Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 104th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

Vol. 142 WASHINGTON, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 20, 1996 No. 39

Senate

The Senate met at 10 a.m., and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Abraham Lincoln expressed his dependence on prayer to sustain and strengthen him in difficult and challenging times. He said, ''I have been driven many times to my knees by the overwhelming conviction that I had nowhere to go but to prayer. My own wisdom and that of those all about me seemed insufficient for the day.''

Gracious Father, thank You for the gift of prayer. When problems pile up and pressures mount, we are so grateful that we, too, have a place to turn. And You are there waiting for us, offering Your grace for grim days and Your strength for our struggles. How good it is to know that we are not alone. We can be honest with You about our insufficiencies and discover the sufficiency of Your wisdom given in very specific and practical answers to our deepest needs. Lord, help us to spend more time listening to Your answers than we do in our lengthy explanations to You of our problems. We dedicate this day to seek Your guidance, to follow Your direction, and to do our best to lead this Nation according to Your will. We humbly confess our profound need for You and praise You for Your faithfulness to give us exactly what we need for all the challenges of the day ahead. Lead on Lord. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The able acting majority leader is recognized, the Senator from Washington State.

SCHEDULE

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, this morning the Senate will immediately begin consideration of the conference report accompanying H.R. 956, the product liability bill.

Under the consent agreement reached last night, there will be 5 hours of debate, equally divided, which will end just after 3 p.m. today. At that time, the Senate will begin a vote on invoking cloture on the conference report, to be immediately followed by a cloture vote on the motion to proceed to the Whitewater legislation.

As a reminder, under a previous order, if cloture is invoked today on the product liability conference report, there will be an additional 3 hours of debate tomorrow morning at 9 a.m., with a vote on the adoption of the conference report at 12 noon on Thursday. Following the cloture votes scheduled at 3 o'clock today, the Senate will begin consideration of S. 1459, the grazing fees legislation. Additional votes are, therefore, to be expected today in regard to the grazing fees bill.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CAMPBELL). Under the previous order, leadership time is reserved.

COMMON SENSE PRODUCT LIABILITY LEGAL REFORM ACT OF 1996—CONFERENCE REPORT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now proceed to the conference report to accompany H.R. 956.

The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 956), a bill to establish legal standards and procedures for product liability litigation, and for other purposes, having met, after full and fair conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses this report, signed by a majority of the conferees.

The Senate resumed consideration of the conference report.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I am pleased, after a lapse of almost 1 year, to present to the Senate and to support the conference report on H.R. 956, the Common Sense Product Liability Legal Reform Act of 1996. This is a bipartisan proposal reflecting, essentially, the decisions made here in the U.S. Senate last year, without the broader additions that were passed by the House of Representatives.

Mr. President, during the course of this 5 hours today, there will be many statements—passionately held—about what the future holds with respect to both our legal system and our economic system, and whether this bill should pass. As a consequence, Mr. President, I want to start my remarks with a statement about what has already happened as a result of a very modest product liability reform that was passed by the Congress of the United States, and signed by the President, just 2 or 3 years ago. I am going to do that because that action speaks louder than any words we can say about the desirability of this broader legislation.

On August 17, 1994, President Clinton signed the General Aviation Revitalization Act of 1994. That act created an 18-year statute of repose on general aviation, piston-driven aircraft. That single provision, in less than 2 years, has already had a magnificently positive impact on the general aviation industry.

Since the enactment of the bill, the general aviation industry has recorded its best year in more than a decade. In 1986, as a result largely of product liability litigation, Cessna, a famous name in aviation, stopped producing piston-driven aircraft. It has now reentered that field. In July, Cessna will open a new $40 million facility in Kansas and, once again, will begin to produce piston-driven aircraft. The facility will employ about

Cessna is not alone in this connection, Mr. President. Piper Aircraft, just 2 years ago, was having an extremely difficult time getting out of a bankruptcy proceeding to which it had been subjected. No investor wanted to come to the rescue of that famous American company because it would have to assume its liability risks. Since the enactment of that simple piece of legislation, however, investors have come forward. The Piper Aircraft Co. has come out of bankruptcy, and its employment has increased by 30 percent. More generally, employment is up at every general aviation manufacturing facility in the United States by 15 percent. We went to the Internet last week to find the kind of job openings that have resulted from this resurgence in general aviation activity. Here is a brief list of some of the jobs we found: Avionics technician, Cessna; computer control technician, Cessna; systems designer, Cessna; weights engineer, Cessna; senior cost accountant, Raytheon; senior engineer, software systems certification, Raytheon. Exactly the kind of high-skill, high-wage jobs that the United States needs in order to continue its leadership in world technology, and in order to provide jobs for coming generations.

Mr. President, that bill less than 2 years ago was criticized as restricting the rights of plaintiffs. Yet, Mr. President, I am confident when I say that there is not a single Member of this body—or, for that matter, of the House of Representatives—who ever, in the course of a political campaign or to meet an obligation, turned down a ride in a Cessna aircraft on the grounds that those aircraft were negligently manufactured. Those who most eloquently defend the present legal system—a system which for all practical purposes bankrupted Cessna and Piper by reason of lawsuits claiming negligent manufacture—never once acted on that and said, ''Oh, no, I cannot get on the plane; it was negligently manufactured.''

Mr. President, I cannot imagine that there is a Member of this body, or of the House of Representatives, who ever said, ''I won't allow my child to get a whooping cough vaccination because the materials in that vaccination were negligently manufactured.'' And yet they will stand up here today and say, ''We cannot change the law. We cannot protect those manufacturers against lawsuits like that because it would be unwise to do so.''

The present system has driven every such manufacturer—except one—out of the business, and has caused the cost of that vaccine to be multiplied by 400 percent. It is less available and more expensive because of the insistence that we continue to allow absurd lawsuits to be brought against those manufacturers. The people of the United States deserve, we all agree, a system that is fair and efficient, yields reasonably predictable results, holds parties responsible in accordance with their fault, and perhaps most importantly reduces the wasteful transaction costs associated with all kinds of litigation, but in this case product liability litigation.

Estimates of total tort costs of litigation and associated activities range from some $80 to $117 billion a year. Every dollar of these costs is forced back on consumers through higher prices on products used every day, and not at all, incidentally, limits the choice of those products as well.

Listen to just a few facts about today's product liability system in America. The current system accounts for about 20 percent of the cost of a ladder. It accounts for 50 percent of the cost of a football helmet. Injured parties, on the other hand, receive less than half of the money spent on product liability actions, with the other half going to lawyers and their associated expenses. Nearly 90 percent of all of the companies in the United States can expect to become a defendant in a product liability case at least once—90 percent of all of the companies in the United States. Are 90 percent of them negligent manufacturers or product sellers? No. Many win these lawsuits, but they have to pay their attorney fees and they have to pay their insurance costs, in any event.

Product liability insurance costs 15 times as much in the United States as it does in Japan and 20 times more than it does in Europe. Are their manufacturers, as a result, automatically negligent and indifferent to their consumers? Under the present laws in most of the States of the United States, manufacturers can be sued for products manufactured in the 1800's—manufactured a century ago.

The present system costs too much. In a book published 5 years ago by the Brookings Institution the following note appears:

> Regardless of the trends in tort verdicts, most studies in this area have concluded that, after adjusting for inflation and population, liability costs have risen dramatically in the last 30 years, and most especially in the last decade.

I have already spoken to the proposition that more of the money in the system goes to the lawyers and to their associates than goes to victims. Liability insurance costs affect every manufacturer in the United States.

One example from my own State is a water ski manufacturer, Connelly Water Skis of Lynnwood, WA, pays an annual premium every year of $345,000 for product liability insurance even though it has never lost a case. It has never lost a case—but still has to pay that huge premium.

The present system takes forever—years—to settle cases. Compensation, ironically, is unfair. The smaller the amount of damages, the larger the percentage of recovery. The larger the actual damages, the actual losses to an individual, the lower the percentage of actual recovery.

Unpredictability. Last year in a hearing before the Commerce Committee a Virginia law professor, Jeffrey O'Connell, explained:

> If you are badly injured in our society by a product and you go to a highly skilled lawyer . . . in all honesty the lawyer cannot tell you what you will be paid, when you will be paid, or, indeed, if you will be paid.

What is the effect of a broken down system on people in the United States today? First, it is increased costs. I have already referred to the fact that one manufacturer of vaccines has raised its price 400 percent, from $2.80 to $11.40, solely to recover the cost of increased lawsuits, and that in 1984 two of the three companies manufacturing the DPT vaccine decided to stop production because it just simply was not worth it, by reason of the cost of the product liability. Later in that year, the Centers for Disease Control recommended that doctors stop vaccinating children over the age of 1 in order to conserve limited supplies of that vaccine.

Second, it is very clear that the fear of product liability litigation hinders the development of new products in the United States, and the marketing of those products once they are developed. In an American Medical Association report entitled ''The Impact of Product Liability on the Development of New Medical Technologies,'' they wrote:

> Innovative new products are not being developed, or are being withheld from the market because of liability concerns, or the inability to obtain adequate insurance. Certain older technologies have been removed from the market not because of sound scientific evidence indicating lack of safety or efficacy but because product liability suits have exposes manufacturers to unacceptable financial risk.

Rawlings Sporting Goods, one of the leading manufacturers of competitive football equipment for more than 80 years, announced in 1988 that it would no longer manufacture, distribute, or sell football helmets. Two manufacturers in the United States out of 20 that were in this business in 1975 remain in that business today.

A recent article in Science magazine reported that a careful examination of the current state of research to develop an AIDS vaccine ''shows liability concerns have had negative effects.''

It points out that Genentech halted its AIDS vaccine research after the California legislature failed to enact State tort reform. Only after a favorable ruling did they renew or resume that research.

On that same topic, consider a recent comment by Dr. Jonas Salk, the inventor of the polio vaccine. I quote Dr. Salk:

> If I develop an AIDS vaccine, I do not believe a U.S. manufacturer will market it because of the current punitive damage system.

Not only does the current system hurt medical innovation, it also inhibits its small companies from producing everyday goods. For example, again in my own State, Washington Auto Carriage in Spokane distributes various kinds of truck equipment throughout the United States. Here is what its owner, Cliff King, says, and I quote him.

We have been forced out of selling some kinds of truck equipment because of the exorbitant insurance premiums required to be in the market. As a result, this type of equipment tends to be distributed only by a very few large distributors around the country who can afford to spread the costs over a very large base of sales. Ultimately there is much less competition in these markets.

Many arguments are made against this proposal on the basis of federalism. The United States is a single market, however, a single market now with 51 different product liability regimes. As a result, one of the associations that is most interested in a devolution of power to the States, the National Governors' Association, recognizes that the current patchwork of U.S. product liability law is too costly, time consuming, unpredictable and counterproductive, resulting in severely adverse effects on the American consumer, workers' competitiveness, innovation and competence.

Mr. President, we will have a considerable period of time today during which to debate details of this legislation, but I wish to return just for a moment to the point with which I began this explanation of the bill.

First, the Members of the Senate, even those who argue most passionately and eloquently to retain the present broken down system, do they act in their own lives as if these manufacturers were engaged in nefarious activities indifferent to the safety of their consumers? Did they, during all of the years in which Cessna and Piper were being driven out of business by the system they defended, refuse to fly on their airplanes? No. Do they tell their families or do they themselves refuse the latest medical devices, the latest serums, the costs of which have been driven sky high by product liability litigation? No, they do not. They use them. They use them for their children. Do we have an example of what even modest reform in this field means to the American economy? Yes, we do, in the general aviation industry. And so I am convinced that we can and should pass this modest product liability reform, and we can expect an immodest and positive result: more competition, better goods and services, lower prices, fewer lawsuits, and a higher degree of justice for the American people as a whole.

This issue has been debated in this body for more than a decade at this point. It is time to bring that debate to a close, to pass this legislation, and to see the relief that the American consumer, the American manufacturer, and American competitiveness needs to be successful in the world of the 21st century. As a consequence, I urgently ask my fellow Senators promptly to pass this bill and send it to the House and then to the President of the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HOLLINGS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina, [Mr. HOLLINGS], is recognized.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I yield so much time as will be necessary.

I am thoroughly bemused by my friend from the State of Washington starting off on aircraft with the very categorical statement that no one ever got on a plane saying that Cessna's planes were unsafe or the manufacturer was negligent. If they thought so, they were not going to get on the plane. They would not have to say it. Come on. Who are we kidding?

By coincidence, just last Thursday, I saw it reported that a Cessna plane down in Florida took off with the Blackburn family from my hometown and it had barely gotten off, I observed, to fly over the waters, and it turned and went down in about 5 to 10 feet of water at the most. We saw the pictures of them trying to save the family. The husband and wife and two of the children were lost, the pilot was lost, and the little 11-year-old hangs on as we talk.

Being an observer, I wondered what had happened. Stories have come again and again that the pilot was most experienced. Someone saw the engine streaming smoke. I cannot tell. You cannot. No one can at the moment. But it appears that it is a product liability situation. There is not any question in my mind. It occurs again and again.

It brings me right to the point, Mr. President, of the shabby nature of this whole proceeding. I say that because we passed this bill in the Senate last May and finally agreed to a conference on the House side in November. They had one short, brief meeting. Under the rules in the House, you have to at least have a meeting. But thereafter there was nothing.

It really bemuses me when the distinguished Senator says we are now to consider the conference report. We now consider the conspiracy report. It is not a conference. I never conferred. I was appointed by the distinguished Presiding Officer of the Senate as a member of the conference but was never told, never consented, never conferred, and not any on our side of the aisle or our staff were invited other than the distinguished Senator from West Virginia.

Here is what is happening in the Congress of the United States. I am going on my 30th year now, and this is the first time I have ever seen this happen this year and last year where they fixed the jury; namely, they get together on what they want and, since they are the majority party, can pick up a vote or two. They then go and bicycle around: Now, Senator, will this please you if we change this little word? And you have a ''gerrybuilt'' bill in front of you that never would pass muster in a conference.

Having fixed the vote, they went ahead and we heard last week that something was happening. In fact, I could tell it. On Thursday night Richard Threlkeld on CBS came in at 7:20 and he said the U.S. Congress is about to consider these dastardly, ridiculous lawsuits, and he went on to talk about a man in the men's restroom where women came in and he was insulted. The proponents talk about the coffee case from McDonald's, and they have these anecdotal, nonsensical matters that never tell the complete facts. And the truth of the matter is, since we mention the coffee case, I have the finding right here that confirms that the jury did award $3 million. But the judge reduced that. After all, judges do have sense. Jurors do have sense. All wisdom is not vested in the Senate. And they reduced that amount to $640,000 and the lady who was hospitalized with third-degree burns, requiring skin grafts, settled for even a lesser amount. But you hear on CBS national news, ''All you have to do is spill coffee and run up and get your money.'' Come on.

Regarding all the planes, now they are back in business and everything. We always allocate to ourselves that everything begins and ends right here with the wisdom of the U.S. Senate. They want to tell how we passed a good budget bill that has corporate America going like gangbusters, the stock market through the roof, and, yes, people are buying planes, but they do not want to talk about the budget we passed that none of them ever voted for. Categorically, one Senator on the other side of the aisle said, just 2 years ago, that if we pass this budget they would be hunting us down like dogs in the street and shooting us, the economy would collapse, there would be a depression; everything would go wrong.

Here now the stock market sets record levels, corporate America is as affluent as it has ever been, and they are buying airplanes. And my colleagues want to attribute that to themselves passing a bill? Come on.

The next thing the proponents say is the present system costs too much. Mr. President, it is like a college education. A college education is most expensive. The only thing more expensive is not having a college education. If product liability costs, which it does very little, the worst would be to not have product liability, because injuries occur. We have a safe America.

I wish I had time to go down through a list of these injuries. When I say the conference was ''a shabby procedure,'' I mean that last week I was struggling on Friday to try to find the bill. The bill's supporters were changing words down to the last minute. They filed a cloture motion at the time they filed the bill, which means they have the votes for cloture, and the jury is fixed before they hear any arguments. And thereby they can come in with the fixed jury and say, bam, bam, they have cloture—today I was before they hear any arguments. And thereby they can come in with the fixed jury and say, bam, bam, they have cloture—today I was before they hear any arguments. And thereby they can come in with the fixed jury and say, bam, bam, they have cloture—today I was limited to an hour postcloture. They could have called for the cloture vote in the next 20 minutes, since we came in at 10 o'clock. So you are under the gun when they offer you only a few hours of debate. You are not allowed to talk sense.

Oh, boy, we could spend an afternoon pointing out the good that product liability has done. We do not get blown up by that Pinto gas tank. Cars all have antilock brakes. That elevator is checked. The steps are marked. Little children do not burn up in flammable pajamas. The women of America are not threatened with Dalkon shields. And football helmets are much safer—yes, we have had some wonderful decisions against their unsafe nature. When you and I played football, Mr. President, we ran into the line and there was just a piece of leather and what you would get, many, many a time, was traumatic cataracts. That does not occur now in high school and college ball, because of the better construction of football helmets—and product liability.

We could go all afternoon and try to explain the wisdom of a tort system that is working at the State level. But the proponents do not give you time to do that. They come up here with the anecdotal stuff, that it is costing too much. Let me cite some reports about what it costs, because the Rand Corp. and the Conference Board have studied these matters. The Rand Corp. said that less than 1 percent of product liability injuries ever result in a lawsuit. Over 50 percent of civil cases are business suits, incidentally. Business is suing business, like gangbusters. Pennzoil against Texaco, a $10.2 billion verdict, that one business against business result is more than all the product liability for personal injuries in the last 20 years, that one case. And they are talking about, ''It costs too much.''

But what did the Conference Board do? They interviewed 232 risk managers. We have it in the RECORD. The Conference Board interviewed 232 risk managers, of the blue chip, Fortune 500 companies, who said that less than 1 percent of the cost of the product was due to product liability. It was not a problem.

The proponents knew this. They come in here because they have Victor Schwartz and there is still a movement against lawyers. This is pollster driven. We all come here per political poll. Lawyers get rid of the lawyers.

Ah, Mr. President, ''the trial lawyers have paid them off.'' Yes. The proponents had a news conference even before the bill was called up. You see they have radio, TV shows, news conferences, before we even call the bill, and before those who oppose it have even a chance to say so. That is why I say it is a shabby operation. But I will quote, because you have to get the news clips about how two of the Senators:

> . . . who will appear on the ballot with Clinton in West Virginia this fall responded angrily to Clinton's weekend threat to veto the House-Senate compromise of a bill that limits damage awards in product liability cases. The two gave an ''unusually harsh accusation'' to the President, saying Clinton was ''rewarding'' the trial lawyers who are ''bankrolling his reelection bid.''

That is from the Baltimore Sun.

Come on, it takes a bankroller to find a bankroller. Let us go to the individual Senators, namely this Senator. I hope I have gotten some contributions from the trial lawyers. I have been one. But I have been a business lawyer, too. I have handled antitrust cases. I have sued a corporation before the Securities and Exchange Commission. When you come from a relatively small town like I grew up in, you represent all sides. And look at the record. I have been elected six times to the U.S. Senate. I will guarantee I have gotten more business contributions than trial lawyer contributions. So let us dispel this notion about what you are doing for the trial lawyers. We are thinking of the Constitution in this case. That is one of the big reasons the American Bar Association opposes it.

We are thinking of that seventh amendment. We are thinking of what the bill's supporters said in the original instance about simplicity, transactional costs, but how this particular measure now increases the transaction cost and makes complex the so-called simplicity, if there ever one was.

More than anything else, let us go to the original doctrine of the Contract With America crowd, from the 1994 election. Oh, they won on account of the contract. Did you not get the message of the contract?

They have a bunch of children Senators running around, hollering, ''The contract,'' and ''We gave our pledge.'' This Senator was elected, too, on a pledge: To stop a lot of this nonsense if he possibly could.

None other than the distinguished majority leader said, at the beginning of this particular Congress:

> America has reconnected us with the hopes for a nation made free by demanding a Government that is more limited. Reining in our government will be my mandate, and I hope it will be the purpose and principal accomplishment of the 104th Congress.

Senator ROBERT DOLE, now the Republican nominee for the Presidency here in November. I further quote Senator DOLE:

> . . . We do not have all the answers in Washington, DC. Why should we tell Idaho, or the State of South Dakota, or the State of Oregon, or any other State that we are going to pass this Federal law and that we are going to require you to do certain things . . .?

The majority leader then went on to say.

> . . . Federalism is an idea that power should be kept close to the people. It is an idea on which our nation was founded. But there are some in Washington—perhaps fewer this year than last—who believe that our States can't be trusted with power. . . . If I have one goal for the 104th Congress, it is this: that we will dust off the 10th amendment and restore it to its rightful place.

Those powers not reserved under the Constitution are hereby delegated to the several States.

Here we go with the devolution group. We started off with unfunded mandates. They said we had to give everything back to the States. Every measure that has come up here says, ''Send welfare back, send the health problem back''—of course, it is all political pap. It is trying to get rid of responsibility. They do not want to pay the bill.

We have been spending $250 billion more than we have taken in each year and both budgets—the President's and the Republican budget—will call again for another $250 billion in expenditures with less than $250 billion in revenues. So they do not want to speak the truth. They want to get boiled up into term limits, and we have gotten the lawyers now because this says ''kill all the lawyers,'' as the butcher said in Henry VI.

People do not realize how he said it. He said anarchy cannot predominate unless we get rid of all the lawyers. The lawyers, Mr. President, have been the bulwark of this great democracy. Every President from Washington up to Lincoln was a lawyer. They are the ones who founded this country, gave thought and wisdom and direction and growth.

I hearken the words of Patrick Henry: ''I know not what course others may take, but as for me, give me liberty or give me death.'' A Virginia lawyer.

Another Virginia lawyer, a 34-year-old lawyer sitting there and penning, ''All men are created equal.'' Thomas Jefferson.

James Madison foresaw our problem right here this minute 200-some years ago. He said, ''But what is Government save the best of reflection on human nature. If man were angels, there would be no need for Government, and if angels governed man, there would be no need for controls over the Government. The task in formulating a government to be administered by a man over man is first frame that government with the power to control the governed and thereupon oblige that same government to control itself.'' James Madison, the lawyer.

This Government is out of fiscal control, and no one wants to talk about it. I wish you would pick up the business section this morning. They do not talk about that. They said, ''Well, the idea of deficits now has gone sort of out of style.'' Why? I can tell the Washington Post why.

For all last year the Republicans had a fraudulent budget, 7 years to balance. It was a fraud. It did not balance. Finally, President Clinton said, ''Well, monkey see monkey do. I will put out a fraudulent budget, too.'' So when he put one out, they said, ''Ah-ha, fraud.''

He said, ''No, that's what you have,'' and that is why they stopped talking, because neither side can possibly balance the budget witho

He said, ''No, that's what you have,'' and that is why they stopped talking, because neither side can possibly balance the budget witho

He said, ''No, that's what you have,'' and that is why they stopped talking, because neither side can possibly balance the budget without an increase in taxes, and both sides are trying to buy—trying to buy—the vote in November with a tax cut.

Sheer nonsense, but that is what is going on. That is why they do not talk about deficits anymore, because you cannot realistically talk about it and give a tax cut at the same time. So they are moving on to abortion, immigration, they pick up lawyers—term limits—any kind of sidebar that is not a national problem to get by the election.

It is all applesauce. It is all Presidential politics. We are spinning our wheels, and it is a shabby process to come and bring this without any debate, limited as we are to talk about a national need that every one of the States over the years has addressed—the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island got up on the floor and talked about the years we have been discussing this. He is right. We have been discussing it for years and years, and the reason it has not passed is because the States have long since taken care of the problem, whether the problem was the inability of finding insurance, whether it was trying to get uniformity, whether it was international competition—you can go down the list, like Sealtest ice cream, the flavor of the week, they had a different reason every time.

Every time that the law professors looked at it, they came en masse and testified, ''For Heaven's sake, don't pass this measure.''

Every time the State legislators came, or the State attorneys general came, they said, ''Look, we're doing the job. It's a nonproblem.''

Every time the chief justices of the States—the States that they revere so much in devolution but that are totally repudiated here—the Association of State Chief Justices came and said, ''Don't pass this.''

The American Bar came and said, ''Don't pass this.''

I do not know who they represent other than themselves trying to get reelected on a pollster hot button. That is all it is. We can go down the list of those who oppose this measure still.

The AFL–CIO, do you not think they represent working Americans? Find me a working American who says this is a good bill.

The Coalition for Consumer Rights; the Consumer Federation of America; the National Conference of State Legislatures; Public Citizen—I can go right down the list.

Mr. President, I challenge the supporters of this bill to say what group, other than the Business Advisory Council and Victor Schwartz, wants it. I represent people in business, and I can tell you about the cost of it.

So the Senator mentions the cost. Then he gets into the amount of lawyers. Since we are talking about the lawyers, I should have completed my thought. Again, it was a lawyer, Abraham Lincoln, who made the Emancipation Proclamation. Franklin Roosevelt in the darkest days of the Depression, a lawyer, said: ''All we have to fear is fear itself.''

I was admitted to practice before the U.S. Supreme Court in December 1952, Mr. President. We had then the school segregation cases. Brown versus Board of Education of Topeka—actually the lead case was Briggs versus Chaney. We had John W. Davis, the former Solicitor General, argue on behalf of the State. Thurgood Marshall, the lead attorney arguing not the Kansas case but the Briggs versus Chaney case. I can see Justice Marshall, a lawyer, standing there now talking about freedom and bringing this Congress and the people in this land to equal justice under law.

