed that it would be calamitous if the Supreme Court were to declare Census 2000 unconstitutional. The Court has not addressed the constitutionality of statistical sampling in the Census, however the Constitution clearly states that the Census should be an ''actual Enumeration'' of the population, and Title 13 U.S.C., Section 195 states that sampling cannot be used for purposes of the apportionment of the U.S. House of Representatives. We strongly believe that the Bureau's proposed use of statistical sampling exposes taxpayers to the unacceptable risk of an invalid and unconstitutional census.

ALLOCATION OF SUFFICIENT RESOURCES TO CONDUCT AN ACCURATE AND CONSTITUTIONAL CENSUS

Recent news reports have quoted you and other Census Bureau officials as citing a congressional mandate to spend less money in the 2000 Census. While we certainly seek to promote economy and efficiency in all aspects of government, the constitutional requirements governing the census leave us no choice when it comes to cutting corners in order to save money; we cannot do it. On the contrary, the census must be funded at levels necessary to comply explicitly with the Constitution.

We are firmly committed to working with the House and Senate Budget Committees and Appropriations Committees to provide a level of funding that is sufficient to perform the entire range of constitutional census activities, with a particular emphasis on accurately enumerating all groups that have historically been undercounted. Towards this end we are eager to see aggressive and innovative promotion and outreach campaigns in hard-to-count communities, the hiring of enumerators within those localities, and maximizing Census employment opportunities for individuals seeking to make the transition from welfare to work.

We look forward to working with you on these and other issues to ensure that the 2000 decennial Census is the most accurate and Constitutionally sound census ever conducted.

Sincerely,

NEWT GINGRICH,
Speaker of the House.
RICHARD K. ARMEY,
House Majority Leader.
TRENT LOTT,
Senate Majority Leader.
DON NICKLES,
Senate Assistant Majority Leader.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Chair.

Let me wrap up by saying that our goal is the most accurate census possible. The census has a real impact on the lives of real people. We have to do everything for a fair, accurate, and complete count.

It is my understanding that my colleagues, Senators GREGG and HOLLINGS, the chairman and ranking member of the Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State, and the Judiciary, will hold a hearing in the very near future on this issue of underfunding. I look forward to the resolution of this important issue.

I have spoken with the White House as well. They assure me that this issue will be resolved, and we won't repeat the disastrous census undercount of 1990 in the year 2000.

I thank the Chair, and I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. WELLSTONE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I was going to send an amendment to the desk. Might I ask my colleague from Indiana—I would like to hold my position on the floor, but I saw him—did he come to the floor with the intention of speaking or introducing an amendment?

Mr. LUGAR. If I may respond to my distinguished colleague, I came to the floor to offer an amendment to the bill.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, if Senator LUGAR came with the intention of offering the amendment, I was just trying to help Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS move this along.

So might I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to follow Senator LUGAR with the next amendment?

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I think that makes a great deal of sense since we may be able to work something out on the Senator's amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I thank my colleague.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 1289

(Purpose: To appropriate funds for the National Endowment for Democracy and to offset such appropriations with a reduction in the Capital Investment Fund)

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative assistant read as follows:

The Senator from Indiana [Mr. LUGAR], for himself, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. MACK, Mr. HATCH, Mr. KERREY, and Mr. LIEBERMAN, proposes an amendment numbered 1289.

On page 78, between lines 8 and 0, inset the following:

NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR DEMOCRACY

For grants by the Department of State to the National Endowment for democracy as authorized by the National Endowment for Democracy Act, $30,000,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That, in lieu of the dollar amount specified under the heading ''CAPITAL INVESTMENT FUND'' in this Act, the dollar amount under that heading shall be considered to be $50,000,000.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I wish to state the purpose of my amendment. The purpose of the amendment is to restore funding for the National Endowment for Democracy. I am pleased to be joined by Senator GRAHAM and Senator MACK, who serve with me as members of the Board of Advisors for the National Endowment for Democracy. We are proposing funding the NED at $30 million, which is $2 million below the President's request and $1 million less than this year's funding level. It is also $1 million below the authorization level that has already been approved by the Senate.

Our amendment proposes to shift $30 million from the Capital Investment Fund in the State Department title of the bill. I regret very much having to propose this shift because I, like the chairman of the subcommittee, believe the Capital Investment Fund is important to the effective operation of the Department of State and that the account is underfunded. But if we are successful in making the offset, I will work with the chairman and others to try to help find the moneys to help restore that funding to the Capital Investment Fund.

The problem the subcommittee faced was a serious problem. There is simply inadequate funding in the 150 function of the International Affairs Account. That scarcity of funds forced difficult choices about priorities and required much give and take. In my judgment, the National Endowment for Democracy must be a high priority. There is no funding for the National Endowment in the bill before us. That is why we are compelled to propose the amendment I have just introduced.

The reason for proposing the amendment is that the appropriations bill provided no funds—none at all—for the National Endowment. The Endowment did not even merit a mention in the bill; it is completely ignored. This zero-funding decision was made even though the Senate approved a straight-line funding level of $31 million in the State Department authorization bill, which we considered earlier this year, and even though successive administrations and successive Congresses have supported full, or near full, funding for the NED year after year.

It is a unique phenomenon perhaps that the NED has enjoyed strong bipartisan support since 1983 when it was created by the Reagan administration. The NED has consistently gained the support of both Republican and Democratic administrations since then and of every Republican and Democratic Congress over the past 15 years. But not in this bill.

The committee report accompanying the bill does recommend that funds for the NED be found among other divergent State Department accounts. This simply is not a good idea. Funding directly from the State Department would make the NED a grantee of the State Department and make it an arm of the Department. This would eliminate NED's line item, destroy its independence, and undermine its ability to gain access to grassroots organizations fighting for freedom and democracy in other countries all over this world—the very heart of NED's effectiveness.

For this reason, former Secretaries of State have written of the importance of retaining the independence of the NED in a 1995 letter. They wrote:

> We consider the nongovernmental character of the NED even more relevant today than it was at NED's founding twelve years ago.

NED's effectiveness comes in good part because it has an independent status, functions as a nongovernmental organization, and has a board that operates as an independent board of advisers. We have faced and confronted challenges to the NED numerous times in the past. The Senate has debated funding for the NED six times since 1993. Two years ago, we faced a comparable effort to slice and dice the NED. I proposed an amendment at that time to restore funding, and it was approved by the Senate by a vote of 73–27. A few weeks ago, in another challenge to NED, this time proposing a different manner by which NED allocates its internal grant-making funds among the four core institutes; the amendment was defeated by an almost identical vote of 73–26. That has been the pattern, fortunately, over the years.

Let me just say I am sympathetic to the extraordinary difficulty facing the managers of the bill. There are so many critical issues in the various titles of the appropriations measure, and the NED is a very small item by comparison. But this is just the point. The NED has been a very cost-effective vehicle for promoting democracy, human rights, and civic society around the world. Given its presence in some 90 countries, many on the threshold of democratic breakthroughs and others struggling with the transition to a more open society, NED's relatively small funding level is a genuine bargain. It is an exceptional investment in security for the United States of America.

We often speak in broad generalities about promoting democracy, expanding democratic values, and promoting human rights around the world. The point that must be made is that doing so is very much in our national interest. These are not whimsical ideas. Securing strong democracies should be one of the most effective means of combating and deterring the spread of terrorism, coping with the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, promoting market economic practices and principles and creating opportunities to expand our markets, supporting fair labor practices, and forestalling the destabilizing effects stemming from refugee flows.

None of these goals comes easily, and, as a Nation, we have decided it is in our national interest to encourage and to assist those in other countries who share the same ideals as we do in the United States. The NED is a key instrument in achieving these democratic goals and values.

Over the past 15 years, the NED and its four core institutes have worked openly with willing counterparts in other countries to spread the ethos of democracy around the world. The four core institutes working with the NED itself are each affiliated with domestic American institutions. They are: A, the International Republican Institute, the IRI, and B, the National Democratic Institute, the NDI, which help build political parties, help to ensure free and fair elections, and strengthen governing institutions and civic society. They are loosely affiliated with the Republican and Democratic Parties. Then, C, the Center for International Private Enterprise, CIPE, which promotes the growth of private enterprise in a democratic process, is affiliated with the Chamber of Commerce, and (d) the American Center for International Labor Solidarity, which has links to AFL–CIO and supports the development of independent trade unions. The Solidarity Movement in Poland was an early grantee, for example. The NED itself funds grassroots organizations that promote independent media, human rights, civic education and the rule of law in other countries.

Testimonials on behalf of the NED have poured in from former Presidents, former Secretaries of State and former national security advisors, from grantees and non-grantees alike. These testimonials represent a veritable Who's Who in the world movements for democracy and human rights. These names include His Holiness the Dalai Lama; Harry Wu, the Human Rights Activist; Elena Bonner, Russia civil rights advocate; Clement Nwankwo, Chairman of the Transition Monitoring Group in Nigeria; Vaclav Havel, President of the Czech Republic; Lech Walesa, leader of the Solidarity movement in Poland; and countless others from some 80 to 90 countries in every region of the world.

Mr. President, I had hoped to avoid a debate on this issue this year. I had hoped that some agreement or arrangement could be made so that we could move ahead without delaying this appropriation bill. That certainly has been my intent. I regret that this has not been possible.

The amendment is now before the Senate.

I simply say that in the early 1980's when clearly it was the intent of the United States to push for democracy and human rights that the means of doing that were not at all clear to President Reagan and our Secretary of State. As a matter of fact, many felt it was inappropriate that the President and the Secretary of State sought to intervene in the affairs of other countries around the world suggesting changes of government, although this is clearly what we wanted to see.

The changes in Eastern Europe could not have occurred without Lech Walesa, and Lech Walesa's movement which were heartily adopted by the AFL–CIO of this country. Through informal but very effective means of finance and organization, that fledgling labor movement in Poland was given not only strength but legitimacy throughout the world as a democratic movement of change, an alternative to a government which at the time seemed very solid.

At the same time, from my own recollection and experience, I recall the efforts of the Roman Catholic Church in Central America and in the Philippines, and of American businesses who were farsighted and who understood the interests of our country laying freedom for people and democracy in contract law and the rule of law—the same principles we debate now with regard to Russia, as we have worked with Russians.

How do you establish these situations, and do so without violation of diplomatic principles? Because our Nation, our President, our Secretary of State, must deal with leaders as they are constituted now and with their foreign ministers and defense ministers.

But a very unique organization came from these considerations. It was called the National Endowment for Democracy.

It included Republicans, Democrats, labor officials, Chamber of Commerce people, and a check and balance so that our own American view had four dimensions. This was not ideological, not official, but arose from the best grassroots leadership of this country. And it was effective.

The changes in the world we now take for granted—the celebration we had at the 50th anniversary of NATO, the accession of Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic into NATO—we take for granted that democracy there came forward.

The point I am making is that it did not come forward because our State Department advocated that and brought it about, although clearly they support the shift to democratic systems. There was no official governmental way of bringing about those responses, which require money, fledgling newspapers, grassroots organizations, a how you print ballots, and how you register voters. All the nitty-gritty of politics we take for granted, but which could not be taken for granted in those countries which had not enjoyed those options.

The issue before the Senate, very frankly, is that some Members I suspect may have become weary of the democracy business. They may think that was important then and this is now.

I would just suggest that at the NED board meetings which I attend regularly there are routinely 80 to 100 proposals in which the National Endowment for Democracy and its core groups debate on these principles. We take seriously the idea of democracy and human rights. We think that is still a very important subject in this world. This is not routine. It is not freely dismissed as something that was lost in the budget. It was not mentioned, but the State Department might find if it came to their attention.

We believe that the statement by the Senate ought to be clear—that we stand for democracy and the National Endowment for Democracy is a very good way to achieve democracy, and to do so year by year in a systematic and effective way.

I point out that it is important, I suppose, to have this debate each year as a wake-up call. There may come a time when we become so blase and so routine about our functions that we forget human rights. But I hope that will never be the case.

I suspect that those who are still struggling in parts of southeastern Europe—certainly in many Asian countries—those who are considering democracy in China, those in Latin America and Africa and those who are still trying to make it work out in various provinces of Russia welcome our help. They welcome labor leaders and business leaders from this country. They welcome Senators like JOHN MCCAIN, who heads up the Republican Institute; or ORRIN HATCH, who was there at the beginning of the National Endowment.

Senator CONNIE MACK of Florida, one of our board members now, and Senator BOB GRAHAM of Florida, one of our board members now, have both been so effective in Latin America and Central America, and not just in the 1980's when we were all going down for inspection of elections, trying to help people find out how to campaign, and how to count votes successfully.

A lot of that heavy lifting still needs to be done.

Although this is a debate that I wish did not occur annually, but so be it. It is a time really for Senators to stand up and be counted on whether they feel passionately, as I do, and I think many of us do, about democracy and human rights and what we can do about it effectively.

I am simply making the point that the State Department cannot do that by force. We as American citizens working through grassroots organizations and through informal means can get the money and the organization to make a difference, which ultimately our President can recognize and our Secretary of State can bless.

I point out, parenthetically, that the incumbent Secretary of State, Madeleine Albright, has served on the Board of the National Endowment for a number of years as has Zbigniew Brzezinski, as distinguished members of the Democratic Party. We now have Paul Wolfowitz, a distinguished American diplomat and scholar, as one of the Republicans, serving on the board.

This has been a case of people giving of their time and their substance in private life even as they go back and forth into the public sector and serve our country in that way.

I finally make the point that we are indebted to excellent editorials that appear in major newspapers in the last few days.

I simply quote a sentence from the New York Times editorial of yesterday in which they call for a vote for democracy abroad, a leading editorial. They say:

It is hard to think of a dictatorship whose opponents have not benefited from the endowment.

That I think is an important point.

As you name the dictatorships of this world, they knew what hit them. In most cases it was the Endowment for Democracy and its advocates, and its supporters that made the difference.

There may be all sorts of theories why these governments rose and fell. But I suggest that those of us who suggest it through the ballot box initiative really had to have a horse to ride on, and the means at least of making those alternatives effective.

I cite, for example, the current discussion in Serbia where many persons believe—starting with our President—that President Milosevic would not be a suitable candidate for reelection or for a continuation. But the press keeps pointing out, What are the alternatives? How do habits change, if it is to occur in a democratic way?

Where are the fair procedures? In fact, where has the United States been in terms of actively boosting those who wanted freedom, who wanted a different kind of Serbia, who espouse those values in this country but had no effective vehicle?

Those are the missions that lie ahead. I hope we will be worthy of the task. I advocate the adoption of the amendment.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. President, I rise today to support restoring funding for the National Endowment for Democracy and commend Senator LUGAR for offering this amendment. As reported from the Appropriations Committee, the National Endowment would receive zero funding for fiscal year 2000 with the assumption that the Department of State would provide money from its democracy and human rights accounts.

Since its inception in 1983, NED has sought to maintain an ideological balance, with a bipartisan, multisectoral core structure, as well as a bipartisan board. Its status of being simultaneously public and private has provided insulation from shifts and tides in changing administrations, allowing NED to focus on long-term democracy development. This independent role would be compromised if NED were subjected to State Department control.

For almost 16 years, NED has been instrumental in building the foundations of democracy in over 80 countries, including peaceful transitions in Poland, Chile, and South Africa. Today NED continues to support a diverse portfolio of democracy building initiatives. In the Sudan, NED funds support human rights monitoring and reporting. In the Newly Independent States (NIS) and in Russia, NED has been supporting anti-corruption efforts, market-based reforms, independent media, and civic education. These programs lie in the long term interest of the U.S. because they will help to promote stability in a region plagued by instability. They will help these countries to emerge from the mire of communism.

NED programs are also important in the People's Republic of China. Mr. President, I think we are all aware of the egregious human rights abuses perpetrated by the authoritarian government in China. The insecure government controls pastors and church members through state apparatus, imprisons prodemocracy advocates for their activities, and suppresses the truth through propaganda instead of allowing open media. Thousands of political prisoners languish in prison, many sentenced after unfair trials, others without any trial whatsoever.

Under the totalitarian regime in China, the political system is a sealed door with no clear signs of opening. Many in the United States have placed their faith in economic progress to produce some sort of eventual political change in China. I do not believe that we can afford to make such a dangerous assumption. Even as the Chinese people suffer, so too will the advocates of ''trade at all costs'' under the current political system, because of the absence of the rule of law. When trying to conduct business in China, American companies must deal with bureaucrats rather than regulations, evasions rather than enforcement, and convolution rather than competition—because there is no judicious rule of law.

We all want to see democracy in China. But we cannot assume that it will happen by itself. Instead, we must take steps to foster democracy. That is exactly what NED is about. NED funds over twenty programs to promote human rights and democracy in China.

With money from NED, the International Republican Institute supports electoral and legal reform.

The National Democratic Institute monitors civil and political liberties in Hong Kong following its transfer to China.

The Laogai Research Foundation, run by former dissident and prisoner Harry Wu, conducts in-depth research into China's forced labor prison camps.

Another NED grantee is run by chairman Lie Qing, who spent eleven years in prison for his involvement in the Democracy Wall movement. This organization has been invaluable in monitoring human rights conditions in China and has been helping victims' families bring criminal charges against Chinese leaders responsible for the 1989 Tiananmen killings.

NED also supports VIP Reference, an organization that has taken advantage of the Internet to promote the free flow of information in China—news that has not been filtered or altered by the Chinese government. Besides opening this conduit to freedom, NED also supports research and publications on democracy and constitutionalism, symposia on private enterprise and market economics, and publications relevant to Tibet.

Mr. President, these organizations are not rich by any means. In many cases, their staff works on a volunteer basis, out of their conviction to see freedom in China. They rely on funding from NED to stay in operation because other sources of funding from Hong Kong and Taiwan are scarce. Those potential sources fear offending China. Private businesses often will not fund these groups because they consider it too great a risk in light of their business interests in China. Only Congress has remained committed to funding these advocates of democracy. Without NED funding, we will cripple these programs and remove a key fulcrum in the push for democracy in China.

Democracy building is not a quick fix for totalitarianism, nor will it produce instant change. But in the long run, these programs will produce a result worth far more than they cost today.

I commend Senator LUGAR for taking this leadership role, for offering this amendment. I believe it is critically important we support and pass this amendment, not just for China but for advocates of democracy all over this world.

I urge my colleagues to support a restoration in the National Endowment for Democracy's funding for fiscal year 2000.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, we have all heard the expression stand and be counted for democracy.

Come on, give me a break. No one really thinks a Senator obviously elected to office is against democracy. No one in his right mind could think that the Department of State is against democracy and is incapable.

What we have is a deficit. The Congressional Budget Office estimates at this particular moment we are spending over $100 billion more than we are taking in this year. I didn't know this was coming up, but since I get questioned about there being no surplus for the year 1999, the Congressional Budget Office, as of June 30, estimated that we will spend this fiscal year, which ends at the end of September, $103 billion more than we take in.

The President's own document, the OMB projection, not only states we will have a deficit for the next 5 years, but the deficit and the debt will continue for a 15-year period, the debt going up from $5.6 trillion to $7.7 trillion. It is going up to 2.1 trillion bucks and everyone is running around talking about surplus, and we are getting 602(b) allocations at the Subcommittee on State, Justice, Commerce, of $1.3 billion less than we have this year. We are spending more than we are taking in, and otherwise trying to find $1.7 billion in the census.

Faced with those constrictions, I wonder where in the world do you find money for the Chamber of Commerce, the AFL-CIO, the Democratic Party and Republican Party—how do you justify it?

Back in the eighties we had Lech Walesa and they did have a wonderful labor movement and they did bring democracy there in Poland. But I don't know of the labor movement that is going on in the People's Republic of China. I have been there three times now and I have yet to meet a labor leader, much less the likes or ilk of Lech Walesa.

So, yes, we stand up to be counted for democracy. We are hoping to sustain the economic credibility of this particular republic by saying we have to make choices. I tried to pay for these programs. I have even introduced a value-added tax allocated to reducing the deficit and the debt and taking care of Social Security. But these friends who come to the floor and talk in fanciful terms about they are for democracy and independent movements for democracy—the inference being, of course, the State Department is not—on the contrary.

I hear about taking it from the Capital Investment Fund. I remember working some 4 years ago with Under Secretary Moose, Dick Moose, who used to be the director of our Foreign Relations Committee who the distinguished Senator from Indiana would remember well. Everybody is talking about security of the Embassies and facilities in the Department of State. The communications computerization of the Department of State and the Embassies overseas and around the world is in terrible shape. It is similar to the Pony Express. So 4 years ago we instituted the Capital Investment Fund to get Y2K compliance. The Chamber of Commerce, that crowd that was running all over the floor fixing the votes for Y2K—a problem that could not possibly happen for 6 months and everybody is beginning to comply and they wanted to upset 200 years of tort law back at the State level where they know how to administer it best—they came in to do that. And now they want to make darn sure the Department of State is not Y2K compliant.

Tell the Chamber of Commerce to look for democracy somewhere else and money somewhere else. The same for all these other entities that want to get NED, the National Endowment for Democracy. It is a political sop. It has been that for several years and everybody knows it.

We would like to give it all to desirable things. There have been some good things that happened under the National Endowment for Democracy years back, but they continue to embellish and run around with responsibilities they try to find, makeshift and otherwise, so they know it is going to be in trouble when they come to the floor. They get distinguished leadership to bring these amendments. I take it I will be in a minority, but I have gotten used to being a minority of the minority.

With that said, I hope we can save this amount of money somehow, the $30 million. It is not easy to get the moneys we need all over for the Department of State. I can tell you now, we are on course. To take $30 million from the telecommunications upgrades and computerization upgrades we are now about doing, and start cutting that back for the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, is out of the whole cloth for this Senator who stands here in the well for democracy.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I join with the Senator from South Carolina in his views on this issue. I recognize we will lose this vote, but we have had our brief day in the Sun at least. The fact is NED's time has gone by. For all the arguments that have been made by the Senators who have spoken on this, the bottom line is this is a relic of the cold war. In a time when we have very limited resources, it is very hard to justify funding the Democratic National Committee, the Republican National Committee, AFL-CIO, and the Chamber of Commerce, all of whom have significantly more resources to put into this than we have available for us out of these very limited accounts.

Many of the things NED has done during the time of the cold war were wonderful. But now we have moved on 10 years from the fall of the Berlin Wall and it is time for us to say enough is enough. Unfortunately, in my opinion, some of the things NED is doing now are not. They end up being a substitute for initiatives which are both inappropriate and sometimes just simply junkets.

That being said, I am concerned, as is the Senator from South Carolina, this will take funds out of the capital budget of the State Department. We have worked hard on this budget. We have taken the State Department from getting a ''D'' in the area of Y2K compliance to now, just 2 years later, it is one of the agencies getting an ''A.'' Two years ago when we started capital budget expansion, which we initiated in this committee—it did not come from the State Department; although they were very supportive of it, they could not find resources for it—a majority of the Embassies around the world were using rotary telephones. They were using Wang computers. They had no decent facsimile machines. We have radically upgraded the electronic capabilities of the State Department. But we have a long, long, long way to go. It all ties into the need to protect our citizens who are working for us out there and their families.

So when you hit this fund for $30 million, which represents about 30 percent of the money—and this fund was not increased this year; although I wanted to increase it, we simply could not find the money—you are going to do significant damage, I think, to the State Department's accounts. The State Department, for that reason, is very concerned about this amendment.

That being said, the Senator from South Carolina, being one of the best vote counters in the Senate, and I, being a marginal vote counter as chief whip, we recognize we are not going to win this one. I think we should vote on it and move on. If the Senator from Indiana is agreeable to that, I suggest we urge adoption.

Mr. LUGAR. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. GREGG. Yes.

Mr. LUGAR. I appreciate very much the words of the Senator and I appreciate the desire to move on with the bill. I want to recognize the distinguished Senator from Florida has arrived. He, likewise, shares our enthusiasm for passing the amendment.

Mr. GREGG. I am sure.

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, on this occasion of the almost annual debate on NED, the National Endowment for Democracy, we can and we must declare our commitment to promoting freedom in the world.

Freedom often exacts a price—it indeed is not free. Ronald Reagan understood this when he created NED, as have successive Presidents and Congresses who have consistently funded NED.

Freedom is sacred. It is to be honored, protected, and shared with the world. It is the core of all human progress, and therefore, the spread of freedom enriches us all.

But let us not forget, the price of freedom can be great. Just as we focus in this body these days on our abundance we must not forget those who have come before us; we must not forget in whose shoes we are walking. How many Americans have died; have put their lives on the line in the glorious pursuit of that sweetest of goals—emancipation from oppression and tyranny. We are the direct benefactors of the dedication, selflessness, and even the spilled blood, of countless people.

Should we be proud of those achievements? Of course, but we must also accept the weight—the responsibility—of this gift. The awesome responsibility which we have inherited. Because, when I said that freedom is not free, I was not only speaking of the cost to those currently suffering in the world to throw off the yoke of tyranny, but also the price to us, the benefactors of past actions.

We are once again on the floor of the Senate to defend the National Endowment for Democracy. The last time we fought this battle, 2 years ago, 72 Senators voted to restore the funding to NED after the subcommittee zeroed the account. We are here today facing the same circumstances. The good news with the regularity of this debate, if we look for the bright side, is that we know very well of the strong support in the Senate for NED. And let me explain why.

The history is important. In 1983, Ronald Reagan outlined an initiative for the United States to publicly lead the struggle for freedom around the world. A policy which I remember well as a young House Member and in many ways continues to influence my thinking about American foreign policy. A fundamental pillar of that policy was the National Endowment for Democracy.

Let me read to you from a letter by President Reagan, from July 4, 1993.

On this 217th anniversary of our nation's independence, I am reminded that America's greatness lies not only in our success at home, but in the example of leadership that we provide the entire world.

Our work, however, is not complete. As I look abroad, I see that the struggle between freedom and tyranny continues to be wages. Disappointly, in some places, it is autocracy, not freedom, that is winning the day. That is why I strongly support continued Congressional funding for the National Endowment for Democracy (NED). Ten years ago, at Westminster, you will recall that I outlined a new, bold initiative for our country to publicly lead the struggle for freedom abroad. As past of this effort, at my request, the National Endowment for Democracy was created.

Mr. President, let me point out a few fundamental things. First, NED is not a ''cold war relic,'' as some critics argue. You will note that President Reagan did not say that the purpose was to defeat communism, to defeat the Soviet Union, or to contain any particular ideology. He said that the mission of NED was to support America's efforts to ''lead the struggle for freedom.'' You should also note that the letter from which I read is dated July 4, 1993—2 years after the fall of the Soviet Union. So let me be clear: NED is not about the cold war and has never been exclusively about fighting communism or the Soviet Union. The National Endowment for Democracy is about freedom.

My second point is that the need for NED is as great today as it has ever been.

We opposed communism because the flawed ideology oppresses people and empowers tyrants. Communism has almost disappeared as a threat today; but tyranny has not—oppression has not. Indeed, tyranny and oppression continue to rule in far too many places around the globe. If you accept that we were right in the past to oppose freedom's foes, then we have the same task today, perhaps even more complicated than in the past.

This vote, therefore, comes down to a simple issue: does the struggle for freedom continue in the world and does the United States continue to have a role in the struggle for freedom abroad? Does tyranny still reign in far too many places on earth? The answer is quite obviously, ''yes.''

Let me address some critical questions others have raised.

Does NED work? NED works extremely well by providing resources to the freedom-activists throughout the world. NED identifies people struggling for economic, political, labor, press, and other reforms and gets them the resources necessary to fight against local oppression.

His Holiness the Dalai Lama of Tibet says the following about NED:

The National Endowment for Democracy furthers the goals of your great nation and has provided moral and substantive support for oppressed peoples everywhere. Its unique independent mission has brought information and hope to people committed to peace and freedom, including the Tibetans. I sincerely hope that this institution will continue to receive support, because America's real strength comes not from its status as a 'superpower' but from the ideals and principles on which it was founded.

So the final question which someone may rightly put to this debate: why not the State Department? Isn't NED redundant?

To answer this question, I defer to some experts who understand the executive branch and State Department well. I turn to a bipartisan group of former Secretaries of State and National Security Advisors.

In a 1995 letter, former National Security Advisors Allen, Carlucci, Brzezinski, and Scowcroft state that NED:

. . . operates in situations where direct government involvement is not appropriate. It is an exceptionally effective instrument in today's climate for reaching dedicated groups seeking to counter extreme nationalist and autocratic forces that are responsible for so much conflict and instability.

Let me emphasize that these National Security Advisors state that NED is operating where the U.S. government cannot.

I also have a letter from former Secretaries of State, including Secretaries Baker, Muskie, Eagleburger, Shultz, Haig, Vance, and Kissinger. This distinguished group states the following:

During this period of international change and uncertainty, the work of NED continues to be an important bipartisan but non-governmental contributor to democratic reform and freedom. We consider the non-governmental character of the NED even more relevant today than it was at NED's founding.

Let me review the main arguments. First, NED's necessity did not end with the cold war, but remains an integral part of America's opposition to the enemies of freedom. Second, the world continues to need America's invaluable work in promoting freedom—perhaps even now more than ever. And finally, NED makes a unique contribution to America's initiative to ''lead the struggle for freedom abroad.''

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the Lugar Amendment to restore funding to the National Endowment for Democracy.

One of the noblest characteristics of the American people is their desire to spread the promise of freedom and democracy throughout the world. In fact, the history of our nation is replete with examples of men and women who have put their own lives on the line in defense of other people's freedom.

The 9,386 U.S. soldiers buried at the Normandy American Cemetery in France are more than heroes. They are a testimony to the American willingness to defend democracy. Yet, they are just a few of the literally hundreds of thousands of Americans who have sacrificed their lives to secure democracy both at home and abroad.

However, the fight for freedom need not always be waged on the battlefield. Indeed, some of the greatest democratic victories have come, not as a result of our military might, but rather from the power of our ideas.

If you doubt this, ask Vaclav Havel how the irresistible pull of democratic values helped liberate the Czech people. Ask Nelson Mandela about how the persuasive power of American democracy helped encourage the struggle for freedom in South Africa's townships. Ask Kim Dae Jung about the decades of American sacrifice and the difference between life in a free South Korea and a totalitarian North Korea. Mr. President, each of these men have come before Congress to say that their freedom is due in no small part to the willingness of the American people to oppose despotism and to support nascent democratic movements in their country.

The transformation from totalitarianism to democracy that has swept much of the world in the last decade is nothing short of remarkable. Much of the success of this movement can be attributed to U.S. support for democratic movements, including the on-the-ground programs of the National Endowment for Democracy. This is a legacy of which we should be proud. It's a success story we should do a better job of explaining to the American people.

NED was established by Congress in 1983 as a non-profit, bi-partisan organization. It promotes democratic values by encouraging the development of democracy in a manner consistent with U.S. interests, assisting pro-democracy groups abroad, and strengthening electoral processes and democratic institutions. NED accomplishes these goals by providing funding to a wide variety of grantees that operate programs in more than 80 countries throughout the world.

Mr. President, for over 15 years the National Endowment for Democracy has been at the center of our global democracy efforts. Critics have argued it is a relic of the Cold War. They insist NED's usefulness as an organization disappeared with the Soviet Union. This simply is not the case. As long as there are people still struggling to be free, there will be a need to support democratic reforms. The truth is, almost two-fifths of the world's population still live in un-democratic countries. In these countries, people are not given the ability to speak their minds, to practice their religious beliefs, or to unleash the power of their own enterprise.

NED grantees are in these countries and are working with pro-democracy groups. In Cuba, NED grantees are helping local dissidents use the world wide web to interconnect and to spread independent news. NED sponsors radio broadcasts into Burma in support of the democracy movement led by Aung San Suu Kyi. And in Iraq, NED provides support for the Free Iraq Foundation to disseminate human rights information from within Saddam Hussein's brutal regime.

Beyond extending the power of democracy to those people still toiling under despotic governments, NED is also actively engaged in the effort to solidify democratic progress. Democracy does not exist simply after the first free and fair election—democracy cannot be established solely by the ballot box. Instead, a true democratic society is based on the foundations of the rule of law, respect for the rights of all people, a free press, and civilian control of the military.

In countries around the world, NED grantees are involved in helping develop this broader concept of democracy. For example, in Russia NED grantees are supporting efforts to promote the rule of law and to establish legal guarantees for the ownership of land. In Nigeria, they have supported local pro-democracy groups who were instrumental in facilitating this year's historic elections. These are examples of the hundreds of programs NED and its grantees have been involved with in support of democratic reform.

Mr. President, I come to the floor today to argue that the fight for democracy is as important to U.S. national security today as it was at the height of the Cold War. It is for this reason that I will vote in favor of the Lugar amendment to restore funding for the National Endowment for Democracy. I recognize the tight discretionary spending limits the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Subcommittee were forced to work under. I understand very difficult decisions had to be made in preparing the piece of legislation. However, there are few priorities as great, and few programs as cost-effective, as our global democracy efforts.

I urge my colleagues to support freedom around the world by supporting the National Endowment for Democracy and the Lugar amendment.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, this amendment will restore $30 million in funding for the National Endowment for Democracy.

I understand that the State Department accounts are severely underfunded and there is no easy way to fund these programs, and I will work to ensure that all the State Department accounts are funded by the time this bill emerges from conference.

In spite of the unfortunate position we now find ourselves, it is nevertheless critical that we restore the funding for the National Endowment for Democracy.

Today we will debate the merits of the NED and the importance of its mission. This will be the seventh time in the last seven years that the Senate debates NED funding.

The last time this debate took place, in 1997, an effort to eliminate NED funding was reversed by a vote of 72–27.

I am hopeful that this current debate will reach a similar conclusion.

But this debate is really about much more than the National Endowment for Democracy.

What we are debating here today goes to the very fundamental nature of our democracy.

Are we to continue to be the beacon of freedom to which oppressed peoples around the world look to for guidance and support in their struggles to attain the same liberties and freedoms that we hold so dear?

Or are we going to shrink from that responsibility and abandon those who seek to change the fundamental character of their nations so that their people may enjoy the benefits of freedom?

Around the world, the NED is a vibrant and effective advocate for the ideals for which our fore fathers risked their lives and sacred honors.

It is our ambassador to the oppressed people of the world who are fighting and risking their lives for freedom.

But you don't need to take my word for this. Let me tell you about some others who believe that the NED is as important as I do.

In 1995, seven former Secretaries of State sent a letter to the congressional leadership that stated:

> During this period of international change and uncertainty, the work of the NED continues to be an important bi-partisan but non-governmental contributor to democratic reform and freedom.

Four Former National Security Advisors, Allen, Brzezinski, Carlucci, and Scowcroft, wrote that ''the endowment remains a critical and cost-effective investment in a more secure America, and we support its work.''

Just this week, the New York Times editorialized on the importance of the NED, and the Wall Street Journal printed a piece by former President Carter and Paul Wolfowitz, an official in the Reagan and Bush administrations, that did the same.

So many as champions of democracy have recognized the important contribution of NED to their own work.

These include Harry Wu, the Chinese human rights activist, His Holiness the Dalai Lama, Elena Bonner, the chairman of the Andrei Sakharov Foundation, and Vaclav Havel.

To some here in Congress, the NED is a target to undermine and defund.

But to those struggling to overcome oppression in some 80 or 90 countries around the world, NED is a helping hand in their fight for democracy.

I ask my colleagues to stand with freedom and democracy, to stand with those who have led democratic transitions, and to stand with those who continue to pursue the dream of democracy around the world.

I ask my colleagues to stand with the NED.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I rise today in strong support of the Lugar amendment, which will restore funding for the National Endowment for Democracy (NED). Since its inception in 1983, NED has been a cost-effective means of ensuring that American democratic principles have the opportunity to flourish around the world. NED works on a bipartisan basis in over 80 countries in every region of the world to help build stable, peaceful democracies. This, in turn, furthers America's national security interests, since working to support secure, strong democracies is one of the most effective means of combating the spread of weapons of mass destruction, terrorism, and destabilizing refugee problems.

NED enjoys strong, bipartisan support, receiving the support of each administration and the bipartisan congressional leadership since its inception. In a recent editorial in the Wall Street Journal, former President Jimmy Carter and Ambassador Paul Wolfowitz, President Bush's Under Secretary of Defense, wrote: ''The creation of the NED in the 1980s reflected a bipartisan belief that the promotion of freedom is an enduring American interest and that nongovernmental representatives would best be able to help their counterparts build democracy in other countries.''

NED has a strong track record, developed through involvement in virtually every critical struggle for democracy of the past decade-and-a-half. NED provided vital support to the movements that brought about peaceful transitions to democracy in Poland, Chile, and South Africa. Indeed, as a recent New York Times editorial noted: ''It is hard to think of a dictatorship whose opponents have not benefited from the endowment.''

NED uses its funds efficiently and effectively. A recent audit conducted by the U.S. Information Agency's Inspector General looked at fiscal years 1994–1999 and did not question a single cost related to the management of NED's grants.

NED's independence is the key to its success. Without the restoration of NED's funding as a separate, congressionally mandated line item, NED will have to be funded through the State Department's foreign aid process. This would undermine NED's independence, and therefore its effectiveness.

If NED were to be too closely associated with the Department of State, then NED might be seen as merely a mouthpiece for whatever administration currently occupies the White House. This would dilute its effectiveness.

NED must be allowed to continue to make decisions about where to provide its vital assistance without having first to clear those decisions through the State Department bureaucracy, which may not always share NED's agenda. The United States carries out high-level diplomatic relations with a number of nondemocratic regimes, such as China. The State Department might be tempted to scale back NED's democracy-building activities in such countries if the Department viewed those activities as interfering with the Department's diplomatic agenda. This must not be allowed to happen, and keeping NED independent is the only way to ensure that it does not.

The Lugar amendment restores funding for this vital organization while ensuring its independence. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I rise to express my support for the amendment of the Senator from Indiana and am confident that it will be approved by a majority of my colleagues.

This is the second time in 3 years that funding for the National Endowment for Democracy has been eliminated in the Senate Commerce-Justice-State appropriations bill. And this is the second time this year that we are debating the NED issue on the floor of the Senate despite consistently overwhelming votes in favor of the NED.

I find it difficult to understand why we keep returning to this matter when the record is clear—there is a consensus of support for the endowment in the Senate. As my colleagues are aware, last month there was an effort on a different measure (State Department authorization bill) to seriously undermine and weaken the National Endowment for Democracy and the work of its core institutes. That amendment was soundly defeated on a vote of 76–23. In 1997, NED funding was restored by the Senate on a vote of 72–27.

Over the years, the NED and its core institutes have done some extremely effective work around the world in strengthening and assisting in the development of democratic institutions, and protecting individual rights and freedoms.

The relationship between NED and its core institutes has worked rather well. These four core entities, including the National Democratic Institute (NDI) and the International Republican Institute (IRI), represent key sectors of our democratic society: business and labor, and the two political parties which have formed a major part of the American democratic system.

Each sector offers a special expertise in helping develop fledgling democratic systems and has assisted grassroots and indigenous organizations, civic groups, and individuals across the globe in more than 90 countries.

Indeed, many individuals and groups, recognized in the Congress for having fought for human rights, freedom, and democracy, have received vital support from the NED family. They, in turn, have praised the NED because of the critical assistance which made it possible for them to pursue valuable efforts in their own countries.

I should note that the NED has provided support to Chinese dissidents since its establishment in 1983. In fact, the endowment's first grant in 1984 was for a Chinese-language journal edited in the United States and circulated in China.

The NED serves an important role because of the fact that it can operate as an entity independent from any government. And it can support nongovernmental groups which provide opportunities that would not otherwise be available if these activities were undertaken by a government, or governmental agency.

In fact, NED grants have been helpful in leveraging resources from the private sector and encouraging other international institutions to participate as well. And in-kind contributions, for example, come in the form of experts who offer their free time and efforts on a probono basis to conduct training seminars and to monitor elections worldwide.

The National Endowment for Democracy has enjoyed broad bipartisan support since it was established in 1983 under President Ronald Reagan. Former Secretaries of State, including Henry Kissinger, Cy Vance, Ed Muskie, George Shultz, and Jim Baker all have been very supportive of NED's work and its ''strong track record in assisting . . . significant democratic movements over the past decade.''

In a letter this week to my colleague from Florida, national security adviser Sandy Berger reaffirmed the President's and his administration's strong support for the NED. As he indicates, ''from supporting election monitoring in Indonesia, to promoting independent media in the Balkans, the NED represents and promotes the most fundamental of American values throughout the world. . . . The President remains one of the strongest champions of the endowment''.

The sweeping and profound changes resulting from the end of the cold war provide ample reason as to why we continue to need institutions like the NED which can operate in a cost-effective manner and, at the same time, promote our interests and values. Many of the new democratics which have emerged from the implosion of the Soviet Union, and the collapse of the Iron Curtain, have benefited from the assistance NED and its grantees have provided.

It is my hope that my colleagues will see the wisdom of continuing support for the NED.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise today as a cosponsor of the LUGAR-Graham-Mack amendment to restore funding to the National Endowment for Democracy. I rise as an unwavering supporter of the Endowment since that day in 1982, when President Ronald Reagan announced his intent to create an institution to promote abroad the most fundamental of American political values —democracy.

Since the Endowment was instituted the following year, it has received overwhelming bipartisan support. On six occasions the Senate has debated funding for the NED; on all six occasions the Senate has reaffirmed its commitment. We most recently debated funding the Endowment in 1997 and reaffirmed our support for it in a vote of 72–27. I expect that today the Senate will once again go on record demonstrating support for this venerable institution.

Support for the NED goes beyond bipartisan politics. Rarely is there such near-unanimity in the so-called ''foreign policy establishment.'' But, in recent years, we have seen seven former Secretaries of State from both Republican and Democratic presidents—Secretaries Eagleburger, Baker, Haig, Kissinger, Muskie, Shultz and Vance—cosign a letter in support of the National Endowment for Democracy.

But the NED's support extends well beyond the Beltway into American society at large. For example, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce strongly supports the Endowment, recognizing that the promotion of democracy requires the rule of law, on which all fundamental, productive commercial activity rests. The AFL–CIO is also a principal supporter of the NED, recognizing the inseparable bond between the advancement of democracy and the protection of independent labor's right to organize.

Both of these organizations, along with the Republican and Democrat parties, form the core groups through which the NED coordinates programs currently active in over 80 countries of the world.

Further, support for the NED is widespread among our nation's media, editorialists and academics. How often, Mr. President, do we see editorials in support of an institution on the pages of liberal and conservative media? There has recently been editorial support for NED expressed by The Washington Post, New York Times, Wall Street Journal and The Washington Times. I ask unanimous consent that the editorials be added at the conclusion of my statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I often detect confusion in foreign policy debate between the concepts of ''interest'' and ''values.'' For example, the President, at the end of Operation Allied Force over Yugoslavia, declared it an operation in support of our values. I disagree: The NATO actions in Kosovo, which I supported, protected American interests, specifically our interests in a stable southeastern Europe.

The fact is that defining America's national interest is more fundamental than the promotion of democracy. But the reality is, Mr. President, that where we find democracy we are more likely to find it easier to protect our interests.

For this reason, the advancement of democracy as a foreign policy goal has by no means been diminished by the end of the Cold War. I supported the actions of the NED during the Cold War, along with members of both parties. I worked with the NED and International Labor Organization supporting the nascent Solidarity movement in the early 1980s and am deeply proud of the work done by NED's early grantees.

But the world is more complicated, with more challenges to U.S. interests, in the post-Cold War era. We need the NED more than ever. And if we look around this complicated globe, we see that NED's activities are complementing our foreign policy.

China is perhaps the most vexing challenge this country faces. We cannot determine the direction political evolution in China will take. We hope for the day when democracy spreads to the mainland.

Our dear friends in Taiwan, after all, have demonstrated that Chinese political culture is by no means alien to democracy. But on the mainland, the goals of political reform are murky. We don't know what the outcome will be in the next century—it may be democracy, it may be fascism, it may be something else.

There is evidence to be optimistic, as we see the increasing manifestations of grassroots democracy and openness. Unfortunately, there is also evidence to be skeptical, given official actions that imprison democratic activists, outlaw non-political organizations, and threaten aggression against us and our friends. My attitude has always been to plan for the worst, but work for the best possible outcome.

One of those ways to work for the best possible outcome is to support the NED, which has promoted democracy in China since its inception. A brief and incomplete list of NED's activities in China would include:

Supporting, as one of its first grants, a Chinese-language journal that circulated in China in the mid-1980s;

Supporting a New York-based human rights group, Human Rights in China, which assembled basic data on conditions in China;

Assisting Harry Wu's Laogai Research Foundation, which exposed the abhorrent abuses in China's prison labor system; and,

Contributing to the Tibetan Human Rights Foundation.

In addition, my colleagues who have read the fascinating reports by the International Republican Institute on their work advising on and monitoring village level elections in China will recognize a practical and profoundly significant activity funded by the Endowment. These are among many, many other programs supported by the NED in China.

The skeptics can say that NED's activities are small in comparison to Beijing's power to suppress. That is true. But my view is that it is always better to light a candle than curse the darkness, and the NED has been providing light and support to democrats in China, throughout Asia, and all around the world.

Indonesia just had its first free and open elections in over 40 years. Indonesia is the fourth most populous nation in the world after China, India and the United States.

As a result of this election, a country that has historically had good relations with us, a country that remains of great geostrategic importance, is now set to become the world's third largest democracy. Indonesia is a country with which we've had shared interests; those interests are now advanced because we now have shared political values. The ruling and opposition parties consulted with the NED throughout the period leading to these historic elections.

I could go on and on about NED's activities promoting democracy around the world. I will simply add one more example: Three weeks ago a remarkable conference on emerging democracies was held in Yemen. Yemen, my colleagues will recall, was divided until 1990—South Yemen was one of the most radical countries in the Arab world.

Since reunification in 1990, the NED has worked through its core institutes, the International Republican Institute and the National Democratic Institute, to support that country's transition to democracy. Yemen has had two parliamentary elections and is today one of the few Arab nations that has universal suffrage.

The government of Yemen deserves the credit for this remarkable political evolution and deserves the support of the United States. But we should be proud, very proud, of the efforts that the NED has expounded in assisting this political reform. And, three weeks ago, when representatives from around the world convened in Yemen to see that this nation of 18 million can enhance its culture and empower its people through democracy, it was appropriate that they saw the NED as a supporter of democracy there, and everywhere.

In recognition of these and other activities, brave democracy proponents around the world—individuals that Congress regularly lauds, that we regularly bring to the Hill for their perspectives on their parts of the world—these individuals have spoken of the need to preserve the NED.

Hong Kong's Martin Lee, Chinese human rights activist Harry Wu, Vietnamese human rights activist Vo Van Ai, his Eminence the Dalai Lama have all declared the fundamental and irreplaceable importance of the NED in trying to advance democratic values in China, in Asia, around the world.

I urge my colleagues to think of these individuals as they determine whether the Senate should continue to support funding for the National Endowment for Democracy.

In every region of the world where the U.S. has interests or is challenged—in Bosnia, Kosovo, Iraq—there are people striving and risking their lives for democratic expression. They see the United States as a role model.

The NED is actively working with all of these people, and in doing so, demonstrates America's—and Congress's—commitment to their causes. I urge my colleagues to continue their support for this important institution.

[From the New York Times, July 21, 1999]

A VOTE FOR DEMOCRACY ABROAD

In most repressive countries today, civic activists such as election monitors, labor organizers, independent journalists and human rights groups look to Washington for support. But the Senate may vote any day to end one of their most important lifelines. Judd Gregg, Republican of New Hampshire, has persuaded the Appropriations Committee to recommend that the National Endowment for Democracy's funding drop from $31 million to zero. The Senate should defy him and vote to preserve an organization whose mission is more vital than ever.

The endowment finances four international affairs institutes, run by the Republican and Democratic parties, the Chamber of Commerce and the A.F.L.-C.I.O. The endowment also gives money directly to organizations abroad that promote the rule of law and democracy. One of its strengths is that its budget is independent of the State Department.

It is hard to think of a dictatorship whose opponents have not benefited from the endowment. Among hundreds of other projects, it has provided money and advice for village elections and exposure of prison labor camps in China, human rights groups in Sudan, independent broadcasting in Serbia, families of political prisoners in Cuba and the underground labor movement in Myanmar. Augusto Pinochet might still be ruling Chile if the National Democratic Institute had not helped the opposition set up a parallel vote count during the 1988 plebiscite on his rule, which caught Mr. Pinochet's attempt to rig the outcome. The endowment has earned the right to remain healthy and independent.

DON'T TAKE DEMOCRACY FOR GRANTED

(By Jimmy Carter and Paul Wolfowitz)

Last month Indonesia held its first free elections in more than 40 years. The balloting was overseen by a wide array of international observers, including an American delegation organized by the National Democratic Institute and the International Republican Institute. Their efforts have laid the groundwork for Indonesia to become the world's third-largest democracy (after India and the U.S.) and a beacon of freedom for Asians and Muslims everywhere.

This is only the latest good work done by the two groups, loosely affiliated with the major U.S. political parties, which monitored an election in Nigeria earlier this year. Both groups are funded by a modest grant ($4 million each) provided by the National Endowment for Democracy.

Fifteen years ago President Reagan and Congress established the NED to spearhead America's nongovernmental efforts at assisting democratic movements around the world. The NED, which today has a budget of just $31 million, has been one of the most cost-effective investments our country has made to foster peace and democracy.

But last month a Senate subcommittee voted to discontinue funding for this vital program. The senators said they expect the State Department to fund the NED out of foreign-aid spending. This is an unlikely prospect, because the State Department hasn't made any provisions for the endowment.

Even if it did, that would undermine the NED's independence. The creation of the NED in the 1980s reflected a bipartisan belief that the promotion of freedom is an enduring American interest and that nongovernmental representatives would best be able to help their counterparts build democracy in other countries.

Today the full Senate is expected to consider an amendment sponsored by Sen. Richard Lugar (R., Ind.) to restore funding for the NED. It would be a tragic mistake if we took for granted the current democratic trend in world affairs and decided to reduce our support for these efforts.

Like Indonesia, many important countries that have conducted elections—among them Russia, Mexico and Nigeria—need the support of free nations in order to consolidate democratic gains. We must also help movements in Asia and the Middle East striving peacefully to democratize authoritarian countries. And we need to encourage free and fair elections as part of the reconstruction effort in the Balkans. Defunding the NED would undermine this important mission.

EXPORTING DEMOCRACY

The National Endowment for Democracy is one of the less known but, in the foreign policy universe, one of the more appreciated aspects of the Ronald Reagan legacy. Congressionally funded but largely independent in its operations, it mainly gives grants to the two political parties and leading business and labor groups to spread the word of civil societies, party development and election procedures, and democratic and human rights advocacy. Recognized abroad, it is scrutinized closely at home, which is fine but a bit unnerving to its supporters all the same.

This week, for instance, Sen. Russell Feingold (D-Wis), in an authorization bill, sought to strip the endowment of its favor for and reliance on the four ''core'' groups and to put the whole of the institution's $30 million budget up for competitive political bidding. It sounded like a reasonable, even democratic proposal, but three-quarters of the Senate wisely accepted the response that the endowment, with its support for the two parties and the AFL–CIO and Chamber of Commerce, already builds in a wholesome set of checks and balances true to the spirit of American democracy.

A lingering difficulty arises from Sen. Judd Gregg (R-NH). Making use of the deference enjoyed by Appropriations subcommittee chairmen, he has held up all funds sought for the endowment. He would prefer that the administration take the money out of the State Department, which, he points out, funds democracy promotion under its own budget.

Mr. Gregg is right that the Cold War is over. But considerations of strategy as well as sentiment require that the effort to sustain fledging democratic societies and initiatives ought to be a permanent part of American policy. To tuck the endowment into the State Department, moreover, would deprive it of precisely the independence wherein its chief value lies. Can you imagine, for instance, the ''engagement''-minded State Department sponsoring Chinese nongovernmental organizations?

In sum, the endowment is an experiment to exporting democracy that has been working openly, for 15 years. It has been tested in heavy political weather, some of it churned up by its own early misuses. There is reason to believe the Senate would support the appropriation if Sen. Gregg were to let it register its judgment. That would be the democratic thing for him to do.

LET THE NED LIVE

At a time when the United States and its allies are engaged in what could be a prolonged war of words with Serbian leader Slabodan Milosevic, it is nothing less than astounding that the U.S. Senate should see fit to zero out funding for one of the most important tools in the nation's ideological arsenal, the National Endowment for Democracy. Mr. Milosevic may have acknowledged military defeat, but he still clings to power with the tenacity of a badger. A major problem in removing Mr. Milosevic is the regrettable fact that he was in fact democratically elected by the Serbs, who therefore also carry responsibility for what happened to them. It will take some effort to persuade them to remove their leader again by democratic means.

This is where the National Endowment for Democracy comes in, and also the other U.S. services and international broadcasters devoted to spreading free and unfettered information and building democratic institutions. To dwell on Serbia for a moment, the state television channel is run by none other than Mr. Milosevic's daughter, a filial relationship replayed throughout the states of the former Soviet Union, where assorted family members routinely are placed in charge of the post-communist ''free'' media.

If we are concerned about spreading democracy, and we should be, institutions like the National Endowment for Democracy remains vital. What is also vital is that the NED be kept at arm's length from State Department interference, that it not be seen as simply a tool of American foreign policy, but an institution whose basic mission remains fixed.

This year, the Clinton administration has requested $32 million in funding for the NED for fiscal year 2000, hardly an exorbitant sum given that the NED has programs in 80 countries around the world. Though there is broad bipartisan support in the Senate for the NED, its funding has been zeroed out by the Appropriations subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State, chaired by Sen. Judd Gregg. It has been suggested that funding ought to come out of the State Department's democracy fund, a bad idea both in principle and in practice—seeing that no such funding has been allocated. Last time the NED survived a frontal assault, it was two years ago when funding was restored on the Senate floor with overwhelming support. Another line of assault was blocked by the Senate yesterday by a 76–23 vote, as Sen. Russ Feingold tried to introduce an amendment to micromanage NED grants through State.

One might get the idea that the U.S. Senate does not consider the promotion of democracy a worthy cause in and of itself. No, it does not produce instant results, but the world's greatest democracy should be in this for the long haul.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I urge the question.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 1289) was agreed to.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. GREGG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FITZGERALD). The Senator from New Hampshire.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Mai-Huong Nguyen, a fellow with Senator FRIST's office, be granted the privilege of the floor during the discussion on the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1291

(Purpose: To amend title III of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act and title IV of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 to limit the effects of domestic violence on the lives of children, and for other purposes)

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WELLSTONE], for himself and Mrs. MURRAY, proposes an amendment numbered 1291.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under ''Amendments Submitted.'')

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, this amendment that I offer, with the support of Senator MURRAY, is an amendment which is really based upon a piece of legislation we have introduced titled ''Children Who Witness Domestic Violence Protection Act.''

We have come to the floor, Democrats and Republicans alike, and we have talked about the destructive effect of some of the violence that children see on television or children see at the movies. Unfortunately, an awful lot of children see the most graphic violence in their homes, and they are affected by it.

It depends upon, really, whose study you put the most emphasis on, but somewhere between 3 million and 5 million children in our country all too often are essentially victims of violence in their homes. In about 50 percent of the cases, when a man batters a woman, the children are also battered. Just imagine, colleagues, what it would be like over and over and over again to see your mother beaten up, battered. Just think of the effect it would have on you.

Actually, this is an area in which I have tried to do a lot of work. I would say my wife Sheila has really been my teacher. She knows more than I do, and her education comes from what lots of people around the country who have worked in this area for a very long time have taught her.

But one of the missing pieces, which in no way, shape, or form takes away the emphasis on the effect of this violence on women—sometimes men; most all the time women—one of the missing pieces has been the effect of this violence in homes on the children. Let me give you some examples.

Julie is a 4-year-old girl. She was the only witness to her divorced mother's fatal stabbing. Several months earlier, at the time of the divorce, Julie's father had publicly threatened to kill his ex-wife. Although the father lacked an alibi for the night of the crime, there was no physical evidence linking him to the homicide.

In describing the event, Julie consistently placed her father at the scene and recounted her father's efforts to clean up prior to leaving. Only after the district attorney saw Julie stabbing a pillow, crying, ''Daddy pushed mommy down,'' did he become convinced that the father, indeed, was the murderer.

This is from the work of Jeff Edelson, who actually is a Minnesotan and does some of the most important work in the country. There is no more graphic example of: What do you think the effect on the child is from seeing this?

Dr. Okin and Alicia Lieberman at San Francisco General Hospital are currently treating a 6-year-old boy who observed his father fatally sever his mother's neck. At the beginning of the treatment, he was unable to speak.

Jason, who did not visually witness his parents fighting, described hearing fights this way: ''I really thought somebody got hurt. It sounded like it. And I almost started to cry. It felt really, I was thinking of calling, calling the cops or something because it was really getting, really big banging and stuff like that.''

These are voices of children in the country.

A lot of the work for this amendment comes from some people who have done very distinguished work in this country.

Betsy McAlster Groves at Boston Hospital is treating a 3-year-old girl, Sarah, who was brought in by her maternal grandmother. Sarah was having nightmares and was clinging and anxious during the day. Her mother had been fatally shot while Sarah was in the same room in their home.

A home is supposed to be a safe place for our children.

Betsy is also treating two boys, ages 5 and 7, whose mother brought them in after they witnessed their father's assault on her. The father was arrested over the weekend and was in jail. The mother was unable to tell the sons the truth, instead claiming that their father had taken a trip to Virginia.

What I am saying to you is that these children do not need to turn on the evening news. They do not need to see the violence in the movies or on television. It occurs right in their own homes.

What I am also saying is that this has a very destructive effect on many children, a profound effect, placing them at high risk for anxiety, depression, and, potentially, suicide. Furthermore, these children themselves may become more violent as they become older. Exposure to family violence, a good number of the experts in the country suggest, is the strongest predictor of violent, delinquent behavior among adolescents. It is estimated somewhere between 20 and 40 percent of chronically violent adolescents have witnessed extreme parental conflict.

It is an important point. When you talk to your judges, and they talk about some of the kids they are dealing with, they will tell you that in a very high percentage of the cases these children have come from homes where either they themselves have been beaten up or battered or they have seen it, they have witnessed it. Usually it is their mother they have seen beaten up.

Let me tell you about Tony and Sara from Minnesota. Tony is 10 years old and his sister Sara is 8. Tony and Sara were severely traumatized after seeing their father brutally attack their mother. They were forced to watch their father drag their mother out to the driveway, douse her with gasoline, and hold a flaming match inches from her.

Tony and Sara are not the only children in our country who are terrified by violence that they see on almost a daily basis.

This amendment, which is based upon work with Senator MURRAY, is a comprehensive first step toward confronting the impact of domestic violence on children. I just want to summarize it because it is my hope that there will be strong support for this on both sides of the aisle.

First of all, what we want to do, based upon, again, work we have seen in Minnesota, we have seen in Boston, we have seen in San Francisco, seen around the country, is we want to make sure we develop partnerships between the courts and the schools, the health care providers, the child protective services, and the battered women's programs.

When communities apply for funding, the first thing we are going to say is, yes, make this happen at the community level, but do not have different agencies with different mandates. You guys have to show us that you are focusing on these children and you are getting the support services to these children.

I say to my colleague from South Carolina, I have talked to many educators. They say one of the problems they have is that quite often they may have a child in school who is not doing well and they do not know what is going on with that child. And what they find out—and this is the second part of this amendment, training for school officials about domestic violence and its impact on children, making sure they have the training and the support services for the teachers and the counselors—many times these kids haven't slept at night. Many times these kids come to school terrified. Many times these kids act out themselves. Many times these kids are in trouble, and many times we don't know what is going on in their lives.

We have finally started to focus on this violence in homes, too much of it directed toward women. But if you talk to people around the country who are down in the trenches doing the best work, from the academics to the community activists, they will tell you the missing piece is we have not focused enough on the effects on the children. That is what this amendment does.

The third piece of this amendment addresses domestic violence and the people who work to protect our children from abuse and neglect. There is a significant overlap, obviously, between domestic violence and child abuse. In families where one form of family violence exists, there is a likelihood that the other does. In about 50 percent of the cases, if the mother is being battered, the child is being battered. So the problem is these child protective services and domestic violence organizations set up their own separate programs, yet few of them work together to see what is happening within families.

This amendment creates incentives for local governments to collaborate with domestic violence agencies in administering their child welfare programs. The funds will be awarded to States and local governments to work collaboratively with community-based domestic violence programs to provide training, to do screening, to assist child welfare service agencies in recognizing the overlap between domestic violence and child abuse, to develop protocols for screening, intake, assessment and investigation, and to increase the safety and well-being of the child witnesses of domestic violence.

I could go on for hours about this because, honest to God, it is a huge issue in our country. I wish it wasn't.

The second piece of this—and I will be through in 5 minutes—is supervised visitation centers. I have to explain this. Part of the problem is, even if you have a woman who has said: I am getting out of this home, or I am getting my husband out of this home; he is a batterer, and she finally is able to do it—it is not easy—and you have small children, the other parent, the noncustodial parent, usually the man, wants to see the children and should be able to under most circumstances. The problem is, at the time in which he comes to the home to pick up the children or drop the children off, the violence can occur again. There is no safety there. Or the problem is in some cases you are worried about what the father will do to the children. But a judge doesn't want to say: You can never see your children. And sometimes, as a result of that, the children are in real jeopardy. So the second part of this authorizes funding for supervised visitation centers.

These are visitation centers where there can be a safe exchange.

At the risk of being melodramatic, let me dedicate this amendment to 5-year-old Brandon and 4-year-old Alex, who were murdered by their father during an unsupervised visit in Minnesota. They were beautiful children. Their mother Angela was separated from Kurt Frank, the children's father. During her marriage, Angela was physically and emotionally abused by Frank, and Frank had hit Brandon and split open his lip when once he had stepped between the father and the mother to protect the mother. She had an order of protection—Shiela and I both know Angela; she is very courageous—against Kurt Frank, but during the custody hearings, her request for the husband to only receive supervised visits was rejected. Kurt Frank murdered his two sons, these two children, during an unsupervised visit, and then he killed himself.

Honest to God, when there is some question about the safety of these children, we can do better. These safe visitation centers work. It makes all the sense in the world. These children's lives could have been saved. The father could have seen them, but it would have been under some supervision. That is the second part.

Third, the amendment recognizes the importance of police officers. This amendment comes from input from the law enforcement community around the country. What they are saying is: Quite often we are the ones who find the traumatized children behind the doors, beneath the furniture, in the closets, when we go to the homes. We want to know what we can do for these children. We would like to have the training. That is what this amendment provides for.

Then, finally, for crisis nurseries, it is important. A family is in crisis. The mother has two children dealing with an abusive relationship, trying to end the relationship. There is lots of tension in the home. There is the potential for violence. She wants to be able to take her child somewhere or her two children somewhere where they can be safe for one night or 2 days or 3 days. That is what these crisis nurseries do. They work well.

We have talked about the violence in the media. We have talked about the violence in the video games. But we rarely have dealt with the millions of children each year who are witnessing real-life violence in their homes. I believe we have to figure out ways to get the funding to the communities that will provide the support.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator from Minnesota yield for a question?

Mr. WELLSTONE. I am pleased to yield.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, the Senate and the Nation are fortunate, indeed, to have the Senator from Minnesota. He continues to redirect our attention to the life and death struggles that families go through every single day. Oftentimes he is a lonely voice on the Senate floor, but he is a person of principle and value. If it meets with his permission, I ask unanimous consent to be added as a cosponsor to this important amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. I ask the Senator from Minnesota a question. I listened carefully to his presentation and asked for a copy of the amendment to read it more closely.

One of the things I have found in working with law enforcement officials—I think the Senator from Minnesota has highlighted it—is they come upon a scene where a violent crime, maybe a very serious violent crime has been committed, and among all of their concerns, preserving evidence, making certain, if possible, to save any victim who might be battered or injured, there is that tiny little person who has just witnessed this scene.

When I spoke to the International Association of Chiefs of Police, one of the things which we discussed was to put on each investigative report from a violent crime a section that would indicate that the police know that minor children witnessed the violent crime and perhaps a method, then, of providing confidential information to counselors or social workers who would know. Then there is a heads-up, there is a red flag, that there has been a child involved. That child may be so young as to be overlooked as part of the investigation report, and they have suggested—and I think it is valuable, and perhaps at some point we can make it part of this effort—that law enforcement officials would be looking for this because, as the Senator from Minnesota has so eloquently given to the Senate today in his presentation, these kids witnessing violence can have their lives changed dramatically. An intervention at that point could not only make things better for them but could ultimately save their lives.

I ask the Senator from Minnesota if he would be kind enough to consider that either as a suggestion as part of this legislation or in separate correspondence with those who would administer the programs he has suggested.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I wonder if we could do a modification right now—I will work it up in the next couple of minutes—where, as Senator DURBIN is saying, the police would automatically check off the observation that a child or the children are at home as a part of the form. Then, again, if you had it at the community level, that is where this has to happen—the real interface and cooperation with school officials, with child protective services, with health care, with law enforcement, with counselors in the school—the focus would be on the child. These children are falling between the cracks.

Mr. President, that would be an excellent idea. I will try to maybe work on a modification. I am sure my colleagues will allow me to do a technical correction later.

Altogether, this is an authorization for an appropriation, but it is authorization for $153 million a year for 3 years, which I think is not much to spend for what we can do. Later on, I know this gets resolved in the appropriations battle. I ask my colleagues whether they have a response. I can talk about this in more detail. I can go through the budget. I can talk about each specific program. But if you want to move along and you think this is something you can support, I would be very proud. I think it would be important.