''Get rid of the lawyers,'' they say. I can go to Ralph Nader, I can go to Morris Dees, and all the others. I can go down and then I can come to the 60,000—did you hear the figure?—60,000 registered to practice downtown in the District, all on billable hours, hardly any in a court, all fixing us politicians, $200 an hour, $400 an hour.

I have talked to some with ethics charges, and they have gone broke. They have not paid their bills yet. They got rid of the ethics charge, but to go back to all the records, they had to pay lawyers $400 an hour to come and just look over the records in the office.

The billable hour crowd is behind this bill. That is one group. They do not want to mention it. Lawyers, yeah, they have the Persian rugs, mahogany desks, and the drapes. They never worked. The trial lawyers have to convince 12 jurors in their community, all 12—all 12—and have to withstand judicial review, as the coffee case did where it was cut. They did not get paid anything. The presumption is, on the amount to the lawyers, that these injured parties without a lawyer would get the money. That is why they are having a product liability case, because they are denying payment. They are denying payment.

But, yes, we had in the committee—I will read about who gets what, and that this is just a plaintiff's lawyer—people ought to know about defendants' lawyers and about the billable hours thing. It is wonderful. We are talking about the time it takes and the backlog. Who is interested in time and backlog? Then there is the insurance company lawyer out there on the 20th or 30th floor, and the Persian rugs. He could care less. He gets his money. If the insurer can put the claim off and never pay it, at least when they do pay it, it will be in inflated dollars. The insurance lawyers are the ones who are asking for continuances and motions and who call their secretary and tell her to put 52 interrogatories in. Then, they get the discovery going. All they do is just sit there and answer the phone and go out to the club and eat lunch and have their martinis and say how smart they are. And they get paid.

Plaintiffs' lawyers, the defendants' lawyers. I read from the committee report:

> According to calculations derived from the survey conducted by the insurance services officer of the Institute for Civil Justice, for every dollar paid to claimants, insurance paid an average of an additional 42 cents in defense costs. While for every dollar awarded to a plaintiff, the plaintiff pays an average contingent fee of 33 cents out of that dollar. Thus, in cases in which plaintiffs prevail, out of each $1.42 in total litigation costs, including damages, about half of that goes to attorney's fees, with the defendant's attorneys on average paid better than the plaintiff's attorneys. Of course, defendant's attorneys are paid regardless of the outcome of the case, while the plaintiff's attorneys are paid only if they win their case; otherwise, they take a loss for the time and expenses they have incurred.

Mr. President, coming to the Senate, I left a lot of money on the table. I can say that poor person now in the Boland case—this guy had broken down between Georgetown and Charleston. As he went back to get the spare tire out of the trunk, the bus rammed him, dead. The family did not have any money, whatever it was. I said, ''Well, I'll take it.'' We spent quite a bit of time and money, won the case, took the case on appeal, trying to chase down to Florida the particular defendants in that case, everything else of that kind. We just had to leave that.

Plaintiff's attorneys understand that is the cost of doing business. Otherwise, how is poor America ever going to be represented? I take my hat off to trial lawyers. Heavens above, yes, if they make it, some are making in these class actions, I guess, healthy amounts. But the experience is otherwise. As we have heard in the hearings and everything else like that, the cost is not trial lawyers, the cost is because of the defense lawyer.

The cost of the enactment of this particular so-called conference, what I call conspiracy, report, is that individual rights would be seriously, seriously inhibited. There is not any question about the matter of the studies that we have had. In 1991, the Rand Corp. showed that only 2 percent of product liability cases are ever filed. The majority of the 2 percent are business; 90 percent never get to court.

I have already mentioned the Conference Board. The Rand study said that less than 1 percent of corporate America is ever named in a particular lawsuit. Of course, Cornell University's most updated study shows that in the decades of the 1980's, coming into the 1990's, there has been a decline of litigation. There used to be what they call, I forget now, but they had a panic that they just had a plethora of suits. Actually under the Cornell study the suits have declined 44 percent.

The States have moved in. They have moved in a responsible fashion. And here we come—in the State of Arizona, for example, they had a referendum on this. This bill abolishes the public vote of the people of Arizona. If that is not senatorial arrogance, if that is not congressional arroga

this. This bill abolishes the public vote of the people of Arizona. If that is not senatorial arrogance, if that is not congressional arroga

this. This bill abolishes the public vote of the people of Arizona. If that is not senatorial arrogance, if that is not congressional arrogance, if that is not Washington Government at its worst—everybody's campaigning on the stump, Republican and Democrat, that we are going to get rid of that kind of Washington Government—if that is not it, I do not know what is.

I could go on, Mr. President, into the matter of the bill itself. The very interesting thing is that they are talking, oh, so reasonable, about how they are struggling and how it works and how they have balance. I hope they do not use that word ''balance'' because I heard that in the caucus yesterday. Balance, my Aunt Edith. This does not apply to the business of the majority of people bringing product liability cases. Oh, no. Hum-mm. No. It does not apply to coming back on punitive damages and having a separate hearing nor to joint and several liability. None of this balance talk is about pain and suffering, none of this at all—

Oh, look through this obstacle course they have here for the poor, injured party. Not an injured business, no. United Airlines is looking at suing the Dallas manufacturer, I take it, of the baggage handler out there in Denver. No. This bill will not apply to them. That is a corporation. No, siree. That military airplane that crashed—oh, boy, I think we have had 31 of those F–14's in a period of a few months or years. We put those planes on line 23 years ago. That last crash killed, I think, two or three people on the ground there in Nashville. No case under this bill. No case because they have been exempted.

You have to read this thing. I am proud to stand here and tell the truth and expose this nonsense, this conspiracy, that has taken on, on the one hand, a political poll hot button issue, that is a nonproblem, and expose the movement that is in behind it and continues and continues because who is paid, when they talk about the trial lawyers and being bankrolled, who is paid and bankrolling this?

So you have two classes of injured parties. If you are a business injured, do not worry. If you are instead an individual who struggles because you not only have to get the investigation cost, you have to get your medical cost, you have to get it all assumed by that rascally trial lawyer, and he is assuming the plat to be made, the diagrams, the photographs and everything else to bring the truth to the 12 men and women on the jury and suffer all the legal motions and everything else. The trial lawyers are bankrolling injured parties, for an average, I would say, of anywhere from 1½ to 2 years at least on these cases.

If they do not prevail with all 12 or with the supreme court of the State on appeal, they are goners. They are goners. That has happened time and time again.

But you have two classes. There the bill's supporters have been very, very careful to talk about fairness and trying so long. You have two classes of individual parties: the CEO and the fellow who is working in the plant. The CEO makes $5 million. Ask AT&T; I think the CEO got up to $16 million. If he comes in and he gets an injury, he can get twice times the economic damages. So, if he is out for a year, he can get $32 million in punitive damages.

But if the same fellow in the car that is driving with the CEO—if the CEO will give him a ride—that fellow will only get $250,000 in punitive damages. Oh, boy, what a fair bill. It is so studied, so nice, so pleasant. We have been holding it up because trial lawyers have been bankrolling everybody, and everything else of that kind.

I wish this crowd would sober up and read this thing. You have the poor women. You have two classes there. If you have the breadwinner, the man in the family, he can get all his economic damages and everything else, but she can be expecting a baby and lose that baby and never be able to produce a child again, but that is not economic damage, that is pain and suffering. So there is going to be a separate hearing there.

Mr. President, later, if the time permits, I want to get to the uniformity and the global competition that they talk about, because with respect to, say, the State of Washington which does not have punitive damages, this law would not apply. To my State of South Carolina that does have punitive damages, this law shall apply. They call that uniformity. They call that uniformity.

Interstate commerce is a many splendored thing and the lawyers are bolixing it up. As for global competition—I have foreign industries coming in like gangbusters. I have been in the game at least 35, nearly 40 years. This is why I challenged the distinguished Senator from North Carolina; I know his State; we compete together. We have never had the blue chip corporations that we have today—I have Firestone, several GE's, I have several DuPont, American industries. Right here in the last 2 or 3 months, we have BMW, we have roller bearings, Hoffmann-La Rouche, the most wonderful pharmaceutical firm that you have ever seen. Companies from everywhere—Hitachi, in the TV industry.

I want to thank publicly the Washington Post for that Outlook article on Sunday. I have been trying to bring this trade issue to the U.S. Senate now—this is the 30th year, this so-called protectionism. President Ronald Reagan, under section 301, started moving in these cases and got voluntary restraint agreements. As a result of the voluntary restraint agreements in things like Sematech—protectionism, if you please—we are not only holding on to the old jobs but we are getting new jobs.

I remember the Republican primary campaign in South Carolina, when the former Governor said, ''Free trade, free trade. Look at this, BMW taking Senator DOLE through its new plant. It was there on account of free trade.'' It was there on account of protectionism. When we got voluntary restraints, that is how we got Honda, how we got Toyota, how we got BMW. Who is kidding whom?

When the distinguished Senator from Alaska, Senator STEVENS and I, put into the defense bill the Buy America provision on roller bearings, we got Koyo and INF up in York County. That is why they are there. Voluntary restraint agreements on steel, voluntary restraint agreements with respect to semiconductors, Sematech, Hitachi. You can go down the list, Mr. President. Trial lawyers, protectionism. Competition is what America is interested in at this particular moment, not the tort system being handled by the States, not term limits and all the other fanciful games played in political polls. They want America. They want this Congress to get competitive.

There is nothing wrong with the industrial work of America. The industrial work of America is the most competitive. What is not competing is us up here, where we have a failed policy of the cold war that we had to enact trying to keep the alliance together. Now with the fall of the wall is the time to build up our economy. Now is the time to go forward with the protectionism that we have for the environment that they are trying to get rid of—clean air, clean water, proper trial at the State level.

I have to read aloud the seventh amendment because I do not believe they have ever read it. You ought to see what it says. The seventh amendment to the Constitution:

> In suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed $20, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury, shall be otherwise reexamined in any court of the United States, according to the rules of the common law.

They have reexamined the amendment in here where they say, ''Mr. Trial Judge, do not tell the jury about that $250,000 cap, but if they come in, then you go and you factually proceed in violation of the Constitution and come out with your trying of the facts in your decision.'' Come on.

They say now they have worked over the many years to pass a product liability bill, and the general aviation bill lets manufacturers sell airplanes that are working so well. Global competition, we have to get into the global competition. I am going to write a follow-up piece for publication. Over half of what is coming in here in imports is American multinational generated. We are competing with ourselves. The multinationals that have lost their country as far as business imports are concerned have gone overseas and they are coming back in and the foreign entities, foreign governments are coming in here with a historic chant. It is devastating our economy. Everybody can see it but us politicians. Everybody can see it but us politicians.

It is a given in manufacturing that 30 percent of volume is the cost of the employees, the workers; now we call them the associates. It is a given, further, that you can save as much as 20 percent of sales volume by going to a low-wage country in manufacturing.

So if you have $5 million in a sales corporation you can keep your executive office, your sales force, but move your manufacturing offshore to a low-wage country and save $100 million, or you can continue to work your own people and go broke. That is not greedy corporations. That is a stupid Congress that allows that to happen.

If I ran a corporation and my competition headed overseas and started cutting his costs that much, I am forced to leave. We have a veritable hemorrhage of industries leaving. I pointed out that Baxter Medical that I brought here years ago, with 830 workers, has just gone to Malaysia. Secretary Reich says, and the Congress says, now what we have to do is retraining, retraining, retraining. Come on. I have skilled training coming out of my ears. We can train them to do anything. We do not need a Federal program. We have BMW without a Federal retraining program, and all these other industries.

But assume they are right and they are retrained into wonderful computer operators, 830 of them, the next day. The average age is 45. Do you think they will hire the 45-year-old computer operator or the 25-year-old? With the cost of retirement, with the medical costs and everything, the answer is obvious.

What we are dealing with here is not a cost of doing business. I am identifying our injury. Our injury is the failure to, as Lincoln said, ''disenthrall'' ourselves from free trade, free trade, free trade. There is no such thing as free trade. In the 1930's, we had reciprocal trade, and tariffs as the instrumentality—protectionism. Everybody wants to flatten the income tax—flat tax, flat tax, flat tax, is something else going on. Well, we lived on tariffs and protectionism from the beginning of the republic up until 1913. A country, an economic giant, built on protectionism. But they are all running around here like children and hollering, ''Protectionism, protectionism, free trade, free trade. Product liability is such a weight on doing business.'' And all of the business statistics, findings, insurance company results and everything else of that kind show otherwise.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMAS). Who yields time?

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Craig Williams, a fellow on the staff of Senator MCCAIN, be granted the privilege of the floor during the Senate session today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from West Virginia such time as he may desire.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Washington.

Mr. President, I am very happy that the Senate, at long last, is taking this bill up. We have been here before; we have been here many times before. I wish we could have gotten here sooner this year. Nevertheless, I am glad we are here. I think there is a natural tendency in Congress to wait until absolutely the last minute before important decisions are made, and that is what we are doing again this time. But so be it.

I am here to report to my colleagues that the Senate product liability bill has maintained the Senate's standard, which is products only. It has to be fair. It cannot include a whole lot of extra things that the Contract With America wanted, or that others wanted, or, indeed, that earlier generations within this body tried to add on to this bill. It was always my intention—and it was always the intention of the Senator from the State of Washington—to keep this bill disciplined, on products only, not to expand and include all kinds of other subjects, so that we could keep faith with our colleagues. I believe we have done that. All of this is now embodied in H.R. 956, the commonsense product liability legal reform bill.

I am enormously proud of the fact that the Senate really does want to see meaningful product liability reform, to fix our broken products system. Most of those on the other side of the aisle feel that way. There is a merry band of us on our side of the aisle who feel that way, and we have for a long time.

We can announce to our colleagues that we have done what we promised we would do—hold to the Senate position in virtually every respect, to preserve the balanced, reasonable Senate product liability reform provisions that will provide Federal uniformity to the hodgepodge of State laws, which deal with product liability today. This will improve the product liability system for consumers and for business alike.

There is a feeling sometimes in here that the bill has to either be just for consumers or just for business, and that you are over here or you are over here. This bill is trying to reach to both sides. We do some things to help manufacturers, and we do some things to help consumers. That was the point—to make it a balanced system. The statute of limitations is one that occurs to me mightily. California, for example, has a 1-year statute of limitations, and that means, in California, I presume—and I am not a lawyer—that if you are injured and wish to sue, you have 1 year within which to do it, and after a year is passed, you cannot sue. I consider that to be anticonsumer, and I consider those who are defending the status quo to be defending an anticonsumer position, which is, in fact, virulently anticonsumer.

Our bill says that one has the right to go 2 years after one discovers, first, that one is injured and, second, what the cause of the injury was, so that one knows who to sue. Now, in an era of drugs and toxics—and we are seeing this, for example, in the Persian Gulf war with the so-called mystery illness, which is no mystery to me, but what seems to be a mystery to the Department of Defense—sometimes it takes 4 or 5 years. Sometimes it takes 15 or 20 years for a toxic or a drug to show up as an injury. So then you know that you are injured.

But under our bill, that is not enough. You have to know what the cause of the injury was so you know who to sue. Now, that is clearly proconsumer, and those who are defending the status quo—that is, those who oppose this legislation—wish heartily to deny consumers that window to get into the courthouse door. I find that stunning. I find that, in many ways, shocking. I am very proud that we have that in our bill.

Opponents of this legislation have, I believe—and this has been true in the past—used gross distortions and out and out misstatements about this bill to try to suggest that it has been significantly changed from the Senate-passed product liability bill. We are spending our time running around taking examples, which are patently false, which have been raised as though they were patently true. That is not a distinguished aspect of Senate life on this bill.

The fact is that this report is virtually identical to the Senate bill in every single respect—virtually. Senator GORTON and I, in what I thought was a rather extraordinary colloquy from the floor, delivered on our blood oath, in which we both said that if we did not deliver on this promise, we would vote against proceeding to the bill or vote against the bill; and that was that we promised to delete the provision providing a defendant with a right to a new trial under the ''additional amount'' provision. That was an issue. We pledged to remove it. We did. We also took the House timeframe on the statute of repose. That was the one change that we made, maintaining the Senate bill's limited scope, importantly, to durable goods in the workplace.

Now, again, some of the distortions being used are that by reducing the statute of repose, which was the only area in which we gave the House what they wanted—we gave them the 15 years, but we did not give them what they really wanted. They wanted this to include everything, not just durable goods in the workplace. We maintained the Senate position even on that.

Beyond that, no substantive changes were really made. Technical and conforming drafting changes were made, as in any report of this sort. But that is it. That is the sum of the changes from the Senate-passed bill, no matter what the opponents of the reform will assert, and will assert this day. My colleagues need to know that, and they should be reassured that this means that the product liability report is yet one more opportunity to go on record in support of modera

should be reassured that this means that the product liability report is yet one more opportunity to go on record in support of moderate and beneficial reform of our product liability law.

Senator GORTON has gone through, and will continue to go through, a detailed legal analysis for the minor changes that were made, conforming changes. He will also rebut—certainly better than I—the outrageous claims that are being circulated by the opponents of the reform. I heard them in the Democratic caucus yesterday, and I am sure I will hear them on the floor today. However, as coauthor of the Senate product liability bill, I would like to go on record with my own analysis of the opponents' wild claim about the report. It is not in legalese because I am not a lawyer. But it is in English. I want this RECORD to reflect what is actually in the bill, rather than what the other side will, as I have said, continue to misinform Members about during this crucial debate.

There is a lot of confusing misinformation being circulated. Here are the facts.

Fact No. 1: There is no cap on economic or noneconomic damages—no cap on economic or noneconomic damages. Claimants will continue to be able to recover whatever they are awarded in a court.

Fact No. 2: The statute of repose remains limited to durable goods in the workplace only—only. Statements being made that they now cover all goods are wrong.

Fact No. 3: Product sellers, lessors, or renters will not be protected from negligent liability. That is precisely why the negligent entrustment exception was moved to the product sellers' section of this bill.

Fact No. 4: Dow-Corning and other companies who made, or make, breast implants will not be shielded from liability—will not be shielded from liability. We went through this last year, and groups, in particular, women's groups, gave impassioned, very emotional press conferences in which they said they would be included and that they would be shielded by this bill. It was not true last year. It is not true this year. Whether or not they supplied the silicon, they remain as liable as any other manufacturers who produce a defective product, if they do.

Fact No. 5: And this is very important because this involves a subject which has struck a number of people on my side of the aisle deeply, and it has to do with a letter that Mothers Against Drunk Driving—obviously an incredibly excellent and wonderful group—have circulated. But we have been trying to reach them to get them to make a retraction because they have made a mistake. It is a mistake which has been persuasive, unfortunately, to at least two Members on our side that I can think of.

I repeat, drunk drivers, gun users, et cetera, will not be protected from liability in any way. Opponents are intentionally trying to confuse harm caused by a product—that is, harm caused by a product which is covered in the bill—and harm caused by the product's use by a person, or persons, which is not covered in the bill and remains totally subject to existing State law. Specifically, for those inclined that way, section 101(15) and 101(a)(1), definition of ''product liability action,'' includes only ''harm caused by a product, not use.'' That is an enormous difference.

If I have leased a car and then stopped off at several bars and become drunk and then cause damage to somebody, I, as a person, can certainly be sued, but the use of the car, if the car is not defective, is not actionable under this bill, nor should it be, because this is a products-only bill. It is the products we are talking about, not the use, or the user.

Fact No. 6: In all States that permit punitive damages, they will continue to be available and the additional amount provision—we used to call that judge additur, but we now call it additional amount provision—will apply in all those States regardless of whether caps are higher or lower in that State.

Fact No. 7: Tolling, this was raised in our caucus yesterday; it has been raised since. Tolling of the statute of limitations will be covered as they are now by applicable State and Federal law. For example, for those so inclined, see 11 U.S. Code 108(c), ''automatic tolling in bankruptcy cases.''

Nothing in the bill, Mr. President, or omitted from the bill, will change State law on tolling. That is a fact.

Fact No. 8: State law will continue to control whether or not electricity, steam, et cetera, is considered a product or not.

Fact No. 9: This is not a one-way preemption bill but a mix of State and Federal rules, as it ought to be, in a bill which is moderate. Products are in interstate commerce—we have said this over the years so many times—70 percent. There was a day when things that were manufactured in California were probably sold in California for the most part. Today, on a national average, 70 percent of all things that are manufactured are interstate and are sold outside the borders of that State and thus are in interstate commerce, and they should be subject to more uniform rules for business and consumers.

Let me just say again, as I did last year, that the European Economic Community—which is close to 400 million people and an enormous competitor for the United States of America economically—all 13 countries have a single product liability law, a uniform product liability law—all 13 countries, not provinces within those countries but the whole country.

Japan has just adopted a uniform product liability law, a law uniform for the country, but we have 51. We have 51 different laws. For example, in the case of punitive damages, I think about 80 percent of all punitive damages come from three States—California, Texas, and Alabama. Why is that? Probably because of something called forum shopping. Because we have so many different laws—51 different laws—people can simply try to find the place which is most effective for their particular case, and there they go. So this is not a one-way preemption.

Fact No. 10: On joint and several liability—there has been a lot of talk about that and this is an extremely important issue—30 States have modified joint and several liability at this point. The Federal proposal follows the California law affecting only noneconomic damages. It is interesting on this point; the States clearly recognize that there are things they want to change in joint and several liability. Twelve States have eliminated joint liability altogether. Two States have eliminated joint liability for noneconomic damages. That is California and Nebraska. Ten States have otherwise limited the availability of joint liability as to noneconomic damages or damages generally, with the result being it is significantly less likely that noneconomic damages would be subject to joint liability. Three States have eliminated joint liability in cases in which the plaintiff is negligent and five States have capped awards of noneconomic damages. In all, 30 States have done this, and these include 8 of the 9 largest States in the Nation.

For the remainder of my time I wish to remind my colleagues and whoever else might be listening why some of us have wanted so much to act on this legislation and to outline the opportunity that this reform in fact holds for this country and for our people as consumers and as human beings.

Product liability reform has a very long history in the Congress. Members in both Houses and on both sides of the aisle have been trying to reform the product liability rules for over a decade, in fact for substantially longer than that, and we have done it for the most part by working together, Republicans and Democrats. No matter what anyone says to try and hone this issue as truly partisan or divisive, the idea of product liability reform is a legislative idea with a complete, thorough, aboveboard, open, and honest history of hearings, of markups, of floor debate, of cloture votes, and everything and anything else that one could call the way to legislate.

Yes, we have been persistent, those of us who want to see this law enacted. We have been dogged. We have been focused because we think this country and its people need the change. The status quo is hurting American workers, American business, American consumers, and American competitiveness. When products by definition cross State lines—at least 70 percent of them—it makes no sense, absolutely no sense for product liability rules to be different in all 50 States, which they are—50 different sets of rules. It breeds unpredictability, delay, confusion, and unfairness that hurts everybody, not just businesses being sued but people, too.

unfairness that hurts everybody, not just businesses being sued but people, too.

unfairness that hurts everybody, not just businesses being sued but people, too.

Senator GORTON and I introduced a bill last year, once again to reform product liability. And I have to say I have enjoyed enormously a true partnership in spearheading this effort with Senator GORTON. Because I said everything good I could think of last year and ran out of the English language, I can simply thank him once again for his legal acumen, extraordinary integrity, and extraordinary sincerity in trying to enact reform.

Different legislation was passed in the House earlier in the year, as people know, and fortunately one part of it was product liability reform. In the discussions, many of my colleagues in the House and some in the Senate deeply wanted to pursue nonproduct liability legal reforms—nonproduct liability legal reforms, all kinds of ideas—making it available to all civil torts, putting it on medical malpractice, which I personally favor but which has no place in a products bill. This is a products bill. The problem was that the Senate did not have companion legislation to consider or to conference on the House's ideas for malpractice reforms or legal reforms beyond product liability. While I am not opposed to looking at other kinds of legal reforms, I believe I owe it to my colleagues to whom I and Senator GORTON and others have made this pledge and to the legislative process to have the Senate first take up legislation through the relevant committees and the regular process.

The history of product liability reform legislation makes it obvious that it is still a very contentious subject, and I always say to my good friend, Senator HOLLINGS, that I do not like disagreeing with him on anything, on anything, but I think there is an immensely compelling, urgent, and clearcut case for product liability reform.

Senator GORTON and I introduced a bill that is bipartisan, moderate, balanced, and focused as a way to begin fixing the problems in the product liability system. The report is in essence the same bill with improvements suggested by the administration—I repeat, with improvements suggested by the administration—and others interested in getting responsible product liability enacted into law. Even the National Governors' Association, usually the most insistent that the job should be left to the States, which we have seen in Medicaid and welfare reform and many other things, even in these last 10 months, has said in formal resolutions that ''uniform standards'' are needed in product liability. They have so said. One of those resolutions was passed.

In fact, the original task force on product liability—one of the members was then Governor Bill Clinton, and he was the leading force at NGA—had a unanimous report in favor of uniform standards and twice the President of the United States voted to support that position.

Last August, the Economic Strategy Institute, the organization headed by Clyde Pressler, with whom I believe the Senator from South Carolina generally agrees, and a voice for tough action on trade and other areas, issued a report called—and this is not what I would call the best title I have ever read in my life, but it is called ''Tortuous Road to Product Liability Reform.''