Mr. GREGG. If the Senator from Minnesota will yield, this is a fairly extensive piece of legislation. It may take us a little while to take a look at it. I suggest we lay it aside for a moment and move on to whatever comes next and then come back to it, if the Senator doesn't mind.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I say to my colleague I am pleased to do that. That will give us a chance to add the suggestion of Senator DURBIN, and if we need to debate later on, I can give lots of examples and debate the need for this. If my colleagues support it, that will be great. Let's wait and see what you think. We will temporarily lay this amendment aside.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1292

(Purpose: To clarify that nothing in the Act shall be construed to prevent the use of funds to recover Federal tobacco-related health costs from responsible third parties)

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Florida [Mr. GRAHAM], for himself, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. CONRAD, Mr. REED, Mr. WELLSTONE, Mrs. MURRAY, and Mr. FEINGOLD, proposes an amendment numbered 1292.

At the appropriate place in title I, insert the following:

SEC. . AUTHORITY TO RECOVER TOBACCO-RELATED COSTS.

Nothing in this Act shall be construed to prohibit the Department of Justice from expending amounts made available under this title for tobacco-related litigation or for the payment of expert witnesses called to provide testimony in such litigation.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I offer this amendment on behalf of myself, Senator DURBIN, and others, as a means of raising our strong objection to a provision that appeared in the report accompanying the Senate Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill. That provision was on two pages.

On page 15 of the report, the last sentence in the first paragraph reads:

No funds are provided for tobacco litigation or the Joint Center for Strategic Environmental Enforcement.

Then on page 25, in the lower half of the page, this sentence appears:

No funds are provided for expert witnesses called to provide testimony in tobacco litigation.

My objection is that those two sentences have with them a clear inference that it is the policy of the Senate that the Department of Justice, in a rare instance, should be denied the investigative and prosecutorial discretion to determine whether it is in the interest of the United States and its people for the Federal Government to bring litigation against the tobacco industry and pursue that litigation in an effective manner.

Even more troubling is the sweeping nature of this language, which I believe could be reasonably interpreted to amount to a grant of immunity to the tobacco industry from Federal prosecution.

Further, if the Senate fails to strike this offending report language which grants immunity to the tobacco industry, we will be reversing the intent of a sense-of-the-Senate amendment we adopted less than 4 months ago by a unanimous vote, on March 25. The Senate clearly articulated not only that it was supportive of the Federal litigation but determined that the use of settlement dollars should be primarily to add to the strength of the Medicare trust fund on the basis that it is the Medicare trust fund that has been primarily affected by these excessive health care costs. I will discuss that in a moment.

While preparing a litigation strategy and while allowing the Department of Justice to exercise its traditional range of discretion, it is by no means a guarantee of success. Denying funds to the Department of Justice, tying their hands at the outset, precluding them from the ability to hire expert witnesses will only assure the failure of this important legal initiative.

We all know the tobacco industry is responsible for tens of billions of dollars of tobacco-related illnesses that the Federal Government spends to care for and treat individuals with lung cancer, emphysema, heart disease, and every other illness associated with tobacco use.

The most recent estimate for the costs incurred by the Federal Government for the treatment of tobacco-related illnesses totals $22.2 billion each year. This includes Medicare, $14.1 billion; Veterans' Administration, $4 billion; Federal Employees Health Benefit Program, $2.2 billion; Department of Defense, $1.6 billion; Indian Health Services, $300 million.

Put simply, a vote that retains this restrictive report language would, in essence, grant the tobacco industry immunity against Federal litigation.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of an editorial from the Washington Post be printed in the RECORD immediately after my remarks.

Mr. GRAHAM. The Post editorial describes the stark implications of rejecting the amendment. The Post states:

It would be an amnesty for decades of misconduct and a retroactive taxpayer subsidy for that misconduct as well.

My second main objection to this language is that on May 20 of this year, the Congress, through a conference committee on the emergency supplemental bill, enacted a provision that denied the Federal Government access to some $250 billion which the States have secured through their tobacco settlement.

The original amendment, which was introduced by Senator HUTCHISON of Texas and myself, as well as Senator BAYH, Senator VOINOVICH, and other Members of the Senate, passed this Senate by a vote of 71–29. This body could not have spoken with more clarity: Uncle Sam, keep your hands off the States' money.

But in taking that vote, while we said to the Federal Government, ''Hands off,'' I and many of my colleagues, including Senator HOLLINGS and others, had argued that if the Federal Government wants its own money, then it should sue the tobacco industry for the recovery of funds spent for the treatment of tobacco-related illnesses in Federal programs, such as Medicare. If that sentiment was true just a few weeks ago, it is certainly true today.

My third objection is that this report language would be an abdication of our Federal responsibility to deny the Justice Department its most fundamental responsibility. What is that responsibility? It is the responsibility to locate and to investigate areas where individuals, organizations, entire industries, may in fact be liable and responsible for harming the people of the United States of America.

Evidence uncovered by the States in their successful legal efforts against the tobacco industry clearly implicates the tobacco industry in their complicity to cover up evidence of addiction and illness related to the product they produce and market. To allow the tobacco industry to escape responsibility for these practices and to not investigate it fully to determine whether the Federal Government can recoup funds—funds that come from the taxpayers of America, funds that have been paid out to treat tobacco-related illnesses—would be totally irresponsible and a surrender of our fiduciary responsibility to the taxpayers.

Finally, there are some parties to this litigation who have no alternative but to have the Federal Government litigate on their behalf.

In this instance, I am speaking about Native Americans.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of this letter be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See Exhibit 2.)

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be given 4 additional minutes to conclude my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate must now return to the Gregg amendment.

Mr. GRAHAM. I ask unanimous consent for 4 minutes to complete my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Florida.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, the letter from the National Congress of American Indians signed by its president, Mr. W. Ron Allen, states:

There are many Indian Nations, however, who do not possess the resources to bring individual suits and will, therefore, rely upon the DOJ to bring suit on their behalf.

I do not believe we should tolerate a situation in which a large number of our Native Americans are precluded from having their legal rights represented.

I urge my colleagues to vote to strike the offending report language. I urge my colleagues to allow the Justice Department to do its job, and to use its best professional judgment on how to proceed with its legal strategy against the tobacco industry.

Rather than giving the Marlboro Man and rather than giving Joe Camel another victim, let us vote to hold the tobacco companies accountable by the simple action of allowing the Department of Justice to do its responsible job as the Nation's investigator and litigator.

I ask unanimous consent that a letter from the Leadership Council of Aging Organizations, which represents organizations such as the AARP, the Historically Black Colleges and Universities, Families USA, National Senior Citizens Law Center, National Council on the Aging, the National Council of Senior Citizens, and many other organizations representing older Americans which also support this language—support it particularly because they recognize the possibility of strengthening the Medicare program through funds derived from a successful prosecution of this litigation—be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LEADERSHIP COUNCIL OF AGING ORGANIZATIONS

DEAR SENATOR: The undersigned members of the Leadership Council of Aging Organizations (LCAO) are writing because we are concerned about the Department of Justice (DOJ) appropriations bill (S. 1217) that will soon be taken up on the Senate floor. As you know, DOJ intends to sue the nation's tobacco companies to recover the billions of dollars Medicare, VA and other federal health care programs have spent on health care costs caused by tobacco use.

We have learned that the DOJ appropriations bill not only denies requested funding for this important, effort, but also includes language that may actually block the lawsuit. The states took action to hold the industry accountable for the related costs imposed on their state health programs. Given the success of the state suits, the federal government has an obligation to undertake similar action to protect Medicare and other federal health programs. We cannot understand why a successful course of action that was appropriate for 50 states and resulted in tobacco payments of over $240 billion could be considered inappropriate for the federal government to pursue. In addition, blocking the lawsuit would violate an agreement reached in the Budget Resolution.

The costs to Medicare and other federal health programs due to tobacco are even greater than costs imposed on state programs. Tobacco-caused health care costs in the United States exceed $70 billion each year and the federal government pays a large portion of those costs, including over $14 billion per year on tobacco-caused Medicare expenditures. Given this drain on Medicare and other federal health programs, the Senate should support the DOJ's efforts to recover these funds.

We expect Senator BOB GRAHAM and others to offer an amendment when S. 1217 is considered on the floor to clarify that DOJ should be permitted to move forward with litigation against the tobacco industry. We urge you to support the Graham amendment.

At a time when Congress is wrestling with how to strengthen and preserve the future of Medicare and prepare it for the retirement of the baby boom generation, Congress should take every opportunity to protect this essential program. Defending Medicare is more important than defending tobacco companies.

EXHIBIT I,

A NEW KIND OF TOBACCO TAX

As it now stands, the Senate version of the Justice Department's appropriation would restrict the department's authority to file suit against the tobacco companies. Unless the matter is resolved in last-minute negotiations, an amendment to fix this problem will be put forward on the Senate floor by Sen. Bob Graham (D–Fla.) when the bill is taken up. Whether by amendment or negotiation, the current restriction has to go.

The department contends that the tobacco industry has engaged in intentional wrongdoing over the past 50 years in order to cover up the addictive qualities of its product. Industry misconduct, the argument goes, has resulted in huge federal health care bills. Normally, when a company fraudulently exacts such a toll on the taxpayer, the Justice Department seeks to recover some of that money. And that is what the department plans. It has asked Congress for $20 million for a planned suit. But the Senate appropriations subcommittee chairman, Judd Gregg (R–N.H.), seems to have other ideas. He inserted language into a committee report specifying that no money may be used for such a suit. The language would at least complicate the Justice Department's efforts, and it could be read to forbid a federal suit altogether.

The decision on whom to sue is a quintessentially executive branch power in which Congress has no legitimate role. If senators want to protect the tobacco industry's ill-gotten gains, they are free to change the laws under which Janet Reno is contemplating action. But it is the attorney general's job to decide whose violations of the law merit federal action. Moreover, when the attorney general plans a civil action against companies she claims have bilked the taxpayers of billions of dollars, it is not the place of any senator to seek to prevent the recovery of money that, in the judgment of the executive branch, lawfully belongs to the American people.

The amendment would not give the department the $20 million it has requested, but it would clarify that other money can be used for the suit. There can be no misunderstanding a vote to reject such a change. It would be an amnesty for decades of misconduct and a retroactive taxpayer subsidy for that misconduct as well.

NATIONAL CONGRESS OF AMERICAN INDIANS,
Washington, DC, July 22, 1999.

Hon. BOB GRAHAM,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GRAHAM: The National Congress of American Indians (NCAI), the oldest and largest Indian advocacy organization is pleased to support your amendment to strike language in the Commerce, State, Justice appropriations bill (S. 1217) that would deny federal funds to be expended by the Department of Justice (DOJ) for Tobacco litigation, including expenses related to expert witnesses.

Indian Nations have been affected profoundly by the tobacco industry. To that end, NCAI acknowledges and respects the rights of Indian Nations to file individual suits against the tobacco industry to recover for tobacco related illnesses and believes that Indian Nations should be the beneficiaries of any funds recovered. There are many Indian Nations however, who do not possess the resources to bring individual suits and will therefore, rely upon the DOJ to bring suit on their behalf. NCAI would not want to foreclose that option to Indian Nations. Moreover, there are many unanswered questions regarding any suits that may be filed by the DOJ on behalf of Indian Nations. Until more questions have been answered, NCAI cannot support any language that would foreclose any options to Indian Nations.

Senator Graham, NCAI believes your floor amendment to strike said appropriation language will benefit a number of Indian Nations throughout Indian Country and we thank you for your efforts.

Sincerely,

W. RON ALLEN, President.

Please support the Graham amendment and deny the tobacco companies special legal protections.

AMENDMENT NO. 1272

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I understand we are back on the pending underlying GREGG amendment, and that the Senator from South Carolina has time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GORTON). The Senator is correct. The regular order now is the GREGG amendment with 10 minutes on each side.

Mr. GREGG. I ask unanimous consent that the time be reserved for the parties presently assigned to it, and I make a point of order that a quorum is not present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1292, WITHDRAWN

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask that the amendment I had offered relative to prohibition on tobacco litigation be withdrawn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. HARKIN. I would like to address a question to the chairman of the Subcommittee, the Senator from New Hampshire, regarding funding for the Civil Division of the Justice Department.

In his State of the Union Address, President Clinton announced that the Federal Government intended to sue the nation's tobacco companies to recover billions of dollars in smoking-related health care costs reimbursed by federal health care programs. The administration's FY 2000 budget requested $15 million in new resources for the Civil Division of the Justice Department and $5 million for the Fees and Expenses of Witnesses account support this litigation effort.

Unfortunately, we were unable to provide the additional resources requested by the administration for the Civil Division to carry out this task. While I regret that the committee was unable to provide the new funds, it is my understanding that if the Justice Department deems this activity to be a high priority, base funding, including funds from the Fees and Expenses of Witnesses account, can be used for this purpose.

I ask the chairman and ranking member of the subcommittee if my understanding of the bill and the report language is correct?

Mr. GREGG. I agree with the Senator from Iowa. While the committee was unable to provide new funding as the administration requested, nothing in the bill or the report language prohibits the Department from using generally appropriated funds, including funds from the Fees and Expenses of Witnesses Account, to pursue this litigation if the Department concludes such litigation has merit under existing law.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I also agree with Senator HARKIN.

Mr. GRAHAM: I would like to address the chairman of the subcommittee. Does the chairman also agree to strike the language or page 15 and or page 25 of Senate Report 106–76 relating to funding for tobacco litigation.

Mr. GREGG. That is correct.

Mr. President, I yield to my colleague and cosponsor of the amendment, the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Florida, and also Senator GREGG, Senator HOLLINGS, Senator HARKIN, and others who have been party to the establishment of this colloquy. I think the RECORD is eminently clear that the Department of Justice has the authority to move forward on tobacco litigation without any limitation whatsoever from this legislation.

I am glad we achieved that and did it in a bipartisan fashion. I thank Senator GRAHAM for his leadership. I was happy to join him on the amendment and to be part of this colloquy.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to proceed as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Will the Senator yield? Is there a time limit?

Mr. KERRY. Ten minutes.

Mr. GREGG. I thank the Senator.

Mr. KERRY. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. KERRY pertaining to the introduction of S. 1420 are located in today's RECORD under ''Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.'')

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum. I withhold that request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT REQUEST—H.R. 1501

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I have a unanimous consent request with regard to the appointment of conferees on the juvenile justice bill.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H.R. 1501, the House juvenile justice bill, and all after the enacting clause be stricken, the text of S. 254, as passed by the Senate, except for the Feinstein amendment No. 343, as modified, be inserted in lieu thereof, the bill be advanced to third reading and passage occur, without any intervening action or debate.

I further ask unanimous consent that the Senate insist on its amendment, request a conference with the House, the conferees be instructed to include the above described amendment No. 343 in the conference report, and the Chair be authorized to appoint conferees on the part of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I regret the objection. I understand, though, the Senator's feeling on this. As a result of the objection, I have no other alternative than to move to proceed to H.R. 1501 and file a cloture motion on that motion to proceed. Having said that, this will be the first of many steps necessary to send this important juvenile justice bill to conference.

JUVENILE JUSTICE REFORM ACT OF 1999—MOTION TO PROCEED

Mr. LOTT. With that, I move to proceed to H.R. 1501 and send a cloture motion to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The cloture motion having been presented under rule XXII, the Chair directs the clerk to read the motion.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, do hereby move to bring to a close debate on the motion to proceed to Calendar No. 165, H.R. 1501, the juvenile justice bill.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I remind Members that the vote will occur then on Monday, and I now ask unanimous consent that the mandatory quorum under rule XXII be waived and the vote occur at 5 p.m. on Monday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. I now withdraw the motion to proceed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is withdrawn.

Mr. LOTT. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I withhold on that. I see there are Senators ready to speak.

Ms. COLLINS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

AMENDMENT NO. 1296

(Purpose: Relating to telephone area codes)

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside, and I send to the desk a sense-of-the-Senate amendment on behalf of myself and Senators GREGG, HOLLINGS, TORRICELLI, FEINGOLD, SMITH of New Hampshire, and LIEBERMAN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, the pending amendment is set aside, and the clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Maine [Ms. COLLINS], for herself, Mr. GREGG, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. TORRICELLI, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, and Mr. LIEBERMAN proposes an amendment numbered 1296.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 111, between lines 7 and 8, insert the following:

SEC. 620 (a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) When telephone area codes were first introduced in 1947, 86 area codes covered all of North America. There are now more than 215 area codes, and an additional 70 area codes may be required in the next 2 years.

(2) The current system for allocating numbers to telecommunications carriers is woefully inefficient, leading to the exhaustion of a telephone area code long before all the telephone numbers covered by the area code are actually in use.

(3) The proliferation of new telephone area codes causes economic dislocation for businesses and unnecessary cost, confusion, and inconvenience for households.

(4) Principles and approaches exist that would increase the efficiency with which telecommunications carriers use telephone numbering resources.

(5) The May 27, 1999, rulemaking proceeding of the Federal Communications Commission relating to numbering resource optimization seeks to address the growing problem of the exhaustion of telephone area codes.

(b) SENSE OF SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the Federal Communications Commission shall release its report and order on numbering resource optimization not later than December 31, 1999;

(2) such report and order should minimize any disruptions and costs to consumers and businesses associated with the implementation of such report and order; and

(3) such report and order should apply not only to large metropolitan areas but to all areas of the United States that are facing the problem of exhaustion of telephone numbers.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I am pleased to offer a sense-of-the-Senate amendment to address a growing problem in this country, and that is the needless proliferation of area codes.

As many of my colleagues have witnessed in their own States, new area codes are being imposed upon consumers and businesses at a dizzying pace. While the modern technology of faxes, cell phones, pagers, and computer modems has played a role in creating this problem, area code exhaustion stems largely from the woefully inefficient system for allocating numbers to local telephone companies. This leads to the exhaustion of an area code long before all of the telephone numbers covered by that code actually have been used.

My own home State of Maine dramatically illustrates this problem. We have a population in Maine of approximately 1.2 million people. Within our ''207'' area code, there are roughly 8 million usable numbers and some 5.7 million of these numbers are still unused. Incredibly enough, however, Maine has been notified that it will be forced to add a new area code by the year 2001.

This paradigm of inefficiency in the midst of America's telecommunications revolution might almost be amusing were it not for the fact that it causes real hardships for many small businesses, particularly small businesses in the tourism industry. Businesspeople throughout my State, particularly in the coastal communities, have contacted me to express their concern. I have heard from a gallery owner in Rockport, an innkeeper in Bar Harbor, and a schooner captain in Rockland, who have expressed to me their concern about the costs involved in updating brochures, business cards, and other promotional literature, all of which will be necessitated by the creation of a new area code—the needless creation of a new area code. As one innkeeper told me, it takes as long as 2 years to revise certain guidebooks, which are the principal means by which he communicates with potential customers.

Changing the area code could lead to a significant loss in business for many small tourism businesses as well as unneeded expense for these small companies. Moreover, along with the economic costs, a new area code creates tremendous disruption and confusion for consumers.

The Federal Communications Commission has initiated a rulemaking procedure to address this growing problem. But since time is of the essence in ensuring that Maine and many other States not be forced to add another unnecessary area code, my amendment requires that the FCC release its final report and order no later than March 31 of next year.

It also specifies that the order shall minimize costs and disruptions to consumers and businesses located in all areas of the country, not just in major cities. The FCC right now appears to be focusing mainly on the larger markets and ignoring the implications for rural areas.

It is my understanding that this amendment is acceptable to the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee as well as the distinguished ranking minority member. I thank them very much for their cooperation and assistance in drafting this amendment, as well as for their cosponsorship of it.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Maine. It is very important. We agree with it. We appreciate her leadership on this.

Mr. GREGG. I also commend the Senator from Maine. This is a serious problem, not only in Maine but across the border in New Hampshire where we have the same concern about area codes. So I congratulate her on this sense-of-the-Senate amendment and strongly support it. I believe we can accept it.

I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 1296) was agreed to.

Ms. COLLINS. I thank both Senators for their cooperation and assistance in this matter.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. President, I rise today with my colleague from Maine, Senator COLLINS, to introduce an amendment regarding the issue of area code conservation. The rapid proliferation of area codes is a problem facing the citizens of New Jersey, as well as the rest of the nation.

The extraordinary growth of the telecommunications industry in recent years has created a unique new problem. In just the last four years, the number of area codes in the United States has increased almost 60 percent. Continued growth will require that even the newest area codes be split and replaced again in the near future.

This problem has been particularly acute in New Jersey. Prior to 1991, the state went almost thirty years without a new area code. But in the last eight years, four new area codes have been added in the state and more are on the way.

While this is not the most pressing problem this country faces; it is a serious one. The costs and inconvenience of introducing new area codes are real. Small businesses must pay to reprint stationery, advertising, and signs, and to inform customers of new numbers. Communities throughout New Jersey, such as Willingboro, Medford, and Monroe, have faced the possibility of being split between two area codes, requiring many residents to dial an area code just to call a neighbor across the street. These costs get even higher when new area codes are introduced repeatedly in the same area after only a few years, forcing residents and businesses to make the same adjustments all over again.

Many people blame the demand for new phone numbers as the sole cause of so many new area codes. But there is another cause. Each area code has 7.9 million potential phone numbers. Today, less than half of the potential phone numbers in existing area codes are being used, leaving a total of 1.3 billion unused phone numbers in the United States. The real problem is that new area codes are being created before old ones are exhausted.

The inefficient use of available phone numbers is a product of the outdated system by which numbers are distributed within each area code. Phone numbers are allotted to telecommunications companies in blocks of 10,000, regardless of whether those companies have the capacity to use every number. Undoubtedly, this system made sense when there was only one telephone company because it would, eventually, use every number available.

But, as we all know, the new era of telecommunications competition has introduced dozens of smaller companies. Today, there are over 100 such companies in New Jersey alone. Under the current allocation system, these companies still receive phone numbers in blocks of 10,000. Even if a company does not use its full allocation, unused numbers remain dormant while new area codes are being created.

This unnecessary nuisance can be alleviated relatively easily. All it requires is a little planning and foresight. Given the enormous demand for new phone numbers and the growth of smaller phone companies, we should overhaul the system for allocating phone numbers. The Federal Communication Commission is currently reviewing ways to do just that. But, while their efforts are encouraging, the process may not work fast enough to prevent the next round of needless new area codes in New Jersey.

The Amendment I have introduced with Senator COLLINS expresses the sense of the Senate that the Federal Communications Commission should complete its ongoing rulemaking regarding number resource optimization by March 31, 2000. This action will help ensure that the FCC rapidly implements practical number conservation measures.

New area codes are inevitable as the population and electronic communications continue to grow. But there are reasonable, practical ways to soften the impact of these changes. Ensuring that new area codes are implemented only when current ones have been exhausted will save time, energy, and money for countless residents and businesses, in New Jersey and around the country.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending amendment to offer two amendments that will be accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1297

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Texas [Mrs. HUTCHISON], for herself, Mr. KYL, and Mr. ABRAHAM, proposes an amendment numbered 1297.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 19, line 23, after the colon, insert the following: ''Provided further, That any Border Patrol agent classified in a GS–1896 position who completes a 1-year period of service at a GS–9 grade and whose current rating of record is fully successful or higher shall be classified at a GS–11 grade and receive pay at the minimum rate of basic pay for a GS–11 position.''

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, this is an amendment which would mandate to the Immigration and Naturalization Service that Border Patrol agents who are in the field, who have experience, not be capped at a GS–9 pay level, as they currently are but go to a GS–11 level after they pass the test that the INS, of course, would have in their rating system.

I appreciate very much Senator GREGG's and Senator HOLLINGS' support for the efforts to increase the number of Border Patrol agents. But the problem is that recruitment has not been successful. One of the reasons the recruitment has not been successful is that we have capped the pay of Border Patrol agents at a lower level than Customs agents who are working side by side with our Border Patrol agents on the border. So it is no wonder people are going to Customs and DEA and other very good Government agencies and not coming to the Border Patrol.

This amendment will require that we go to the GS–11 level so that we can recruit and retain our best people for the Border Patrol and we can get on about the business of making sure the borders of our country are secure.

So, Mr. President, I urge that this amendment be accepted. Both sides of the aisle have looked at it. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be agreed to.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, it is acceptable on both sides, and we urge its adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 1297) was agreed to.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I thank the Chair, and I thank the distinguished Senator from South Carolina. This will do more than anything we can possibly do to increase the retention and the recruitment of Border Patrol agents.

AMENDMENT NO. 1300

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of myself, Senator KYL, Senator ABRAHAM, Senator HATCH, and Senator LEAHY and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BENNETT). The clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Texas [Mrs. HUTCHISON], for herself, Mr. KYL, Mr. ABRAHAM, Mr. HATCH, and Mr. LEAHY, proposes an amendment numbered 1300.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 19, line 23, after the colon, insert the following: ''Provided further, That the Commissioner shall within 90 days develop a plan for coordinating and linking all relevant Immigration and Naturalization on Service databases with those of the Justice Department and other federal law enforcement agencies, to determine criminal history, fingerprint identification and record of prior deportation and, upon the approval of the Committees on the Judiciary and the Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations Subcommittees, shall implement the plan within FY 2000:''

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, this is an amendment that is meant to close a gaping loophole we found in INS's sharing of information that allowed the serial killer, Rafael Resendez-Ramirez, whose real name is Angel Maturino Resendiz, to get through our borders, even though he already had a criminal record, because there was not enough communication in the identification system between the INS and the other Justice Department agencies. So we didn't catch this serial killer.

This is an amendment I have worked on with Senators KYL, ABRAHAM, HATCH, and LEAHY that would require the Commissioner of the INS, within 90 days, to develop a plan for coordinating and linking all relevant INS databases with those of the Justice Department and other Federal law enforcement agencies to determine the criminal history and the record of prior deportation and, upon the approval of the Judiciary Committee and Commerce, State, Justice Appropriations Subcommittee, will implement a plan by fiscal year 2000.

I am counting on the committees to come through on this because if we can get the plan in 90 days, we need to implement a plan that will identify criminal aliens in our country so when they try to enter again, they will be stopped.

I ask that the amendment be accepted and that we move forward to try to close this loophole that allowed this serial killer to fall through the cracks or slip through our fingers, however one wants to say it, and cause havoc in our country for about a month.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, was that a unanimous consent request?

Mrs. HUTCHISON. It was.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 1300) was agreed to.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, if it is in order, I will speak on the bill.

Mr. GREGG. If the Senator from Texas wouldn't mind suspending, I believe the majority leader has some points he wishes to raise.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I am sorry. It would be fine if the Senator from Texas wanted to speak on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I thank the Chair. If there comes a time when the Senator from New Hampshire needs to break in, I will be happy to yield.

I rise in support of the bill that is before us. It has been a tough bill. It is more than $888 million less than the appropriations bill that we enacted in last year, but it does provide sufficient resources. I believe Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS and their staffs have worked very hard to make sure we address the priorities for the Commerce, State, and Justice Departments and the very important issues with which they are dealing.

I have passed two amendments to the bill tonight. There will be another amendment that has already been accepted that will allow the INS Commissioner to provide a language proficiency bonus for people who are proficient in Spanish to be hired in the Border Patrol. Of course, if people are already proficient in Spanish, it will save the money it will take to train them in the second language. That amendment has been cleared on both sides. I appreciate it because I am looking for every way I can to increase the capability to recruit new Border Patrol agents who will be able to hit the ground running and help stop the influx of drugs and illegal immigration into our country.

I cannot imagine that we have continued to tell the INS that we want these Border Patrol agents to come on board, and we have not had the cooperation of the administration in either recruitment or retention. Certainly, I hope with this bill, which is much more narrow in its requirements, the Border Patrol will do what the Congress has mandated they do, and that is recruit and retain more Border Patrol agents so we can stop the influx of drugs into this country. As a matter of fact, $10 billion in marijuana, heroin, cocaine, and methamphetamines crossed our border last year. How in the world can we say that we have a handle on the sovereignty of our borders when we have $10 billion of illegal drugs flowing in in 1 year?

I am very pleased that the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, Senator STEVENS, went to the Arizona border with Mexico during the Memorial Day recess. He was stunned at what he saw. I hope more Senators will go to the border so they will see the problem we are facing.

During the markup of the bill that is before us today, Senator STEVENS said: God forbid that the day comes when we have to have fences and walls between the United States and Mexico.

I share his view. Mexico is our neighbor. They are strong cultural and historic ties between our two nations. I seek a border that is as open as possible, allowing people, goods, and services to move across the 2,000-mile-shared border quickly and efficiently. I am committed to putting in place the infrastructure, the bridges, the facilities, and the inspection personnel necessary for this to happen. I wish the President and this administration would work with us.

The realities are otherwise, however. In Texas and along the border, we are witnessing a lawlessness that we have never seen since the days of the frontier. It is important to put the drug threat in its proper context and to understand its full dimensions.

On March 24, 1999, Administrator Thomas Constantine of the Drug Enforcement Administration testified before our subcommittee. He said:

> Most Americans are unaware of the vast damage that has been caused to their communities by international drug trafficking syndicates, most recently by organized crime groups headquartered in Mexico. At the current time, these traffickers pose the greatest threat to communities around the United States. Their impact is no longer limited to cities and towns on the border. Traffickers from Mexico are now routinely operating in the Midwest, the Southeast, the Northwest, and increasingly in the Northeastern portion of the United States.

Make no mistake: Drugs coming across the border are ending up on the streets of Manchester, NH; Columbia, SC; Baltimore, MD; and Denver, CO, and they are coming across in record numbers. In fiscal year 1998, there were 6,359 drug seizures along the Southwest border. The total value of these drug seizures was $1.28 billion, nearly $150 million more than last year. Nearly $1 billion of the drugs seized last year were on the Texas border, in the Border Patrol sectors there.

Drug-related violence along the Texas border continues to increase. Ranchers in Maverick County, 150 miles southwest of San Antonio, reported that armed traffickers in black, wearing camouflage clothing, passed through their properties after walking across the Rio Grande River. The situation is no better on the immigration side. More than 1.5 million illegal immigrants were apprehended along the Southwest border just last year.

Conservative estimates suggest that only one in four illegal aliens is apprehended. But the numbers hide the dark, evil side of this issue of alien smuggling, violent assault against migrating women, and other suffering.

I commend to my colleagues an article that appeared recently in the New York Times. Rick Lyman reported on a disturbing development where infants and young children, some possibly kidnapped and others who are rented, are used to trick border agents. INS has no facilities to house families, especially babies. So illegal aliens are simply released and asked to report for a later court date. The borrowed children are then shuffled back and forth across the border to be placed in the hands of others to make yet another treacherous, illegal crossing.

These examples highlight conditions along the border. They underscore that we have a moral obligation to provide the necessary resources to secure our border. That is why I find it incomprehensible that this administration has requested no new Border Patrol agents, Drug Enforcement Administration agents, or Customs agents in its budget recommendation to Congress this year. The 8,000 men and women serving in our Border Patrol are our Nation's first line of defense in the war on drugs and illegal immigration. Understanding this, Congress required, under the Illegal Immigration Act of 1996, that the Attorney General in each of the fiscal years 1997, 1998, 1999, 2000, and 2001, shall increase the Border Patrol by not less than 1,000 full-time active duty Border Patrol agents within the INS. Unfortunately, our Nation's top law enforcement officer, Janet Reno, and the President opted not to abide by the law and put these agents in their budget.

This is not the first time the administration has not complied with this law. In 1997, the administration only requested 500 new agents instead of a thousand. Thank heavens, Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS have kept their commitment to secure our Nation's borders and provide $83 million in this year's budget to hire 1,000 agents.

Mr. President, this is so very important to fund these agencies. Again, Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS have gone a long way to pushing INS toward getting the 1,000 new Border Patrol agents. I have heard from every Border Patrol chief along the Southwest border, and all have told me that, yes, they can use better equipment. Better equipment helps them and it gives them a range much longer than one of them can cover. But what they need most, first and foremost, is manpower. They cannot operate the equipment, they cannot get to the places they need to be if they don't have enough Border Patrol agents, and they are woefully short.

So after talking to our drug czar, General McCaffrey, it is clear that we need more Border Patrol agents. He has said we need 20,000 Border Patrol agents in order to stop the flow of drugs across our Southwest border.

A University of Texas study done last year indicates that 16,000 agents are needed to do this job, and we only have 8,000.

With only 200 to 400 likely to be hired this year, we are not even making progress in the right correction.

I call on this administration to stop the excuses on why they can't recruit more Border Patrol agents, to stop refusing to even put them in their budget, and to come forward and say our border is a priority.

That is what I am asking this administration to do—to say that our border has to stop letting in illegal drugs that are preying on our children in Seattle, WA, in Chicago, IL, and in Augusta, ME. We have to stop this. The only way we are going to do it is to make it a priority.

I appreciate the leadership of Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS. They are making this a priority. The administration must come through and help us stop the sieve on our borders that is allowing drugs to come in.

I want to say in closing that Senator KYL has worked very closely with me on these issue. Senator KYL and I cosponsored the bill that would raise the pay of the Border Patrol agents so we could be in the recruitment game. He cosponsored my amendment on the floor today that would make this happen. He has been an important voice for effective law enforcement along the Southwest Border.

Mr. President, we cannot wait any longer. We must have action from this administration to beef up the Border Patrol, to beef up the Customs agents, to beef up the Drug Enforcement Agency, so that we can stop the influx of drugs into our country. We must get serious about it. That is what this bill does. But we must have the cooperation of this administration to do it.

Thank you, Mr. President.

I yield the floor.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following amendments be the only first-degree amendments in order to the pending appropriations bill, and that they be subject to relevant second-degree amendments, and no motion to commit or recommit be in order. I submit the list of amendments to the desk. It includes the Democratic list of amendments and the Republican list of amendments as of 6:10.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. REID. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I ask the majority leader has this been circulated in the last 10 minutes or so?

Mr. LOTT. Over the past hour or so.

Mr. REID. We just got six more is the reason.

Mr. LOTT. Are they on the list?

Mr. WELLSTONE. Is there a copy we can look at?

Mr. LOTT. I have the list here. I believe the Senator from Minnesota is on here for four amendments—not one, not two, not three but four. We have the list.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I am an active legislator. I ask the majority leader or Senator GREGG, I assume these are in addition to the amendment that has been laid aside.

Mr. GREGG. The Senator's amendment is already in the queue.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I thank the Senator.

Mr. REID. If the majority leader would wait for just a brief minute, we are seeing what we can do here.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, the managers of this legislation have been working diligently throughout the day and have made a lot of progress in dealing with a number of amendments, accommodating those amendments. Senator DASCHLE and I have been working with Senators to find ways for Senators to perhaps have their legislation considered on other bills. We are trying to get a list of amendments outstanding so they will know exactly what they are dealing with.

Mr. REID. If the leader will yield, I have just spoken to the manager of the bill, Senator HOLLINGS. I want to make sure the list that has been submitted includes Senator TORRICELLI's FTC on marketing scams; a relevant Feinstein; a relevant one for Bob KERREY; a relevant by BOB GRAHAM dealing with NOAA; an additional one for Senator DURBIN, another relevant one; one for Senator LEAHY on the Sentencing Commission; another for Senator TORRICELLI; Senator LANDRIEU has three relevants.

Mr. LOTT. I repeat my unanimous consent request and ask that the amendments identified by Senator REID be included on the list.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. With this agreement in place, it is my hope that the bill can be completed yet this evening. I believe we have amendments that are in order, and Senator LAUTENBERG has one he may be able to go forward with.

Work is still being done on the rule XVI issue. Additional votes will occur during this evening's session of the Senate. We usually can expect to go late into the evenings on Thursday. It looks as if that will be the case.

If we can work with the managers and get this work done, this would be a very important achievement. And that, coupled with the fact that we know there is a memorial service tomorrow, we would not have to be in session tomorrow.

I urge the managers to keep working and my colleagues to please work with them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I am going to propound two unanimous consent requests. One deals with Senator LAUTENBERG's amendment and one with Senator ENZI's amendment. The plan is as follows:

I ask unanimous consent that it be in order for Senator LAUTENBERG to offer an amendment regarding alcohol and there be 30 minutes of debate equally divided prior to the vote on or in relation to the amendment.

I further ask unanimous consent that no amendments be in order to the amendment prior to the vote.

I further ask unanimous consent that the previous consent relating to the pending GREGG amendment remain status quo to recur immediately following the LAUTENBERG vote.

I further ask unanimous consent that it be in order for Senator ENZI to offer an amendment regarding the FCC accounting principles and there be 30 minutes of debate equally divided prior to the vote on or in relation to the amendment.

I further ask unanimous consent that no amendments be in order prior to the vote.

I further ask unanimous consent that the previous consent relating to the pending GREGG amendment remain status quo to reoccur immediately following the vote on the ENZI amendment.

I further ask unanimous consent that the ENZI amendment and the LAUTENBERG amendment be voted on en bloc at the end of the ENZI debate time.

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object, I apologize to the Republican manager of the bill. I was not listening when the consent request was first issued. Would the Senator tell us what it is.

Mr. GREGG. It actually means that Senator LAUTENBERG has 30 minutes on his amendment equally divided, Senator ENZI has 30 minutes on his amendment equally divided, and we go to a vote on those two amendments.

Mr. HARKIN. Reserving the right to object, what happens, I ask the chairman, after that?

Mr. GREGG. At that point we are back to the regular order, which is that Senator HOLLINGS is recognized for 10 minutes and I am recognized for 10 minutes. Then we have a vote on the majority leader's point of order. However, I expect that there will be further action on the bill at that point and we will get into an amendment process.

Mr. HARKIN. I have an amendment that is on the list. If I may, I would like to get a time line on that.

Mr. GREGG. I would like to talk to the Senator about his amendment. I am hopeful that we can work it out and that we won't have to have a vote on it. Maybe we can talk about it while this debate is going on and work something out.

Mr. HARKIN. All right. I will be back.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Under the order, the Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Thank you, Mr. President.

AMENDMENT NO. 1302

(Purpose: To fund a media campaign, from increases in the Department of Justice budget, to prevent underage drinking.)

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I assume that the pending GREGG amendment has been laid aside.

I send my amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Jersey (Mr. LAUTENBERG), for himself, Mr. HARKIN, and Mr. DORGAN, proposes an amendment numbered 1302.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 2, between lines 3 and 4, insert the following:

For carrying out a media campaign to prevent alcohol consumption by individuals in the United States who have not attained the age of 21, $25,000,000 which shall become available on October 1, 2000 and remain available through September 30, 2001

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise to offer an amendment to provide the Justice Department $25 million in fiscal year 2001 to develop and begin to implement a media campaign to discourage children from engaging in underage alcohol consumption.

We already have an ad campaign on national television that espouses the evils of drug use. But that campaign does not include alcohol. And when I tried to amend that ad campaign in the Treasury-Postal bill last month to include alcohol, some Senators said that they did not want to dilute the anti-drug message. But they did say that they would support a separate anti-underage drinking campaign.

I offer this amendment on behalf of myself and Senators HARKIN and DORGAN, who the last time I offered a similar amendment voted against it, but now has agreed that it is the right thing to do.

Right now, by running anti-drugs ads without also running anti-underage drinking ads, we are sending the wrong message to Ameria's children. It is the equivalent of telling kids: ''say 'no' to drugs. But this Bud's for you!''

Mr. President, consuming alcohol is illegal in all 50 States if you are under the age of 21, and among America's youth, underage alcohol consumption is just as big a problem as drug use.

The facts are daunting. If we look at this chart, we see that alcohol kills six times more children ages 12 to 20 than all the other ilegal drugs combined. It was a surprise to me, as I suspect it is a surprise to millions of other Americans as well.

Let me point out some more facts. According to the Department of Health and Human Services, the average age at which children start drinking is 13.

What's even worse, Mr. President, is that research shows that children who drink at age 13 have a 47-percent chance of becoming alcohol-dependent.

But if they waited until they were 21 to drink, they would have only a 10-percent chance of becoming dependent.

In all, Mr. President, there are nearly 4 million young people in this country who suffer from alcohol dependence, and they account for one-fifth of all alcohol-dependent Americans.

Not only is alcohol consumption widespread among children under the age of 21, but it is a ''gateway drug.'' And too often, it leads to the use of marijuana, cocaine, and heroin.

The drug czar, Geneal McCaffrey, had some things to say about this. He said, ''The most dangerous drug in America today is still alcohol.''

But for one reason or another, we don't get that message through.

He goes on to say that alcohol is ''the biggest drug abuse problem for adolescents, and it's linked to the use of other, illegal drugs.''

Mr. President, statistics support what General McCaffrey has been saying. According to the Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse at Columbia University, youth who drink alcohol are 7.5 times more likely to use any illegal drug and 50 times more likely to use cocaine, than young people who never drink alcohol.

General McCaffrey is not alone in his belief that attacking underage drinking is a key component of the war on drugs. Surgeon General Davis Satcher recently wrote a letter to General McCaffrey expressing his support for ''a powerful media campaign that will effectively deglamourize underage drinking.''

Surgeon General Satcher went on to say that he has established a Staff Working Group ''to create an effective campaign to curtail the incidence of underage and binge drinking.''

Finally, the Surgeon General

It is time to more effectively address the drug that children and teens tell us is their great concern and the drug we know is most likely to result in their injury or death.

If experts like General McCaffrey and Surgeon General Satcher agree that alcohol is a ''gateway drug,'' then it is clear that a well-planned ad campaign that targets underage drinking would increase the effectiveness of our war against drugs.

My amendment provides the Justice Department with $25 million in fiscal year 2001 to develop and begin to implement a media campaign to discourage children under the age of 21 from drinking. The amendment allows plenty of time to conduct the necessary research and develop and test sample radio and television ads in order to launch an effective media campaign. Ad messages would be consistent with the antidrug messages in the drug czar's media campaign. There would also be funds to begin buying media time.

The Justice Department will coordinate the campaign with representatives of the Centers for Disease Control, the Surgeon General's office, and the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism. With the help of these health institutions, the Justice Department also would put together a detailed 5-year funding plan for the campaign and its media ''buys'' to help Congress in the appropriations process.

Editorials have been written across this country supporting the need for an anti-underage drinking media campaign. Editorials have appeared in the Washington Post, New York Times, Christian Science Monitor, and Los Angeles Times. The concept of an anti-underage drinking media campaign is further supported by more than 80 organizations, including Mothers Against Drunk Driving, the American Medical Association, the American Academy of Pediatrics, the American Public Health Association, and the Center for Science in the Public Interest.

I am proud to have been the author some years ago, in 1984, that made 21 the drinking age in all 50 States. With the help of the National Transportation Safety Board, we have saved the lives of approximately 15,000 young people in the 15 years since the law has been in place. It was a real boon to those families who worried about their children drinking and the problems that result.

In 1995, Senator BYRD led the charge on zero tolerance for underage alcohol consumption by writing a law that says if you are under age 21, .02 blood alcohol level is legally drunk. So, as in the past, we need to continue to send a strong message to America's youth that neither underage alcohol consumption nor drug use is acceptable. And the only successful path to winning the war on drugs is the one paved by preventing underage drinking.

We must not accept underage drinking as a so-called rite of passage. It often is. It is a passage directly to illegal drugs such as marijuana, cocaine, and heroin. It is a passage to a life of alcohol dependency.

The bottom line is this: This is a simple up-or-down vote on whether you want to do something to prevent teen alcohol addiction. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment so that we can get a handle on that drug which is acknowledged to be the most dangerous among all drugs. And the fact that alcohol kills six times more children ages 12 to 20 than all other illegal drugs combined proves that.

I hope we get a positive vote on this. I understand this vote will be stacked with a vote of the Senator from Wyoming, is that correct?

Mr. GREGG. That is correct. We will have a vote on the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey and then the Senator from Wyoming.

I rise in opposition to this amendment for a number of reasons. With forward funding of an initiative, the $25 million for advanced appropriations next year, it makes it extremely difficult for the committee to function.

When the President presented his budget, he had included a large amount of funding which this committee did not accept because we did not want to put ourselves in that sort of a bind.

Independent of the equities of the argument relative to the initiative which was voted on once before in a form not exactly like this but similar to this on the Treasury-Postal bill, I believe very strongly this would set a very poor precedent if we began appropriating in the future on bills for this year.

It would avoid the entire budgetary process, which requires offsets. That is our fiscal discipline. Without offsets, we will have no fiscal discipline. Arguably, we could appropriate all of next year's budget on almost any subject that Members wish and create significant problems.

I don't support the amendment. I believe the amendment is inappropriate.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I thank the chairman and the ranking member for permitting me to offer this amendment.

But this is not a precedent-setting amendment. We have done substantial forward funding in those programs that need it. And it will take a year to organize this program.

This is the time to get this program started by making certain that the message is clear, that it is out there. It says: Listen, kids, don't start drinking. It could lead you down a terrible path. It could create more dependence on alcohol, more introduction to other drugs. That is a poor way to give a child a sendoff.

The Senator from New Hampshire talks about appropriating next year's money at this time as being somewhat unusual. Fortunately, or unfortunately, it is not unusual. I have a list of accounts that have been forward funded. I ask unanimous consent to have these accounts printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the information was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 1301

(Purpose: To prohibit the Federal Communications Commission from requiring persons to use any accounting method that does not conform to Generally Accepted Accounting Principles)

Mr. ENZI. I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. ENZI], for himself, Mr. BURNS, and Mr. FITZGERALD, proposes an amendment numbered 1301.

Mr. ENZI. I ask unanimous consent reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert:

SEC. —. PROHIBITION ON REQUIREMENT FOR USE OF ACCOUNTING METHOD NOT CONFORMING TO GENERALLY ACCEPTED ACCOUNTING PRINCIPLES.

(a) PROHIBITION.—No part of any appropriations contained in this Act shall be used by the Federal Communciations Commission to require any person subject to its jurisdiction under the Communications Act of 1934, as amended (47 U.S.C. 151 et seq) to utilize for any purpose any form or method of accounting that does not conform to Generally Accepted Accounting Principles established by the Financial Accounting Standards Board.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I rise to offer an amendment to remove an unnecessary burdensome recordkeeping requirement on local telephone companies.

In 1935, the Federal Communications Commission developed an accounting system known as a uniform system of accounts to ensure the Commission had access to financial data used by AT&T to set local phone rates. This system of accounting requires that companies maintain detailed records and appreciate every asset they purchase, from paper clips to trucks. According to depreciation schedules that each company negotiates with the FCC, no other entity in the Nation has to do that.

I have seen some of these schedules. They require companies to depreciate assets over longer periods of time than either the Internal Revenue Service or the Securities and Exchange Commission. They require them to depreciate things that no other business has to depreciate. Many of these assets are high-technology items such as digital switches or fiber-optic cable that are often obsolete in a very short period of time. However, the FCC requires them to be depreciated over a much longer period of time.

This is not limited to depreciation. As an accountant, I happen to know a bit about generally accepted accounting principles. Yet even small businesses under the IRS have a dollar threshold over which they amortize assets—usually $25,000. For purchases under $25,000, the company would simply expense the item, meaning that they could charge the cost of the asset against the current year's revenues.

Under the FCC system, local telephone companies are required to amortize every asset they buy, from office supplies to digital switching equipment. There is no dollar value threshold for local companies. They have to keep detailed records and record assets in accounts specified by the FCC; negotiated individually with the FCC. These companies already maintain their records according to generally accepted accounting principles. Their standard is required by the IRS and FCC. Why should a third agency require companies to keep their books in a manner inconsistent with generally accepted accounting principles?

Now that AT&T has been broken up and competition is being allowed to take place, it is time to remove regulatory burdens that do nothing more than impose a requirement on one set of companies that their competitors do not have to comply with, information that is available to the competitors, information in detail available to the competitors, derived at great expense to the local telephone company?

The amendment I am proposing would prohibit the FCC from requiring any accounting system other than generally accepted accounting principles for 1 year. This would give companies time to transition to the generally accepted accounting principles—one set of books—and make provisions to take obsolete equipment out of service and change their internal accounting policies to conform with generally accepted accounting principles. This would also save the Government money, since the FCC would not have to maintain as big an Accounting Policy Division to negotiate and enforce these antiquated, detailed depreciation and expense rules.

According to the accounting firm of Arthur Anderson, this would save the small local telephone exchange companies—we are talking about the small companies in every State in this Nation—between $200,000 and $1 million a year. This is money that could be spent on bringing advanced services and technology to rural areas or reducing rates. I understand how expensive it is to maintain one set of business records, and anybody in business out there understands that. That is one set of business records according to the generally accepted accounting principles. Just imagine what it costs for two sets of books, and the second set of books has to be negotiated in detail, has to have far more accounts than the other. My amendment would eliminate this expensive requirement on local telephone companies and level the playing field between competitors, particularly with the huge long distance competitors.

My amendment is being supported by the United States Telephone Association and its members. The United States Telephone Association represents small rural telephone companies. They believe, as I do, that competition in the local phone market starts when all participants are bound by the same rules.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter from the United States Telephone Association that goes into a bit more detail than I have time, in my allotted 15 minutes, to go into. Commissioner Harold Furchtgott-Roth, who serves on the Federal Communications Commission, made a statement on docket 99–253 that mentions:

In today's increasingly competitive telecommunications marketplace, the Commission should be focusing its efforts on transitioning to a more competitive environment. The amount of detailed information and regulatory scrutiny required under our accounting and ARMIS rules is inordinate and should be reduced.

I ask that entire letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES
TELEPHONE ASSOCIATION,
July 19, 1999.

Hon. MICHAEL ENZI,
U.S. Senate, Russell State Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR ENZI: I am writing to commend you and thank you for your efforts to streamline the FCC's accounting requirements for local telephone companies. These requirements are vestiges of past regulatory schemes. They are burdensome, costly, and discriminatory, and they serve no useful purpose in today's telecommunications market. The 1,200 local telephone companies that comprise the United States Telephone Association appreciate your leadership on this issue.

As you know, these accounting rules, also known as the Uniform System of Accounts, were adopted more than a decade ago, when the local telephone market was for the most part closed, and local carriers were subject to cost-based, rate of return regulations. Since that time, the large incumbent local exchange companies have changed to price cap regulations, and the local telephone market has opened to competition. In short, the marketplace has changed, but these accounting rules have not.

Arthur Anderson estimates that these regulations cost the local phone industry up to $270 million every year. Ultimately, consumers suffer from these wasted resources. The capital the local phone companies spend meeting these requirements could be redeployed in ways that benefit consumers with lower prices, better services, more advanced technologies and more robust competition. Further, in today's telecommunications market, rapid advances in technology drive the introduction of new products and services at a breakneck pace. Costly and unnecessary regulations slow that pace and skew the competitive balance toward companies that are not subject to them.

Taxpayers suffer, as well. More than 70 people at the Federal Communications Commission are needed to maintain and audit these reports. These slots or their funding could be saved, or put to better use either elsewhere at the Commission, or elsewhere in government.

Senator Enzi, thank you again for your leadership on this issue. If we may be of assistance in any way, please let us know.

Sincerely,

ROY NOEL,
President and CEO,

STATEMENT OF COMMISSIONER HAROLD FURCHTGOTT-ROTH

Re: Comprehensive Review of the Accounting Requirements and ARMIS Reporting Requirements for Incumbent Local Exchange Carriers (CC Docket No. 99–253)

I support today's Order initiating ''Phase 1'' of a comprehensive review of the Commissioner's accounting and reporting requirements. While I believe that today's Order is a step in the right direction, it is, to my regret, a very small step down a very long road. I write separately because I continue to be concerned about the Commission's micro-management of all telecommunications carriers, including LECs.

In today's increasingly competitive telecommunications marketplace, the Commissioner should be focusing its efforts on transitioning to this more competitive environment. The amount of detailed information and regulatory scrutiny required under our current accounting and ARMIS rules is inordinate and should be reduced. I am becoming increasingly convinced that the current regulatory mechanisms—and certainly the level of detail—are no longer necessary in today's increasingly competitive marketplace. I believe the Commission must consider even further deregulation as these cumbersome regulations become unnecessary.

I wait anxiously for the commencement of Phase 2 of this review, which I hope follows today's small step with huge strides toward true regulatory reform.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, what we have is an issue where we have a lot of local, small, rural telephone companies who are coming under inordinate additional accounting requirements, additional accounting besides what is required by the other Federal agencies. This information has to be released to the competitors as well. Competitors, the big phone companies, do not have to give the same information to the little companies. So it is time we made this kind of change.

I ask for support on the amendment. I yield the floor and reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I have the greatest respect for the distinguished Senator and realize he is far more steeped in this particular discipline of accounting, of certified public accounting, than I am.

Yet having worked in the field and heard for the first time here in the last half hour of this particular amendment, it goes right to the heart of what has been going on. Specifically, we want to change an accounting system that has been on the books, agreed to, conformed with, never objected to, during the entire 4-year deliberation of the rewrite of the Telecommunications Act. I never heard anything about this need for a different system of accounting. Now, having adopted it, I am asking immediately: Wait a minute, what is going on here? We never heard of this or anything else like it. Then the giveaway is when my distinguished colleague says the United States Telephone Association, and so forth, little, little, little—little my eye. This is the Bell crowd.

I find out by telephone call they have had a recent audit and the auditors found billions of dollars of unaccounted-for equipment. They just had it on the books. They put it into the rate structure. And then they redeem those amounts into the rate-paying system. This, of course, affects the rates, it affects the amounts that go back to universal service, and everything else of that kind. So all of a sudden we really, rather than helping the little ones, are going to harm the little folks on a so-called accounting system change.

If anybody is intimately familiar with the rural telephone companies and the co-ops and everything else, this particular Senator is. The finest rural system there is is in the State of South Carolina. In fact, they have put in the Internet connections and everything else at all the public schools and what have you. Really, it is one of the finest rural groups. They never saw me about this or anything of this kind. This amendment definitely ought to be tabled.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I yield 3 minutes to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I thank my friend from Wyoming. I doubt I need 3 minutes.

When this accounting system was adopted in the telecommunications industry way back in 1935, and it evolved through the years, we did not foresee the advances of technology and the need to change equipment would happen in that area as fast as it is happening now. New technology is coming on line. If there is a holdup in the buildout of this technology, of maybe some of our locally owned companies—and some of our cooperatives as cooperatives, I doubt, will be affected by this —it is so we can get rid of some of this old equipment we carry on the books because it is not all depreciated out. It has not kept pace with the technology.

There was, a couple of years ago—it was more than that, 5 or 6 years ago, with then-Senator Brown from Colorado—offered an amendment to standardize accounting clear through the Government. We did not get that done. But nonetheless here is an old accounting system that is very important to the high-tech area when it comes to buildout in the rural area, so broadband technologies can be deployed and get rid of some of the old equipment still on the books.

This amendment needs passing. I yield the floor and thank my friend from Wyoming.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HOLLINGS. The distinguished Senator from Montana, the chairman of our Subcommittee on Communications, ought to be asking for a hearing on this one. Another phrase caught my attention, when they say ''historic cost.'' They could go all the way back to 1934, which they have already been rewarded for over the many years, 60 or 70 years. Otherwise that is exactly what they have earned as a monopoly. Yes, we are moving. Don't say they did not foresee it.

I have just been through a vigorous campaign and visited rural folks. I admire the new equipment they have. They are changing over. They know what it is. They know what competition is. The small ones, more or less, have been bringing about the competition.

It is the Bell companies that told this Senator and the committee time and again at hearings: We want to compete; we want to compete; we want to compete.

Please, my gracious, all they have done is combine. Southwest Bell has taken over Pacific Telesis. Now they want to take over Ameritech. Bell Atlantic has taken over NYNEX. Another one, we heard just the other day, is taking over U.S. West. They are all moving to combine and form more monopolies, and before long we will have Ma Bell all over again.

Then they have the audacity and unmitigated gall to come to the floor of the Senate and say let's just change the little accounting system so we can take care of all of these costs, when they have been caught short of unaccounted equipment that has been carried on the books over many years and they have long since been compensated for in their rates.

I can say the universal service to the small business in Wyoming and Montana when the Bell company puts this one over on the United Telephone Association—if they put this over, they are going to have to pay through the nose, I can tell you that right now. It is all going in. It is the big gobbling up the little ones.

There ought not to be any misunderstanding to all of a sudden changing their accounting systems because they have found unaccounted equipment on the books that have been kept over many years, for which they have long since been compensated, and for which they continue to charge over and over. That is what is at issue here; without a hearing and putting it on the commerce bill which has jurisdiction over the FCC and saying it is just a small thing, they just want to look out for people and want the same kind of report.

They want to get rid of the report that says you can carry all these expenses ad infinitum, back to 1934, and continue to charge the ratepayers for it. If that occurs, then universal service, the rates, and everything else with respect to the agreed-upon long distance and local rates is going totally out of kilter. The little boys are really going to suffer.

I am prepared, when all time has expired, to make a motion to table this amendment. It definitely ought to be tabled in behalf of all communications and, more particularly, on account of procedures in the Senate. We have a committee. The distinguished Senator is chairman of the subcommittee. The subject has never been mentioned, and, Heaven knows, I hear every day I am in the Senate: Please, call the Commission. We don't. Please write a letter to the Commission. All the downtown lawyers again and again want to try their cases politically when they cannot prevail administratively.

I know if it were a real problem, I would have long since heard about it. My rural people would have told me about it long ago. But bam, at 7 o'clock at night, they want to change the entire accounting system. It is the wrong procedure, if nothing else.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, what we are trying to do is harmonize and unify the accounting system, not eliminate and drastically change it. We are talking about generally accepted accounting principles. This is what the accountants across the United States use day in and day out. We are trying to unify it within the telecommunications industry.

One reason you have not heard about this a lot is that we are talking about the small local exchange carriers. We are not talking about the big corporations that have all the lawyers in Washington. We are talking about the little guy out there who is trying to run a business and does not have as much time or expertise to run to Washington or know specifically to whom to take his case. We are talking about small businesses. And we are not talking about small money here. We are talking about them imposing extra regulations which cost them $200,000 to $1 million a year. That is money that could be put into new phone systems or reducing rates. These are the small rural carriers.

As far as whether enough data is available, of course, it is available. Corporations, big and small, across this Nation run and report under generally accepted accounting principles. This is not a new system. It is newer than the system we are talking about operating under which was instituted in 1935.

In 1935, when it was controlled by a monopoly, there needed to be more detailed accounting. Anything that needs to be accounted can still be accounted. It just has to follow generally accepted accounting principles instead of a multiple process of going to the FCC, negotiating into some new accounts which already number in the neighborhood of 500, and coming in with the output that is needed to make the decision, rather than a myriad of information.

How would you like to depreciate paper clips? It has gotten ridiculous. Those things have to be taken into consideration. There is no threshold of expenses.

There have been a lot of changes in the communications industry. One of them is divestiture of AT&T. There is a whole list of things that have happened. A big one is the passage in 1996 of the Telecommunications Act, of which the Senator was speaking, and the issuance of the resulting FCC orders implementing various sections of the act, including proceedings to implement local competition and interconnection, as well as universal service, access charge, and price cap reform.

There is not anything under generally accepted accounting principles that will not get the data that is needed to handle any of those issues. All of the service providers, with the exception of incumbent local exchange companies, have flexibility. The others already have the flexibility. AT&T has the flexibility to provide services priced on a competitive basis at rates dictated by the marketplace.

These service providers are not subject to the accounting and recordkeeping rules contained in part 32—the big companies are not subject to that—and associated monitoring and enforcement activities but are simply required to follow GAAP in producing their external reports. Prices no longer bear a direct relationship to cost.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. ENZI. Yes.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I find this to be rather confounding. I just want to make sure I understand this clearly. These companies are required to maintain two sets of books?

Mr. ENZI. Yes.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Accounted different ways; is that correct?

Mr. ENZI. The Senator from Missouri is absolutely correct. They are required to carry multiple books.

Mr. ASHCROFT. And this adds as much as $20 million to $30 million to the cost of doing business?

Mr. ENZI. For the local companies, it would be $25 million to $30 million. We are talking about at least $300 million across the United States per year.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Some of these companies try to be competitive, not only nationally but internationally.

Mr. ENZI. They are, and we want them to be competitive without having to do all the mergers that were spoken of earlier.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Is it true these additional charges are eventually paid by consumers?

Mr. ENZI. Absolutely, they have to be paid by consumers.

Mr. ASHCROFT. What we are imposing is almost like a tax that the people of America are paying, $25 million or $30 million extra, that is really unnecessary in these companies now.

Mr. ENZI. The Senator from Missouri is absolutely correct. It is like a tax, and it is money that the rural telephone folks are having to pay.

Mr. ASHCROFT. And that is a substantial impairment on their capacity to do business?

Mr. ENZI. It is a substantial impairment on their ability to be competitive with the big national phone companies.

Mr. ASHCROFT. This one unique, idiosyncratic accounting method is a 1930s accounting system.

Mr. ENZI. That is correct.

Mr. ASHCROFT. That is still mandated in spite of the fact that for other purposes, to be competitive and to be successful in offering their stock and other things, they maintain a set of books that is generally accepted for accounting purposes.

Mr. ENZI. That is correct. We want the small companies able to do the same kind of accounting as the big companies.

Mr. ASHCROFT. The Senator's amendment is to basically say we want to relieve them of this duplicitous, inefficient demand which results in their consumers having to pay a lot more and reducing the competitiveness of these companies.

Mr. ENZI. The Senator is absolutely correct. We want to increase their competitiveness. We want the people in the rural areas to have the same accounting system, so they have lower costs, so they can pass that on to the consumer.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I thank the Senator for his amendment. I think it is good policy. It is the direction in which we should be going to be competitive. We need to move into the next century, not try to reinvent the last century.

I thank the Senator for his excellent work and for allowing me to interrupt his remarks to clarify this to make sure I understand clearly what the Senator from Wyoming said. He has made an outstanding contribution to the understanding of other Senators and to the people of the United States about an archaic system imposed by Government which costs us all resources and which makes competition difficult for our own companies.

Mr. ENZI. I thank the Senator from Missouri for his comments.

We have an opportunity to fix the system so it works the same for big companies and small companies so they all operate under generally accepted accounting principles, so the small rural guy is not doing all of the extra accounting that the big guys are not required to do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BROWNBACK). The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. HOLLINGS addressed the Chair.

Mr. ENZI. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina has 7 minutes 55 seconds.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I will use just a minute or two, Mr. President.

The word ''competitive'' intrigued this particular Senator. As they congratulate each other over there with respect to this particular attempted fix, let me remind the Senate that we are talking about monopolies. Monopolies do not have general accounting principles because they are not in the field of competition. They are monopolies. They are guaranteed a return. And extra accounting principles have been long since established for these companies and for small ones in that the independent, local exchange carriers—there are many small ones—they are monopolies, too. So these accounting methods and principles have been in force for a long time.

And here without a hearing, and just, bam, and to start talking about small—and there is a $30 million tax, and so forth, that is just spurious reasoning and fanciful notions, if I have ever heard them.

The opposite is true. We are trying, with respect to a monopoly, to make sure that it does not go to the ratepayer because the monopoly is guaranteed a return. So if any true costs are there, they are going to have to be reflected in their guaranteed rate of return.

So this amendment is totally out of order in the sense of procedures here in the Senate where we have a committee and we can have hearings on it and we can find out if there is any infringement with respect to the concern of the Senator from Wyoming. Because he knows all about accounting.

But I can tell you now, general accounting principles do not apply to monopolies—and should not apply to monopolies—because there is no competition. They are guaranteed that return, and that is why they have the special accounting system.

I thank the Chair. At the end of this, if my distinguished chairman would permit, I think we ought to move to table this one.

Mr. ENZI. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Yes, sir.

Mr. ENZI. Would you be willing to go with an amendment that would require AT&T and other companies to meet the same requirements as little companies?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Oh, yes. I think whatever accounting system they have, I do not find a difference in it. I would go with having a hearing and give you a definite return. We are not trying to delay or anything like that, but I would have a hearing before the subcommittee of the Senator from Montana, and the full committee, and we would be glad to report something out. But we never have had hearings, and you just say ''little and small.''

The United States Telephone Association, that is big. I know from hard experience that is big. That is a ''Big Bell'' company. In relation to the chairman of this so-called company that has the accounting system, and so forth, do you know what they reported in USA Today the other day? The chairman of Bell South made last year $55.9 million—either $56 or $57 million. Can you imagine the head of a monopoly guaranteed a return, with no competition, making $55 million? Come on. And you are talking about little things? Don't give me that. They are not little. In just agreeing to little and big, we have a different idea basically of what is big and what is little in this particular debate.

Mr. ENZI. You would agree they all ought to be on the same accounting system?

Mr. HOLLINGS. I don't know of a reason for a separate accounting system. If there is less of an accounting system for the smaller one, I tend in that direction.

I agree with the sentiment that you have to look out for the small so they are not gobbled up by the big. So I would almost agree to less of an accounting system for the small rather than the same required for the big. I am trying to go in your direction.

Mr. ENZI. I would love to work with you on that, but right now the big ones have the easier accounting system.

Mr. HOLLINGS. We can have hearings and find that out.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second on the amendment.

They yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I move to table the amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second on the motion to table?

''(h) INAPPLICABILITY OF AMENDMENTS.—A civil action that seeks to remedy conditions that pose a threat to the health of individuals who are juveniles or mentally ill shall be governed by the terms of this section, as in effect on the day before the date of enactment of the Prison Litigation Reform Act of 1995 and the amendments made by that Act (18 U.S.C. 3601 note).''.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota is recognized.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I have had the opportunity to visit some detention facilities across our country and meet with correctional officers and also the incarcerated children and their parents. I am struck again and again by one fact: The mentally ill and the juveniles—the children, the kids—are particularly vulnerable to abuse and neglect in jails and prisons in our country. That is why I am offering this amendment that will give back to the Federal courts full authority to remedy abusive conditions but only under which the mentally ill and juveniles are being held.

Just 2 weeks ago, the Department of Justice released a report on the prevalence of mental illness among adult inmates in our jails and prisons. The Justice Department report merely confirms what many of us already know. The criminalization of mental illness is a national crisis.

Of particular concern to me have been the extraordinary problems children with mental illness and emotional disorders encounter in juvenile jails. That is why I introduced the Mental Health Juvenile Justice Act earlier this year. Of the 100,000 children who are arrested and incarcerated each year, as many as 50 percent suffer from a mental or emotional disturbance.

Jails and detention centers often find they are unprepared to deal with these kids. For instance, medication which should be given is not given; medication that should be properly monitored is not properly monitored; and guards may not even know how to respond to some of these kids.

Why do so many youth with mental illness end up in the juvenile justice system? The truth of the matter is, we ought to, on the front end, do a much better job of assessing the problems of these kids and, for those who should not be incarcerated—some should—but for those who should not be incarcerated, look to alternatives.

We have not invested as a country—you can talk to anybody down in the trenches doing this work—adequately in the service programs and community prevention programs that will reduce the need for incarceration. Therefore, many of these kids wind up in these facilities. They are incredibly vulnerable. They do not get the care they absolutely have to get, and the consequences are tragic.

Last year, as an example, I went with the National Mental Health Association to the Tallulah Correctional Center for Youth, a privately owned facility for over 600 youth in northeast Louisiana. I saw shocking civil rights violations which were cited by the U.S. Department of Justice. Basically what I am saying is, there were kids who were diagnosed with mental problems getting absolutely no treatment whatsoever.

The Justice Department has also exposed gross abuses in Georgia, Kentucky, and the juvenile facilities in Louisiana. Other States also experience similar problems. Investigators found cases of physical abuse and neglect of mental health needs, including unwarranted and prolonged isolation of suicidal children, hog-tie and chemical restraints used on youth with serious emotional disturbances, forced medication, and even denial of medication.

Children with extensive psychiatric histories who are prone to self-mutilation—cutting themselves with glass—never even saw a psychiatrist.

In some cases, abusive treatment of these children results directly from their being emotionally disturbed. Staff in the juvenile facilities fail to recognize the problem and, in fact, punish these children for the symptoms of their disorders. Children have been punished for requesting treatment or put in isolation when they refuse to accept treatment. One child in a boot camp was punished for making involuntary noises that were symptoms of Tourette's syndrome. Mental disorders are being handled almost solely through discipline, isolation, and restraints, according to investigations by the U.S. Department of Justice and human rights groups.

Nobody likes litigation, but sometimes lawsuits are necessary to protect the constitutional rights of our people, especially vulnerable, voiceless persons such as incarcerated children who suffer from mental illness. That is what this amendment is about.

Because juveniles and mentally ill persons are particularly vulnerable to abuse and neglect in State institutions, I am offering tonight an amendment which will give back to Federal courts the authority to remedy abusive conditions under which juveniles with mental illness are being held. Regrettably, the Congress has taken steps in recent years to limit the circumstances under which lawsuits challenging the constitutionality of prison conditions can be brought.

Three years ago, this Congress passed the Prison Litigation Reform Act. Its sponsors claimed that the bill would merely end frivolous lawsuits by prisoners, and we all agree with that goal. I certainly do. But the terms of the PLRA were much more sweeping. It deprived Federal courts of important legal tools to remedy brutal, unconstitutional conditions in juvenile detention facilities throughout our country.

For example, the PLRA limited the power of Federal courts to impose and retain injunctive relief to improve conditions in juvenile facilities. This means that parties can no longer settle these lawsuits by means of a consent decree—a court-enforceable injunction entered into with agreement by the parties without admission of liability by a defendant. That is very important. Also, any relief order must be terminated by the courts 2 years after it is issued unless the court holds another trial.

One of the most important judicial powers that the PLRA curtailed was the appointment of special masters. Quite often judges will appoint special masters who will come in, do the mediation, do the negotiation, but we have so limited the compensation that we are not able to do that. The act limited the powers of special masters so they can no longer perform this task of mediating disputes and assisting the parties in reaching some compliance with court orders.

While the PLRA has made it much more difficult for courts to improve inhumane conditions in prisons generally, it has had a devastating impact on the conditions in which mentally ill and juvenile defenders are held. They are particularly vulnerable to abuse and neglect at State institutions, and precisely because of that fact, we must not be indifferent to their plight or ignore their need for protection.

Let me give some examples. Just consider some of these horrific conditions involving mentally ill juveniles that PLRA has made more difficult to remedy:

In Philadelphia, children with mental illness in a juvenile detention facility operating at 160 percent of capacity were regularly beaten by staff with chains and other objects. Santiago v. Philadelphia.

In Delaware, juveniles with mental illness were housed in living units the court found posed a serious fire hazard. Their food and clothing were inadequate. Children were routinely beaten, maced, and shackled. The medical and education programs they received were below minimally accepted standards. These are facts. This is what is going on. John A v. Castle.

In a Pennsylvania-run juvenile facility, children were routinely beaten by faculty staff, staff trafficking in illegal drugs was rampant, and sexual relations between staff and confined youth were commonplace. DB v. Commonwealth.

A severely depressed 17-year-old in an adult prison in Texas was raped and sodomized. His request to be placed in protective custody was denied. For the next several months, he was repeatedly beaten by older prisoners, forced to perform oral sex, robbed, and beaten again. Each time, his requests for protection were denied by the warden. He attempted suicide by hanging himself in his cell after a guard had ignored the warning letter he wrote. He was in a coma for 4 months, after which he died.

The purpose of the Prison Litigation Reform Act was to reduce or eliminate frivolous lawsuits by inmates. I am all for that, but as these examples make clear—and I have many other examples—the inmates I seek to protect with this amendment are not filing frivolous lawsuits. Or I should say, what is happening to them is not the stuff of a frivolous lawsuit. They are young; they are uneducated; they are suffering from mental illness that prevent them from functioning at the necessary level to file a lawsuit on their own. This is a population of uniquely vulnerable inmates who need representation in the legal system and are not receiving that representation, who need the protection that the Federal courts have historically provided.

Unfortunately, this Congress seems to be moving, at least on the House side—and I pray we do not do the same thing—in the opposite direction. Just last month, the House adopted an amendment offered by Congressman DELAY to the juvenile justice bill that would actually terminate all consent decrees entered into prior to the passage of the Prison Litigation Reform Act.

The DeLay amendment would say that even when prison conditions were horrible enough to warrant the continuation of the consent decree, that decree is going to be terminated by an act of Congress. No matter how many children will suffer, the Federal judge's hands will be tied.

I think it is unconstitutional. Let me give a couple of examples and conclude, because if this amendment is agreed to tonight, this will negate the DeLay amendment in the House of Representatives.

In Ironton, OH, a 15-year-old girl ran away from home over night, then returned to her parents but was put in the county jail by the juvenile court judge to ''teach her a lesson.'' On the fourth night of her confinement, she was sexually assaulted by a deputy jailer. More than 500 children had been incarcerated in the jail over the past 3 years, many for truancy and other status offenses. Under the consent decree, no children may be held in the jail. But with what is happening in the House of Representatives, that consent degree would not even apply.

In Portland, ME, a lawsuit was filed after a young boy held in the county jail was sexually assaulted by an older adolescent. In 1987, county officials agreed to stop holding children in the jail because of another decree.

In Clovis, NM, children were held in the county jail in unsanitary conditions, without adequate fire safety procedures, recreation or programming, or adequate separation from adult inmates. In 1983, local officials agreed to stop using the jail as a detention facility for children.

The DeLay amendment would automatically terminate these decrees even if judges disagreed. This amendment would deal with this problem.

In Tucson, AZ, children in the juvenile detention center were held in leather restraints, mail was censored, there were inadequate treatment programs, and the facility was overcrowded. Another consent decree provided for the protection of these children.

In Oklahoma, there was pervasive brutality in the operation of the State juvenile correctional institutions. Children were often handcuffed and hogtied, and institutional staff relied on physical force and intimidation to keep order. The ''punishment unit'' was dark and dungeonlike. Another consent decree took care of that.

Again, this amendment I offer tonight is an effort to make sure what was done in the House will essentially be negated.

Mr. President, I will conclude. My amendment would not repeal, I say to my colleagues, the Prison Litigation Reform Act or adversely affect the crackdown on frivolous lawsuits. It would say that in the case of the mentally ill and juveniles, we should try to protect them. My amendment would merely carve a narrow exception to the PLRA restrictions in limited circumstances involving children and those who struggle with mental illness.

Elie Wiesel once said: ''More than anything—more than hatred and torture—more than pain—do I fear indifference.'' We must be vigilant and we must not allow ourselves to be indifferent to children's misery, particularly those children who may be sick, difficult, and test our patience and our understanding. In that spirit, I ask my colleagues to support this modest and humane exception.

This amendment has the support of the Bazelon Center for Mental Health Law, the Children's Defense Fund, the Justice Policy Institute, the National Education Association, the National Network for Youth, The National Prison Project of the ACLU Foundation, The Shiloh Baptist Church, the Youth Law Center, and other organizations as well.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GREGG addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I have 10 minutes on this amendment available and note that what we hope to do is stack the vote on this amendment with a couple other votes later in the evening. I reserve the 10 minutes because Senator HATCH has asked to speak to this amendment, and I will allocate him that time.

I make a point of order that a quorum is not present.

Mr. LEAHY. Would the Senator withhold for a moment?

Mr. GREGG. I withhold for the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. For some of us who have been here—I know, through no fault of the distinguished chairman, we have had 5 hours of quorum calls today, approximately. This evening I know some of us would like to be with our families. I know it is a family-friendly Senate. But for those of us who have families and wish to be with our families—I know the Senator from New Hampshire feels the same way—can we get some idea when we might vote, so we can do that? If we had not had so many quorum calls, we would be done by now.

Mr. GREGG. You are absolutely right. We are working on an extensive list of amendments. We have it down to very few. My hope is that within the next hour we can get an agreement on which amendments still have to go forward. Hopefully, there will be virtually none, and then we can go to final passage. That is the game plan.

Mr. LEAHY. I was wondering if the distinguished manager would consider going ahead with the vote on this amendment only because I know a lot of times you get everybody on the floor for a vote.

Mr. GREGG. I would like to do that, but I believe Senator HATCH wishes to speak on it. It is represented he is headed in this direction. This is his jurisdiction and your jurisdiction.

Mr. LEAHY. I understand. I do not object to that.

Mr. GREGG. As soon as Senator HATCH comes and speaks, maybe we can move to vote.

Mr. WELLSTONE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, first of all, I reserve the final 4 minutes of my time. I ask my colleague, I assume there are no second-degree amendments in order to this amendment; is that correct?

Mr. GREGG. That is correct.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I reserve the final 4 minutes of my time.

Mr. GREGG. I reserve our 10 minutes and ask unanimous consent that no time be credited against this amendment.

Mr. LEAHY. Reserving the right to object, I want to accommodate the distinguished chairman, but I have been sitting here having rearranged other things waiting for this vote. If I object, as a practical matter, the time on the amendment will run out under the unanimous consent, and we will have to have a vote.

Mr. GREGG. That is correct.

Mr. LEAHY. The distinguished Senator from New Hampshire says the distinguished Senator from Utah is on his way here.

Mr. GREGG. It has been represented by staff that they are in the process of asking him to appear, and it was represented he would be coming.

Mr. LEAHY. I also realize the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire could put in a quorum call, even though the time will run if the quorum call is not called off. We could take a long time doing that, but we would be right back to what happened earlier because that will protect him in that sense. I will object to the time not running. I say to the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, the distinguished Senator from Utah is on the floor.

Mr. GREGG. This is good news for all of us.

Mr. LEAHY. Why don't we let him do that and go that way so we could have a vote in the next few minutes, I say to my distinguished friend from Utah.

Mr. GREGG. I think if we could go to a quorum call briefly, the Senator from Utah will be back and will be speaking in a brief period of time.

Mr. REID addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BURNS). The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. I say to the managers of the bill, I have been working with my friend from South Carolina. We are doing——

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that these colloquies not be debited to the amendment of the Senator from Minnesota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the Senator from Utah is on the floor. We have been working with our Members and have cleared most everything with the Senator from South Carolina. We only have a few more amendments——

Mr. GREGG. As do we.

Mr. REID. Requiring a very short period of time. I think if we can get past this, we would be in a position to give the Senator a finite number of amendments that still need to be debated and voted on.

Mr. GREGG. That is excellent news, obviously. We are also making good progress on our side. Hopefully, we can go to a vote and maybe make some more progress.

I yield to the Senator from Utah whatever remains of my 10 minutes.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I won't take long. The amendment exempts juveniles and the mentally ill from the reforms accomplished by the Prison Litigation Reform Act, which was passed in 1996. This was my bill. This amendment would subject State prison systems to micromanagement by the Federal courts. Keep in mind, I am also the author of Civil Rights for Institutionalized Persons, which is to take care of a lot of these difficulties. I cast the deciding vote back in the late 1970s passing that bill.

Currently everyone whose Federal or constitutional rights have been violated retains the ability to bring suit and to have any violation of their rights remedied by a Federal court. All this Congress did in 1996 was to say courts could not go beyond remedying people's Federal rights to micromanage prison systems.

I am opposed to this amendment because of that. I know the distinguished Senator from Minnesota is trying to do something right, but basically it flies in the face of what the reform basically says. If true constitutional rights are being violated, they have a right to go to court under current legislation, both in the Civil Rights Act for Institutionalized Persons and the Prison Litigation Reform Act, which we passed in 1996.

I reluctantly have to oppose this amendment because I believe that basically the current law takes care of it. His amendment would allow micromanagement of the Federal courts.

I am happy to yield the floor. I hope my colleagues will vote with me on this, and I believe there will be a motion to table. I hope they will vote to table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, so Senator LEAHY can vote—I am very proud to have his support—I will add as an organization that supports this the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill, and I yield back the remainder of my time.

I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I move to table the Wellstone amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to table amendment No. 1303. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Arizona (Mr. MCCAIN), the Senator from Alabama (Mr. SHELBY), and the Senator from Texas (Mr. GRAMM) are necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 56, nays 40, as follows:

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT—RULE XVI

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I have consulted with the Democratic leader on the unanimous-consent request I am fixing to propound. I think it is a reasonable solution to deal with a couple of very important issues.

I ask unanimous consent when the Senate convenes on Monday, July 26, it proceed to an original resolution, to be placed on the calendar by the majority leader immediately following the acceptance of this agreement, and the resolution be considered under the following restraints:

That the resolution be limited to 3 hours for each leader or his designee; that there be one amendment in order for the Democratic leader regarding restoring the point of order on exceeding the scope of conference, which debate time shall come out of the resolution time; and that final adoption of the resolution must occur prior to close of business of the Senate on Monday, July 26; Provided further that when the Senate considers the agricultural disaster relief amendment to be offered by Senator DASCHLE, or his designee, to the agriculture appropriations bill, no rule XVI point of order lie against the amendment.

Mr. HARKIN. Reserving the right to object, I tried to listen to all of the verbiage. I understand that Senator DASCHLE or his designee would be allowed to offer the emergency agriculture package without any rule XVI, but to what bill? To what measure would the Democratic leader be permitted to offer that?

Mr. LOTT. To the agricultural appropriations bill.

Mr. HARKIN. Agricultural appropriations. And that will come up before we leave in August?

Mr. LOTT. Right.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Reserving the right to object, I ask the leader a question. I assume a second-degree amendment to the first-degree concerning agriculture would be out of order under rule XVI?

Mr. LOTT. Amendments thereto would have to be protected in the same way in order for that to go forward. We can't have one amendment in order and not have amendments thereto be in order also.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I will have to object.

Mr. LOTT. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, now I understand the reservation that the Senator from Wisconsin has, and we can clarify that.

Let me read the last paragraph again. I think it will make it clear:

Provided that when the Senate considers the agricultural disaster relief amendment to be offered by Senator DASCHLE, or his designee, to the agricultural appropriations bill, no rule XVI point of order lie against the amendment or amendments thereto relating to the same subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, if I could, this just provides for a fair opportunity for debate on the restoration of the rule XVI issue that we talked about earlier today which would allow Members to have a debate on that and a vote. If rule XVI is put back into place, of course, legislation on appropriations bills will be limited, unless there is a rule by the Chair and it gets 51 votes.

We also have to debate and vote on the question of scope issues coming back out of conference.

When we do bring up agriculture appropriations before the August recess, there will be one amendment relating to disaster relief by Senator DASCHLE or his designee, and we will have an opportunity to have our amendment on the same subject. It will not relate to dairy, I make that clear.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, with regard to tonight, we need to just keep going forward. Senator REID, as usual, is doing good work. The managers, Senator JUDD GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS, have been working. I think if we will be serious—and I don't think a lot of Senators are on either side—in trying to get this completed, we still have a raft of amendments that either need to be accepted or withdrawn.

I tried to see if we could do the work in the daylight, and I tried to see if we could do it on Mondays or Fridays. None of that seems to suit the Senate. I think we ought to keep going as late as it takes to finish this legislation. That way, we can get it completed. So it is at your pleasure. I live on Capitol Hill, so I will be at home watching you all on TV and wishing you the best. When the votes are ready, I will come back and vote. It is up to the Senators. Do we get rid of this long list of amendments that Senator REID and Senator GREGG have been working on and keep going on into the night, or we can come in tomorrow. I am flexible either way. We have to get this bill done. I think we ought to keep going.

I hope Senators will get serious about getting rid of some of these amendments. There is no reason we shouldn't have another vote or two and final passage. I hope we can get that done. This is not aimed at one side or the other. It is on both sides. Let's get serious and complete this bill.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I take a moment to thank the majority leader for his willingness to work with us and cooperate to the point that he has tonight to reach the agreement we have for Monday. I believe this is a fair compromise. We will have an opportunity to debate it, offer an amendment, and have the vote. We will also have the opportunity to have a good discussion about how we might proceed with agriculture disasters. I think this accommodates many of the concerns we have raised.

I also must share his hope that we can finish this bill at a reasonable hour. It is 9 o'clock. There is no reason within the next hour we couldn't finish this bill. I appreciate especially the deputy minority leader for all of the work he has done to get us to this point. We are down to a couple of amendments on our side. I am hopeful we can finish. There is no reason we can't do it reasonably soon.

I yield the floor.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, first of all, what is the parliamentary situation right now on the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending amendment is the Gregg amendment, No. 1272.

Mr. HARKIN. I ask unanimous consent to set that amendment aside and call up an amendment.

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object, the Senator from Iowa wants to discuss an amendment that has been agreed to for 6 minutes, is that so?

Mr. HARKIN. About 6 minutes. I want to call it up first.

Mr. GREGG. Is it necessary to call it up?

Mr. HARKIN. I would like to call up my amendment.

Mr. REID. We are going to put it in the managers' amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair cannot hear. We have quite a lot of racket here in left field. If we could take those conversations to the Cloakroom, it would sure help us proceed with the business at hand.

The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. I was under the understanding I was going to bring up my amendment, I would talk for 5 minutes, they would accept it, and that would be the end of it.

Mr. GREGG. No objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 1304

(Purpose: To provide $100,000,000 in Byrne grant funding offset by reducing funds for travel, supplies, and printing expenses in the bill by 5.8 percent and cutting funds for preliminary work on possible Supreme Court improvements)

Mr. HARKIN. I ask consent to set aside the pending amendment. I have an amendment at the desk. I ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], for himself and Mr. HATCH, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. LAUTENBERG, and Mr. BRYAN, proposes an amendment numbered 1304.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 25, line 20, strike ''$452,100,000'' and insert ''$552,100,000''.

On page 66, line 20, strike ''$18,123,000'' and insert ''$9,652,000''.

On page 111, after line 7, insert the following:

SEC. ___. (a) The total discretionary amount made available by this Act is reduced by $92,000,000: Provided, That the reduction pursuant to this subsection shall be taken pro rata from travel, supplies, and printing expenses made available to the agencies funded by this Act, except for activities related to the 2000 census.

(b) Not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall submit to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate a listing of the amounts by account of the reductions made pursuant to the provisions of subsection (a).

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I send this amendment to the desk on behalf of myself, Mr. HATCH, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. LAUTENBERG, and Mr. BRYAN. I thank the managers of the bill for their willingness to accept this.

What this amendment would do is restore the funding for the Edward Byrne Memorial Grant Program to the fiscal year 1999 level. In the bill before us, the Byrne grant was cut by $100 million from the fiscal year 1999 level; I might point out, on a bipartisan basis. This was cut first by the President. It was kept in as the bill came to the floor.

I am grateful they accepted this amendment because these grants go directly to local and State law enforcement. For fiscal year 1999, $552 million was distributed to State and local law enforcement agencies through Byrne grants. But for fiscal year 2000, the Byrne grant was cut by the White House and by the initial actions before we got to the floor by more than 18 percent. This amendment would restore the fiscal year 1999 funding level for the Byrne program.

The Byrne program is one of the most successful Federal anticrime programs ever. It pays for drug enforcement task forces, more cops on the streets, improved technology, and countless other valuable antidrug and anticrime efforts in local communities.

Restoring the Byrne funds is a top priority of law enforcement groups who know the impact the program has had on crime and drugs. The National Association of Police Organizations, the National Sheriffs' Association, and the International Association of Police Chiefs have all contacted me, urging full funding of this program.

I have received dozens of letters from Iowa police chiefs and sheriffs describing the kinds of setbacks they would suffer if these cuts go through. The Byrne grant provides critical staff and resources for Iowa's 24 drug enforcement task forces working to stem the methamphetamine epidemic in the region.

Iowa and the Midwest have made great strides in reducing methamphetamine production and supply over the last few years. The proposed cuts to the Byrne program would only set them back in their uphill battle.

Sgt. Tom Andrew, head of the Southeast Iowa Inter-Agency Drug Task Force that covers six rural counties, wrote me saying that his task force was made possible through the Byrne grant. Without it, most of the small agencies in that region would lack the manpower, funds, training, and technology necessary to combat the methamphetamine problem. Sergeant Andrew said:

A funding cut of this magnitude would have a detrimental effect on our program and would, in all probability, result in the elimination of the task force.

I have heard this story over and over again from my contacts in Iowa. These drug task forces are funded primarily by the Byrne grants, and they are desperately needed to fight our State's battles against methamphetamine use. I know this is the case in most States across the country.

We just cannot afford to have an 18-percent cut in the Byrne grants in our States next year. It makes no sense to cut such a successful program that directly benefits our local communities.

I thank the managers for accepting this amendment, and I trust we will keep the Byrne memorial grants at least at the same level next year as they were this year.

Again, I thank my colleague from Kansas also for his strong support of this program. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HAGEL). The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I want to add my comments in support of this amendment that Senator HARKIN has put forward. I think it is a good way of doing it. Here is a program that puts money directly back to the States for law enforcement; lets them decide. We take this out of travel and office supplies over the rest of the bill. I think it is much better we spend the money back in Iowa, in Kansas, in our various States, rather than on travel and printing here in Washington. That is a good trade. That is a good way to go. That is why I supported this amendment, and I am glad to hear the managers are willing to accept it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 1304) was agreed to.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. REID. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

AMENDMENT NO. 1305

(Purpose: To prohibit the transfer of a firearm or ammunition to an intoxicated person)

Mrs. BOXER. I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending amendment is set aside. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mrs. BOXER] proposes an amendment numbered 1305.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 111, between lines 7 and 8, insert the following:

SEC. 6 . PROHIBITION OF TRANSFER OF A FIREARM TO AN INTOXICATED PERSON.

(a) PROHIBITION OF TRANSFER.—Section 922(d) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (8) and (9) as paragraphs (9) and (10), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (7) the following:

''(8) is intoxicated;''.

(b) DEFINITION OF INTOXICATED.—Section 921(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(35) The term 'intoxicated', in reference to a person, means being in a mental or physical condition of impairment as a result of the presence of alcohol in the body of the person.''.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I am happy to make my remarks very brief because I understand this amendment will be accepted. I ask, if it is OK with the managers, if I can have 3 minutes to explain the amendment before it is accepted?

Mr. GREGG. I ask consent the Senator from California have 3 minutes and the Senator from Idaho have 3 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I am very relieved that we are seeing an acceptance of this amendment. It is so straightforward.

Under current Federal law, you cannot sell a gun to any person if the seller knows or has reason to believe any of the following, that the buyer is: a felon, a fugitive, an addict of a controlled substance, is mentally ill, is an illegal immigrant, has been dishonorably discharged from the military, has renounced his or her American citizenship, is subject to a court order on domestic violence or has been convicted of a domestic violence misdemeanor.

Already under current law anyone selling such a person a weapon, who knows, or has reason to believe this, cannot do that. All we are adding to this is: a person who is intoxicated. This is very simple. I am so pleased we are going to see this accepted. Senator CRAIG is going to make some comments.

But I want to talk about one case, a story about a woman named Deborah Kitchen, who is a quadriplegic, and she got that way because her ex-boyfriend shot her.

Tom Knapp consumed, by his own estimate, a fifth of whiskey and a case of beer. He went to K-mart in Florida to buy a .22-caliber rifle and a box of bullets. He was so intoxicated that the clerk had to help him fill out the Federal form required to purchase the gun, but he still bought the rifle, he shot his girlfriend, and left her a quadriplegic.

Let me tell you another story. This one is from Michigan. It involves an 18-year-old named Walter McKay, who had engaged in a day-long drinking spree and then went and bought ammunition for his shotgun. He was so intoxicated that he could not remember whether it was a man or woman who sold him the ammunition and could not identify what he purchased.

He took those shotgun shells, loaded his gun, and intended to shoot out of the back window of an acquaintance's truck. He was intoxicated. The shot missed, ricocheted off the wheel of the truck, and hit Anthony Buczkowski. Mr. Buczkowski had to have a finger amputated and his left wrist surgically fused.

To me, it flies in the face of common sense that someone who is intoxicated is able to buy a gun or ammunition. And it flies in the face of the evidence.

A 1997 study in the Journal of American Medical Association found that ''alcohol and illicit drug use appear to be associated with an increased risk of violent death.''

Yet, Mr. Knapp and Mr. McKay could buy a gun and ammunition because it is not—I repeat, not—against the law to sell a gun to someone who is intoxicated. Gun sales are largely regulated at the federal level. Gun sales involve Federal licenses and federal forms. This is a Federal responsibility, and there should be a Federal law that stops this outrage.

So, my amendment makes it against federal law to sell a firearm or ammunition if the seller knows or has reasonable cause to believe that the buyer is intoxicated.

I want to talk about for a minute about one of the items on the list. Notice that the current federal law includes a prohibition on the sale of a gun to a drug user.

In fact, the way the law is worded, you do not even need to be high on drugs at the time you buy the gun. If the seller knows or has reasonable cause to believe that you are a user or addict of an illegal drug—regardless of whether you are high at the moment the gun is purchased—he is not supposed to sell you a gun.

So, I say to my colleagues, if you cannot buy a gun when you are high on drugs, you should not be able to buy a gun when you are intoxicated on alcohol.

That is all my amendment does.

I want to make one more point. And that is about what an individual cannot do when he or she is intoxicated.

States and localities have all sorts of laws that prohibit intoxicated people from engaging in certain activities and buying certain things that are otherwise legal.

There are State laws that prohibit people from serving alcohol to someone who is intoxicated, selling fireworks to someone who is intoxicated, and renting an intoxicated person a car.

But in reviewing State laws, we could not find a single State that prohibited the sale of guns to intoxicated persons. So this amendment—which prohibits it under federal law—is really critical.

Guns and alcohol do not mix. And all I am saying with this amendment is that if you are intoxicated, you cannot buy a gun or ammunition. It is very reasonable, and it will save lives.

In many States in this Union, if you are drunk you cannot drive a car, operate a boat, operate a snowmobile, fly a plane, even get on a plane, operate an all-terrain vehicle, ride a bike, and in West Virginia you cannot even obtain a tattoo if you are drunk. But you can go in and buy a gun.

So I think this is a really important step forward as we try to pass sensible gun control legislation. It is common sense. I am very pleased it has been accepted, and I am happy to yield the floor.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, at this time we are taking a close look at the Boxer amendment. I have visited with the Senator from California. She is being very straightforward with this amendment. No one out there wants to suggest that anybody in the legitimate business of selling guns in a legal fashion should sell one to an intoxicated person.

I am concerned about the section of the code she is amending as it relates to penalties. I certainly do not believe any of us would suggest that anybody in a retail business who sells guns within the context of the Federal law becomes an alcohol expert or has breathalyzer equipment or any of that kind of thing at the point of sale. We want to make sure that is clear, because that is asking a nonprofessional to make a professional determination that could ultimately put them in tremendous liability, up to 10 years in prison. We want to make sure that is perfectly clear.

I said to the Senator from California we will work with her to assure that going into conference, that section of the code is clarified so her amendment is as clear as, obviously, she intends it to be.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I thank my friends and say that clearly we are not suggesting in any way, shape, or form that people who are in the retail business and sell guns should have a breathalyzer. We are merely adding to this list a person who is intoxicated.

Clearly, under current law, you do not have to be a psychiatrist or you do not have to have a psychiatrist on your staff at K Mart, if you sell guns, to determine if someone is mentally ill. The way 18 U.S.C. 922(d) reads is you have to know or have reasonable cause to believe. It is a pretty broad definition.

I hope Senator CRAIG, in working with us, will recognize we are not doing anything different than we do for all of these other problem areas. It is just going to make the law stronger and better. We will stop people, such as Thomas Knapp, from walking in and buying a gun dead drunk, flat-out drunk, going home, and injuring a perfectly innocent person, in this case a loving person. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment?

The amendment (No. 1305) was agreed to.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1306

(Purpose: To ensure that parties to the tuna convention pay their fair share of the expenses of the Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission before they are allowed to export tuna to the United States)

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mrs. BOXER] proposes an amendment numbered 1306.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 83, at the end of line 19, before the period insert the following: '': Provided further, That of the amounts made available for the Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission in Fiscal Year 2000, not more than $2,350,000 may be obligated and expended: Provided further, That no tuna may be imported in any year from any High Contracting Party to the Convention establishing the Commission (TIAS 2044; 1 UST 231) unless the Party has paid a share of the joint expenses of the Commission proportionate to the share of the total catch from the previous year from the fisheries covered by the Convention which is utilized by that Party''.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, we need to have a time agreement established on this amendment. The Senator from California has indicated she needs 30 minutes.

Mr. GREGG. I suggest, then, we have 45 minutes on this amendment: 30 minutes to the Senator from California, 15 minutes in opposition.

Mrs. BOXER. I say to my friend, I may not take the entire 30 minutes.

Mr. GREGG. It will be very helpful to a lot of people, I suspect, if we can move this amendment along.

Mrs. BOXER. I am hopeful we can get through this.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I say to the Senator from California, I am in touch with the Senator from Delaware, and he is going to make a decision soon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, the reason I need a little time is that this is a complicated situation we are facing and it involves the whole issue of dolphin protection versus trade versus countries that owe money to the Tuna Commission and are not at this point paying their fair share. I will explain all of this.

All my amendment says is that until the Latin American countries pay their fair share to the Tuna Commission, they should not be allowed to export their tuna into this country.

The Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission has set these laws. It says that each member country to the Commission must pay its required share to the Commission and makes it clear that if they do not pay as required by current law, they may not export tuna into the United States.

Right now in this appropriations bill—and I think this is very important—our contribution is way too large. We are picking up the contribution of the Latin American countries. The contribution of each country is supposed to be based on the percentage of the catch in the eastern tropical Pacific. Our catch at maximum has been 40 percent, and yet in this bill, we are paying 75 percent of the total cost of the Commission.

I do not mind being Uncle Sam, but I object to being Uncle Sucker, and that is what we are doing. We should not be picking up the tab for countries that want the privilege of exporting their tuna into our markets.

There are three principal benefits from this amendment which, by the way, is cosponsored by Senator BIDEN, Senator JOHN KERRY, Senator DURBIN, Senator FEINGOLD, and Senator REID.

One, the amendment forces countries to pay their fair share of expenses which they committed to do when they signed on to the Commission.

Two, the amendment will delay the importation of tuna that is caught by chasing and circling dolphins. It will stop that importation because we know that purse seining on dolphin hurts and harm the dolphin. There was a huge boycott in this country by the schoolchildren a long time ago because purse seining was seen by them and by many Americans as being wrong: harass the dolphin, chase the dolphin because they happen to swim over the tuna, then they encircle them, catch them in the net and a lot of them are harmed, some of them are killed. If we delay the importation of tuna that is caught in this fashion, we will be saving the dolphin.

Third, because we put a freeze on the amount of money that can be paid by the United States, or I should say be limited to $2.35 million, we are saving about $1 million, and that $1 million can go to a host of other places and commissions that deal with fisheries conservation.

It is important to note that the Tuna Commission is involved in many activities that affect all the member nations. Why should we be picking up the tab for them? There are costs associated with this commission, and the convention clearly indicated that each Nation should pay its fair share. It says the countries that fish more in this particular part of the ocean should pay more.

The convention states:

> The proportion of joint expenses to be paid by each High Contacting Party shall be related to the proportion of the total catch from the fisheries covered by this Convention * * *

This was decided in 1949, but it still makes sense. Countries are required to pay a share of expenses relative to their utilization of the fisheries.

The United States has always paid its fair share, but this year, for some unknown reason, we are paying the share of these other nations. We are not the largest beneficiary of tuna from the eastern tropical Pacific, and we should not be paying 75 percent of the cost. It must stop. Other countries should be carrying their own weight on this and, frankly, when we had our big debate over purse seining on dolphins and changing the label that goes on the tuna can—and many of us who really did not like this law went along with it—we went along with it in part because finally at least it recognized that these other countries have to pay their fair share, and now they are not doing it.

And these countries are purse seining the dolphin. They are harming the dolphin. We have seen a decline, since that tuna labeling bill went into effect, of 80,000 dolphin a year killed down to 5,000. Now, unfortunately, we lost that battle. This tuna that is caught in Latin American countries is going to come in, and these countries are not paying their fair share of the costs of the Commission.

So I think it is very important that we agree to this amendment. It isn't right that other countries are not paying their fair share. Frankly, it isn't right that other countries are encircling the dolphin, killing the dolphin, maiming the dolphin, and they want to come in to our market, and they want to come in without doing anything to pay their share.

Scientists, consumers, and tuna companies agree that chasing and netting is not safe for dolphins. The dolphin population in the eastern tropical Pacific are not recovering. And the harassment by these fishermen is a tremendous problem that is affecting dolphin reproduction. So what do we do? Instead of trying to encourage safe fishing methods, we say to the other countries: Just do not worry. Send this tuna in. We will even pay your share of the cost of the International Tuna Commission.

I understand that Senator BIDEN is on his way over, so I reserve the remainder of my time for him. I am happy to yield to the other side who is opposing us on this amendment.

Mr. GREGG addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, my friend from California, the distinguished Senator, Mrs. BOXER, feels a sense of compassion about a number of things, one of which is this amendment, and the way in which she, for the past 15 years, has been fighting and successfully, for the most part.

I have been at her side to make sure we, quite frankly, keep dolphins from being killed unnecessarily. It sounds like a simplistic message, but it is as basic as that.

What happened is we got rolled last year by the administration and by the Senate because there are more votes here. We had the Dolphin Protection Act in place. I will not take the time to discuss it now. Actually, it was basically eviscerated by what took place.

I was not particularly pleased with Vice President GORE's position on this, the administration's position, nor the position of my distinguished friend whom I respect very much, Senator BREAUX, and the distinguished Senator from Alaska. That was a formidable array we faced, and we essentially lost.

What did we do last year? Last year, we did basically what the treaty said, and said: Look, we have this mechanism set up where everybody pays their fair share to make it work. The treaty says that. And I will again, in the interest of time, not recite the elements of the treaty which say that and point out how the following sentence can be distinguished that lays out the proportional requirement to participate in this.

But the bottom line is very simple. We made an agreement last year involving countries in question. They said they agreed, the administration promised, and the Senate said everybody will pay their fair share. Simple. Wrong.

We are paying 70 percent or more of the administration of this arrangement, and we should only be paying 40 percent. The distinguished Senator from California comes along and says: Hey, look, let's make it 50 percent. We will pay more than we should, but not this disproportionate amount. And if they do not pay as they promised, they should not get the benefits that flow from the agreement that encompasses their participation.

So it is real simple, I say to my distinguished friend from South Carolina, who asked me to be brief. I will be brief. This is not fair. The Senator from California is right. She is willing to have us pay more than our fair share but not essentially twice what our fair share is.

So I support the amendment, and I hope the managers of the bill may see fit, based on their sense of justice and their notion of fairness, to accept the amendment.

I yield the floor.

Mrs. BOXER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank my friend, Senator BIDEN. So many years ago we teamed up to make sure that the dolphin were protected. He has stuck with me through this battle, along with his daughter Ashley.

Senator HARRY REID would like to be added as a cosponsor. I ask unanimous consent that he be added as a cosponsor to my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. I yield to my friend, Senator DURBIN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Senator from California for her leadership on this issue. It is late at night. People do not want to talk about this. They want to go home. Some of us will go home and eat tuna salad. And if you eat tuna in your household, you bear some responsibility. You hope that your children will have that opportunity, and you hope that the fisheries around the world are going to be handled responsibly.

We passed a law here in 1997 and said: We are going to do what we can to conserve the dolphin which have become victims of those who are fishing for tuna—international convention, international agreement, dolphin conservation. And we said: If you happen to be one of the countries fishing for tuna that may endanger the dolphin, we are going to make you participate, spend some money to make sure this program works based on the percentage of your catch. That is a very reasonable program, conserving the dolphin, saying to each country: Pay your fair share based on what you catch.

I live in the Midwest. I do not live near an ocean. But I get it. I understand this. I just cannot understand why in this bill—before the amendment by the Senator from California—that we are suggesting the United States should pay more than its share.

There are countries here, for example, that are paying nothing.

Mrs. BOXER. Exactly.

Mr. DURBIN. Costa Rica, 7.6 percent of the catch, proportion of payments, zero; Venezuela, 16.2 percent of the catch, proportion of payments, zero; Ecuador, 26.3 percent of the catch, proportion of payments, zero.

Why aren't these countries paying their fair share, their fishery industry fishing for tuna, signatories to this agreement? They should be paying their share instead of being subsidized by the United States.

I think we should take the money saved by the Senator from California and dedicate it to a lot of other international fishery efforts that are listed within this legislation. I am happy to support her amendment. I think it is eminently fair. I hope those listening to the debate will join us in making certain that every country lives up to its obligation.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I thank all my friends tonight for helping this through. I know when it gets this late, people get upset with you for trying to pass amendments and continuing to work because everyone is exhausted. I am, too.

I want to be clear for the RECORD, I was willing to debate this on Friday and put off the vote until Monday night, but we were unable to reach that kind of agreement.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the list of the countries and what they have been paying.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TUNA/DOLPHIN AMENDMENT TO CJS APPROPRIATIONS BILL

Question 1. How much were we intending to pay according to the State Department budget request?

Answer. $3.4 million.

Question 2. What is the total proposed budget for the IATTC?

Answer. $4.7 million.

Question 3. What proportion of the IATTC budget is the State Department request? What is the U.S. proportion of tuna utilization?

Answer. U.S. proposed proportion of the budget is 72%; U.S. tuna utilization is approximately 40%.

Question 4. How many nations are members of the IATTC and who are they?

Answer. 11 members: Costa Rica, Panama, Japan, France, Nicaragua, Vanuatu, Venezuela, El Salvador, Ecuador, Mexico and the United States.

Question 5. What is the estimated utilization of each nation and how much to they pay?

Answer. The most recent data that has been compiled on utilization is from 1996. According to those figures, the breakdown is as follows:

Country	Proportion of utilization (percent)	Proportion of payments (percent)
United States	39.6	91.4
France	1	9
Japan	9	7.7
Panama	0	.01
Costa Rica	7.6	0
Vanuatu	0	.01
Venezuela	16.2	0

Mrs. BOXER. The United States portion of its catch and utilization is less than 40 percent, yet it has been paying 91 percent of the cost of the Commission. As my friend pointed out, there are nations here—Ecuador is catching 26 percent, and they are paying nothing. So what are we doing here?

I know these countries are our friends, but the taxpayers are our friends, too, besides which, these countries are purse seining on dolphin, and they are hurting those beautiful creatures. So why are we in such a rush to cover their payments and let them bring in this tuna?

My last point is another point my friend from Illinois made. He usually hits the nail on the head; he has done it again. Here are some of the other commissions that could benefit from the $1 million we are saving in this amendment: the Great Lakes Fishery Commission, Pacific Salmon Commission, International Pacific Halibut Commission, International Whaling Commission—it goes on and on—North Atlantic Salmon Conservation Organization, North Pacific Marine Science Organization, Inter-American Sea Turtle Convention Commission, Commission for the Conservation of Highly Migratory Species in the Western and Central Pacific Ocean.

Here we see that what we are doing is taking money from our taxpayers to pay for the Latin American countries that are going to get away with not paying their bill, and still they are allowed, unless we pass this Boxer-Biden-Kerry amendment, to export their tuna into this country—I want to underscore—unlike the American companies, that are really good to the dolphin and use safe fishing practices. They will bring their tuna in after purse seining dolphin, harassing the dolphin, killing them, maiming them, harming them, hurting their reproductive capacity.

With this amendment, I think we do a lot of good things. We save money, we help other commissions, and we stand up to our friends in Latin America and say: Pay the bills.

I yield to my friend from South Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask the distinguished Senator from California—I think she makes an outstanding case—as I remember it, isn't this the compromise agreement made with the opposition, that these amounts would be paid by these countries, some 2 years ago?

Mrs. BOXER. Yes.

Mr. HOLLINGS. This is the compromise we agreed to back 2 years ago.

What you are trying to do by your amendment is merely to enforce the compromise with those opposed to us in the first instance.

Mrs. BOXER. My friend is exactly on target. When we reached this compromise, which wasn't a happy compromise for us, one of the clear understandings was that as these countries sought to export their tuna, which has been banned from this country, as my friend knows, for a long time, because of their fishing methods which are so cruel to the dolphin, we said: If you have to bring this tuna in, then pay your fair share of the commission.

Essentially, if you look at the public law that we did pass, you will find it exactly here. In order for them to export, such nation, the section says, ''is meeting the obligation of the International Dolphin Conservation Program and the obligations of membership, including all financial obligations.''

This is the law Senator STEVENS agreed to, Senator BREAUX agreed to, Senator GREGG agreed to, and all of us—sad that we were that we didn't win what we wanted—agreed to. Now they are not paying their fair share, and they still say, well, let them export their tuna. This is wrong.

Mr. HOLLINGS. That is the reason I wanted to make the point. I understand a motion to table may be made. I hope we won't table it. The Senator from California is only making real the compromise agreement entered into some 2 years ago with the opposition.

I thank the Senator for her leadership.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I am happy to yield back the remainder of my time. I think we have made our point.

What we are doing is essentially, with this amendment, enforcing the agreement that everyone agreed to. If they don't come on board on this, I think it makes this agreement and this public law completely worthless. I hope people will support this amendment. It is good for taxpayers, and it is good for the dolphin.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, at this time I move to table the Boxer amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1307, WITHDRAWN

(Purpose: To reduce amounts appropriated by the bill and make available funds for the international criminal tribunals for the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda)

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk. I have discussed this with the manager.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That will take unanimous consent.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the Senator from Louisiana wants to discuss the amendment.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Louisiana.

Ms. LANDRIEU. I thank the Chair.

I will not ask for a vote tonight on this. I have discussed this with the manager, but I want to call it to the attention of the Senate. It is something Senator SPECTER and I have worked on, along with many others on both sides, dealing with monies to properly fund the War Crimes Tribunal.

It has come to our attention that even though we were successful in putting some additional funding into the War Crimes Tribunal for all the situations occurring in Kosovo, some of the money, sort of the standard amount of money that we spend on war crimes, is not present in the current bill we are discussing.

I wanted to offer an amendment to restore it. Given the late hour, given the tight constraints, I have talked with the Senator, and he said they will try to work this out at conference. I bring it to the attention of the Senate to thank him for his consideration.

At this time I will withdraw the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment by number.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Louisiana [Ms. LANDRIEU] proposes an amendment numbered 1307.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 89, between lines 8 and 9, insert the following:

SEC. 408. (a) Each of the amounts appropriated by this Act (other than the accounts specified in subsection (b)) shall be reduced by the percentage that results in a total reduction in appropriations under this Act of $20,000,000.

(b) In addition to the amounts appropriated by this Act under the following accounts, there are hereby appropriated under such accounts, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the following amounts for the following purposes:

(1) Fro ''Contributions to International Organizations'', $7,000,000, which amount shall be available only for contributions to the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda.

(2) For ''Contributions for International Peacekeeping Activities'', $13,000,000, which amount shall be available only for contributions to the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that that amendment be withdrawn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is withdrawn.

The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENTS NOS. 1308 THROUGH 1341, EN BLOC

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, there are at the desk 34 amendments that are in order under a previous unanimous consent agreement. These 34 amendments have been cleared. I ask unanimous consent that they be recorded separately and agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1309

(Purpose: To provide for security for certain federal personnel)

At an appropriate place in the bill, add the following new section:

SEC. . For fiscal year 2000, the Director of the United States Marshals Service shall, within available funds, provide a magnetometer and not less than one qualified guard at each unsecured entrance to the real property (including offices, buildings, and related grounds and facilities) that is leased to the United States as a place of employment for Federal employees at 625 Silver, S.W., in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

AMENDMENT NO. 1310

(Purpose: To provide funds to carry out the drug-free workplace demonstration program)

On page 99, line 9, insert before the period the following: ''Provided further, That $1,800,000 shall be made available to carry out the drug-free workplace demonstration program under section 27 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 654)''.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, my amendment ensures the Small Business Administration's Drug-Free Workplace demonstration moves forward. I want to thank Senators KYL, SESSIONS, ABRAHAM, DEWINE and SNOWE for joining me in this effort. I also want to express my sincere appreciation to Senators BOND, GREGG, and HOLLINGS, as well as their staffs for their cooperation.

Last year, the Drug Free Workplace Act received broad bipartisan support when it was enacted. The House passed it 402–9, and the Senate Committee on Small Business endorsed it without opposition. We see this program as a critical opportunity to assist small businesses who are grappling with the hardships of drug abuse in the workplace.

The funding included in the FY2000 Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations bill, will enable these demonstrations to go forward. The Small Business Administration's initial grant applications indicate there is tremendous need for drug-free workplace programs. It has been reported that no less than 146 qualified grant applications were submitted to SBA for FY1999 funding, but no more than 30 will be funded. At least 116 of these qualified potential drug-free workplace demonstration programs will go unfunded leaving $12 million in unmet need.

Again, I look forward to working with my colleagues to ensure the Drug-Free Workplace demonstration continues to receive the support of Congress.

I ask unanimous consent that letters demonstrating my point be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DRUG FREE AMERICA FOUNDATION, INC.,
July 8, 1999.

Hon. JON L. KYL,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR KYL: It is my understanding that you and Senator COVERDELL intend to offer an amendment to the Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations Bill that would earmark the $6 million necessary to complete the Drug-Free Workplace Demonstration. I would like to commend both of you for your efforts on this issue.

Having worked with you ongoing on the drug issue, I know how important it is to you to fight this problem on every front possible. The workplace is truly a significant front where the battle can be waged. If you consider what makes up a community, you will note that most segments are a workplace of some type. We have schools, churches, social services, law enforcement, private industry, and the public sector—all of which are workplaces. These workplaces provide the perfect opportunity, through drug-free workplace programs, to access our adult population and educate them on the problems associated with drug and alcohol abuse, to intervene on those with problems, and to provide needed treatment to those already addicted.

Over the last ten years, employers have made tremendous progress in addressing drug and alcohol abuse in the workplace. Back in 1986, when I owned a drug testing company, I found the positive drug rate in the workplaces of some communities to be as high as 38 percent. That rate has fallen significantly to below 10 percent. I know from personal testimonies of employees that many casual users ceased to use illicit drugs when their employers began drug testing because they valued their jobs. These individuals, of course, will not become addicted to drugs because they have ceased to use. Their employers' drug-free workplace programs did indeed serve as an effective deterrent to drug use. I also know many employees who have received treatment for drug and alcohol addictions as a result of drug-free workplace programs.

There is a concern, however, for small employers. While the larger companies have implemented very effective, proactive drug-free workplace programs, many small employers have not done so due to financial limitations. I fear that this has resulted in many drug users, who cannot work in the larger companies due to being subject to testing, going to work in smaller companies that do not address the problem of drugs. Having been a small business owner, I know what a struggle it can be to manage a small business and keep it financially afloat. Since drug abusers typically are involved in more accidents, file more workers' compensation claims, are absent more often, and use more leave, they surely take an unnecessary financial toll on our small employers.

The Drug-Free Workplace Demonstration grant monies are greatly needed in order to assist small employers in implementing and maintaining proper drug-free workplace programs to minimize the probability of having drug-using employees. An additional benefit would, of course, be the family members of these employees. When an employee has a drug or alcohol problem, it negatively affects the entire family. If an employer can deter or detect and correct the problem with an employee, everyone benefits.

Please consider me a resource and let me know what I can do to support your proposed amendment.

Regards,

CALVINA L. FAY.

ARIZONANS FOR A DRUG-FREE WORKPLACE,
Tucson, AZ, June 25, 1999.

As a drug-free workplace initiative, representing a coalition of over 3,000 businesses, the majority of which are small businesses, we are requesting your help for the drug-free workplace demonstration project.

We are asking that you support funding the remaining $6 million of appropriated funds for the Small Business Administration in support of this very important drug-free workplace demonstration program.

The need and demand for drug-free workplace resources is growing, while the available resources are shrinking. It is business, and small business in particular, that contributes greatly and supports the economy of this country. It is time for these small businesses to get the help needed to stop the high costs brought about by substance abuse in the workplace. You have an opportunity to make drug-free workplace a reality for many small businesses in this country.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Regards,

ELIZABETH EDWARDS,
Executive Director.

THE COUNCIL ON ALCOHOL AND DRUGS,
Houston, TX, June 28, 1999.

Re. Support for Continued Drug-Free Workplace Funding.

I am writing to request your support for continued funding for the 1998 Drug-Free Workplace demonstration project. The remaining $6 million of appropriated funds for this project is critical if we are to continue to provide assistance to our small business community to help them eliminate substance abuse in the workplace. As you know, small businesses employ over 50% of the nation's workforce. These businesses are at increased risk for on the job accidents, absenteeism, turnover, and many other factors related to substance abuse in the workplace.

The Drug-Free Business Alliance represents a coalition of over 1,000 businesses, the majority of which are small businesses. For the past fifteen years we have been providing education and assistance to small businesses in the Houston community to help them reduce the risks and costs associated with on the job substance abuse. There are still thousands of small businesses in need of our services. The $6 million in remaining funding is critical if drug-free workplace coalitions are to continue to provide services to the thousands of small businesses in need of drug-free workplace services.

Sincerely,

BECKY VANCE,
Director, Drug-Free Business Alliance.

I am writing to seek your support for the continuation of funding for the 1998 Drug Free Workplace Act which provides for funds for demonstration grants.

Drug Free Pennsylvania has operated a drug-free workplace initiative since 1993 called the Drugs Don't Work Here program. We have helped hundreds of employees adopt a drug-free workplace program and provide them with the technical assistance and training. Our program is one of the most successful and strongest in the nation. Our success is due to the strength of our board members and the services which we offer to small employers including policy development, a drug testing consortium, an employee assistance consortium, training and technical assistance for supervisors, and education materials for employees.

Unfortunately, in the past, the problem of substance abusing employees was overlooked to fund other youth-targeted programs. The Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1998 raises the drug-free workplace component on the federal government radar screen and should not be compromised by a funding cut in this budget cycle. I would urge you to continue to funding of the Drug Free Workplace Act of 1998 at or above the funding level originally intended for this program. The resources to assist small business needs to come from non-profit organizations such as ours and should not be set aside after only one year of funding.

As I am sure you know, over 70 percent of drug abuses are employed and over 73 percent of heavy alcohol users are working. Clearly, the biggest burden it borne by employers who hire these individuals in term of lost productivity, increased accidents and workers' compensation costs, and higher absenteeism and tardiness. The problem of substance abuse is compounded by the low unemployment rate where small employers are faced with hiring employees who test positive or not filling a position. Accordingly, the demand for drug-free workplace programs is increasing in a time where programs such as ours are facing severe funding cuts. It is thus imperative that the funding not cease for this invaluable program.

If I can be of assistance to you, please contact me. Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

Beth Winters.

AAA LANDSCAPE,

Re: DFW Funding

As an office manager of a mid-sized landscape company in Tucson, Arizona, I have a request to make of you.

Please support funding the remaining $6 million of appropriated funds for the Small Business Administration in support of the very important drug-free workplace demonstration program.

The need and demand for drug-free workplace resources is growing, while the available resource are shrinking. With unemployment at an almost unheard of low, the need for able-bodied, able-minded workers is desperate. Drug usage, both within the current work force and among the unemployed, is an enormous problem. This demonstration program, even in its infancy, is beginning to make a real difference. We must give it a fair chance.

Please advise Senator Kerry that to kill the second-year funding of $6 million for the Drug-Free Workplace demonstration program would be a huge injustice to small business owners all over America.

Thank you for your time and attention.

Sincerely,

JEANE FEARSON,
Office Manager.

PIMA COUNTY, SHERIFF'S DEPARTMENT,
Tuscon, AZ, June 28, 1999.

With the extra trillion-dollar budget surplus announced today in Washington, it seems to me that $6 million to conclude a vital drug-free workplace demonstration project is a mere drop in the federal bucket.

I serve as chairman of Arizonans For A Drug-Free Workplace, and active member of a national drug-free workplace initiative that represents a coalition of more than 3,000 businesses, the majority of which are small businesses, We seek your help in obtaining funding for the remaining $6 million of appropriated monies for the Small Business Administration in support of the demonstration project.

As you are aware, the need, and demand for drug-free workplace resources have been increasing, while available resources have been skrinking—an obvious contradiction in view of today's fiscal revelation. Doesn't Congress understand that it is business—and small business, in particular—that contributes mightily to the strength of this country's economy.

We in the drug-free workplace initiative believe it is time for these small businesses to receive the help needed to stop the high costs brought about my substance abuse in the workplace. You have the opportunity to make a drug-free workplace a reality for many small businesses across our land.

Sincerely,

ASA BUSHNELL,
Community Relations Manager.

CONCRETE DESIGNS INC.,
Tucson, AZ, June 29, 1999.

As a small business manager, I want to express my concern regarding Senator Kerry's move to kill the Drug-Free Workplace funding. The drug issue in the work force is a growing problem in the United States and businesses have little support to help deal with this. Last week alone, I sent five applicants to take a pre-employment drug screen and only one went and tested negative for drugs. This ratio has been typical over the past year. In addition, we continue to lose employees through our random testing program.

You are in the position to help change this trend. Please support the funding of the appropriated funds.

Sincerely,

DEBY WIEST,
President, General Manager.

NATIONAL DRUG-FREE WORKPLACE ALLIANCE,
MILWAUKEE, WI, JUNE 29, 1999.

It has recently come to my attention that there may be a move afoot to abolish to second year funding for the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1999. This is of paramount concern as these dollars are aimed at developing drug-free workplace demonstration programs for small business nationwide.

Drug-free workplace programs began, historically, with the country's largest corporations and over the years, have inadvertently, squeezed substance abusers toward smaller business. The tragedy is that most small businesses do not have the resources to develop programs to protect their employees as well as the quality of their products and services, to say nothing of the end users.

It is well documented that drug-free workplace programs are extremely effective at reducing absenteeism, workplace injuries and theft, to name just a few. Furthermore, it is also well documented that these programs are terrific case finding entities in that they provide incentive as well as vehicles for employees to access Employee Assistance Programs or treatment options to assist in their recovery process. Of course the recovery, or lack of it, has a tremendous impact on families and coworkers as well as the above cited issues as well.

Our Alliance represents drug-free workplace initiatives in nearly thirty states and we see the benefits of these programs, with thousands of employers, on a daily basis. We believe that the wisdom of these programs was recognized when this legislation was initially passed and would ask for your assistance in protecting this valuable pilot that can have a far reaching impact not only at a business level but at a social level as well.

If I or the other Alliance members may be a resource to you, please do not hesitate to call.

Sincerely,

JEROME L. HOUFEK,
President.

MOUNTAIN POWER
Tucson, AZ, June 30, 1999.

Mountain Power Electrical Contractor, Inc. is a small business dedicated to providing a safe working environment for our employees, clientele, and the public. Part of our safety culture includes striving to maintain a drug free workplace.

The U.S. war against drugs is loosing ground. According to the reports issued by the Community Epidemiology Work Group (CEWG), the percentage of drug users is on the rise in various categories, including heroin, marijuana, cocaine, and methamphetamines.

It is imperative that our political leaders, businesses, and the public at large support education and prevention in order to win the war against drugs. Dealing with the aftermath of our nation's drug problem in America is proving senseless and useless.

Therefore, our firm is requesting your assistance for the drug-free workplace demonstration project. We are asking that you support funding the remaining $6 million of appropriated funds for the SBA in support of this very important drug-free workplace demonstration program. This program directly provides and assists small businesses with education, literature, and resources to maintain a drug free workplace and keep abreast of local ordinances, as well as legislative issues.

Thank you for your support and assistance in making the drug-free workplace a reality for small businesses in this country.

Sincerely,

DEBRA GRAHAM-GARCIA,
Business Development Specialist.

TUCSON AIRPORT AUTHORITY,
Tucson, AZ, June 29, 1999.

As a Board member of Arizonans For A Drug-Free Workplace, and the Director of Personnel for the Tucson Airport Authority I am requesting that you support the second year funding of $6 million for the Drug-Free Workplace demonstration program authorized under last year's Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1998.

The current funding level for year-one at $3 million for the demonstration will only fund thirty or less programs, hardly enough time or money to conduct a proper demonstration period. The $6 million second-year funding will provide a much better opportunity for all of the drug-programs to prove that a drug free workplace can truly make a difference.

Without the appropriated funding drug-free workplace programs will have to close their doors or modify their existence to survive. This is an alarming trend that is already occurring in our country. The need for drug-free workplace funds is increasing while the available resources are decreasing. Substance abuse in the workplace as well as in the home comes at a very high cost to our society.

Thank you in advance for your sensitive consideration to this issue.

Sincerely,

RACHEL INGEGNERI,
Director of Personnel.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I am proud that S. 1217, the Commerce, Justice, and State Appropriations Bill contains an amendment by Senator COVERDELL and me, securing $1.8 million for drug-free workplace programs. It has been a pleasure to have worked with Senator COVERDELL in obtaining funding for this critical program.

Our amendment is a victory for business and the fight against drugs.

Last year Senator COVERDELL and I authored the Drug-Free Workplace Act, which became law. It provided grants to organizations in order to assist small businesses in starting drug-free workplace programs. The Act was designed to encourage partnerships between small businesses and organizations that have experience in tackling the problem of drugs in the workplace. Many small business are reluctant to implement drug testing or employee-assistance programs, because they lack expertise in crafting such programs.

As we all know, sustaining a competent, able work force hinges on our ability to keep drugs out of the workplace. Funding was needed to continue this instrumental program. Securing $1.8 million for FY 2000 is a victory, considering the Administration chose to not fund this effort at all.

Statistics confirm that drug-free workplaces are more productive and efficient than those where some employees abuse drugs. For instance, 47 percent of workplace accidents are drug-related. Moreover, U.S. businesses lose $176 billion annually to substance abuse for costs due to accidents, absenteeism, and increased health care costs. Drug and alcohol abusers utilize 300 percent more medical benefits than non-abusers.

This amendment will enable small businesses to combat an evil that plagues their work forces, drug abuse.

AMENDMENT NO. 1319

(Purpose: Expressing the sense of the Senate regarding Iran)

On page 111, between lines 7 and 8, insert the following:

SEC. 620. (a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) Iran has been designated as a state sponsor of terrorism by the Secretary of State and continues to be among the most active supporters of terrorism in the world.

(2) According to the State Department's annual report entitled ''Patterns of Global Terrorism'', Iran supports Hizballah, Hamas, and the Palestinian Islamic Jihad, terrorist organizations which oppose the Middle East peace process, continue to work for the destruction of Israel, and have killed United States citizens.

(3) A United States district court ruled in March 1998 that Iran should pay $247,000,000 to the family of Alisa Flatow, a United States citizen killed in a bomb attack orchestrated by the Palestinian Islamic Jihad in Gaza in April 1995.

(4) The Government of Iran continues to maintain a repressive political regime in which the civil liberties of the people of Iran are denied.

(5) The State Department Country Report on Human Rights states that the human rights record of the Government of Iran remains poor, including ''extra judicial killings and summary executions; disappearances; widespread use of torture and other degrading treatment; harsh prison conditions; arbitrary arrest and detention; lack of due process; unfair trials; infringement on citizen's privacy; and restrictions on freedom of speech, press, assembly, association, religion, and movement''.

(6) Religious minorities in Iran have been persecuted solely because of their faith, and the Government of Iran has detained 13 members of Iran's Jewish community without charge.

(7) Recent student-led protests in Iran were repressed by force, with possibly five students losing their lives and hundreds more being imprisoned.

(8) The Government of Iran is pursuing an aggressive ballistic missile program with foreign assistance and is seeking to develop weapons of mass destruction which threaten United States allies and interests.

(9) Despite the continuation by the Government of Iran of repressive activities in Iran and efforts to threaten United States allies and interests in the Near East and South Asia, the President waived provisions of the Iran and Libya Sanctions Act of 1996 (Public Law 104–172; 50 U.S.C. 1701 note) intended to impede development of the energy sector in Iran.

(b) SENSE OF SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the President should condemn in the strongest possible terms the failure of the Government of Iran to implement genuine political reforms and protect the civil liberties of the people of Iran, which failure was most recently demonstrated in the violent repression of student-led protests in Teheran and other cities by the Government of Iran;

(2) the President should support democratic opposition groups in Iran more aggressively;

(3) the detention of 13 members of the Iranian Jewish community by the Government of Iran is a deplorable violation of due process and a clear example of the policies of the Government of Iran to persecute religious minorities; and

AMENDMENT NO. 1320

(Purpose: To provide additional funding for law enforcement programs regarding hate crimes)

SECTION 1. HATE CRIMES.

(a) DECLARATIONS.—Congress declares that—

(1) further efforts must be taken at all levels of government to respond to the staggering brutality of hate crimes that have riveted public attention and shocked the Nation;

(2) hate crimes are prompted by bias and are committed to send a message of hate to targeted communities, usually defined on the basis of immutable traits;

(3) the prominent characteristic of a hate crime is that it devastates not just the actual victim and the victim's family and friends, but frequently savages the community sharing the traits that caused the victim to be selected;

(4) any efforts undertaken by the Federal Government to combat hate crimes must respect the primacy that States and local officials have traditionally been accorded in the criminal prosecution of acts constituting hate crimes; and

(5) an overly broad reaction by the Federal Government to this serious problem might ultimately diminish the accountability of State and local officials in responding to hate crimes and transgress the constitutional limitations on the powers vested in Congress under the Constitution.

(b) STUDIES.—

(1) COLLECTION OF DATA.—

(A) DEFINITION OF HATE CRIME.—In this paragraph, the term ''hate crime'' means—

(i) a crime described in subsection (b)(1) of the first section of the Hate Crime Statistics Act (28 U.S.C. 534 note); and

(ii) a crime that manifests evidence of prejudice based on gender or age.

(B) COLLECTION FROM CROSS-SECTION OF STATES.—Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States, in consultation with the National Governors' Association, shall select 10 jurisdictions with laws classifying certain types of crimes as hate crimes and 10 jurisdictions without such laws from which to collect data described in subparagraph (C) over a 12-month period.

(C) DATA TO BE COLLECTED.—The data to be collected are—

(i) the number of hate crimes that are reported and investigated;

(ii) the percentage of hate crimes that are prosecuted and the percentage that result in conviction;

(iii) the length of the sentences imposed for crimes classified as hate crimes within a jurisdiction, compared with the length of sentences imposed for similar crimes committed in jurisdictions with no hate crime laws; and

(iv) references to and descriptions of the laws under which the offenders were punished.

(D) COSTS.—Participating jurisdictions shall be reimbursed for the reasonable and necessary costs of compiling data under this paragraph.

(2) STUDY OF TRENDS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States and the General Accounting Office shall complete a study that analyzes the data collected under paragraph (1) and under the Hate Crime Statistics Act of 1990 to determine the extent of hate crime activity throughout the country and the success of State and local officials in combating that activity.

(B) IDENTIFICATION OF TRENDS.—In the study conducted under subparagraph (A), the Comptroller General of the United States and the General Accounting Office shall identify any trends in the commission of hate crimes specifically by—

(i) geographic region;

(ii) type of crime committed; and

(iii) the number of hate crimes that are prosecuted and the number for which convictions are obtained.

(c) MODEL STATUTE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—To encourage the identification and prosecution of hate crimes throughout the country, the Attorney General shall, through the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws of the American Law Institute or another appropriate forum, and in consultation with the States, develop a model statute to carry out the goals described in subsection (a) and criminalize acts classified as hate crimes.

(2) REQUIREMENTS.—In developing the model statute, the Attorney General shall—

(A) include in the model statute crimes that manifest evidence of prejudice; and

(B) prepare an analysis of all reasons why any crime motivated by prejudice based on any traits of a victim should or should not be included.