To paraphrase, when the institute issued the findings of its recent research, it said that America's unique approach to product liability has brought enormous and growing costs to the resolution of disputes, and the costs are borne by consumers and U.S. business alike.

It goes on to say that costs are eating up money that could be spent on wages, on research and development, on training and other investments to be competitive with the rest of the world where our principal economic opponents have adopted uniform product liability standards. The institute's report underscores that product liability reform would significantly benefit consumers and business.

I think everybody knows that I obviously am disappointed by the President's recent statements indicating that he intends to veto this report, particularly when the administration issued a statement by the President on May 4, when the Senate was debating amendments to expand our product liability reform bill, that concluded with the final paragraph which I think shows how much consensus we have managed to develop over the years on the point that action on product liability is needed. It said in that statement, ''The administration supports the enactment of limited but meaningful product liability reform at the Federal level. Any legislation must fairly balance the interests of consumers with those of manufacturers and sellers.''

It was this President who just 2 years ago signed legislation providing the American aviation industry and its consumers with provisions very much like what is in the current report for product liability reform. That bill, the general aviation bill, thoroughly described by Senator GORTON, has helped the small plane industry make a major comeback since its enactment, and the President when he signed it said he felt that this would create many, many jobs for Americans. The President was correct then in arguing for reform, and I hope, hope and hope and pray, that he will seize the opportunity of moderate, balanced reform that our conference report presents to him now.

Mr. President, I believe this conference report is the legislation the President was calling for last May. I truly believe that it is. I consulted with the administration every step of the way during this long process to meet its parameters and those of many of my Democratic colleagues. I felt an obligation to so do. I think and believe that my colleagues know how hard I have fought to stay within these parameters.

Now we are voting on the conference report that produces the product liability reform the Democrats and Republicans in both Houses have toiled in the vineyards to achieve these many years. At a time when America clearly faces threats to our jobs and economic growth across the world, where they do not have the same maze of conflicting laws, we should do everything we can to suit up, not surrender. Consumers should not have to bear the costs of ridiculous delays or be denied the breakthrough drugs or other innovations that the current system scares off.

So I think this conference report, in concluding, Mr. President, has earned the votes of those who support meaningful product liability reform in good faith, those who sincerely mean it. The final decision, of course, is the President's. He said he is going to veto it. Having so said, obviously, he has a chance to hear this debate, to rethink his position, and to change his position itself and, in fact, to sign the bill. He could still do that.

As I have said, I hope he will take that time and see this vote as a reason to reconsider his position.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I yield 25 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Alabama.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recognized for 25 minutes.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, Senator ROCKEFELLER, I am sure, has endeavored to live up to his commitments to not expand the conference report, to the best of his knowledge, but being a nonlawyer, I am afraid some of his advisers who are writing it did not explain to him the vast expansion of this report over what the Senate passed before. There are numerous changes, subtle changes in many instances—for example, the changing of the word ''and'' to ''or,'' which greatly expanded the bill.

The proponents are referring to the various special interests who have concerns about this legislation. You know to whom they are referring—trial lawyers and advocates on behalf of the American consumer. But there are a lot of other special interests that are involved, particularly those who have been endeavoring to save money and to make a bigger profit. In that category could be many elements of business from manufacturers to wholesalers, distributors, retail sellers and also including the insurance industry. These can certainly be called special interests.

This report's section on punitive damages has, with regard to small businesses, a provision about ''the lesser amount'' and therefore providing a maximum cap on punitive damages of $250,000 if a business has less than 25 employees. I doubt if there is any company that has 25 employees that does not carry substantial excess liability insurance over and above $250,000. Most businesses carry liability insurance in large amounts, and the relationship of employees to the policy of insurance that is carried, that protects them, is not really germane at all.

The conference report is greatly expanded by lowering by 25 percent, from 20 to 15 years, the statute of repose. For example, the statute of repose will apply to a bridge. Most contractors' negligence and the defects in the production of a bridge do not occur during the first 5 years, 10 years, or even 15 years of a bridge's use. A defect in a part or component product of a bridge manifests itself by a bridge collapsing, or giving way after a period of time in excess of 15 years.

Under the definition of the term ''products,'' it is anything that is used in the construction of a bridge under this bill, and there are many component products that are manufactured for the purpose of lasting many, many years.

So, as we see in particular mountainous areas where bridges span big gaps, or cross between mountains, you will have a real danger after 15 years of a collapse and under the statute of repose of 15 years, an insured person or his estate is outright prohibited from bringing a suit to determine fault. Also, consider that it is 15 years from the date of the delivery to the first purchaser that the statute begins to run. There are many consumer items, products that are delivered to the first purchaser, which is not the consumer, that may stay on the shelf 2 or 3 years. What do we have? The statute running even sooner against unwary consumers.

We should also consider workplace products and their safeguards that are supposed to protect innocent workers. What you protect is a person, a farmer from losing a hand in a corn machine, which harvests corn. Or you can have any type of other situations where there is an absence of or defect in safeguards associated with machinery. I have charts to show the various items of where safeguards are left off. Consider a plastic injection molding machine or a tractor, manufactured more than 15 years prior to the accident where a 34-year-old person was killed, and where the manufacturer failed to equip it with rollover protection system. Consider a punch press which lacked guards and safety devices. All of these items illustrate how an innocent person could be adversely affected by the 15 year statute of repose contained in this conference report.

Then the statute of repose has some language that says ''not caused by a toxic material.'' The issue arises in regard to whether or not, for example, asbestos is a toxic harm or toxic material. There are various and sundry people who would say a position can be taken that asbestos is not a toxin or a poison, but that breathing it, is unlike poisons like chlorine or benzene. They say that asbestos is simply a rock fiber and asbestosis, the most prevalent asbestos-related disease, is caused not from toxic interaction between the asbestos fibers and cells but, instead, because the needle-like asbestos fibers pierce and destroy air sacs in the lungs.

It takes generally 15 or 20 years of exposure to asbestos material before the disease develops. But under the statute of repose, you do not have a right to bring any suit. You are forever barred from bringing a suit after the passage of 15 years from the date of delivery to the first purchaser.

Now tell me this is fair. This, to me, is a great expansion of the conference report from the Senate-passed bill. But let us look at some of the other expansions in this report.

The report has a change of a slight word about a standard of liability other than negligence. For years and years, product liability bills have excluded natural gas and electricity, but this report comes back from conference with a change in language providing that if natural gas or electricity is subject to a different standard than negligence, then it is subject to all of provisions of this legislation—this is a vast expansion.

Now, natural gas and electricity are looked upon, in practically all States, to be highly dangerous and are subject to laws that say that if they are sold, the producer and seller must be held to the highest standard of care in order to protect the public. But the conference report contains an expansion for the first time in about 18 years. Was this merely an inadvertence or was it intended?

Natural gas is odorless, and producers have to add a fluid to it for people to smell it in order to detect it. It is generally referred to as ''skunk juice.'' But if somebody fails to add it or fails to put the proper amount in and a devastating accident occurs, are those in the production chain allowed to reap the benefits of this legislation's protections, say, as to the caps on punitive damages? Is that not a great expansion of the conference report? I just wonder how many homes are heated with natural gas, and there is a particular case that just occurred recently, a Seminole natural gas case out in Texas where there was an explosion and three people were killed and many were injured. Punitive damages were awarded by a jury.

Obviously, that brought to mind a very crafty, highly intelligent drafter, who now says we can take care of similar situations by a little sleight of pen and make these type of these cases come within the ambit of the bill. I am sure that the distinguished proponents of this legislation did not realize or never were told about this particular change, but it greatly expands the bill, make no mistake about it.

Consider the provision regarding negligent entrustment. There was a provision in the Senate-passed bill that said that the limitations of this bill shall not apply to any suit brought for negligent entrustment. The Mothers Against Drunk Driving had insisted that that provision be in the Senate bill. That is where you have the State dram shop laws, where liability is provided where tavern or bar owner sells whiskey to a minor or to a drunk who then drives a car under drunken conditions and kills an innocent victim. Under the Senate-passed bill, a defendant was not provided with the limitations of this bill such as the caps on punitive damages. But now a defendant could come within the limitations contained in the conference report. Gun dealers, who have been subject to negligent entrustment actions on the State level for selling guns to known incompetents or criminals, would now benefit from the subtle change between the Senate-passed bill and the conference report which is now before the Senate.

The negligent entrustment provision was moved from one place in the Senate-passed bill to another place in the conference report, and this subtle change allows defendants in negligent entrustment actions to avail themselves of the limitations in this conference report. The Mothers Against Drunk Driving are utterly opposed to this report and are urging Senators to vote against cloture.

Then there is the issue of the statute of limitations of 2 years where a court orders an injunction, like a company goes into bankruptcy and you, therefore, are enjoined by law from filing a product liability suit. Under the bill that was passed by the Senate, that time did not count—the statute of limitations was suspended or tolled. It said that that time did not count on your statute of limitation running of 2 years.

But, by sleight of hand, it is removed from the bill and it is no longer there. The President, in his veto message that he sent, points that out. I had read the bill, and I had not discovered that. I went back and read it again, and I saw how craftily that had been omitted from the conference. So, therefore, if your company goes into bankruptcy, there is an automatic stay against being able to file a civil suit. Therefore, that provision that gave you protection against the running of time is removed.

I mentioned a definition of durable goods, how the adding of a ''comma'' in the durable goods section now brings in many, many household goods—baby cribs, lawn mowers, razors, electric razors that are used—any type of thing that has a projected life of 3 years is now in it. Before in it, it had to be related to a business. No longer does it. But it includes household goods that are there.

There is another change about remediation relating to Superfund in regards to the environment. I am not sure that I understand it, but it was changed for some reason. The conferees did not make these changes unless they are trying to give some sort of protection to some company.

Another change to me that was unusual was the conferees changed the name of the bill. When the bill was in the Senate and passed the Senate it was called the Product Liability Fairness Act of 1995. I made a speech about it and said that was the biggest misnomer and pointed out the unfair provisions. For example, business can sue for commercial loss, and they are not subject to these provisions. The report exempts business in their suits against each other. But they contain provisions that it would apply to individuals, to injured parties. But if you are an injured business, you can sue for loss of profits, you can sue and are not subject to the bill's limitations.

For example, you have a statute of limitations for 2 years here, while in most States the statute of limitations, under the Uniform Commercial Code, is anywhere from 4 to 6 years, just for example. Business suits are not subject to it. Yet the biggest verdicts that have been rendered relative to punitive damages are business cases. Pennzoil versus Texaco and so on. But anyway the proponents changed the name to the Commonsense Product Liability Legal Reform Act of 1996.

I just do not believe that it is common sense or fairness either way. I think it is a misnomer. Is it common sense to include governmental entities, the Department of Defense, the GSA, and subject them to the provisions of this, but not subject business by allowing them to be able to sue for their commercial losses? But does it make common sense that in this time of deficits where we are trying to reduce Government spending, to put the Federal Government at a disadvantage as regards this bill?

The Department of Defense has helicopters, tanks, trucks, et cetera. Almost all products that the military buys are built with the idea of having a long life.

But does it make common sense, in these days, to have the Government subjected to the statute of repose of 15 years? Does it make sense, in these days of where we are trying to take care of local governments and not to have unfunded mandates, to impose this bill's limitations upon governmental entities?

Does it make sense, common sense, to allow them to not subtract time from bankruptcy from a statute of limitation? Does it make common sense not to show in a trial in chief that the engineer who designed a railroad bridge was a known alcoholic, and the company knew it, and they still did not take steps to review his works, and a bridge on a railroad collapses? I mean, let us go down the list relative to commonsense matters.

But this idea of fairness is a smokescreen for patent unfairness. When you get movements, say, started, and the questioning of all the trial lawyers, therefore it gives you an opportunity not to just maybe address one issue or two issues, but it addresses all of these issues that you have lost cases on. So therefore you want to protect the insurance company and you start adding and adding.

I think there is also the question of fairness where the issue of a separate trial on punitive damages is requested. If a separate trial has been requested, it is automatically granted. But the report says you cannot show the conduct of the defendant which exhibits a conscious, flagrant indifference to the safety of others. That is the standard in this report that allows for punitive damages.

A claimant cannot show that type of conduct in the trial in chief for compensatory damages—that is the trial for economic nor noneconomic damages. Remember noneconomic damages include pain and suffering that may be caused by conscious, flagrant indifference to one's safety. Is that fair to a person who has been badly disfigured, scarred, or suffered a loss of limb by a product whose manufacturer knew of its defect but refused to take steps to recall the product.

I would like to give this illustration of commercial loss. There are two commercial airplanes, one of them Delta, one of them American. They collide and we will just say here, for a hypothetical viewpoint, the American is at fault. The passengers that are killed in any one of them are subject to the limitations of this act. But Delta can sue for the loss of profits which are not limited and can have a different statute of repose or statute of limitations; it can sue with no limit on punitive damages for their commercial loss relative to this accident.

But the passengers are limited under the provisions of this report. Is it fair that businesses have a double standard? If it is good for the goose, it ought to be good for the gander. But why do the proponents exclude civil actions for commercial loss? That shows how one sided this legislation is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. HEFLIN. I ask unanimous consent for 2 more minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is yielded 2 more minutes, if there is no objection. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HEFLIN. If that plane falls on Yankee Stadium, and has killed or injured people—they are bound by the limitations of this act. But the owner of Yankee Stadium can sue for the loss of profits due to the destruction of his grandstand. None of the provisions pertain to him.

So this is a grossly unfair bill, and it does not make common sense. The conference bill greatly expands the Senate passed bill. It is extreme in its provisions. It denies an injured party rights. It is particularly harmful to women in title II's provisions regarding biomaterial suppliers, giving a complete immunity or bar to suit to such suppliers. I wish I had time to go into all of that, and I urge them to review title II carefully. I urge that my colleagues vote against cloture on this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHCROFT). The Senator from Washington.

Mr. GORTON. I yield such time as the Senator from Connecticut desires.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. I thank my friend and colleague from the State of Washington.

Mr. President, I rise as an enthusiastic supporter of the conference report accompanying H.R. 956, called the Commonsense Product Liability Legal Reform Act of 1996. In this case, it is not just a title. This bill is full of common sense. It is reform. This is a moderate bill. It is a thoughtful bill. It reflects compromise. It reflects years of effort to solve a real problem.

Sometimes when we get into the back and forth of the arcane legal concepts involved here, we may lose sight of the fact, as Senator GORTON pointed out in his excellent opening statement, and Senator ROCKEFELLER, there is a real problem out there. Our tort system, our system for compensating those who were injured as a result of other's negligence, has gone off the track. People in this country know there is too much litigation. People know that they are not benefiting from it. They are actually paying more for it in higher consumer prices and lost opportunity for jobs and lost opportunity to use new products that require some risk. People in this country, businesses, are afraid to take that risk. Why? Because they are worried about being bludgeoned by a lawsuit, regardless of whether they are negligent or not.

I have to tell you when I was attorney general of the State of Connecticut, I was involved—and my friend and occupant of the chair may have gone through the same experience—I was at a national meeting of the attorneys general. I recall voting for a resolution that spoke out against product liability reform. I did not know much about it. We were oriented in a different direction. I started going around the State of Connecticut. I made it a practice to visit businesses, particularly small businesses in the State. People out there are the heroes. They are out there, day in, day out. They are not making big money. They took a risk. They are working hard. Maybe they have 10, 20, 30, 40, 50 people, maybe a few more, in their business.

I am interested always in knowing, how did you get started? How did you raise the money to get into it? How are you doing? What can I do to help you? Over and over again, right there at the top, one, two, or three, ''Do something about all this litigation. We are constantly being sued, and even though we are not negligent we have to pay so much money to lawyers.'' Or, ''We get frightened because they come after us not just to pay the cost of an injury, medical, lost wages, et cetera, but the intangibles of pain and suffering, or so-called punitive damages which go well beyond the specific injuries suffered. Please help us with this.'' That is how I got into this battle.

It seemed to me this was a real problem. There is a real problem out there. The bill that comes out of conference is a real commonsense solution to that problem. It puts some very moderate limits and lines and parameters on the existing system. It does not deny an injured plaintiff the right to recover any wages lost, any medical expenses; indeed, even the so-called noneconomic intangibles of pain and suffering, loss of consortium, et cetera. What it does, basically, is to say in the category of punitive damages, punishment, I guess created at the outset for probably a good reason, which was to add to this civil justice system some sort of extra punishment to a truly negligent producer of a product, to get that person not to do that anymore. It is almost a kind of criminal penalty; in fact, it is quasi-criminal.

What has happened with this presumably well-intentioned concept of punitive damages, it has become a club held over the head of defendants, worried that juries may come in with multimillion-dollar verdicts. So they settle regardless of whether they are negligent or not. So it is a limitation of the greater of $250,000, no small amount, or twice the compensatory damage that is economic and noneconomic as we have talked about—that is the basic limit on punitive damages that this bill provides. Very moderate.

Senator GORTON and Senator ROCKEFELLER have spent the 9 months since the Senate passed this bill, saying ''No'' to just about everyone who sought to change the bill passed on the Senate floor last May. They said ''No'' to Democratic Senators; they said, ''No'' to Republican Senators, and they said ''No'' to the House conferees.

What they have produced is a bill that is remarkably similar to what the Senate passed last year with overwhelming Republican and Democratic support. Frankly, Mr. President, I do not understand why anyone who voted for this bill last May will not vote for cloture and vote for this bill today when it comes up.

Senators GORTON and ROCKEFELLER deserve our thanks, but to speak in much more tangible terms—they deserve our votes this afternoon to break this filibuster. They have spent these many months in the disagreeable position of saying ''No'' to so many, specifically so that Senators who voted for the Senate bill last May—we understood the margin was not greatly over the 60 votes required to break a filibuster. Again, not 51 for a majority, but 60 to break a filibuster. They kept saying ''No'' so that the 60-plus votes last May would stay there when the conference report came out.

I think they have achieved what most people thought, frankly, was impossible in the conference report they brought up, because the House yielded to the Senate on almost every proposal, every measure, every item in controversy.

What now do our colleagues, Senators GORTON and ROCKEFELLER, face? Last-minute concerns, distortions, new arguments. I would not blame these two warriors if they were dispirited. I admire them for not being so. Unfortunately, it is what we have come to expect in these debates. The hostile fire keeps coming in from every different direction. It is like having a shot fired; it is defended against; another shot fired on another perimeter; it goes on and on. It is meant to blur over the basic requirement for this bill, and the basic moderation and common sense of the bill before the Senate.

Mr. President, I have a particular interest in title II of this bill, the so-called biomaterials provision. It is almost identical to a bill that I was proud to cosponsor and introduce with our colleague from Arizona, Senator MCCAIN, in 1994. We reintroduced it in 1995. Happily, the Commerce Committee incorporated the bill into the conference report on product liability early last year.

Mr. President, among the attacks that have come up here at the last minute as we come close to finally doing this after 18 years, now, that we have been working at this. I make reference to the Bible. I hope we are not going to have to wander for the 40 years the children of Israel did before they got into the promised land. I am looking at my colleague and dear friend, Senator GORTON, he deserves better than that. Here we are, close to this vote. We look like we have worked out a very sensible bill and now new crossfire comes in after this proposal has been up for years. I want to answer a few charges raised against the biomaterials provision.

In the middle of last week as the final conference report had been under discussion for months, was being completed, we are suddenly confronted with claims that the provision would ''devastate the chances for recovery,'' of claimants in the so-called breast implant cases; that those claimants then presented proposed amendments to fix the allegations that there were problems in the bill. Of course, we have also seen some extraordinarily active lobbying on behalf of those suddenly urgent amendments.

Since so much confusion and concern seem to have been generated as a result, I want to respond. First, the product liability bill and the biomaterials provision is prospective. It does not go into effect until it is enacted.

The bill only applies to civil actions filed after it is adopted. It would have, therefore, no effect on the thousands of breast implant claims already filed, pending—no effect. It would have no effect on claims filed in Dow Chemical's bankruptcy proceeding, past or future. It would have no effect, as Senator ROCKEFELLER pointed out earlier, on the capacity of bankruptcy judges and State judges in product liability cases, including breast implant cases, to toll the statute of limitations, to stop it from going while the bankruptcy proceeding is going on. Finally, to the extent that any claims are filed after this bill becomes law, it would have no effect on the overwhelming majority of those cases, for the following reasons:

First, Dow Corning was the originator and largest single manufacturer of breast implants. The biomaterials title explicitly preserves the liability of manufacturers and sellers of implants like Dow Corning.

In other words, if you are claiming to be a supplier but you are actually a manufacturer or seller, there is no protection under the bill.

Second, the provision has no relevance to litigation in which claimants are seeking to impose liability on Dow Chemical and Corning Corp., the two corporations that own Dow Corning, since neither was a biomaterial supplier under the title II definition of a supplier. To my knowledge, no one has argued that they were biomaterial suppliers.

Third, while Dow Corning invented silicone breast implants and was the single largest manufacturer of them, they also sold silicone gel to other companies that manufactured breast implants. Those companies, generally, are the large pharmaceutical and manufacturing companies. Many claims have been made against them, and the biomaterials provision will have absolutely no effect on those claims.

Now, what if a raw material supplier knew the product might harm the person in whom the medical device was implanted? Will that person be let off? No. Biomaterial suppliers who sell raw materials or components they know are going to hurt somebody will find no protection under the biomaterials provisions of the bill. If the raw material supplier knows its material will cause harm, and fails to disclose it, that supplier cannot be said to be providing the product described in the contract between the manufacturer and the supplier because it departed so substantially from the expectations of the parties. That, too, in the legislation before us, is an exception from the general protection offered to suppliers. They are not protected if, in fact, they are manufacturers, if, in fact, they are suppliers, and if they breach the specifications of the contract with the manufacturers or the description of the product as certified by the FDA. A supplier who provides a product that does not meet contract requirements, or these specifications, is not eligible for protection under the provision.

We have tried to construct a liability scheme where suppliers would have some comfort that they would have the opportunity to prove their innocence early in the litigation. The responsibility of ensuring that a medical device is safe for the purpose intended should rest with the manufacturer responsible for the design, testing and research of that product, not with the supplier who is supplying a component that, of its own, will have no benefit and cannot be used as an implant for the consumer desiring it.

The suppliers have been sued because they are viewed as ''deep pockets.'' The cases against them have almost always been dismissed without a finding of any liability. Raw materials suppliers are typically supplying generic products with a lot of different uses. I will get into what happened in the field that has generated a need for this provision in a moment.

So let me repeat, Mr. President, that this provision will not preclude present or future breast implant claims filed against these companies. They remain available to satisfy judgments.

Plaintiffs will likely argue that Dow Corning, for instance, was so involved in the creation of the product originally to be a manufacturer in all instances, or they violated applicable contractual requirements or specifications by supplying silicone gel that ''did not constitute the product described in the contract'' because it departed so substantially from the expectations of the parties. Those arguments are consistent with title II, and they will be in order if this bill is enacted into law.

Remember what I said earlier, that the major difference here, even in an extreme biomaterials case, is that the arguments by the suppliers to get out of a case because they are innocent will be able to be made earlier in the litigation. Under our current system, these innocent raw material component suppliers who have supplied small amounts of material and have not been involved in design, testing, or manufacture of medical devices, fear the cost of being kept in these lawsuits for years more than they fear the judgments, because they know they are innocent. We have found very little evidence that such raw materials suppliers are ultimately ever found liable in these cases.

So why the provision in the first place? This, again, is why I say this bill is not just an exercise in legal theory; it responds to a very real crisis out there in the real world.

Title II, the biomaterials provision, is a response to what I would call a genuine public health crisis. It is there to end a frightening, artificially caused biomaterials shortage that doctors, patients, the American Cancer Society, the American College of Cardiology, Paralyzed Veterans of America, and other major medical societies, scientific organizations, and patient and consumer groups have all pleaded with Congress to solve.

What is the cause of this artificial shortage of biomaterials, the stuff that you need to make the devices I am going to describe? It is not because we are running out of those materials. It is because the fear of litigation by the suppliers, who make very little money in supplying the raw materials and component parts for these extraordinary devices, far outweighs any benefit they can incur by selling these devices. It is just not worth it to them. But it is worth it to the 8 million people whose lives are either being sustained or made normal by the miraculous array of medical devices that technology makes possible today.

What are we talking about? Pacemakers, hip and knee joints, hydrocephalic shunts for children, balloon angioplasty catheters, defibrillators, vascular grafts, and even, in some cases, sutures used in common surgery. We all know people whose lives are either being sustained or made better by these unbelievable devices. Fifty years ago, who would have guessed that life could be sustained by these devices? The fact is—and we have heard testimony before committees of Congress—that the people who make these devices obviously need raw materials to make them. They need resins, plastics, rubber, and other component parts. And the suppliers either have cut back or have given them a warning they are about to do it by a date certain. The most recent date is January 1, 1997, next January, because they cannot afford the millions of dollars that they have to pay to defend lawsuits for supplying a nickel's worth, a dime's worth, or a quarter's worth of plastic resin or rubber.

The problem is not a genuine shortage. It is an unnatural shortage caused by a system of litigation that has gone wild. The economics of the decision that these raw materials suppliers make are unfortunately understandable because of the small amount of money that they make on these devices. The fact is that since 1994 12 raw material suppliers, including three major chemical companies, have decided to simply stop selling to medical device manufacturers. The medical device manufacturers are scrambling to find substitute products but sometimes they are simply not available.

If you doubt whether this is a crisis just check the congressional testimony. Listen to the father of the young man—boy—who passed out because he had water on the brain. They put in a hydrocephalus shunt that takes the water out of the brain. The child was living a normal life. He actually came and testified before one committee hearing which I had. He is a wonderful looking young man, and very active. Periodically they have to replace that shunt. And, if there is not the raw materials to do that, this young boy faces a tragedy, and his family with him.

It is worth noting that the administration in the statement of policy issued by the President over the weekend opposing the product liability bill singled out the biomaterials provision for praise and acknowledged the importance of ensuring that ''biomaterials suppliers will continue to provide sufficient quantities of their products to medical device manufacturers.''

Contrary to what some of our colleagues I am afraid may have heard in the last week or so from those opposed to this bill, this provision is not a trick nor a ruse to protect bad suppliers from legitimate claims. This is an effort to respond to a genuine public health crisis, one that is well documented, and, as I say, acknowledged by the administration in its praise, in its statement of policy.

The biomaterials provision does nothing to reduce the liability of manufacturers, or other responsible parties but consistent with the fundamental and fair premise of this legislation—this conference report—it places responsibility where it ought to be—on those who do wrong, and protects from unnecessary harassment and enormous cost those who have done no wrong.

Mr. President, this bill actually in that sense so fundamentally relates to the broader questions of values in our society and the fear that people often have that our legal system has gone astray, that those who do wrong are not punished and too often those who have done no wrong suffer. We most often hear that cry about the criminal justice system. But it has unfortunately become true in our civil justice system as well. The guilty parties do not pay enough. The innocent parties pay too much. And all of us end up paying, and the price we pay for consumer goods and lost jobs are paying for this irrational a system.

Mr. President, that is what this bill is all about. There are those who oppose the bill who describe it in ''either/or'' terms. Either you are probusiness or proconsumer. You are either proinnovation or prosafety. That rhetoric misses the point—preventing us from dealing with the central issue. The fact is that this bill is probusiness and proconsumer. It is proinnovation and prosafety. It is aimed at putting liability back where it should be—on the parties who are actually responsible for any harm and so are best able to prevent injury.

It is aimed at protecting the defendants from being frightened by lawyers and lawsuits into paying legal fees and settlement costs when they are in fact not responsible for any harm.

All of that contributes to the cynicism and mistrust of our legal system which is so fundamentally corrosive to the way we live in our country, and so costly to our society.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a list of raw material suppliers and their action withdrawing various products from the market be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I did not always support a national approach to product liability reform and I can well understand the hesitancy, particularly of newer Members, to support Federal involvement in what traditionally has been the province of state law. In fact, as attorney general of Connecticut and a member of the National Association of Attorneys General, I voted for resolutions opposing earlier Federal product liability legislation that would have swept away virtually all State product liability laws and repealed the doctrine of strict liability for product defects.

But as I traveled around the State of Connecticut, this problem—product liability litigation—kept coming up in my discussions with small business men and women, with small and large manufacturing companies, and with plant managers. They told me of problems they had experienced with the product liability system, of the expense of defending yourself even when you win, of the cost of settlements to avoid paying litigation costs, and of the time and energy that product liability suits diverted away from the business of designing new products and bringing them to market.

At a time when we need to be rebuilding our country's manufacturing base, to be promoting innovation in our manufacturing sector, to be designing, building, and bringing to market the next generation of high-quality, high-value added products the world will need, our liability system chills innovation.

The debate should really center around consumers, because it is consumers who suffer because of this system, not simply businesses. Consumers are the ones who have to pay higher prices in order to cover product-liability-related costs. If a ladder costs 20 percent more because of liability-related costs, consumers—not businesses—end up paying that 20 percent premium.

The best interests of consumers as a whole are not always identical to the interests of people who are seeking compensation. The people who suffer or die because a new drug or medical device was never developed, or was delayed in its development, are hurt as surely as those who suffer because a device malfunctioned or a drug was improperly designed. These silent victims of our product liability system's chilling effect on innovation are consumers whose interests also deserve protection.

Of course, even for its intended beneficiaries, people who are injured by defective products, the legal system hardly can be said to work well. GAO, in its 5-State survey, found that product liability cases took an average of 2½ years just to reach trial. If the case was appealed, it took, on average, another year to resolve. This is a very long time for an injured person to wait for compensation.

In some instances, too, our product liability laws have erected barriers to suit that just do not make sense. For example, in some States, the statute of limitations—the time within which a lawsuit can be brought—begins to run even though the injured person did not know they were injured and could not have known that the product was the cause. In those States, the time in which to bring a suit can expire before the claimant knows or could ever know there is a suit to bring.

Mr. President, no one will argue that this bill will cure all the ills in our product liability system. That would require a gargantuan overhaul and we are not likely to reach reach agreement in the near future as to what that would look like.

I make no secret of the fact that I would have preferred a broader bill. Product liability cases are only a part of the problems in our civil justice system. I have very real concerns that when we fix some of the problems there, some lawyers will just target nonmanufacturing clients, like financial service providers, municipalities, nonprofit organizations. I would have preferred a bill that covered much more, but clearly that was not to be.

By working incrementally to eliminate the worst aspects of our current system with respect to product liability, perhaps we can begin to create a record that will allow us to restore some balance to our tort system overall. The enactment of the Federal General Aviation Revitalization Act of 1994 has demonstrated that reform does not mean that injured people will go uncompensated and bad actors unpunished, but that reform means more jobs and safer aircraft. I hope we will have the same chance to build the same foundation for more reform with this modest, balanced product liability bill.

For people injured by defective products, this bill makes a set of very important and beneficial changes. First, it enacts uniform, nationwide statute of limitations of 2 years from the date the claimant knew or should have discovered both the fact he or she was injured and the cause of the injury. Injured people will no longer lose the right to sue before they knew both that they were hurt and that a specific product caused their injury.

Second, this bill will force defendants to enter alternative dispute resolution processes which can resolve a case in months rather than years. If the defendant unreasonably refuses to enter into ADR, it can be liable for all of claimant's costs and attorney's fees. On the other hand, if a plaintiff unreasonably refuses to enter ADR, they will suffer no penalty.

For workers who face possible injury in the workplace, this bill will reform the product liability system to give employers a stronger incentive to provide a safe workplace. Under current law, an employer is often permitted to recoup the entire amount of workers compensation benefits paid to an employee who was injured by a defective machine, even if the employer contributed significantly to the injury by, for example, running the machine at excessive speeds or removing safety equipment. This essentially means that an employer can end up paying nothing despite the fact that their misconduct was a significant cause of the injury.

This bill would change this. When an employer is found, by clear and convincing evidence, to be partly responsible for an injury, the employer loses recoupment in proportion to its contribution to the injury. This does not change the amount of money going to the injured person, but it makes the employer responsible for its conduct.

Manufacturers of durable goods—goods with life expectancy over 3 years that are used in the workplace—will also be assured that they cannot be sued more than 20 years after they deliver a product. This will bring an end to suits such as the one in which Otis Elevator was sued over a 75-year-old elevator that had been modified and maintained by a number of different owners and repair persons through the decades. By the way, this same provision will not apply to household goods such as refrigerators, and is only intended to cover those workplace injuries that are already covered by workers compensation.

Manufacturers will also have some protection against deep pocket liability. While the bill still permits States to hold all defendants jointly liable for economic damages such as lost wages, foregone future earnings, past and future medical bills, and cost of replacement services, noneconomic damages such as pain and suffering will be apportioned among codefendants on the basis of each defendant's contribution to the harm.

For wholesalers and retailers, they will, in the majority of cases, be relieved of the threat that they can be held liable for the actions of others. Under current law, for example, the owner of the corner hardware store could be sued for injuries resulting from a power saw just as if she was the manufacturer of a power saw, even if she had no input in the design or assembly of the power saw and had done nothing other than to inspect a sample to make sure there were no obvious flaws and to put the items on the shelf.

For our American economy and industrial base, passage of this product liability reform legislation will move us back to promoting innovation and the development and commercialization of new products. Passing this bill will create and save jobs here, not overseas.

Mr. President, let me reiterate that I believe this bill can be a win-win situation. It provides real balance. It balances the scales of justice to ensure that the victims of defective products will continue to be compensated while consumers receive the best products available. It is incremental reform. Frankly, it is a lot less than I had hoped for and that I voted for. But I think it is incremental because it is hoped that is the way to begin the road to genuine legal reform in our country.

In this debate today, we hear a lot of charges, countercharges, and attacks coming from every which direction as we come close to the vote. One thing should not be lost. This bill does not absolve a company that has not made a safe product. If a company has made a defective product, it will and must be held fully accountable, period. But when a company does follow the rules and makes a safe product, it should not have to settle frivolous claims simply to avoid the expense of litigation and protect against the risk that a huge and irrational judgment will be awarded against it.

Mr. President, once again I thank my colleagues, Senators GORTON and ROCKEFELLER, who have really been extraordinarily able and honorable in this task.

I honestly believe that what is on the line here today in this vote is not just the fate of this product liability bill, but it is a broader question of whether this Congress is able to function on a bipartisan basis and get something done to respond to a real problem as we have described out in society.

The critics who say—I hear this all the time when I go home—''Why are you folks all so political? Why don't you get together and get something done, and respond to some real problems? Why don't you compromise?'' A compromise is not just to reward the people who send us here to serve them. Compromise is getting something done.

Senators GORTON and ROCKEFELLER—Republican and Democrat working hard for years now but particularly the last year and 3 months—bipartisan, and willing to accept compromise, get the bill past the hurdle of breaking a filibuster here in the Senate with over 60 votes, get it passed, take it to the conference committee, again compromise, get something done to start us down the road to a response, to a real problem, and now we are faced with these last-minute attacks and a threat of a veto by the President.

I think what is on the line here is whether, with all the procedural intricacies at work, we can produce. I hope that the answer is yes. I hope that we will vote this afternoon to break the filibuster, that we will then tomorrow pass this bill and that President Clinton will then reconsider his decision to veto it.

This is a moment of opportunity. It is a moment of test for this institution, and it may not come again in this way for quite a long time.

I thank the Chair.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I am sure the distinguished Senator from Connecticut would also include me in his thanks but, of course, not being in the conference and not making any contribution I am not due any thanks at all. We just could not participate.

I was rather interested to hear for the first time that the House gave in on all of these things because we never conferred on any House giving into anything.

Just highlighting, of course, the nature of this endeavor, the fact is this Senator spoke and shepherded over a 3-year period a communications bill that passed this Senate on a bipartisan vote of 91 Senators. So I know how to work in a bipartisan fashion. But this thing is a hijacking, if I have ever participated in one.

I yield 10 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, I thank the Chair. I thank very much the senior ranking member of the committee for yielding, and for the work he has put in over the years on this issue.

Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the legislation for a number of reasons but principally because it is bad policy. It is bad public policy. And, second, it is not necessary. It is not needed. There are some who have argued that there is a rash of product liability suits and everybody who makes a product in America is just about on the verge of not making products anymore because they fear they may get sued if they make bad products that injure people, whether they do it with gross negligence, or it is just the egregious nature of what they are doing; but they may get sued and put people out of business.

The facts are just the opposite, and that is one of the issues I wish to focus on, plus the punitive damages question.

First of all, is there so much litigation out there that companies are not producing products? No. The legislation is trying to fix a problem that does not exist. Product liability cases account for only 4 percent of all of the injury cases that are filed in this country—4 percent. Only 4 percent of the cases dealt with defective products. There is not an explosion of product liability cases.

Then if you look at the statistics, out of 762,000 civil cases resolved in the Nation's 75 most populous counties in the whole country in 1991 and 1992, only 360 cases out of 762,000 cases dealt with defective products. Is there an explosion of litigation from products? I think the facts are just the opposite.

Something else. In all of those 360 product cases, do you know how many had punitive damages awarded? Three. Three. And yet the principal focus of this legislation that is before the Senate is that we have to pass this legislation because the country is in chaos because of product liability suits, when the truth is that only 4 percent of all of the civil cases filed are product liability cases.

The second point I wish to focus on is this part of the bill that says Washington knows best. Our Republican colleagues want to block grant just about everything in Washington to the States and let them decide—Medicaid, welfare, you name it. ''Give it to the States; Washington does not know what it is talking about'' is the statement that I hear from my colleagues on this side of the aisle except when it comes to this legislation, it is just the opposite. Their position on this legislation is that the States do not know anything, that the States are messing it up so bad that we are going to have Washington decide what is the appropriate remedy for people in the various States who are injured by defective products back in their States. Welfare, we are going to do it in the States; Medicaid, we are going to do it in the States, but when it comes to product liability we are going to do it here in Washington.

This legislation says that no matter how egregious the actions of a person or a company that makes a product, the cap on damages, punitive damages is $250,000. My friend from Connecticut said that is really a lot. Let me give you an example of the problem. The $250,000 figure is out of the air. It is something that they just picked up. It has no basis in fact. This legislation says that if a person is going to be entitled to punitive damages against a company for the most egregious type of behavior that we have ever heard of, the cap is going to be $250,000 or two times the economic damages.

The courts have said that unlike damages which are awarded to compensate an individual for his injuries, punitive damages are unique because they are based on an entirely different public policy consideration, that of punishing the wrongdoer to change that wrongdoer's behavior, and, second, to set an example to others that you should not do that type of behavior. Punitive damages are generally awarded for egregious, morally repugnant conduct, conduct that is so offensive to the average American that we say that person who has done this should not do it again. We have to make an example of this type of morally repugnant behavior so that others who may think about doing it will not do it again.

That is what punitive damages is all about. And that is on what this bill arbitrarily sets a cap of $250,000. Let me tell you what is wrong with that, why it is not based on anything.

Say you have a person, I call him Joe Six-Pack in this case, and Joe Six-Pack is just as mean and ornery a fellow as you ever want to meet. And one day Joe Six-Pack is walking down the street in his hometown and a guy is coming in the opposite direction, and when he gets next to Joe, Joe just hauls off and knocks the ever-living everything out of the guy because he did not like the way he looked. He smashes his fist into the guy's face, and he breaks his cranial bones, permanently disfigures him and sends him to the hospital. They have to do surgery to reconstruct this individual's face.

The individual, after he finally recovers, says, ''I am going to sue Joe. I want him to pay for my suffering, my hospital bills.'' And the court says he is right; that was repugnant, morally offensive behavior. We are also going to assess punitive damages because we do not want this to happen again. So how much is the right amount? OK, they take a look at what Joe Six-Pack is worth. Say Joe Six-Pack is worth $10,000. That is the savings, the money he has. If the court says we are going to fine him maybe half a percent of his assets, that is a $50 fine.

Does anybody think a $50 fine is going to change Joe Six-Pack's behavior? Is that enough to tell Joe that he should not do that again? Probably not. The court could say, ''Well, let's fine Joe 1 percent of his assets.'' Is that enough to change Joe's behavior and set an example for others they should not do it? That is a $100 fine. I doubt whether that really will affect Joe's behavior. He may do it again just because he is an ornery fellow or he does not care.

The court may say, ''Well, maybe punitive damages are 5 percent. Let's fine him $500.'' Is that enough to change Joe's behavior? Probably getting close. Probably he will think a second time before he walks up to the next person and smashes him in the face if he knows the court said, ''Joe, that's morally repugnant behavior. You are fined $500.'' Joe is going to say, ''I don't think I am going to do that again.''

So let us take another example. How about a Corp. Let us call it XYZ Corp. It is a small Corp., with only $50 million of assets. And I say small because of the Fortune 500, the number 500 company on the Fortune 500 list has assets of $4 billion. So XYZ Corp. with $50 million of assets is pretty small.

Let us assume XYZ Corp. starts making a product. Let us say they make pajamas for children, and when they make those pajamas for children their engineers say, ''Mr. CEO, we just found out that these pajamas that you make for children are flammable; these pajamas catch on fire very easily, and we are making them for children. We could fix that by adding this retardant chemical to it so it will not catch on fire.'' The president and the board says, ''Forget it; we have this whole warehouse full of them. We are going to sell them. We don't care; we'll take our chances.''

XYZ Corp. starts selling their pajamas all over the United States, and, lo and behold, the inevitable happens; a child catches on fire walking in front of the fireplace, is horribly burned and disfigured for life. The engineers come back to the chairman and the board and say, ''Look, we told you that was going to happen. This is our study. We saw it. It's flammable. Let's change it.''

The president and the board say, ''No way. We still have half a warehouse full of pajamas. We are going to sell the rest of them. We don't care. We don't think it's going to happen again. We don't care what your studies say. Forget them. File them away.''

Sure enough, a second child who is wearing the same pajamas catches on fire in front of a fireplace, is horribly disfigured and burned, with economic damages, pain and suffering, disfigured for the rest of that person's life, and they file suit against XYZ Corp. The court says, ''Your behavior is morally repugnant to this country. Your behavior is indefensible. Your behavior needs to be punished. How much should we punish XYZ Corp.?''

Well, if we said half a percent was not enough to affect Joe Six-Pack because it would only be $50 of his assets, a half a percent of XYZ Corp. would be $250,000. That is the cap in this bill. That is the cap in this bill. And if we said that that was not enough to affect Joe Six-Pack's behavior, a $50 fine, why should the same percentage be enough to change XYZ Corp.'s position in manufacturing defective products that they know are defective?

We said that a 1-percent fine of $100 was not enough to affect old Joe. Joe was still going to do whatever Joe was wanting to do, smashing people in the face. It was not enough to change his behavior. How about a 1-percent fine for the XYZ Corp.? That is $500,000. We said it would not have an effect, but it is also twice the cap in this bill. We cannot even do that under this legislation.

So we say 5 percent was probably getting pretty close to affect Joe's behavior. That is what, $500. That probably changes his mind about his social behavior and society. How about XYZ Corp.? A 5-percent fine is $2.5 million. But forget it when this legislation is passed, because somebody in Washington has decided that $250,000 is the magical number.

Let me show you something. The No. 500 corporation on the Fortune 500 list in this country has assets of $4 billion. If this cap is in place and they make a defective product and they are fined the maximum of $250,000, do you know what percentage of their assets that turns out to be? That is .00625 percent. Does anybody think that a maximum fine that is .00625 percent of that corporation's assets is going to have any effect on their social behavior? I bet they do not even consider it. It is a dot on their asset sheet.

So, if we get back to the point that punitive damages is to tell a reckless defendant, who has had a jury say that this is morally repugnant behavior, if we tell them that from here on out, Congress in Washington, in our wisdom, has decided that the maximum fine is $250,000 and it has no relationship to the ability of a defendant to pay, we are making a serious public policy mistake. We should, I think, be ashamed of this legislation with this type of cap. I am. The States, I think, are doing a good job. It is not a problem. In addition to not being a problem, this arbitrary proposal makes no sense.

You wonder why a lot of the very big businesses think it is a great idea? It is because a cap of that small amount is such a small percentage of their assets, they can continue to make those pajamas. They can continue to say, ''We are not going to listen to our engineers who have told us it is flammable. We are not going to listen to our engineers who told us that children can catch on fire wearing this product and the only thing we have to do to fix it is to add a fire retardant ingredient. Do you know what? We are not going to do it because we still have that warehouse full of pajamas and we are going to keep selling them.''

How many young kids would be in danger? That is just one example. There are literally hundreds of them.

Mr. President, I will conclude simply by saying this legislation is not necessary, it is not needed, there is not a problem. In addition to that, it is a bad public policy statement.

I yield the remainder of my time.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, this is a historic day. For more than a decade we have tried to pass product liability reform. In every Congress, until this Congress, the opponents of reform have mounted successful filibusters. But this year we broke through the filibuster, and the Senate passed a modest bill. Now, the conference report is before us, and we must again break a filibuster.

The American people are frustrated with the legal system. Cases take too long to resolve and too many injured don't get fairly compensated, while a few win the lawsuit lottery.

Litigation drains billions from our economy, adding a tort tax to goods and services. For example, the average price of an 8-foot ladder is $119.33, but the actual cost is less than $95.00, with the litigation tax responsible for a 25-percent increase in the cost. Lawsuits drive the price of a heart pacemaker up 20 percent, from $15,000 to $18,000.

If we don't fix the problems of our legal system, consumers will have fewer choices and American companies will have a smaller share of the global market.

This bill is a significant, although imperfect, step in the right direction. But before I mention what the bill does, let me explain what the bill doesn't do. The opponents have scared many into believing that this bill cuts off the right to sue for injuries. But it doesn't. Those who are injured by defective products will be able to sue and recover all of their losses—their lost wages, all medical bills, any costs for home assistance, and even so-called pain and suffering damages.

This bill does not close the courthouse door to any injured party. So, there will be no horror stories as predicted by the opponents, of those injured by cars, household appliances, or workplace machinery shut out of the legal system. It's simply not true.

The bill does contain a modest limitation on punitive damages, which are supposed to punish the responsible party, not be a windfall for the injured party. Punitive damages are limited to the greater of $250,000 or two times compensatory damages. But this bill contains no limitation on economic damages or pain and suffering damages.

The bill also provides some limited protection to those who have nothing to do with the defect in the product, but who sometimes get stuck with the tab in a lawsuit. An injured will be able to recover from those who are responsible for the defects in the products—the manufacturers, and not the sellers who simply put the merchandise on a shelf or in a showroom. And, if the injured party can't find the manufacturer, or if the manufacturer can't be sued, or if a damage award can't be collected from a manufacturer, then a product seller will be responsible. So, injured parties will always be fully compensated for their injuries. The opponents of this bill are only scaring and deceiving consumers when they claim this bill will cutoff the ability of injured persons to recover.

And, this bill make a necessary change in the assessment of pain and suffering damages against multiple defendants. Each defendant will only be responsible for its proportionate share of noneconomic losses. This will, hopefully, discourage suing someone who is only remotely connected to the defective product on the basis of that defendant's deep pockets.

Mr. President, the time for this bill is long overdue. The problems of our legal system—long delays, inefficiency and unpredictability in getting compensation to those injured—are only getting worse. And that means more burdens on productivity and invention in our economy.

I regret that the President has announced his intention to veto this bill, based upon false assumptions about the bill. As I've already said, the bill won't prevent injured from recovering; it won't limit the recovery of damages that compensate victims for their injuries. The President's assertions to the contrary just simply aren't true.

Survey after survey and poll after polls show that the American people are frustrated by our legal system and particularly dissatisfied with the legal profession. Those lawyers who misstate the facts about this bill in an effort to scare the public do their profession a disservice. Not only does this bill protect the injured party's right to compensation, but it would also restore some public confidence in lawyers and the legal system. It is unfortunate there's a failure to understand this fact at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue.

I urge my colleague to vote for this conference report. Let the American people know that this Congress wants to improve the legal system and protect the injured consumers.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Michigan.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I oppose this conference report for a number of reasons. One of the principal ones is the fact that it does not provide uniformity when it comes to product liability.

The statement of the managers says that one of its purposes—this is on page 3—''* * * is to establish certain uniform legal principles of product liability.'' Its sponsors on the floor have said the same thing, that it is aimed at providing uniformity when it comes to rules governing product liability. But, unfortunately, this bill fails to live up to its own statement of purposes. Indeed, it violates its own statement of purposes because there is no uniformity that is provided in this bill. There is no fair balance among the interests of product users, manufacturers, and product sellers.

This bill has what perhaps could be called a one-way preemption approach. Under this approach, States are allowed to adopt laws that differ from the so-called uniform standards, providing that States are more restrictive on the rights of injured parties. But, if States seek to be less restrictive on the rights of injured parties, they are then prevented from doing so. This is not uniformity. This is not a bill which says that we are going to have a 15-year statute of repose, that is it, that is what injured plaintiffs have, that is what defendants can count on. That would be a uniform standard. This bill does something very, very different from that.

This bill says that if a State wants to be more restrictive than the provisions of this bill, more restrictive in terms of the ability of plaintiffs who are injured persons to recover, that they are allowed to do so. It is only if a State decides they want to be less restrictive on the rights of injured parties that they are prevented from doing so, that they are preempted from doing so. That is not uniformity. That is a one-way street. That is preemption of the rights of injured parties.

I want to go through some of the language in these titles to make this point clearer, to make the point that we are not going to have one law that governs all the States. We are not going to eliminate the patchwork of product liability laws. We are still going to have a patchwork. We are still going to have States that are more restrictive than the particular ceiling which is set forth in this statute. There is not going to be a uniform rule which is fair. There is going to be a so-called rule, which is applied if this passes, but not really. States are allowed to be more restrictive if they choose to do so.

Let us take a look at section 106 of this conference report. Section 106 provides that:

> Subject to paragraphs (2) and (3), no product liability action that is subject to this Act concerning a product, that is a durable good, alleged to have caused harm (other than toxic harm) may be filed after the 15-year period beginning at the time of delivery of the product to the first purchaser. . . .

That sounds pretty uniform. It says, ''Subject to paragraphs (2) and (3), no product liability action * * * may be filed after a 15-year period.'' That is the statute of repose. As a matter of fact, the heading of that section, 106, says ''Uniform Time Limitations on Liability.'' The word ''uniform'' is right in the heading.

Then you read paragraphs (2) and (3). Paragraph (2) says,

> Notwithstanding paragraph (1), if pursuant to an applicable State law, an action described in such paragraph is required to be filed during a period that is shorter than the 15-year period specified in such paragraph, the State law shall apply. . . .

How do the sponsors use the word ''uniform'' in the title, when in fact they permit diversity, providing it is downward, providing it is more restrictive on the rights of injured parties?