(d) SUPPORT FOR CRIMINAL INVESTIGATIONS AND PROSECUTIONS BY STATE AND LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICIALS.—

(1) ASSISTANCE OTHER THAN FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—At the request of a law enforcement official of a State or a political subdivision of a State, the Attorney General, acting through the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, shall provide technical, forensic, prosecutorial, or any other form of assistance in the criminal investigation or prosecution of any crime that—

(i) constitutes a crime of violence (as defined in section 16 of title 18, United States Code);

(ii) constitutes a felony under the laws of the State; and

(iii) is motivated by prejudice based on the victim's race, ethnicity, or religion or is a violation of the State's hate crime law.

(B) PRIORITY.—In providing assistance under subparagraph (A), the Attorney General shall give priority to crimes committed by offenders who have committed crimes in more than 1 State.

(2) GRANTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—There is established a grant program within the Department of Justice to assist State and local officials in the investigation and prosecution of hate crimes.

(B) ELIGIBILITY.—A State or political subdivision of a State applying for assistance under this paragraph shall—

(i) describe the purposes for which the grant is needed; and

(ii) certify that the State or political subdivision lacks the resources necessary to investigate or prosecute the hate crime.

(C) DEADLINE.—An application for a grant under this paragraph shall be approved or disapproved by the Attorney General not later than 24 hours after the application is submitted.

(D) GRANT AMOUNT.—A grant under this paragraph shall not exceed $100,000 for any single case.

(E) REPORT.—Not later than December 31, 2001, the Attorney General, in consultation with the National Governors' Association, shall submit to Congress a report describing the applications made for grants under this paragraph, the award of such grants, and the effectiveness of the grant funds awarded.

(F) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this paragraph $5,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2000 and 2001.

(e) INTERSTATE TRAVEL TO COMMIT HATE CRIME.—

TITLE ___—HATE CRIMES PREVENTION

SEC. ___01. SHORT TITLE.

SEC. ___02. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(2) such violence disrupts the tranquility and safety of communities and is deeply divisive;

(3) existing Federal law is inadequate to address this problem;

(4) such violence affects interstate commerce in many ways, including—

(A) by impeding the movement of members of targeted groups and forcing such members to move across State lines to escape the incidence or risk of such violence; and

(B) by preventing members of targeted groups from purchasing goods and services, obtaining or sustaining employment or participating in other commercial activity;

(5) perpetrators cross State lines to commit such violence;

(6) instrumentalities of interstate commerce are used to facilitate the commission of such violence;

(7) such violence is committed using articles that have traveled in interstate commerce;

(8) violence motivated by bias that is a relic of slavery can constitute badges and incidents of slavery;

(9) although many State and local authorities are now and will continue to be responsible for prosecuting the overwhelming majority of violent crimes in the United States, including violent crimes motivated by bias, Federal jurisdiction over certain violent crimes motivated by bias is necessary to supplement State and local jurisdiction and ensure that justice is achieved in each case;

(10) Federal jurisdiction over certain violent crimes motivated by bias enables Federal, State, and local authorities to work together as partners in the investigation and prosecution of such crimes;

(11) the problem of hate crime is sufficiently serious, widespread, and interstate in nature as to warrant Federal assistance to States and local jurisdictions; and

(12) freedom of speech and association are fundamental values protected by the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and it is the purpose of this title to criminalize acts of violence, and threats of violence, carried out because of the actual or perceived race, color, religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, or disability of the victim, not to criminalize beliefs in the abstract.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I am committed in my view that the Senate must lead and speak against hate crimes.

Many of America's greatest strides in civil rights progress took place during recent generations—from Congress' protection of Americans from employment discrimination on the basis of race, sex, color, religion and national origin with the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, to the protection of the disabled with the passage of the Americans with Disabilities Act in 1990, and many other important pieces of legislation.

However, while America's elected officials have striven mightily through the passage of such measures to stop discrimination in the workplace, or to the hands of government actors, what remains tragically unaddressed in large part is discrimination against peoples' own security—that most fundamental right to be free from physical harm.

Despite our best efforts, discrimination continues to persist in many forms in this country, but most sadly in the rudimentary and malicious form of violence against individuals because of their identities.

As much as we condemn all crime, hate crime can be more sinister than non-hate crime. A crime committed not just to harm an individual, but out of the motive of sending a message of hatred to an entire community—oftentimes a community defined on the basis of immutable traits—is appropriately punished more harshly, or in a different manner, than other crimes. Moreover, hate crimes are more likely to provoke retaliatory crimes; they inflict deep, lasting and distinct injuries—some of which never heal—on victims and their family members; they incite community unrest; and, ultimately, they are downright un-American.

I am resolute in my view that the federal government can play a valuable role in responding to hate crime. One example here is my sponsorship of the Hate Crime Statistics Act of 1990, another is the passage in 1996 of the Church Arson Protection Act.

Given the seriousness of our objective to eradicate hate crime, it is imperative that any measure abide by the constitutional limitations imposed on Congress, and be cognizant of the limitations on Congress' enumerated powers that are routinely enforced by the courts. This is more true today than it would have been even a mere decade ago, given the significant revival by the U.S. Supreme Court of the federalism doctrine in a string of decisions beginning in 1992.

I have therefore proposed a response to hate crimes that is not only as effective as possible, but that carefully navigates the rocky shoals of these court decisions. To that end, I have prepared a measure that I believe will be not only an effective one, but one that would avoid altogether the constitutional risks that attach to other possible federal responses that have been raised.

There are four principal components to my approach:

First, it creates a meaningful partnership between the federal government and the states in combating hate crime, by establishing within the Justice Department a fund to assist state and local authorities in investigating and prosecuting hate crime. Much of the cited justification given by those who advocate broad federal jurisdiction over hate crimes is a lack of adequate resources at the state and local level.

Accordingly, before we take the step of making every criminal offense motivated by a hatred of someone's immutable traits a federal offense, it is imperative that we equip states and localities with the resources necessary so that they can undertake these criminal investigations and prosecutions on their own.

Second, my approach undertakes a comprehensive analysis of the raw data that has been collected pursuant to the 1990 Hate Crime Statistics Act, including a comparison of the records of different jurisdictions—some with hate crime laws, others without—to determine whether there is, in fact, a problem in certain states' prosecution of those criminal acts constituting hate crimes.

Third, my approach directs an appropriate, neutral forum to develop a model hate crimes statute that would enable states to evaluate their own laws, and adopt—in whole or in part from the model statute—hate crime legislation at the state level.

One of the arguments cited for a federalization of enforcement is the varying scope and punitive force of state laws. Yet there are many areas of grave national concern—such as drank driving, by way of example—that are appropriately left to the states for criminal enforcement and punishment.

Before we make all hate crimes federal offenses, I believe we should pursue avenues that advance consistency among the states through the voluntary efforts of their legislatures. Perhaps, upon completion of this model hate crime law, Congress will review its recommendation and consider additional ways to promote uniformity among the states.

Fourth, my proposal makes a long-overdue modification of our existing federal hate crime law (passed in 1969) to allow for the prosecution by federal authorities of those hate crimes that are classically within federal jurisdiction—that is, hate crimes in which state lines have been crossed.

I believe that passage of this comprehensive measure will prove a strong antidote to the scourge of hate crimes.

It is no answer for the Senate to sit by silently while these crimes are being committed. The ugly, bigoted, and violent underside of some in our country that is reflected by the commission of hate crimes must be combated at all levels of government.

For some, federal leadership necessitates federal control. I do not subscribe to this view, especially when it comes to this problem. It has been proposed by some that to combat hate crime Congress should enact a new tier of far-reaching federal criminal legislation. That approach strays from the foundations of our constitutional structure—namely, the first principles of federalism that for more than two centuries have vested states with primary responsibility for prosecuting crimes committed within their boundaries.

As important as this issue is, there is little evidence such a step is warranted, or that it will do any more than what I have proposed. In fact, one could argue that national enforcement of hate crime could decrease if states are told the federal government has assumed primary responsibility over hate crime enforcement.

Accordingly, we must lead—but lead responsibly—recognizing that we live in a country of governments of shared and divided responsibilities.

I encourage this body to question the dogma that federal leadership must include federal control, and I encourage this body to act anew by supporting a proposal that is far-reaching in its efforts to stem hate crime, and that is at the same time respectful of the primacy states have traditionally enjoyed in prosecuting crimes committed within their boundaries.

My proposal should unite all of us on the one point about which we should most fervently agree—that the Senate must speak firmly and meaningfully in denouncing as wrong in all respects those actions we have increasingly come to know as hate crimes. Our continued progress in fighting to protect Americans' civil rights demands no less.

I take note that there are now two different hate crime measures that have been accepted by the Senate. It is my hope that the conference will consider the Hatch amendment's approach to be the wiser and the more responsible, and accordingly adopt it. Alternatively, however, it is my hope that some accord might be reached between the two versions that respects the constitutional and federalism boundaries I have discussed, and to the extent it is not, I may choose to pursue adoption of my measure through the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, as a member of the Foreign Relations Committee I have spoken out against hate crimes of many kinds and in many lands. For that reason I cannot be silent at home. I believe that government's first duty is to defend its citizens. To defend them against the harms that come out of hate. To defend them regardless of their status, be they female, disabled or gay. The Hate Crimes Prevention Act is now a symbol that can become substance. By changing this law we can change hearts and minds as well.

The law is a teacher and we should teach our fellow citizens that all crime is hateful. But we can also teach that some crime is so odious that an extra measure of prosecution is demanded by us, so that it will never again be repeated among us.

Never again should we in the federal government withhold our help or stand idly by when a Matthew Shepard is tied to a fence, beaten and left to die because he is gay. Never again should we defer to others when one James Byrd, Jr. is dragged to his death because he is black. No, in these cases and in too many more, the Federal Government must have the power to persuade, to pursue and to prosecute when hate is the motive of violence against American victims, no matter their state, no matter their minority or vulnerability.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the amendment to protect Americans from hate crimes. It is unfortunate that the amendment's chief sponsor, Senator TED KENNEDY, couldn't be here to take part in this debate. Senator KENNEDY has worked tirelessly to enact this crucial piece of legislation. He has my heartfelt appreciation for his work on this and my sympathy for the loss of his nephew. I can't possibly match his passion and eloquence on this issue, but I am here today to discuss and support his amendment on hate crimes prevention.

Hate crime is real. Despite great gains in equality and civil rights over the later part of this century, hate crimes are still being committed. Those who commit these heinous crimes must be punished.

We all remember Matthew Shepard. He was a young man who just last fall was viciously struck down in the prime of his life. Tragically, he is now a reminder of what happens when he do not stand up to hate and bigotry. We must treat hate crimes as the deadly threat they are and do more to prevent them. These are not simply assaults. They are violent crimes motivated by hate and bigotry.

Passing this amendment gives us more tools to fight hate. I am pleased to join with many of my colleagues as a co-sponsor of this important legislation. The amendment would expand the definition of a hate crime and improve prosecution of those who act out their hate with violence. If someone harms another because of the victim's race, gender, color, religion, disability or sexual orientation, they will be punished. No longer will the activity of the victim matter, but the actions and motivations of the perpetrator will be the focus. It is important to note that the prosecutor would still have to convince a jury beyond a reasonable doubt that the criminal act was motivated by prejudice.

No one can beat a person to death and leave them to die without being motivated by a deep sense of hate. In the case of Matthew Shepard, it was no simply robbery. The motive was hate.

I know some of my colleagues argue that the states are doing an adequate job of handling hate crimes on their own. I commend them for their efforts, but I believe the federal government has a further role in this as well. We already prosecute at the federal level many crimes that are motivated by prejudice. We need to strengthen these federal hate crimes laws and increase the role of the federal government in ending this violence. It wasn't that many years ago that we stood up for equality and justice by forcing the states and private citizens to end segregation and discrimination. Now we must do the same for hate crimes against any of our citizens.

I ask that my statement appear in the RECORD immediately following the text of the hate crimes amendment.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I join with my colleagues in expressing my strong support for the Hate Crimes Prevention Amendment, legislation of which I am a cosponsor.

The Hate Crimes Prevention Amendment is urgently needed to compensate for two limitations in the current law. First, the current federal hate crimes law covers only crimes motivated by bias on the basis of race, color, religion or national origin. As a result, federal authorities cannot prosecute individuals who commit violent crimes against others because of their sexual orientation, gender, or disability.

In addition, current law limits federal hate crime prosecutions to instances in which the victims was targeted because he or she was exercising one of six narrowly defined federally-protected activities (such as serving on a jury, attending a public school, eating at a restaurant or lodging at a hotel). As a result, the law does not reach many cases where individuals kill or injure others because of racial or religious hatred.

The Hate Crimes Amendment would remedy the glaring gaps and inadequacy of the current law by broadening the federal jurisdiction to cover all violent crimes motivated by racial or religious hatred, regardless of whether the victim was exercising a federally protected right. It would also include sexual orientation, gender and disability to the list of protected categories within current federal hate crime law, provided there is a sufficient connection with interstate commerce.

At the same time, federal involvement would only come into play if the Attorney General certifies that a federal prosecution is necessary to secure substantial justice. In recent years, the existing federal hate crimes law has been used only in carefully selected cases where the state criminal justice system did not achieve a just result.

What does this mean? It means that crimes based on race, color, religion or national origin would be covered under the federal hate crimes law whenever the defendant causes bodily injury, or through the use of fire, a firearm, or an explosive, attempts to case injury.

Crimes based on sexual orientation, gender or disability would be limited to the same types of violent crimes, but only if the crime has a sufficient connection with interstate commerce.

In all cases, the prosecution would have to show that the crime was motivated in part by the actual or perceived sexual orientation, gender, or disability of the victim—and this would be a matter for the jury to determine.

As would be the case for every element of a criminal offense, federal prosecutors would have to prove motivation beyond a reasonable doubt. In all cases, these prosecutions would present evidence that a motivating factor in the crime was bias against a particular group.

Hate crimes in these cases would carry a heavy penalty. Persons who cause bodily injury to another, or, through the use of fire, firearms, or explosives, attempts to cause bodily injury in the furtherance of a hate crime would face imprisonment up to 10 years. If the hate crime results in death or the offense included kidnapping, aggravated sexual abuse or an attempt to kill, the convicted offender could face life imprisonment.

Mr. President, for many years I have been deeply concerned about hate crimes and the immeasurable impact they have on victims, their families and our communities. In 1993, I sponsored the Hate Crimes Sentencing Enhancement Act, which was signed into law in 1994 as a part of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994. The Act increased the penalties for hate crimes directed at individuals because of their perceived race, color, religion, national origin, gender, disability or sexual orientation.

Today, I believe the Hate Crimes Prevention Amendment, builds on this effort by modifying the current law to allow the federal government to provide the vital assistance to states in investigating of crimes of this magnitude.

This legislation is long overdue, Mr. President. The brutal murders last year of an African American, James Byrd, in Texas; a gay man, Matthew Shepard, in Wyoming; and the murderous rampage in Littleton, Colorado earlier this year vividly portray why this legislation is so urgently needed.

Just recently, our nation awakened to the news of drive-by shooting attacks on Jews, and African-American, and Asian-Americans in Chicago, Illinois. These shootings were the despicable acts of virulent hatred. Undoubtedly these crimes have affected so many lives beyond its immediate victims.

Two weeks before the shootings, three synagogues were torched in Sacramento, California, sending shock waves throughout the Jewish community in America.

Sadly, hate crimes are becoming too commonplace in America. According to the U.S. Department of Justice, in 1997, the last year for which we have statistics, 8,049 hate crime incidents were reported in the United States. That is almost one such crime per hour. Within these incidents, there were 10,255 victims of these crimes.

Of that total, 4,710 or 58.5% of the crime were committed on account of the victim's race. Of these reported crimes, there were almost 1,300 victims of anti-black crimes; 649 victims of anti-Hispanic crimes; and 466 victims of anti-Asian crimes.

In that same year, 1,385 or roughly 17% of the victims were targeted because of their religious affiliation. The number of anti-Jewish incidents is second only to those against blacks and far exceeds offenses against all other religious groups combined. Moreover, while by most accounts anti-Semitism in America has declined dramatically over the years, the level of violence is escalating.

The FBI reports that crimes against gays, lesbians and bisexuals ranked third in reported hate crimes in 1997, registering 1,102 or 13.7% of reported incidents. And, gender-motivated violence occurs in our country at alarming rates. According to the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, ''society is beginning to realize that many assaults against women are not 'random' acts of violence but are actually bias-related crimes.''

In addition, according to the California Attorney General, more than 1,800 of the 8,000 hate crimes reported by the FBI were committed in California. That's a shocking number when one considers the motivation behind a hate crime. These are truly among the ugliest of crimes, in which the perpetrator thinks the victim is less of a human being because of his or her gender, skin color, religion, sexual orientation or disability.

By enacting this legislation, federal prosecutors will be able to work in full partnership with their state counterparts. In Wyoming, despite clear evidence that the killing of Matthew Shepard was motivated by bigotry against homosexuals, federal authorities lacked jurisdiction to assist state and local authorities in investigating the case.

It is imperative, therefore, that Congress move swiftly to address this situation and enact this legislation. Although the Byrd and Shepard, as well as the Littleton and Chicago atrocities, all have shocked the conscience of our nation, many hate crimes happen daily in our communities and do not receive national exposure and universal condemnation.

For example, an 18-year-old San Francisco youth was savagely attacked and beaten after a recent athletic event between St. Ignatius College Preparatory School and Sacred Heart Cathedral Preparatory School. During the beating, his attackers yelled racial slurs at him. Just a few days later, a 17-year-old senior at San Marin High School was beaten outside his school in Novato, a derogatory word regarding his presumed sexual orientation was etched into his arm with a pen.

And, in an especially disturbing case in Ventura, California, four skinheads attacked a Latino couple and an African-American couple returning from a high school homecoming date. Singing, and then shouting racial epithets, the skinheads followed the two couples and threw a brick at the head of the African-American teenager. When the students tried to drive away, the skinheads kicked the car and beat it with a baseball bat, causing $2,000 in damage.

These recent cases show far more vividly than I can express here today why we need this legislation now more than ever.

This amendment does not create any ''special interests.'' Hate crimes are not just the concern of any one race, one gender, or one segment of society. The victims of these types of attacks are black and white, young and old, gay and straight, mother and son, father and daughter. Most importantly, they are all human beings whom other human beings loved and depended on. No one, no matter where he lives or to what group she belongs can be certain who will suffer from senseless acts of violence sparked by bigotry, hatred and prejudice.

History is replete with instances in which mindless fear, ignorance and prejudice propel unspeakable acts of inhumanity. There is a great monument to this in this very city: the Holocaust Museum. The Holocaust Museum serves as a stark and cogent reminder of how unchecked hatred can spiral into the genocide of countless millions of Jews and others who were singled out by Nazi Germany for no other reason than that they were different.

Unfortunately, Mr. President, as recent events suggest, we do not have to look back sixty years to find example of inhumanity fostered by hate. We can look across the oceans to Kosovo, where the consequences of ''ethnic cleansing,'' mass rapes, and rampant crime, all point to the utter disregard for life and human dignity.

Mr. President, American values do not include attacking those who are ''different'' or those with whom we disagree. No one here can reasonably argue that violently attacking a person because of his or her race, gender, disability, or sexual orientation is an acceptable form of behavior.

No one here can reasonably argue that protecting American values should not include protecting women, disabled persons, or gays and lesbians from hate crimes.

And no one here today need fear a breakdown of society simply because we extend Federal protection from acts of violent prejudice to those members of our society who currently face such an extraordinary threat of hate violence.

Instead, as Americans, we value the freedom to be individuals. We value the freedom to express ourselves peacefully. And, above all, Mr. President, we value freedom from fear and tyranny.

And, what we must take from the experience of World War II and Kosovo is that our nation must never sit still and permit acts of hatred to go unpunished and undeterred.

That is why, if we truly want to defend American values, we should work to give our citizens protection from those who would do them harm simply based upon their race, gender, disability or sexual orientation.

And, the Hate Crimes Prevention Amendment aims to send a message to our nation and the world that the singling out of an individual because of race, religion, sexual orientation, gender or disability will not go unnoticed or unpunished.

The Hate Crimes Prevention Amendment will make certain that those who commit violent acts because someone is of the ''wrong gender, religion, race, sexual orientation, or disability'' will be prosecuted because everyone, I repeat, everyone has a right to be free from violence and fear when they are going to school, work, travel, or doing something as simple as going to a movie.

Mr. President, I urge adoption of the Hate Crimes Prevention Amendment, which includes this important measure. I also urge the conferees on the Commerce, Justice, States appropriations bill to maintain this position during the conference. All Americans, and our future generations, deserve no less.

Mr. SCHUMER. When we passed the first Hate Crimes Law there were those who said that it was unnecessary and that hate crimes were overblown.

Then came the news of James Byrd in Texas, Matthew Shepard in Wyoming, William Gaither in Alabama, Gary Matson and Scott Mowder in California—young men who were victims of crimes that desecrate America.

Today's debate goes back to our original fight. Does this Congress believe that there are those in America who are motivated by hate? Does this Congress believe that there is more that can be done to condemn, prosecute and prevent violent hate? Or do we believe—even after James Byrd, even after Matthew Shepard, even after William Gaither, even after Gary Matson and Scott Mowder—that Hate Crimes are overblown?

Since we started keeping statistics in 1991 the FBI has documented over 50,000 hate crimes. But they could prosecute only 37 because the current law is too narrow.

The Kennedy bill completes the law. It gives it teeth. The Kennedy bill adds sexual orientation to hate crimes, an omission that has sent a message to those who feed off hate, that bigotry against gays and lesbians is somehow less wrong than bigotry against blacks, latinos and Jews.

It removes the civil rights test which gives prosecutors the chance to put violent bigots behind bars.

As a nation, we have divergent political views but we are bound by our commitment to punish acts of bigotry against African Americans, Latinos, Jews, and yes—lesbians and gays.

This is a bill that will bring this nation together. This is a bill that will make people proud.

The only people who need fear the Kennedy bill are those whose private hatreds manifests itself in violent rage against the innocent.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, over the Fourth of July weekend, the nation was stunned by the actions of a single young man on a racially motivated killing spree. The man's name was Benjamin Smith, and it seems clear, he spent his short life consumed by hatred. Because of this hatred, the nation mourns the death of a former University of Detroit and Western Michigan University basketball coach Ricky Byrdsong and doctoral student Won-Joon Yoon, both the victims of hate crime.

Benjamin Smith was just one of many who unleashed his hate onto others through violence. According to FBI statistics, at least one hate crime occurs every hour in the United States. That means at least one violent crime each hour is motivated by bias. Hate crimes have no place in a society founded on tolerance and equality. There must be a clear message to hatemongers like Benjamin Smith, that the federal government will do everything in its power so that the perpetrators of bias crimes will be investigated, prosecuted and punished as quickly as possible. But the federal government is limited to a certain extent in its ability to assist state and local prosecutors in their investigations of hate crime.

That's why I am pleased to be an original cosponsor of the Hate Crimes Protection Act, a bill which would amend the existing federal hate crimes law and expand the federal government's role in the investigation and prosecution of bias-inspired conduct. The federal government has always had a special role in stifling violence and discriminatory treatment. This Act continues in that tradition by strengthening federal authority to ensure that racially-motivated criminals are prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

This amendment would also expand the definition of hate crime, which now only pertains to the victim's race, color, religion and natural origin, to include discrimination based on sexual orientation, gender, and disability. By expanding the definition of hate crime, the nation sends a clear message that it will not tolerate any violent crime, especially targeted at those who have traditionally been more vulnerable to violence.

The Hate Crimes Prevention Act has the support of over 100 civil rights and law enforcement organizations, as well as a broad range of state and local government associations, and state Attorneys General. These groups, who work with the victims of hate crimes on a daily basis, understand that violent hate crimes, not only affect the victim's family, but are injurious to the entire community. Because hate crimes have a such a deep impact on society, these civil rights and law enforcement organizations support the Hate Crimes Prevention Act, and the role it gives the federal government in ensuring that perpetrators of bias crime are subject to enhanced prosecutions and penalties.

I am pleased to join a distinguished list of cosponsors on this amendment and I urge my colleagues to support the passage of this Act and take a stand against hate crime.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the Hate Crimes Prevention Act as an amendment to the Commerce, Justice, State and Judiciary Fiscal Year 2000 bill.

This legislation will provide the Federal Government a needed tool to combat the destructive impact of hate crimes on our society. The amendment also recognizes that hate crimes are not just limited to crimes committed because of race, color, religion, or national origin, but are also directed at individuals because of their gender, sexual orientation or disability.

Mr. President, any crime hurts our society, but crimes motivated by hate are especially harmful. This amendment would take two important steps to strengthen existing Federal hate crimes law.

First, the amendment would expand the situations when the Department of Justice can prosecute defendants for violent crimes based on race, color, religion or national origin. Second, the amendment would authorize the Department of Justice to prosecute individuals who commit violent crimes against others because of a victim's disability, gender, or sexual orientation provided there is a sufficient connection with interstate commerce.

Many states, including my state of Vermont, have already passed strong hate crimes laws, and I applaud them in this endeavor. An important principle of this amendment is that it allows for Federal prosecution of hate crimes without impeding the rights of states to prosecute these crimes.

Federal prosecutions under this amendment would still be subject to the current provision of law that requires the Attorney General or another senior official of the Justice Department to certify that a federal prosecution is necessary to secure substantial justice. Mr. President, such a requirement under current law has ensured that states are the primary adjudicators of the perpetrators of hate crimes, not the Federal government.

This has meant that in recent years the existing Federal hate crimes law has been used only in carefully selected cases. For example, there have been an average of only 5.2 prosecutions per year under current law from Fiscal Year 1990 through Fiscal Year 1996.

Additionally, Federal authorities will consult with State and Local law enforcement officials before initiating an investigation or prosecution. Both of these are important provisions to ensure that we are not infringing on the rights of States to prosecute crimes.

Mr. President, the Senate has an opportunity today to take a strong stand against hate crimes, and I urge them to do so by supporting this important legislation.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, the amendment seeks to deter violent crime borne out of prejudice and hatred. Since 1991, almost 50,000 hate crimes have been voluntarily reported to the FBI. More than 8,000 were reported in 1997 alone, and many more probably occurred.

I am of the view that violent hate crimes stain our national greatness. This amendment cannot erase the stain entirely, but it is a step toward removing the immunity from prosecution that perpetrators have enjoyed for too long.

The amendment will close the loopholes in current federal hate crimes law and remove the straightjacket from local law enforcement so they can get federal help when they need it.

The amendment does three things:

First, it would remove restrictions on the types of situations in which the Justice Department can prosecute defendants for violent crimes based on race, color, religion or national origin.

Second, it would assure that crimes targeted against victims because of disability, gender or sexual orientation that cause death or bodily injury can be prosecuted if there is a sufficient connection to interstate commerce.

Third, it would require the Attorney General to certify in writing that she had consulted with State and local law enforcement and that they had asked for federal help, or did not have jurisdiction or, as in current law, that federal prosecution is necessary to secure substantial justice in eradicating hate-based crimes.

Under current law, the Justice Department can prosecute crimes motivated by race, religion and ethnicity only if two tests are satisfied. First, DoJ must prove bias was the motive. Second, DoJ must prove the perpetrator intended to prevent the individual from doing certain federally protected things, such as serving on a jury, enrolling or attending a public school, or applying for or enjoying employment.

Motive for the crime is a matter for the jury to determine. And, as is the case for every element of a criminal offense, DoJ would have to prove motive beyond a reasonable doubt. Motive plays the same rule under federal and state anti-discrimination laws as it does under the current federal hate crimes law. My amendment does not affect this.

It is the second test which has prevented the law from reaching many cases where individuals kill or injure others because of racial or religious hatred. In 1994, a jury acquitted 3 white supremacists who had assaulted 3 African-Americans. Jurors revealed after the trial that they felt racial animus had been established but not that the defendants intended to prevent the victims from participating in a federally protected activity. My amendment addresses this limitation.

Under my amendment, DoJ would still have to satisfy the first test and prove beyond a reasonable doubt that bias was involved. But in cases of crimes motivated by race, religion and ethnicity, DoJ would no longer be limited to those situations where the victim was engaged in or enjoying a federally protected activity.

In 1996, 88 current members of the Senate voted to support a similar provision in the Church Arson Prevention Act.

Under my amendment, federal involvement in prosecuting crimes based on sexual orientation, disability or gender AND where bodily injury or death result would be limited to those instances where the violent crime has a sufficient connection with interstate commerce.

This provision is critical for the 28 states that have no authority to prosecute bias-motivated crimes based on disability or sexual orientation, and for the 29 states that have no authority to prosecute bias-motivated crimes based on gender, like the Son of Sam serial killings in New York.

The amendment would provide two levels of penalties in all cases of hate crimes:

1. Imprisonment up to 10 years for persons who cause bodily injury, or through the use of fire, firearms or explosives, attempts to cause bodily injury; and

2. Imprisonment up to life if death results or if the offense includes kidnaping, aggravated sexual abuse or an attempt to commit aggravated sexual abuse, or an attempt to kill.

Some believe that every crime is a hate crime. Every crime is tragic, but not all crime is based on hate. A hate crime occurs when the perpetrator intentionally chooses the victim because of who the victim is. A hate crime affects not only the victim but an entire community or group of people.

Some believe this amendment would provide special protection to certain groups. But it is perpetrators who intentionally single out victims because of who they are in an attempt to send a chilling message to society or others in that group of people.

Some argue that hate crimes laws threaten free speech. Hate crimes laws punish violent acts, not beliefs or thoughts, no matter how violent those thoughts or beliefs might be. Nothing in this amendment would prohibit or deny the lawful expression of one's deeply held religious beliefs. However, causing or attempting to cause bodily injury is clearly not protected speech.

Some have expressed concern that this amendment would federalize crimes that are better left to the states to address. Today, there is overlapping jurisdiction in the case of many homicides, bank robberies, kidnaping and fraud. Like these areas, when both federal and state hate crimes statutes apply, there will be no need for federal prosecution in the vast majority of cases.

The amendment will not invite a tsunami of new cases. In no one year since the first hate crime law was enacted in 1968 has there been more than 10 indictments. In fact, from 1992 to 1997, federal officials prosecuted only 33 cases, or an average of fewer than 6 hate crimes cases a year. Mr. Eric Holder testified that this amendment will only lead to ''a modest increase in the number of cases.'' The significance of this amendment is to backstop state and local law enforcement by giving them extra tools to fight hate crime, not to open the floodgates to frivolous cases.

Even in states with broad hate crimes laws, the higher penalties available under federal statute, the complexity of the investigation, the procedural advantages of a federal prosecution, or the failure of a state prosecution may make federal prosecution desirable.

All but 8 states have hate crimes statutes, but only 21 cover sexual orientation, 22 cover gender and 21 cover disability. Despite the clear evidence that last year's brutal murder of Matthew Shepard was motivated by hatred of gays, federal authorities were unable to assist state and local authorities in investigating the case because Wyoming had no hate crime law and federal agencies lacked the authority.

Evidence indicates that hate crimes are under reported, but FBI statistics show that since 1991 hate crimes have nearly doubled, with more than 8,000 reported in 1997. Race-related hate crimes were by far the most common, accounting for 60%. Hate crime based on religion accounted for 17%, and hate crimes against gays and lesbians, which jumped by 8% last year, accounted for 14% of all hate crimes reported.

The federal government has a long history in combating hate crimes:

In addition to the landmark civil rights laws of the 1960s,

In 1990, Congress passed the Hate Crime Statistics Act to keep track of hate crimes;

In 1994, Congress enacted the Hate Crimes Sentencing Enhancement Act to allow for increased sentences for offenses found beyond a reasonable doubt to be hate crimes; in 1994 Congress passed the Violence Against Women Act; and in 1996 Congress enacted the Church Arson Prevention Act.

Under the able leadership of Senator HATCH, the Judiciary Committee has held several hearings on the problem of hate crimes. In my view the record overwhelmingly established the need for this legislation.

As if we need any further evidence, we need only look to the Fourth of July weekend headlines describing brutal acts of violence aimed at Orthodox Jews, Asian-Americans, African-Americans and a gay couple in California.

We must correct the deficiencies in current law. Today, a crime motivated by race, religion or ethnic origin can be prosecuted by federal authorities because it occurred on a public sidewalk but not if it took place in the private parking lot across the street. This is wrong. I believe Congress must focus the full force of the federal government on investigating and prosecuting hate crimes.

The vote on this amendment will be a referendum on whether members will continue to tolerate violent acts borne of prejudice.

In closing, I would say to my colleagues that this is not a problem that needs further study. The evidence is in, and it is clear. We need to send a strong and unequivocal message that hate crimes will no longer be tolerated; that the full force of federal law enforcement will be brought to bear in prosecuting these violent acts.

I hope my colleagues will ask themselves the following question. If they have a child or know of a child who has a disability, a child who is gay, or who is a girl, and that child suffers bodily injury or worse, death, simply because of who he or she is, do you want that child to be just another statistic that is studied, or do you want the perpetrator to be prosecuted to the fullest extent allowed by the Hate Crimes Prevention Act?

AMENDMENT NO. 1325

(Purpose: To provide for a study on older individuals and crime)

At the end of title I, add the following:

SEC. . (a) In this section:

(1) The term ''hate crime'' has the meaning given the term in section 280003(a) of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 (28 U.S.C. 994 note).

(2) The term ''older individual'' means an individual who is age 65 or older.

(b) The Attorney General shall conduct a study concerning—

(1) whether an order individual is more likely than the average individual to be the target of a crime;

(2) the extent of crimes committed against older individuals; and

(3) the extent to which crimes committed against older individuals are hate crimes.

(c) Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report containing the results of the study.

Mr. GRAHAM. My amendment would require the Attorney General to conduct a study on crimes against older individuals no later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this legislation.

The population aged 65 years or older numbered 34.1 million in 1997 and will continue to grow as the baby boomer generation ages. These individuals are particularly vulnerable to crime.

Because they have made the determination that our large elderly population is susceptible to monetary scams and physical acts of intimidation, criminals defraud the elderly in areas ranging from telemarketing to health care fraud to securities and insurance.

Federal prosecutors and law enforcement officials throughout Florida are spending more and more of their time in efforts against the cheats, fly-by-night operators, and other criminals who are targeting the elderly for financial profit.

The losses suffered as a result of these crimes not only affect the elderly and their families but also squander resources for programs that provide services to millions of needy elderly Americans.

Mr. President, we can and must do better.

My amendment will require the Justice Department study to examine two vital issues: (1) whether an individual over 65 is more likely than the average individual to be the target of a crime; and (2) the extent of crimes committed against individuals over 65.

This amendment gives the Senate the opportunity to express its determination to protect this important segment of American society from criminals.

In his national bestseller, ''The Greatest Generation,'' NBC news anchor Tom Brokaw discusses the heroics of the World War II generation and how they saved the world from tyranny. It would be a shame if the generation that protected us in its youth was allowed to become victims of scam artists and violent criminals in its later years.

Mr. President, this study will be a first step toward freeing older Americans from the threat of crime. I urge all of my colleagues to support this important measure.

At page 59, line 14 after the colon insert the following ?

''Provided further, That of the amounts provided, $6,000,000 shall be made available to Pacific Coastal tribes (as defined by the Secretary of Commerce) through the Department of Commerce, which shall allocate the funds to tribes in California and Oregon, and to tribes in Washington after consultation with the Washington State Salmon Recovery Funding Board; provided further that the Secretary ensure the aforementioned $6 million be used for restoration of Pacific Salmon populations listed under the Endangered Species Act; provided further that funds to tribes in Washington shall be used only for grants for planning (not to exceed 10% of grant), physical design, and completion of restoration projects; and provided further, that each tribe receiving a grant in Washington State derived from the aforementioned $6 million provide a report on the specific use and effectiveness of such recovery project grant in restoring listed Pacific Salmon populations, which report shall be made public and shall be provided to the Committees on appropriatioins in the U.S. House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate through the Salmon Recovery Funding Board by December 1, 2000.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, my amendment will provide the Pacific coastal tribes of Washington, Oregon, and California with salmon recovery funding.

I would like to start by expressing my deep appreciation to Subcommittee Chairman GREGG and subcommittee ranking member, Senator HOLLLINGS, for including in the Commerce, Justice, State appropriations bill, $80 million for the Pacific coastal salmon recovery account. Given the fiscal constraints I am pleased the money was made available.

The Pacific coastal salmon initiative was proposed by the Administration to help address the rash of endangered species listings of salmon along the coast. The Administration's initiative called for the funding of $100 million with up to 10% of that money going to the Pacific coastal tribes. Another portion of the initiative called for increased personnel for the National Marine Fisheries Service in order to handle a higher workload brought about by new ESA listings around the nation. The NMFS received some funding in the bill to undertake this initial work.

The only party to this initiative that did not receive funding was the tribes. I do not know why this decision was made, but I believe it sends the wrong message and we must remedy the situation. My amendment directs funds to Pacific coastal tribes to participate in the salmon recovery process. We need them to make this process work.

I would like to recognize that my amendment to ensure tribal participation is cosponsored by Senators INOUYE, BOXER, FEINSTEIN, and WYDEN. I would also like to recognize the support of Governor Gary Locke of Washington and Governor John Kitzhaber of Oregon. Lastly, I appreciate the support of King County Executive Ron Sims, Pierce County Executive Doug Sutherland, and Snohomish County Executive Bob Drewel.

The reason all these people are supporting this amendment is that they know the tribes are a vital partner in the coordinated effort to recover salmon. Successful recovery is going to require all parties working as a team. Leaving the tribes out of the equation is not a way to build the team.

Some may suggest that my amendment is unnecessary because the tribes can apply to the states for a portion of the money being provided to the states. However, tribes should not have to receive these funds through a state grant process or via any other mechanism that might diminish their roles as sovereign governments. It is Congress that can do the right thing at this stage to respect the rights of the Tribes to be self-governing and join their counterpart governments in this vital partnership.

I appreciate the cooperation of the Chairman and my colleagues in agreeing to the adoption of my amendment to make the Pacific coastal tribes true partners in our effort to recover threatened and endangered salmon runs.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I thank Senators GREGG and HOLLINGS and REID for their efforts in helping an amendment be added to the managers' package which Senator DEWINE and I offered relative to Great Lakes stations and measuring stations for water levels. It is an important amendment for the Great Lakes.

I ask unanimous consent that a letter that I and Senator DEWINE wrote to Senators GREGG and HOLLINGS dated June 24 be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
Washington, DC, June 24, 1999.

Hon. JUDD GREGG,
Chair, Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State, Committee on Appropriations, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR COLLEAGUES: We are writing to request that our amendment providing $390,000 for upgrades to 13 Great Lakes gauging stations be included in the managers' amendment to the Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations bill. It has only recently come to our attention that NOAA/NOS was proposing to close rather than upgrade these 13 stations due primarily to budget consideration. Upgrades to the stations supported by the one-time appropriation in amendment will cut the long-term operating expenses for the stations by half or more while ensuring timely transfer of the essential data to the end users in the private sector and other Federal agencies. Because the old technology employed in these stations is not Y2K compliant, it is essential that the upgrades be provided this year.

Many of the 13 stations slated for closure are of particular importance to the monitoring network. Three of the stations have been in operation since the turn of the last century (1899–1901), forming a central part of the long term record for Great Lakes water levels. Their closure represents a grave loss to the continuity of the data. Six of the gauging stations are located in connecting channels, geographic locations for which water levels are nearly impossible to accurately interpolate from other sites and which are essential to determining flow rates between the lakes. Closure of these connecting channel stations will critically injure our ability to determine flow of water, contaminants, and other substances among the Great Lakes.

Furthermore, the proposed reduction in gauging capability comes at a time when such capability is needed most. Great Lakes jurisdictions at the federal, state, provincial and binational levels are confronting a series of complex issues associated with water withdrawal, consumptive use and removal, including export. The Great Lakes system is currently experiencing dramatic declines in water levels compared with just last year, ranging from an 8″ drop in Lake Superior to 30″ in Lake Ontario. Overall, water levels have changed from extreme highs to levels nearly a foot below the long-term averages. This water level reduction has already had profound impacts on commercial navigation and recreational boating. Lake level regulation, dredging needs, and other priorities also are set based on the expectations of water level fluctuations. All of these issues have one thing in common: they are fundamentally dependent upon the accurate and comprehensive data provided by the 49 long-term Great Lakes stations in the National Water Level Observation Network. Federal, state and local decision makers in the Great Lakes region rely upon this network to make informed decisions regarding resource management and policy.

We believe that the funding level requested is both modest and justifiable given the importance of the water level gauging network to the Great Lakes region and the long-term cost savings that will be realized.

Sincerely,

MIKE DEWINE.
CARL LEVIN.

''.

On page 75, line 15, insert the following after ''period''; '', unless the Secretary of State determines that a detail for a period more than a total of 2 years during any 5 year period would further the interests of the Department of State''.

On page 75, line 21, insert the following after ''detail'': '', unless the Secretary of State determines that the extension of the detail would further the interests of the Department of State''.

On page 76, line 11, insert before the period: '': Provided further. That of the amount made available under this heading, not less than $11,000,000 shall be available for the Office of Defense Trade Controls''.

On page 110, strike lines 15 through 23 and insert in lieu thereof:

''(ii) Notwithstanding otherwise applicable law, for each license or construction permit issued by the Commission under this subsection for which a debt or other monetary obligation is owed to the Federal Communications Commission or to the United States, the Commission shall be deemed to have a perfected, first priority security interest in such license or permit, and in the proceeds of sale of such license or permit, to the extent of the outstanding balance of such a debt or other obligation.''.

On page 111, insert after the end of Sec. 619:

''Sec. 620. (a) DEFINITIONS—For the purposes of this section—

(1) the term ''agency'' means the Federal Communications Commission.

(2) the term ''employee'' means an employee (as defined by section 2105 of title 5, United States Code) who is serving under an appointment without time limitation, and has been currently employed by such agency for a continuous period of at least 3 years; but does not include—

(A) a reemployed annuitant under subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, or another retirement system for employees of the Government.

(B) an employee having a disability on the basis of which such employee is or would be eligible for disability retirement under subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, or another retirement system for employees of the Government.

(F) any employee who, during the twenty-four month period preceding the date of separation, has received a recruitment or relocation bonus under section 5753 of title 5, United States Code, or who, within the twelve month period preceding the date of separation, received a retention allowance under section 5754 of that title.

(3) The term ''Chairman'' means the Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

(b) AGENCY PLAN—

(1) IN GENERAL—The Chairman, prior to obligating any resources for voluntary separation incentive payments, shall simultaneously submit to the authorizing and appropriating Committees of the House and the Senate and to the Office of Management and Budget a strategic plan outlining the intended use of such incentive payments and a proposed organizational chart for the agency once such incentive payments have been completed.

(2) CONTENTS—The agency's plan shall include—

(A) the positions and functions to be reduced, eliminated, and increased, as appropriate, identified by organizational unit, geographic location, occupational category and grade level;

(B) the time period during which incentives may be paid;

(D) a description of how the agency will operate without the eliminated positions and functions and with any increased or changed occupational skill mix.

(3) CONSULTATION—The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall review the agency's plan and may make appropriate recommendations for the plan with respect to the coverage of incentives as described under paragraph (2)(A), and with respect to the matters described in paragraph (2)(B)-(C). Any such recommendations shall be submitted simultaneously to the authorizing and appropriating committees of the House and the Senate.

(c) AUTHORITY TO PROVIDE VOLUNTARY SEPARATION INCENTIVE PAYMENTS—The Chairman shall implement the next agency plan without prior written notification to the chairman of each authorizing and appropriating committee of the House and the Senate at least fifteen days in advance of such implementation.

(1) IN GENERAL—A voluntary separation incentive payment under this section may be paid by the Chairman to any employee only to the extent necessary to eliminate the positions and functions identified by the strategic plan.

(2) AMOUNT AND TREATMENT OF PAYMENTS—A voluntary incentive payment

(A) shall be paid in a lump sum, after the employee's separation

(B) shall be equal to the lesser of—

(i) an amount equal to the amount the employee would be entitled to receive under section 5595(c) of title 5, United States Code (without adjustment for any previous payments made) or

(ii) an amount determined by the Chairman not to exceed $25,000.

(C) may not be made except in the case of any qualifying employee who voluntarily separates (whether by retirement or resignation) under the provisions of this section by not later than September 30, 2001;

(D) shall not be a basis for payment, and shall not be included in the computation, of any other type of Government benefit; and

(E) shall not be taken into account in determining the amount of any severance pay to which the employee may be entitled under section 5595 of title 5, United States Code, based on any other separation.

(d) ADDITIONAL AGENCY CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE RETIREMENT FUND—

(1) IN GENERAL—In addition to any other payments which it is required to make under subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, the agency shall remit to the Office of Personnel Management for deposit in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund an amount equal to 15 percent of the final base pay of each employee of the agency who is covered under subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States code, to whom a voluntary separation incentive has been paid under this Act.

(2) DEFINITION—For the purpose of paragraph (1), the term ''final basic pay,'' with respect to an employee, means the total amount of basic pay which would be payable for a year of service by such employee, computed using the employee's final rate of basic pay, and, if last serving or other than a full-time basis, with appropriate adjustment therefor.

(e) EFFECT OF SUBSEQUENT EMPLOYMENT WITH THE GOVERNMENT—

(1) An individual who has received a voluntary separation incentive payment from the agency under this section and accepts any employment for compensation with the Government of the United States, or who works for any agency of the United States Government through a personal service contract, within 5 years after the date of the separation on which the payment is based shall be required to pay, prior to the individual's first day of employment, the entire amount of the lump sum incentive payment to the agency.

(2) If the employment under paragraph (1) is with an Executive agency (as defined by section 105 of title 5, United States Code), the United States Postal Service or the Postal Rate Commission, the Director of the Office of Personnel Management may, at the request of the head of the agency, waive the repayment if the individual involved possesses unique abilities and is the only qualified applicant available for the position.

(3) If the employment under paragraph (1) is with an entity in the legislative branch, the head of the entity or the appointing official may waive the repayment if the individual involved possesses unique abilities and is the only qualified applicant available for the position.

(4) If the employment under paragraph (1) is with the judicial branch, the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts may waive the repayment if the individual involved possesses unique abilities and is the only qualified applicant for the position.

(f) INTENDED EFFECT ON AGENCY EMPLOYMENT LEVELS—

(1) IN GENERAL—Voluntary separations under this section are not intended necessarily to reduce the total number of full-time equivalent positions in the Federal Communications Commission. The agency may redeploy or use the full-time equivalent positions vacated by voluntary separations under this section to make other positions available to more critical locations or more critical occupations.

(2) ENFORCEMENT—The president, through the office of Management and Budget, shall monitor the agency and take any action necessary to ensure that the requirements of this subsection are met.

(g) REGULATIONS—The Office of Personnel Management may prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to implement this section.

(h) EFFECTIVE DATE—This section shall take effect on the date of enactment. (Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1999, as included in Public Law 105–277, section 101(b).''

At the end of title VI, insert the following:

''SEC. 621. The Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter the ''Secretary'') is hereby authorized and directed to create an ''Interagency Task Force on Indian Arts and Crafts Enforcement'' to be composed of representatives of the U.S. Trade Representative, the Department of Commerce, the Department of Interior, the Department of Justice, the Department of Treasury, the International Trade Administration, and representatives of other agencies and departments in the discretion of the Secretary to devise and implement a coordinated enforcement response to prevent the sale or distribution of any product or goods sold in or shipped to the United States that is not in compliance with the Indian Arts and Crafts Act of 1935, as amended.''.

Mr. GREGG. This technical amendment has been cleared on both sides. I ask for its adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment, as modified.

The amendment (No. 1271), as modified, was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1272 WITHDRAWN

Mr. GREGG. I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment numbered 1272.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under ''Amendments Submitted.'')

Mr. GREGG. I ask unanimous consent we accept amendment No. 1291.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 1291) was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1342

(Purpose: To express the sense of the Senate with respect to hush kits)

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I send a sense of the Senate to the desk and ask unanimous consent it be accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GREGG], for Mr. GORTON, for himself, Mr. DODD, Mr. MCCAIN, Mr. HOLLINGS, and Mr. ROCKEFELLER, proposes an amendment numbered 1342.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. . SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING THE EUROPEAN COUNCIL NOISE RULE AFFECTING HUSHKITTED AND REENGINED AIRCRAFT.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate finds that—

(1) For more than 50 years, the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) has been the single entity vested with the authority to establish international noise and emissions standard; through OCAOs efforts, aircraft noise has decreased by an average of 40 percent since 1970;

(2) ICAO is currently working on an expedited basis on even more stringent international noise standards, taking into account economic reasonableness, technical feasibility and environmental benefits;

(3) International noise and emissions standards are critical to maintaining U.S. aeronautical industries' economic viability and to obtaining their on going commitment to progressively more stringent noise reduction efforts;

(4) European Council (EO) Regulation No. 925/1999 banning certain aircraft meeting the highest internationally recognized noise standards from flying in Europe, undermines the integrity of the ICAO process and undercuts the likelihood that new Stage 4 standards can be developed;

(5) While no regional standard is acceptable, this regulation is particularly offensive, there is no scientific basis for the regulation and it has been carefully crafted to protect European aviation interests while imposing arbitrary, substantial and unfounded cost burdens on United States' aeronautical industries;

(6) The vast majority of aircraft that will be affected by EC Regulation No. 925/1999 are operated by U.S. flag carriers; and

(7) The implementation of EC Regulation No. 925/1999 will result in a loss of jobs in the United States and may cost the U.S. aviation industry in excess of $2,000,000,000.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) EC Regulation No. 925/1999 should be rescinded by the EC at the earliest possible time;

(2) that if it is not done, the Department of State should file a petition regarding EC on Regulation No. 925/1999 with ICAO pursuant to Article 84 of the Chicago Convention; and

(3) the Departments of Commerce and Transportation and the United States Trade Representative should use all reasonable means available to them to ensure that the goal of having the rule repealed is achieved.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, this amendment expresses the Sense of the Senate with respect to the discriminatory European trade practices being perpetrated against certain American products in the guise of promulgating regulations on noise emissions.

Last year the European Union began to restrict the use of so called hushkitted or reengined U.S. aircraft in the European community. These aircraft had been specifically modified to meet U.S. Stage 3 quiet noise standards. Ironically, the United States is several years ahead of Europe in urging U.S. aircraft to be reengined to comply with such standards.

EC Regulation No. 925/1999 has been crafted in such a way as a noise standard to effectively prohibit U.S. aircraft that have been hushkitted from flying in European airspace even though these aircraft are actually quieter than many European aircraft and engines. The standard is written in such a clever way that it touches only U.S. products. That in and of itself should make anyone suspicious as to whether the motive is noise abatement or a clearly disguised technical barrier to trade.

At the moment the EU has delayed implementation of the regulation but it has not been formally rescinded. That means that anyone thinking about buying U.S. aircraft that have been hushkitted, which most older aircraft have been to meet U.S. standards, would have to make some judgement as to whether this regulation is likely to resurface again. If the judgement is yes then a potential buyer would refuse to buy U.S. aircraft if they would be contemplated for use on European routes.

For more than fifty years, the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) has been the single entity vested with the authority to establish international noise and emission standards, and thanks to its efforts aircraft noise has been decreased by forty percent. Moreover, ICAO is working as we speak to tighten international noise standards even further. For the European Council to arbitrarily seek to preempt the efforts of the ICAO is extremely unhelpful and patently discriminatory against U.S. aircrafts and engines.

The amendment I have offered today calls upon the U.S. Department of State to seek international relief from this discriminatory regulation by petitioning the ICAO under existing relevant international conventions. It also calls upon other relevant U.S. agencies with jurisdiction over trade and transportation matters to work to resolve this matter.

Mr. President, there are clearly binding amendments that could be offered to deal with this problem. I do not support such an effort at this time. This is a matter for the Departments of State and Transportation together with the Office of the United States Trade Representative to work out with their European counterparts. I strongly urge them to do so on an expeditious basis.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I rise today in support of a sense of the Senate regarding the European Council noise rule affecting hushkitted and reengined aircraft. Under the guise of an environmental regulation, the European Union is engaged in a blatant effort to lock out the U.S. industry. Once again the EU is dragging its feet rather than finding a balanced resolution to this issue. It is time that we turned up the heat on the EU and roll back this patently protectionist measure.

Mr. GREGG. I ask unanimous consent the amendment be accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 1342) was agreed to.

FCC FUNDS

Mr. GREGG. I would like to clarify the intent of the Committee regarding the funds appropriated in this bill for the Federal Communications Commission (FCC). The Committee's intent is that none of the funds provided for the agency in this bill are to be used by the FCC to reimburse the General Services Administration for the cost of the agency's relocation to the Portals site. I would ask the Ranking Democrat of the Subcommittee if that is his understanding as well.

Mr. HOLLINGS. The Subcommittee Chairman has accurately stated the intent of the Committee with regard to this issue.

SCHOOL SAFETY INITIATIVE

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I would like to engage in a colloquy with my colleague from South Carolina, Senator HOLLINGS, the ranking member of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State and Judiciary (CJS), about an innovative program recently started by the State of Virginia, which I believe falls within the allowable use of funds within the Safe Schools Initiative, a line item that appears in the FY 2000 CJS Appropriations Bill.

Senator HOLLINGS, it has recently come to my attention that the State of Virginia has begun implementing a new program to reduce crime in its schools called ''4 Safe VA.'' This program is a public/private partnership, which includes online reporting of school crime, a toll-free statewide hotline, and an extensive training program.

Before school begins again in the fall, Virginia will train nearly 3,000 teachers, law enforcement, school resource officers, and other school personnel in school safety procedures. There will be four separate training programs, which are as follows: (1) a training program for school resource officers to prepare them to act as ''first responders'' in crisis situations, such as that which occurred in Littleton, Colorado; (2) a training program for school staff and local law enforcement in communities where there are no school resource officers to prepare them for responding to crisis situations; (3) a training program for 60 Virginia State Troopers to prepare them to support localities should a crisis situation occur; and (4) a training program for custodians, cafeteria workers, and other support staff, who know the students and who are often the ''eyes and ears'' of the school, to prepare them to assist in emergencies.

I have looked at Virginia's program plan and have found it to be innovative and thoughtful. I consider it to be the type of program for which we set aside $38 million for community planning and prevention activities under the Safe Schools Initiative line item. It is my hope that the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, which will be administering these grants, will give careful thought to providing the State of Virginia with funds to continue to enhance the 4 Safe VA project.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I agree with you, Senator GREGG, that the 4 Safe VA project is a creative and solid approach to preventing and reacting to possible school crises in the State of Virginia. I agree that this is the type of program that should be funded under the Safe Schools Initiative. I also hope that the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention give full consideration to funding this program.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I very much thank the Senator from South Carolina for supporting me and engaging in this colloquy. I look forward to working with him in the future on ensuring that our nation's schools are safe.

CENSUS 2000

Mr. STEVENS. I understand my colleague from New Hampshire, the Manager of this bill, Senator GREGG is interested in making comments on the conduct of the 2000 Census as it regards Alaska Natives.

Mr. GREGG. Yes, I would like to join you in remarking on the 2000 Census and Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. I would like to start by referencing a letter received from the Alaska Governor, Tony Knowles, which relates certain Government Accounting Office findings on the 1990 census. Governor Knowles reports that the Alaska Native population was undercounted by 11,000, resulting in an annual loss of federal funding of $162 million over ten years.

Mr. GREGG. It is important to bring this statistic to the Senate's attention to underscore the significance of reform proposals the Senator from Alaska will raise here today.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I've often noted on this floor that the awesome size of Alaska makes for unique problems in rendering federal services. The 2000 Census count is no exception. The sheer physical separation of neighboring communities makes communication and coordination of planning difficult. The population is dispersed and also remote from the hub cities where resources are often concentrated. Competing forces and policies demand both centralization and decentralization of services.

Mr. GREGG. My staff and myself have traveled to Alaska at your invitation and agree that the distances between communities are a challenge in implementing federal programs and directives.

Mr. STEVENS. The situation is complicated by the diverse ad varied social and political institutions set up in localities and at the regional level. Alaska Natives by traditional or necessity have chosen to organize in various ways to address different circumstances. Often federal agencies chose among these groups and are satisfied that they have covered their bases with Alaska Natives. I urge the Census to take a hard look at the expertise and advice of all Native entities, including Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act corporations which by virtue of their day-to-day business responsibilities and duties to shareholders also have a vigorous pool of human resources to assist in public education and input.

Mr. GREGG. I agree that expediency should not compromise the thorough study and development of local and regional solutions to Census 2000 issues.

Mr. STEVENS. A necessary first step to addressing these issues, is for senior-staff oversight of the Alaska Native Census in Washington, DC. I also urge the staffing and funding of an Alaska office of the Census.

Mr. GREGG. I would support this measure.

Mr. STEVENS. The State of Alaska can do its part. For example, the State could set up an Alaska advisory committee on the Census. This committee could include representatives of rural area, urban areas, Alaska Natives, the military, and municipal and state government.

But I hope Census officials understand that certain agency decisions already being pursued need to be reviewed right now before an advisory committee can be organized. For example, sub-regional hubs like Dillingham are subject only to an update, not a full enumeration under the 2000 Census. Also, reportedly, there are no focus groups for the many and varied Alaska Native voices to be heard; and it is my understanding that groups classified by the federal government as minorities have been provided this opportunity in other states. I urge the Census to develop a public education campaign that will communicate to rural and urban residents the importance of being counted.

Mr. GREGG. I agree these are important issues.

Mr. STEVENS. A specific issue that should be addressed in some manner is the highly mobile urban-rural population of Alaska Natives. We see many families coming to Anchorage on a periodic or seasonal basis, sharing common quarters in the city but considering themselves rural residents. Likewise, commercial fishermen will split the year between two or more residences within the state, and do some subsistence fishing at a traditional fish camp for some part of the year near the village of their birth. The proper enumeration of Alaska Natives would benefit from an effort to reconcile these migration patterns with the fixed residency standards used in a number of federal programs and formulas.

Mr. GREGG. I appreciate the comments of the Senator from Alaska and will work with him to address his concerns.

Mr. STEVENS. I thank my colleague and ask unanimous consent that the letter I referenced earlier be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF ALASKA,
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR,
Juneau, AK, April 14, 1999.

Hon. TED STEVENS,
U.S. Senator, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR STEVENS: I am concerned about an issue critical to our state—the upcoming year 2000 census. When you consider this issue in Congress, I urge you to defend the plan submitted by the experts at the Census Bureau to obtain the fairest and most accurate population counts for use over the next decade.

As you know, any possible undercount of our population means the loss of vital federal funding for Alaska. In a recent U.S. General Accounting Office report, Alaska in 1990 was undercounted by more than 11,000 people with a 10-year fiscal impact of $160 million.

We have common goals of obtaining our state's fair share of federal resources to help fund our investments in Alaska. We should not let partisan differences over census methodology impact the accuracy of census data and its use in revenue sharing and funding formulas.

The 1990 Census was the first to be less accurate than its predecessor. I am hopeful Congress will fund the Bureau of Census at a level appropriate to meet U.S. Supreme Court decisions and other mandates necessary to ensure timely completion of the next census. I urge you to do all possible to ensure Alaska receives its fair share of federal funds and to support the efforts to make the 2000 Census as accurate as possible.

Sincerely,

TONY KNOWLES,
Governor.

NATIONAL CORAL REEF INSTITUTE/NOAA NATIONAL OCEAN SERVICE

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment to engage the distinguished chairman and ranking member of the subcommittee in a colloquy. First let me begin by thanking my friends for ensuring the committee report included $2 million under the National Ocean Service account to support scientific research and coral reef studies. It is my understanding this money is to be divided equally between the National Coral Reef Institute in Ft. Lauderdale, FL, and the University of Hawaii. This research is critical to our understanding of the factors at work in the degradation of reef ecosystems around the world and I appreciate all my colleagues did in Committee to support this effort.

I say to my colleagues, it is my understanding the Chairman's amendment contains additional funding for this account. Is it correct to say these funds are in addition to the $2 million currently provided by the Committee to the National Coral Reef Institute and the University of Hawaii?

Mr. GREGG. The Senator from Florida is correct. The funds included in the Chairman's amendment are in addition to the $2 million provided to the two institutions you mentioned. Senator HOLLINGS, is this also your understanding?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Yes, the Chairman is correct.

Mr. MACK. I thank my colleagues for this clarification and for their support of coral reef research.

NOAA ACTIVITIES IN FLORIDA

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, I ask the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee if he would consent to discuss with me for a moment two issues of concern to me with respect to NOAA activities in Florida.

Mr. GREGG. I am pleased to join my colleague from Florida in a colloquy.

Mr. MACK. First, let me say I appreciate my friend from New Hampshire's hard work for the strong support he's given to the State of Florida in the bill before us today. But I would like to bring to the Chairman's attention an initiative undertaken by Florida's top three research universities: the University of Florida, Florida State University and the University of Miami. These three institutions came together to ensure their extensive capabilities in the areas of marine, atmosphere and climate prediction research were focused on the needs of the entire Southeast region. They have especially come together to study the El Nino phenomenon. Their effort has been recognized by NOAA and they have become one of the agency's first regional assessment centers.

My concern, Mr. President, is about the possibility that NOAA may reduce resources available to Florida and this valuable research initiative. Clearly, Florida and the Southeast region are significantly impacted by climatic developments. A strong and continued investment in Florida and the region—along with a balanced investment in the regional assessment centers—is essential. I would ask the support of the Committee to continue the base level funding of this important collaborative effort. The institutions had been receiving approximately $500,000 per year through the Office of Global Programs, and I would like the Chairman's assurances that this level of funding should and will be continued during the next fiscal year.

Mr. GREGG. I know how important this initiative has been to the Senator from Florida. I can assure the Senator that it is the Committee's intent that the base-level funding you indicated be preserved in the next fiscal year. Did the Senator from Florida have an additional concern?

Mr. MACK. Yes. I know the chairman is aware of the Florida Congressional delegation's strong commitment to the restoration of the Everglades and Florida Bay. I have heard some concern, however, that internal reallocations within NOAA could result in at least a $1 million reduction in South Florida based Florida Bay activities. The administration asked for significant funding of the Everglades-Florida Bay initiative in both FY 99 and FY 2000 through the Coastal Ocean Science Program. But the concern I'm hearing from Florida indicates that NOAA may reallocate funds away from this initiative and toward other programs and purposes. I would like the Chairman to join me in stressing to the agency that funds in this bill currently allocated for critical Florida Bay initiatives not be depleted. I would like the Chairman to join me in working to ensure the NOAA contribution to the interagency program for Florida and adjacent coastal marine waters is continued at the current levels.

Mr. GREGG. I appreciate the Senator from Florida's comments. The Committee supports and shares your commitment to Everglades and Florida Bay restoration; specifically with respect to the funds allocated to the initiative funded by the Coastal Ocean Science Program.

Mr. MACK. I appreciate my friend's comments with respect to these two issues. I thank him again for his continued support of Florida priorities.

THE LAS VEGAS SPECIAL POLICE ENFORCEMENT AND ERADICATION PROGRAM

Mr. REID. Mr. President. I take this opportunity to thank Chairman GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS for their consideration of my request to provide $1 million in funds to the Las Vegas Special Police Enforcement and Eradication Program. Methamphetamine manufacturing, use and trafficking is a serious problem that deserves the highest priority, and I appreciate the leadership of the Chairman and the Ranking Member in this effort.

At this time, I would like to make a technical clarification of my request. I ask the Chairman and the Ranking Member, if, in making this appropriation, it is their understanding that of the $1 million provided, $500,000 is to be directed to the Las Vegas Police Department to be used for their Methamphetamine Eradication Initiative, while $500,000 is to be directed to the North Las Vegas Police Department for their Methamphetamine Eradication Initiative?

Mr. GREGG. The senior Senator from Nevada is correct. Of the $1 million provided, $500,000 is to be directed to the Las Vegas Police Department to be used for their Methamphetamine Eradication Initiative, and $500,000 is to be directed to the North Las Vegas Police Department for their Methamphetamine Eradication Initiative.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I concur with the Chairman.

Mr. REID. I thank the chairman and ranking member.

WOMEN'S BUSINESS CENTER PROGRAM AT THE SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I would like to engage the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, the Chairman of the Subcommittee, in a colloquy.

I want to begin by commending you, Senator GREGG, and your Ranking Member, Senator HOLLINGS, for the hard work you have done in crafting this Commerce, Justice, State and the Judiciary appropriations bill. You have done a great job in funding the priorities identified by the Committee in this bill. You have been particularly helpful to me in my efforts to curb the trafficking of Mexican black tar heroin in my home state of New Mexico.

A separate issue of particular importance in my home state is the Women's Business Center program at the Small Business Administration. In this bill, you have funded the Administration's request of $9 million for this program, and I applaud you for meeting the President's request.

Unfortunately, the President's request fails to address an important issue for the future of the Women's Business Center program. Particularly, the President's request does not take into account the need to allow existing WBCs to re-compete for federal funds once their initial five-year funding stream expires. So, many existing centers with outstanding track records of facilitating the growth of women-owned businesses and providing technical assistance to fledgling companies will go unfunded, while the SBA allows new, untested centers to open in other areas. Sacrificing the successful, existing centers to replace them with new, untested ones seems like bad policy. I think we need to open more new Women's Business Centers, but we also need to help the existing ones continue their work.

Senator BOND, the distinguished Chairman of the Small Business Committee, Senator KERRY and I, along with a group of 25 bi-partisan co-sponsors, have introduced S. 791, the Women's Business Center Sustainability Act. This bill would increase the authorization for the Women's Business Center program to $12 million and allow existing centers to re-compete for up to 40 percent of the federal funds available under the program. Is the Chairman of the Subcommittee aware of this bill?

Mr. GREGG. I am aware of this effort and am told that the Small Business Committee will work to report the bill to the full Senate, with the hope that the bill will pass later this year.

Mr. DOMENICI. As the Chairman may know, an additional $2 million in funding this year would be critical to the effort to allow existing centers to re-compete for federal assistance. Without this additional funding, many existing centers will be forced to close their doors. Assuming that S. 791 passes both houses of Congress and is signed by the President later this year, I hope that the Chairman will be willing to find a way to provide this additional $2 million for the program once this bill gets to conference.

Mr. GREGG. I share your concerns about allowing existing Women's Business Centers to re-compete for federal funds. If the Small Business Committee and the Senate approve S. 791 before the conference on this bill, I will make every effort to provide the additional funding you have requested.

Mr. DOMENICI. I thank the distinguished Chairman, and I yield the floor.

SHORELINE MAPPING

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I would like to engage in a colloquy with my friend, the chairman of the subcommittee, on shoreline mapping.

Mr. GREGG. I am more than happy to.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, the issue, which I wish to discuss, is the mapping of our country's shoreline. As the chairman knows, the National Ocean Service runs a Coastal Mapping Project which is responsible for mapping the nearly 95,000 miles of the US shoreline in an accurate, consistent, tide-coordinated, and up-to-date manner.

I'm concerned that nearly 30 percent of the US shoreline has not been mapped. In addition, one-quarter of what has been mapped as mapped prior to 1970 with severely outdated technology. Since this data is used as the official shoreline on NOAA's nautical charts and is used by the government and the private sectors, it is important to keep up with the changes that result from coastal development and natural processes, which can be drastic.

This year, there was an increase over both FY99 funding levels and the administration's FY00 request within the Committee's recommendation for the ''Mapping and Charting'' account. Would you agree, Mr. Chairman, that it is the recommendation of the Committee that $2 million of those funds can be used for shoreline mapping within the Coastal Mapping Project.

Mr. GREGG. I do agree with my esteemed colleague from Maryland that $2 million of the funds within the ''Mapping and Charting'' account can be used for shoreline mapping.

ANTI-METHAMPHETAMINE FUNDING

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I rise for the purpose of entering into a colloquy with the senior Senator from Wisconsin, Senator KOHL, regarding the $1 million appropriation for the Western Wisconsin Methamphetamine Law Enforcement Initiative in S. 1217.

As the Senator from Wisconsin knows, the domestic manufacture and importation of Methamphetamine, also know as Meth, has become a continuing public health threat to the United States and most recently to the Midwest. Senate KOHL, what is the extent of the Meth problem within the State of Wisconsin? Also, would you please describe how the proposed $1 million will be used to address the problem?

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from South Carolina for his questions, his acknowledgment of the severity of the Meth problem faced by rural communities and cities in the Midwest and throughout our country, and his active support for increased funding to combat Meth. In my own State of Wisconsin, criminal justice officials recognized early on that we had to develop a strategy and consolidate our enforcement and prevention efforts to limit the spread of the Meth epidemic that has been invading our Western Wisconsin borders from Minnesota and Iowa since the mid 1990's. Today, the number of Meth-related incidents is increasing. The Wisconsin State Laboratory reported increases of Meth analysis from 42 examinations in 1996 to 112 examinations in 1998. In 1998 alone, the Wisconsin Department of Narcotics Enforcement opened 90 investigations regarding Meth and prosecuted 40 individuals. In Wisconsin, Meth users generally range from 18 to 25, and recently there was even a disturbing report of Meth trafficking in a rural high school.

With the escalation of Meth trafficking, in February 1997 Wisconsin law enforcement officials organized a coordinated enforcement and prevention initiative among local, state, and federal law enforcement partners to target Meth traffickers. This major effort also addressed the need for training to prevent the potential health threat from toxic and flammable chemicals in clandestine Meth labs. Funding for this continuing intiative has been raised from a variety of sources, including the Wisconsin Office of Justice Assistance and the State Attorney General.

Recently, representatives from Wisconsin agricultural associations have reached out to their members and communities to educate the public about the dangers of Anhydrous ammonia, a precursor used in the crude production of Meth. These associations are now working with law enforcement as well.

And this May, the State Attorney General and the U.S. Attorney for the Western District of Wisconsin sponsored three Meth symposiums to educate and train members of the criminal justice system.

The $1 million appropriated for the Western Wisconsin Methamphetamine Initiative will help build on these efforts and promote more coordination of anti-Meth activities. It will be used jointly by the Office of Attorney General (through the Division of Narcotics Enforcement) and the Office of Justice Assistance (under the direction of the Governor) to support a plan developed in coordination with each other to continue combatting Meth production, distribution and use and for policing initiatives in ''hot spots'' of Meth trafficking activity. Part of this funding will also be used for community and school-based Meth education and prevention awareness programs.

Again, I thank the distinguished Senator from South Carolina—and our Chairman, the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, Senator GREGG—for their commitment to addressing the Meth problem.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I thank the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin for this fame and effort in this very significant issue.

FUNDING FOR DEA

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I would like to enter into a colloquy with Senator GREGG on funding for the Drug Enforcement Agency and on national issues concerning local law enforcement training skills to combat methamphetamine abuse in rural communities, small cities, mid-size communities and on activities to alleviate the growing financial burden resulting from the cleanup of clandestine laboratories and other drug-related hazardous waste.

I say to Senators STEVENS and GREGG that Senators KYLE, DEWINE, KOHL, HAGEL, and I have offered a bill, the Rural Methamphetamine Use Response Act of 1999, that would provide additional funding to combat methamphetamine production and abuse, and for other purposes.

Mr. GREGG. I am aware of the bill.

Mr. GRASSLEY. As the Senator knows, we have been working on this bill and on others to ensure adequate funding for our nation's counter narcotics efforts. I appreciate the committee's funding efforts to specifically address the national methamphetamine issue and to combat methamphetamine production, distribution, and use. I am also aware that we face tough budget decisions and we need to balance many program needs within a balanced budget.

Mr. GREGG. We have had to make a lot of tough decisions in this bill while trying to ensure that we meet the needs of many critical programs. The subcommittee has worked earnestly to be fair, and we have had to make tough choices.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I appreciate their efforts. I know that the subcommittee has allotted the Drug Enforcement Agency the tools it needs to properly wage the war on illegal drugs. I also know that the subcommittee has added personnel and resources to the western and central regions of the United States to focus primarily on the methamphetamine problems in those geographic regions of the country. However, as you may know, methamphetamine abuse and production across the United States has forced law enforcement agencies to address challenges that exceed the many years of experience of the State and local law enforcement personnel within such agencies. Methamphetamine affects smaller communities and rural areas disproportionately. In many cases, these communities lack the investigative and technical skills, and resources to confront major criminal gangs or the environmental hazards caused by meth product.

Mr. GREGG. I am aware of the training challenges state and local law enforcement personnel have had regarding methamphetamine production and handling of these explosive chemicals involved in the methamphetamine production process and Senator HOLLINGS and I have worked to address those needs.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Since the Senator from New Hampshire is aware of the training challenges of state and local law enforcement agencies, the financial burden of meth cleanup, and the volatile properties of meth, from the funding provided to DEA for methamphetamine initiatives, I hope, where possible, that funding be set aside within the final bill directing DEA to establish a select cadre of Special Agents with Spanish language capabilities to work with local law enforcement agencies across the United States on matters relating to combating methamphetamine-related drug trafficking. I also ask within the funding allotment for methamphetamine training initiatives, funding for DEA staffing at appropriate training facilities for purposes of providing coherent, essential, and sustained clandestine laboratory training to State and local law enforcement personnel, and if possible, funding for DEA to provide these personnel with the skills necessary for clandestine laboratory recertification.

Mr. GREGG. I share in the Senators' concerns for the need for sustained and adequate funding nationally to combat methamphetamine abuse. I will work to ensure, where possible within the funding allotments for methamphetamine initiatives, that the final bill will support the concerns you have raised.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I thank Senators GREGG and HOLLINGS for their willingness to work with me and my colleagues on funding this needed request.

Mr. BOND. I thank my colleague from New Hampshire for recognizing the needs of Missouri law enforcement in this bill. As he knows well, the State of Missouri is experiencing a law enforcement crisis of epidemic proportions as the methamphetamine trade has exploded in recent years. My colleague, Senator GREGG, as seen to it that the DEA has increased resources to assist state and local law enforcement as they take on these drug dealers.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I too thank the Senator from New Hampshire for his attention to this problem. I would like to bring a matter to the attention of the Chairman. Under the Violent Crime Control Trust Fund section of this bill, the Chairman has included $6 million for the Midwest Methamphetamine Initiative. The language states that the funding is to be used by the Drug Enforcement Administration to train state and local officers on the proper recognition, collection, removal and destruction of methamphetamine and materials seized in clandestine labs. Is my colleague familiar with the title?

Mr. GREGG. Yes, I am.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I have heard repeatedly from local law enforcement officers, as has Senator BOND, that DEA provides excellent training and prepares well officers to raid, bust and clean up these labs. I know that the Chairman is also aware of the funding required for the DEA to assist state and local law enforcement with the clean up of these labs after they have been busted.

Mr. GREGG. I am aware that resources are necessary so that these sites can be cleaned up adequately.

Mr. ASHCROFT. It is my understanding from local law enforcement officers that DEA funds are needed not only in the training of state and local law enforcement officers, but also in the removal and destruction of the materials seized in the labs. Is it the Chairman's understanding that the resources made available to the Midwest Methamphetamine Initiative will also be available for the DEA to assist state and local law enforcement in the clean up methamphetamine labs?

Mr. GREGG. Yes, I am aware that the needs to combat the growing meth problem are pressing and that funds made available to the DEA may be used not only to train state and local officers on the proper recognition and collection of meth labs, but also in the removal destruction of the materials seized in the labs.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I thank the Chairman for his assistance.

Mr. BOND. I too thank the Chairman for his assistance in this matter. DEA's participation in fighting the methampetamine epidemic is essential to state and local law enforcement. As my colleague stated, the DEA provides training for local officers that well prepares them to handle and dispose of the toxic material that they encounter while busting clandestine methamphetamine labs. The DEA also has an important role in the clean up process. There were over 800 clandestine methamphetetamine labs seized in the State of Missouri last year. Most of the labs were busted in rural areas and smaller towns. These towns have police forces and sheriffs offices of a very limited sizes. DEA's presence and help in rural areas is essential to ensure that these communities are not overwhelmed by the drug and the havoc in this wake. If this menace is to be brought under control, local law enforcement must have the assistance of the DEA. The Senator from New Hampshire has been a good friend to Missouri law enforcement as he has worked closely with us in recent years to ensure that the DEA has the resources to focus on this problem and I appreciate him clarifying the use of those designated funds.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, as Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere, I have spent years addressing the drug problem that confronts our nation. I personally have visited drug source and transit countries throughout the region with the objective of searching for ways to resolve and overcome this escalating problem. As a result of many hearings and meetings on this important matter, last year Senator DEWINE and I introduced the Western Hemisphere Drug Elimination Act, a $2.7 billion—3 year authorization for enhanced drug eradication and interdiction efforts. We were successful in getting this legislation passed into law and providing a $800 million down payment for this bill. We must continue to fund this important law.

Recognizing that US government resources are limited, it is important to fund agencies that can get a huge return on a small investment. the Drug Enforcement Administration indeed is an agency that demonstrates this objective on a daily basis. With limited funding, the DEA is a vital source not only for our law enforcement activities, but for other nations as well. Relying primarily on manpower, the DEA has demonstrated how effective an agency with limited funding can produce significant results. Last year, the DEA seized more drugs and arrested more traffickers than ever before. They play an integral part in training foreign law enforcement officials overseas to help them help us keep drugs out of our country. they do a great service to our nation.

This past March, Senators DEWINE and I sent a letter to the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Commerce, State, Justice Subcommittee, calling for building on this year's investment in the DEA and requesting additional funding for 300 new DEA agent, analysts and support personnel, and for other DEA initiatives. This request is consistent with DEA initiatives outlined in the Western Hemisphere Drug Elimination Act. Specifically, 16 senators—both Republicans and Democrats—co-signed the letter to the Chairman and Ranking Member.

I thank the Subcommittee for addressing our needs in our request. The Subcommittee earmarked $17.5 million for new hires for DEA agents, analysts, and support staff. I recognize this was a difficult task given the tight budget caps confronting this Subcommittee and the other Appropriations subcommittees. While I appreciate the tremendous efforts made by the Subcommittee and their staff to earmark money for new DEA hires within their account, I am concerned that there isn't any additional funding for the DEA. The DEA will have to sacrifice other important and necessary programs for these new hires.

I realize that the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Commerce, Justice, State Subcommittee are trying to complete the bill this evening. I had intended to offer an amendment to request $24 million in additional DEA funding for new agents, analysts and support staff hires. After talking to the Subcommittee leadership, however, I have instead agreed not to offer my amendment and would commit to working with the Commerce, Justice, State Subcommittee to help find a way to provide additional funding to the DEA during conference of this bill.

Mr. President, I see Senator DEWINE on the floor and understand that he too would like to say a few words on this matter. I yield the floor to my distinguished colleague from Ohio.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished colleague from Georgia for yielding the floor. I commend him for all his tireless efforts in finding ways to combat the drug war. Mr. President, I previously gave a floor statement on the importance of the role of the Drug Enforcement Administration in keeping drugs off our streets. I have traveled with the DEA to various countries throughout the hemisphere and have seen them first hand in action. the DEA does a tremendous service to our country both inside and outside our border and should be commended. I agree with Senator COVERDELL on the need for additional funding for the DEA. I too believe that the DEA is underfunded and should receive increased funding, particularly if there are additional resources available at a later date.

Mr. President, I see the Chairman of the Commerce, State, Justice Subcommittee on the floor. I speak for Senator COVERDELL when I say that it is my hope that we can work together with the Subcommittee leadership to help provide additional funding for the DEA during conference, or in the future even that there may be additional available funding.

Mr. GREGG. I thank Senator COVERDELL and Senator DEWINE for their statements. I have listened very carefully to their remarks, and I commend them for his tireless efforts in supporting anti-drug efforts, here in the United States and throughout the world. I would like to assure both Senator COVERDELL and Senator DEWINE that I will give every possible consideration to their request when we go to conference and in the event that additional funding may become available for FY 2000 in the future.

Mr. DEWINE. I thank my distinguished friend from New Hampshire and I yield the floor.

Mr. COVERDELL. I too thank my distinguished friend from New Hampshire, and I yield the floor.

DEFINITION OF PUBLIC AIRCRAFT

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I am prepared to offer an amendment with my distinguished colleague Senator DEWINE to the Commerce, State, Justice appropriations bill that will help law enforcement officers in their efforts to protect our citizens. We believe that after the Congress passed Public Law 103–411, it had unintended consequences that have imposed unnecessary costs on state and local governments. Under this law, aircraft belonging to law enforcement agencies are considered ''commercial'' if costs incurred from flying missions to support neighboring jurisdictions are reimbursed. Multiple governmental agencies have recognized this problem, with the support of the Federal Aviation Administration, they have jointly drafted corrective language for this problem. Before proceeding, however, I would like to inquire as to the plans for consideration of this issue by the Commerce Committee this year. I wonder if my distinguished colleagues from the state of Arizona and South Carolina—the Chairman and ranking member of the Senate Committee on Commerce, which has oversight on these matters—could engage Senator DEWINE and me in a discussion regarding this matter.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I would be pleased to engage in a discussion with the distinguished Senators from Florida and Ohio on the substance of this matter.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator for his time. In the state of Ohio the Bureau of Criminal Justice Services uses aircraft for drug eradication efforts. Under current law Ohio is forced to use private planes for this mission at a considerable cost, rather than their own surplus aircraft. Mr. Chairman is it your assessment that current law defining public aircraft places unnecessary restrictions and costly burdens on law enforcement agencies who operate public aircraft?

Mr. MCCAIN. I would agree that as the current law is written a number of our law enforcement agencies that operate public aircraft are faced with burdens in being reimbursed for the costs associated from flying missions in support of neighboring jurisdictions. The Senate Commerce Committee intends to act to review the matter and work to develop legislation that will help law enforcement.

Mr. GRAHAM. Will the Senators from Arizona and South Carolina agree to review this matter on the FAA reauthorization bill and by the end of year?

Mr. MCCAIN. As I have indicated to my colleague, I will as the Chairman of the Commerce Committee review this matter by the end of the year and work with my colleague from South Carolina, Senator HOLLINGS, in a good faith effort to resolve this issue by the end of the year.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I agree with my distinguished colleague from Arizona and look forward to working with him on this issue this year.

Mr. DEWINE. I want to thank Senators MCCAIN and HOLLINGS for their support on this issue. I look forward to working with them on this issue.

Mr. GRAHAM. I also want to thank Senators MCCAIN and HOLLINGS for their support on this issue. I should also thank the law enforcement organizations that have strongly supported this amendment. Specifically, the National Sheriff's Association, Airborne Law Enforcement Association, International Association of Chiefs Of Police, Florida Sheriff's Association, and the California State Sheriff's Associations. Mr. President, in light of what the distinguished Chairman and ranking member have said, I withdraw my amendment.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise today to join my distinguished colleagues, Senators GRAHAM and DEWINE, to support an amendment to the Commerce-Justice-State appropriations bill that will assist our local law enforcement agencies to respond in a timely fashion to life or death situations.

Sheriffs and police chiefs in my state and around this country have found that their hands are tied when it comes to sharing helicopters or other public aircraft with neighboring jurisdictions. The Milwaukee County Sheriff's Department recently became the first local law enforcement agency in Wisconsin to acquire a helicopter. Neighboring jurisdictions would like to borrow that helicopter and reimburse the Milwaukee County Sheriff for the cost of their use of that helicopter. The Milwaukee County Sheriff's Department is perfectly willing, indeed eager, to share its helicopter but it can't easily do so. Under current law, in order for the assisting agency to receive a cost reimbursement from the neighboring jurisdiction, the neighboring sheriff or police chief must first exhaust the possibility that a private commercial helicopter is available. Even when the neighboring law enforcement agency is faced with a serious imminent threat to life or property, the law requires the neighboring sheriff or police chief to first determine whether a privately operated helicopter is available. Mr. President, this law is absurd and puts everyone's safety at risk.

Law enforcement agencies use helicopters for a variety of reasons—to chase a suspect fleeing the scene of a crime, in search and rescue missions, to observe crowds in public gatherings, to transport prisoners, and to detect marijuana fields. Current law, however, stands in the way of cooperation between agencies to carry out these important law enforcement functions. Cooperation between law enforcement agencies is good. It saves time, money, resources and maybe even lives. We should do all we can to promote law enforcement cooperation.

Saving lives and maintaining law and order is delayed if we require sheriffs and police chiefs to determine first whether they can find a private helicopter. Public safety is also jeopardized because private commercial pilots are likely not trained law enforcement personnel with experience in sensitive and sometimes dangerous situations. In addition, a commercial helicopter is most likely not equipped with the instrumentation and tools needed by law enforcement officers to do their job. But if we allow sheriffs and police chiefs to share their aircraft with neighboring jurisdictions without first exhausting private avenues, law enforcement response is far more likely to be swift and sure.

Current law effectively prevents law enforcement from borrowing a helicopter or other aircraft from a neighboring agency. The law must be changed and this amendment does the job. This amendment modifies the definition of ''public aircraft'' so that law enforcement agencies no longer need to make an attempt to find a private helicopter operator before using a neighboring jurisdiction's helicopter. This amendment is supported by the National Sheriffs' Association, as well as numerous police chiefs and sheriffs across the country.

I would like to thank my colleagues, Senators MCCAIN and HOLLINGS, for working with us on this issue. They raised some concerns, but, as described in the colloquy, they have given us assurances that they will work to resolve the urgent needs of law enforcement either on the Federal Aviation Administration appropriations bill or by the end of the year. I welcome their recognition of the magnitude of this problem to law enforcement and their willingness to work with us on this issue.

Mr. President, we demand that law enforcement act quickly and professionally to life or death situations, but we're not always giving them the tools they need to do their job. We must do our part. I urge my colleagues to join in this bipartisan effort to change the law and give the sheriffs and police chiefs in Wisconsin and across this country the tools they need to keep our communities safe and secure.

I yield the floor.

BARRY UNIVERSITY INTERCULTURAL CENTER

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, I would like to engage the Chairman of the subcommittee in a brief colloquy regarding Barry University in Miami Shores, Florida. Barry University has a strong history of addressing important Miami community issues like urbanization, ethnic diversity, community development and cultural understanding. Recently the University announced the planning of an Intercultural Community Center which is designed to promote necessary neighborhood and small business revitalization. The facility will provide conference space, meeting rooms, executive seminars and continuing education courses related to international business and commerce.

It is my understanding Barry University will be requesting an Economic Development Administration grant for this project from the Department of Commerce during the next fiscal year. I would appreciate the Chairman's support in recommending the Department of Commerce give strong consideration to the merits of University's grant application.

Mr. GREGG. I thank the Senator from Florida for bringing this issue to my attention. The Committee is aware of Barry University's efforts and I would strongly urge the Economic Development Administration to consider its application within applicable procedures and guidelines and provide a grant if warranted.

Mr. MACK. I appreciate my friend from New Hampshire's comments on this important initiative and for all he and the Senator from South Carolina have done in this bill for the citizens of Florida.

EPSCOT PROGRAM

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, I would like to ask the distinguished Subcommittee Chairman, Senator GREGG, to engage in a colloquy on a matter of extreme importance to my State and a number of others, and that is the need for more funding for the Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Technology, a program of the Department of Commerce's Technology Administration.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I would be happy to yield to the Senator from Louisiana and engage in a colloquy.

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, as you know, technology is fueling the tremendous economic growth the nation is currently experiencing. However, as is frequently the case, rural states are struggling to participate in this new economy. The EPSCoT program is a competitive matching grants program that reaches beyond the traditional recipients of federal research and development funding. This pioneering initiative brings together the interest of economic development, science and technology, university research, and private business. Although the program is only a couple of years old, it has met with very high enthusiasm in areas such as Louisiana and New Hampshire.

Mr. President, there is important work being done through the EPSCoT program. This is a flexible program designed to assist states. Applications may be submitted by state, local, or Indian tribal governments, community colleges, universities, non-profit organizations, private organizations, technology business centers, industry councils or any combination of these entities from the eligible states. The eligible states are those that have received less in federal research and development funding than the majority of the states. Therefore, the program is carefully designed to benefit those states that need more assistance in developing a high-tech economy.

Mr. President, the National Institute of Standards and Technology, also a part of the Department of Commerce's Technology Administration, runs the Advanced Technology Program. The ATP provides matching funds for high-risk research with broad economic benefits. As a part of the program, grants occasionally are reclaimed by the ATP due to business failures and other such circumstances. These reclaimed monies are used by the ATP to fund new awards. The Committee has provided in the bill that the ATP may use these ''carry over'' funds for new awards in Fiscal Year 2000.

Does the Senator from New Hampshire concur that it is the intent of the committee to direct $2.0 million in funds provided to NIST for new ATP awards under the provisions dealing with the use of carry-over funds be used for new grants under the Technology Administration's EPSCoT program?

Mr. GREGG. It is the intent of the Committee to direct $2.0 million in carry-over funds for the ATP be used for new grants under the Technology Administration's EPSCoT program. I look forward to working with the Senator from Louisiana to ensure that the $2.0 million in ATP carry-over funds are provided to the EPSCoT program for new grants in Fiscal Year 2000.

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, does the Senator from South Carolina concur?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Yes, it is the Committee's intent that $2.0 million in ATP carry-over funds be provided to the EPSCoT program for FY 2000 grants.

DISTRIBUTION OF TECHNOLOGY FUNDS TO BURLINGTON, RUTLAND, AND SAINT JOHNSBURY

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I would first like to thank Senator GREGG for all his work on crafting the Commerce, Justice, State, and Judiciary Fiscal Year 2000 appropriations bill. In this time of tight budgetary caps, and with the many requests by members, Senator GREGG has worked hard to get the bill through the Appropriations Committee and to the floor of the Senate.

I would especially like to thank Senator GREGG for recognizing the need of three Vermont towns to upgrade, modernize and acquire technology for their police departments. Allowing these police departments to improve their technology will permit them to increase the efficiency and effectiveness of the services they provide. Reflecting the needs of the police departments, the $1.5 million should be divided on the following basis: one-half ($750,000) to the Burlington Police Department, one-third ($500,000) to the Rutland Police Department, and one-sixth ($250,000) to the St. Johnsbury Police Department. Again, I appreciate Senator GREGG's help to address the technology problems these town's police departments are facing, and I look forward to working with him to get this important appropriations bill signed into law.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I appreciate Senator JEFFORDS bringing the needs of these three police departments to my attention, and will work with him to ensure that the money for technology grants to these three Vermont towns are distributed in the way he has described.

INTERNATIONAL WAR CRIMES TRIBUNALS

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I would like to engage the Chairman of the Commerce, Justice, State Subcommittee in a colloquy.

I am deeply concerned that the Subcommittee bill does not include the full Administration request for funding of the International War Crimes Tribunals.

We are all horrified by the crimes against humanity that occurred in Kosovo. Recent reports state that as many as 10,000 people were murdered. An untold number of women were raped. Hundreds of thousands of people were driven from their homes. The War Crimes Tribunal needs adequate funding to gather evidence, to pursue and to try those who are responsible for these crimes against humanity.

Congress provided additional funding for the War Crimes Tribunals in the Supplemental Appropriations bill. These funds were necessary to provide emergency assistance to the War Crimes Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia. Before we provided this funding, Chief Justice Louise Arbour said that she had only seven investigators available for Kosovo. However, full funding for the War Crimes Tribunal is necessary for fiscal year 2000, if we are to continue ongoing investigations in Bosnia or Rwanda.

The Chairman of the Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations Committee is a strong supporter of law enforcement—both in the United States and abroad. I ask him to join me in supporting the full request for funding of the International War Crimes Tribunals during the Conference on the Commerce, Justice and State Department Appropriations bill.

Mr. GREGG. I share the Senator's strong support for the work of the International War Crimes Tribunals. The Subcommittee, with the Senators help, provided more than $40 million for the War Crimes Tribunals in the fiscal year 1999 bill. The full committee, again with the Senator's assistance, made an additional $28 million available to the tribunals as part of the fiscal year 1999 emergency supplemental that passed in May. Just two weeks ago, the Subcommittee approved yet another $2 million for FBI forensic teams investigating massacre sites in Kosovo under the tribunal's direction. I look forward to working with the Senator during the Conference on this bill to ensure that full funding is provided.

CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION PROGRAM

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I again thank Senator GREGG and his staff for working with me to provide funding for two important initiatives in my home State of Vermont. It is my understanding that within funds provided to Department of Justice of Juvenile Justice Programs, the FY 2000 Commerce, Justice, State, the Judiciary and Related Agencies Appropriation Bill provides $100,000 for the establishment of a teen center in Colchester, Vermont and $100,000 to Prevent Child Abuse-VT to evaluate the SAFE–T program, a comprehensive child abuse prevention program for middle school communities.

There is a great need for a community center with a focus on youth in the Town of Colchester. Currently after school gathering places for Colchester youth are limited to local restaurants and supermarkets. This project has strong local support. Last October, a group of local citizens formed a non-profit organization called the ''Colchester Community Youth Project'' and purchased an available property in the town for use as a teen center. The Town of Colchester hopes to buy the building from the non-profit, and then plans to renovate the 4,500 square foot main building to house a youth center/multi use space, offices, and a branch of the local public library.

For over four years, Prevent Child Abuse-VT has funded, developed and piloted SAFE–T, a comprehensive health education and abuse prevention program for middle school communities. Students learn victim an victimizer prevention, build healthy relationship skills and experience personal and social change. Parents, guardians, school staff and service providers participate in training, dialog assignments, classroom presentations and school community change projects. SAFE–T research-based and classroom tested with over 500 students.

More work, however, needs to be done to evaluate the success of the SAFE–T program. Dr. David Finkelhor, Co-Director of the Family Violence Research Laboratory at the University of New Hampshire, plans to embark shortly on a three-year scientific evaluation of the SAFE–T program. I am very pleased that this appropriation will enable this evaluation to move forward.

The sexual abuse of and by children is now at epidemic proportions in America. The SAFE–T Program is an excellent resource in helping early adolescents develop the skills they need to grow safe, free of abuse. This program offers great promise as a national model for comprehensive abuse prevention programs. A thorough scientific evaluation will ensure that this research-based initiative can be proven effective and disseminated properly.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I applaud Senator JEFFORDS' work on these important issues. He is correct that the FY 2000 Commerce, Justice, State, the Judiciary and Related Agencies Appropriation Bill provides $100,000 for the establishment of a teen center in Colchester, Vermont and $100,000 to Prevent Child Abuse-VT to evaluate the SAFE–T program, a comprehensive child abuse prevention program for middle school communities.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE FUNDING

Mr. HARKIN. I would like to address a question to the Chairman of the Subcommittee, the Senator from New Hampshire, regarding funding for the Civil Division of the Justice Department.

In his State of the Union Address, President Clinton announced that the Federal Government intended to sue the Nation's tobacco companies to recover billions of dollars in smoking-related health care costs reimbursed by federal heatlh care programs. The Administration's FY 2000 budget requested $15 million in new resources for the Civil Division of the Justice Department and $5 million for the Fees and Expenses of Witnesses account to support this litigation effort.

Unfortunately, we were unable to provide the additional resources requested by the Administration for the Civil Division to carry out this task. While I regret that the Committee was unable to provide the new funds, it is my understanding that if the Justice Department deems this activity to be a high priority, base funding, including funds from the Fees and Expenses of Witnesses account, can be used for this purpose.

I ask the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Subcommittee if my understanding of the bill and the report language is correct?

Mr. GREGG. I agree with the Senator from Iowa. While the Committee was unable to provide new funding as the Administration requested, nothing in the bill or the report language prohibits the Department from using generally appropriated funds, including funds from the Fees and Expenses of Witnesses Account, to pursue this litigation if the Department concludes such litigation has merit under existing law.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I also agree with Senator HARKIN.

Mr. GRAHAM. I would like to address the Chairman of the Subcommittee. Does the Chairman also agree to strike the language on page 15 and on page 25 of Senate Report 106–76 relating to funding for tobacco litigation?

Mr. GREGG. That is correct.

COMMUNITY-BASED HABITAT RESTORATION PROGRAM

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, with the indulgence of my distinguished colleagues from New Hampshire and South Carolina, I would like to bring to their attention one of the Federal government's most successful restoration programs for marine and estuarine habitats—the Community-Based Habitat Restoration Program started by the National Marine Fisheries Service in 1995. This program promotes restoration of fisheries habitats around the country through voluntary partnerships among state and local governments, the conservation community, industry and businesses, and the academic community. Since its inception, more than 60 projects have been funded. There is a minimum one-to-one match required, but non-Federal parties typically contribute three dollars, and often as much as ten dollars, for every one spent by NMFS. Indeed, over the life of the program, Federal funding totaled $1.2 million, with $6.1 million raised in non-Federal funds.

Mr. GREGG. I am aware of the program and agree with the Senator from Rhode Island. It is an excellent program that supports worthwhile projects with limited funding. Last year, $450,000 was appropriated for the program.

Mr. CHAFEE. Unfortunately, S. 1217, as approved by the Committee, did not provide any funding for the program for FY 2000.

Mr. GREGG. That is correct. The Administration's budget proposal included the program as part of a larger and new initiative that did not receive any funds.

Mr. CHAFEE. I would like to request that the distinguished manager of the bill provide some funding for the program for FY 2000, so that it can continue to build on its past success. Numerous groups, in particular the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation and the FishAmerica Foundation, rely on grants from the program for their restoration efforts, and they would be hardpressed to continue these efforts if the program were not funded. As it is, about 145 projects in 1999 alone are going unfunded due to lack of funds, of which seven are in my own state of Rhode Island.

Mr. GREGG. I am pleased to consider the request of the Senator for Rhode Island. I have discussed this with my distinguished colleague from South Carolina, and we have agreed to a provision in the manager's amendment that directs NMFS to take $1 million from available funds within its budget and apply it to the Community-Based Habitat Restoration Program.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I agree with my distinguished colleagues from Rhode Island and New Hampshire, and am pleased to support the program. The manager's amendment ensures that the program will not only be continued, but will receive some additional funding.

Mr. CHAFEE. I wholeheartedly thank my colleagues from New Hampshire and South Carolina. It is always a pleasure working with them, especially on a worthwhile endeavor such as this.

ARMS CONTROL TREATY VERIFICATION

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I rise to engage in a colloquy with my colleague, the Subcommittee Chairman, regarding a specific funding provision in this bill within arms control treaty verification. I have been concerned for some time that our arms control efforts have been focused on treaty negotiation at the expense of treaty verification. The Committee report expressed the same concern. As a result, technological advances in arms control verification made at the national laboratories are not being fully applied or exploited. Accordingly, this bill provides $10,000,000 for this purpose. I want to be absolutely precise about what the Committee has directed in this area so I will quote from the Committee's report accompanying this bill. The report states the following: ''the Committee recommendation provides a $10,000,000 increase over fiscal year 1999 for verification technology.''

Mr. President, I think the plain meaning of this language could not be any clearer and I think my colleague the Subcommittee Chairman would agree with me. That is why I was puzzled to hear from my staff that, in informal conversations, State Department personnel have expressed confusion over how to interpret this language. If my understanding is correct, some in the State Department have expressed their belief that the $10,000,000 increase is intended to be applied first to the President's priorities for increased funding—costing approximately $8,000,000—and that only the remaining $2,000,000, left over after the President's priorities are funded, would be applied to the treaty verification work.

Mr. President, I certainly hope that the information I have about the interpretation of agency officials is incorrect. I certainly hope that the State Department would not disregard the abundantly clear direction provided by the Committee. I ask my colleague if my interpretation of the Committee's direction comports with his own, as Chairman of the Subcommittee.

Mr. GREGG. My colleague from Idaho is correct. In setting the funding priorities for the Bureau of Arms Control, within the State Department, the Committee has clearly directed that the $10,000,000 provided be used for the purpose of verification technology. The Committee further specifies that verification technology will include systemization of promising non-intrusive nuclear topographic techniques including the Fission Assay tomography System and the Gamma Neutron Assay Technique, which together will provide the ability to detect and characterize special nuclear materials while at the same time ensuring that design information is not revealed. The President's budget request is just that—a request for the Committee's consideration—but Congress, within its prerogatives, sets agency funding levels, and sets priorities within those levels.

Mr. CRAIG. I thank the distinguished Subcommittee Chairman. I am assured that his understanding of the Committee's intent for these funds is the same as mine.

FUNDING FOR THE SBA OFFICE OF ADVOCACY

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I commend my colleagues, Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS, for their initiative to allocate $2.5 million in the Fiscal Year 2000 Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations bill to fund the research function of the Office of Advocacy at the Small Business Administration. This is an increase of $1.1 million over the amount in the President's FY 2000 budget request for SBA.

The Office of Advocacy, which is headed by the Chief Counsel for Advocacy, performs an essential role acting as the eyes, ears, and voice from within the Federal bureaucracy on behalf of the small business community. One key responsibility carried out by the Office of Advocacy is the research it conducts on issues critical to small businesses. It is our understanding that $500,000 of the additional funds for the Advocacy research function are targeted toward the review of interpretative regulations issued by the Internal Revenue Service of the Department of the Treasury and rules issued by the Mine Safety and Health Administration of the Department of Labor.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I join my colleague and friend from Missouri, Senator BOND, in supporting the additional funding for the Office of Advocacy. This is a substantial increase over FY 1999 funding, which I believe is important for the ability of the Office of Advocacy to carry out its important mission on behalf of small business. Among others, those responsibilities include conducting research on a number of issues that are critical to small minority-owned and women-owned firms, and the cost of Federal regulations. I commend my colleagues, Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS, for their initiative in providing this increase.

We are also very concerned about the current staffing needs of the Office of Advocacy, which has declined significantly in recent years. In FY 1990, there were 70 full-time employees assigned to the Office of Advocacy. During the current fiscal year, it is my understanding the SBA Administrator has allocated 49 full-time staff for the Office of Advocacy.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I agree with the Senator KERRY about the failure of SBA to allocate adequate staff to the Office of Advocacy. This shortfall has placed an enormous burden on the ability of the Office to fulfill its mission. While I would encourage the SBA Administrator to allocate staff for the Office of Advocacy at the 1990 level, I realize they may not be able to make such an large increase in one year. Therefore, I would like my colleagues on the Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations Subcommittee, Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS, to clarify their intent for the increase in the FY 2000 budget for the Office of Advocacy.

Mr. GREGG. I appreciate the time and effort spent by Senator BOND and Senator KERRY working with the Subcommittee in developing the FY 2000 budget for SBA. The Subcommittee approved the increase in the budget for the Office of Advocacy to enable it to assess the economic contributions made by small businesses, to determine the impact of federal regulations and tax policies on small businesses, to dedicate sufficient resources to help carry out its responsibilities under the Regulatory Flexibility Act, and to undertake reviews of interpretative regulations issued by the Internal Revenue Service of the Department of the Treasury and rules issued by the Mine Safety and Health Administration of the Department of Labor.

It was further our intention to direct SBA to add 5 full-time equivalent employees to the Office of Advocacy for a total of 54 full-time employees for FY 2000. It is our belief this number of full-time staff is reasonable to address the burgeoning responsibilities of this important office.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I concur with my good friend and colleague from the New Hampshire on the use of the increased funds for the Office of Advocacy. In addition, it was our intent to add 5 full-time equivalent employees in the Office of Advocacy bringing the total for FY 2000 to 54 full-time employees.

Mr. GREGG. I want to make one further clarification regarding the $2.5 million earmarked for research by the Office of Advocacy. It was our intention that this amount be spent on research contracts and other initiatives by the Office of Advocacy. The Subcommittee did not intend that any of these funds would be transferred to the general operating account for the Agency nor would any of these funds be used to pay the costs of maintaining the full-tme staff of the Office of Advocacy.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I concur with the statement by Senator GREGG.

THE BUNKER HILL SITE

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I would like to engage in a discussion with the Senator from New Hampshire, the distinguished Chairman of the Commerce, Justice, State and Judiciary Appropriations Subcommittee concerning a situation that exists in my home state of Idaho.

Mr. GREGG. I would be pleased to engage in such a discussion with my friend the senior Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. this past weekend Senator CRAPO, Congresswoman CHENOWETH and I conducted a public meeting in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho where federal, state, local, tribal officials and citizens give statements and responded to questions concerning the federal, tribal and state governments' involvement in a Superfund site in North Idaho known as the Bunker Hill site.

To date there has been approximately $200 million spent on cleanup. Significant progress has been made, but there is a great deal of debate going on between the parties concerning what other areas in the Basin need to be included in the cleanup. I believe the State of Idaho, the Coeur d'Alene Tribe and the federal agencies can work out these questions and resolve the conflicts that have gone on over this issue in the Coeur d'Alene Basin for over a decade.

I feel the Department of Justice, Idaho and the Nation as a whole would be well served if the DOJ and the other parties involved in litigation were to work among themselves parties to resolve the issues rather than to continue to litigate.

Mr. GREGG. The Senator raises excellent points. The resources of the National are better served in working to resolve these types of problems rather than to continue in a litigation strategy for years and years. All parties should work to resolve the problems in the Coeur d'Alene Basin and the Committee will work with the Senator from Idaho to see if further direction is appropriate in the Conference Report.

DEVELOPMENT OF A HABITAT CONSERVATION PLAN

Mr. BURNS. The Senate is accepting my amendment to allocate $250,000 for the development of a Habitat Conservation Plan as part of the Idaho and Montana Coldwater Fishery Enhancement Program. This funding is imperative in the preparation of a voluntary Habitat Conservation Plan aimed at saving our native fish populations in the two states. As you know, we are at the upper end of the Columbia River drainage and the impacts seen on salmon in that drainage are interrelated to our native trout as well.

As the debate raged on about what exactly was impacting the native fish populations in the lower Columbia system, those of us in the upper reaches of the system were doing our best to ensure that enough water was sent downstream at the appropriate time to help the native fish as much as possible. What we have learned from this practice is that the health of our bull trout population is linked to that of the salmon. Fewer salmon returning from the ocean to spawn placed concern on the health of the entire river system, and the traditional actions taken to help one species sometimes had negative impacts on others. As is commonly the case with these types of issues, we didn't always realize the interrelation until some negative impacts had already taken place.

Making these funds available for the Idaho and Montana Coldwater Fishery Enhancement Program will help us address more of the survival needs of native fish species in the Columbia Basin. Stabilizing the bull trout population and developing this plan will allow us more flexibility in helping the salmon populations recover as well. Senator, I hope you will join me in clarifying where this money is to be directed and to reaffirm the value of developing a state-led voluntary Habitat Conservation Plan for bull trout in Idaho and Montana.

Mr. GREGG. The Idaho and Montana Coldwater Fishery Enhancement Program is an important element in the concerted effort to help native fish throughout the Pacific Northwest. This year's appropriations bills place a priority on stabilizing the native fish populations throughout the region, and this program fills a niche previously left unmet by other recovery efforts.

SCAAP FUNDING

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I would like to inquire of my friend, the Senator from New Hampshire, about funding in this measure for the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program, popularly known as the SCAAP.

As the Senator knows, states and localities, especially those such as California with high immigrant populations, face extraordinary costs in incarcerating illegal aliens who have committed serious crimes in the United States and sentenced for their felony offenses.

The burden on states and localities which incarcerate criminal aliens continues to grow. In California, for example, during February 1997, there were 17,904 criminal alien inmates with INS holds on them. This rose to 19,355 in 1998. At the end of February, 1999, there were 21,792 alien inmates in the California state correctional system who have INS holds.

Congress appropriated $585 million for SCAAP in fiscal year 1999 to help reimburse state and local governments for the costs of incarcerating illegal aliens.

Given the increasing numbers of illegal aliens that California and other states must incarcerate, one would reasonably expect that funding for this important program would be increased in fiscal year 2000.

But it is my understanding, Mr. President, that the bill reported by the committee actually makes dramatic cuts in federal funding for SCAAP, reducing the level of funding by more than 80 percent to only $100 million.

Given the urgency of the need and the fact that all 50 states, the District of Columbia, two territories and 244 localities received SCAAP funding in the most recent reimbursement period, I would like to inquire of my friend from New Hampshire if there is something that can be done to increase funding in this bill for SCAAP to a more appropriate level.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I wish to associate myself with the excellent comments of my good friend, the Senator from California, and also look forward to working with the chairman and ranking member of the subcommittee to resolve the funding disparity in the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program (SCAAP).

Before I begin my comments about this important program and the level of funding in the Senate Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations bill, I want to state my full support for what I have been told will be a $585 million funding level for SCAAP in the House FY 2000 bill. I would also like to insert for the record a copy of a letter from the U.S./Mexico Border Counties Coalition (which consists of 18 county governments located on the Southwestern border) that describes why an adequate funding level for SCAAP is so important to these border ares, many of which are facing very difficult fiscal situations.

Through the Crime Control Act of 1994, the Congress created SCAAP to reimburse states and localities for the costs they incur incarcerating criminal illegal aliens. Such costs, it has been made clear, are the responsibility of the federal government. SCAAP is authorized at $650 million, although total expenditures of the states exceed $2 billion per year. Though the financial burden of criminal illegal aliens overwhelms the criminal justice budget of many states and localities, SCAAP has never even been allocated its full authorization. In 1996 and 1997, SCAAP was allocated $500 million and last year, states and localities received a total of $585 million.

Frankly, the Congress would be fully justified in increasing the authorization level to $2 billion annually. In 1998, the taxpayers of Arizona spent $38 million incarcerating criminal illegal aliens, including $26.8 million in state facilities, $406,000 in Cochise County, $9 million in Maricopa County, $136,000 in Mohave County, $534,000 in Pinal County, $450,000 in Santa Cruz County, and $401,000 in Yuma County. In turn, the state received a reimbursement of $15.1 million in SCAAP funds—less than half of what Arizona should have gotten, and that was when SCAAP was funded at $585 million overall.

To reduce the total 1999 SCAAP fund by more than 80 percent for fiscal year 2000, to $100 million, is absolutely unacceptable. Should funding be reduced to $100 million, all 50 states, D.C., and the 244 local jurisdictions, which currently receive 39 cents on the dollar, would be reimbursed a mere seven cents on the dollar, even though such costs are a clear federal responsibility. This situation is especially disturbing, considering incarceration is only one component of the overwhelming cost incurred by states and localities when processing criminal illegal aliens—and one for which the federal government promised to provide reimbursement in the Crime Control Act of 1994.

In Santa Cruz County, Arizona, the overall costs of both processing and incarcerating illegal criminal aliens takes up 39 percent of the county's criminal justice budget. And that is just one county in my state. The combined costs to jurisdictions all over the country are staggering, and the SCAAP program only reimburses states for the incarceration portion of these onerous costs. Unless Congress appropriates sufficient funds for SCAAP, at the very least, Arizona and other state and local governments will continue to shoulder billions of dollars of the expense of incarcerating and processing criminal illegal aliens.

Mr. President, I very much hope that Senators GREGG, HOLLINGS, FEINSTEIN and I can work to resolve these issues before this bill is signed into law.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I would like to associate myself with the comments expressed by my friends, the Senator from California and the Senator from Arizona, and commend them for their efforts on the extremely important issue.

The State Criminal Alien Assistance Program provides much needed financial assistance to New York State and many of our great state's cities and counties, as they try to grapple with the significant costs of incarcerating criminal aliens. In fiscal year 1998, New York and its localities received a total of $96.4 million in SCAAP funding—with New York City securing the largest single grant for a locality in the nation.

I am very disappointed and disturbed that the bill reported by the committee would reduce SCAAP funding to $100 million for fiscal year 2000, This could translate to a $80 million cut in assistance for New York: a $46 million cut for the state itself, $27.7 million for New York City, 4 million for Nassau County, $1 million for Suffolk County, $800,000 for Westchester County, $32,000 for Montgomery County, $25,500 for Albany County, $19,500 for Putnam County, and smaller amounts for Cortland County.

Cuts of this magnitude would leave New York to assume a difficult and heavy burden for what is very much a federal responsibility. I join my friends from California and Arizona in asking our friend from New Hampshire whether something could be done to restore SCAAP funding to a more acceptable level.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I thank my friends from California, Arizona, and New York for their excellent observations. I know that they have been tireless in their efforts to secure both an end to illegal immigration and to ensure that the federal government assume a share of the financial responsibility for its inability to control illegal immigration.

I know, as well, that the senator from California and the senator from Arizona were two of the principal authors of the SCAAP program when it was created by the 1994 Crime bill, and that they both worked very hard to help secure the $585 million which was appropriated last year and in fiscal year 1998 for this important program.

Knowing of the great need for adequate funding for SCAAP, it pains me that the Committee was unable to fund it at the level it deserves. I assure the senators that I will make it a high priority during the conference between the House and Senate to secure adequate funding for this program, that does so much for all of our states that are burdened by the costs of incarcerating illegal aliens.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I concur with my colleague from New Hampshire. I understand the importance of this funding for states impacted by high rates of criminal alien incarceration and I am hopeful we can provide an adequate funding level for SCAAP during conference.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I thank the Chairman and Ranking Member for their encouraging words. As I am sure they know, the SCAAP reimbursements provided in prior years did not nearly cover the costs states and localities incurred to incarcerate illegal aliens in their jurisdictions.

In fiscal year 1998, the last year for which such cost figures are available, the cost for states and localities amounted to $1.7 billion. Thus, last year's funding level covered only 30 percent of actual costs.

A cut along the magnitude of that which is included in the Committee bill would be absolutely devastating. I understand the House CJS Subcommittee is recommending an FY00 SCAAP funding level of $585 million. I will work closely with the Chairman and Ranking Member and others in both bodies during the weeks to come to assure that the conference on this bill adequately funds this program.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I would like to associate myself with the remarks of my colleagues with regard to the issue of funding for the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program (SCAAP). SCAAP is a vital reimbursement program for states like mine that assists in the significant cost of incarcerating criminal aliens.

Although securing the border is the responsibility of the federal government, states and localities have had to bear the costs associated with incarcerating aliens should they enter the criminal justice system. In previous years, Congress has recognized their burden and worked to secure as much as $585 million for this critical program. Even at that level, less than 40% of Texas' costs of criminal alien incarceration have been reimbursed. Cutting SCAAP by over 80% as proposed in this measure would result in a reimbursement of only about 7% of the total cost to the State of Texas. It is estimated that the State of Texas would receive less than $7 million, and Texas counties would share in less than $3 million. Dallas County would receive less than $200,000 despite enduring costs of over $2.5 million; the County of El Paso, with costs exceeding $2.6 million, would be reimbursed only about $200,000; and Harris County, with costs nearing $14 million, would receive less than $1 million. Mr. President, this is the same Harris County that last week took custody in its county jail of the accused railway murderer, Angel Maturino-Resendez. In this case, Harris County is forced to assume the costs of detaining Maturino-Resendez, who is alleged to have repeatedly entered this country illegally and further alleged to have committed a string of stunningly violent murders across the United States. There could not be a more graphic illustration of why we need to support the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program, so that our cities, counties and States are not left alone to pay the costs of the Federal government's failure to protect the border.

I pledge to work with the chairman to see that adequate funding can be restored to this vital program and appreciate the Senator from California bringing this important matter to the floor.

THE HARBOR GARDENS ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT PROJECT

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I have sought recognition to express my support for the Harbor Gardens economic development project. I have requested funding in the Economic Development Administration (EDA) account for this worthwhile initiative in the Manchester neighborhood of Pittsburgh.

The mission of Harbor Gardens is to continue to help in rebuilding the economic, physical, social, human, and cultural infrastructure of one of Pittsburgh's most distressed communities. The project consists of a state-of-the-art urban greenhouse for the benefit of students and city residents. Horticulture is the fastest growing segment of agri-business, and therefore, the skills which program participants gain can translate into well-paying jobs. The project will ensure the education of its graduates in the horticultural industry, including advance greenhouse production technology and landscaping techniques. The Business and Industrial Development Corporation is partnering with the Pennsylvania State University, the School District of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh Civic Garden Center, Phipps Conservatory and Botanical Center, Zuma Canyon Orchids, and Pittsburgh Cut Flowers. Rare plants will be grown to be purchased for resale, and tours, seminars, plant auctions, and festivals will all contribute to maximizing revenues.

Federal funding crucial to the completion of this innovative approach to economic development, and an EDA grant will play an important role in meeting that federal commitment.

I look forward to working with the Chairman of the Subcommittee, Senator GREGG, to ensure that this project receives funding.

Mr. GREGG. I welcome the comments by the Senator from Pennsylvania and look forward to continuing to work with him on this request. I am well aware of the importance he places on the Harbor Gardens project. I would strongly urge the EDA to consider a proposal by the Business and Industrial Development Corporation within applicable procedures and guidelines and provide a grant if warranted.

THE BYRNE GRANT

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I rise to enter into a colloquy with the distinguished Chairman of the subcommittee, Senator GREGG, regarding the importance of the Byrne Grant.

Mr. GREGG. I understand the Senator's interest in this area.

Mr. KYL. I thank Senator GREGG for entering this colloquy with me about a program which is particularly vital to the law enforcement personnel in my own state of Arizona. As you know, the Byrne Grant is a key source of federal financial assistance for state and local drug law enforcement efforts. It funds a wide variety of activities ranging from task forces and drug education to apprehension and prosecution. In Arizona, numerous counties and agencies rely on Byrne Grant funds to pay the salaries of nearly 300 law enforcement and prosecution personnel; rural counties especially benefit from Bryne Grant funds for their law enforcement activities.

Mr. GREGG. I am aware of the Byrne grant program and its importance, as well as the fact that the Administration's budget cut Byrne by over $90 million, not to mention the Administration's ''zero-funding'' of the Local Law Enforcement Block Grant—which this Subcommittee funded at $400 million. As Chairman of the subcommittee that provides funds for law enforcement, I am intimately familiar with the need to fund effective and successful law enforcement programs. I join with the Senator from Arizona in recognizing the importance of the Byrne Grant. As this bill moves to conference, I look forward to working with you to address your concerns.

Mr. KYL. Once again, I thank the distinguished Chairman.

WARDEN OFFENDER NOMITORING SYSTEM

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank Senator GREGG and his staff for their tireless efforts on this legislation. I believe this legislation contains some important steps in a number of areas, including law enforcement. At this time, I would like to engage the Chairman in a discussion with regard to a new technology developed by Capstone Technologies, a company located in my state of Alabama. I think it is essential that we explore new areas of technology that can increase the effectiveness of law enforcement.

Mr. GREGG. I thank the Senator from Alabama for his interest in this legislation and in improving our law enforcement efforts. I agree that we should explore new techniques that can improve the capabilities of the law enforcement community.

Mr. SESSIONS. Capstone Technologies developed the Warden Offender Monitoring System to aid in monitoring offenders that have been put under residential detention. The Warden is a biometric, three dimensional monitoring system using voice verification, personal history inquiry and voice recording. The Warden uses computer voice verification to identify offenders placed on residential detention. The Warden monitors the offender using a touch-tone phone, with no new equipment to install or maintain. Random calls are made by the computer to the home of the offender during the hours sanctioned by the court. The system uses the ''voiceprint'', which is recorded initially, to identify the offender on the phone. All calls are monitored and all violations identified by the computer are followed by a personal call from the staff to ensure that there are no false violations recorded. The Warden can also detect when an offender is under the influence of alcohol or other drugs. If the computer detects certain characteristics of intoxication it will report a violation immediately to the supervisor with a recommendation to conduct a sobriety test. I believe this technology could be an extremely useful tool for law enforcement. One specific area in which the Warden system might be very helpful would be in monitoring juveniles. By implementing a versatile residential detention system, we can avoid having to place our youth in jail, and possibly help parents and the individual gain control of his life before it's too late.

Mr. GREGG. I agree that this technology could have useful applications to our law enforcement system. I look forward to working with the Senator from Alabama in the future as we explore technological developments and other useful tools that can aid our law enforcement community.

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank the Chairman again for his leadership and for his interest in this important issue. I look forward to working with him on this new technology in the months to come.

THE ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION OF THE DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, Chairman of the Commerce, Justice, State, and Judiciary Appropriations Subcommittee, for joining me to discuss the urgent need to provide funding for defense conversion in the greater St. Louis area. Over 7,000 Missourians are in danger of losing their jobs if the F–15 production line shuts down at the Boeing plant in St. Louis. These are high-paying, high-skilled jobs, and I am committed to doing everything I can to help these hard-working Missourians find other sources of employment in the greater St. Louis area.

These workers have helped keep America strong through their work on the F–15 and other military systems that are so integral to our national security. Their skill and knowledge are a national asset—a national asset which I think should be preserved through keeping the F–15 line open. I have worked toward that end, and Senator BOND and I successfully secured funding for additional F–15 purchases in the Defense Appropriations bill last month. But hundreds of F–15 workers will lose their jobs even with additional purchases of the plane, and those workers should be assisted in the transition process.

The distinguished Senator from New Hampshire is well aware of the Economic Development Administration (EDA) and the good work EDA does to facilitate economic adjustment in so many parts of the country.

Mr. GREGG. I am well aware of the EDA and the economic adjustment programs it funds, including substantial work in areas of the country impacted by defense downsizing.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I appreciate the Senator's reference to the defense conversion work performed by the EDA. In fact, EDA has assisted St. Louis before, as the regional economy has adjusted from defense layoffs over the past decade. St. Louis has one of the most effective and highly respected economic adjustment offices in the country, as the Defense and Commerce Departments would attest. The city has a demonstrated track record of using federal dollars effectively and is well-prepared to use EDA funding to meet the current, pressing needs of these F–15 workers. I would like to ask the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire if he will work with me in the coming months to address the defense conversion needs in the St. Louis area.

Mr. GREGG. I am aware of the good work St. Louis has done in the past when defense downsizing has affected the city's economy. As Chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee overseeing funding for the Commerce Department and the EDA, I will work with the distinguished Senator from Missouri to assist the city.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I thank the Senator for his kind remarks and his willingness to work with me to address this important matter in Missouri.

RAPID RESPONSE SYSTEM FOR YOUNG CHILDREN EXPOSED TO VIOLENCE

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I want to bring to the attention of the Senate Maine's Community Alliance to End Violence Against Children. The Alliance, which includes the Maine State Police, Catholic Charities Maine, and the Passamaquoddy Tribe at Pleasant Point, will improve and expand the coordination of services for preventing and reducing the negative impact that exposure to violence has on young children. As my distinguished colleague from New Hampshire is aware, rural regions have unique problems coordinating and delivering services to children exposed to violence.

Mr. GREGG. I am pleased the Appropriations Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State, and the Judiciary directed the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention to examine the proposal for a Rapid Response Program for children living in Hancock and Washington Counties and to provide a grant for the program if warranted.

Ms. COLLINS. Downeast Maine is particularly in need of help. Washington County, for example, is a large rural area in which chronic poverty, unemployment, substance abuse and domestic violence result in far too many children being exposed to violence. Currently there is no program in these counties that offers adequate intervention and treatment to address the harmful aftereffects of exposure to violence. The Alliance will develop a system through which existing resources can be coordinated to provide appropriate and timely responses to the emotionally and physically damaging situations children often face. There is strong evidence that a rapid response team, intervening on behalf of children in crisis situations, can mitigate the long term consequences of trauma.

Mr. GREGG. I thank the Senator from Maine for her efforts to address this problem. Data from urban areas have shown that a rapid response to trauma in children does reduce the development of anti-social behavior in the long term. However, there are no data from rural communities. The demonstration project that the Alliance proposes can be a model for service delivery in other rural areas and appears to be an excellent candidate for Department of Justice funds.

Ms. COLLINS. I am sure that many rural communities will benefit from the work of the Maine Alliance. Its plan has been inspired by the work of Dr. Carl Bell, President of the Community Mental Health Council in Chicago, Illinois. Dr. Bell's analysis of the effects of trauma and the needs of African-American youth in Chicago can be applied to the predominantly white and Native-American youth in eastern, rural Maine and ultimately youth in any rural area.

Mr. GREGG. I want to assure the Senator from Maine that I understand the importance of the work of the Maine Community Alliance to End Violence Against Children and its potential significance as a model for rural areas across the nation.

Ms. COLLINS. I thank the Chairman and the Subcommittee for their support and look forward to working with you to implement this project.

CONSOLIDATION OF ALL FIRST RESPONDER TRAINING AT THE CDP

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I would like to engage the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire in a brief colloquy to discuss the merits of consolidating training for our Nation's First Responders.

Would the Senator agree consolidation of all Department of Justice first responder training under the Center for domestic Preparedness at Fort McClellan, Alabama would significantly improve the quality and level of first responder domestic preparedness training?

Mr. GREGG. Is Consolidation of training in one organization really necessary?

Mr. SESSIONS. Yes. Stakeholders have repeatedly stated the need for a single authoritarian point of contact for training information. Also the June 2, 1999 Report to Congress specifically recognized the requirement: ''A centrally coordinated and standardized national training program is needed to ensure an effective, integrated response and to minimize redundancy in training programs.''

Mr. GREGG. What would be the advantage of this consolidation?

Mr. SESSIONS. OSLDPS approach to responder training is somewhat fragmented. The CDP currently oversees most DoJ training. However, in October, 2000, DoD will transfer responsibility for its Nunn-Lugar City Training program to DoJ. Current plans are to manage this new program out of OSLDPS in Washington, DC office. Consolidation of all DoJ training at the CDP would centralize all training in one organization providing a more effective, efficient use of resources.

Mr. GREGG. How much City Training will remain once the programs transfers to DoJ?

Mr. SESSIONS. Of the original 120 cities scheduled to receive training, only 25 will be completely finished by October 2000. Approximately 65 cities will be in some phase of training. This is a very large and complex training program requiring extensive coordination and attention to detail.

Mr. GREGG. Does the CDP have the expertise to execute such a large training program?

Mr. SESSIONS. Yes. The CDP Director and his key staff have extensive experience in planning, coordinating and executing large training programs with DoJ, DoD and other agencies. The staff also has expertise in the first responder disciplines, such as fire, law enforcement and emergency medical. The CDP is also closer and perhaps, more attuned to first responder issues.

Mr. GREGG. What is the relative experience of the OSLDPS key staff?

Mr. SESSIONS. While they have some experience in coordinating programs within the interagency arena, their primary experience has been in the area of grant formulation and execution. no one on the OSLDPS staff currently has any experience in executing a training program this large.

Mr. GREGG. Are there other advantages to consolidating DoJ first responder training at CDP?

Mr. SESSIONS. Yes. Placing one organization in charge of all DoJ training has several advantages:

It centralizes all training and course development, curriculum standardization, assessment and instructor certification in one organization;

It provides more effective oversight of training and related programs;

Eliminates course overlap and course redundancy;

It facilitates coordination of training issues in the interagency community; and

It provides a single point of contact ''one stop shopping'' for state and local responders for all training issues.

Mr. GREGG. Will this consolidation save money and manpower?

Mr. SESSIONS. Dual-hatting the Director of the CDP as the OSLDPS Director of Training will eliminate the need for a large training coordination and oversight function/staff in Washington, DC.

Mr. GREGG. Why is this so important?

Mr. SESSIONS. Consolidation of all training at the CDP is important because it will provide a single authoritative source for training and related technical assistance and information. To this end, I am convinced that the National Guard should establish its central distance learning facility at Fort McClellan to leverage these training requirements for the 11 million First Responders in America.

Mr. GREGG. I would like to say to my good friend from Alabama that I agree with his views on training consolidation at the Center for Domestic Preparedness, and I appreciate his time and attention to this important issue. I look forward to working with him to fully explore this issue with Justice Department officials in the coming months. I would hope they will move aggressively to implement a National Training Strategy.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I thank my colleague for participating in this colloquy and for his support on this issue. I, too, look forward to working with my friend from New Hampshire and other colleagues on this important issue.

THE REPEAL OF SECTION 110 OF THE 1996 IMMIGRATION LAW

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss the important issue of a visa entry-exit control system with the Senator from Michigan, Mr. ABRAHAM, the Chairman of the Immigration Subcommittee, and Senator GREGG, the Chairman of the Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations Subcommittee.

Senator ABRAHAM, you and I and other Members who represent the Northern regions of our country have been working for over 3 years now to repeal Section 110 of the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (P.L. 104–208). Section 110 of this 1996 Immigration law would require a recording and identification system to be implemented to document the arrival and departure of all non-U.S. citizens at all ports of entry in the U.S., including those entry points along the U.S. border with Canada.

Mr. ABRAHAM. The Senator is correct. Those of us who represent states bordering Canada know well the immense volume of tourism and trade that passes through our states from our neighbor to the North. The implementation of Section 110 would cause gross delays to all those crossing the Northern border from Canada, and ultimately have a disastrous impact on the Northern economy as critical trade and travel routes are slowed. It would also harm states along the Southern border as well.

Ms. COLLINS. In my State of Maine, this new border policy would have the most immediate impact on border communities such as Calais, Houlton, Madawaska, and Jackman. Businesses in these communities rely on Canadian consumers to stay in business. Moreover, the impact on trade, including lumber and tourism, would extend beyond these communities and reverberate across Maine and through the Northern economy as a whole.

Those of us who represent states along the Canadian border know intimately how deep the shared ties between the U.S. and Canada truly are. Our relationship has included disagreements over the years, but our Canadian neighbors are part of our family—a fact that is literally and figuratively true for many Mainers whose extended families live across the border in Canada.

Mr. ABRAHAM. Our border policy with Canada has served us well, and is a symbol of the close relationship between our two countries. The border with Canada is the longest continuous open border in the world, and our close friendship should not be clouded by a needless bureaucratic exercise. Moreover, numerous jobs, jobs held by Americans in Michigan and elsewhere, would be lost if Section 110 is implemented. The effect on tourism and on just-in-time deliveries would inhibit the flow of goods and people in a way that would hurt the economics of many states.

Ms. COLLINS. Largely because of your efforts, Senator ABRAHAM, Section 110 has yet to be substantively implemented at land borders and sea ports of entry. Last year, the FY99 Omnibus Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act (105–277) delayed the implementation of Section 110 on land and sea ports of entry until March 31, 2001, and included language stating that the entry/exit control system must ''not significantly disrupt trade, tourism, or other legitimate cross-border traffic at land border points of entry''. And in today's Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations bill, Section 110 is repealed outright. I salute your efforts on behalf of this very important measure which will benefit both of our states and the northern economy as a whole.

Mr. ABRAHAM. I thank the Senator from Maine for her remarks, and for the important work she has done to repeal this measure. As the overwhelming vote nearly one year ago illustrates, there is near unanimity in the Senate on this issue, and I salute the Senator from New Hampshire for his outstanding ongoing support, and his willingness to insert provisions addressing this problem into the underlying Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations Bill.

Mr. GREGG. I am pleased to support the measure to repeal Section 110 of the 1996 Immigration bill. I too believe strongly that the border policy we currently enjoy with the country of Canada should not be disturbed. I will continue to work in Conference to see that this matter is finally put to rest.

Mr. ABRAHAM. Thank you, Senator GREGG, your efforts are deeply appreciated by the American people.

Ms. COLLINS. Thank you to both Senators for their leadership on this issue, and for joining me in this colloquy.

DRUG ENFORCEMENT ADMINISTRATION

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, as the Senate reaches the conclusion of the Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations bill, I would like to speak a moment about an important US law enforcement agency funded in this bill—an agency dedicated to keeping drugs off our streets. I am specifically talking about the Drug Enforcement Administration.