That is allowed. The title ''uniform'' is used, although a patchwork of laws is permitted, providing they are more restrictive than the 15-year limit which is provided for in section 106. How is that for a misleading label? Uniform? There is nothing uniform about it.

My dear friend from West Virginia said this morning that when products cross State lines, it makes no sense for product liability rules to be different from State to State. Well, if it makes no sense for product liability rules to be different from State to State, how does it then make sense to allow States to be more restrictive than the 15-year statute of repose?

They cannot be less restrictive. They cannot give more rights to injured parties, only less. But to use the words of my dear friend from West Virginia, if it makes absolutely no sense for liability rules to be different from State to State, why then are States allowed to move in one direction, to be more restrictive under section 106 and section 108 and a whole host of other sections, but they cannot be less restrictive to persons who are injured?

That is not uniformity. That is uniform unfairness. That is a consistent unfairness. That is a one-way street. That is a one-way preemption.

Let us take a look at some other provisions of the law. Section 108 of the conference report contains a provision entitled, again, ''Uniform Standards for Award of Punitive Damages.''

Uniform standards. It is not a uniform standard in section 108. When you read it, it says, and this relates to punitive damages:

Punitive damages may, to the extent permitted by applicable State law—

And then it goes on to say what those punitive damages can be. But State law governs if it is more restrictive. What happens if State law is less restrictive? What happens if State law is more generous to injured parties? What happens if State law is tougher on defendants in terms of punitive damages? That is not allowed. That is preempted. But if a State law is more restrictive, that is, again, allowed.

That is not uniformity, and if it makes sense for product liability rules to be uniform from State to State or, to use the words of the Senator from West Virginia, if it makes no sense for product liability rules to be different from State to State, then it surely makes no sense to allow States to vary from the rule downward to be more restrictive on the rights of injured parties. All they are prevented from doing is to be less restrictive in terms of the rights of plaintiffs and injured parties.

Another section, section 110. Section 110 of the bill contains a provision that limits joint and several liability in product liability suits. The statement of managers explains that this provision is intended to preempt State laws that are more favorable to plaintiffs, but not to preempt State laws that are more favorable to defendants. Here is what the statement of managers says. It says that the House-passed version specified that the section, and here we are talking about the section on joint and several liability, the section—

. . . does not preempt or supersede any State or Federal law to the extent that such law would further limit the application of the theory of joint liability to any kind of damages.

So this section on joint and several liability, according to the House version, is not intended to limit or preempt or supersede any State or Federal law if that law further limits—further limits—the application of joint and several. That is OK. That is OK in the House version, and then we are told by the statement of managers——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. LEVIN. If I could have 30 more seconds.

We are told by the statement of managers that the language that I just quoted reflects the conference agreement's intent. It is not just the House provision, it is the conference agreement's intent.

So, Mr. President, what we have here is not uniformity. We have a one-way preemption in this bill that allows the State in section after section after section to be more restrictive of the rights of injured parties. All that they are preempted and prevented from doing at the State level is being less restrictive on the rights of injured parties.

That is not fair. That is not uniform. It is one of the reasons I will vote against this conference report, because even though you can make out an argument for uniformity, I think there is a good intellectual argument that can be made for uniformity, if it is true uniformity, if it applies both ways, to both plaintiffs and defendants, if it is not just a one-way street that allows States to be more restrictive but not less restrictive. That is intellectually defensible.

Whether you agree with it or not, at least it is consistent, at least there is a coherent logic to it. But to provide, as this bill does, that State laws which are more restrictive are preempted but not the ones less restrictive, it is unfair, unbalanced, and it is one of the reasons I will vote against this bill.

Let us look at one example of how this one-way preemption provision would work. The bill would override State laws that provide joint and several liability for noneconomic damages. Joint and several liability is the doctrine under which any one defendant who contributed to the injury may be held responsible for 100 percent of the damages in a case, even if other wrongdoers also contributed to the injury.

The sponsors of this bill, and this amendment, have pointed out that there are problems with joint and several liability. In some cases, a defendant who has only a marginal role in causing the damage ends up holding the bag for all of the damages. That doesn't seem fair.

On the other hand, there are good reasons for the doctrine of joint and several liability. Case and effect often cannot be assigned on a percentage basis with accuracy. There may be many causes of an event, the absence of any one of which would have prevented the event from occurring. Because the injury would not have occurred without each of these so-called but-for causes, each is, in a very real sense, 100 percent responsible for the resulting injury.

This bill, however, does not recognize that in the real world, multiple wrongdoers may each be a cause of the same injury. It insists that responsibility be portioned out, with damages divided up into pieces, and the liability of each defendant limited to a single piece. Under this approach, the more causes the event can be attributed to, the less each defendant will have to pay.

Unless the person who has been injured can successfully sue all parties who contributed to the injury, he or she will not be compensated for his entire loss. The real world result is that most plaintiffs will not be made whole, even if they manage to overcome the burdens of our legal system and prevail in court. Isn't it more fair to say that the wrongdoers, each of whom caused the injury, should bear the risk that one of them might not be able to pay its share than it is for the injured party to bear that risk and remain uncompensated for the harm?

The bill before us completely ignores the complexity of this issue with its one-way approach to Federal preemption. States which are more favorable to defendants are allowed to retain their laws. But State laws that try to reach a balanced approach between plaintiffs and defendants would be preempted.

Roughly half the States choose to protect the injured party through the doctrine of joint and several liability. Another half dozen States have adopted creative approaches to joint and several liability, seeking to balance the rights of plaintiffs and defendants.

Let me give you a few examples.

Louisiana law provides joint and several liability only to the extent necessary for the plaintiff to recover 50 percent of damages; there is no joint and several liability at all in cases where the plaintiff's contributory fault was greater than the defendant's fault.

Mississippi law provides joint and several liability only to the extent necessary for the plaintiff to recover 50 percent of damages, and for any defendant who actively took part in the wrongdoing.

New Jersey law provides joint and several liability in the case of defendants who are 60 percent or more responsible for the harm; joint and several liability for economic loss only in the case of defendants who are 20 to 60 percent responsible; and no joint and several liability at all for defendants who are less than 20 percent responsible.

New York law provides joint and several liability for defendants who are more than 50 percent responsible for the harm; joint and several liability is limited to economic loss in the case of defendants who are less than 50 percent responsible.

South Dakota law provides that a defendant that is less than 50 percent responsible for the harm caused to the claimant may not be liable for more than twice the percentage of fault assigned to it.

Texas law provides joint and several liability only for defendants who are more than 20 percent responsible for the harm caused to the claimant.

All of these State laws are efforts to address a complex problem in a balanced manner, with full recognition of factors unique to the State. To the extent that they are more favorable to the injured party than the approach adopted in this bill, however, they would all be preempted.

On the other hand, other States, which take a more restrictive view of joint and several liability, or even prohibit it altogether, would be allowed to retain their individual State approaches. That just does not make sense.

Mr. President, there is a list of problems in our legal system that we could all go through. Going to court takes too much time and it costs too much money. Some plaintiffs get more than they deserve, while others who suffer injuries may spend years in court but recover nothing at all. As Senator GORTON, one of the lead authors of the bill before us, explained during last year's debate on the Senate bill:

[T]he victims of this system are very often the claimants, the plaintiffs themselves, who suffer by the actual negligence of a product manufacturer, and frequently are unable to afford to undertake the high cost of legal fees over an extended period of time. Frequently, they are forced into settlements that are inadequate because they lack resources to pay for their immediate needs, their medical and rehabilitation expenses, their actual out-of-pocket costs.

I agree with Senator GORTON that there is unfairness in our current legal system. There is unfairness to defendants in some cases, and there is unfairness to plaintiffs in other cases. However, the conference report before us does not even attempt to address the problems faced by plaintiffs. There is absolutely nothing in this bill to assist those who have been hurt by defective products and face the difficult burdens of trying to recover damages through out legal system.

On the contrary, the bill makes every effort to override State laws which attempt to help the victims of defective products. Only laws that make it harder for the injured party to obtain compensation are permitted. That is not uniform, it is not fair, and I cannot support it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. GORTON. I yield such time that the Senator from North Dakota may desire.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I appreciate the Senator yielding time. I would like to ask a series of questions about the bill and about one section of the bill specifically.

I voted for this bill and move the bill to conference. I am inclined to vote for cloture today. But I have reviewed what came out of conference, and one area gives me some concern. I want to go through it with the Senators on the floor, especially Senator GORTON.

There is on page 6 of the bill that the Senate passed an exclusion for the term ''product.'' The bill included on the bottom of page 6 under (ii), the exclusion reading: ''electricity, water delivered by a utility, natural gas or steam.''

We were clearly deciding that these utilities were not covered as products in this bill.

The bill came back from conference with that provision. However, a new clause was added. The same words existed— ''electricity, water delivered by utility, natural gas or steam.'' This is in the part of the bill which is defining what is excluded from the bill. That is what the Senate passed.

But the conference report comes back with the same words but goes on to say: ''except * * *'' In other words, we are excluding utilities ''except to the extent electricity, water delivered by a utility, natural gas or steam are subject, under applicable State law, to a standard of liability other than negligence.''

Forty-four States have such standards; 18 of them have been litigated on the subject of electric utilities. It appears to me that what the conference has done in this section is added utilities as being covered by this bill. I have asked questions of half a dozen experts in the last 24 to 48 hours, and the answers I get are not satisfying. The answers I get are, ''Well, that's what the words say, but that's not what it means.'' I am assuming courts will say this means what it says, not what someone says it means. So I want to go through a couple of questions.

I ask the Senator from the State of Washington, how is the provision that went into conference different from the provision that came out? When it went in, it said ''electricity, water delivered by a utility, natural gas and steam'' are excluded. Period. They are not part of this bill. When it came out, it seems to say they are now a part of this bill, which is a major change.

Mr. President, I ask that we might have an interchange. I ask the Senator from Washington if he can respond to that for me.

Mr. GORTON. I can. I would start by referring the Senator from North Dakota back to page 6 of the original bill, the bill that passed the Commerce Committee, on which both of us serve, and passed this body, the Senate, unchanged and to look at the entire subsection (B), entitled ''EXCLUSION.'' The Senator from North Dakota will see in that exclusion.

The term ''product'' does not include,

(i) tissue, organs, blood, and blood products used for therapeutic or medical purposes, except to the extent that such tissue, organs, blood and blood products (or the provision thereof) are subject, under applicable State law, to a standard of liability other than negligence.

It goes on to say,

[And] (ii) electricity, water delivered by a utility, natural gas, or steam . . .

The next reference that I would make to the Senator from North Dakota is in the Senate committee report on that bill. On page 24 of the Senate committee report on the bill that passed the Senate here, in subsection (ii), the explanation under the term ''product'' there is, for all practical purposes, word for word this exclusionary language, particularly the last two sentences.

The term does not include tissue, organs, blood and blood products used for therapeutic or medical purposes, except to the extent that such tissue, organs, blood and blood products, or the provision thereof, are subject under applicable State law to a standard of liability other than negligence.

In other words, the same word is in the statute.

The term also does not include electricity, water delivered by a utility, natural gas or steam.

There is a footnoted comment. And the footnote reads:

Claims for harm caused by tissue, organs, blood and blood products used for therapeutic and medical purposes are, in the view of most courts, claims for negligently performed services and are not subject to strict product liability. The act, thus, respects State law by providing that in those States, the law with respect to harms caused by these substances will not be changed. In the past, however, a few States have held that claims for these substances are subject to a standard of liability other than negligence, and this act does not prevent them from doing so. Such actions would be governed by the act. Actions involving claims for harms caused by electricity, water delivered by a utility, natural gas or steam are treated in the same manner.

When this went to conference—we had the better part of a year to read through every detail—the proposition, the meaning of this bill, as it passed the Senate, showed up in the proposition that this exception appeared in subsection (i) on page 6. It did not appear in subsection (ii). The same words have now been added to subsection (ii), which simply accords with the committee report interpretation of the language that we passed here in the Senate.

So the fundamental answer at this point to the question that is raised by the Senator from North Dakota is that this change does not change the meaning of the act as it was set out in the committee report to the original Senate bill. State law, in other words, in each of these cases, whether it is tissue or electricity, State law will govern.

If a State passes a law that says electricity is a product, yes, it would be governed. If that State consciously decides to treat electricity as a product, then it would be a product under this bill. But these strict liability States, you know, do not do that. It leaves it entirely up to North Dakota or California or to Washington or West Virginia to make that determination. If it wishes for strict liability, it can impose strict liability. If it wants to call it a product—I do not know of any that do—but if it wants to call it a product, it can bring it up to this bill. That is up to the State.

Mr. DORGAN. You are arguing one of two things. Either you are making the case that utilities are defined as a product under the bill, as originally passed by the Senate, because of a footnote on page 24 of the committee report. In other words, you are saying that utilities would not be excluded from the definition of the term product but, in fact, are covered by this bill. Therefore, what came back from the conference is not a change. That might be what you are arguing. I do not think that is the understanding of most Members of the Senate.

I think, having read what left the Senate on its face—it says on page 6, ''EXCLUSION,'' that is, an exclusion not to be treated as a product includes:

(ii) electricity, water delivered by a utility, natural gas, or steam.

You might be arguing, I think, that although we might have read that as an exclusion, it never really was. Utilities were really going to come under this. We just did not understand the application of the footnote on page 24, or you are making the case now that what has been done in conference has no impact at all on what the language really means. What you are saying then is that utilities are truly excluded, and what you have done comports with the description under ''tissues, organs and blood,'' and your intention is to make sure that utilities are not defined as a product but, in fact, are a service and are, therefore, excluded under the definition section of this bill. I am not sure what you are saying.

Mr. GORTON. I would say the second is correct, with the exception if a State wants to define it as a product and bring it under this bill, they can.

Mr. DORGAN. But that is not what the language says. It says it is excluded unless the State defines it with a standard of strict liability.

I am saying to you that there are 18 States that already have this with respect to electric utility cases alone. Are you saying, the way you have written this, those 18 States have already decided this bill will cover electric utilities? If that is the case, that is a remarkable change from what left the Senate.

Mr. GORTON. I am sorry.

Mr. DORGAN. Let me try it one more time. The Senator is saying the States can make the decision whether utilities are excluded or not. The bill passed by the Senate was very simple. On page 6—it cannot be misread, notwithstanding any other footnotes in some other committee report—it says:

EXCLUSION.—The term [product] does not include—electricity, water delivered by a utility, natural gas or steam.

That is what the Senate passed. I am coming to the floor to ask the question, has that dramatically changed so that in fact utilities are no longer excluded? Did somebody lift up the flap on the tent and utilities snuck in to get a massive exclusion under this bill? If that is the case, then I am very concerned about this. What I am hearing from people is to say, ''no, it kind of reads that way, but that is not really the effect of it.''

I do not have the foggiest notion of how one relates to the contradiction between how something reads and how someone intended it. That is why I am asking the question of, what is your intent? Is it your intent that just as in the bill passed by the Senate, it is your intent that the exclusion means that utilities will be excluded, period?

Mr. GORTON. I am sorry. Repeat it again.

Mr. DORGAN. Is it the intent, just as in the bill that was originally passed by the Senate, that the exclusion under (B), page 6, would still remain, that electricity, water delivered by a utility, natural gas and steam are, in fact, excluded? They are not products? Is that the intent of the people that wrote whatever they wrote in this conference?

Mr. GORTON. Well, first I need to say that no outside group came and asked whatsoever.

Mr. DORGAN. I did not say ''outside group.''

Mr. GORTON. The intent of the conference committee drafters was to see to it that subsection (i) and subsection (ii) read the same way, because we had already described them as having the same meaning in the original Senate bill. There was an inconsistency. There they were described in the Senate bill, conference report, as having exactly the same meaning. So there is a change only to the extent that something was already gone with respect to tissue, organs, and blood.

Mr. DORGAN. But you cannot describe in the conference report what the language means. The language means what it says it means.

My question, first, is, when this language left the Senate, did it mean that utilities were excluded from the definition of products? I thought it meant that. Most Members of the Senate thought it meant that. That is what I think it says. Do you believe that is what it says?

Mr. GORTON. I think that is the case not only with electricity but with respect to tissue, organs, and blood.

Mr. DORGAN. That is fine. I am not interested in those, but I am interested in electricity.

Mr. GORTON. Let me finish. I think it is exactly the same exclusion for both unless a State legislature has determined that they ought to be considered products. That is a privilege that the State legislature has now and retains under this bill.

Mr. DORGAN. That is not what the law says that you are asking us to vote on, as written. You are not talking about whether the State wants to determine if it is a product. You are talking about the question of the standard the State determines, appropriate.

There are certain kinds of things that are very dangerous and high risk that the States determine it wants an elevated standard of liability. It's called a strict liability standard. The way this is written, you are saying that utilities are excluded as products under this bill. They are excluded. They are not involved in this bill, except if a State determines that their standard is one of strict liability, then they are considered as products.

What you have done, you have swept claims against utilities under the bill. My point is, 18 States have already determined that in their courts with respect to claims against electric utilities alone, 14 have permitted strict liability in claims against natural gas utilities and 11 have allowed the same standard of strict liability on water utility cases. The fact is that there have been court cases and legislation on this very point. Thus, it appears it is already determined that claims against utilities are going to fall under the definition of ''products'' under this bill. I am not trying to be antagonistic. I voted for cloture before, and I voted for this bill on final passage. I want to understand whether somebody decided to bring a big moving van here and move something into this bill that no one on the floor understands. The ''moving van'' means loading up utility interests and putting it in.

Let me frame it in as simple a way as I can. Is it the intention of those who wrote this when it left the Senate, is it the intention that utilities shall not be considered a product? Is it the intention that the language as written—it says under ''exclusion'' on page 6 that utilities are not part of this bill. They are not a product. They are excluded, period, end of sentence, just declarative, end of sentence.

If that is the case—I want the answer to that—if that is the case, one says that judgment has not changed, how do we reconcile that with the changed language? That is what I am trying to understand. I am not trying to take up anybody's time or cause trouble. I am trying to understand exactly what this does and means with respect to utilities. I may be putting whoever is listening to sleep, I am sure, but it is very important.

Just parenthetically, while I am asking this question, I think this is one of those interesting issues where there is a little bit of truth on all sides, frankly. I know both sides immediately just separate and say, ''Well, you are wrong; we are right,'' and, ''We are wrong; you are right.'' The fact is there is a little bit of truth on the product liability issue in general. There are too many lawyers in America too prone to file lawsuits. I understand all that. I do not want to injure anybody's rights to redress for grievance in our court system if they get a defective product.

I have advanced this bill because it was narrow enough, to me, and because I thought it was a reasonable approach. When I see the conference report, first of all, nobody pulled this out for us to say this was a change. However, the more I look at it, the more it occurs to me that something has happened here that is of concern. I am trying to understand what it is because you are dealing with a very large industry—the electricity and the utility industry—and something has changed this definition.

So, I know that the Senator from South Carolina wanted to ask a question, but I have the two questions I want to ask: First, is it the understanding of the folks that wrote this when we originally dealt with it in the Senate that the exclusion—very straightforward on page 6—meant that we were excluding utilities? End of the story. That was my notion. I voted for it. Was that the notion that everyone else had who wrote this? It is pretty hard to misread it. Even if you have page 24 of the conference report, it is not hard to misread what it says. It says:

EXCLUSION.—The term ''product'' does not include electricity, water delivered by utility, natural gas or steam.

Is your understanding the same as mine, that under that bill utilities were excluded? They were not to be considered products for this bill? I ask the Senator from Washington.

Mr. GORTON. My understanding was that it was the meaning as is stated in the conference committee report of the original bill that they were excluded unless the State had defined them as a product and had subjected them to strict liability. That was the meaning of the original bill and the meaning of this bill.

Mr. DORGAN. But the original bill was not written that way or understood that way by this Senator.

Is it your understanding there are many States that have adopted a standard of strict liability, which would mean that the way you interpret the provision in the original bill would redefine utilities as a product and provide for utilities protection under this bill?

Mr. GORTON. Do I have a specific understanding of that or can I name the States? I would have to answer the question ''no.'' The committee report, which I believe to be accurate, says that most of the courts in most States treat these matters as matters that are subject to a negligent standard, not to a strict liability standard. Certainly there are some States treating them as strict liability.

Mr. DORGAN. But those who do adopt a strict liability standard, because these are kinds of activities that have a potential for greater danger and so on, is it the intention of those who have authored this to say for those States that adopted that standard of strict liability that we will offer protection of the utility industry under this bill?

I think, frankly, that is a substantial departure from what most people in this Senate would understand. I had thought originally some, incidentally, whom I have consulted with in the last 2 days or day on this, they say, ''No, you do not understand this. We do not really mean utilities fall under this bill.'' That is comforting to me, except the language seems at odds with that.

I think what Senator GORTON is saying is the way I read it, that those many States who have decided on the standard of strict liability—and there are many of them—will be told by this piece of legislation that utilities, for them, will now be a product whose interests will be protected by the limitations in this bill, and I daresay, I do not think there are two Senators on the floor of the Senate that understand that to be the case.

Can you respond to that? I am not trying to cause trouble for you. I want to understand exactly what we are doing.

Mr. GORTON. The answer to the question of the Senator from North Dakota is that in such States, such States are subject to the restrictions of this bill, exactly as they were under the intention of the bill as it was originally passed by the Senate Commerce Committee and by the Senate itself, as is evidenced by the Senate committee report, and that the change in the statutory language was simply to conform the statutory language with the intention expressed in the committee report.

Mr. DORGAN. We are both on the Senate Commerce Committee. I ask, do you think it was or is the intention of the Senate Commerce Committee to provide protection for utilities under product liability?

Mr. GORTON. Under the same circumstances that it would provide it for any other similarly situated organization, providing product liability provides it for any manufacturer, or for that matter, distributor, no matter how large or how small.

The direction of the bill, the direction of a product liability bill is to provide a degree of predictability and a protection of the consumer interest for the producers of goods—not services in this case—goods. If this is the description that a State uses for its utilities, yes, the committee did intend to provide exactly that protection, and that is exactly what the committee report says.

Mr. DORGAN. Well, the bill that we passed in the Senate Commerce Committee that came to the Senate floor that I supported said this, and said only this; it had no caveats, no exception, no exclusions. It said on page 6, ''EXCLUSION. The term 'product' does not include electricity, water delivered by utility, natural gas or steam.''

The answer I am hearing from the Senator from Washington now is that you would have had to understood more than this language in order to understand the importance of it, because you are saying that this really meant except those 44 States, 18 of whom already had court cases on the issues of standard of strict liability on electric utilities. Those that adopt a standard of strict liability will find that utilities in their States have their products or their services defined as products in this bill.

There is something wrong here. There is something that does not connect. I am trying to understand, because I have been a supporter, and I am trying to understand what does not connect here. What are we trying to avoid by including the exception? I come from a school of nine people in my graduating class, and we did not have the highest math there or advanced reading, but I understand what I read, and it says, ''the term 'product' does not include electricity, water delivered by utility, natural gas or steam.'' Period, end of story.

I voted for that. I say I agree with that. Utilities are not covered as products because they are in the section called ''Exclusion.'' Now I am hearing a description that says, ''No, you only read what was in the law. There was something else behind it.'' So I am just trying to understand where we are. If someone can enlighten me. Where are we with respect to utilities?

Mr. HARKIN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. DORGAN. I guess. I do not know that you will enlighten me.

Mr. HARKIN. I have never heard of this. Can I ask a question?

Mr. DORGAN. Well, who has the floor, Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JEFFORDS). The time is under the control of the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I will yield on my own time just a minute. I say to Senator DORGAN, he is right on target. In the zeal to avoid using what is intended—namely, the expression of strict liability and nuisance—for utilities, as put in the juxtaposed position in this language, where you have two exceptions, almost like a mathematical case of two negatives making a positive. Yes, positively, utilities are covered, wherein they have strict liability on nuisance tests. I have here in my hand a majority of States that do have it.

I ask unanimous consent to have this printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. HOLLINGS. I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, let me continue to inquire. I will not take much more time. I still do not understand the answer. Is the answer that the utilities essentially are providing services and are therefore not covered as products under this bill?

If that is the case—and that is what I thought was the case—then fine. But there is extra language here, where there needs to be a record in the Senate, that says here is exactly what this legislation means. If we have a circumstance where we are saying in 44 districts they have strict liability, the services of a utility are now put under the entire provisions of this law, that is a substantial change.

Mr. GORTON. Let me summarize a response to the general concern expressed by the Senator from North Dakota. Generally, at least in common law, the provision of electricity has been considered a service. The provision of the service is not governed by strict liability. Strict liability is a concept that applies to products.

A number of States have determined that there should be a standard of strict liability applied to electricity and, for that matter, to the delivery of blood, the subjects of the first subsection of that section. If a State treats as a product the delivery of electricity, or the supply of blood, and subjects it to strict liability, it is subject to the provisions of this act. It was meant to be subject to the provisions of this act by the bill as it was reported from the Commerce Committee. It is included as a part of the Commerce Committee report. It was noticed simply by someone on the staff that, for some reason or another, subsection (2) omitted the language that was in subsection (1), and it was added during the course of the drafting of the conference committee report. That was not intended to create any difference in the way in which the bill would have been interpreted, in any event. It was intended to bring it into conformity with the committee report, and it has done so. But if the fundamental question of the Senator from North Dakota is, if a State imposes strict liability under these circumstances and treats electricity as a product, it is subject to those provisions, and I say ought to be.