Mr. President, in 1998, the DEA seized more drugs and arrested more traffickers than ever before. With limited funding, and unlimited hard work and dedication, DEA human resources are a vital source not just for our law enforcement activities, but for other nations as well. The DEA does its job without a heavy reliance on big ticket items like ships and aircraft. On the contrary, this agency relies primarily on manpower. Their manpower and skill are what makes them such an effective organization both inside and outside our borders.

Fortunately after 2 years of almost stagnant funding levels, the Republican Congress has been working to increase its investment in the DEA. Last year Congress provided the DEA with $1.4 billion in Fiscal Year 1999, an increase of roughly $60 million. This increase was possible largely through legislation Senator COVERDELL and I introduced and Congress passed last year—the Western Hemisphere Drug Elimination Act. However, we need to do more.

Congress should continue its support of the DEA. Increasing our investment in DEA, which will in turn increase the strength and ability of our counter-narcotics strategy, is the only way to continue to increase the numbers of drug arrests and seizures.

Let me give you some examples of where more DEA resources have and can continue to make a difference. Mr. President, I have visited Haiti numerous times and have visited the Dominican Republic as well. It is truly unfortunate that roughly twenty per cent of the drugs entering the United States travel through these two countries. The Haiti-Dominican Republic transit route has become increasingly popular for drug traffickers because both governments do not present a real threat to drug traffickers. What makes matters worse is that our resources devoted to preventing drugs from reaching this island have been minimal at best.

When I visited Haiti back in March 1998, I was astonished to find out that there was only one DEA agent stationed in Haiti. When I visited the Dominican Republic on the same trip, I was disappointed to find out there were only two DEA agents stationed there. How can our government keep drugs from entering our country if we do not make a commitment to seize drugs along a major international route on the drug trafficking highway? When I returned from that trip, I worked with the DEA and the Attorney General to get additional agents assigned to both countries. I received a commitment to station seven DEA agents in Haiti and six agents in the Dominican Republic. The process has been slow in getting the agents to Haiti—because of language training in particular—but the increase in agents has already made a tremendous difference.

Since that trip back in March 1998, I have returned to Haiti and the Dominican Republic, and visited with the DEA agents stationed there. As a result of our increased DEA presence on the island, the DEA, in conjunction with the US Customs and with the Haiti and Dominican governments, has pursued several counter-drug operations. Their presence also has helped increase cooperation between the two nations.

I had the opportunity to visit the Haitian-Dominican border last November to observe a DEA-Customs counter-drug initiative called Operation Genesis. Until that time, there was virtually no cooperation between the two nations at the border. This lack of cooperation is a major reason why the island became a popular drug trafficking route. The objective of Operation Genesis was to help both countries better coordinate and cooperate with each other to prevent drugs from transiting the border.

The enhanced Haitian-Dominican cooperation through overall DEA efforts has proven successful. For example, last February, the Haitian National Police in coordination with the DEA, arrested relatives of the Coneo family—a well known Colombian drug trafficking family with connections in Haiti and the Dominican Republic. Heriberto Coneo's wife, son and his brother-in-law were arrested in Haiti for carrying false Dominican passports. Haiti later expelled them to the Dominican Republic, where they were arrested and placed in prison. This was a major victory.

Another example of this enhanced cooperation was the recent arrest of a Haitian National Police Division Chief who had fled to the Dominican Republic after his involvement in the deaths of more than 11 Haitians. The coordinated efforts by the DEA with these two countries resulted in the Dominicans arresting the police official and expelling him to Haiti.

The DEA also has helped train the Haitian National Police counter-drug unit. With DEA assistance, our Embassy in Port-au-Prince reports that the Haitian police has seized more than $1 million in money being smuggled out of the country in large sums.

I also have seen the DEA in action in South America, specifically in Peru and in Colombia. I walked through poppy fields in Neiva, Colombia where I saw first hand the source of the serious heroin problem plaguing our country today. We were in a region only 20 miles from the Colombian demilitarized zone. The DEA has been instrumental in working and training the Colombian National Police to seize drugs and arrest drug lords.

While, I have described a few success stories, I need to remind my colleagues that the DEA is producing incredible returns on a very small investment.

Imagine what more the DEA could do if they had more personnel. The fact is the DEA simply does not have the resources to meet their demanding and necessary tasks. With more resources, border initiatives like the one in Haiti and the Dominican Republic could be expanded, allowing for a greater reduction in the heavy trafficking that occurs between the two countries. With more resources, additional DEA agents can be sent overseas to assist law enforcement officials in learning ways to stop drug trafficking. That kind of investment—to build anti-drug operations in other countries—will build even more barriers to drugs outside our borders.

Mr. President, last March, Senator COVERDELL and I, along with a number of our colleagues—Republican and Democrat—sent a letter to the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations Subcommittee, Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS, calling for building on this year's investment in the DEA and requesting additional funding for 300 additional DEA agents, analysts and support personnel, and for other DEA initiatives. This request would enable the DEA to carry out specific initiatives outlined in the Western Hemisphere Drug Elimination Act, a three year initiative for enhanced international drug eradication and interdiction efforts.

I recognize the serious budget challenges facing this Subcommittee and other Appropriations subcommittees as well. Chairman GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS were extremely gracious in accommodating our request. Specifically, the Subcommittee earmarked $17.5 million for new DEA agents, analysts, and support staff for both international and domestic posts.

Mr. President, this is an important first step. It is my hope that as this bill moves to a conference with the House, the conferees will work to increase our overall investment in the DEA, so that specific priority requirements are not funded at the expense of other important DEA programs.

Again, Mr. President, since 1995 Congress has made great progress last year to increase our investment to revive our international counter narcotics strategy. Last year's passage of the Western Hemisphere Drug Elimination Act was the latest example of this progress. Not only did Congress pass legislation, but we also provided an $800 million down payment for the bill.

Unfortunately, the Clinton Administration is not showing a similar commitment. The President's Budget for Fiscal Year 2000 provided zero funding for provisions outlined in the Western Hemisphere Drug Elimination Act. In fact, it calls for more than $100 million less than our total anti-drug funding for 1999. The Coast Guard received zero funding for the acquisition of air/maritime assets; the Drug Enforcement Agency received zero funding for new agents; our Customs Service received zero funding for procurement of maritime/air assets and zero increases for U.S. Customs inspectors. This Administration has not demonstrated a commitment to fund a real, coherent international counter-drug strategy. What good is it to have tough drug laws here at home and a tough international counter narcotics policy at and beyond the border if you do not have the resources to enforce them?

Mr. President, I have repeatedly expressed my concerns that the Administration has not been doing enough in the fight against drugs. When the Clinton Administration took over, the DEA workforce dropped from 7,277 in 1992 to 7,066 in 1994. However, since the Republican takeover of Congress in 1994, we have fought to boost the workforce from 7,066 to more than 9,000. The Administration's latest action, or lack of action, only reinforces my belief that more can be done. There has been an increasing number of reports of outrageous amounts of drugs being distributed throughout our country that originates internationally and domestically. Why is that? Only the federal government can devote the resources to seize drugs outside our country. It is unfortunate that the Clinton Administration continues to fail to fully support this exclusive federal responsibility.

With increased DEA funding, we have the opportunity to eliminate one of the most glaring omissions in the President's budget. It is my hope that we will continue to search for additional funding to the DEA so that they can hire these new agents, analysts, and support personnel without having to sacrifice other important programs. These agents would work hand-in-hand with international law enforcement authorities to provide the intelligence, expertise, and even the manpower required to arrest the drug traffickers.

Mr. President, I have seen the DEA at work throughout the region. The agency is a group of hard-working dedicated individuals who risk their lives to create a healthy environment for democracies to flourish, while at the same time get the drugs off the streets of America. They do so much good with the limited resources they have. It is now time for us to pass this amendment, give the DEA additional resources and once again watch the number of arrests and seizures increase causing the flow of narcotics into our country to sharply decrease.

Mr. President, it is time to renew drug interdiction efforts; time to provide the necessary personnel and equipment to our drug-enforcement agencies, and time to make the issue a national priority once again.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I want to thank the managers of this bill for their hard work in putting forth annual legislation which provides federal funding for numerous vital programs. The Senate will soon vote to adopt the Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations Bill for the Fiscal Year 2000. I intend to support this measure because it provides funding for fighting crime, enhancing drug enforcement, and responding to threats of terrorism. This further addresses the shortcomings of the immigration process, funds the operation of the judicial system, facilitates commerce throughout the United States, and fulfills the needs of the State Department and various other agencies.

For many years, I have tried to cut wasteful and unnecessary spending from the annual appropriations bills—with only limited success, I must admit. Nonetheless, I will continue my fight to curb wasteful pork-barrel spending, and I regret that I must again come forward this year to object to the millions of unrequested, low-priority, wasteful spending in this bill and its accompanying report. This year's bill has over $1 billion in pork-barrel spending. This is a disgracefully huge increase over last year's FY 99 Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations Bill, which contained $361 million in pork-barrel spending. $1.2 billion is an unacceptable amount of money to spend on low-priority, unrequested, wasteful projects. In short, Congress must curb its appetite for such unbridled spending.

CBO projects that we will have close to a trillion dollar budget surplus over the next 10 years. However, if we continue with our current levels of wasteful spending, these budget surpluses may not occur. Pork-barrel spending today not only robs well-deserving programs of much needed funds, it also jeopardizes social security reform, potential tax cuts, and our fiscal well-being into the next century.

The multitude of unrequested earmarks buried in this proposal will undoubtedly further burden the American taxpayers. While the amounts associated with each individual earmark may not seem extravagant, taken together, they represent a serious diversion of taxpayers' hard-earned dollars to low priority programs at the expense of numerous programs that have undergone the appropriate merit-based selection process. Congress and the American public must be made aware of the magnitude of wasteful spending endorsed by this body.

I have compiled a lengthy list of the numerous add-ons, earmarks, and special exemptions provided to individual projects in this bill. It would take a substantial amount of time to recite this list to you. Instead, I will ask unanimous consent to include this list in the RECORD.

Mr. President, because of our nation's robust economy, we now have a balanced budget. But we cannot continue to bear the financial burden of servicing a $5.6 trillion national debt. We need to continue to work to cut unnecessary and wasteful spending so we can begin to pay down our debt and save billions in interest payments.

As I mentioned earlier, CBO recently projected that we will have close to a trillion dollar budget surplus over the next 10 years. These are projections and not real dollars until they materialize. Further, these surplus projections are all contingent on Congress maintaining the spending caps. Unfortunately, I already hear the grumbling to break these caps even as we have only deliberated on a small number of appropriations bills.

Simply because we can fund programs of questionable merit within the spending caps does not mean that we should. There is no room for pork-barreling when we are so close to breaking the caps. Last year alone, I uncovered over $14 billion of wasteful spending in the appropriations bills. $14 billion funds a lot of worthy programs.

As a matter of simple fairness, we have an obligation to ensure that Congress spends taxpayers' hard-earned dollars prudently to protect our balanced budget and to protect the projected budget surpluses. The American public cannot understand why we continue to earmark these huge amounts of money to locality specific special interests at a time when we are trying to cut the cost of government and return more dollars to the people. Pork barrel spending cannot be justified in an environment where our highest fiscal priorities should be to save Social Security, and provide much needed tax relief such as: increasing the number of tax payers in the 15% tax bracket, elimination of the marriage penalty; reduced taxation of savings and investment income; repeal of the estate and gift tax; repeal of the Social Security Earnings Test; increasing the contribution level for 410(k), and 457 retirement plans; and increasing the contribution level for the traditional IRA to $5,000.

Let me say very frankly that I do not generally like the idea of griping year after year regarding Congress' appetite for wasteful pork-barrel spending. But it is a sad commentary on the state of politics today that the Congress cannot curb its appetite to earmark funds for programs that are obviously wasteful, unnecessary, or unfair. Unfortunately, however, Members of Congress have demonstrated time and again their willingness to fund programs that serve their narrowly tailored interest at the expense of the national interest.

I ask unanimous consent the list be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise to address the funding for the Judicial Branch for fiscal year 2000. The Appropriations Committee that worked on this budget has done an outstanding job with limited resources and very demanding budget requests. Senators STEVENS, GREGG, BYRD, and HOLLINGS, and their staffs, are to be commended for doing a very difficult job in a professional manner that does credit to the Senate.

As chairman of the Judiciary Committee, I have a special interest in this budget. And I agree with most of the Senate bill. The Senate bill fully funds compensation for judges. This is required by the Constitution.

The Senate bill fully funds judges' staffs. This is appropriate because judges cannot operate without their law clerks and secretaries.

The Senate bill fully funds the rental costs of court facilities leased from the General Services Administration. This is appropriate because we must have courtrooms for judges and their staffs to work in.

Further, the Senate bill appropriately reduces funding for certain expenditure requests that were not critically needed.

However, the Senate bill underfunds court support staff and operating expenses for the circuit and district courts by a net 257 million dollars.

The Judiciary's budget request was for maintaining the current level of services by support staff. The support staff is needed to handle high levels of criminal cases, bankruptcy cases, pretrial services, and supervised release services. These duties are not going away. The Judiciary is required by law to continue to address each of these areas. Moreover, I note that the Judiciary's budget request does not even take into account the increased workload that new legislation, like the Juvenile Crime Bill, will place on the federal courts.

The Judiciary cannot maintain the current level of services in the Courts of Appeal and District Courts without some portion of the 257 million dollar shortfall being replaced.

I request that over the next few months we work together to provide the Judiciary with additional funding for support staff on the Courts of Appeal and the District Courts.

I am also concerned about a deeper problem that exists with the budget process for the Judiciary.

Current law requires the Executive Branch to submit the Judiciary's annual budget request to Congress ''without change.'' Nonetheless, the Administration's Office of Management and Budget indirectly decreases the Judiciary's budget request through the use of negative allowances.

The Judicial Branch should be required to be responsible in its budget requests, and I believe they are. But, the Judicial Branch's budget should not be subject to reductions by the Executive Branch to fund the political priorities of the President. Current law prohibits such reductions, but the Administration does not follow this law. This is a systemic problem that I hope we can address in the future along with the Judiciary's current-year budget needs.

As legislators, it is our duty under Article I of the Constitution to provide sufficient funds so that the federal courts established under Article III of the Constitution are effective and federal law is upheld. I look forward to working with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to address these issues in the next few months.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I would like to take a few moments to thank Senator GREGG, the Chairman of the Commerce, State, Justice Appropriations Committee, as well as Senator HOLLINGS, for their full support of the Crime Identification Technology Act in this appropriations bill. Their support represents a strong commitment to anti-crime measures that really work to reduce crime.

This Act is a bipartisan law that Congress passed unanimously last year. The Crime Identification Technology Act is based on the recognition that technology is the key to the future of police work. We can no longer continue to ask law enforcement to fight increasingly mobile and sophisticated criminals with outmoded twentieth-century Technology.

The Crime Identification Technology Act will help state and local justice systems update and integrate their anti-crime technology systems and support their overburdened forensic crime laboratories. CITA authorizes $250 million to states and local governments each year, for five years, for crime technology. This effort is fully funded in this appropriation bill.

State and local governments are at a crucial juncture in the development and integration of their criminal justice technology. This bill provides for system integration, permitting all components of the criminal justice system to share information and communicate more effectively, on a real-time basis.

This is one of the wisest investments we could possibly make. I would like to emphasize three reasons for this. First, crime technology, in itself, is crucial to making significant reductions in the crime rates in our communities. Second, we can use this opportunity to leverage the Federal Government's investments in national anti-crime systems that require state participation, such as the Integrated Automated Fingerprint Identification System, the National Criminal Information Center 2000, and the National Integrated Ballistics Information Network. We have literally invested billions of dollars in national systems. That is a key reason why so many organizations have applauded the appropriators' support of anti-crime technology, including the International Association of Police Chiefs, National Governor's Association, National League of Cities, American Society of Crime Laboratory Directors, the American Academy of Forensic Sciences, and our states' information repository directors in the National Consortium of Justice & Information Statistics.

Third, but certainly not last, there is a tremendous need to consolidate the patchwork of Federal programs, which have funded specific areas of anti-crime technology to the exclusion of others. A recent GAO report identified more than $1.2 billion in direct and indirect support to state and local governments; however, the absence of coordination and integration of both systems and funding means that if we continue the current system of disparate funding streams, there will never be enough money or integration. Too many existing Federal programs mandate specific technology spending, instead of allowing states the flexibility to meet their respective anti-crime technology needs within the type of broad framework which the Crime Identification Technology Act. CITA offers a dedicated, coordinated stream of funding to help states develop and upgrade their anti-crime technology from the patchwork of existing programs, and utilize the technical assistance of agencies who have developed technological expertise. I believe that this will greatly increase accountability and efficiency.

The bottom line for me, based on my more than 25 years in law enforcement, is that fully employing our anti-crime technology today will help law enforcement solve more crime, more rapidly, and pursue increasingly sophisticated, mobile criminals.

Again, I want to thank Chairman GREGG, and Senator LEAHY and Senator HATCH for their strong support of the Crime Identification Technology Act and its appropriation. I would also like to extend my personal thanks to Senator GREGG's staff, particularly Jim Morhard and Eric Harnschteger for making the best of a very difficult funding situation.

I thank the Chair and I yield the floor.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. President, I rise today along with Senator SNOWE to voice my deep concerns regarding the substantial cut to the economic Development Administration's Fiscal Year 2000 budget. The FY 2000 Commerce, Justice, State appropriations bill being considered by the Senate cuts EDA's budget by $164.1 million—from $392.4 million in FY 1999 to $228.3 million for FY 2000. This represents a 42 percent cut. Clearly, this reduction will have a dramatic affect on the EDA's ability to serve distressed rural and urban communities in states like Arkansas, New Hampshire, Maine, Alaska, New Mexico, Kentucky, and Colorado.

My colleagues will remember that last November we passed the Economic Development Administration Reform Act of 1998. In response, the EDA has become a more efficient and effective agency by reducing regulations by 60 percent; they have trimmed the period of processing applications to 60 days; and they are now requiring applicants to demonstrate both eligibility and need at the time of application. I firmly believe that these achievements will only strengthen the EDA's history of providing critical assistance to distressed areas.

In its 34 years of service to Americans, the EDA has created 2.9 million private sector jobs; investing $16.8 billion in distressed communities. Currently, every $1 invested by the EDA generates $3 in outside investment. With an administrative overhead of less than 8%, more Americans in economically distressed areas benefit from their tax dollars.

This is good news for my home state. As a rural state with many economically distressed communities, Arkansas relies heavily on the EDA and their invaluable services. Sam Spearman, who heads EDA in Arkansas, is a true servant and a great asset to my constituents. From the tornadoes that tore through northeast and central Arkansas this January, to the Levi-Strauss and Arrow Automotive closing in Morrilton, Arkansas, the EDA is helping communities stay alive. To help grow the economies in some depressed areas, the EDA has been assisting in planning and developing intermodal facilities in Marion and West Memphis.

My state was not immune to BRAC in the early 1990s. A Strategic Air Command bomber base in Blytheville and an Army training facility in Fort Smith were closed. As a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, I am happy to report to my colleagues that both communities are slowly recovering, but not without ongoing assistance from EDA.

Again, last November we passed legislation to restructure and reform the EDA. I believe that they have responded well to Congressional direction, however, reducing their funding by 42% greatly limits their ability to implement the changes we thought were necessary. I thank my colleagues and hope that they will support increasing funding to EDA in FY 2000.

CALLING OF THE BANKROLL

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I promised that from time to time when I participate in debates on legislation I would point out the role of special interest money in our legislative process, an effort I have entitled the Calling of the Bankroll. When I Call the Bankroll I will describe how much money the various interests lobbying on a particular bill have spent on campaign contributions to influence our decisions here in this chamber.

Of course I embarked on this effort with the hope of exposing the corruption of our current campaign finance system, and in particular how wealthy donors exploit the soft money loophole.

When I began this effort, I never worried that I would lack for opportunities to Call the Bankroll, and as I've demonstrated over the past few months, there are countless opportunities to Call the Bankroll about efforts to influence legislation before this body.

For example, so far I have talked about the contributions of special interests working to influence the debate over the Patients' Bill of Rights, I have discussed the contributions of the high tech industry and trial lawyers lobby during debate on the Y2K legislation, and I have pointed out the contributions of gun makers and gun control advocates during the juvenile justice debate, just to name a few.

And now we have before this body the Commerce, State, Justice appropriations bill.

During his state of the union address last January, the President called for the Justice Department to prepare a ''litigation plan'' against the tobacco companies to reclaim hundreds of billions of taxpayer dollars spent through federal health-care programs such as Medicare to treat smoking-related illnesses.

But this bill does something quite different. The language in the committee report on the Commerce, State, Justice Bill attempts to grant immunity to the tobacco industry from any federal litigation. Instead of a litigation plan, this bill would create a protection plan for the tobacco companies.

I hope my colleagues in this body would agree that the Justice Department must be able to pursue litigation based on the law, and that we should do everything in our power to enable the department to enforce the law.

But the language currently in the committee report prevents the Justice Department from enforcing the law. So instead of a huge federal lawsuit, the tobacco industry will have immunity from federal litigation. It looks like the tobacco companies have really gotten what they wanted in this bill, Mr. President.

It's a fortunate turn of events for the tobacco companies, but based on the tobacco industry's track record of political donations and political clout, I can't say that it's surprising.

The nation's tobacco companies are some of the most generous political donors around today, Mr. President, including Philip Morris, which reigns as the largest single soft money donor of all time. During the 1997–1998 election cycle the tobacco companies, including Philip Morris, RJR Nabisco, Brown and Williamson, US Tobacco and the industry's lobbying arm, the Tobacco Institute, gave a combined $5.5 million dollars in soft money to the parties, and another $2.3 million in PAC money contributions to candidates.

I offer this information to my colleagues and to the public to paint a clearer picture of who is trying to influence the bill before us, and how they are using the campaign finance system—very successfully, I might add—to get what they want from this bill and this Congress.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I rise in support of S. 1217, the Commerce, Justice, State, and the Judiciary Appropriations Bill for 2000.

This bill provides new budget authority of $34 billion and new outlays of $23.1 billion to finance the programs of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, and the federal judiciary.

I congratulate the Chairman and Ranking Member for producing a bill that complies with the Subcommittee's 302(b) allocation. This is one of the most difficult bills to manage with its varied programs and challenging allocation, but I think the bill meets most of the demands made of it while not exceeding its budget. So I commend my friend, the chairman, for his efforts and leadership.

When outlays from prior-year BA and other adjustments are taken into account, the bill totals $34.1 billion in BA and $34 billion in outlays. For general purpose activities as well as crime funding, the bill is at the Senate subcommittee's 302(b) allocation for both budget authority and outlays.

I ask members of the Senate to refrain from offering amendments which would cause the subcommittee to exceed its budget allocation and urge the speedy adoption of this bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a table displaying the Budget Committee scoring of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE MILLENNIUM DIGITAL COMMERCE ACT

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I rise to address the need for prompt action on S. 761, the Millennium Digital Commerce Act. Senator ABRAHAM has crafted a solid legislative measure that will promote continued growth in electronic commerce.

The Millennium Digital Commerce Act has 11 cosponsors including Senators WYDEN, TORRICELLI, MCCAIN, BURNS, FRIST, GORTON, BROWNBACK, ALLARD, GRAMS, HAGEL, and myself.

Mr. President, on June 23, almost one month ago, the Senate Commerce Committee unanimously approved and ordered S. 761 reported with an amendment in the nature of a substitute. This substitute is widely supported by the States, industry, and the administration. In fact, on June 22, the day before the mark-up, the Commerce Department issued a formal letter of support for this bipartisan measure.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the Administration's letter.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

GENERAL COUNSEL OF THE
U.S. DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE,
Washington, DC, June 22, 1999.

Hon. JOHN MCCAIN,
Chairman, Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: This letter conveys the views of the Department of Commerce on the substitute version of S. 761, the ''Millennium Digital Signature Act,'' that we understand will be marked-up by the Senate Commerce Committee. A copy of the substitute that serves as the basis for these views is attached to this letter.

In July 1997 the Administration issued the Framework for Global Electronic Commerce, wherein President Clinton and Vice President Gore recognized the importance of developing a predictable, minimalist legal environment in order to promote electronic commerce. President Clinton directed Secretary Daley ''to work with the private sector, State and local governments, and foreign governments to support the development, both domestically and internationally, of a uniform commercial legal framework that recognizes, facilitates, and enforces electronic transactions worldwide.''

Since July 1997, we have been consulting with countries to encourage their adoption of an approach to electronic authentication that will assure parties that their transactions will be recognized and enforced globally. Under this approach, countries would: (1) eliminate paper-based legal barriers to electronic transactions by implementing the relevant provisions of the 1996 UNCITRAL Model Law on Electronic Commerce; (2) reaffirm the rights of parties to determine for themselves the appropriate technological means of authenticating their transactions; (3) ensure any party the opportunity to prove in court that a particular authentication technique is sufficient to create a legally binding agreement; and (4) state that governments should treat technologies and providers of authentication services from other countries in a non-discriminatory manner.

The principles set out in section 5 of S. 761 mirror those advocated by the Administration in international fora, and we support their adoption in federal legislation. In October 1998, the OECD Ministers approved a Declaration on Authentication for Electronic Commerce affirming these principles. In addition, these principles have also been incorporated into joint statements between the United States and Japan, Australia, France, the United Kingdom and South Korea. Congressional endorsement of the principles would greatly assist in developing the full potential of electronic commerce as was envisioned by the President and Vice President Gore in The Framework for Global Electronic Commerce.

On the domestic front, the National Conference of Commissioners of Uniform State Law (NCCUSL) has been working since early 1997 to craft a uniform law for consideration by State legislatures that would adapt standards governing private commercial transactions to cyberspace. This model law is entitled the ''Uniform Electronic Transactions Act'' (UETA), and I understand that it will receive final consideration at the NCCUSL Annual Meeting at the end of July. In the view of the Administration, the current UETA draft adheres to the minimalist ''enabling'' framework advocated by the Administration, and we believe that UETA will provide an excellent domestic legal model for electronic transactions, as well as a strong model for the rest of the world.

Section 6 of the substitute (''Interstate Contract Certainty'') addresses the concern that several years will elapse before the UETA is enacted by the states. It fills that gap temporarily with federal legal standards, but ultimately leaves the issue to be resolved by each state as it considers the UETA.

With regard to commercial transactions affecting interstate commerce, this section eliminates statutory rules requiring paper contracts, recognizes the validity of electronic signatures as a substitute for paper signatures, and provides that parties may decide for themselves, should they so choose, what method of electronic signature to use.

Another important aspect of the substitute is that it would provide for the termination of any federal preemption as to the law of any state that adopts the UETA (including any of the variations that the UETA may allow) and maintains it in effect. We note that this provision would impose no overarching requirement that the UETA or individual state laws be ''consistent'' with the specific terms of this Act; this provision, and its potential effect, will be closely monitored by the Administration as the legislation progresses. There is every reason to believe that the States will continue to move, as they consistently have moved, toward adopting and maintaining an ''enabling'' approach to electronic commerce consistent with the principles stated in this Act. We therefore believe that any preemption that may ultimately result from this legislation can safely be allowed to ''sunset'' for any state upon its adoption of the eventual uniform electronic transactions legislation developed by the states.

We also support limiting the scope of this Act to commercial transactions, which is consistent with the current approach of the draft UETA, and utilizing definitions in the Act that mirror those of the current draft UETA, which we consider appropriate in light of the expert effort that has been directed to the development of the UETA provisions under the procedures of NCCUSL.

With regard to section 7(a), the Administration requests that the Committee delete the reference to the Office of Management and Budget (''OMB''); there is no need for agencies to file duplicate reports. The report that the Secretary of Commerce is directed to prepare pursuant to section 7(b) will, of course, be coordinated with OMB.

The substitute version of S. 761 would in our view provide an excellent framework for the speedy development of uniform electronic transactions legislation in an environment of partnership between the Federal Government and the states. We look forward to working with the Committee on the bill as it proceeds through the legislative process.

The Office of Management and Budget advises that there is no objection to the transmittal of this report from the standpoint of the Administration's program.

Sincerely,

ANDREW J. PINCUS.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, the Millennium Digital Commerce Act provides a baseline national framework for conducting online business to business transactions. It is vital to interstate electronic commerce because it would provide legal standing for electronic signatures on contracts and other business transactions.

This common sense and timely legislation will help promote continued growth in electronic commerce. It is good for business, consumers, and the overall American economy.

While more than forty States have laws on the books concerning the use of authentication technology such as electronic signatures, the States have not yet chosen to adopt the same approach. This hodgepodge of State laws will undoubtedly have a chilling effect on e-commerce.

This Congress cannot and should not sit by and wait until the States coordinate this milieu of laws on electronic signatures. This delay would unnecessarily restrain the growth of our Nation's economic well-being.

The Millennium Digital Commerce Act is an interim step that will help facilitate interstate and international commerce. It is a necessary precursor to state-by-state adoption of the Uniform Electronic Transactions Act (UETA).

Mr. President, my colleagues on both sides of the aisle strongly agree that it is now time to move S. 761 to the floor.

It has broad support and I hope we can work together to move this bipartisan pro-technology, pro-electronic commerce legislation forward as soon as possible.

MARY MCGRORY ON JOHN F. KENNEDY, JR.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, it happens I was in the White House, in what was then Ralph Dungan's southwest office just down the hall from the Oval Office—where they were cleaning the carpet, the President's furniture having been moved to the outside corridor with his rocking chair atop the clutter—when word came from Dallas that the President was dead. A few moments later Hubert H. Humphrey burst in, embraced Dungan and let out: ''My God, what have they done to us.'' By ''they'' of course he meant the political right wing in Texas. Later we learned that the Dallas police had arrested a man associated with Fair Play for Cuba. What indeed had been done to us, what were we doing to ourselves?

That evening a group of us who lived on Macomb Street, out Connecticut Avenue, drifted over to Mary McGrory's. We sat about, saying little. At length Mary, with the feeling only she can put into words, announced: ''We'll never laugh again.'' ''Heavens, Mary,'' I replied, ''we'll laugh again. It's just that we will never be young again.''

In this morning's Washington Post, her column ''A Death in the Family'' describes in poignant detail the history from then to now, now being of course the death of John F. KENNEDY, Jr., so much on our minds in those slow-paced days of mourning so many years ago, now himself gone, along with his wife Carolyn and his sister-in-law Lauren Bessette.

I ask unanimous consent that her reflections be reprinted in the RECORD in full following my statement.

There being no objection, the article ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, July 22, 1999]

A DEATH IN THE FAMILY

(By Mary McGrory)

To understand the round-the-clock coverage of John Kennedy's death, the unending talk about it, and the makeshift memorials, it helps to remember what the country felt about his parents. His father, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, handsome and dashing, came out of Boston insisting on being our first Catholic president—and was assassinated on Nov. 22, 1963.

His beautiful mother, Jacqueline Bouvier, once dismissed as a social butterfly, stepped forward and held the country together. She arranged a funeral that was majestic and moved through it like a queen. She saw to every detail from the kilted Irish pipers to the eternal flame.

When it was over, she summoned the most famous political scribe of his time, Theodore H. White, and put a name on her husband's time in office, Camelot. The country has been emotionally involved with the Kennedy's ever since. They are numerous, good looking and always up to something. They have provided a pageant of smiles, tears and scandals.

When John Kennedy's single-engine plane, with him at the controls, fell off the radar at the Martha's Vineyard airport, the nation once again went to its post by the television to keep vigil with the Kennedys.

In the five days that followed, the dread and dismay were laced with indignation. This was not supposed to happen. This was entirely gratuitous. The crown prince had been exempt from ''the curse of the Kennedys''—a phrase coined by Uncle Teddy during the Chappaquiddick crisis. Had not Jackie Kennedy sequestered her children from the turbulence at the Kennedy compound in Hyannis Port, as Bobby Kennedy's fatherless sons wrestled with various demons? She took John and Caroline over the water to Martha's Vineyard.

John had not followed in his father's footsteps. He was his mother's son. She brought him up not to be a Kennedy, but to be himself. He shared her detachment about politics. When asked a while back how, in the light of his father's posthumously revealed promiscuity, Jack Kennedy would have tolerated today's fierce press scrutiny, John Kennedy said coolly he thought his father might have chosen to go into another line of work.

John Kennedy died like his father violently and too soon. His blond wife, Carolyn Bessette, and his sister-in-law Lauren Bessette died with him. At 38, he left more unfulfilled promise than performance. He was strikingly handsome and unexpectedly nice for one of his looks and station. He was courteous to all, even the paparazzi who dogged him from the age of 3 when he broke the nation's heart by saluting his father's coffin.

The tabs called him ''The Hunk'' and People magazine said he was ''the sexiest man alive.'' If the grief seems disproportionate to his life, it is easily explained. He was measured by who he was, not what he did.

His mother vetoed his first choice of a career, the theater. He went into the law, but not for long. He founded a magazine he called ''George.'' It was to be a glossy, trendy monthly that treated politics as entertainment.

He courted publicity for ''George'' by sometimes doing odd things: He posed nude for an illustration to accompany a critique of his Kennedy cousins' behavior. More recently, he visited Mike Tyson, the convicted rapist, in prison; he invited pornographer Larry Flynt to the White House correspondents' dinner. Like his mother, he never explained his actions. He was a free spirit. His father, despite his private excesses, was decorous in his public life, having a politician's perpetual concern about what the neighbors will think. Jack Kennedy was witty, sometimes in the mordant Irish way; his son was whimsical. Politics does not allow for whimsy.

John's love life was of aching, international interest. He courted a string of gorgeous girls and then married one. He married willowy Carolyn Bessette at a secret wedding on an island off Georgia. He was terribly proud of his coup against the press. He released one picture. It was of him kissing his bride's hand. It was drop-dead romantic.

The country spent the last weekend soaking up every detail, watching hour after hour of Jack's funeral, Bobby's funeral, touch football, prayers at Arlington. The context was pure, incredible Kennedy. The clan had gathered at Hyannis Port to celebrate the wedding of Rory Kennedy. A huge tent had been set up on Ethel's lawn. It was the one mercy of the grim weekend. The Kennedys, who derive such solace from each other, were together. The wedding was postponed. The family mourned.

Washington talked of nothing else. Arguments broke out over ''the curse of the Kennedys''—was it really the rashness of its members? ''Where was God in all this?'' one man demanded to know at a subdued Saturday party.

All agreed on one point: It was a shame.

CALIFORNIA'S GUN CONTROL LAWS

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, earlier this week, California Governor Gray Davis signed into law two of the strictest gun control measures in the country. One of these laws is the nation's most comprehensive ban on assault weapons, and the other prohibits the purchase of more than one handgun a month.

California residents support these common sense safety measures designed to take lethal, semiautomatic weapons off the streets, and reduce illegal gun trafficking. Californians feel strongly about ending the easy accessibility of guns because of their history with gun violence over this last decade. In 1989, Americans were shocked when a madman walked into a schoolyard in Stockton, CA, with a rapid-firing AK–47 and shot off 50 rounds a minute for 2 minutes, killing 5 children and wounding 30. Californians were again struck by tragedy in a 1993 massacre at a San Francisco law firm in which 8 people died and 6 were wounded, and again in 1997, when a high profile armed bank robbery spilled out on to the streets of North Hollywood.

As always, NRA lobbyists were working to undermine the effort of the California state legislature. But because gun violence has held such a prominent and tragic place in the minds and hearts of Californians, the legislature was able to defy the NRA and pass these responsible gun control measures. So many families in California have been torn apart by gun violence, and so many people have been affected by the weak gun control laws in this nation, that the NRA failed in the California state legislature.

I hope that other states will follow the lead of the California state legislature and pass responsible gun control measures. I pray that they learn from the tragedies in California, rather than wait for a decade of tragedies to occur in their own states, before passing responsible safety measures. I also make an appeal to my Congressional colleagues to pass sensible gun control legislation now. Although in this case, the debate on gun violence has moved to the state legislature, Congress has not been absolved of its responsibility.

We must end the plague of gun violence that claims so many innocent lives.

THE VERY BAD DEBT BOXSCORE

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, at the close of business yesterday, Wednesday, July 21, 1999, the Federal debt stood at $5,630,350,182,425.20 (Five trillion, six hundred thirty billion, three hundred fifty million, one hundred eighty-two thousand, four hundred twenty-five dollars and twenty cents).

One year ago, July 21, 1998, the Federal debt stood at $5,535,209,000,000 (Five trillion, five hundred thirty-five billion, two hundred nine million).

Five years ago, July 21, 1994, the Federal debt stood at $4,628,452,000,000 (Four trillion, six hundred twenty-eight billion, four hundred fifty-two million).

Ten years ago, July 21, 1989, the Federal debt stood at $2,802,628,000,000 (Two trillion, eight hundred two billion, six hundred twenty-eight million) which reflects a debt increase of almost $3 trillion—$2,827,722,182,425.20 (Two trillion, eight hundred twenty-seven billion, seven hundred twenty-two million, one hundred eighty-two thousand, four hundred twenty-five dollars and twenty cents) during the past 10 years.

OKLAHOMA CITY NATIONAL MEMORIAL INSTITUTE FOR THE PREVENTION OF TERRORISM

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I am pleased to rise today to lend my support for the inclusion of $15,000,000 million for the Oklahoma City National Memorial Institute for the Prevention of Terrorism. This important funding brings to completion the creation of the Oklahoma City National Memorial Trust as specified by PL. 104–58.

During the 104th Congress, we created the Oklahoma City National Memorial Trust to commemorate the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City. The Oklahoma City National Memorial will consist of three components: the actual Memorial, an interactive learning museum, and the Memorial Institute now funded in this legislation.

Fundraising for the symbolic Memorial and the Memorial Center is nearly complete and construction for the symbolic Memorial is complete. With the funding provided in this legislation, the Memorial Institute is one step closer to a reality. Already, an implementation plan for the Memorial Institute is complete and work has begun to prepare for the construction.

In preparation, the Oklahoma City National Memorial Foundation and the Oklahoma City Memorial Trust have entered into a partnership with the Oklahoma Alliance for Public Policy Research to establish an operational relationship for the Memorial Institute. The Alliance consists of all of Oklahoma's research universities (Oklahoma State, University of Oklahoma, and Tulsa University), while the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center will perform the administrative and functional duties as directed by the Institute's management team.

The Alliance meets the joint public-private partnership arrangement provided for in the Oklahoma City National Memorial Trust Act. This joint partnership is both prudent and necessary as Oklahoma and the nation begins to consider the broader implications of domestic terrorism.

The Memorial Institute will be the only institute of its kind in the nation dedicated to understanding, deterring, and mitigating against terrorism. Naturally, it is only fitting that such a center is located in Oklahoma given our close, personal relationship with domestic terrorism. Yet this Memorial Institute will go beyond being just another reminder of the tragic event that struck Oklahoma and the nation early in the morning of April 19, 1995.

The Memorial Institute will also provide a collaboration and exchange of knowledge between public and private, Federal and state, and military and civilian efforts to counter terrorism. Another important issue that will be researched at the Memorial Institute is how to better coordinate and integrate health care and medical efforts associated with our response to terrorism. This collaborative research on emerging counter-terrorism projects will lend key insights to ensuring that the events of April 19 never occur again.

Mr. President, I thank the Chairman, Senator GREGG, and the Ranking Member, Senator HOLLINGS, for efforts to secure this important funding for the Memorial Institute. Their efforts will long be remembered by the researchers who spend time at the Memorial Institute and the American public who stand to gain countless benefits from their research. Oklahoma and the Nation thank them.

COMMENDING A NAVAL AVIATOR

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to commend a constituent of mine from Fort Collins, Colorado—Lieutenant Commander Carl Oesterle, an F–18 pilot on the air craft carrier U.S.S. Constellation. Colorado is a state blessed with a large number of dedicated active duty personnel and retired military, and as a member of the Armed Services Committee I like to take the opportunity to commend our personnel when they conduct themselves in a top notch manner.

I am sure that LCDR Oesterle would insist that he was doing nothing more than his duty on June 23, while participating in a night training mission in the Pacific. But his actions in salvaging his seriously disabled fighter by conducting an emergency landing on the Constellation demonstrate the excellent training and dedication of our nation's fighter pilots. The episode is outlined very well in a July 9, article in the Washington Times and I ask unanimous consent that this article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

INSIDE THE RING—NAVY HEROICS

(By Bill Gertz and Rowan Scarborough)

The Navy aviation community is buzzing over the heroics of an F–18C pilot on the carrier USS Constellation, or ''Connie'' to her friends.

On June 23, as the pilot catapulted off the deck in the Pacific for a night mission, he experienced twin engine problems blamed on the dreaded ingestion of foreign objects, such as a metal washer or shirt button, that sometimes miss detection on deck, according to a Navy source.

The $35 million strike fighter was so crippled, aviators on the Connie thought the pilot would quickly bail out.

But instead of taking the easy way, the pilot stuck with the plane, coaxing its altitude up to 80 feet, then 150 as he jettisoned fuel.

Meanwhile, the ship's crew scurried to erect netting, called a barricade, to trap the aircraft if the pilot could achieve enough speed and altitude to manhandle it into landing position.

His first pass was high. On a second try, as tension grew and the landing signal officer barked commands via radio, the pilot hit the barricade dead center. the ship erupted in cheers.

''Everyone on the platform was hugging and almost in tears,'' said an officer who helped the pilot to safety. ''Our prayer was definitely answered as Oyster (the pilot's nickname) popped open the canopy and hopped out of the jet.''

What motivated the pilot to risk his life to save the plane?

A naval pilot in Washington offered this: ''It's long been a question in flying circles on when to make the determination it's time to eject. With today's zero-defect-mentality and second-guessing. There's tremendous pressure for a guy to stay with the airplane. It's a tough call.''

Cmdr. Dave Koontz, a Navy spokesman in San Diego, could not confirm that the pilot encountered double engine problems. He said one engine failed and the Navy has started an inquiry to find out why.

''You're trained to handle emergencies and there is a variety of emergencies that come up,'' said Cmdr. Koontz, a former helicopter pilot who served on the Constellation. ''I personally think what he did was pretty heroic.''

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Ms. COLLINS (for herself, Mr. DEWINE, and Mr. SMITH of Oregon):

S. 1412. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to limit the reporting requirements regarding higher education tuition and related expenses, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

HIGHER EDUCATION REPORTING RELIEF ACT

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, today I rise to introduce The Higher Education Reporting Relief Act of 1999, which will reduce the burdensome reporting requirements placed on educational institutions by the Hope Scholarship and Lifetime Learning Tax Credits. I am pleased to be joined by my principal cosponsor, Senator DEWINE, who has been a leader on this and many other education issues, and by one colleague Senator GORDON SMITH, who shares our concern for the reporting burden we are placing on our institutions of higher education.

When Congress created the Hope Scholarship and the Lifetime Learning Tax Credits, it unfortunately imposed a burdensome and costly reporting requirement on our universities, colleges and proprietary schools. If implemented, the regulations will require schools to provide the IRS with information on their students that is difficult to obtain, including the taxpayer identification number of the individual who will actually claim the tax credit generated by the student. In many cases, this individual will not be the student but rather his or her parent or parents.

In the words of the President of the University of Maine at Farmington:

> At a time when we are working to increase access and to contain college costs, new government reporting requirements are working against us. We will need to add personnel, not in support of our educational functions but to comply with new IRS regulations. This is not sensible and it is definitely not in the interests of the people we are here to serve.

I think that her words say it very well.

Already, the University of Maine System has been forced to spend $112,000 to meet the Hope Scholarship reporting requirement, and the most burdensome requirements have not yet become mandatory. In total, these reporting requirements are estimated to cost America's postsecondary educational institutions as much as $125 million. This burden does not make sense.

Last year, by passing the Collins-DeWine amendment to the Internal Revenue Service Restructuring and Reform Act, the Senate eliminated one of the most difficult reporting requirements. Our amendment freed schools from the requirement to report financial aid received by a student from a third party and held them responsible for only informing the IRS about financial aid that a school actually administered. In addition, the conference report on the act recognized the problem faced by schools and deferred the implementation of full reporting requirements until the IRS had issued final guidelines. Since the final reporting requirements have not been issued, this deferral remains in effect for tax year 1999.

The conference report further urged the IRS to modernize its computer systems to include the capacity to match a dependent student's taxpayer identification number with the return of the person claiming the student as a dependent. This is the true answer to this problem. Unfortunately, this has not yet been done. If this step is not taken, institutions of higher education will be required to provide this burdensome & costly information to the IRS—a very difficult process.

The legislation we introduce today will defer the implementation of the reporting requirements for three years—through tax year 2001. Further, it will require the IRS to upgrade its data processing systems along the lines recommended by the conference report. Today, as I mention, the IRS has not done this. The IRS will be required to make this change in time for processing tax returns for the year 2002. We have included this delay to give the IRS 2 years after it has been completed dealing with any data processing problems caused by the year 2000 problem.

The rationale for the Hope and the Lifetime Learning credits is to make postsecondary education more affordable and therefore more accessible. What Congress has given with one hand it has taken away in part with its regulatory hand. The cost of conforming to the regulatory requirements will inevitably result in increases in tuition, chipping away at the benefit of the tax credits. We need to correct this problem. The $112,000 that the University of Maine has already been forced to spend to comply with the law clearly is going to be passed on to the students in increased tuitions.

Last year, Senator DEWINE and I introduced the Higher Education Reporting Relief Act that would have completely repealed the reporting requirements imposed on educational institutions. Because of the cost of that approach, we have reworked last year's bill in a way that will accomplish its most important objectives while substantially reducing its potential costs to the Treasury. Our legislation would still leave a reporting burden on the schools but a much more modest and reasonable one that takes into account who is best equipped to report the information that the IRS needs to administer the law.

I hope our colleagues will join us in supporting the Higher Education Reporting Relief Act of 1999.

I yield the reminder of my time to Senator DEWINE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Ohio is recognized.

Mr. DEWINE. I am delighted to again join with my distinguished colleague from the State of Maine to try to give some relief to colleges and universities. As she has pointed out, this burden placed by Congress was unintended. I seriously doubt if anyone thought that aspect of the legislation through or fully understood what kind of costs this would impose on our colleges.

The Senator has indicated that Maine, for example, has already been hit with over $100,000 in costs. We could multiply that around the country for every university and every college. This ultimately, of course, will go where all costs go, to the students and the parents.

This is something we should deal with and we should deal with very quickly. I join this morning with my colleague from Maine to introduce the Higher Education Reporting Relief Act. As she has indicated, this is the second time she and I have introduced legislation to provide some very much needed paperwork relief for the colleges and universities of our country.

A compromise version of the legislation we introduced last year was passed by Congress as part of the IRS reform bill. Senator COLLINS and I are here today to complete that very important work and to do what has remained undone from last year.

As my colleague from Maine has indicated, what prompted the need for this legislation was the Hope scholarship and the Lifetime Learning tax credit. This legislation required colleges and universities to comply with very burdensome and costly regulations. Schools were required to issue annual reports to students and the Internal Revenue Service detailing the students' tuition payments. The IRS planned to use the reports to monitor the eligibility of students who apply for the education tax credits. These reporting requirements require colleges and universities to spend millions of dollars to implement and maintain.

The legislation Senator COLLINS and I were able to pass last year eliminated many of the most burdensome reporting requirements, yet there are burdensome requirements that still remain law. It is time, we believe, to finish the job we started last year.

Our bill will further reduce the reporting requirements by making two very commonsense changes to our Tax Code. First, the IRS will be prohibited from imposing any new reporting requirements on colleges and universities prior to the year 2002. No school of higher education should have additional IRS requirements imposed while it is still developing its reporting system.

Second, the IRS will be required to update its computer system by the end of 2002. The IRS computer system would be updated to make it capable of matching the IRS taxpayer identification number of the student with the person claiming this child as a dependent. This update would greatly reduce the reporting burden of the Hope scholarship.

After this update, when a parent uses the Hope scholarship, the IRS will be able to electronically verify that a family was qualified to use this deduction. This process will eliminate a great deal of costly and time-consuming paperwork for the colleges and universities of our Nation. This legislation brings a simple, fair, commonsense solution to the unintentional barriers created by the reporting requirements of the Hope scholarship and the Lifetime Learning tax credit. It would represent significant savings to our colleges and to our universities.

I certainly hope the Senator from Maine and I will once again be successful this year, as we were last year, in bringing relief to institutions of higher education. I invite my colleagues in the Senate to join as cosponsors.

I, once again, thank my colleague from Maine for her leadership on this legislation. She is a true leader in the area of education and has done a great deal of work in this area. This bill is one more example of her true understanding of how the real world works—what happens in our home States when Congress takes actions that, frankly, result in unintended consequences. The unintended consequences in this case are added burdens on our colleges, costs that our colleges have to bear, costs that our colleges then have to turn around and impose on parents and students.

Again, I thank my colleague from Maine for once again being a true leader in this area.

By Mr. DURBIN (for himself and Mr. DORGAN):

S. 1413. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to increase the deduction from the estate tax for family-owned business interest; to the Committee on Finance.

FAMILY-OWNED BUSINESS ESTATE TAX RELIEF ACT

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to be joined by Senator DORGAN today introducing legislation which would make it easier for a family to hold onto a small business or farm when the head of the family passes away. I am especially pleased to be joined by Senator DORGAN on this bill as he has been a good friend and colleague for almost two decades and a real leader on small business issues since his election to Congress in 1980.

Mr. President, ownership is a powerful force. Anyone who has gone from renting to owning a home will tell you how much more work you put in as an owner. Suddenly, problems with the plumbing or the roof that used to be the landlord's problems are now your problems. Developments in the neighborhood take on new meaning and you tend to spend more time working with neighbors to figure out ways to make your community stronger.

The trade-off for all this work is that whatever improvements we make to our homes and our communities, they're ours. And if our homes increase in value, we get to keep the difference.

The same is true for small businesses and family farms. Most people who have gone from being an employee to owning a small business or farm will tell you that they work harder as an owner, save more, and take more pride in their work. As with homeowners, small businesspeople and farmers are willing to put in the extra work it takes to run a business because they know it will come back to them in the form of more customers and higher profits. It is this industrious spirit that has defined our nation for more than two centuries and allowed us to enjoy a level of prosperity unknown in any other part of the world, in any other era of human history.

The bill we are introducing today makes a simple change in the tax code that will help families pass down the legacy of business ownership from one generation to the next.

Mr. President, the federal estate tax is one of the most controversial provisions of the tax code. Whatever the merits or shortcomings of the estate tax, I believe most of my colleagues would agree that a family should not have to sell a small business or family farm just because the head of the family passes away. Unfortunately, small business owners face a very real concern that the estate tax may force their families to do just that, particularly families whose business' principal assets consist of machinery, real estate, equipment, and inventory . Those families fortunate enough to avoid selling their business or farm are often frustrated by having to finance their estate tax burden at the expense of needed investments in the business.

Recognizing this problem, Congress worked on a bipartisan basis in 1997 to include provisions in the Taxpayer Relief Act which provide targeted assistance to estates with family-owned businesses and farms. Among its provisions, the Taxpayer Relief Act provided an immediate increase in the estate tax exemption from $600,000 to $1.3 million for estates with businesses that are kept in the family, and improved the terms for installment payments made by estates with businesses by reducing the interest rate from 4 percent to 2 percent for the first $1 million in taxable value of the business in excess of the $1.3 million exemption.

The bill that Senator DORGAN and I are introducing today builds on the 1997 Taxpayer Relief Act by simply doubling the $1.3 million exemption for family-owned businesses and farms to $2.6 million. This new level would mean that a typical business with up to 25 employees would face no estate tax liability if the business is kept in the family after the owner dies. Somewhat larger businesses would enjoy a significant reduction in their estate tax burden.

Mr. President, we should be doing what we can to promote small business and farm ownership in America. This bill does just that by simply making it easier for families to continue their tradition of small business ownership. I urge all my colleagues to join Senator DORGAN and me in supporting this legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1413

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTIOIN 1. INCREASE IN ESTATE TAX DEDUCTION FOR FAMILY-OWNED BUSINESS INTEREST.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 2057(a)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to maximum deduction) is amended by striking ''$675,000'' and inserting ''$1,975,000''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 2057(a)(3)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to coordination with unified credit) is amended by striking ''$675,000'' each place it appears in the text and heading and inserting ''$1,975,000''.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to estates of decedents dying after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, today I'm pleased to join Senator DURBIN in introducing estate tax relief legislation to boost immediately to $2.6 million the amount of family business assets that can be transferred to the next generation without loading up that family business with a large tax debt. I feel strongly that we must prevent our estate tax laws from hindering the transfer of family farms, ranches and other small businesses to the next generation of family members who would continue to operate them. We made some important changes to the estate tax laws in the last Congress to make it easier for children to take over a family business when a parent dies and keep the business going. But these changes did not go far enough.

Family-owned enterprises are a source of social stability and cohesion in this country. They generate jobs and wealth. Yet in far too many cases, the estate tax laws exert pressure on the children and grandchildren who inherit a modestly-sized family business to sell it, or a large part of it, to pay off those taxes. Our tax laws should encourage enterprises to stay in family ownership, with all the benefits that brings to our communities and to the nation. Yet frequently today the estate tax laws do the opposite.

Congress took some steps in a major tax bill in 1997, which I supported, to enable family farms, ranches, and other small family businesses to be passed along to the next generation without being loaded up with massive estate tax debt. The 1997 bill changes estate taxes in two basic ways. First, the legislation increased the unified estate and gift tax exemption from $600,000 to $1 million over a period of years. Second, it provided a new exemption from estate taxes for qualifying family businesses, valued up to $1.3 million, that are passed down to the children and grandchildren who will operate the farm or business. This new exclusion is the result of a bipartisan effort in Congress to encourage business enterprise that is based on the family unit.

However, Senator DURBIN and I believe that the $1.3 million family business exclusion needs to be substantially increased, and we suspect that a number of our colleagues in the Senate share this view. We are proposing such an increase today.

Our legislation is simple and straightforward. It doubles the dollar value from $1.3 million to $2.6 million of a family business that may be transferred to inheriting family members without an estate tax obligation. This will be a great help to families that want to pass along a small business, which might have been the family's major asset for decades, to the kids to operate following the death of a parent.

Estate tax relief for family businesses is not a partisan issue. It is important for the survival of our nation's family businesses, and it should be a priority for any tax cuts that Congress enacts.

This is not however a proposal to reduce estate taxes for every rich person in America. We see no need to enact a big new benefit for the nation's trust fund babies. It should go to where the need is greatest, and where the economic and social benefits will be greatest as well. That means small family businesses.

In the end, we hope that some additional estate tax relief will be enacted to sustain family-owned businesses and farms, which make up the backbone of our economy. We believe that our approach takes a large step in that direction. We urge our colleagues to cosponsor this much-needed legislation.

S. 1414. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to restore access to home health services covered under the Medicare Program, and to protect the Medicare Program from financial loss while preserving the due process rights of home health agencies to the Committee on Finance.

MEDICARE HOME HEALTH BENEFICIARY EQUITY AND PAYMENT SIMPLIFICATION ACT OF 1999

Mr. MACK. Mr. President today I am pleased to join my colleague, Mr. BREAUX, in sponsoring The Medicare Home Health Beneficiary Equity and Payment Simplification Act of 1999.

This legislation sets forth a fully developed prospective payment system for Medicare home health benefits that can be implemented easily using currently available data and can be accurately monitored to prevent fraud and abuse. Most importantly, the bill restores access to covered services for the sickest, most frail Medicare beneficiaries while providing incentives for efficient treatment of all patients regardless of the acuity of their medical condition.

The bill provides for a simple four-category prospective payment system for home health services (similar to the four-category system which has been in place for hospice services since 1983) which is based on data from a 1997 study conducted by the Kaiser Family Foundation on characteristics of Medicare patients in need of covered home health services. The Kaiser Foundation study found that Medicare patients in need of home health services historically have fallen into one of the following categories:

1. Post-hospital, short stay beneficiaries
2. Medically stable, long-stay beneficiaries
3. Medically complex, long-stay beneficiaries
4. Medically unstable and complex, extremely high use beneficiaries

Beneficiaries who meet all eligibility and coverage requirements for Medicare will be assigned to the appropriate category by a physician who does not have a prohibited relationship with the home health agency as defined in the ''Stark II'' law. Beneficiaries who do not clearly fit in one of the four categories will be placed in the first, lowest rate category.

Payment rates for each of the categories is the average cost of treating patients in that category in 1994 as determined by the Kaiser Foundation study. Those rates are adjusted for wage variations in different parts of the country and updated by the home health market basket for each fiscal year. The Secretary of HHS is given the authority to provide additional payments to certain agencies that have higher costs due to reasons beyond their control.

The bill would eliminate the 15% cut in Medicare home health reimbursement which is scheduled to go into effect on October 1, 2000. The bill would also simplify the reimbursement system by making payments based on the location of the agency rather than the residence of the patient. The bill is intended to provide a ''fail safe'' prospective payment mechanism in the event that HCFA falls behind in its schedule to implement a prospective payment system by October 1, 2000 that can be administered efficiently and monitored effectively.

I urge my colleagues to join us in cosponsoring this important piece of legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1414

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Medicare Home Health Beneficiary Equity and Payment Simplification Act of 1999''.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Research has shown that medicare beneficiaries who are in need of home health services that are covered under the medicare program generally fall into 1 of the 4 following categories:

(A) Post-hospital, short-stay beneficiaries.

(B) Medically stable, long-stay beneficiaries.

(C) Medically complex, long-stay beneficiaries.

(D) Medically unstable and complex, extremely high-use beneficiaries.

(2) The interim payment system for home health services under the medicare program, enacted as part of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 and amended by title V of the Tax and Trade Relief Extension Act of 1998 (contained in Division J of Public Law 105–277), is having the following unintended consequences:

(A) The sickest, most frail medicare beneficiaries are losing access to medically necessary home health services that are otherwise covered under the medicare program.

(B) Many high quality, cost-effective home health agencies have had per beneficiary limits under the interim payment system set so low that such agencies are finding it impossible to continue to provide home health services under the medicare program.

(C) Many home health agencies are being subjected to aggregate per beneficiary limits under the interim payment system that do not accurately reflect the current patient mix of such agencies, thereby making it impossible for such agencies to compete with similarly situated home health agencies.

(D) Medicare beneficiaries that reside in certain States and regions of the country have far less access to home health services under the medicare program than individuals who have identical medical conditions but reside in other States or regions of the country.

(E) The health status of home health beneficiaries varies significantly in different regions of the country, creating differing needs for home health services.

SEC. 3. PAYMENTS TO HOME HEALTH AGENCIES UNDER MEDICARE.

(a) REVISION OF PROSPECTIVE PAYMENT SYSTEM.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 1895 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395fff) (as amended by section 5101 of the Tax and Trade Relief Extension Act of 1998 (contained in Division J of Public Law 105–277)) is amended—

By Mr. HATCH:

S. 1415. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide for S corporation reform, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation that would provide critical and direct improvements to the competitiveness of the over 2.1 million S corporations nationwide. The vast majority of S corporations operate as small businesses. By 1995, they comprised 48 percent of all corporations. In my home state of Utah, S corporations make up half of the 21,600 corporations in the state.

Despite the reforms that were enacted in 1996 and in previous years, the tax laws that currently govern S corporations remain too restrictive, complex, and burdensome, particularly in comparison with the laws that are imposed on other entities. As a result, Mr. President, many of these small businesses are unable to attract sufficient capital and to grow to their full potential.

For example, the inability to issue preferred stock denies S corporations access to badly needed senior equity. Capital is also eliminated by a requirement that prevents straight debt from being converted into stock. Substantial reforms need to be enacted to ensure better competition for small businesses in today's increasingly sophisticated and global economy.

Mr. President, the current law is threatening the multi-generational family business in our country. Law allows only for 75 shareholders under an S corporation, and each member of a family is currently treated as a single, distinct shareholder. In addition, nonresident aliens are not allowed as shareholders. This ban on nonresident alien shareholders is an outmoded restriction dating back to the creation of Subchapter S. Since that time, partnerships have been allowed to involve nonresidential aliens. And, as the economy becomes more global, S corporations will be at a disadvantage relative to the more flexible partnerships. Mr. President, this bill would eliminate these outdated provisions and allow for all family members to be counted as one shareholder for purposes of S corporation eligibility, as well as permitting nonresident aliens to be shareholders.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to review and support the Subchapter S Revision Act. This legislation will help American families pass their businesses from one generation to the next and to create a level playing field for small business. We should not allow the more than 10,000 S corporations in my home state, as well as the many others across the country, to be subject to rules and regulations that limit their competitiveness. I am looking forward to working with my fellow members of the Finance Committee in enacting this bill.

I ask that a description of the bill's provisions be in included in the RECORD.

The description follows:

TITLE 1—SUBCHAPTER S EXPANSION

SUBTITLE A—ELIGIBLE SHAREHOLDERS OF AN S CORPORATION

Sec. 101. Members of a family treated as one shareholder—All family members within seven generations who own stock could elect to be treated as one shareholder. The election would be made available to only one family per corporation, must be made with the consent of all shareholders of the corporation and would remain in effect until terminated. This provision is intended to keep S corporations within families that might span several generations.

Sec. 102. Nonresident Aliens—This section would provide the opportunity for aliens to invest in domestic S corporations and S corporations to operate abroad with a foreign shareholder by allowing nonresident aliens to own S corporation stock.

SUBTITLE B—QUALIFICATIONS AND ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS OF S CORPORATIONS

Sec. 111. Issuance of preferred stock permitted—An S corporation would be allowed to issue either convertible or plain vanilla preferred stock. Holders of preferred stock would not be treated as shareholders; thus, ineligible shareholders like corporations or partnerships could own preferred stock interests in S corporations. Subchapter S corporations would receive the same recapitalization treatment as family-owned C corporations. This provision would afford S corporations and their shareholders badly needed access to senior equity.

Sec. 112. Safe harbor expanded to include convertible debt—An S corporation is not considered to have more than one class of stock if outstanding debt obligations to shareholders meet the ''straight debt'' safe harbor. Currently, the safe harbor provides that straight debt cannot be convertible into stock. The legislation would permit a convertibility provision so long as that provision is substantially the same as one that could have been obtained by a person not related to the S corporation or S corporation shareholders.

Sec. 113. Repeal of excessive passive investment income as a termination event: This provision would repeal the current rule that terminates S corporation status for certain corporations that have both Subchapter C earnings and profits and that derive more than 25 percent of their gross receipts from passive sources for three consecutive years.

Sec. 114. Repeal passive income capital gain category—The legislation would retain the rule that imposes a tax on those corporations possessing excess net passive investment income, but, to conform to the general treatment of capital gains, it would exclude capital gains from classification as passive income. Thus, such capital gains would be subject to a maximum 20 percent rate at the shareholder level in keeping with the 1997 tax law change. Excluding capital gains also parallels their treatment under the PHC rules.

Sec. 115. Allowance of charitable contributions of inventory and scientific property—This provision would allow the same deduction for charitable contributions of inventory and scientific property used to care for the ill, needy, or infants for Subchapter S as for Subchapter C corporations. In addition, S corporations would no longer be disqualified from making ''qualified research contributions'' (charitable contributions of inventory property to educational institutions or scientific research organizations) for use in research or experimentation.

Sec. 116. C corporation rules to apply for fringe benefit purposes—The current rule that limits the ability of ''more-than-two-percent'' S corporation shareholder-employees to exclude certain fringe benefits from wages would be repealed for benefits other than health insurance.

SUBTITLE C—TAXATION OF S CORPORATION SHAREHOLDERS

Sec. 120. Treatment of losses to shareholders—A loss recognized by a shareholder in complete liquidation of an S corporation would be treated as an ordinary loss to the extent the shareholder's adjusted basis in the S corporation stock is attributable to ordinary income that was recognized as a result of the liquidation. Suspended passive activity losses from C corporation years would be allowed as deductions when and to the extent they would be allowed to C corporations.

SUBTITLE D—EFFECTIVE DATE

Sec. 130. Effective Date—Except as otherwise provided, the amendments made by this legislation shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1999.●

By Mr. FEINGOLD (for himself and Mr. KOHL):

S. 1416. A bill to amend the Agricultural Marketing Agreement of 1937 to allow a modified bloc voting by cooperative associations of milk producers in connection with the scheduled August referendum on Federal Milk Marketing Order reform; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

DEMOCRACY FOR DAIRY PRODUCERS ACT OF 1999

● Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise to introduce a measure that will begin to restore to many dairy farmers throughout the nation, part of the market power they have lost in recent years.

Mr. President, on March 31 of this year, Secretary Glickman put forth the Department of Agriculture's final rule on the Federal Milk Marketing Order system. As many of you know, that proposal consolidated federal orders and made changes to various pricing formulas in current law.

As mandated in last year's Omnibus Appropriations bill, this new federal policy is scheduled to take effect no later than October 1, 1999. However, prior to October, this nation's farmers will put USDA's proposal to a referendum. Farmers will have the opportunity to vote on their futures. Or at least that is what is supposed to happen.

Mr. President, most farmers in the country won't actually get to vote on this, the most significant change in dairy policy in sixty years. Their dairy marketing cooperatives will cast their votes for them.

This procedure is called bloc voting and it is used all the time. Basically, a Cooperative's Board of Directors decides that, in the interest of time, bloc voting will be implemented for that particular vote. In the interest of time, but not always in the interest of their producer owner-members.

Mr. President, I do think that bloc voting can be a useful tool in some circumstances, but I have serious concerns about its use in the August referendum on USDA's plan. Farmers in Wisconsin and in other states tell me that they do not agree with their Cooperative's view on the upcoming vote. Yet, they have no way to preserve their right to make their single vote count.

After speaking to farmers and officials at USDA, I have learned that if a Cooperative bloc votes, individual members simply have no opportunity to voice opinions separately. That seems unfair when you consider what a monumental issue is at stake. Coops and their members do not always have identical interests. We shouldn't ask farmers to ignore that fact.

Mr. President, the Democracy for Dairy Producers Act of 1999 is simple and fair. It provides that a cooperative cannot deny any of its members a ballot if one or two or ten or all of the members chose to vote on their own.

This will in no way slow down the process at USDA; implementation of the final rule will proceed on schedule. Also, I do not expect that this would change the final outcome of the vote. Coops could still cast votes for their members who do not exercise their right to vote individually. And to the extent that coops represent farmers interest, farmers are likely to vote along with the coops, but whether they join the coops or not, farmers deserve the right to vote according to their own views.

I urge my colleagues to return just a little bit of power to America's farmers, and a little bit of pure democracy to the vote on the USDA plan which is sure to have such an impact on their future.

I urge my colleagues to support the Democracy for Dairy Producers Act, a dairy bill without regional bias.●

S. 1417. A bill to amend title XIX of the Social Security Act to extend the authority of State Medicaid fraud control units to investigate and prosecute fraud in connection with Federal health care programs and abuse of residents of board and care facilities; to the Committee on Finance.

HEALTH CARE FRAUD CONTROL ACT OF 1999

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I am joined today by Senator BREAUX in introducing the Health Care Fraud Control Act of 1999. This bill is an effective, efficient and economical way to fight fraud, waste and abuse in publicly funded health care programs. It takes a system that is successful in combating Medicaid fraud and expands its authority to pursue investigations in other federal programs when investigators uncover or suspect fraudulent or abusive activities. This bill is common sense.

State Medicaid Fraud Control Units have long been at the forefront of health care fraud enforcement. The Health Care Fraud Control Act would give these units the authority needed to investigate other fraud and abuse cases, including Medicare cases, at the same time as Medicaid cases. This bill, which will be introduced by Rep. RICK LAZIO (R–N.Y.) in the House, would streamline the enforcement process for anti-fraud agents, cutting down on bureaucracy and allowing investigators to pursue anti-fraud cases more efficiently. This bill is an important weapon in the war against health care fraud in the Medicaid and Medicare programs.

The streamlined effort would be especially effective in fighting nursing home fraud and neglect. Many times seniors are eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid payments. Combined, these two programs cover the bulk of the cost of nursing home care in our country. When a nursing home receives both Medicare and Medicaid payments, the potential for fraud is much too high. As the law stands, even if a fraud control unit establishes a strong case showing Medicaid fraud and uncovers Medicare fraud at the same time, it must wait while various federal agencies investigate the Medicare side before the case can be prosecuted.

Any effort to combat fraud is critical. Medicaid's annual budget is $178 billion, and fraud cases can involve significant amounts of money. Meanwhile, improper payments through Medicare were $12.6 billion in Fiscal Year 1998.

Expanding the Medicaid anti-fraud units' jurisdiction will help us erode health care fraud. With billions of tax dollars wasted each year, we need every weapon we can find in the anti-fraud arsenal. We can't afford to waste a single health care dollar.

By Mr. MCCAIN:

S. 1419. A bill to amend title 36, United States Code, to designate May as ''National Military Appreciation Month''; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

NATIONAL MILITARY APPRECIATION MONTH

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill to designate the month of May National Military Appreciation Month. As my colleagues may recall, I had sponsored a resolution earlier in the year, cosponsored by 61 Senators, designating May 1999 as National Military Appreciation Month. That resolution, S. Res. 33, passed by a vote of 93–0 on April 30. The new bill will make that designation permanent.

The introduction of an All-Volunteer Army was an outgrowth of the disenchantment many Americans felt in the wake of the Vietnam War. The end of conscription and the transition to the All-Volunteer concept has been criticized by some for not adequately reflecting socioeconomic divisions within our country. In point of fact, however, with the requisite attention and care, it produced the finest armed forces in history. How far we had come since the tumultuous times of the 1970s when military readiness descended to abysmal levels was evident for all the world to see in the overwhelming victory over Iraqi forces during Operation Desert Storm. But that success has been taken for granted too long. Over 15 years of declining military budgets, combined with record high levels of deployments, have stretched the military to precarious levels.

The end of conscription had another, more far-reaching and subtle implication: it diminished the percentage of the public, including its elected officials, with military experience. This is not a criticism of those who did not serve; on the contrary, as a strong supporter of the All-Volunteer Army, I remain committed to its survival and success. This gradual diminishment in the shared experience of having served in uniform, however, makes it increasingly important that the public reflect every year on the enormous role their armed forces have on preserving freedom.

As thousands of American soldiers move into position in Kosovo, while others continue to serve in Bosnia as well as on the demilitarized zone in Korea and around the world, it is imperative that our men and women in uniform know of the strong continuing support of their country for their dedication and service to this country. Whether we individually agree with each and every deployment or not, we have learned to separate our support every deployment or not, we have learned to separate our support for the armed forces from our differences over the policies that sent them into harm's way. Dedicating one month every year to express our appreciation for the armed forces, the same month in which we recognize Victory in Europe Day, Military Spouse Day, Armed Forces Day, and, most importantly, Memorial Day, is an appropriate measure that I hope will have the support of all my colleagues in Congress.

Mr. President, I generally take a somewhat dim view of celebratory resolutions. But those who fought on the battlefields of Lexington, Gettysburg, Normandy, in the Ardennes and on Okinawa, in Hue and at Khe Sanh, in the deserts of the Persian Gulf and the dusty streets of Mogadish, in the skies over Kosovo and who stand a lonely vigil on the DMZ, must not be forgotten. Too much blood has been spilled in defense of liberty. We owe to those who perished and those who survived, to devote one month out of the year to reflect on the sacrifices of those who have worn their nation's uniform throughout its history.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill, the attached correspondence in support of S. Res. 33 from the Secretary of the Air Force and Air Force Chief of Staff, as well as a letter from retired General Gordon Sullivan, president of the Association of the United States Army, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ASSOCIATION OF THE U.S. ARMY,
Arlington, VA, April 2, 1999.

Hon. JOHN MCCAIN,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR MCCAIN: On behalf of the 100,000 members of the Association of the United States Army, I applaud your introduction of Senate Resolution 33, which would designate May, 1999, as National Military Appreciation Month.

AUSA agrees that Americans should reflect more often on the sacrifices of our military personnel throughout history. Designating a month in which we observe Victory in Europe Day, Armed Forces Week, Military Spouse Day, and Memorial Day, is particularly fitting.

AUSA supports your efforts and recommends that the resolution be amended to make the observance of National Military Appreciation Month an annual event.

Sincerely,

GORDON R. SULLIVAN,
General, USA Retired.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE,
SECRETARY OF THE AIR FORCE,
Washington, DC, May 6, 1999.

Hon. JOHN MCCAIN,

By Mr. KERRY (for himself, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. BREAUX, Mr. INOUYE, Mrs. BOXER, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, and Mr. KENNEDY):

S. 1420. A bill to establish a fund for the restoration and protection of ocean and coastal resources, to amend and reauthorize the Coastal Zone Management Act of 1972, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

COASTAL STEWARDSHIP ACT

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I will shortly be sending to the desk for appropriate referral the Coastal Stewardship Act which I am introducing today, along with Senators HOLLINGS, BREAUX, INOUYE, BOXER, FEINSTEIN and KENNEDY. The goal of the Coastal Stewardship Act is to significantly strengthen our national commitment to and capacity to protect the coastal communities and all of our coastal and ocean environment.

Our coasts—I know the Chair knows this because he represents a State that has enormous fishing interests—our coasts and our oceans are increasingly fragile environments, and they are increasingly threatened. Their health depends on a very complex chain of ecosystems that includes rainwater runoff from inland, estuaries, wetlands, flood plains, tidal basins, coral reefs, our fisheries and the whole deal more. Damage to any one of those ecosystems can wind up degrading and damaging the others, and they can cause severe cultural and economic impact for all of our coastal communities.

Moreover, as our coastal population grows and as coastal development increases, as it has been almost every year for the last 50 years, we are placing more and more stress on these fragile and increasingly unique and interconnecting ecosystems.

Since 1960, the coastal population in the United States has increased by over 50 percent, and that trend is expected to continue. Indeed, it is predicted that over the course of the next 10 years or so, well over 75 percent of the American population will live within 50 miles of coastline of one kind or another. In the next decade alone, an additional 14 million Americans are expected to settle in coastal areas.

The impact is very clear. On the Atlantic coast, we have had toxic outbreaks of pfiesteria. In the Gulf of Mexico, we have a dead zone that has formed that harms shrimp stocks and kills off other species. Our Nation has lost more than 89 million acres of coastal wetlands, and our commercial fisheries are depleted from a combination of mismanagement and also ecosystem impacts. Parts of the Great Lakes have suffered from nutrient enrichment which is destructive to those ecosystems. Finally, even urban areas along our coasts face a unique challenge as they work to clean up polluted industrial sites and bring their waterfronts back to life.

The Coastal Stewardship Act creates the Ocean and Coast Conservation Fund to receive permanent funding from Federal oil and gas leasing on the Outer Continental Shelf. The fund would accrue 10 percent, or a minimum of $250 million of OCS revenues each year.

The CSA uses funds from the Ocean and Coast Conservation Fund and general revenues to support the restoration and preservation of our coastal and marine resources. The specific investments include the following:

First, the CSA provides increased support to the Coastal Zone Management Act. The CZMA is a highly flexible program that allows States to prioritize, design, and implement management plans, meeting broad national objectives for coastal environmental protection and economic development.

Second, the CSA establishes a new highly flexible program within the Department of Commerce to fund coastal habitat, restoration, and preservation projects. With these block grants for conservation, States set priorities and decide how and when projects proceed within broad national goals.

Third, it enhances the Federal commitment to the National Marine Sanctuary Program, a very successful program that designates unique ocean habitat for protection and research. Our 12 national marine sanctuaries restore and rebuild marine habitats to their natural condition and monitor and maintain already healthy areas.

Four, the CSA creates a coral reef restoration and conservation program at the Department of Commerce. The legislation recognizes the importance of maintaining the health and stability of coral reefs for their environmental and economic value, and it builds on the work of the U.S. Coral Reef Task Force.

Five, one of the most difficult challenges to overcome in developing sound policy for U.S. fisheries has been the lack of high-quality information. The CSA establishes a comprehensive program to improve the quality and quantity of fisheries information available to evaluate stock status, design control measures, and monitor effectiveness of those control measures.

Six, the CSA increases Federal support of State and local enforcement by expanding existing cooperative enforcement agreements. These joint ventures allow States and local governments to tailor enforcement procedures to fit the local needs and available resources, and also allow for collaboration between State and local enforcement agencies and Federal agencies.

I will close my comments, Mr. President, by saying to my colleagues that some have expressed concern that somehow this broader effort might have an impact on reauthorization of coastal zone management and national marine sanctuaries, et cetera.

I assure my colleagues this legislation is in addition to and supportive of and supplementary to each of those other efforts which I have personally had the privilege of leading in the past years when I was chairman of the committee. We have reauthorized those in past years, and always we have found that a comprehensive approach has been a far more effective and a, frankly, far more needed approach. But nothing will stand in the way, I am confident, of our efforts to cooperate on each and every one of those efforts.

We need to better meet the needs of our coastal communities, and it is absolutely essential that we look in this country at this issue, not as individual pieces that come at us one by one, but as the sum total of the parts they represent. We need a national policy to reflect that sum total.

I say to Senator BOXER and Senator LANDRIEU, who have legislation of their own regarding the Outer Continental Shelf, that I am proud to be an original cosponsor of Senator BOXER's Resources 2000 effort, and I look forward to working with them to try to address all the concerns we share regarding these issues.

Finally, I am very pleased my colleagues on the Commerce Committee have joined in this. As the Senate knows, the Commerce Committee has primary jurisdiction over our Nation's major coastal programs, and Senators HOLLINGS, BREAUX, INOUYE, and others bring very valuable experience to these issues. I am pleased to include their efforts in this legislation.

S. 1422. A bill to amend the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 to improve the quality of education and raise student achievement by strengthening accountability, raising standards for teachers, rewarding success, and providing better information to parents; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

SCHOOL QUALITY COUNTS ACT

By Mr. SCHUMER:

S. 1423. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to exclude from income $40,000 of the salary of certain teachers who teach high-poverty schools; to the Committee on Finance.

TEACHER TAX RELIEF ACT OF 1999

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the School Quality Counts Act and the Teacher Tax Relief Act of 1999. Mr. President, the National Center for Education Statistics estimates that our nation will require two million teachers over the next decade. In New York State this problem is particularly acute: 40,000 new teachers will be needed over the next four years. In New York City, where there are 10,000 emergency-certified teachers overwhelmingly concentrated in the highest poverty schools, there is virtually no incentive for qualified professionals to teach at the highest poverty schools and as a result there exists an uneven distribution of well trained teachers.

Across the nation, many school districts are experiencing both geographic and subject area teacher shortages. In many instances, school districts with lower tax bases are forced to compete with districts that can afford to pay their teachers higher salaries thus creating a drain on the pool of experienced and qualified teachers in lower income school districts. Attracting and retaining well-qualified teachers, and compensating them appropriately, is critical to raising student achievement.

Mr. President, the School Quality Counts Act deals directly with the teacher quality issue in three ways: First, the bill strengthens state and local accountability for student results by requiring that school districts take specific steps to improve teacher quality within two years of the bill's enactment; second, the legislation would empower parents and taxpayers by providing information on student and school performance through the issuance of school report cards; third, the bill would provide ''achievement awards'' to those schools that demonstrate continuous student improvement.

In addition to these steps, Mr. President, one of the most concrete and important steps we can take now is to create real financial incentives for qualified individuals to teach in high-poverty schools. The Teacher Tax Relief Act of 1999 would create these incentives by exempting the first $40,000 of a teacher's salary from federal income tax for qualified individuals teaching academic subjects in schools where at least 50 percent of the students qualify for the free or reduced price lunch programs. In order to qualify for the exemption, the teacher must be qualified to provide instruction in each and every academic course they teach. No individual who is teaching under an ''emergency'' designation is eligible for the exemption and no teacher whose gross family income exceeds $120,000 is eligible for the exemption. Mr. President, this legislation would increase take-home pay for a teacher earning $40,000 by over $5,000 and would steer high quality teachers to underperforming school districts in addition to providing middle class tax relief. I ask for unanimous consent that the text of both bills be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bills were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1422

Such information shall include—

''(A) whether the teacher has met all State qualification and licensing criteria for the grade levels and subject areas in which the teacher provides instruction;

''(B) whether the teacher is teaching under 'emergency' or other provisional status;

''(C) the college major of the teacher and any other graduate certification or degree held by the teacher, and the field or discipline of each certification or degree.

''(2) SPECIAL PARENTAL NOTIFICATION.—Each State plan shall contain assurances that—

''(A) the State shall ensure that all schools served under this part notify in writing the parents or guardians of any student who is receiving academic instruction from a teacher who has not fully met all State requirements to provide instruction at the grade level at which, and in the subject areas in which, the teacher is providing instruction to the student;

''(B) the notification required under subparagraph (A) shall be made—

''(i) to parents or guardians of any student who is receiving instruction from a teacher who has been exempted from State qualification and licensing criteria or for whom State qualification or licensing criteria have been waived under 'emergency', 'provisional', or other similar procedures;

''(ii) not more than 15 days after the student has been assigned to a teacher described in the subparagraph; and

''(C) before being allowed to accept a teaching assignment in the State, a teacher who has not fully met all State requirements to provide instruction at a grade level or in a subject area in which the teacher is to provide instruction is informed of the notification requirement under this paragraph.

''(3) PUBLIC REPORTING.—Each State plan shall contain assurances that the State shall compile, aggregate, publish, distribute to major print and broadcast media outlets throughout the State and post on a web site on the Internet the information described in paragraph (1) for each school, local educational agency, and the State.

''(4) QUALIFICATIONS OF CERTAIN INSTRUCTIONAL STAFF.—

''(A) Each State plan shall contain assurances that, not later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of the School Quality Counts Act—

''(i) all instructional staff who provide services to students under section 1114 or 1115 have demonstrated the subject matter knowledge, teaching knowledge, and teaching skill necessary to teach effectively in the content area or areas in which they provide instruction, according to the criteria described in this paragraph;

''(ii) except as provided in subparagraph (F), funds under this part may not be used to support instructional staff who provide services to students under section 1114 or 1115 for whom State qualification or licensing requirements have been waived or who are teaching under an 'emergency' or other provisional credential.

''(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), instructional staff who teach elementary school students are required, at a minimum, to hold a bachelors's degree and demonstrate general knowledge, teaching skill, and subject matter knowledge required to teach effectively in reading, writing, mathematics, social studies, science, and other elements of a liberal arts education.

''(C) For purposes of subparagraph (A), instructional staff who teach in middle schools and secondary schools are required, at a minimum, to hold a bachelor's degree or higher and demonstrate a high level of competence in all subject areas in which they teach through—

''(i) a high level of performance on rigorous academic subject area tests; or

''(ii) completion of an academic major in each of the subject areas in which they provide instruction and at least a B average.

''(D) For purposes of subparagraph (A) funds under this part may be used to employ teacher aides or other paraprofessionals who do not meet the requirements under subparagraphs (B) and (C) only if such aides or paraprofessionals—

''(i) provide instruction only when under the direct and immediate supervision, and in the immediate presence, of instructional staff who meet the criteria of this paragraph; and

''(ii) possess particular skills necessary to assist instructional staff in providing services to students served under this Act.

''(E) Each State plan shall contain assurances that beginning on the date of the enactment of the School Quality Counts Act, no school served under this part may use funds received under this Act to hire instructional staff who do not fully meet all the criteria for instructional staff described in this paragraph.

''(F) Each State plan shall contain assurances that not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of the School Quality Counts Act, and annually thereafter, the principal of each school served under this part shall, in writing, attest to the fact that all members of their instructional staff meet the requirements of this paragraph. In a case in which there are instructional staff who have yet to meet all requirements to provide instruction in each of the subject areas and at each of the grade levels to which they are assigned to teach, the principal shall submit, in writing, a plan for ensuring that not later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of the School Quality Counts Act all instructional staff will either meet all requirements under this paragraph or will no longer provide instruction to students served under this part.

''(G) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'instructional staff' includes any individual who has responsibility for providing any student or group of students with instruction in any of the core academic subject areas, including reading, writing, language arts, mathematics, science, and social studies.

''(d) Each State plan shall describe how the State educational agency will help each local educational agency and school develop the capacity to comply with the requirements of this section.''.

By Mr. EDWARDS (for himself and Mrs. HUTCHISON):

S. 1424. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide the same tax treatment for special pay as for combat pay; to the Committee on Finance.

TAX EXEMPT MILITARY PAY ORDERS (TEMPO) ACT

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. President, I rise to introduce with my colleague KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON the Tax Exempt Military Pay Orders (TEMPO) Act. This measure will not only correct an inequity in the way we treat our deployed armed forces, but it also will help let our soldiers know that we recognize and appreciate the sacrifices they and their families make.

Our proposal would provide that income received by a member of the Armed Forces of the United States, while receiving special pay, should be tax exempt. Currently, members of the U.S. Armed Forces who serve in a Presidentially designated ''combat zone'' receive special tax exemptions. I think we all recall that this exemption was in effect during Kosovo. During Kosovo, soldiers did not have to pay excise taxes on phone calls that they make from the combat zone. Nor did they have to pay income taxes on the money earned while in that zone.

The measure we introduce today provides that these same tax exemptions would be triggered when the Secretary of Defense designates his employees as eligible for ''special pay'' based on hostile conditions. Under current law, members of the Armed Forces receive special pay when: subject to hostile fire; on duty in which he, or others with him, are in imminent danger of such fire; were killed, injured or wounded by hostile fire or were on duty in a foreign area in which he was subject to the threat of physical harm or imminent danger on the basis of civil insurrection, civil war, terrorism, or wartime conditions. In the last few years soldiers in Somalia and Haiti have received special pay.

Let me explain why I believe we need to change the tax treatment of special pay. The original tax exemption for combat pay was put in place during the Korean war. From that time until the fall of the Berlin Wall, the employment of U.S. forces almost always was in combat zones. But since the end of the cold war, as we all know, our Armed Forces have been deployed more often, and in a wider variety of circumstances. Today, a soldier with the 82nd Airborne from North Carolina may be sent on a mission that is as dangerous as any combat mission, but because it is not precisely in a combat zone, he cannot receive any tax benefits.

Given the current uses of our Armed Forces, I believe the measure we propose today makes a great deal of sense. I also believe that making this change in the tax code would correct an inequity. Now, I think it is only right that soldiers in the Kosovo engagement are receiving tax exemptions. But during a recent visit to Fort Bragg, many soldiers and their families commented that the same benefits should have been extended to the soldiers who served in Somalia and Haiti. I have to say that I agreed with them.

And so, this bill addresses the new realities of the post-code-war world. As the Senate knows all too well, the end of the cold war brought with it a significant drawdown in the size of our armed forces. Additionally, we shifted from an overseas-based force to one based primarily in the United States. Almost concurrently, our national security strategy has lead us into an era of seemingly continuous deployments. In the 40 years between 1950 and 1990, elements of the U.S. Army were deployed 10 times. In the less than 10 years since the fall of the Berlin Wall, elements of the Army have been deployed 34 times. The Navy's responses have doubled in the 90's. The Air Force has seen its deployed forces rise 400% while its active duty personnel dropped 33%. Some of these deployments are a few months in duration; some are part of a continuous presence—such as our forces in the Sinai. All work hardship on both the members deployed and their families, particularly when there are repeated or back-to-back deployments.

These demands contribute to both recruitment and retention problems. In recognition of these demands and of the likelihood that we will continue to see more of these deployments, this bill recognizes that we need to bring our tax code up to date so that it acknowledges these new realities.

Mr. President, let me tell you more about what this proposal would do. As I previously said, members of the military who receive combat pay get certain tax exemptions. For example:

The income of the soldier while in the combat zone is tax exempt. So is the income of a soldier while hospitalized for injuries received in the combat zone and that portion of a pension or retirement acquired while in a combat zone. In addition, pay received while a prisoner of war as a result of service in the combat zone is tax exempt.

Special tax rates apply for the surviving spouse of a soldier who is missing in action (or presumed dead) in a combat zone.

All taxes are eliminated for the years the soldier served in the combat zone if he is killed in the combat zone.

There are other exemptions, and I ask unanimous consent that this copy of the relevant exemptions be printed in the RECORD.

My bill would give those exact same exemptions to soldiers who receive special pay.

Mr. President, as we close out this century and address the realities of the new century, I ask the Senate approve this measure as a means of acknowledging the sacrifices being demanded of our service members and their families.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that additional material be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SECTION 1: SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Tax Exempt Military Pay Orders (TEMPO) Act''.

CURRENT TAX EXEMPTIONS IN EFFECT FOR COMBAT PAY

Under current law, these exemptions are in effect for members of the Armed Services who receive combat pay:

The income of the soldier while in the combat zone is tax exempt. So is the income of a soldier while hospitalized for injuries received in the combat zone and that portion of a pension or retirement acquired while in a combat zone. In addition, pay received while a prisoner of war as a result of service in the combat zone is tax exempt. (26 U.S.C. §112)

Special tax rates apply for the surviving spouse of a soldier who is missing in action (or presumed dead) in a combat zone. (26 U.S.C. §2(a)(3))

All taxes are eliminated for the years the soldier served in the combat zone if he is killed in the combat zone. (27 U.S.C. §692)

If the soldier is killed in the combat zone, his survivors are entitled to a lower estate tax. (26 U.S.C. §2201)

While in the combat zone, the soldier does not have to pay certain federal excise taxes on phone calls. (26 U.S.C. §4253(d))

The surviving spouse of a soldier who is missing in action gets the option of filing a joint tax return for up to two years after the termination of the combat zone. (26 U.S.C. §6013(f)(1))

Certain tax deadlines and liabilities while in the combat zone are defeated. (26 U.S.C. §7508)

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I am pleased to join Senator EDWARDS of North Carolina to offer legislation very important to those members of our Armed Forces who are deployed in defense of our nation's interests around the world. Our bill will provide for federal tax exemption to those serving in hostile areas not officially designated as combat zones. The current restrictions on this exemption to formally designated combat zones—which do not include many of our peacekeepers who face daily threats to their lives—are a half-century old relic of the Korean War that do not address the realities of the military missions in our post-cold-war world.

Today there are two combat zones as designated by the President in Executive Orders. One is in the Middle East, including the Persian Gulf, the Red Sea, the Gulf of Oman, the Gulf of Aden, as well as Iraq, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Oman, Bahrain, Qatar, and the United Arab Emirates. This area has been a combat zone since January 1991. The other combat zone is the Kosovo Area of Operations including the Federal Republic of Yugoslvia (Serbia/Montenegro), Albania, the Adriatic Sea, and the Ionian Sea. This combat zone has been in effect since March 1999. Members serving in those areas get a tax exemption.

Yet, today there are 17 areas considered so dangerous that our troops there get a special allowance known as Imminent Danger Pay that do not receive the same tax relief that those in a designated combat zone get. In fact, combat zone tax provisions did not apply to our troops in Somalia, where we lost 18 Rangers in one bloody gunfight.

Our bill argues, in effect, that if a location is dangerous enough to earn the allowance reserved for imminent danger, then it's dangerous enough to get favorable tax treatment, too. This would include troops that are in some of the most dangerous parts of the world, including Algeria, Burundi, Pakistan, Sudan, and Yemen.

When our troops are deployed in harm's way anywhere, there should not be a discrepancy in tax benefits from one location to another. This is an administrative distinction that matters little to the brave young Americans who are out there defending us. These determinations are made after careful study by the Secretary of Defense, based on the inherent dangers in a foreign area.

The Senate expressed its support for addressing this inequity in a resolution we passed as part of the FY2000 Defense Authorization Bill. Not only is this the right and fair thing to do, but during these times of increased deployments and personnel shortages, it is in our national interest to continue to show our dedicated service members that we appreciate their sacrifice and commitment.

I commend the Senator from North Carolina for his leadership on this issue and urge other Senators to join us in this effort.

By Mr. SPECTER:

S. 1425. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow a 10 percent biotechnology investment tax credit and to reauthorize the Research and Development tax credit for ten years; to the Committee on Finance.

BIOTECHNOLOGY TAX CREDIT ACT OF 1999

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, we are faced today with the unique challenges brought by the extraordinary biological, technological, and medical advances of this decade. We have seen miraculous breakthroughs in the fight against communicable diseases: the complete eradication of small pox, the near global eradication of polio, vaccines for ailments such as measles, rubella, and even the flu. Revolutionary new drugs and improved surgical techniques allow us all to lead longer, more productive lives. But past success is not a guarantee of future progress and science does not bear fruit overnight. Breaking the code for complex problems takes a steady and sustained commitment of people and money. As we enter the next century, we have a responsibility to perpetuate and improve upon our enormous capacity to prevent, detect, treat, and cure diseases of all types.

The Congress continues to be gravely concerned with rising health care costs, as demonstrated by contentious debate as recently as last week during consideration of the Patients' Bill of Rights. According to the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA), health care spending in this country had risen to $1.1 trillion in 1997, or an average of just under $4,000 per person. Private sources paid for a little over half of that, about $585 billion, with the remainder coming from public programs like Medicare and Medicaid. HCFA further predicts that public spending on health will nearly double over the next decade, reaching $2.1 trillion in 2007.

I disagree with the premise that this is simply a dollars and cents problem. I believe science holds our best chance for both combating disease and controlling the ever-spiraling costs it imposes on society. For victims of cancer and heart disease, scientific research represents their only hope for new drugs and medical treatments that can add years to life. Research can produce miracle vaccines that save the lives of children stricken with deadly diseases like leukemia. And for growing numbers of elderly, research holds the key to stopping the ruinous effects of Alzheimer's disease, stroke and arthritis—all very expensive ailments to treat. To me, the equation is a simple one: less disease and illness mean less human suffering and lower health care costs.

Over the next three decades, the number of Americans over age 65 will double. My state of Pennsylvania houses the second highest elderly population, currently totaling nearly 2 million citizens. Mr. President, unless science finds cures and effective treatments for disease and illness, our society will face even higher costs and our hospitals and nursing facilities will be strained to the breaking point.

As Chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, I have said many times that I firmly believe that the National Institutes of Health (NIH) is the crown jewel of the Federal government, and substantial investment is crucial to allow the continuation of the breakthrough research into the next decade. In 1981, NIH funding was less than $3.6 billion. For the past three years, NIH funding has increased by 6.8 percent in fiscal year 1997, 7.1 percent in fiscal year 1998, and 15 percent in fiscal year 1999, for a total of $15.7 billion. I am continuing to fight to double the NIH budget, a sentiment which was unanimously supported in the United States Senate during the 105th Congress. Further, on January 19th of this year, I joined my colleagues, Senators MACK, FRIST and HARKIN in introducing S. Res. 19, a Sense of the Senate resolution to increase biomedical research funding by $2 billion for fiscal year 2000.

Mr. President, I cite continued efforts to increase the Federal investment in biomedical research in order to highlight the public policy importance of scientific investment. I believe that the Federal government also has the responsibility to provide an economic environment that promotes Research and Development in biomedical research in the private sector as well. To make good business decisions, particularly relating to investment in R&D, biomedical and ''biotech'' firms need to have reliable and well defined tax laws. Today I am introducing legislation that would establish a 10 percent tax credit for investment in biomedical research, and would extend the R & D tax credit to 10 years.

The purpose of the investment tax credit is to encourage biomedical research and to stimulate the economy, as well as to enhance our long-term competitiveness in the global biomedical arena. The investment tax credit would provide a 10 percent tax credit for purchases of capital equipment, instruments and supplies used in a laboratory setting by a biotechnology company. Without this tax credit, American companies will be competing with one hand tied behind their backs.

The R & D tax credit has proven to be critical to the U.S. biomedical research industry. The credit has allowed for many successes in U.S. scientific research and innovation, such as rapid progress in finding cures for life threatening diseases such as AIDS, cancer, and multiple sclerosis. My Subcommittee has held hearings on the state of affairs in biomedical research, and I understand from many scientists that we are on the cusp of breakthroughs many of today's most complex diseases—Alzheimer's, AIDS, heart disease, diabetes, and arthritis, to name a few. But, the scientists caution, it will only be through sustained investment, both public and private, that we will reap the rewards of biomedical research. If we cut investment in medical progress today, the consequence may be irrevocable and society may rue that decision for years to come.

As we prepare for the 21st century, we must remain committed to providing an environment that fosters technological investment, scientific exploration, and global competitiveness. Future economic growth and the prosperity of all Americans depends on continued R&D in all sectors of our nation.

Mr. President, we must act now to extend the R&D credit and send the right signal to our nation's researchers. Failure to act will not only jeopardize our research efforts, but it will also threaten the United States's world leadership in R&D and perpetuate the rising health care costs we so desperately have tried to contain. It should be noted that everything that is good and desirable is not necessarily worthy of a tax credit, but targeted tax credits are particularly appropriate where an activity engaged in by one company or individual provides such considerable benefits to society at large.

We must constantly remind ourselves that medical innovation is the most viable, long-term solution for cost-effective quality care. Our task in Congress should be to assure that the path of innovation remains open, unobstructed and attractive to both public and private investors.

For me, creating a better atmosphere for investment in medical research is more than a symbolic goal. It is a recognition that expanding our base of scientific knowledge inevitably leads to better health, lower health care costs, and an improved quality of life for all Americans. Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation, and urge its swift adoption.

In my capacity as chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee for Labor, Health, Human Services and Education, our subcommittee has the responsibility for funding the National Institutes of Health. The Senate passed a resolution targeting a doubling of National Institutes of Health funding over a 5-year period. That requires an enormous increase.

Last year, with the cooperation of my distinguished ranking member, Senator HARKIN, we increased NIH funding by $2 billion. The year before the Senate voted an increase of some $950 million, which was conferenced out at $907 million.

This year the subcommittee faces a 302(b) allocation—if anyone is listening on C-Span II, that's how much money the subcommittee is allotted under the budget—that is some $12 billion under the President's request, about $12 billion under any logical sum of money to fund those three departments: The Department of Labor, the Department of Health and Human Services, and the Department of Education. We are struggling to try to find the funds to match last year's $2 billion increase. If we were to reach the goal set by the sense-of-the-Senate resolution we would have to come up with $2.3 billion.

In talking to the people in the biotech industry, they are very much interested in having an investment tax credit. An investment tax credit of 10 percent would provide a real tax incentive to induce biotech companies to do research. We are on the brink of some phenomenal advances as a result of what happened with stem cell research late last year. Stem cell research has the potential to be a veritable fountain of youth, to tackle ailments like Alzheimer's or Parkinson's, or perhaps heart disease or cancer.

There is a controversy on that question, as to whether embryos may appropriately be used for research. So far the Department of Health and Human Services and their legal counsel concluded that the current limitation on research would not apply to research on stem cells after they are extracted from embryos. Realistically, there ought to be no limitation at all, because in dealing with embryos we are not dealing with an entity which could produce life. These are discarded embryos from in vitro fertilization.

This controversy is very similar to the controversy which existed with respect to fetal tissue, where arguments were made that using fetal tissue would lead to induced abortions where the fact of the matter was the fetal tissue was discarded fetal tissue, did not induce abortions.

But the opportunities for phenomenal advances in medical research are virtually unlimited. In the absence of the ability of the Congress, given budget limitations, to meet the doubling goal within 5 years, an investment tax credit would be an enormous help in stimulating investments by the biotech companies.

The research and development tax credit has been extended year by year, and a firm statement by Congress extending it for 10 years again would be an inducement for biotech.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

By Mr. HARKIN (for himself, Mr. DASCHLE, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. KERREY, Mr. CONRAD, and Mr. JOHNSON):

S. 1426. A bill to amend the Food Security Act of 1985 to promote the conservation of soil and related resources, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

THE CONSERVATION SECURITY ACT OF 1999

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I will take a few minutes to talk about America's farmers and ranchers and the promise they hold for us and the future for our environment, for production of bountiful, safe, and nourishing food for us and for the population around the globe.

Specifically on the issue of conservation, it became a national priority in the days of the Dust Bowl, leading to the creation in the 1930s of the Soil Conservation Service at the Department of Agriculture, which is now the Natural Resources Conservation Service. With the very foundation of our food supply at risk, the Government stepped forward with billions of dollars in assistance to help farmers preserve their precious soils.

Since that time, Federal spending on conservation has steadily declined. Yet today agriculture faces a wide range of environmental challenges, from overgrazing and manure management to fertilizer runoff and water pollution. Urban and rural citizens alike are increasingly concerned about the environmental impact of agriculture.

Farmers and ranchers pride themselves on being good stewards of the land, and there are farm-based solutions to these problems being implemented all over the country. But every dollar spent on constructing a filter strip or developing a nutrient management plan is a dollar that farmers don't have in hard times like these. And even in better times, there is a lot of competition for that dollar.

So who benefits from conservation on farm lands? As much or more than the farmer, it is the rest of us, who depend on the careful stewardship of the water that travels across fields and pastures before reaching rivers, streams, and our groundwater. Farmers and ranchers tend not only to their crops and animals, but also to our public resources.

Since we all share in these benefits, it is only right that we share in their costs. It is time to enter into a true conservation partnership with our farmers and ranchers to help ensure that conservation is not a luxury that comes and goes but an essential and permanent part of sustainable agricultural production nationwide.

In the 1985 farm bill, we required that farmers who wanted to participate in USDA farm programs develop soil conservation plans for their highly erodible land. This provision helped put new conservation plans in place for our most fragile farmlands. In the most recent farm bill, we streamlined conservation programs and established new cost-share and incentive payments for certain practices.

Today I am introducing the Conservation Security Act of 1999, proposed legislation that builds on our past successes and takes a bold step forward in farm and conservation policy.

My bill would establish a universal and voluntary incentive payment program to support and encourage conservation activities by all farmers and ranchers. Under this program, farmers and ranchers could receive up to $50,000 per year in conservation payments. Under this conservation security program, farmers would enter into 3- to 5-year contracts with USDA and choose from one of three classes of conservation practices for which they would receive a payment based on the number of acres covered and the county rental rate for those acres.

This program is directed toward conservation on working lands. It is not a set-aside. It is not an easement program. It is not a conservation reserve program. It is a conservation program so that we farm in the best way possible to conserve our resources and to prevent pollution.

For implementing a basic set of practices, farmers would receive an annual payment of 10 percent of the rental rate of the land covered. I call this basic category class I, and it would include such practices as nutrient management, conservation tillage, and runoff and drainage control.

There would be a class II under which farmers could receive up to 20 percent of the rental rate, where farmers would add to their class I practices by choosing from a menu of class II practices that would be established by the USDA—such things as nutrient management, composting, intensive grazing, partial field practices such as buffer strips and windbreaks, wetland restoration, and wildlife habitat enhancement.

Then the third class, farmers who wanted to do class III conservation practices would enroll their whole farm under a total resource management plan that addresses all aspects of air, land, water, and wildlife. For that, the farmers would receive a 40-percent payment, 40 percent of the rental rate of land in that county.

This bill also provides an incentive for livestock producers. In payment for preparing and adopting comprehensive manure management plans, producers raising under 1,000 animal units at any given time—that would be 2,500 hogs, 1,000 beef cattle, 700 dairy cattle, 55,000 turkeys, or 100,000 chickens—they would be given a per animal incentive payment equal to 10 percent of the 5-year average market price.

This program would not replace or otherwise affect any other conservation program, not at all, this is to add on, except that a farmer could not receive incentive payments under this program in addition to incentive payments under another program in addition to incentive payments for land already enrolled in a program such as the Conservation Reserve Program. In other words, you couldn't have your land in the Conservation Reserve Program and then enter this program with that same land.

Again, I emphasize, the Conservation Security Program would be totally voluntary. It would be up to the farmer to decide if they want to do it. If they do, then they would get additional payments. A lot of these practices farmers are already doing now, for which they receive little or no support.

Again, these practices don't just benefit the farmer; in fact, a lot of times it may burden the farmer. That farmer may have to do extra work, require a little extra time. Maybe some equipment for these kinds of conservation practices. The beneficiaries of this are all of us. We all will benefit from cleaner air, cleaner streams and rivers, protecting our groundwater, wildlife habitats for those of us who like to hunt and fish.

Our private lands are a national resource, and conservation on farm and ranchlands provides environmental benefits that are just as important as the production of abundant and safe food. I am introducing the Conservation Security Act because I believe it will help secure both the economic future of our farmers, help them a little bit with the safety net, and it will be a cornerstone, I think, of our national farm policy and the environmental future of agriculture.

I am introducing this bill for myself, Senator DASCHLE, Senator LEAHY, Senator KERREY of Nebraska, Senator CONRAD, and Senator JOHNSON.

I ask other Senators who are interested to contact my staff. We are now actively seeking cosponsors for this new voluntary conservation program.

I thank the Chair.

By Mr. HATCH (for himself, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. BOND, Mr. SMITH of Oregon, Mr. HELMS, Mr. REID, and Mr. BRYAN):

S. 1428. A bill to amend the Controlled Substances Act and the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act relating to the manufacture, traffick, import and export of amphetamine and methamphetamine, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

METHAMPHETAMINE ANTI-PROLIFERATION ACT OF 1999

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Methamphetamine Anti-Proliferation Act of 1999, a very important piece of legislation in America's on-going war on drugs. Three years ago I introduced the Comprehensive Methamphetamine Act of 1999, which this body passed, to address the frightening and very real problem of methamphetamine abuse in this country. That legislation has provided law enforcement with necessary tools to combat methamphetamine and has helped us track and slow the proliferation of methamphetamine manufacturing and abuse. However, there remain too many people in this country who are determined to undermine our drug laws and turn America into one colossal metamphetamine laboratory. For this reason, I, along with Senators FEINSTEIN, DEWINE, BOND, THURMOND, BIDEN, BRYAN, and REID, are introducing this bipartisan bill that seeks to shield America against the proliferation of methamphetamine Manufacturing.

The methamphetamine threat differs in kind from the threat of other illegal drugs because methamphetamine can be made from readily available and legal chemicals and substances, and because it poses serious dangers to both human life and to the environment. America's history of fighting illegal drugs has been long and tiring but with so many young Americans still being exposed to so many destructive drugs, now is not the time to give up—it is a time to fight smarter and harder. The provisions of this bill will provide law enforcement with several effective tools that will help us turn the tide of proliferation of methamphetamine manufacturing in America.

Traditionally, the overwhelming majority of illegal drugs consumed in America has been manufactured outside of our borders and then illegally smuggled into America. The rapid spread and growing use of methamphetamine threatens to change the future of where drugs are manufactured. Drug pushers are threatening to turn America into a producing country of a drug that affects the lives of every American because it not only destroys the lives of those who use the drug, but also can have devastating effects on people situated around lab sites, on law enforcement officials that have to clean the labs, and on the environment.

According to a report prepared by the Community Epidemiology Work Group, which is part of the National Institute on Drug Abuse, methamphetamine ''abuse levels remain high . . . and there is strong evidence to suggest this drug will continue to be a problem in West Coast areas and to spread to other areas of the United States.'' the reasons given for the ominous prediction are that methamphetamine can be produced easily in small, clandestine labs and the chemicals used to make methamphetamine are readily available.

This threat is real and immediate, and the numbers are telling. According to the Drug Enforcement Administration, the DEA, the number of labs cleaned up by the Administration has almost doubled each year since 1995. Last year 5,786 amphetamine and methamphetamine labs were seized by DEA and State and local law enforcement officials, and millions of dollars were spent on cleaning up the pollutants and toxins created and left behind by operators of these labs. In Utah alone, there were 266 lab seizures last year, a number which elevated Utah to the unenviable position of being ranked third among all states for higher per capita clan lab seizures. The problem with the high number of manufacturing labs is compounded by the fact that the chemicals and substances utilized in the manufacturing process are unstable, volatile, and highly combustible. The smallest amounts of these chemicals, when mixed improperly, can cause explosions and fires. And of course, those operating these labs are not scientists, but rather unskilled, ignorant, criminals and fly-by-nights who are completely apathetic to the destructive powers that are inherent in the manufacturing process. This fact is even more frightening when you consider that most of these labs are situated in residences, motels, trailers, and vans.

Let me take a moment to highlight some of the provisions of this bill that will assist Federal, State, and local law enforcement in preventing the proliferation of methamphetamine manufacturing in America.

First, the bill will bolster the DEA's ability to combat the manufacturing and trafficking of methamphetamine and other drugs by authorizing the hiring of new agents to carry out a variety of anti-drug initiatives. Agents will be hired to assist State and local law enforcement officials in small and mid-sized communities in all phases of methamphetamine manufacturing investigations. Due to the large number of manufacturers and traffickers that are setting up shop in small and rural cities, law enforcement agencies located in these areas are in dire need of the DEA's expert guidance and knowledge of methamphetamine investigations, including assistance in interrogating suspects, conducting surveillance operations, and collecting evidence to build a case. This bill also authorizes the expansion of the number of DEA resident offices and posts-of-duty, which are smaller DEA offices often set up in small and rural cities that are overwhelmed by methamphetamine manufacturing and trafficking.

Another way this legislation will help the DEA assist State and local officials is to provide for the training of State and local law enforcement personnel in techniques used in methamphetamine investigations and to provide them with certification training in handling the dangerously-volatile and toxic wastes produced by methamphetamine labs. It also provides for the creation of another DEA program that will enable certain State and local law enforcement officials to recertify other law enforcement in their regions. These programs are authorized for a three year period and designed to pass on the DEA's knowledge and expertise to State and local officials so that they can become more independent of the DEA and thereafter rely rather on each other in combating the scourge of methamphetamine manufacturing.

This bill contains many references to the drug amphetamine, a lesser known, but equally dangerous drug. Because the process of manufacturing amphetamine is as dangerous as manufacturing methamphetamine, this bill seeks to equalize the punishment for manufacturing the two drugs. Other than being slightly less potent, amphetamine is manufactured, sold, and used in the same manner as methamphetamine. In fact, many times a person can set out to manufacture a batch of methamphetamine and end up with amphetamine if just one precursor chemical is used in place of another. When this happens, drug dealers sell amphetamine as methamphetamine and users buy and use it thinking it is methamphetamine. The dangers posed to the environment are also the same. Amphetamine labs have the same destructing and polluting ability as methamphetamine labs. Every law enforcement officer with whom I have spoken, including federal and State prosecutors and federal and State law enforcement officials, agreed that the penalties for amphetamine should be the same as those for methamphetamine.

Another important section of this bill will assist in preventing the manufacture of methamphetamine and other illegal drugs by banning the dissemination of drug ''recipes'' and other demonstrative information relating to the manufacturing and use of controlled substances. The dissemination of this type of information is prohibited if the intent of the person disseminating the information is for it to be used for, or in furtherance of, a federal crime or if the person disseminating the information has knowledge that the person receiving the information intends to use the information for, or in furtherance, of a federal crime. Currently, there are hundreds of sites on the Internet that instruct how to manufacture methamphetamine and other illegal drugs, including what ingredients are required, what instruments or equipment is needed, and how to combine precisely the ingredients. These step-by-step instructions will be illegal under this bill if the person posting the information or the person receiving the information intends to engage in activity that violates our drug laws.

I was shocked to discover that those who embrace the drug counter-culture these days are using the Internet to promote, advertise, and sell illegal drugs and drug paraphernalia. In 1992, Congress passed a law that made it illegal for anyone to sell or offer for sale drug paraphernalia. This law resulted in the closings of numerous ''head shops,'' yet, now the out-of-business store owners are selling their illegal drug paraphernalia on the Internet. This bill will amend the anti-drug paraphernalia statute to clarify that advertisements for sale include the use of any communication facility, including the Internet, to post or publicize in any way any matter, including a telephone number or electronic or mail address, knowing that such matter is designed to be used to buy, distribute, or otherwise facilitate a transaction in drug paraphernalia. This will not only prevent web sites from advertising drug paraphernalia for sale, but it will also prohibit web sites that do not sell drug paraphernalia from allowing other sites that do from advertising on its web site. Currently, anyone can log on to the Internet, go to one of the numerous pro-drug sites, and purchase illegal drug paraphernalia, such bongs, water pipes, ''Toke'' bottles and ''High Again'' bottles, along with descriptions of how these devices can assist in getting a better ''high'' from smoking marijuana. There are even web sites that advertise for sale marijuana and poppy seeds, along with growing and nurturing instructions. This type of behavior is not only reprehensible, but it is also illegal, and this clarifying provision can help stop this behavior from continuing over the Internet.

Finally, this legislation seeks to impose harsher penalties on manufacturers of illegal drugs when their actions create a substantial risk of harm to human life or to the environment. The inherent dangers of killing innocent bystanders and, at the same time, contaminating the environment during the methamphetamine manufacturing process warrant a punitive penalty that will deter some from engaging in the activity.

Mr. President, many people have grown increasingly more skeptical as to whether America can ever rid our nation of the dreadful plague of illegal drug use. I say to all those skeptics that now is not the time to take a defeatist attitude. Too many bright young people are depending on us to do what is right. Sure, some measures taken in the past have not been as helpful as some may have hoped, but that just means we need to keep persevering to find the right answers. I believe that this bill contains many of the right answers and will help in one of our nation's most difficult struggles. We can defeat the drug dealers and traffickers. We must fight back for the sake of our children and grandchildren. I hope that Senators will join me in this fight and support this very important piece of legislation. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of this legislation and a summary be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SUMMARY OF THE METHAMPHETAMINE ANTI-PROLIFERATION ACT OF 1999

Sec. 1. Short Title.

Methamphetamine Anti-Proliferation Act of 1999

Sec. 2. Manufacture and Distribution of Amphetamine and Methamphetamine.

Section 1 amends title 21 U.S.C. 841(b)(1) to make the statutory punishment for the manufacture and distribution of amphetamine the same as that of methamphetamine.

Sec. 3. Import and Export of Amphetamine and Methamphetamine.

Section 2 amends the Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 960(b)) to make the statutory punishment for amphetamine the same as that of methamphetamine.

Sec. 4. Sentencing Guidelines.

Section 3 amends the Sentencing Guidelines to adjust the penalty for amphetamine to meet the penalty for methamphetamine. It also provides for a 6 level enhancement if the manufacturing either meth or amphetamine created a substantial risk of danger to the health and safety of a minor or incompetent.

Sec. 5. Advertisements For Drug Paraphernalia and Schedule I Controlled Substances.

Section 8 amends 21 U.S.C. 863 (drug paraphernalia statute) to prohibit direct or indirect advertisements for the sale of paraphernalia. It defines advertisements for sale to include the use of any communication facility to post or publicize in any way any matter, including a telephone number or electronic or mail address, knowing that such matter has the purpose of seeking or offering, or is designed to be used, to receive, buy, distribute, or otherwise facilitate a transaction.

It also amends 21 U.S.C. 843(c) to prohibit direct or indirect advertising for the sale of a Schedule I Controlled Substance. The current statute arguably only prohibited the direct advertising of a schedule I drug in the print media.

Sec. 6. Continuing Criminal Enterprise.

Section 11 amends the Continuing Criminal Enterprise statute (21 U.S.C. 848) by replacing the phrase ''continuing series of violations of'' with the phrase ''continuing series of 3 or more acts made punishable by.'' This change is in response to the recent Supreme Court case Richardson v. United States (decided June 1, 1999) where the Court held that a jury in a CCE case must unanimously agree not only that the defendant committed some ''continuing series of violations,'' but also about which specific ''violations'' make up that ''continuing series.'' There was previously a split among the circuits (the 4th Circuit and the D.C. Circuit both had ruled unanimity with respect to particular ''violations'' was not required).

Sec. 7. Mandatory Restitution for Meth Lab Clean-Up.

Section 7 makes reimbursement for the costs incurred by the U.S. or State and local governments for the cleanup associated with the manufacture of amphetamine or methamphetamine mandatory. It also provides that the restitution money will go to the Asset Forfeiture Fund instead of the treasury.

Sec. 8. Endangering Human Life or the Environment While Illegally Manufacturing Amphetamine or Methamphetamine.

Section 8 increases the penalty under 21 U.S.C. 858 to not less than 10 years for manufacturing or trafficking a controlled substance that creates a substantial risk of harm to human life or the environment. It creates a rebuttable presumption that the manufacturing of amphetamine or methamphetamine constitutes the creation of a substantial risk of harm to human life and the environment.

Sec. 9. Criminal Prohibition on Distribution of Certain Information Relating to the Manufacture of Controlled Substances.

Section 9 prohibits teaching or demonstrating the manufacture or use of a Controlled Substance or distributing by any means information pertaining to the manufacture or use of a Controlled Substance (1) with the intent that this information be used for, or in furtherance of, an activity that constitutes a federal crime; or (2) knowing that such person intends to use this information for, or in furtherance of, an activity that constitutes a federal crime. The penalty for violation is not more than 10 years in prison.

Sec. 10. Notice; Clarification.

This section amends 18 U.S.C. 3103a to allow for the delay of any notice that is, or may be, required pursuant to the issuance of a warrant under this section or any other law.

Sec. 11. Training for Drug Enforcement Administration and State and Local Law Enforcement Personnel Relating to Clandestine Laboratories.

Section 11 authorizes $5.5 million in funding for DEA training programs designed to (1) train State and local law enforcement in techniques used in meth investigations; (2) provide a certification program for State and local law enforcement enabling them to meet requirements with respect to the handling of wastes created by meth labs; (3) create a certification program that enables certain State and local law enforcement to recertify other law enforcement in their regions; and (4) staff mobile training teams which provide State and local law enforcement with advanced training in conducting clan lab investigations and with training that enables them to recertify other law enforcement personnel. The training programs are authorized for 3 years after which the States, either alone or in consultation/combination with other States, will be responsible for training their own personnel. The States will be required to submit a report detailing what measures they are taking to ensure that they have programs in place to take over the responsibility after the three year federal program expires.

Sec. 12. Combating Methamphetamine in High Intensity Drug Trafficking Areas.

This section authorizes $5 million a year for fiscal years 2000–2004 to be appropriated to ONDCP to combat trafficking of methamphetamine in designated HIDTA's by hiring new federal, State, and local law enforcement personnel, including agents, investigators, prosecutors, lab technicians and chemists. It provides that the funds shall be apportioned among the HIDTA's based on the following factors: (1) number of Meth labs discovered in the previous year; (2) number of Meth prosecutions in the previous year; (3) number of Meth arrests in the previous year; (4) the amounts of Meth seized in the previous year; and (5) intelligence data from the DEA showing trafficking and transportation patterns in methamphetamine, amphetamine and listed chemicals. Before apportioning any funds, the Director must certify that the law enforcement entities responsible for clan lab seizures are providing lab seizure data to the national clandestine laboratory database at the El Paso Intelligence Center. It also provides that not more than five percent of the appropriated amount may be used for administrative costs.

Sec. 13. Combating Amphetamine and Methamphetamine Manufacturing and Trafficking.

This section authorizes $6.5 million to be appropriated for the hiring of new agents to (1) assist State and local law enforcement in small and mid-sized communities in all phases of drug investigations; (2) staff additional regional enforcement and mobile enforcement teams; (3) establish additional resident offices and posts of duty to assist State and local law enforcement in rural areas; and (4) provide the Special Operations Division with additional agents for intelligence and investigative operations.

Sec. 14. Environmental Hazards Associated With Illegal Manufacture of Amphetamine and Methamphetamine.

Authorizes the DEA to receive money from the Asset Forfeiture Fund to pay for cleanup costs associated with the illegal manufacture of amphetamine or methamphetamine. It also allows for reimbursements to State and local entities for cleanup costs when they assist in a federal prosecution on amphetamine or methamphetamine related charges.

Sec. 15. Antidrug Messages on Federal Government Internet Websites.

Requires all federal departments and agencies, in consultation with ONDCP, to place antidrug messages on their Internet websites and an electronic hyperlink to ONDCP's website. Numerous government agencies have children's websites, including the Social Security Administration.

Sec. 16. Mail Order Requirements.

This section represents changes to the reporting requirements of 21 U.S.C. 830(b)(3) worked out between the DEA and industry. Reporting will no longer be required for valid prescriptions, limited distributions of sample packages, distributions by retail distributors if consistent with authorized activities, distributions to long term care facilities, and any product which has been exempted by the AG. It also allows the AG to revoke an exemption if he finds the drug product being distributed is being used in violation of the Controlled Substances Act.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, 3 years ago this week I joined with my distinguished friend and colleague, Senator HATCH, to introduce the ''Hatch-Biden Methamphetamine Control Act'' to address the growing threat of methamphetamine use in our country before it was too late.

Our failure to foresee and prevent the crack cocaine epidemic is one of the most significant public policy mistakes in recent history. Despite the warning signs of an outbreak, few took action until it was too late. But we did learn an important lesson from that mistake. When we began to see similar warning signs with methamphetamine, we acted swiftly to make sure that history would not repeat itself.

That Act provided crucial tools that we needed to stay ahead of the methamphetamine epidemic and avoid the mistakes made during the early stages of the crack epidemic. We increased penalties for possessing and trafficking in methamphetamine and the precursor chemicals and equipment used to manufacture the drug. We tightened the reporting requirements and restrictions on the legitimate sales of products containing precursor chemicals to prevent their diversion, and imposed even greater requirements on firms that sell those products by mail. We ensured that meth manufacturers who endanger the life of any individual or endanger the environment while making this drug receive enhanced prison sentences. And finally, we created a national working group of law enforcement and public health officials to monitor any growth in the methamphetamine epidemic.

I have no doubt that our 1996 legislation slowed this epidemic significantly. But we are up against a powerful and highly addictive drug. Meth stimulates the central nervous system, making the user feel energetic, clever and powerful. Unlike crack, whose effects sometimes last only a matter of minutes, a meth high lasts for hours.

Last year in my home State of Delaware law enforcement officers busted what was described as ''the largest and most sophisticated drug lab in the Northeast,'' seizing 50 pounds of meth and meth base. This was only one of the 5,786 reported clandestine laboratory seizures in the United States last year.

We have countless heart wrenching stories of violence and families being tragically ripped apart by methamphetamine use, sadly reminiscent of what we saw with crack cocaine. A recent news story reported that a woman in California has been charged with the murder of her infant son. High on meth, she left him in a sealed car in the summer heat while she and her boyfriend slept in an air-conditioned motel room nearby. The innocent infant died a tragic and senseless death.

Unfortunately, this unspeakable tragedy is not an isolated incident. It is not unusual for a meth user to remain awake for days. And as the high begins to wane, the user is likely to be violent, delusional and paranoid. Not surprisingly, this behavior often leads to crime. In areas like San Diego where the meth epidemic rages, more than 33 percent of people arrested in 1998 tested positive for the drug.

On top of the violence associated with methamphetamine users, there is also the enormous problem of violence among methamphetamine traffickers and the environmental and life-threatening conditions endemic in the clandestine labs where the drug is produced.

But perhaps the most frightening fact of all is that despite all of the evidence that methamphetamine is a horribly destructive substance, the percentage of kids who perceive it as a harmful drug is on the decline.

And that I why I am joining my friend from Utah once again —along with Senators DEWINE, FEINSTEIN and BOND—to build on the 1996 methamphetamine legislation and continue to fight this pernicious drug.

Our Methamphetamine Anti-Proliferation Act, first and foremost, addresses the growing problem of amphetamines as a meth substitute by making the penalties for manufacturing, importing, exporting or trafficking amphetamine equivalent to those established for methamphetamine in our 1996 law. The two drugs are nearly identical —they differ by only one chemical. Whereas methamphetamine is made with ephedrine, a substance found in some over-the-counter cold remedies, amphetamine is produced with phenylpropanolamine, a chemical found in over-the-counter diet pills. The two drugs are produced in the same dangerous clandestine labs and are often sold interchangeably on the streets; the penalties for dealing in both substances should be the same.

This legislation also provides the Drug Enforcement Administration with much needed funding to clean up clandestine labs after they are seized as well as to train state and local law enforcement officers to handle the hazardous wastes produced in the meth labs. Methamphetamine is made from an array of hazardous substances—battery acid, lye, ammonia gas, hydrochloric acid, just to name a few—that produce toxic fumes and often lead to fires or explosions when mixed. I am revealing nothing by naming some of these chemical ingredients. Anyone with access to the Internet can download a detailed meth recipe with a few simple keystrokes. Our legislation would make such postings illegal.

This bill also tightens the restrictions on direct and indirect advertising of illegal drug paraphernalia and Schedule I drugs. Under this legislation, it would be illegal for on-line magazines and other websites to post advertisements for such illegal material or provide ''links'' to websites that do. We crafted this language carefully so that we restrict the sale of drug paraphernalia without restricting the First Amendment.

Finally, the bill provides more money for law enforcement. This includes hiring more Drug Enforcement Administration agents to assist state and local law enforcement in small and mid-size cities and rural areas and providing more money to combat meth in places designated as High Intensity Drug Trafficking Areas.

While I clearly support the goals of this legislation, I want to make it clear that I think we may need to tweak it as it goes through the process to ensure that we do not stymie a good idea with the fine print. Specifically, I have concerns about how we fund meth lab clean up. As written, some of the money would come from the asset forfeiture fund, a most important resource for law enforcement. We are now struggling with reforming the overall structure of asset forfeiture in this country and I would hope we could find an alternative pot of money to tap to do the important work of cleaning up meth lab sites.

That being said, I am confident that any concerns I may have at this time will be resolved during the committee process.

I want to commend Senator HATCH for his continued leadership on this issue. I urge all my colleagues to join us in protecting our children and our society from the devastations of methamphetamine by supporting this vital legislation.

SEC. 2___. SENSE OF SENATE ON AGRICULTURAL TRADE NEGOTIATIONS.—(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate finds that—

(1) the United States is the world's largest exporter of agricultural commodities and products;

(2) 96 percent of the world's consumers live outside the United States;

(3) the profitability of the United States agricultural sector is dependent on a healthy export market; and

(4) the next round of multilateral trade negotiations is scheduled to begin on November 30, 1999.

(b) SENSE OF SENATE.—The Senate supports and strongly encourages the President to adopt the following trade negotiating objectives:

(1) The initiation of a comprehensive round of multilateral trade negotiations that—

(A) covers all goods and services;

(B) continues to reform agricultural and food trade policy;

(C) promotes global food security through open trade; and

(D) increases trade liberalization in agriculture and food.

(2) The simultaneous conclusion of the negotiations for all sectors.

(3) The adoption of the framework established under the Uruguay Round Agreements for the agricultural negotiations conducted in 1999 to ensure that there are no product or policy exceptions.

(4) The establishment of a 3-year goal for the conclusion of the negotiations by December 2002.

(5) The elimination of all export subsidies and tightening of rules for circumvention of export subsidies.

(6) The elimination of all nontariff barriers to trade.

(12) The assurance of market access for biotechnology products, with the regulation of the products based solely on sound science.

(13) The accelerated resolution of trade disputes and prompt enforcement of dispute panels of the World Trade Organization.

(14) The provision of food security for importing nations by ensuring access to supplies through a commitment by World Trade Organization member countries not to restrict or prohibit the export of agricultural products.

(15) The resolution of labor and environmental issues in a manner that facilitates, rather than restricts, agricultural trade.

(16) The establishment of World Trade Organization rules that will allow developing countries to graduate, using objective economic criteria, to full participation in, and obligations under, the World Trade Organization.

● Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. President, I rise today along with my colleagues, Senators ASHCROFT, ENZI, BROWNBACK, and BURNS, to offer an amendment expressing the sense of the Senate regarding the next round of agricultural trade negotiations. As a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, I am very concerned about U.S. agriculture's position in the next round of negotiations. This resolution establishes clear direction to the Administration as it enters the Seattle negotiations this November.

These process and procedural guidelines have been developed through a consensus process of the Seattle Round Agricultural Committee (SRAC). SRAC represents over 70 agricultural organizations—from the Farm Bureau to the National Oilseed Processors Association to Kraft Foods. This diverse group of agriculturalists have spent many hours developing these principles too ensure that our international agriculture markets remain strong, open and fair for our nation's farmers.

The U.S. agricultural sector is one of the only segments of our economy that consistently produces a trade surplus. In fact, our agricultural surplus totaled $27.2 billion in 1996. However, we must not rest on our laurels; the United States Department of Agriculture projects that our agricultural trade surplus in 1999 will dwindle to approximately $12 billion. We must not let this trend continue.

Free and open international markets are vital to my home state. Illinois' 76,000 farms cover more than 28 million acres—nearly 80 percent of Illinois. Our farm product sales generate nine billion dollars annually and Illinois ranks third in agricultural exports. In fiscal year 1997 alone, Illinois agricultural exports totaled $3.7 billion and created 57,000 jobs for our state. Needless to say, agriculture makes up a significant portion of my state's economy, and a healthy export market for these products is important to my constituents.

As you know, farm commodity prices have recently been in a severe slump. This situation makes open debate on agricultural trade and the Seattle round even more timely and necessary. While the average tariff assessed by the United States on agricultural products is less than five percent, the average agricultural tariff assessed by other World Trade Organization members exceeds 40 percent. This situation is clearly unfair and certainly depresses U.S. agricultural commodity prices. Accordingly, this issue must be addressed in the next round.

I look forward to working with my colleagues on policies to tear down international trade barriers and ensure that our agricultural trade surplus expands and remains strong. This resolution is the first step toward ensuring that agriculture is a top priority of the Administration during the next round of multilateral trade negotiations.

With the Seattle round expected to initiate on November 30th of this year, the American farmer cannot wait for action on this resolution. While I would like to pass this sense of the Senate as a free standing resolution, action on this resolution simply cannot wait. The Commerce, State, Justice Appropriations bill, which contains funding for the United States Trade Representatives Office, provides the perfect vehicle for this trade resolution. I hope my colleagues will give it the consideration it deserves.

I want to recognize and commend my colleagues, Senators ASHCROFT, ENZI, BROWNBACK, and BURNS, for joining me as original co-sponsors of this resolution. This resolution should enjoy bipartisan support, and I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation important to our nation's farmers. Mr. President, I ask that a list of supporters of this resolution and a letter from Dean Kleeker, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation be printed in the RECORD.

AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION, Park Ridge, IL, June 18, 1999.

Hon. SPENCER ABRAHAM,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR ABRAHAM: The American Farm Bureau Federation strongly supports S. Res. 101, expressing the sense of the Senate establishing agriculture as a top priority of this Administration during the next round of multilateral trade negotiations. We ask you to support and cosponsor this resolution. Exports are agriculture's source of future growth in sales and income.

As the host of the 1999 World Trade Organization (WTO) Ministerial, the United States has a tremendous opportunity to influence the agenda for the next round of WTO negotiations. The U.S. also has the most to gain from the next round. The United States is the largest, most dynamic economy in the world. Further trade liberalization is needed to open new market opportunities for the ever-increasing output of U.S. agriculture. America's farmers and ranchers must have the freedom to compete in the international marketplace, and with the help of strong leadership by U.S. trade negotiators in Seattle later this year, that goal can begin to be realized.

S. Res. 101 embodies the procedure and policy developed through a consensus process by the Seattle Round Agricultural Committee (SRAC). The SRAC represents over 70 agricultural organizations, agribusinesses, and food processors, supporting the new round of multilateral trade negotiations under the auspices of the WTO. The fact is that 96 percent of the world's consumers live outside the U.S. and in many developing countries the demand for food and agricultural products is growing as income and population increase.

We are counting on this administration and Congress to ensure that U.S. farmers and ranchers have a significant place at the negotiating table, and are armed with the tools they need to be successful. The 1999 WTO Negotiations is the best opportunity for the U.S. agriculture to achieve more open and freer global markets.