Mr. DORGAN. Imposing strict——

Mr. GORTON. If I can say one other thing, obviously, this question did not come up during the long debate we had a year ago. If it had, to the best of my ability, I would have answered the question of the Senator the same way I am answering now. That is what was meant. Had I memorized this footnote at the time? No, I had not. I would have had to refer to it, but I would have come up with the same answer.

Mr. DORGAN. The State deciding to adopt strict liability with respect to a utility does not put it in the category of products. I do not understand the mixing of the two.

Let me take it one step further then. If that is the case, what would the logic be in saying to a State that because it decides to impose a standard of strict liability on utilities—because potentially you have some very hazardous kinds of circumstances that can exist with respect to electricity, steam, natural gas, and so on. But because a State decides to impose strict liability on that, what would be the logic of saying, by the way, you decided to do that, therefore, we will put the utilities under the protection of this law. I do not understand the logic of attaching that.

Mr. GORTON. Exactly the same logic that applies to the entire bill. If the utility manufactured a toaster, which is clearly a product, and gave it as a bonus to its customers, that product would be subject to this bill. The whole logic of the bill is to provide a degree of predictability to the law from State to State, which does not exist at the present time. That logic is every bit as applicable to a utility as it is to General Motors or to a small business that is engaged in retail sales.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I will not take this further. But I say there is a substantial difference between utilities and toasters. The reason I supported the bill is I think there has been too much litigation in this country; some of the litigation is totally inappropriate. I supported it on that basis, to create a reasonable response without abridging the rights of the people who want to sue, yet trying to reduce the number of lawsuits in our country. I felt that was appropriate.

I am surprised at the description of what the exclusion means on page 6 of the bill, as originally passed in the Senate. The answer to the question I am asking this afternoon is that the new language in the conference report does not alter what the old language intends to do. It was so clear on its face. It says ''exclusions.'' The term ''product'' does not included electric and water delivered by utility, natural gas, or steam—period, end of section, end of story. There is nobody in my hometown who could misread this. And I did not misread it, I do not think.

The answer now, I guess, is that the added language of that section does not change the intended section because the section was intended to mean something that did not comport with the way it was read.

So I guess legislation is a strange process. I am trying to understand what exactly does this bill do as we move along. There is plenty in the bill I am satisfied with. I commend those who have created some provisions of this bill that I think advance the interests most of us want to find common interest on. But I think it is obvious from the discussion that there is a substantial amount of misunderstanding about what this exclusion means with respect to utilities.

Mr. GORTON. Let me try one other approach to this subject because it applies equally to the two subsections of this section. The whole concept of many of these damages, especially punitive damages, is a concept that is based on a company doing something wrong—in our case, and from some of the definitions, egregiously wrong. It is based on negligence or gross negligence. When a State or a given organization is subject to a standard of strict liability, it is liable for all of the damages that it causes to an individual—in this case, using whatever it is that the company produces, regardless of whether it is negligent or not. It may have engaged in the highest standard of safety available for such an organization. Yet, a legislature or a Congress has determined that, for some reason or another, the whole cost, all of the damages created by that organization, ought to be imposed on the organization, without regard to its having done anything wrong. That is what strict liability means.

You do not have to prove negligence or that there was anything wrong at all with what the particular organization did. You are still going to hold it liable. Well, that is the reason for the first subsection. Under those circumstances, it seems quite logical that you are not going to be required to pay for more than the damages that were actually created.

Mr. DORGAN. If I may finally say, you are absolutely correct about strict liability. But the reason for the standard of strict liability is that there are some kinds of activities that are sufficiently dangerous and contain sufficient risks that a strict liability standard has been determined to be in the public interest.

What I think you are saying is if, in the case of utilities, a State determines that a strict liability standard is appropriate, that is the same as a State defining a utility as a product. There is no relationship between the standard and the product. I think most of us believe——

Mr. GORTON. But it seems to me, I say to the Senator from North Dakota, there is a relationship between the standard and what kind of damages ought to be allowed over and above the actual losses suffered by the victim.

Mr. DORGAN. That is a different issue. The issue is under exclusion. The term ''product'' does not exclude what? The Senate has determined a product does not exclude utilities—the Senator has been patient. I am trying to understand exactly the consequences of this legislation. It is, while a boring subject for some, nonetheless a very important subject with a lot at stake for the American people.

Last evening, I read a fair amount about this. It is not fun reading. It is not a page-turner. But while I was struggling through it, I was trying to understand exactly what we have done and what the consequences will be. I personally think there is room for product liability reform, and I have voted that way and likely will continue to. I am very concerned about that, and I will continue visiting with the Senator about it.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HOLLINGS. I yield 15 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. I thank the Senator. I have listened very carefully to the preceding colloquy, and I must say that I read both the House and the Senate version of that, and I read what came in afterward in the conference report. Quite frankly, I was opposed to this bill before, and now even more so, because I think it is clear what happened in conference.

As we have said now, 44 States, as I understand it, have strict liability laws. Now those utilities will come under the purview of this bill and, therefore, it will cap damages to the extent that it is my understanding now that, under this bill, for example, the Seminole pipeline and natural gas facility in Texas, exploded in 1992, killed three, injured a lot, caused a lot of damage in two counties, and a jury awarded $46 million in punitive damages. It is my understanding that now, under this bill, that will not be able to happen after this.

So I thank the Senator from North Dakota for bringing that out. I had not focused on that before.

Mr. President, I want to say that the debate over product liability has been clouded by misinformation and anecdotal evidence, which is substituting for a careful consideration of the facts.

Mr. President, you know, every time a jury is impaneled, they are told by a judge they should consider only the facts, not hearsay, not speculation, but only the facts. Well, Mr. President, we are sort of sitting as a jury here. We ought to consider the facts. But what we have before us in this legislation—what we are hearing is hearsay, speculation, and a distortion of the truth. If, in fact, this Senate finds in favor of the conference report, and we were a jury, the judge would be well within his purview to dismiss the jury for not adhering to the instructions of the court and following the facts of the case.

It is wrong for a jury to decide on anything other than the facts, and it is wrong for us to legislate based on anecdote and misinformation, but that is what we are doing. This is not commonsense reform. This is nonsense regression. This bill ought to be called the caveat emptor bill of 1996, throwing us back to the old days when it was buyer, beware. If you bought something and it hurt you, tough luck—buyer, beware. That is what this bill is about. It turns back the clock years.

In the midst of all the legalese, it is hard to sort out what is really at stake here. It is really very simple. We are talking about people's lives. We are talking about their health, and we are talking about their happiness and about families.

This bill is about as antifamily, antihuman rights as I have ever seen. What the bill does is places economic worth on a higher plateau than individual work. I find that totally objectionable.

We have heard a lot of words about the need to promote values of greater responsibility and accountability. If you believe in those values, you ought to oppose this bill because it absolves wrongdoers from responsibility and does not hold them fully accountable for their actions.

We have heard a lot of talk about sending more power to the States. If you are for that, you ought to oppose this because this puts power in Washington. We have heard a lot of talk on the floor about putting more power in the hands of the people. If you believe in that, you ought to oppose this legislation because this takes power out of the hands of citizens and juries and puts it in the hands of big Government. Plain and simple, this bill is big Government, big business, and it is a big mistake.

Now, of course, most businesses do not set out to harm consumers with their products. Obviously not. But sometimes faulty products do make it to the market, and sometimes they make it to the market through carelessness or through sheer disregard of the public safety by those manufacturers. Sometimes people get hurt and die because of it. In the zeal to pass this conference report, let us not pass over the victims. There is a lot of talk about the victims. Let us talk about the victims—the children severely burned by highly flammable pajamas, women who die from toxic shock syndrome, women with silicone breast implants who have now lupus and scleroderma.

Again, I want to make it clear that most businesses are responsible. Most businesses take due care and concern. But there are those who do not. The current product liability system is based on a fundamental premise that we want to make sure that people—average citizens of this country—have the assurance that when they buy a product, when children consume a product, when they travel on our highway, they can be reasonably certain that what they are using, consuming, or buying is not going to harm them.

Part of that is our responsibility, and that is why we have health and safety and food inspection laws. That is why we have left untouched in our country the common law that we inherited from Great Britain that goes back several hundred years, the concept of tort feasor, the concept that someone must take due care or concern that his actions do not harm others, and if they do, that person must be held accountable and responsible. Those are the core values embodied in our Nation's laws. It is the essence of the common law. It goes back several hundred years.

My friend from North Dakota said we have too many lawyers in this country. I do not know about that, but I do believe that more knowledge of law and a love and respect of law—and especially the common law that we have inherited—makes us a more decent and a more law-abiding citizenry. That is what we are forgetting here. We are forgetting the history of tort feasance. For the life of me, I do not understand how people argue about we ought to be personally responsible and now saying we do not have to follow that admonition.

With this legislation, we all know that punitive damages awarded for grossly negligent behavior are capped. But in their efforts to make the product liability system uniform across the United States, supporters have fashioned a one-way preemption: This legislation strikes down only those aspects of State law that give citizens more protection from defective products. That is a one-two punch.

The bill passed by the Senate last year was bad, and this conference report is worse. It is far more extreme. It preserves some of the worst provisions of the Senate bill, like the elimination of joint and several liability and the cap on punitive damages, and expands other areas resulting in a bill that is the consumers' worst nightmare.

Let me talk for a couple of minutes about the elimination of joint and several liability for noneconomic damages. Again, it violates the golden rule of responsibility and accountability. You do not have to worry about being accountable and making sure the victim is wholly compensated unless the victim has a high-paying job. The Senator from Louisiana talked about that earlier. Eliminating joint and several liability for noneconomic damages eliminates the protections particularly for women, children, and elderly, because noneconomic losses constitute a greater proportion of their total losses.

So, again, this bill is antiwomen, it is antichildren, and it is antielderly. I do not understand that. We are supposed to be for individual workers. And, yet, what this says is that if you have a high-paying job, you are worth more than a child or worth more than an elderly person who has been a homemaker. You are worth more than they are.

Under current law, joint and several liability enables an individual to bring one lawsuit against the companies that are responsible for the manufacture of a dangerous, defective product and have the defendants apportion fault amongst themselves if the jury finds for the plaintiff. Under joint liability, victims are compensated fully for their injuries even if one or more of the wrongdoers is insolvent.

Our civil justice system is founded on the principle that the victim deserves the greatest protection. This bill turns that basic value on its head. It says we should protect the wrongdoer. This bill says they deserve protection.

Mr. President, consider one case, the Claassen family of Newhall, IA. Bill, Jeanne, his wife, and their 4-year-old son, Matt, were returning home from a family gathering on November 6, 1993, in their 1973 Chevrolet pickup. Another driver failed to stop at a stop sign and rammed into the passenger side of their pickup at a speed of about 30 miles an hour. Eyewitnesses confirmed that the Claassen's pickup immediately burst into flames on impact. The flames raced up the outside of the passenger door and engulfed Jeanne Claassen's face in flames.

The Claassen's son, Matt, was seated between Bill and Jeanne in the pickup. Bill struggled to get Matt out of the truck before returning to rescue his wife. He was unable to rescue her and was convinced that she had died in the fire. Witnesses who arrived on the scene immediately after the collision heard Bill telling his son that his mommy had died and gone to heaven.

Jeanne Claassen survived and is still recovering today. Her face and head permanently disfigured, she has not been able to return to her job as a medical technician. They are reluctant to take her back because of her appearance. She continues to undergo painful surgery to regain some semblance of her former self. Her young son Matt often relives that nightmare in his school drawings, once drawing an igloo engulfed in flames. He sometimes has trouble relating to the different way his mother now looks.

The Claassens are currently in litigation to recover damages from the two parties involved in this accident, the driver of the other car and the General Motors Corp. that manufactured the truck.

The driver of the other car has no personal assets, and her insurance will only cover some of Jeanne's many continual medical expenses. General Motors has been under criticism for refusing to recall the 1973 and later models of the C/K pickups. These model trucks have the fuel tanks outside of the frame rail of the vehicle, making them more susceptible to the type of accidents like Jeanne Claassen's.

By eliminating joint and several liability for noneconomic damages, this legislation will make it potentially more difficult for Jeanne Claassen to be compensated for her loss if the court rules in her favor. The driver of the other car is insolvent, and once the insurance money runs out, GM will not necessarily have to chip in to cover expenses. But Mrs. Claassen's pain and suffering will continue.

This legislation says that it really does not matter about her, it does not matter about the exploding fuel tank when awarding noneconomic damages. If one of them cannot pay, if one of the defendants cannot pay, we will just stick it to Mrs. Claassen. But—and here is the rub in this bill—if Mrs. Claassen was a CEO making millions of dollars a year for a major corporation, this bill would not hesitate to take care of her economic losses. She does not have a big economic loss, but she has personal losses. She has pain and suffering. She has a lot of loss in her life. This bill says, tough luck. If she had been the CEO of a major corporation making 20 million bucks a year, this bill would have been for her. But not for this Mrs. Claassen. What kind of discrimination against human beings are we about to engage in if we approve this conference report?

Mr. President, there are a lot of things I object to in this bill, but that is what I find most objectionable—economic losses are more important than human losses, pure and simple. If you have money, this bill is for you. But if you suffer the loss of consortium, if you suffer the loss of one of your family, pain and suffering, disfigurement, sorry, you are out of luck. Under this bill, Mrs. Claassen would be out of luck.

The elimination of joint liability for noneconomic damages forces our legal system to make a value judgment based upon your economic worth, and that is why this bill is so antiwoman and antifamily.

Last, let me just talk about capping punitive damages. I think I heard earlier the Senator from Connecticut saying $250,000 is a lot of money.

Mr. President, I have here a list of the amount of money made by CEO's of our major corporations. I figured out how long it would take to reach the cap of $250,000.

The CEO of Boeing makes $1.4 million a year. It would take 9 weeks of his salary to reach this cap. Do you think that is going to be a deterrent to Boeing? IBM, it would take 5 weeks. Sears & Roebuck, it would take 1 month. That is not a deterrent.

When this bill first came to the floor, in good faith I offered an amendment which I thought would tend to balance things out. I am opposed to caps, but I said if you are going to have a cap, let us put the cap at twice the annual compensation of the CEO of the corporation. That way it protects small businesses because, if you are a CEO of a small business, you do not have much money every year so you would have less exposure, but if you are a CEO making $20 million a year, well, then twice that would be the limit on the cap.

I lost on that amendment, but to me it still makes better sense than what we have in this bill of saying $250,000 or twice the compensatory damages, whichever is greater. This defeats the purpose of the deterrent effect of the product liability laws. They have made a difference. Ford Motor Co. redesigned the Pinto only after a $125 million lawsuit was awarded in which a 13-year-old boy was severely burned when the Pinto he was riding in burst into flames.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's 15 minutes have expired.

Mr. HARKIN. Yet evidence showed Ford Motor Co. knew it was a faulty design, but they went ahead anyway because they said it would cost less to have to pay it out in damages than to redesign the car.

Mr. President, what this bill does is it lets those tort feasors off the hook.

I know my time is up. I could go on and on. Quite frankly, we should not say that simply because you make a lot of money you are going to get awarded more damages, more punitive damages will be assessed against someone if you make more money than if you are a homemaker or a child or an elderly person. That is discrimination of the worst sort.

I hope and I trust we will not invoke cloture on this bill and that we can continue to abide by the principles of individual work and responsibility and accountability in our country.

I thank the Senator for yielding me this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The majority manager is recognized.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Rhode Island.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island is recognized.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, first of all, in connection with the remarks of the distinguished Senator from Iowa, I point out there is an additur provision in this bill dealing with punitive damages. I do not want to debate that whole thing here; I only have 10 minutes, but I would stress that point of which perhaps the Senator was not aware.

Mr. President, yesterday, I briefly outlined the history of this legislation, which represents now 15 years—15 years; that is a long time—we have been debating this liability reform act. It started in 1981 when Senator Kasten, of Wisconsin, introduced the first bill.

Finally, here we are today with a fair and a reasonable bipartisan bill that not only has passed both Houses but did so with strong majorities. The House approved a broader bill, not this one but a broader one, which I presume those on the other side would find more offensive. They passed that 265 to 161, a very substantial majority. In the Senate, the bill that we passed had 61 votes in support of it, 61 out of 100.

So with a track record like that, you might think product liability reform would soon become law. But here we are faced with two major obstacles, a cloture vote this afternoon to protect against further filibustering on this issue, and, worse than that, a newly raised threat of a Presidential veto. If this bill does not make it past the procedural hurdle of cloture, or if the President does not reconsider his threat of a veto, this bill will not become law.

To be prevented from succeeding at this point, I must say, is particularly galling. After all, I suspect that this bill has seen more roadblocks in the last 15 years than any other bill we have seen here. Indeed, I venture to guess that product liability has been subject to more cloture votes than any other subject. There were 2 cloture votes in 1986, 3 in 1992, 2 in 1993, 4 in 1995, for a total of 11 cloture votes in all. Yet, it seemed in this new Congress we were going to win it; once and for all this gridlock would be ended.

Drafting of this bill was a bipartisan effort right from the beginning. It is not a Republican bill; it is a Republican-Democratic bill, a bipartisan bill. The White House was well aware of what was going on. The White House watched closely as the Senate took up the bill and began adding amendments. It is my understanding that it was the administration, during the Senate debate in May, that quite helpfully suggested the addition of the so-called additur provision to the final version.

So, as I say, it went sailing through here, 61 to 37. What happened to change the White House's attitude? Did the bill change dramatically in conference from what went through here in the Senate? The answer is, hardly at all. It was clear to all that the House's broad tort-reform bill would not be approved by the administration. Therefore, to their credit, the conferees, representatives from the House and representatives from the Senate meeting together, decided to stick closely to the Senate version that had passed so overwhelmingly and that seemed to have White House support. So the bill that we will vote on today, or the bill that we are dealing with, is virtually identical to the Senate-passed bill that won such strong approval.

I do not know why the President appears to have changed his mind. I cannot believe he is personally opposed to a Federal liability law for, as a Governor, as Governor of Arkansas, the President sat on the National Governors' Association committee that drafted the first National Governors' Association resolution dealing with Federal liability reform.

Here we have a copy of the letter from the President to Senator DOLE setting forth the reasons for the veto.

I ask unanimous consent the letter be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. CHAFEE. We are told it is an ''unwarranted intrusion on State authority.'' Yet, the National Governors' Association enthusiastically supports this measure.

We are told the bill would ''encourage wrongful conduct because it abolishes joint liability.'' But joint and several liability, it has been pointed out, applies still to economic damages.

The letter accuses the bill of ''increas[ing] the incentive to engage in the egregious conduct of knowingly manufacturing and selling defective products.'' I do not find this charge makes much sense. Then it goes on to say that the ''additur'' provision the White House itself put in here, the provision being that the judge himself can increase the punitive damages—the White House had a hand in drafting that—now they say that is not adequate.

So I do not think any of these three statements that the President has in his letter represents what this conference report really would do. I think that is very, very unfortunate.

To my judgment, this bill is sound and reasonable. Under the bill, those who sell but do not make products—sell the products but not necessarily having made them—are liable only if they did not exercise reasonable care. If they offered their own warranty and it was not met, or if they engaged in intentional wrongdoing, obviously they will be liable. But they cannot be caught up in a liability suit where they did nothing wrong. I do not see much trouble with that.

If the injured person was under the influence of drugs and alcohol and that condition was more than 50 percent responsible for the event that led to the injury, the defendant cannot be held liable.

If plaintiff misused or altered the product—this is the one we see so often in the area I come from, people have altered machinery and equipment that they have purchased—in violation of the instructions or warnings to the contrary, or in violation of just plain common sense, then the damages are reduced accordingly. I just cannot understand why we ought to blame the manufacturer for behavior that everyone knows would place the product user at risk. That does not seem fair to me. Does that not contradict our notion of an individual's personal responsibility? The person has to have some sense of responsibility here.

The bill allows injured persons to file an action up to 2 years after the date they discovered or should have discovered the harm and its cause. For durable goods, the actions may be filed up to 15 years after the initial delivery of the product. These also seem to me to be fair.

Either party may offer to proceed to voluntary, nonbinding, alternative dispute resolution.

The most controversial element of the bill, I suppose, is the punitive damages. I remind my colleagues that these damages are separate and apart from compensatory damages. The compensatory damages are meant to make the injured party whole. The punitive damages are awarded where there is ''clear and convincing evidence'' proving ''conscious, flagrant indifference to the right of safety of others.'' The amount of punitive damages may not exceed two times the amount awarded for compensatory loss or $250,000, whichever is the greater.

Again, I must say I have had trouble with punitive damages for a long time. I have great difficulty understanding the basis of that; certainly that the punitive damages go to the plaintiff instead of the State for retraining of those who are committing the errors. It might be manufacturers, it might be physicians, whatever it is. But I have great difficulty understanding why in the world punitive damages should go to the plaintiff.

In conclusion, I pay my compliments to Senators ROCKEFELLER, GORTON, PRESSLER, and LIEBERMAN for the work they have done on this. I certainly urge the President to reconsider his position and join the bipartisan coalition supporting this very important legislation.

I urge him to sign this bill into law.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, March 16, 1996.

Hon. BOB DOLE,
Majority Leader, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. LEADER: I will veto H.R. 956, the Common Sense Product Liability Legal Reform Act of 1996, if it is presented to me in this current form.

This bill represents an unwarranted intrusion on state authority, in the interest of protecting manufacturers and sellers of defective products. Tort law is traditionally the prerogative of the states, rather than of Congress. In this bill, Congress has intruded on state power—and done so in a way that peculiarly disadvantages consumers. As a rule, this bill displaces state law only when that law is more beneficial to consumers; it allows state law to remain in effect when that law is more favorable to manufacturers and sellers. In the absence of compelling reasons to do so, I cannot accept such a one-way street of federalism, in which Congress defers to state law when doing so helps manufacturers and sellers, but not when doing so aids consumers.

I also have particular objections to certain provisions of the bill, which would encourage wrongful conduct and prevent injured persons from recovering the full measure of their damages. Specifically, the bill's elimination of joint-and-several liability for noneconomic damages, such as pain and suffering, will mean that victims of terrible harm sometimes will not be fully compensated for it. Where under current law a joint wrongdoer will make the victim whole, under this bill an innocent victim would suffer when one wrongdoer goes bankrupt and cannot pay his portion of the judgment. It is important to note that companies sued for manufacturing and selling defective products stand a much higher than usual chance of going bankrupt; consider, for example, manufacturers of asbestos or breast implants or intra-uterine devices.

In addition, for those irresponsible companies willing to put profits above all else, the bill's capping of punitive damages increases the incentive to engage in the egregious misconduct of knowingly manufacturing and selling defective products. The provision of the bill allowing judges to exceed the cap in certain circumstances does not cure this problem, given Congress's clear intent, expressed in the Statement of Managers, that judges should do so only in the rarest of circumstances.

The attached Statement of Administration Policy more fully explains my position on this issue—an issue of great importance to American consumers, and to evenly applied principles of federalism.

Sincerely,

BILL CLINTON.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FRIST). Who yields time?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise today to speak in opposition to the conference report on the Common Sense Product Liability Legal Reform Act. Supporters of this legislation have made the claim that this bill will benefit manufacturers, investors and business owners and workers. They also say it will benefit consumers. Yet, to my knowledge, this bill is opposed by virtually every group in the country that represents working people and consumers and children and the elderly.

One of the reasons for this is that the claims that have been made on behalf of this bill do not really add up. The people who support this bill claim the bill would set uniform Federal standards for product liability legislation.

They claim uniformity is essential and that knowing the laws are going to be the same everywhere you go is absolutely critical for business interests that might be unsure of what the marketplace and a legal system of a particular jurisdiction will hold for them. That is the whole basis of this bill. That is the core concept, that you have to have this uniformity across the board, or businesses really will not know what to do in terms of location, business location decisions.

I would like to use my time to speak about two aspects of this notion of uniformity. First, let us remember that this legislation marks an unprecedented event. We are, for the first time, imposing the demands of the Federal Government in an area of law that has, for 200 years, been the sole domain, the sole province of the States. I thought this was a Congress devoted to devolution, not to the Government at Washington making mandatory rules.

I thought that was the mantra of the new Republican majority, that the States know best, that most of the time the best decisions are those that are made by the folks back home and not by the decisionmakers in Washington. I remember time and time again the majority leader coming down to the Senate floor and telling us it was time to ''dust off the 10th amendment.''

I remember when the Speaker of the other body went on national TV last spring and in an address to the Nation said the following:

> This country is too big and too diverse for Washington to have the knowledge to make the right decisions on local matters. We've got to return power back to you, to your families, your neighborhoods, your local and State governments.

Mr. President, what happened to those words? What happened to the 10th amendment? What happened to the need to address local problems on the local level? All this talk about States rights is about to go right out the window as we usurp over 200 years of State control over their tort systems.

We have a bill before us that has as its central premise the notion that the Federal Government is a better administrator of justice than the States and that the U.S. Senate is better suited to determine the outcome of a civil trial than are 12 average Americans sitting in a jury box.

How troubling that, at a time when Americans are so distrustful of their Government, we in Government are not willing to trust Americans to administer civil justice. But I suppose that for the sponsors of this bill, this is a reasonable price, so long as we get some uniformity in our laws.

Unfortunately—and I really want to stress this—this bill has about as much uniformity as a circus parade. Look at the new punitive damage cap contained in the bill. That provision caps punitive damages in most cases at the higher of $250,000, or two times compensatory damages. That sounds pretty uniform, does it not? But read the small print.

If a State has a law that is more restrictive—more restrictive—than the Federal cap, then that particular State law prevails. If a State has a law that is less restrictive than this Federal cap, then, and only then, the Federal cap prevails.

Moreover, under this bill, those States that currently simply prohibit punitive damages, do not allow them at all, they would be permitted to continue to not allow any punitive damages.

So what does this mean for American consumers? It means the consumers and children and the elderly living in different States with different sets of laws will have substantially different protections from injuries and defective products.

Mr. President, so much for the uniform Federal standards and so much for the idea that this bill is somehow fair and equitable and beneficial to consumers.

But what this really is is sort of a one-way preemption of State laws, and it is grounded on the premise that some States know better than others and that some Americans can properly serve on juries but others cannot. With this new concept of, let us call it, selective federalism, perhaps we should change the words above the Supreme Court so they read ''Equal justice under the law, unless you live in the following States,'' and then list the appropriate States.

Mr. President, I also find it absolutely ludicrous that the supporters of this bill would suggest that we are providing uniformity when we are going to have completely different standards and rules throughout the 50 States. If I had to pick one provision of this bill that demonstrates how nonsensical this notion of uniformity is, I would have to choose the provisions seeking to reestablish a new Federal statute of repose.

This bill creates a new Federal standard for the number of years a manufacturer or product seller can be held liable for harm caused by a particular product. Known as a statute of repose, that period is 15 years under this conference report.

Why 15 years? Where did that come from? It is a good question. The product liability legislation considered in the 103d Congress, written by the same two principal authors, contained a 25-year statute of repose. Why? Well, a footnote in the committee report from that Congress justified the 25-year limit by pointing out that, according to testimony received by the Commerce Committee, and I quote, ''30 percent of the lawsuits brought against machine tool manufacturers involve machines that are over 25 years old.'' Therefore, Mr. President, presumably the authors of this bill, last time around, selected 25 years as the life expectancy of all products manufactured in the United States.

So last May, we considered a product liability bill that the supporters tried to characterize as much more moderate and much narrower than the product liability bill considered in the 103d Congress. But in many cases, the bill we considered last May was worse than its predecessor. For example, they dropped the 25-year statute of repose to only 20 years. Why? Once again, good question. The committee report for the Senate-passed legislation conspicuously left out that footnote from last time about the machine tool testimony and just makes no mention whatsoever as to why 20 years was selected for that bill. Instead, the committee report promotes the consistency of the 20-year statute of repose with the General Aircraft Revitalization Act of 1994 that was passed by this body in 1994.

It also justifies a Federal statute of repose on the basis that Japan is poised to enact a short 10-year statute of repose. So now, apparently, the Japanese Government knows better than the State of Wisconsin how to properly administer civil justice in cases involving Wisconsin litigants. I wonder how the Framers of the Constitution would feel about that assertion, Mr. President.

What is too bad is, in this conference report before us, it does not end there because, as I said, the conference report before us does not have a 25-year statute of repose, does not have a 20-year statute of repose, it even has now a significantly shorter 15-year statute of repose. So we have gone from 25 to 20 to 15, and they call this a moderate bill.

Again, what in the world is that 15 years based on? It strikes me as being completely arbitrary and it seems less concerned with what the life expectancy of certain products should be and more concerned with making sure we pass as short a statute of repose as can possibly be done politically.

Finally, Mr. President, worse, this takes us back to the issue of selective preemption of State authority over liability laws. Under this conference report, if a State legislature has decided against having a statute of repose or has decided on a statute that is longer than 15 years, then this new Federal law will override the judgment of that State legislature.

Again, when you really look at this bill, it is not about uniformity at all. It will lock in a lack of uniformity and different treatment throughout the States and not provide the central purpose of the bill, as I understand it, which is to provide all the businesses in the country with some kind of uniformity.

So, Mr. President, on behalf of all the consumers who will be affected by this, as well as the concern about uniformity, I simply must say that this conference report should be defeated.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DODD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. GORTON. I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Connecticut.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I thank my colleague. I will try to use less time than that, because I know my colleague from Washington has several requests for additional time.

First of all, let me commend our colleagues from West Virginia and from Washington for their tremendous work on this legislation. They have spent countless months, indeed years, working on this issue. I want to express my gratitude to them and the gratitude of my constituents in Connecticut. They have dealt with a complicated, sensitive issue in a forthright manner, allowing all to have a full say in what ought to be included in the legislation. I strongly urge our colleagues to support their effort, the Common Sense Product Liability and Legal Reform Act of 1996.

Mr. President, I am not new to this issue. During this debate, I have been playing a supporting role to the efforts of Senator ROCKEFELLER and Senator GORTON. But I began working on this issue 10 years ago, when I joined with our former colleague, Jack Danforth, and attempted to fashion a product liability bill. None of our efforts ever made much headway through the legislative process, but I think we helped lay a foundation for the measure we are considering today.

Mr. President, when I ask the businesses in my State to list the single most important issue to them, they tell me that it is product liability reform, more so than taxes or any other issue. This is particularly true of my smaller manufacturers, the tool and die makers, and other industries that are supported by larger companies like United Technologies, Sikorsky, and Electric Boat. This is the issue they care more about than anything else.

Across this country, manufacturers are spending seven times more to prepare for product liability cases than they are on research and development.

Because of these costs, innovative products never make it to the market. There is no question, for example, that there would be more research into an aids vaccine if companies were not fearful of the current product liability system.

Additionally, the high costs of litigation raises the cost of many products. This so-called tort tax accounts for an estimated 20 percent of the cost of a ladder, 55 percent of the cost of a football helmet, and 95 percent of the cost of childhood vaccines.

The excessive costs of the product liability system also hurt the competitive position of American companies. Some American manufacturers pay product liability insurance rates that are 20 to 50 times higher than their foreign competitors.

Of course, if this system were working well for consumers, that would be an important argument for maintaining the status quo. But that is not the case.

As I mentioned earlier, consumers are denied innovative products and must pay higher prices for products. And what about people who are injured by the products that do make it to the marketplace? Do they benefit from the current system? The answer is no.

A General Accounting Office study concluded that it takes almost 3 years for a case to be resolved. That is 3 years that an injured person must wait to be made whole. Regrettably, this delay leads many injured people, particularly those with very severe injuries, to settle for less than their full losses.

Clearly, the present system is broken. We need to fix it and the conference report makes some important repairs. My colleagues have already discussed some aspects of the bill, but let me highlight some provisions that are particularly important.

UNIFORM SYSTEM

First, by providing Federal standards in certain areas, this measure will provide a more uniform system of product liability. These standards will add more certainty to the system, and help reduce transaction costs.

When you consider that 70 percent of all products move in interstate commerce, Federal standards make sense. The National Governors Association supports this approach. The association has testified:

> The United States needs a single, predictable set of product liability rules. The adoption of a Federal uniform product liability code would eliminate unnecessary cost, delay, and confusion in resolving product liability cases.

ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION

The provision in the bill that encourages the use of alternative dispute resolution will also help reduce the excessive costs in the current system. Currently, too much money goes to transaction costs—primarily lawyers fees—and not enough goes to victims.

A 1993 survey of the Association of Manufacturing Technology found that every 100 claims filed against its members cost a total of $10.2 million. Out of that total, the victims received only $2.3 million, with the rest of the money going to legal fees and other costs. Clearly, we need to implement a better system in which the money goes to those who need it—injured people.

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS

Consumers will also benefit from a statute of limitations provision that preserves a claim until 2 years after the consumer should have discovered the harm and the cause. In many cases, injured people are not sure what caused their injuries, and by the time they figure it out, they have often lost their ability to sue. This legislation will provide relief for people in such situations and allow them adequate time to bring a lawsuit.

This legislation will also improve the system for businesses—from large manufacturers to the hardware store down the street.

ALCOHOL AND DRUGS

Under this bill, defendants would have an absolute defense if the plaintiff was under the influence of intoxicating alcohol or illegal drugs and the condition was more than 50 percent responsible for the plaintiff's injuries. This provision, it seems to me, is nothing more than common sense. Why should a responsible company pay for the actions of a drunk or a drug user?

PRODUCT SELLERS

The bill also institutes reforms to help product sellers. They would only be liable for their own negligence or failure to comply with an express warranty. Product sellers who are not at fault can get out of cases before running up huge legal bills. But as an added protection for injured people, this rule would not apply if the manufacturer could not be brought into court or if the claimant would be unable to enforce a judgment against the manufacturer.

PUNITIVE DAMAGES

In my view, the conference report also strikes an appropriate balance on punitive damages. There are reasonable limitations on punitive damages, but the judge could award a higher amount against large businesses if the limited punitive damage award is insufficient to deter egregious conduct.

BIOMATERIALS

The biomaterials provision also addresses a critical problem. It would limit the liability of biomaterials suppliers to cases where they are at fault, and establish a procedure to ensure that suppliers, but not manufacturers, could avoid unnecessary legal costs. This provision will help ensure that Americans continue to have access to lifesaving and life-enhancing medical devices.

My colleague from Connecticut, Senator LIEBERMAN, authored this proposal and I commend him for his excellent effort.

BALANCED LEGISLATION

The provisions I have outlined demonstrate the balance this legislation strikes between consumers and businesses. In the final analysis, the reforms in the bill should strengthen the product liability system for everyone.

Mr. President, I commend the conferees for staying so close to the Senate bill. In my view, the House bill went too far. It contained provisions that would have applied in a wide range of cases, including medical malpractice.

The stakes of legal reform, the rights and responsibilities of all Americans, warrant a more cautious approach. There are some areas of our legal system where problems must be addressed. Securities litigation and product liability are obvious examples, but we should avoid wholesale changes.

The conference report we are debating today takes the right approach. It is a moderate measure that makes modest reforms. It strikes a careful balance between the needs of consumers and businesses, and should help improve the product liability system for everyone.

Before closing, let me again commend Senator ROCKEFELLER and Senator GORTON for their excellent work on this legislation. As I discussed earlier, this conference report has very few changes from the Senate bill that they crafted so carefully. They have also done a superb job in keeping this legislation moving forward.

I urge my colleagues to vote for cloture and help pass this conference report.

Mr. President, I yield back whatever time I may have remaining to our distinguished colleague from Washington.

Mr. HOLLINGS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, before I yield to the distinguished Senator from Minnesota, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled ''In Defense of Big (Not Bad) Business'' from the Washington Post.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

IN DEFENSE OF BIG (NOT BAD) BUSINESS

(By Jerry J. Jasinowski)

Engaging in class warfare and anti-industrial rhetoric has become the favorite blood sport in this political year.

We have the unlikely duo of presidential candidate Pat Buchanan and Labor Secretary Robert Reich warning us about anxious workers and their stagnant wages. A seven-part treatise in the New York Times blames corporate callousness for the ills of society, while Newsweek recently threw the mugs of four leading American business executives on its cover under the headline ''Corporate Killers.''

How quickly perceptions change. Little more than a year ago I was invited to address an international gathering of corporate and political leaders in Davos, Switzerland, to talk about an American industrial renaissance that had restored the United States to the top spot among the world's economies for the first time in nearly a decade. And instead of warning of Japan's industrial might, a constant theme throughout the 1980's, I found myself describing a quality and productivity revolution that has led to record job creation in the United States.

No one in this country seems to know it or care, but while Americans have been busy berating our capitalist system with unbridled enthusiasm, the U.S. economy has become the envy of the industrialized world.

Indeed, the current anxiety over jobs and wages illustrates the verity of the notion that a big enough lie, repeated often enough, can take on the trappings of reality. I may be fashionable—and in some cases politically expedient—to argue that American workers are underpaid, underappreciated and on the brink of losing their jobs. Some are—and these concerns need to be addressed. But to suggest that this is the prevailing phenomenon taking place in our economy is wrong, or at the least, a very distorted view of reality.

While corporate downsizing gets the headlines, the American economy has quietly grown richer—gaining more than 8 million net new jobs since 1992 and putting our unemployment rate at an historically low 5.5 percent. In the past 25 years, U.S. employment has increased 59 percent and we have created more than five times as many net jobs as all the countries of Europe combined.

Even in areas like U.S. manufacturing, to take a favorite topic of media concern, the picture is not so bleak as news reports, or a cursory look at the data, might suggest. According to government statistics, around 1.7 million manufacturing jobs disappeared between 1988 and 1993. But many of the positions shed by manufacturers were never the assembly line jobs typically associated with manufacturing in the first place. Rather, a sizable portion of the eliminated positions were back-office jobs like payroll and accounting, which are now contracted out to companies that the Labor Department classifies as ''service sector'' firms. It's also worth remembering that millions of jobs are created in other sectors as a direct result of manufacturing. It happens when a new restaurant locates near a manufacturing plant, the so-called ''multiplier effect.'' And it happens when jobs that were considered by the government to be manufacturing are spun off—the most common example being GM's transfer of its data-processing to EDS, a move that overnight classified thousands of jobs from manufacturing to service.

The data can be equally misleading when it comes to wages. It has by now been widely reported that median household incomes, adjusted for inflation, have been falling for nearly two decades, and by 7 percent since 1989 alone. But the wage decline doesn't take into account other factors that greatly mitigate its effect. First, the size of the average American family has been declining meaning the typical household paycheck is being spread over fewer people. And when the overstatement of inflation contained in the consumer price index is eliminated, income growth actually climbs by 15 percent.

Nor do such statistics take into account the fact that workplace compensation has undergone radical changes in recent years. As studies by the Federal Reserve and others have shown, employees nowadays receive a much greater share of their compensation in the form of various benefits—health care, paid vacation, pensions, incentive payments, bonuses, commissions and profit sharing. Using this broader measure of total compensation, workers are even better off than they were in the 1970s.

It is also important to remember that workers with the right skills and in the right fields are sharing handsomely in the economy's growth. A study by Princeton University economist Alan Krueger showed that employees who use computers on the job earn 15 percent more than those who don't. Indeed, a wage boom has been underway for some time in many high-tech firms. Assembly-line positions in the technology sector now typically pay anywhere from $50,000 to $75,000 annually, including bonuses. And in part because of automation that has raised the skill-level required to perform all kinds of jobs on the factory floor, manufacturing workers in any field now earn an average of $40,000 annually, for companies like Cypress Semiconductor in San Jose, Calif., compensation is even higher. The average worker in this 1,900-person company, including line workers and receptionists, earns $93,000 a year including benefits.

Even more important than what the numbers tell us about the present is what they tell us about our future. It is true that, while the wage picture is not as bleak as we've been led to believe, there is reason for concern. But a number of powerful trends suggest that several of the factors that have kept take-home pay lower than expected and job in security higher than desired are self-correcting. Others are well within our power to fix.

The baby-boom generation, combined with the influx of women into the workplace and high levels of immigration, has brought on the largest increase in the supply of labor in American history. Since 1968, the number of Americans seeking jobs has shot up by 52 million workers, a factor which has had the inevitable effect of slowing wage growth since so many more people were out in the market competing for jobs.

Currently there are still too many workers with inadequate skills struggling to fit themselves into an economy that increasingly demands higher levels of education. But demographics will be on the side of the workers in coming years. For one, four times as many Americans have college degrees today compared with just 50 years back. More importantly, the generation now entering the work force is one-third smaller than the baby-boom generation, which will inevitably push up employee compensation. A labor force that is older and more experienced also commands generally higher compensation, a factor that filters down through the entire labor market.

Meanwhile, many jobs are going wanting. Some manufacturers are so desperate for skilled assembly line workers that they've taken to hiring professional recruiting firms to help them find qualified applicants. The owner of one Northern Virginia firm told me that software developers who commanded $30,000 five years ago now demand, and get, $50,000 a year. And a newly released study of software programmers nationwide shows many veteran code writers can command salaries that exceed $100,000.

John F. Kennedy's oft-repeated maxim that ''a rising tide lifts all boats'' is as true today is it was 35 years ago. Unfortunately, the tide hasn't been rising very fast lately. Though much of the news about the economy is positive, it's also true that economic growth during the current expansion has been hovering around 2 percent, roughly half that of previous post-war expansions. Yet, given improvements in corporate productivity of late, both in manufacturing and more recently in the service sector, there is no reason our growth rate can't be lifted to at least 3 percent a year. If that happened, we would inevitably see substantial new economic activity and jobs gains for workers at all skill levels.

So why isn't the economy growing faster?

Pat Buchanan would have us believe that it's because our free-trade policies have allowed other countries to benefit at the expense of Americans. But if anything, the opposite is true. Exports, in fact, have been responsible for roughly one-third of U.S. economic growth over the past decade. According to a new report by the Manufacturing Institute and the Institute for International Economics, American firms that export goods or services have experienced a job growth rate almost 20 percent higher than comparable non-exporting firms. Exporters are 9 percent less likely to shut down, and they pay their workers as much as 10 percent more than firms that do not export, the study found. If anything, we should be figuring out ways to open up markets across the world, not stir tensions in a way that could set off a trade war.

It's also time we question whether the Federal Reserve is keeping interest rates unduly high, and whether we should continue allowing government to keep the tax burden so high. The median two-wage earner family carries total tax burden—federal, state and local—of 38.2 percent, up from 27.7 percent in 1955. This amounts to more than $5,000 a year for the typical family. Payroll taxes, which represent the largest single tax on millions of middle income Americans, have grown at four times the rate of incomes. While this last tax is technically paid by employers and employees alike, it amounts to a direct hit on employees because most companies simply pass on the burden in the firm of reduced wages and benefits.

So does all this mean business should be let off the hook? Certainly not. I would be the last to exonerate business completely of the charges coming at them of late. Take the issue of wages. It's true that many companies have done a lot to share their success with their workers. Last month, for example, while the press was busy maligning IBM for its layoffs, the computer maker announced it would spend more than $200 million increasing employee bonuses, not just for top executives but for the rank and file. And at Coca-Cola, where nearly one-third of the workers own company stock, each employees' holdings shot up in value by an average of $70,000 over the last 15 months.

The problem is that not enough companies are putting a priority on performance-related compensation. People should be paid based on the quality of their performance, at every company, and no matter how lowly the job appears. If only the top executives are sharing the largess—or if bonuses are climbing when profits are shrinking—something is wrong.

The other area that needs more corporate attention is education and training. Again, many companies are investing significant sums, but too many others aren't. In a constantly changing work environment, honing skills and keeping up with the latest technology is an essential priority for all companies that intend to remain competitive. Yet right now, the average company spends roughly 1.5 percent of its payroll on employee training and education. To my mind, that figure needs to double.

The United States still offers the best employment opportunities in the world. But if it is to stay that way, it will require a new social compact in the workplace. That doesn't mean guaranteed job security—which is impossible in today's highly competitive world. But it does mean employment security; ensuring that workers acquire the training and skills to move up the ladder, if not at one company, then at another.

For employees, it means that instead of thinking of themselves as victims, they should be investing in their own futures. And, in exchange for their hard work, they should insist that corporations keep up their end by helping to fund the cost of training, and by rewarding financially those who help themselves.

Mr. HOLLINGS. This particular article refutes the statement by the Senator from Connecticut. Big business is doing fine. They are not worried about new products. They are competitive. They are making the biggest profits. It goes right back to the official hearings we had with the conference report, risk managers. Over 432 risks managers sat there and said it was less than 1 percent of the cost of the product.

So we can hear these statements that this is the No. 1 thing they are worried about, and everything of that kind and holding things back, but under the Cornell study, product liability cases are diminished by 44 percent in the last decade and, yes, industries are suing industries like Pennzoil suing Texaco for a $10 billion verdict. Those things occur.

But this is not the No. 1 interest of business. The No. 1 interest of business, that I have been trying to defend in the Commerce Department and ask what they are interested in, they say they are interested in capital gains. ''We are not going to really spread our influence around. On the contrary, we are going to fight for capital gains and let the Commerce Department and the President take care of that.''

I yield 7 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I thank my colleague. I thank the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to consider the faces of people who will be hurt by this provision. Think of LeeAnn Gryc from my State of Minnesota who was 4 years old when the pajamas she was wearing ignited, leaving her with second and third degree burns over 20 percent of her body. An official with the company that made the pajamas had written a memo 14 years earlier stating that because the material they used was so flammable the company was ''sitting on a powder keg.''

This bill contains a cap on the punitive damages a plaintiff could receive. How would this affect LeeAnn? We are talking about people, we are talking about consumers. They may not be the heavy hitters, or the big players, but that is who we are talking about.

It all depends on what kind of compensatory damages the jury awards. Are we really willing to sit here in Washington and dictate to LeeAnn and other victims of defective products how much is enough to punish and deter the people who hurt them?

The jury's role. By capping punitive damages this bill takes power out of the hands of the jury. This particularly confounds me. People on juries are fine when they are electing Members of the Senate to their jobs. But apparently some of my colleagues do not trust them to sit in judgment of their peers. They sit in judgment of us, do they not? Are they not usually the finders of facts? How is it that they lose their competence in the short trip from the ballot box to the jury box?

Elimination of joint liability. In Minnesota we struggled with this problem and we have come to a middle ground. Joint liability only applies to wrongdoers who are over 15 percent responsible. But this bill would say that Minnesota's solution is not good enough. This bill would preempt Minnesota's law with an extreme measure, one that my State at least has chosen not to embrace.

Again, Mr. President, real people, faces I would like my colleagues to see before they vote. Nancy Winkleman, a Minnesotan I met last year who was in a car crash. Because a defective car underride bar failed to operate properly, the hood of her car went under the back of a truck and the passenger compartment came into direct contact with the rear end of the larger vehicle. Without the benefit of her car's own bumper to protect her, she was severely injured, losing part of her tongue and virtually all of her lower jaw. Despite reconstructive surgery, her face and ability to speak will never be the same.

I cannot imagine the pain that Nancy must have undergone or the pain that she undergoes every day, nor can my colleagues. If one of the responsible parties in her case was unable to pay their fair share, should she go uncompensated for some of that pain or should the other responsible parties have to make it up? Unless you are certain, colleagues, that it is more important to protect those other parties, who usually have been found to be negligent, than to compensate Nancy for her pain, you should not support this bill. If you do, you will be hurting real people, you will be hurting real people.

Statute of repose now cut down to 15 years. Jimmy Hoscheit was a boy at work on his family farm when he was hurt. I met Jimmy last year when he was in my office telling me his story. He was using common farm machinery, consisting of a tractor, a mill, and a blower, all linked together with a power transfer system, much like the drivetrain on a truck. The power of the tractor was transferred to the other equipment by way of a spinning shaft, a shaft covered by a freely spinning metal sleeve. The sleeve is on bearings so if you were to grab the sleeve, it would stop moving, while the shaft inside would continue to powerfully rotate at a very high speed.

Apparently when Jimmy leaned over the shaft to pick up a shovel, his jacket touched the sleeve and got caught on it. However, instead of spinning free on the internal shaft, the sleeve somehow was bound to the shaft, became wrapped in Jimmy's jacket and tore Jimmy's arms off. His father found him flat on his back on the other side of the shaft. The manufacturer could have avoided all of this if it just provided a simple and inexpensive chain to anchor the shaft to the tractor.

I ask you, should Jimmy be able to bring suit against the manufacturer? What if the product was over 15 years old? Does that make his injury and his pain any less severe?

A similar question can be asked about 6-year-old Katie Fritz, another Minnesotan whose family I was privileged to meet when we began consideration of the bill. This is about real people. Katie was killed when a defective garage door opener failed to reverse direction, pinning her under the door, and crushing the breath out of her.

We do not know how long some of these machines can last. If that garage was at a business and was over 20 years old, Katie's family could not have sued the manufacturer. There would not be any question of capping punitive damages or having joint liability for noneconomic damages. They simply would not be allowed to the courthouse door.

Mr. President—the big picture—on behalf of people like LeeAnn, Jimmy, Katie, Nancy, real people, consumers, I urge my colleagues to reach into their hearts and do the right thing, and to reject this bill. I yield the floor.

Mr. HOLLINGS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter dated only yesterday from Mothers Against Drunk Driving in opposition to the bill.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MOTHERS AGAINST DRUNK DRIVING,
Irving, TX, March 19, 1996.

Re H.R. 956 Conference Report.

Members of the U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR: On behalf of the more than 3 million members and supporters of Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) and the thousands of victims of drunk drivers crashes in this country, I urge you to oppose the H.R. 956 Conference Report (The Common Sense Product Liability Act of 1996). While it may not have been the intent of the sponsors and supporters of this legislation to limit or restrict the rights of drunk driving crash victims to be fully compensated for the harm they have suffered, this will be one of the unintended consequences of this bill in its present form.

It is clear that alcoholic beverages will fall within the meaning of ''product'' in this bill and the term ''product liability action'' in the bill means ''any civil action brought on any theory of harm caused by a product or product use.'' The limitations and restrictions imposed by this legislation will limit recovery by victims of drunk driving crashes against sellers who irresponsibly serve intoxicated persons or minors who subsequently cause drunk driving crashes killing or seriously injuring innocent victims. Defendants in these dram shop cases will be able to use the defenses and protections provided to them by this legislation to prevent these innocent victims from being fully compensated for the harm they have suffered.