Sincerely,

DEAN KLECKNER,
President.

COCHRAN AMENDMENTS NOS. 1286–1288

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. COCHRAN submitted three amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 1286

On page 111, between lines 7 and 8, insert the following:

SEC. ___. SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING MEDICARE.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate finds the following:

(1) The Balanced Budget Act of 1997 (BBA) ushered in the single largest change to the medicare program under title XVIII of the Social Security Act since the program's inception in 1965.

(2) As a result of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, hospitals in all parts of the country, both in urban and rural areas, are beginning to reduce health care services as hospitals implement the provisions of such Act.

(3) Beginning 5 years after the date of enactment of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, total medicare margins for all hospitals will be negative 4.4 percent, and such margins for rural hospitals will be negative 7.1 percent.

(4) The Congressional Budget Office estimated immediately prior to the enactment of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 that the provisions of such Act would result in $53,000,000,000 of savings to the medicare program because of payment cuts to hospitals; but

(5) Actual savings to the medicare program as a result of such cuts will be more in the range of $71,000,000,000, an $18,000,000,000 increase in the estimate described in paragraph (4).

(6) The Congressional Budget Office now projects that the provisions of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 will result in a total $206,000,000,000 of savings to the medicare program, double the level of estimated savings when such Act was enacted 18 months ago.

(7) The passage and implementation of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 has proved especially devastating to rural hospitals, as their patient base is typically older, poorer, and sicker, than non-rural hospitals and their most important payment source is the medicare program.

(8) The provisions of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 have strained the resources of even the most fiscally healthy of these facilities, as rural hospitals are no longer able to recruit and retain qualified health care professionals, including physicians, and such hospitals no longer have access to capital for equipment replacement, maintenance, or repair.

(9) Rural hospitals are now being forced to severely limit, or even eliminate, the type and scope of health care services they provide, limiting access to health care and forcing patients to travel long distances.

(10) Rural hospitals are often the largest employers for many miles, and the only employer of highly skilled workers in the community.

(11) The systematic reduction of health care delivery prompted by the passage of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 has the potential to deal a severe blow to the economic well being of many of our Nation's small towns.

(12) The concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2000 recognized the problems associated with the provisions of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 and set aside funding to address the unintended consequences associated with the implementation of such provisions.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that Congress and the President work expeditiously to develop proposals that would—

(1) reject—

(A) further reductions in the medicare program under title XVIII of the Social Security Act; and

(B) extensions of the provisions of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997; and

AMENDMENT NO. 1287

On page 27, line 9, after the colon insert ''Provided further, That $1,000,000 shall be available to the National Institute of Justice for research and development of next generation backscatter X-ray personnel scanning devices to assist in the dectection of illegal drugs and narcotics.''.

AMENDMENT NO. 1288

On page 25, line 5, before ''and'' insert ''of which $2,000,000 shall be made available to the Department of Psychiatry and Human Behavior at the University of Mississippi School of Medicine for research in addictive disorders and their connection to youth violence''.

LUGAR (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1289

Mr. LUGAR (for himself, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. MACK, Mr. HATCH, Mr. KERREY, and Mr. LIEBERMAN) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

On page 78, between lines 8 and 9, insert the following:

NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR DEMOCRACY

For grants by the Department of State to the National Endowment for Democracy as authorized by the National Endowment for Democracy Act, $30,000,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That, in lieu of the dollar amount specified under the heading ''CAPITAL INVESTMENT FUND'' in this Act, the dollar amount under that heading shall be considered to be $50,000,000.

DURBIN (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1290

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. DURBIN (for himself, Ms. COLLINS, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. KOHL, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. REID, and Mr. JEFFORDS) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ___. PROTECTION OF SENIORS AND THE DISABLED IN FEDERAL FAMILY VIOLENCE PREVENTION PROGRAMS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) of the estimated more than 1,000,000 persons age 65 and over who are victims of family violence each year, at least ⅔ are women;

(2) national statistics are not available on the incidence of domestic or family violence and sexual assault against disabled women, although several studies indicate that abuse of disabled women is of a longer duration compared to abuse suffered by women who are not disabled;

(3) in almost 9 out of 10 incidents of domestic elder abuse and neglect, the perpetrator is a family member, and adult children of the victims are the largest category of perpetrators and spouses are the second largest category of perpetrators;

(4) the number of reports of elder abuse in the United States increased by 150 percent between 1986 and 1996 and is expected to continue increasing;

(5) it is estimated that at least 5 percent of the Nation's elderly are victims of moderate to severe abuse and that the rate for all forms of abuse may be as high as 10 percent;

(6) elder abuse is severely underreported, with 1 in 5 cases being reported in 1980 and only 1 in 8 cases being reported today;

(7) many older and disabled women fail to report abuse because of shame or as a result of prior unsatisfactory experiences with individual agencies or others who lack sensitivity to the concerns or needs of older or disabled individuals;

(8) many older or disabled individuals also fail to report abuse because they are dependent on their abusers and fear being abandoned or institutionalized;

(9) disabled women may fear reporting abuse because they are fearful of losing their children in a custody case;

(10) public and professional awareness and identification of violence against older or disabled Americans may be difficult because these persons are not integrated into many social networks (such as schools or jobs), and may become isolated in their homes, which can increase the risk of domestic abuse; and

(11) older and disabled Americans would greatly benefit from policies that develop, strengthen, and implement programs for the prevention of abuse, including neglect and exploitation, and provide related assistance for victims.

(b) IN GENERAL.—Part T of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 is amended—

(1) in section 2001 (42 U.S.C. 3796gg)—

(A) in subsection (a)—

(i) by inserting '', including older women and women with a disability'' after ''combat violent crimes against women''; and

(ii) by inserting '', including older women and women with a disability'' before the period; and

(B) in subsection (b)—

(i) in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by inserting '', including older women and women with a disability'' after ''against women'';

(ii) in paragraph (6), by striking ''and'' after the semicolon;

(iii) in paragraph (7), by striking the period and inserting ''; and''; and

(iv) by adding at the end the following:

''(8) developing a curriculum to train and assist law enforcement officers, prosecutors, and relevant officers of the Federal, State, tribal, and local courts in identifying and responding to crimes of domestic violence and sexual assault against older individuals and individuals with a disability and implementing that training and assistance.'';

(2) in section 2002(c)(2)(42 U.S.C. 3796gg–1) by inserting ''and service programs tailored to the needs of older and disabled victims of domestic violence and sexual assault'' before the semicolon; and

(3) in section 2003 (42 U.S.C. 3796gg–2)—

(A) in paragraph (7), by striking ''and'' after the semicolon;

(B) in paragraph (8), by striking the period and inserting ''; and''; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

''(9) both the term 'elder' and the term 'older individual' have the meaning given the term 'older individual' in section 102 of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3002); and

''(10) the term 'disability' has the meaning given the term in section 3(3) of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12102(3)).''.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to any grant made beginning with fiscal year 2000.

WELLSTONE (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1291

Mr. WELLSTONE (for himself, Mrs. MURRAY, and Mr. DURBIN) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

At the end of the bill, add the following title:

TITLE ___—CHILDREN WHO WITNESS DOMESTIC VIOLENCE PROTECTION ACT

SEC. ___01. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ''Children Who Witness Domestic Violence Protection Act''.

SEC. ___02. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Witnessing domestic violence has a devastating impact on children, placing the children at high risk for anxiety, depression, and, potentially, suicide. Many children who witness domestic violence exhibit more aggressive, antisocial, fearful, and inhibited behaviors.

(2) Children exposed to domestic violence have a high risk of experiencing learning difficulties and school failure. Research finds that children residing in domestic violence shelters exhibit significantly lower verbal and quantitative skills when compared to a national sample of children.

(3) Domestic violence is strongly correlated with child abuse. Studies have found that between 50 and 70 percent of men who abuse their female partners also abuse their children. In homes in which domestic violence occurs, children are physically abused and neglected at a rate 15 times higher than the national average.

(4) Men who witnessed parental abuse during their childhood have a higher risk of becoming physically aggressive in dating and marital relationships.

(5) Exposure to domestic violence is a strong predictor of violent delinquent behavior among adolescents. It is estimated that between 20 percent and 40 percent of chronically violent adolescents have witnessed extreme parental conflict.

(6) Women have an increased risk of experiencing battering after separation from an abusive partner. Children also have an increased risk of suffering harm during separation.

(7) Child visitation disputes are more frequent when families have histories of domestic violence, and the need for supervised visitation centers far exceeds the number of available programs providing those centers, because courts therefore—

(A) order unsupervised visitation and endanger parents and children; or

(B) prohibit visitation altogether.

(8) Recent studies have demonstrated that up to 50 percent of children who appear before juvenile courts in matters involving allegations of abuse and neglect have been exposed to domestic violence in their homes.

SEC. ___03. DEFINITIONS.

SEC. 620. (a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) Iran has been designated as a state sponsor of terrorism by the Secretary of State and continues to be among the most active supporters of terrorism in the world.

(2) According to the State Department's annual report entitled ''Patterns of Global Terrorism'', Iran supports Hizballah, Hamas, and the Palestinian Islamic Jihad, terrorist organizations which oppose the Middle East peace process, continue to work for the destruction of Israel, and have killed United States citizens.

(3) A United States district court ruled in March 1998 that Iran should pay $247,000,000 to the family of Alisa Flatow, a United States citizen killed in a bomb attack orchestrated by the Palestinian Islamic Jihad in Gaza in April 1995.

(4) The Government of Iran continues to maintain a repressive political regime in which the civil liberties of the people of Iran are denied.

(5) The State Department Country Report on Human Rights states that the human rights record of the Government of Iran remains poor, including ''extra judicial killings and summary executions; disappearances; widespread use of torture and other degrading treatment; harsh prison conditions; arbitrary arrest and detention; lack of due process; unfair trials; infringement on citizen's privacy; and restrictions on freedom of speech, press, assembly, association, religion, and movement''.

(6) Religious minorities in Iran have been persecuted solely because of their faith, and the Government of Iran has detained 13 members of Iran's Jewish community without charge.

(7) Recent student-led protests in Iran were repressed by force, with possibly five students losing their lives and hundreds more being imprisoned.

(8) The Government of Iran is pursuing an aggressive ballistic missile program with foreign assistance and is seeking to develop weapons of mass destruction which threaten United States allies and interests.

(9) Despite the continuation by the Government of Iran of repressive activities in Iran and efforts to threaten United States allies and interests in the Near East and South Asia, the President waived provisions of the Iran and Libya Sanctions Act of 1996 (Public Law 104–172; 50 U.S.C. 1701 note) intended to impede development of the energy sector in Iran.

(b) SENSE OF SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the President should condemn in the strongest possible terms the failure of the Government of Iran to implement genuine political reforms and protect the civil liberties of the people of Iran, which failure was most recently demonstrated in the violent repression of student-led protests in Teheran and other cities by the Government of Iran;

(2) the President should support democratic opposition groups in Iran more aggressively;

(3) the detention of 13 members of the Iranian Jewish community by the Government of Iran is a deplorable violation of due process and a clear example of the policies of the Government of Iran to persecute religious minorities; and

(4) the decision of the President to waive provisions of the Iran and Libya Sanctions Act of 1996 intended to impede development of the energy sector in Iran was regrettable and should be reversed as long as Iran continues to threaten United States interests and allies in the Near East and South Asia through state sponsorship of terrorism and efforts to acquire weapons of mass destruction and the missiles to deliver such weapons.

HATCH AMENDMENT NO. 1320

Mr. GREGG (for Mr. HATCH) proposed an amendment to the bill S. 1217, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert:

SECTION 1. HATE CRIMES.

(a) DECLARATIONS.—Congress declares that—

(1) further efforts must be taken at all levels of government to respond to the staggering brutality of hate crimes that have riveted public attention and shocked the Nation;

(2) hate crimes are prompted by bias and are committed to send a message of hate to targeted communities, usually defined on the basis of immutable traits;

(3) the prominent characteristic of a hate crime is that it devastates not just the actual victim and the victim's family and friends, but frequently savages the community sharing the traits that caused the victim to be selected;

(4) any efforts undertaken by the Federal Government to combat hate crimes must respect the primacy that States and local officials have traditionally been accorded in the criminal prosecution of acts constituting hate crimes; and

(5) an overly broad reaction by the Federal Government to this serious problem might ultimately diminish the accountability of State and local officials in responding to hate crimes and transgress the constitutional limitations on the powers vested in Congress under the Constitution.

(b) STUDIES.—

(1) COLLECTION OF DATA.—

(A) DEFINITION OF HATE CRIME.—In this paragraph, the term ''hate crime'' means—

(i) a crime described in subsection (b)(1) of the first section of the Hate Crime Statistics Act (28 U.S.C. 534 note); and

(ii) a crime that manifests evidence of prejudice based on gender or age.

(B) COLLECTION FROM CROSS-SECTION OF STATES.—Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States, in consultation with the National Governors' Association, shall select 10 jurisdictions with laws classifying certain types of crimes as hate crimes and 10 jurisdictions without such laws from which to collect data described in subparagraph (C) over a 12-month period.

(C) DATA TO BE COLLECTED.—The data to be collected are—

(i) the number of hate crimes that are reported and investigated;

(ii) the percentage of hate crimes that are prosecuted and the percentage that result in conviction;

(iii) the length of the sentences imposed for crimes classified as hate crimes within a jurisdiction, compared with the length of sentences imposed for similar crimes committed in jurisdictions with no hate crime laws; and

(iv) references to and descriptions of the laws under which the offenders were punished.

(D) COSTS.—Participating jurisdictions shall be reimbursed for the reasonable and necessary costs of compiling data under this paragraph.

(2) STUDY OF TRENDS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States and the General Accounting Office shall complete a study that analyzes the data collected under paragraph (1) and under the Hate Crime Statistics Act of 1990 to determine the extent of hate crime activity throughout the country and the success of State and local officials in combating that activity.

(B) IDENTIFICATION OF TRENDS.—In the study conducted under subparagraph (A), the Comptroller General of the United States and the General Accounting Office shall identify any trends in the commission of hate crimes specifically by—

(i) geographic region;

(ii) type of crime committed; and

(iii) the number of hate crimes that are prosecuted and the number for which convictions are obtained.

(c) MODEL STATUTE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—To encourage the identification and prosecution of hate crimes throughout the country, the Attorney General shall, through the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws of the American Law Institute or another appropriate forum, and in consultation with the States, develop a model statute to carry out the goals described in subsection (a) and criminalize acts classified as hate crimes.

(2) REQUIREMENTS.—In developing the model statute, the Attorney General shall—

(A) include in the model statute crimes that manifest evidence of prejudice; and

(B) prepare an analysis of all reasons why any crime motivated by prejudice based on any traits of a victim should or should not be included.

(d) SUPPORT FOR CRIMINAL INVESTIGATIONS AND PROSECUTIONS BY STATE AND LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICIALS.—

(1) ASSISTANCE OTHER THAN FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—At the request of a law enforcement official of a State or a political subdivision of a State, the Attorney General, acting through the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, shall provide technical, forensic, prosecutorial, or any other form of assistance in the criminal investigation or prosecution of any crime that—

(i) constitutes a crime of violence (as defined in section 16 of title 18, United States Code);

(ii) constitutes a felony under the laws of the State; and

(iii) is motivated by prejudice based on the victim's race, ethnicity, or religion or is a violation of the State's hate crime law.

(B) PRIORITY.—In providing assistance under subparagraph (A), the Attorney General shall give priority to crimes committed by offenders who have committed crimes in more than 1 State.

(2) GRANTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—There is established a grant program within the Department of Justice to assist State and local officials in the investigation and prosecution of hate crimes.

(B) ELIGIBILITY.—A State or political subdivision of a State applying for assistance under this paragraph shall—

(i) describe the purposes for which the grant is needed; and

(ii) certify that the State or political subdivision lacks the resources necessary to investigate or prosecute the hate crime.

(C) DEADLINE.—An application for a grant under this paragraph shall be approved or disapproved by the Attorney General not later than 24 hours after the application is submitted.

(D) GRANT AMOUNT.—A grant under this paragraph shall not exceed $100,000 for any single case.

(E) REPORT.—Not later than December 31, 2001, the Attorney General, in consultation with the National Governors' Association, shall submit to Congress a report describing the applications made for grants under this paragraph, the award of such grants, and the effectiveness of the grant funds awarded.

(F) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this paragraph $5,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2000 and 2001.

TITLE ___—HATE CRIMES PREVENTION

SEC. ___01. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ''Hate Crimes Prevention Act of 1999''.

SEC. ___02. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) the incidence of violence motivated by the actual or perceived race, color, national origin, religion, sexual orientation, gender, or disability of the victim poses a serious national problem;

(2) such violence disrupts the tranquility and safety of communities and is deeply divisive;

(3) existing Federal law is inadequate to address this problem;

(4) such violence affects interstate commerce in many ways, including—

(A) by impeding the movement of members of targeted groups and forcing such members to move across State lines to escape the incidence or risk of such violence; and

(B) by preventing members of targeted groups from purchasing goods and services, obtaining or sustaining employment or participating in other commercial activity;

(5) perpetrators cross State lines to commit such violence;

(6) instrumentalities of interstate commerce are used to facilitate the commission of such violence;

(7) such violence is committed using articles that have traveled in interstate commerce;

(8) violence motivated by bias that is a relic of slavery can constitute badges and incidents of slavery;

(9) although many State and local authorities are now and will continue to be responsible for prosecuting the overwhelming majority of violent crimes in the United States, including violent crimes motivated by bias, Federal jurisdiction over certain violent crimes motivated by bias is necessary to supplement State and local jurisdiction and ensure that justice is achieved in each case;

(10) Federal jurisdiction over certain violent crimes motivated by bias enables Federal, State, and local authorities to work together as partners in the investigation and prosecution of such crimes;

(11) the problem of hate crime is sufficiently serious, widespread, and interstate in nature as to warrant Federal assistance to States and local jurisdictions; and

(12) freedom of speech and association are fundamental values protected by the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and it is the purpose of this title to criminalize acts of violence, and threats of violence, carried out because of the actual or perceived race, color, religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, or disability of the victim, not to criminalize beliefs in the abstract.

SEC. ___03. DEFINITION OF HATE CRIME.

In this title, the term ''hate crime'' has the same meaning as in section 280003(a) of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 (28 U.S.C. 994 note).

''(i) shall be imprisoned not more than 10 years, or fined in accordance with this title, or both; and

(5) a long-term marketing effort should be supported to promote increased travel to the United States for the benefit of every sector of the economy.

SEC. . SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING THE EUROPEAN COUNCIL NOISE RULE AFFECTING HUSHKITTED AND REENGINED AIRCRAFT.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate finds that—

(1) For more than 50 years, the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) has been the single entity vested with the authority to establish international noise and emissions standards; through ICAO's efforts, aircraft noise has decreased by an average of 40 percent since 1970;

(2) ICAO is currently working on an expedited basis on even more stringent international noise standards, taking into account economic reasonableness, technical feasibility and environmental benefits.

(3) International noise and emissions standards are critical to maintaining U.S. aeronautical industries' economic viability and to obtaining their ongoing commitment to progressively more stringent noise reduction efforts;

(4) European Council (EC) Regulation No. 925/1999, banning certain aircraft meeting the highest internationally recognized noise standards from flying in Europe, undermines the integrity of the ICAO process and undercuts the likelihood that new Stage 4 standards can be developed;

(5) While no regional standard is acceptable, this regulation is particularly offensive; there is no scientific basis for the regulation and it has been carefully crafted to protect European aviation interests while imposing arbitrary, substantial and unfounded cost burdens on United States' aeronautical industries;

(6) The vast majority of aircraft that will be affected by EC Regulation No. 925/1999 are operated by U.S. flag carriers; and

(7) The implementation of EC Regulation No. 925/1999 will result in a loss of jobs in the United States and may cost the U.S. aviation industry in excess of $2,000,000.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) EC Regulation No. 925/1999 should be rescinded by the EC at the earliest possible time;

(2) that if this is not done, the Department of State should file a petition regarding EC Regulation No. 925/1999 with ICAO pursuant to Article 84 of the Chicago Convention; and

(3) the Departments of Commerce and Transportation and the United States Trade Representative should use all reasonable means available to them to ensure that the goal of having the rule repealed is achieved.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

FULBRIGHT SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM AND THE TIBETAN EXCHANGE PROGRAM

● Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I am a strong supporter of international exchange programs. Americans benefit from an opportunity to work and study abroad. Foreigners benefit from time in the United States both in their professional development and by exposure to the American system and values. Exchanges are a proven way to disperse American principals of freedom and democracy around the world. Therefore, I am disappointed that the committee report recommends reducing funding for several exchange programs, including the funding for students, scholars and teachers portion of the Fulbright Program. The Fulbright Program has served America and Americans very well for many years. It is not in our best interest to reduce funding for it at this time. I would hope that all of the programs on the committees reprioritization list will be carefully evaluated before any decision is made to reduce or eliminate them.

The Tibetan Fulbright Program touches Vermonters very close to home. Ngawang Choephel, a Tibetan exile living in India, was the recipient of a Fulbright Scholarship and studied ethnomusicology at Middlebury College in Middlebury, Vermont. He was unjustly arrested by the Chinese in 1995 in his native Tibet when he returned to document traditional Tibetan music. Although this young man's time in Vermont was brief, the passion he threw into his work to preserve endangered Tibetan culture gained him a large following in my state. His case is of the highest priority for me and the other members of Vermont's congressional delegation. Senator LEAHY has joined me in offering an amendment to this legislation to ensure that the Tibetan Exchange Program continues in fiscal year 2000.

I hope that in conference the necessary changes will be made to ensure adequate funding for our most important exchange programs.●

ON THE PASSING OF COACH RALPH TASKER

● Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to speak on the life of a legendary figure in New Mexico sports history.

Ralph Tasker, the dean of New Mexico high school boys basketball, died earlier this week at the age of 80.

In New Mexico, you didn't have to refer to Ralph Tasker by name; you only had to say ''Coach'' and everyone knew who that was.

He coached in Hobbs for decades, and was known throughout our state as a superb teacher of the game of Basketball.

Ralph Tasker leaves behind an enduring legacy forged with the Hobbs Eagles, coaching 52 seasons in Lea County.

During that time, he amassed 1,122 wins with only 291 losses. That's almost an 80% winning record; a record difficult to achieve in any sport, at any level.

His teams won 12 state championships.

He was also recognized as the National Coach of the year.

He retired in 1998 as the third winningest head coach in the history of boys high school basketball in the United States and was elected to the National High School Coach Association Hall of Fame.

With all those accolades, if you asked Ralph Tasker what he was most proud of, he would tell you he was most proud of the hard work, dedication, and educational achievements of the young men on his teams.

When opposing teams prepared to play a Ralph Tasker-coached team, they knew they would face a disciplined and well-motivated team.

Coach Tasker knew the value of team work and inspired young men to respect one another as they worked together toward a common goal.

Coach Tasker coached and stood for the kind of ideals that we as state and country aspire as we work to motivate and teach young people.

I extend my condolences to his three children, Nancy, Diane, and Tim and to his four grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

New Mexicans appreciate Coach Tasker's life, and we will always remember his great achievements on and off the court.●

RETIREMENT OF ROBERT TOBIAS

● Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I rise today to acknowledge the retirement of Robert Tobias, President of the National Treasury Employees Union. I would like to take a moment to recognize the hard work and accomplishments of Mr. Tobias who, during a career with the NTEU of 31 years, has served as a prominent advocate for the over 155,000 federal employee members of the Union.

Under Bob's leadership, the NTEU has grown to become the nation's largest independent federal employees union, representing workers from 18 government agencies. Bob is one of the foremost authorities on federal employee issues and has been a vital resource to those of us who work on Capitol Hill, to the agencies he represents and throughout the federal government. Bob is highly respected among labor relations specialists as well. He has been instrumental in developing and enacting major legislation effecting federal employees including, creation and implementation of the Federal Employees Retirement System, pay parity issues, and he served as a member of the bipartisan National Commission Restructuring the IRS whose work was the basis for the comprehensive IRS reform legislation passed in the 105th Congress.

Furthermore, Bob has been successful in numerous landmark legal battles impacting employee rights in court and before various federal oversight bodies, such as the Merit Systems Protection Board, the Federal Labor Relations Authority and the Office of Personnel Management.

Again, I commend Mr. Tobias for his invaluable work on behalf of federal employees, and I wish continued success for Mr. Tobias in his future endeavors.●

LYBA COHEN

● Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I rise today to congratulate a recent college graduate who resides in Rutland, Vermont. Lyba Cohen has joined the multitude of students who received their bachelor's degrees from colleges and universities across the country in the past months. She graduated from Lehman College in the Bronx, New York with a bachelor's degree in English literature with a minor in Italian. She also walked away with a nearly perfect GPA. Although Lyba Cohen speaks seven languages fluently, she considers the English language her greatest love. She has an insatiable love of learning, and plans to continue her education next fall.

there is one detail that I have failed to mention regarding this recent college graduate. Mr. President, Lyba Cohen is 82 years old. she was born and raised in Estonia, became part of the Zionist movement after high school, and was among the first people to settle the state of Israel. A woman who has worn many hats throughout her life, Mrs. Cohen is a tribute to students and senior citizens alike. She relocated to Rutland two years ago, and I am proud to honor this fascinating Vermonter. Mrs. Cohen has led a rich and fulfilling life,and at 82 she has embarked on yet another journey. this unique student deserves recognition, and I ask that the article from the Rutland daily Herald be printed in the RECORD so that all Senators may read about this remarkable women.

The article follows.

A LIFELONG LEARNER—RUTLAND WOMAN EARNS COLLEGE DEGREE AT AGE 82

(By Cauley Greene)

Lyba Cohen is a great student. She's graduating with a sky-high GPA and a bachelor's degree in English literature with a minor in Italian.

Like other graduates, she looks forward to a summer of rest before deciding whether to delve back into academia.

But unlike most college graduates, Cohen is 82 years old.

She'll be accepting her diploma from Lehman College in the Bronx, N.Y., on Friday with the rest of the class of 1999.

The more than 60 years between her high school diploma and her bachelor's degree have been packed full with feats that make her latest accomplishment seem more like a brief stop along the way than a final destination.

She has been a pioneer, a working mother and, most recently, a student.

Although her life as a traditional student began 10 years ago at a non-traditional age, Cohen has been something of a student all her life, learning as she went along.

Born and raised in Estonia, Cohen ventured off the beaten path early.

''When I graduated from high school I joined a group of friends that I had in a Zionist youth organization,'' she said. For two years the group trained for a life in agriculture, to be among the first to settle what is now Israel.

* * * * *

When war broke out in 1948, Abraham traveled back and forth to Israel while Lyba stayed in New York, helping her father-in-law with the family bakery. After the war ended her husband returned and took over the bakery. Cohen helped run the business until their two sons were out of school.

In 1970, she took the civil service test and took a position with the New York City Human Resources Administration, where she worked for 17 years, living in the Bronx. Widowed in 1973, Cohen lived and worked in the Bronx by herself. She retired in 1987.

Restless and driven by what she described as a love of the English language, she enrolled at Lehman College a year after she retired. An interest in English, sparked when Cohen was in high school, guided her toward a concentration in literature and modern language.

''I just fell in love with the English language,'' she said of her high school years.

She has been taking college classes since 1988, averaging two courses a semester.

''It took me a very long time because of health problems and hospital says,'' she said. Her health and other factors prompted her move from the Bronx to Ruthland in December 1997, but she stayed in school.

''I didn't give up,'' she said.

She now lives across the street from her son, Barry Cohen. Her other son, Boaz, who lives in Warren N.J., will join the family as they watch her accept her diploma.

The move made finishing her degree more difficult, but Lyba Cohen said she's glad she came north.

''I love it here, it's a wonderful place . . . I wish I had come here earlier,'' she said.

Her love of language is greater. She speaks seven different tongues, and when she speaks it seems every word she uses has been carefully chosen. She cites the same discrimination in her favorite author, Vladimir Nabokov, who also learned English as a second language.

''I like him, I like his linguistic proficiency,'' she said.

Cohen's love of language has also translated into academic success. She has received grades higher than an ''A'' in her last two semesters, and was told by her professor that three papers on author Toni Morrison she had recently done were written on a graduate level. Cohen's GPA is also very high, but she said that it doesn't really matter to her.

''It's close to 4.0, I think . . . It's really of no importance to me at all. The fact is I've acquired a lot of knowledge, she said.

Which begs the question: what will she do with her degree? Her answer probably echoes that of graduates 60 years her junior.

''After the summer I'm going to think about taking some courses . . . but I have the summer to think about it,'' she said.●

IN HONOR OF JOE REDINGTON SR.

● Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, in the winter of 1973, when I was a commercial banker in Fairbanks, AK, pioneer Joe Redington, Sr., came into our offices with an interesting proposition. He was seeking a bank loan to start a sled dog race to commemorate the infamous diphtheria serum run that left Nenana in 1925 to deliver 20 pounds to serum to Nome to stop a deadly outbreak of the disease.

Joe worked as a commercial fishermen and miner and had no collateral to speak of—and no real chance of getting the $50,000 loan. He couldn't accurately predict the costs of the race of forecast the sponsor interest, and he couldn't even guarantee that any mushers would reach the finish line in Nome.

But Joe Redington had a dream. More importantly, Redington was a many you knew would accomplish anything he set his mind to. His infectious enthusiasm and ''can-do'' attitude prompted me to take a chance and make a loan to help fund the world's longest sled dog race—the Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race.

Joe Redington got the loan and paid ti back. I do regret however, having to come to the Senate floor today to note the passing of Joe Redington, Sr., a true giant of Alaska, who died June 24, at age 82 at his home in Knik. Alaska.

Redington's life is really a microcosm of Alaska's modern history. Born February 1, 1917, in rural Oklahoma, his family wandered the country looking for farm work until they settled in Bucks County, Pennsylvania in the late 1920s. In 1948 after a stint in World War II, Redington and wife, Vi, drove two Jeeps to Alaska and never looked back.

During territorial days and the early years of statehood, Joe Redington helped turn dog mushing—then a transportation necessity in central and rural Alaska—into the state's official sport. Redington and his wife, Vi, were dedicated breeders for nearly four decades. Offspring of their dogs have filled many kennels in Alaska and the Lower 48 with racing pups.

In 1967 he and the late Dorothy Page teamed to promote a Centennial Iditarod Sled Dog Race in honor of the 100th Anniversary of Alaska's purchase from Russia. The 56-mile race around the Big Lake—Wasilla area was a great success. The Centennial's success spurred the idea for the Iditarod.

But Redington's Iditarod dream was realized when 34 mushers left Anchorage on March 3, 1973 for the inaugural Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race. The 1,100-mile race took the adventurous mushers across some of the roughest terrain in Alaska. Twenty-two mushers crossed the finish line in Nome on April 3 with the top finishers sharing the $50,000 purse. In 1976, Redington's determination and dedication to the Iditarod race, led Congress to designate the Iditarod Trail as a National Historic Trail. The race has been run every March since 1973.

Joe Redington Sr., at age 57, ran his first Iditarod in 1974 and ran in every race until 1992. At age 80, Redington ran in his 19th and final Iditarod in 1997 where he finished a very respectable 36th. His finish time was 13 days, 4 hours and 18 minutes—nearly 17 days faster than the winners time of the first Iditarod in 1973. While Redington never won the Iditarod, he did finished in fifth palace, four times—in 1975, 1977, 1978 and 1988. And he was among the top 10 finishers, seven times.

Joe was remarkable off the race course, as well. At age 62 he scaled Alaska's Mount McKinley, keeping up with then 20-year-old musher, and four-time Iditarod champion, Susan Butcher. Redington made it to the peak of the 20,230 foot peak, a monumental task for a person of any age.

After hearing of Redington passing, fellow musher DeeDee Jonrowe was quoted in the Fairbanks News Miner as saying, ''Joe never thought (anything) wasn't possible. If you had a dream, he was about making it happen for you. He wasn't about telling you the pitfalls.''

Joe Redington, Sr. was a good, kind and gentle soul. He was soft of voice, but had a big heart—he was a fitting recipient of the Alaskan of the Year Award in 1995. Joe came down with esophagus cancer in 1997, but until a month ago he was still planning to complete in the year 2000 Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race.

While Joe Redington, Sr, won't be racing in the 2000 Iditarod, his spirit surely will light the way to Nome for mushers each March. More importantly, his legacy of hard work and never giving up will be with all Alsakans as we continue our efforts to improve the land that we love. . . . The land of The Last Fontier.●

THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF COLORADO D.A.V. CHAPTER 26

● Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize and honor the 50th anniversary of Colorado Chapter 26 of the Disabled American Veterans.

July 26, 1999 is the anniversary of this distinguished group. Chapter 26 consists of over 2,000 veterans, making it the largest chapter in Colorado. Not only did these men and women serve their country in a time of war, but they came home and continued to demonstrate their respect for America. Colorado Springs, El Paso County, and the State of Colorado have seen and felt their numerous contributions first hand in these times of peace—a peace which they helped to provide.

The Veterans of Chapter 26 have never forgotten their duty to serve and defend, whether it be overseas or at home. Their un-relinquishing duty to America should be recognized.

Reaching fifty years of service and dedication is a milestone in the lives of these men and women who served in the Armed Forces of the United States of America and became members of Chapter 26. These members offered their lives to protect our country. They survived the perils of war, not unscathed, to come home and continue to serve as outstanding citizens. They have shown a love that has been unwavering for fifty years towards this country that they sacrificed so much to preserve. They are models of patriotism, citizenship, and dedication to the freedoms cherished in these United States. And they continue to serve America with all of the pride and honor that they showed fifty years ago when they sacrificed their time and bodies for the freedom of others.

So on July 26th 1999 the Colorado Chapter 26 of the United States Disabled American Veterans should be recognized and honored for the fifty years of unwavering pride and service—the ideals which America was built upon.●

SEC. 313. UPPER MISSISSIPPI RIVER AND ILLINOIS WATERWAY SYSTEM NAVIGATION MODERNIZATION.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(2) the ability of producers of goods in the United States to compete in the international marketplace depends on a modern and efficient transportation network;

(3) a modern and efficient waterway system is a transportation option necessary to provide United States shippers a safe, reliable, and competitive means to win foreign markets in an increasingly competitive international marketplace;

(4) the need to modernize is heightened because the United States is at risk of losing its competitive edge as a result of the priority that foreign competitors are placing on modernizing their own waterway systems;

(5) growing export demand projected over the coming decades will force greater demands on the waterway system of the United States and increase the cost to the economy if the system proves inadequate to satisfy growing export opportunities;

(6) the locks and dams on the upper Mississippi River and Illinois River waterway system were built in the 1930s and have some of the highest average delays to commercial tows in the country;

(7) inland barges carry freight at the lowest unit cost while offering an alternative to truck and rail transportation that is environmentally sound, is energy efficient, is safe, causes little congestion, produces little air or noise pollution, and has minimal social impact; and

(8) it should be the policy of the Corps of Engineers to pursue aggressively modernization of the waterway system authorized by Congress to promote the relative competitive position of the United States in the international marketplace.

(b) PRECONSTRUCTION ENGINEERING AND DESIGN.—In accordance with the Upper Mississippi River-Illinois Waterway System Navigation Study, the Secretary shall proceed immediately to prepare engineering design, plans, and specifications for extension of locks 20, 21, 22, 24, 25 on the Mississippi River and the LaGrange and Peoria Locks on the Illinois River, to provide lock chambers 110 feet in width and 1,200 feet in length, so that construction can proceed immediately upon completion of studies and authorization of projects by Congress.

''(D) in the case of a notice of failure to comply with subparagraph (B) or (C) of subsection (b)(1), restore compliance with any such subparagraph by the date the next examination of the depository institution subsidiary is completed or by the end of such other period as the Board determines to be appropriate, the Board may require such company, under such terms and conditions as may be imposed by the Board and subject to such extension of time as may be granted in the Board's discretion, to divest control of any depository institution subsidiary or, at the election of the financial holding company, instead to cease to engage in any activity conducted by such company or its subsidiaries pursuant to this section.

''(3) the holding company complies with this section.

''(f) AUTHORITY TO RETAIN LIMITED NONFINANCIAL ACTIVITIES AND AFFILIATIONS.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding section 4(a), a company that is not a bank holding company or a foreign bank (as defined in section 1(b)(7) of the International Banking Act of 1978) and becomes a financial holding company after the date of the enactment of the Financial Services Act of 1999 may continue to engage in any activity and retain direct or indirect ownership or control of shares of a company engaged in any activity if—

''(7) SUNSET OF GRANDFATHER.—A financial holding company engaged in any activity, or retaining direct or indirect ownership or control of shares of a company, pursuant to this subsection, shall terminate such activity and divest ownership or control of the shares of such company before the end of the 10-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of the Financial Services Act of 1999. The Board may, upon application by a financial holding company, extend such 10-year period by a period not to exceed an additional 5 years if such extension would not be detrimental to the public interest.

''(g) DEVELOPING ACTIVITIES.—A financial holding company may engage directly or indirectly, or acquire shares of any company engaged, in any activity that the Board has not determined to be financial in nature or incidental to financial activities under subsection (c) if—

(3) PRESERVATION OF STATE ANTITRUST AND GENERAL CORPORATE LAWS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (c) and the nondiscrimination provisions contained in such subsection, no provision in paragraph (1) shall be construed as affecting State laws, regulations, orders, interpretations, or other actions of general applicability relating to the governance of corporations, partnerships, limited liability companies or other business associations incorporated or formed under the laws of that State or domiciled in that State, or the applicability of the antitrust laws of any State or any State law that is similar to the antitrust laws.

(B) DEFINITION.—The term ''antitrust laws'' has the same meaning as in subsection (a) of the first section of the Clayton Act, and includes section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act to the extent that such section 5 relates to unfair methods of competition.

(b) ACTIVITIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (3), and except with respect to insurance sales, solicitation, and cross marketing activities, which shall be governed by paragraph (2), no State may, by statute, regulation, order, interpretation, or other action, prevent or restrict an insured depository institution, wholesale financial institution, or subsidiary or affiliate thereof from engaging directly or indirectly, either by itself or in conjunction with a subsidiary, affiliate, or any other entity or person, in any activity authorized or permitted under this Act.

(2) INSURANCE SALES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—In accordance with the legal standards for preemption set forth in the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Barnett Bank of Marion County N.A. v. Nelson, 517 U.S. 25 (1996), no State may, by statute, regulation, order, interpretation, or other action, prevent or significantly interfere with the ability of an insured depository institution or wholesale financial institution, or a subsidiary or affiliate thereof, to engage, directly or indirectly, either by itself or in conjunction with a subsidiary, affiliate, or any other party, in any insurance sales, solicitation, or cross-marketing activity.

(B) CERTAIN STATE LAWS PRESERVED.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), a State may impose any of the following restrictions, or restrictions which are substantially the same as but no more burdensome or restrictive than those in each of the following clauses:

(i) Restrictions prohibiting the rejection of an insurance policy by an insured depository institution, wholesale financial institution, or any subsidiary or affiliate thereof, solely because the policy has been issued or underwritten by any person who is not associated with such insured depository institution or wholesale financial institution, or any subsidiary or affiliate thereof, when such insurance is required in connection with a loan or extension of credit.

(ii) Restrictions prohibiting a requirement for any debtor, insurer, or insurance agent or broker to pay a separate charge in connection with the handling of insurance that is required in connection with a loan or other extension of credit or the provision of another traditional banking product by an insured depository institution, wholesale financial institution, or any subsidiary or affiliate thereof, unless such charge would be required when the insured depository institution or wholesale financial institution, or any subsidiary or affiliate thereof, is the licensed insurance agent or broker providing the insurance.

(iii) Restrictions prohibiting the use of any advertisement or other insurance promotional material by an insured depository institution or wholesale financial institution, or any subsidiary or affiliate thereof, that would cause a reasonable person to believe mistakenly that—

(I) a State or the Federal Government is responsible for the insurance sales activities of, or stands behind the credit of, the institution, affiliate, or subsidiary; or

(II) a State, or the Federal Government guarantees any returns on insurance products, or is a source of payment on any insurance obligation of or sold by the institution, affiliate, or subsidiary;

(iv) Restrictions prohibiting the payment or receipt of any commission or brokerage fee or other valuable consideration for services as an insurance agent or broker to or by any person, unless such person holds a valid State license regarding the applicable class of insurance at the time at which the services are performed, except that, in this clause, the term ''services as an insurance agent or broker'' does not include a referral by an unlicensed person of a customer or potential customer to a licensed insurance agent or broker that does not include a discussion of specific insurance policy terms and conditions.

(v) Restrictions prohibiting any compensation paid to or received by any individual who is not licensed to sell insurance, for the referral of a customer that seeks to purchase, or seeks an opinion or advice on, any insurance product to a person that sells or provides opinions or advice on such product, based on the purchase of insurance by the customer.

(vi) Restrictions prohibiting the release of the insurance information of a customer (defined as information concerning the premiums, terms, and conditions of insurance coverage, including expiration dates and rates, and insurance claims of a customer contained in the records of the insured depository institution or wholesale financial institution, or a subsidiary or affiliate thereof) to any person or entity other than an officer, director, employee, agent, subsidiary, or affiliate of an insured depository institution or a wholesale financial institution, for the purpose of soliciting or selling insurance, without the express consent of the customer, other than a provision that prohibits—

(I) a transfer of insurance information to an unaffiliated insurance company, agent, or broker in connection with transferring insurance in force on existing insureds of the insured depository institution or wholesale financial institution, or subsidiary or affiliate thereof, or in connection with a merger with or acquisition of an unaffiliated insurance company, agent, or broker; or

(II) the release of information as otherwise authorized by State or Federal law.

(vii) Restrictions prohibiting the use of health information obtained from the insurance records of a customer for any purpose, other than for its activities as a licensed agent or broker, without the express consent of the customer.

(viii) Restrictions prohibiting the extension of credit or any product or service that is equivalent to an extension of credit, lease or sale of property of any kind, or furnishing of any services or fixing or varying the consideration for any of the foregoing, on the condition or requirement that the customer obtain insurance from an insured depository institution, wholesale financial institution, a subsidiary or affiliate thereof, or a particular insurer, agent, or broker, other than a prohibition that would prevent any insured depository institution or wholesale financial institution, or any subsidiary or affiliate thereof—

(I) from engaging in any activity described in this clause that would not violate section 106 of the Bank Holding Company Act Amendments of 1970, as interpreted by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System; or

''(d) TERMINATION OF MEMBERSHIP.—

''(1) VOLUNTARY WITHDRAWAL.—Any member may withdraw from a Federal home loan bank by providing written notice to the bank of its intent to do so. The applicable stock redemption notice periods shall commence upon receipt of the notice by the bank. ''(2) EXCEPTION FOR WITHDRAWALS FROM MEMBERSHIP BEFORE 1998.—Any institution that withdrew from membership in any Federal home loan bank before December 31, 1997, may acquire shares of a Federal home loan bank at any time after that date, subject to the approval of the Finance Board and the requirements of this Act.

(b) SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.—It is the sense of the Congress that estate planners, trust officers, investment advisers, and other financial planners and advisers should—

(1) eliminate examples in their training materials which portray women as incapable and foolish; and

(2) develop fairer and more balanced presentations that eliminate outmoded and stereotypical examples which lead clients to take actions that are financially detrimental to their wives and daughters.

''(b) SALES PRACTICES.—The regulations prescribed pursuant to subsection (a) shall include anticoercion rules applicable to the sale of insurance products which prohibit an insured depository institution from engaging in any practice that would lead a consumer to believe an extension of credit, in violation of section 106(b) of the Bank Holding Company Act Amendments of 1970, is conditional upon—

''(1) the purchase of an insurance product from the institution or any of its affiliates; or

''(2) an agreement by the consumer not to obtain, or a prohibition on the consumer from obtaining, an insurance product from an unaffiliated entity.

''(c) DISCLOSURES AND ADVERTISING.—The regulations prescribed pursuant to subsection (a) shall include the following provisions relating to disclosures and advertising in connection with the initial purchase of an insurance product:

''(2) PROHIBITION ON MISREPRESENTATIONS.—A prohibition on any practice, or any advertising, at any office of, or on behalf of, the insured depository institution, or any subsidiary as appropriate, which could mislead any person or otherwise cause a reasonable person to reach an erroneous belief with respect to—

''(A) the uninsured nature of any insurance product sold, or offered for sale, by the institution or any subsidiary of the institution;

''(B) in the case of a variable annuity or other insurance product that involves an investment risk, the investment risk associated with any such product; or

''(d) SEPARATION OF BANKING AND NONBANKING ACTIVITIES.—

''(1) REGULATIONS REQUIRED.—The regulations prescribed pursuant to subsection (a) shall include such provisions as the Federal banking agencies consider appropriate to ensure that the routine acceptance of deposits is kept, to the extent practicable, physically segregated from insurance product activity.

''(2) REQUIREMENTS.—Regulations prescribed pursuant to paragraph (1) shall include the following:

''(A) SEPARATE SETTING.—A clear delineation of the setting in which, and the circumstances under which, transactions involving insurance products should be conducted in a location physically segregated from an area where retail deposits are routinely accepted.

''(B) REFERRALS.—Standards which permit any person accepting deposits from the public in an area where such transactions are routinely conducted in an insured depository institution to refer a customer who seeks to purchase any insurance product to a qualified person who sells such product, only if the person making the referral receives no more than a one-time nominal fee of a fixed dollar amount for each referral that does not depend on whether the referral results in a transaction.

''(C) QUALIFICATION AND LICENSING REQUIREMENTS.—Standards prohibiting any insured depository institution from permitting any person to sell or offer for sale any insurance product in any part of any office of the institution, or on behalf of the institution, unless such person is appropriately qualified and licensed.

''(e) DOMESTIC VIOLENCE DISCRIMINATION PROHIBITION.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of an applicant for, or an insured under, any insurance product described in paragraph (2), the status of the applicant or insured as a victim of domestic violence, or as a provider of services to victims of domestic violence, shall not be considered as a criterion in any decision with regard to insurance underwriting, pricing, renewal, or scope of coverage of insurance policies, or payment of insurance claims, except as required or expressly permitted under State law.

''(2) SCOPE OF APPLICATION.—The prohibition contained in paragraph (1) shall apply to any insurance product which is sold or offered for sale, as principal, agent, or broker, by any insured depository institution or wholesale financial institution or any person who is engaged in such activities at an office of the institution or on behalf of the institution.

''(3) SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.—It is the sense of the Congress that, by the end of the 30-month period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the States should enact prohibitions against discrimination with respect to insurance products that are at least as strict as the prohibitions contained in paragraph (1).

''(1) IN GENERAL.—No provision of this section shall be construed as granting, limiting, or otherwise affecting—

''(A) any authority of the Securities and Exchange Commission, any self-regulatory organization, the Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board, or the Secretary of the Treasury under any Federal securities law; or

''(B) except as provided in paragraph (2), any authority of any State insurance commissioner or other State authority under any State law.

''(2) COORDINATION WITH STATE LAW.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), regulations prescribed by a Federal banking agency under this section shall not apply to retail sales, solicitations, advertising, or offers of any insurance product by any insured depository institution or wholesale financial institution or to any person who is engaged in such activities at an office of such institution or on behalf of the institution, in a State where the State has in effect statutes, regulations, orders, or interpretations, that are inconsistent with or contrary to the regulations prescribed by the Federal banking agencies.

''(B) PREEMPTION.—If, with respect to any provision of the regulations prescribed under this section, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Board of Directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation determine jointly that the protection afforded by such provision for consumers is greater than the protection provided by a comparable provision of the statutes, regulations, orders, or interpretations referred to in subparagraph (A) of any State, such provision of the regulations prescribed under this section shall supersede the comparable provision of such State statute, regulation, order, or interpretation.

''(h) INSURANCE PRODUCT DEFINED.—For purposes of this section, the term 'insurance product' includes an annuity contract the income of which is subject to tax treatment under section 72 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.''.

SEC. 308. CERTAIN STATE AFFILIATION LAWS PREEMPTED FOR INSURANCE COMPANIES AND AFFILIATES.

Except as provided in section 104(a)(2), no State may, by law, regulation, order, interpretation, or otherwise—

(1) prevent or significantly interfere with the ability of any insurer, or any affiliate of an insurer (whether such affiliate is organized as a stock company, mutual holding company, or otherwise), to become a financial holding company or to acquire control of an insured depository institution;

(2) limit the amount of an insurer's assets that may be invested in the voting securities of an insured depository institution (or any company which controls such institution), except that the laws of an insurer's State of domicile may limit the amount of such investment to an amount that is not less than 5 percent of the insurer's admitted assets; or

(3) prevent, significantly interfere with, or have the authority to review, approve, or disapprove a plan of reorganization by which an insurer proposes to reorganize from mutual form to become a stock insurer (whether as a direct or indirect subsidiary of a mutual holding company or otherwise) unless such State is the State of domicile of the insurer.

SEC. 309. INTERAGENCY CONSULTATION.

(a) PURPOSE.—It is the intention of the Congress that the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, as the umbrella supervisor for financial holding companies, and the State insurance regulators, as the functional regulators of companies engaged in insurance activities, coordinate efforts to supervise companies that control both a depository institution and a company engaged in insurance activities regulated under State law. In particular, Congress believes that the Board and the State insurance regulators should share, on a confidential basis, information relevant to the supervision of companies that control both a depository institution and a company engaged in insurance activities, including information regarding the financial health of the consolidated organization and information regarding transactions and relationships between insurance companies and affiliated depository institutions. The appropriate Federal banking agencies for depository institutions should also share, on a confidential basis, information with the relevant State insurance regulators regarding transactions and relationships between depository institutions and affiliated companies engaged in insurance activities. The purpose of this section is to encourage this coordination and confidential sharing of information, and to thereby improve both the efficiency and the quality of the supervision of financial holding companies and their affiliated depository institutions and companies engaged in insurance activities.

(b) EXAMINATION RESULTS AND OTHER INFORMATION.—

(1) INFORMATION OF THE BOARD.—Upon the request of the appropriate insurance regulator of any State, the Board may provide any information of the Board regarding the financial condition, risk management policies, and operations of any financial holding company that controls a company that is engaged in insurance activities and is regulated by such State insurance regulator, and regarding any transaction or relationship between such an insurance company and any affiliated depository institution. The Board may provide any other information to the appropriate State insurance regulator that the Board believes is necessary or appropriate to permit the State insurance regulator to administer and enforce applicable State insurance laws.

(2) BANKING AGENCY INFORMATION.—Upon the request of the appropriate insurance regulator of any State, the appropriate Federal banking agency may provide any information of the agency regarding any transaction or relationship between a depository institution supervised by such Federal banking agency and any affiliated company that is engaged in insurance activities regulated by such State insurance regulator. The appropriate Federal banking agency may provide any other information to the appropriate State insurance regulator that the agency believes is necessary or appropriate to permit the State insurance regulator to administer and enforce applicable State insurance laws.

(3) STATE INSURANCE REGULATOR INFORMATION.—Upon the request of the Board or the appropriate Federal banking agency, a State insurance regulator may provide any examination or other reports, records, or other information to which such insurance regulator may have access with respect to a company which—

(A) is engaged in insurance activities and regulated by such insurance regulator; and

(B) is an affiliate of an insured depository institution, wholesale financial institution, or financial holding company.

(c) CONSULTATION.—Before making any determination relating to the initial affiliation of, or the continuing affiliation of, an insured depository institution, wholesale financial institution, or financial holding company with a company engaged in insurance activities, the appropriate Federal banking agency shall consult with the appropriate State insurance regulator of such company and take the views of such insurance regulator into account in making such determination.

(d) EFFECT ON OTHER AUTHORITY.—Nothing in this section shall limit in any respect the authority of the appropriate Federal banking agency with respect to an insured depository institution, wholesale financial institution, or bank holding company or any affiliate thereof under any provision of law.

(e) CONFIDENTIALITY AND PRIVILEGE.—

(1) CONFIDENTIALITY.—The appropriate Federal banking agency shall not provide any information or material that is entitled to confidential treatment under applicable Federal banking agency regulations, or other applicable law, to a State insurance regulator unless such regulator agrees to maintain the information or material in confidence and to take all reasonable steps to oppose any effort to secure disclosure of the information or material by the regulator. The appropriate Federal banking agency shall treat as confidential any information or material obtained from a State insurance regulator that is entitled to confidential treatment under applicable State regulations, or other applicable law, and take all reasonable steps to oppose any effort to secure disclosure of the information or material by the Federal banking agency.

(2) PRIVILEGE.—The provision pursuant to this section of information or material by a Federal banking agency or State insurance regulator shall not constitute a waiver of, or otherwise affect, any privilege to which the information or material is otherwise subject.

(f) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) APPROPRIATE FEDERAL BANKING AGENCY; INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—The terms ''appropriate Federal banking agency'' and ''insured depository institution'' have the same meanings as in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

(2) BOARD; FINANCIAL HOLDING COMPANY; AND WHOLESALE FINANCIAL INSTITUTION.—The terms ''Board'', ''financial holding company'', and ''wholesale financial institution'' have the same meanings as in section 2 of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956.

SEC. 310. DEFINITION OF STATE.

For purposes of this subtitle, the term ''State'' means any State of the United States, the District of Columbia, any territory of the United States, Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, the Virgin Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands.

Subtitle B—Redomestication of Mutual Insurers

SEC. 311. GENERAL APPLICATION.

This subtitle shall only apply to a mutual insurance company in a State which has not enacted a law which expressly establishes reasonable terms and conditions for a mutual insurance company domiciled in such State to reorganize into a mutual holding company.

SEC. 312. REDOMESTICATION OF MUTUAL INSURERS.

(a) REDOMESTICATION.—A mutual insurer organized under the laws of any State may transfer its domicile to a transferee domicile as a step in a reorganization in which, pursuant to the laws of the transferee domicile and consistent with the standards in subsection (f), the mutual insurer becomes a stock insurer that is a direct or indirect subsidiary of a mutual holding company.

(b) RESULTING DOMICILE.—Upon complying with the applicable law of the transferee domicile governing transfers of domicile and completion of a transfer pursuant to this section, the mutual insurer shall cease to be a domestic insurer in the transferor domicile and, as a continuation of its corporate existence, shall be a domestic insurer of the transferee domicile.

(c) LICENSES PRESERVED.—The certificate of authority, agents' appointments and licenses, rates, approvals and other items that a licensed State allows and that are in existence immediately prior to the date that a redomesticating insurer transfers its domicile pursuant to this subtitle shall continue in full force and effect upon transfer, if the insurer remains duly qualified to transact the business of insurance in such licensed State.

(d) EFFECTIVENESS OF OUTSTANDING POLICIES AND CONTRACTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—All outstanding insurance policies and annuities contracts of a redomesticating insurer shall remain in full force and effect and need not be endorsed as to the new domicile of the insurer, unless so ordered by the State insurance regulator of a licensed State, and then only in the case of outstanding policies and contracts whose owners reside in such licensed State.

(2) FORMS.—

(A) Applicable State law may require a redomesticating insurer to file new policy forms with the State insurance regulator of a licensed State on or before the effective date of the transfer.

(B) Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), a redomesticating insurer may use existing policy forms with appropriate endorsements to reflect the new domicile of the redomesticating insurer until the new policy forms are approved for use by the State insurance regulator of such licensed State.

(e) NOTICE.—A redomesticating insurer shall give notice of the proposed transfer to the State insurance regulator of each licensed State and shall file promptly any resulting amendments to corporate documents required to be filed by a foreign licensed mutual insurer with the insurance regulator of each such licensed State.

(f) PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS.—No mutual insurer may redomesticate to another State and reorganize into a mutual holding company pursuant to this section unless the State insurance regulator of the transferee domicile determines that the plan of reorganization of the insurer includes the following requirements:

(1) APPROVAL BY BOARD OF DIRECTORS AND POLICYHOLDERS.—The reorganization is approved by at least a majority of the board of directors of the mutual insurer and at least a majority of the policyholders who vote after notice, disclosure of the reorganization and the effects of the transaction on policyholder contractual rights, and reasonable opportunity to vote, in accordance with such notice, disclosure, and voting procedures as are approved by the State insurance regulator of the transferee domicile.

(2) CONTINUED VOTING CONTROL BY POLICYHOLDERS; REVIEW OF PUBLIC STOCK OFFERING.—After the consummation of a reorganization, the policyholders of the reorganized insurer shall have the same voting rights with respect to the mutual holding company as they had before the reorganization with respect to the mutual insurer. With respect to an initial public offering of stock, the offering shall be conducted in compliance with applicable securities laws and in a manner approved by the State insurance regulator of the transferee domicile.

(3) AWARD OF STOCK OR GRANT OF OPTIONS TO OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS.—For a period of 6 months after completion of an initial public offering, neither a stock holding company nor the converted insurer shall award any stock options or stock grants to persons who are elected officers or directors of the mutual holding company, the stock holding company, or the converted insurer, except with respect to any such awards or options to which a person is entitled as a policyholder and as approved by the State insurance regulator of the transferee domicile.

(4) CONTRACTUAL RIGHTS.—Upon reorganization into a mutual holding company, the contractual rights of the policyholders are preserved.

(5) FAIR AND EQUITABLE TREATMENT OF POLICYHOLDERS.—The reorganization is approved as fair and equitable to the policyholders by the insurance regulator of the transferee domicile.

SEC. 313. EFFECT ON STATE LAWS RESTRICTING REDOMESTICATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Unless otherwise permitted by this subtitle, State laws of any transferor domicile that conflict with the purposes and intent of this subtitle are preempted, including but not limited to—

(1) any law that has the purpose or effect of impeding the activities of, taking any action against, or applying any provision of law or regulation to, any insurer or an affiliate of such insurer because that insurer or any affiliate plans to redomesticate, or has redomesticated, pursuant to this subtitle;

(2) any law that has the purpose or effect of impeding the activities of, taking action against, or applying any provision of law or regulation to, any insured or any insurance licensee or other intermediary because such person has procured insurance from or placed insurance with any insurer or affiliate of such insurer that plans to redomesticate, or has redomesticated, pursuant to this subtitle, but only to the extent that such law would treat such insured licensee or other intermediary differently than if the person procured insurance from, or placed insurance with, an insured licensee or other intermediary which had not redomesticated;

(3) any law that has the purpose or effect of terminating, because of the redomestication of a mutual insurer pursuant to this subtitle, any certificate of authority, agent appointment or license, rate approval, or other approval, of any State insurance regulator or other State authority in existence immediately prior to the redomestication in any State other than the transferee domicile.

(b) DIFFERENTIAL TREATMENT PROHIBITED.—No State law, regulation, interpretation, or functional equivalent thereof, of a State other than a transferee domicile may treat a redomesticating or redomesticated insurer or any affiliate thereof any differently than an insurer operating in that State that is not a redomesticating or redomesticated insurer.

(c) LAWS PROHIBITING OPERATIONS.—If any licensed State fails to issue, delays the issuance of, or seeks to revoke an original or renewal certificate of authority of a redomesticated insurer immediately following redomestication, except on grounds and in a manner consistent with its past practices regarding the issuance of certificates of authority to foreign insurers that are not redomesticating, then the redomesticating insurer shall be exempt from any State law of the licensed State to the extent that such State law or the operation of such State law would make unlawful, or regulate, directly or indirectly, the operation of the redomesticated insurer, except that such licensed State may require the redomesticated insurer to—

(1) comply with the unfair claim settlement practices law of the licensed State;

(2) pay, on a nondiscriminatory basis, applicable premium and other taxes which are levied on licensed insurers or policyholders under the laws of the licensed State;

(3) register with and designate the State insurance regulator as its agent solely for the purpose of receiving service of legal documents or process;

(4) submit to an examination by the State insurance regulator in any licensed state in which the redomesticated insurer is doing business to determine the insurer's financial condition, if—

(A) the State insurance regulator of the transferee domicile has not begun an examination of the redomesticated insurer and has not scheduled such an examination to begin before the end of the 1-year period beginning on the date of the redomestication; and

(B) any such examination is coordinated to avoid unjustified duplication and repetition;

(5) comply with a lawful order issued in—

(A) a delinquency proceeding commenced by the State insurance regulator of any licensed State if there has been a judicial finding of financial impairment under paragraph (7); or

(B) a voluntary dissolution proceeding;

(6) comply with any State law regarding deceptive, false, or fraudulent acts or practices, except that if the licensed State seeks an injunction regarding the conduct described in this paragraph, such injunction must be obtained from a court of competent jurisdiction as provided in section 314(a);

(7) comply with an injunction issued by a court of competent jurisdiction, upon a petition by the State insurance regulator alleging that the redomesticating insurer is in hazardous financial condition or is financially impaired;

(8) participate in any insurance insolvency guaranty association on the same basis as any other insurer licensed in the licensed State; and

(9) require a person acting, or offering to act, as an insurance licensee for a redomesticated insurer in the licensed State to obtain a license from that State, except that such State may not impose any qualification or requirement that discriminates against a nonresident insurance licensee.

SEC. 314. OTHER PROVISIONS.

(a) JUDICIAL REVIEW.—The appropriate United States district court shall have exclusive jurisdiction over litigation arising under this section involving any redomesticating or redomesticated insurer.

(b) SEVERABILITY.—If any provision of this section, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the remainder of the section, and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The provisions of this subtitle shall take effect unless, not later than 3 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, at least a majority of the States—

(1) have enacted uniform laws and regulations governing the licensure of individuals and entities authorized to sell and solicit the purchase of insurance within the State; or

(2) have enacted reciprocity laws and regulations governing the licensure of nonresident individuals and entities authorized to sell and solicit insurance within those States.

(b) UNIFORMITY REQUIRED.—States shall be deemed to have established the uniformity necessary to satisfy subsection (a)(1) if the States—

(1) establish uniform criteria regarding the integrity, personal qualifications, education, training, and experience of licensed insurance producers, including the qualification and training of sales personnel in ascertaining the appropriateness of a particular insurance product for a prospective customer;

(2) establish uniform continuing education requirements for licensed insurance producers;

(3) establish uniform ethics course requirements for licensed insurance producers in conjunction with the continuing education requirements under paragraph (2);

(4) establish uniform criteria to ensure that an insurance product, including any annuity contract, sold to a consumer is suitable and appropriate for the consumer based on financial information disclosed by the consumer; and

(5) do not impose any requirement upon any insurance producer to be licensed or otherwise qualified to do business as a nonresident that has the effect of limiting or conditioning that producer's activities because of its residence or place of operations, except that counter-signature requirements imposed on nonresident producers shall not be deemed to have the effect of limiting or conditioning a producer's activities because of its residence or place of operations under this section.

(c) RECIPROCITY REQUIRED.—States shall be deemed to have established the reciprocity required to satisfy subsection (a)(2) if the following conditions are met:

(1) ADMINISTRATIVE LICENSING PROCEDURES.—At least a majority of the States permit a producer that has a resident license for selling or soliciting the purchase of insurance in its home State to receive a license to sell or solicit the purchase of insurance in such majority of States as a nonresident to the same extent that such producer is permitted to sell or solicit the purchase of insurance in its State, if the producer's home State also awards such licenses on such a reciprocal basis, without satisfying any additional requirements other than submitting—

(A) a request for licensure;

(B) the application for licensure that the producer submitted to its home State;

(C) proof that the producer is licensed and in good standing in its home State; and

(D) the payment of any requisite fee to the appropriate authority.

(2) CONTINUING EDUCATION REQUIREMENTS.—A majority of the States accept an insurance producer's satisfaction of its home State's continuing education requirements for licensed insurance producers to satisfy the States' own continuing education requirements if the producer's home State also recognizes the satisfaction of continuing education requirements on such a reciprocal basis.

(3) NO LIMITING NONRESIDENT REQUIREMENTS.—A majority of the States do not impose any requirement upon any insurance producer to be licensed or otherwise qualified to do business as a nonresident that has the effect of limiting or conditioning that producer's activities because of its residence or place of operations, except that countersignature requirements imposed on nonresident producers shall not be deemed to have the effect of limiting or conditioning a producer's activities because of its residence or place of operations under this section.

(e) CONTINUED APPLICATION.—If, at any time, the uniformity or reciprocity required by subsections (b) and (c) no longer exists, the provisions of this subtitle shall take effect 2 years after the date on which such uniformity or reciprocity ceases to exist, unless the uniformity or reciprocity required by those provisions is satisfied before the expiration of that 2-year period.

(f) SAVINGS PROVISION.—No provision of this section shall be construed as requiring that any law, regulation, provision, or action of any State which purports to regulate insurance producers, including any such law, regulation, provision, or action which purports to regulate unfair trade practices or establish consumer protections, including countersignature laws, be altered or amended in order to satisfy the uniformity or reciprocity required by subsections (b) and (c), unless any such law, regulation, provision, or action is inconsistent with a specific requirement of any such subsection and then only to the extent of such inconsistency.

(A) the producer fails to meet the applicable membership criteria of the Association; or

(B) upon such later date as the Association may designate; or

(C) upon such earlier date as the NAIC may determine.

(3) DISAPPROVAL BY THE NAIC.—Notwithstanding paragraph (2), a proposed bylaw or amendment shall not take effect if, after public notice and opportunity to participate in a public hearing—

(A) the NAIC disapproves such proposal as being contrary to the public interest or contrary to the purposes of this subtitle and provides notice to the Association setting forth the reasons for such disapproval; or

(B) the NAIC finds that such proposal involves a matter of such significant public interest that public comment should be obtained, in which case it may, after notifying the Association in writing of such finding, require that the procedures set forth in subsection (b) be followed with respect to such proposal, in the same manner as if such proposed bylaw change were a proposed rule change within the meaning of such subsection.