The caps on punitive damages contained in this reform legislation will directly benefit those who irresponsibly serve alcoholic beverages to obviously intoxicated persons and minors in violation of existing laws and in total disregard for the safety of the citizens who drive on our highways. In 1994, 16,589 people were killed and an estimated 950,000 were injured in drunk driving crashes in this country. Punitive damages have historically been allowed against defendants as a means of ''protecting the public'' and ''deterring dangerous conduct.'' I know of no more appropriate case for the imposition of punitive damages without limitations than drunk driving and dram shop cases. The limitations on recovery of non-economic damages and joint and several liability are additional roadblocks this legislation puts in front of drunk driving crash victims.

For the reasons outlined above, MADD urges you to oppose the H.R. 956 Conference Report. The defects and unintended consequences of this bill can be corrected and we can avoid this rush to judgment which will have a devastating impact on drunk driving crash victims.

Sincerely,

KATHERINE PRESCOTT,
National President.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Hawaii.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Hawaii.

Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, I thank my colleague for this opportunity to rise in opposition to the conference report to H.R. 965, the Commonsense Product Liability Legal Reform Act of 1996.

Before I lay out my reasons for objecting to this conference report, I would like to express my dismay that while appointed as a conferee, I was never invited to participate in the conference. I am very disappointed that the legislative process has deteriorated to this level where diverse views are no longer welcome.

A critical analysis of the conference report to H.R. 965 reveals that the balance tips in favor of product producers at the expense of injured women, children, retires, and the poor.

This measure provides a series of limitations on the ability of victims to recover from the manufacturers of defective products, while it expressly exempts the big businesses who support this bill from those requirements.

For example, if company A purchases a piece of factory equipment from company B, and that piece of equipment is defective and explodes, company A can sue company B for all of its lost profits caused by the disruption of company A's business. On the other hand, the family of the poor worker who is operating the machine at the time it exploded must face the limitations in the bill to recover. Further, if the piece of machinery is 15 years old or older, the worker or his family cannot recover at all while the business faces no such limitation.

The punitive damage limitation in this bill causes me tremendous concern. I find it ironic that in the punitive damage section of the bill, it clearly indicates that punitive damages may only be awarded in the most serious cases. Yet later in that same section it provides that the amount of damages that can be recovered for these most serious cases is limited to the greater of 2 times the economic and noneconomic damages of $250,000. That same section further limits the ability to recover damages by creating a special rule protecting individuals of limited net worth and business or entities with a small number of employees. The construction of this section is facially inconsistent with its intent.

I would also like to debunk the myth that punitive damage awards threaten the viability of many business. The evidence indicates otherwise. Punitive damages are rarely awarded in product liability cases. In ''Demystifying the Functions of Punitive Damages in Products Liability: An Empirical Study of a Quarter Century of Verdicts'' (1991), author Michael Rustad concludes that consumer products are responsible for an estimated 29,000 deaths and 30 million injuries each year. Between 1965 and 1990, punitive damages were awarded in only 353 product liability cases—91 of which involved asbestos claims. In addition, he states that approximately 25 percent of these awards were reversed or remanded upon appeal. It is apparent that punitive damage awards do not threaten the viability of businesses.

In addition, this measure discriminates against women, children, and retirees. Women are most likely to be victims of such dangerous products as Dalkon shields, Copper-7 intrauterine devices, high estrogen birth control pills, super-absorbent tampons and silicone gel breast implants. These products all were justly held liable for punitive damage awards and were removed from the market. Had this bill been in effect, punitive damage awards in these cases would have been severely limited and the impetus for these companies to remove these dangerous products from the market may not have been as strong.

H.R. 956 also makes noneconomic damages more difficult to recover. Again, women, children and the poor are disproportionately impacted. It fundamentally alters the traditional concept of joint and several liability by eliminating joint liability. H.R. 956 places the harm caused by defective breast implants, or a women's loss of her ability to bear children, or the disabling of a child, in a secondary position to that of the lost salary of a corporate executive.

The corporate executive who misses work because of an injury caused by a product is unfettered in his ability to recover millions because he can easily establish his economic damages. However, if a young woman loses her ability to ever become a mother because of a defective contraceptive device, she is made to endure additional difficulties to recover compensation and, under the bill, faces the risk of not being able to collect her damages at all since these are noneconomic. This is inherently unfair.

On a very personal note, if I may, Mr. President, thank God that provisions of this law were not part of the American military laws at the time I had the privilege of serving this country in uniform. On May 30, 1947, I was retired, not as a general, not as a colonel, but as a small captain. I was awarded at that time the sum of $175 a month for the loss of my arm. I would like to believe that my arm is worth much more than that. But Uncle Sam did not forget us. That amounted to $2,100 per year. Today, Uncle Sam, understanding the rising cost of living, is now awarding me $19,140 a year tax free.

In addition to that, Uncle Sam sees to it that if I desire, I can receive medical services for the rest of my life. The same thing for my spouse. I have received free education as a result, receiving my law degree. If this provision was in effect at that time, I would end up receiving $175 a month, if I am lucky, for the rest of my life. In other words, Mr. President, Uncle Sam has paid me in damages, and never once did they ask me, is this the most serious of cases? They did not ask me about strict liability. It made no difference whether I fell off a jeep or was struck by a shell. I received in excess of $383,000. I think the least that can be done is to do the same for fellow citizens.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GORTON). The Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. President, I rise today to speak in support of the Commonsense Product Liability Legal Reform Act of 1996. This piece of legislation has been crafted carefully. It is tempered. It is moderate. It is bipartisan.

We now live in the most litigious country on Earth, and we are paying a huge price as a result. Year after year, companies are forced to lay off workers or shut down entirely because of the staggering cost of product liability insurance or because of the threat of outrageous damage awards that in many cases bear no relation whatever to the underlying claims. This bill will help stem that tide. It will help preserve jobs, particularly manufacturing jobs, and it will help create jobs.

At a time in our country when there is so much focus on worker unrest, so much focus on the loss of good manufacturing jobs, when there is so much talk about finding ways to stimulate the economy, this is an easy call. It is a bipartisan bill. It is supported by 90 percent of the American public. We all know that the only real group that opposes it is a small band of plaintiff's attorneys who have become wealthy at the expense of the public at large. It is the trial lawyers and a few special interest groups that are preventing this bill from becoming law.

Mr. President, critics of the House-Senate compromise are concerned about the violation of States rights. This is one area where a federalism argument simply does not hold water. The Framers of the Constitution valued local decisionmaking and they wanted to avoid an overly centralized Federal Government. However, one important exception they recognized was the need to have Federal control over interstate commerce and trade.

Alexander Hamilton, in Federalist No. 11, wrote about his concerns that diverse and conflicting State regulations would be an impediment to American merchants. Today, the abuses in our product liability system have reached the point where they are, indeed, a major impediment to interstate commerce. The Commerce Department had reported that over 70 percent of the goods manufactured in a particular State are shipped out of that State and sold. Moreover, the National Governors' Association, the obvious protector of States rights, has adopted three resolutions calling on Congress to enact a uniform Federal product liability law, most recently in January of 1995.

Opponents of this legislation have also argued the so-called hard cap on punitive damages. But there is no hard cap on punitive damages. The bill permits punitive damages to be awarded against large businesses up to the greater of $250,000 or two times the claimant's compensatory damages. It is critical to note that it is two times compensatory damages, not just economic damages. Two times compensatory damages will still permit huge punitive damages awards in almost all product liability cases where such punitive damages are appropriate.

The damage awards in this country will still be astronomically higher than in any other industrialized nation, but at least there will be some limits that businesses can hang their hats on. If that were not enough, the trial judge is given the discretion to award even more if he or she thinks it is appropriate. This is not a hard cap. All it does is inject an element of predictability into our legal system.

If you asked most citizens in this country whether or not they think it is fair to cut off lawsuits 15 years after a product was manufactured, most would agree that is eminently reasonable. And even this modest limit does not apply in cases involving motor vehicles, vessels, aircraft, passenger trains, or in any case involving toxic harm.

At the end of the day, when you finish sifting through the opponents' concerns with this bill, it is clear that the trial lawyers are exercising an inordinate amount of political muscle. Their opposition to this bill is clearly in their own interest. But it is bad politics, and it is terrible policy.

American workers and American businesses need this bill. Industry trade associations report that today 30 percent of the price of a step ladder, 33 percent of the price of a general aviation aircraft, 95 percent of the price of a childhood vaccine are all due to costs of product liability.

I urge my colleagues to support this bill, and I urge the President to rethink his position.

I yield the floor.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 9 minutes, 22 seconds.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I yield 7 minutes, 22 seconds to the distinguished Senator from California.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I supported the Senate-passed product liability bill, and I am very proud of that. I think the findings in the conference report very clearly state why there needs to be a product liability bill, not the least of which is some uniformity all the way across the broad consumer market, known as the United States of America. While I supported the Senate-passed bill, the conference report, I believe, raises some new questions, points of controversy that, since I am not a lawyer, I cannot resolve. I ask one party and they say one thing; I ask another party and they say another. This may mean clarification is needed. It may mean that substantive changes need to be made. But surely, it means, I believe, that we should send this bill back to conference.

I want, very briefly, in the time afforded me, to make five points. The first is the section, or the move of the section, on negligent entrustment. Negligent entrustment, as it was presented in the Senate bill, applied to the entire bill, and now, in this bill, it has been placed in a section on ''Liability Rules Applicable to Product Sellers, Renters, and Lessors.'' This move, I am told, also then places a cap on punitive damages in negligent entrustment actions, and subjects them to the limitations on joint and several liability.

This is a problem to me because, in the event of automobiles and drunk drivers, guns sold or given to people who misuse them, this could have an impact on the kinds and types of suits and the amount of judgments derived therefrom. Therefore, my belief is that this entire issue of negligent entrustment needs to be clarified so that we are certain that the exception applies throughout the entire bill.

Second the statute of repose. California has no statute of repose. The proposed statute of repose in the Senate bill was 20 years, and now it is down to 15 years in the conference report. The bill provides, however, that any State with a statute of repose that is under 15 years prevails. California, with no statute of repose, cannot have a higher standard and maintain no statute of repose. But a State with a lesser standard of, let us say, a 10-year statute of repose, can prevail. To me, this is unsatisfactory. For my vote, I would have a very difficult time having a statute of repose in a bill which is less than 20 years.

I believe it sends a wrong signal to U.S. manufacturers. I believe it sends a message to manufacturers all across this great land that they can, in fact, manufacture less durable and perhaps even less safe products, because their time for liability is cut dramatically, certainly from no statute of repose to a 15-year statute of repose. This is a dramatic change in the bill.

The third point is the definition of durable goods. Durable goods are subject to the statute of repose. In the definition on page 4 of the conference report, section 101, subsection 7, one comma has been deleted and one has been added. I must say that what could be just grammatical has caused a maelstrom of interpretation and misinterpretation. And I, frankly, do not know who to believe.

This may be a drafting error, or it may be an intentional change in meaning. But many people point out to me that this change of a comma could change the definition of durable goods.

The fourth point I would like to make has to do with the additur provision, and this relates to punitive damages. I believe it needs further clarification. As I understand the additur provision in this conference bill, it provides that if a State has a cap on punitive damages and does not authorize an additur, then a judge is unlikely to have the authority to award punitive damages above the State cap. I believe this needs to be cleared up by the conference committee.

My fifth point has to do with biomaterials. I come from a State with many responsible companies who are very concerned about the possibility of losing their supplies of raw materials. They need this legislation because they produce lifesaving devices, whether they be pacemakers, or heart starters. I was visited by a very young woman who had a condition in which her heart periodically would just stop, and she had an implanted device that would restart her heart. Her heart would sometimes stop when she was asleep. The people that made some of the materials that went into this device essentially would not provide it absent some release from liability.

But, as presently drafted, biomaterials suppliers—including suppliers of component parts—can be liable only if they fail to meet their contract specifications, or if they fail to properly register their materials with the FDA.

First, I think we need a better definition of what is a ''component part'' in the bill to ensure that this does not sweep too broadly, and to ensure that this language would not allow certain manufacturers of devices to escape liability. I believe it is also very important that raw materials suppliers who know that their products pose a potential hazard and fail to disclose such harm should be held liable for knowing behavior.

I thank the Chair.

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, this should be a great day. It should be a great day for small business. It should be a great day for employees of those businesses. It should be a great day for consumers. It should be a great day for those unfortunate enough to be injured by defective products.

As chairman of the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation I am extremely pleased and proud to see the Senate take up consideration of the conference report to H.R. 965, the Commonsense Product Liability Legal Reform Act of 1996. This is historic. Never in almost two decades of work have we gotten this far. I am deeply saddened, however, by the President's announced intention to veto this important legislation.

I am also quite puzzled. You see, as Governor of Arkansas, Bill Clinton in August 1991, sat on the committee that drafted and unanimously approved the National Governors Association's [NGA] first resolution supporting product liability reform. Governor Clinton also went on record in support of the second resolution favoring product liability reform passed by the NGA.

Mr. President, America is plagued by frivolous lawsuits. Every day, our economy is victimized by ridiculous damage awards, both real and threatened. This conference agreement represents a substantial reform of the legal system that allows this abuse. It is tragic some have allowed this effort to formulate meaningful policy to be overtaken by political posturing. It is election year politics at its worst. The sad thing is the posturing is being done for the benefit of certain special interests. Tragically, if the special interests win, the American people lose.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE STRUGGLE FOR REFORM

Mr. President, over the past 15 years the Commerce Committee has held 23 days of hearings on product liability reform. In this Congress, the companion measure to H.R. 965—S. 565—was reported by the Commerce Committee on April 6, 1995. The bill marked the seventh reform bill reported by the Commerce Committee since 1981. I have been involved deeply in the product liability reform movement since that time. I was an original cosponsor of the Risk Retention Act that became law in 1981. This legislation provided for liability insurance pools—so-called risk retention groups—for businesses. I chaired Small Business Committee field hearings in Sioux Falls and Rapid City, SD, on this issue in 1985.

Over the years, I sponsored numerous product liability reform bills with some of the great leaders in this area including Senators Kasten and Danforth. These gentlemen are no longer Members of this body, but this legislation is their legacy. I want to commend them for their excellent work. They truly pioneered much of this effort. It has brought us to this point. We would not have gotten this far without them.

Let me also take a moment to commend two of our current colleagues—Senators GORTON and ROCKEFELLER—for their hard work and dedication to this process. They have given years of labor to a cause in which they both are committed and have done so in an extraordinarily bipartisan fashion. I also know Jeanne Bumpus and Trent Erickson of Senator GORTON's staff and Tamera Stanton, Jim Gottlieb, and Ellen Doneski with Senator ROCKEFELLER have given much of the past year, and in some cases more time than that, to this effort. On my own staff, I want to commend Tom Hohenthaner, deputy chief of staff for the Commerce Committee, who has worked this issue for years and in this Congress managed what has often been a tortuous process. I also thank Lance Bultena, counsel for the Consumer Subcommittee, for his dedicated efforts.

Let me next pay tribute to House Judiciary Committee Chairman HENRY HYDE who also served as chairman ofthe conference. HENRY and I were in the same freshman class in the House back in 1974, and I have been honored to serve with him over the years. At the first meeting of the conference, I likened Chairman HYDE to a beacon shining brightly in a field. I would say that his light never wavered in this process and without his fine leadership we would not be here today. Chairman HYDE was assisted in this process by Alan Coffee, general counsel and staff director for the House Judiciary Committee and a savvy veteran of many legislative battles over the years. Diana Schacht and Peter Levinson, both counsels to the Judiciary Committee, and both consummate professionals, also put in a great many hours in this process. Finally, the House Commerce Committee shared jurisdiction over this measure, and I think and commend Chairman BLILEY for his leadership. Robert Gordon, counsel to the House Commerce Committee, proved a dedicated and significant member of the team of staff—all of whom worked so hard on this conference agreement and legislation that preceded it. Again, I thank them all.

I know many—including many of our colleagues in the other body—would have liked to see much broader reform. Indeed, many in this body wanted more. So why this fairly narrow and moderate approach? The short answer is: expansion was not possible. We tried. Last April 24 the Senate began consideration of the legislation. Over the next 2½ weeks—and some 90 hours of debate—the Senate considered and voted on over 30 amendments.

Ultimately, the Senate passed a bill very similar to the legislation reported by the Commerce Committee. In the following months, we negotiated with our colleagues in the other body who had passed a much broader bill. Again, activity centered around the possibility of expanding the scope of the Senate bill. Mr. President, the bill that has emerged from conference is—virtually—the Senate-passed bill. It is extraordinarily close to the legislation we sent out of the Commerce Committee last spring. The Senate should pass it again.

The conference agreement is narrower than many of us would like. However, while limited in scope, it is an excellent piece of legislation. This bill is fair, balanced, and well reasoned. Indeed, it is a moderate package of reforms. It also keeps faith with what we set out to accomplish—it provides substantial reform to a legal system that is broken.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE CONFERENCE AGREEMENT

Mr. President, let me highlight some of those much-needed reforms:

Punitive damages. The conference agreement provides that punitive damages may be awarded in a product liability case if a plaintiff proves, by ''clear and convincing evidence,'' that his or her harm was caused by the defendant's ''conscious, flagrant indifference to the safety of others.'' This language is to make clear that punitive damages are only to be awarded in the most serious of cases.

Mr. President, a fact all too often overlooked in this debate is that punitive damages are not intended as compensation for injured parties. They are punishment. Punishment of defendants found to have injured others in a conscious manner. They are used much as fines in the criminal system. However, currently there are two big differences. First, unlike the criminal system, there are virtually no standards for when punitive damages may be awarded. Second, when awarded, there are no clear guidelines as to their amount. This agreement addresses both problems. It brings uniformity to the punishment and deterrence phase of product liability law by providing a meaningful standard for when punitives are to be imposed and at what level.

Under the conference agreement—except in cases against small businesses—punitive damages in a product liability case may be awarded up to two times compensatory damages or $250,000, whichever is greater. An additur provision permits the judge to award punitive damages beyond this limit if certain factors are met, but the judge cannot exceed the amount of the jury's original award.

When the defendant is a small business—or similar entity—with less than 25 full-time employees, punitive damages may not exceed $250,000 or two times compensatory damages, whichever is less. The additur provision does not apply to small businesses.

Finally, either party can request the trail be conducted in two phases, one dealing with compensatory damages and the other dealing with punitive damages. The same jury is used in both phases.

Joint and several liability. Joint liability is abolished for noneconomic damages—such as pain and suffering—in product liability cases. Joint liability is a concept allowing one defendant to be held liable for all damages even though others also were responsible for the damage caused. What are the consequences? Too often, it means one person is held responsible for the conduct of another. True wrongdoers are not held liable. Indeed, consumers ultimately pay these claims—either through higher prices, loss of service, or higher insurance premiums.

Therefore, as to noneconomic damages, under this bill defendants would be liable only in direct proportion to their responsibility for the claimant's harm—so-called several liability. This section goes a long way toward correcting one of the most often abused aspects of our current civil legal system. It would ensure defendants would be held liable based on their degree of fault or responsibility, not the depth of their pockets.

Mr. President, this is an issue on which I have worked for many years. In 1986, I fought to strengthen proposed product liability legislation, S. 2760, with an amendment regarding joint and several liability. My amendment—which passed the Commerce Committee—also abrogated joint and several liability for noneconomic damages in product liability cases. I am proud the spirit of my amendment of a decade ago lives on in this legislation.

Alcohol and drugs defense. Under this bill, the defendant in a product liability case has an absolute defense if the plaintiff was under the influence of intoxicating alcohol, illegal drugs, or misuse of a prescription drug and as a result of this influence was more than 50 percent responsible for his or her own injuries.

The philosophy behind such a provision is simple. A society working hard to discourage alcohol and drug abuse must not sanction such abuse by allowing individuals to collect damages when their disregard of a vital societal norm is the primary cause of an accident.

Misuse and alteration defense. Under this legislation, a defendant's liability in a product liability case is reduced to the extent a claimant's harm is due to the misuse or alternation of a product. Why should the manufacturer of a machine pay for injuries I sustain because I remove safety guards put on in the factory?

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations for product liability claims is established as 2 years from when the claimant discovered or reasonably should have discovered both the harm and its cause. A plaintiff may not file suit after this time.

This is an excellent example of how this legislation would benefit victims. Under current law, some States establish the time of injury as the point at which the time for bringing a claim begins to run. Often this is not a problem. However, in cases in which the harm has a latency period or manifests itself only after repeated exposure to the product, the claimant may not know immediately if he or she has been harmed or the cause of the harm.

This bill thus would reduce the number of victims who, having otherwise meritorious claims, are denied justice solely on the basis of the statute of limitations in the State in which they file their claim.

Statute of repose. A statute of repose of 15 years is established for certain durable goods. A durable good is defined by the bill as one having either: a normal life expectancy of 3 or more years, or a normal life expectancy that can be depreciated under applicable IRS regulations; and is: first, used in trade or business; second, held for the production of income; or third, sold or donated to a governmental or private entity for the production of goods, training, demonstration or any similar purpose.

No product liability suit may be filed for injuries related to the use of a durable good 15 years after its delivery unless the defendant made an express warranty in writing as to the safety of the specified product involved, and the warranty was longer than 15 years. In such a case, the statute of repose does not apply until that warranty period is complete. The statute of repose section does not apply in cases involving toxic harm.

States would be free to impose shorter statutes of repose and to cover more than just durable goods. For instance, the House-passed version of this bill would have applied the statute of repose to all goods.

The need for a Federal statute of repose was presented well by a fellow South Dakotan, Art Kroetch, chairman of Scotchman Industries, Inc., a small manufacturer of machine tools located in Philip, SD. Last year during hearings, Art told the Commerce Committee how vital product liability reform is to the ability of American manufacturers to compete in the global marketplace.

Art told me that under the current patchwork of liability laws, his company pays twice as much for product liability insurance as it does for research and development. Mr. President, the system is broken.

Workers compensation subrogation standards. This provision preserves an employer's right to recover workers compensation benefits from a manufacturer whose product harmed a worker—for instance, the manufacturer of a machine used in a business which injures an employee—unless the manufacturer can prove, by clear and convincing evidence, that the employer caused the injury—for example by maintaining an unsafe work environment or taking safety guards off the machine.

This section of the bill makes no changes to the amount of damages an injured worker can recover in such cases. It merely provides the insurer or employer will not be able to recover workers compensation benefits it paid to an injured employee if the employer or a coemployee is at fault.

Biomaterials Access assurance. In certain actions in which a plaintiff alleges harm from a medical implant, title II of the legislation allows biomaterial suppliers to be dismissed from the action without extensive discovery or other legal costs. The term ''biomaterial'' refers to the raw materials—such as plastic tubing or copper wiring—used as part of an implantable medical device.

The legislation does not affect the ability of plaintiffs to sue manufacturers or sellers of medical implants. However, it releases biomaterials suppliers from lawsuits if the generic raw material used in the medical device met contract specifications, and if the biomaterials supplier cannot be classified as either a manufacturer or seller of the medical implant.

During our hearings last year, the Commerce Committee heard compelling testimony that without such changes in the law, the millions of Americans who depend upon a variety of implantable medical devices will be at grave risk. Suppliers of biomaterials have found the risks and costs of responding to litigation related to medical implants far exceeds potential revenues from the sale of the components they manufacture.

Indeed, several major suppliers of raw materials used in the manufacture of implantable medical devices have announced they will limit—or altogether cease—shipments of crucial raw materials to device manufacturers. Each of the suppliers indicated these were rational and necessary business decisions given the current legal framework.

PRODUCT LIABILITY AND SMALL BUSINESS

Mr. President, during the last Congress it was my privilege to serve as ranking member of the Committee on Small Business. As a member of that panel for many years, I know product liability reform is essential to the future health and success of America's small businesses. Indeed, according to a Small Business Administration study, small firms may be affected more negatively than large firms by nonuniform product liability laws.

This is because small businesses do not enjoy economies of scale in production and litigation costs. In addition, they are less able to bargain with potential plaintiffs. Finally, their limited assets make adequate insurance much more difficult to obtain. The cost of product liability insurance in the United States is 15 times higher than that of similar insurance in Japan and 20 times higher than in European countries. We simply cannot compete.

America's small businesses need rationality and uniformity in the product liability system if they are to compete effectively in the global marketplace. As I explained previously, this point was at the heart of the testimony given by Art Kroetch of Scotchman Industries in Philip, SD, at committee hearings last year.

It also was the point made to me by Jim Cope of Morgen Manufacturing in Yankton, SD. Jim calls product liability reform a jobs issue for our State. Morgen has had to lay off workers and has been unable to give raises to other employees because of losses due to product liability claims—claims that never have resulted in a verdict against his company. Nevertheless, Morgen Manufacturing is forced to spend tens of thousands of dollars defending itself.

To Jim Cope—and many small business owners just like him—tort reform means more jobs for South Dakota and the Nation.

PRODUCT LIABILITY REFORM AND CONSUMERS

Mr. President, opponents of this legislation tell us it would hurt the American consumer. Don't you believe it. Aside from the jobs issue, product liability reform would benefit consumers in numerous ways.

It would lower the cost of U.S. goods. The current product liability system accounts for 20 percent of the cost of a ladder, 50 percent of the cost of a football helmet, and up to 95 percent of the cost of some pharmaceuticals.

Reform also would foster competition and provide consumers with a greater selection of products from which to choose. Studies tell us 47 percent of U.S. companies have withdrawn products from the market and 39 percent have decided not to introduce products due to liability concerns. As a result, Americans depend on single sources to provide such vital needs as vaccines for polio, measles, rubella, rabies, diphtheria, and tetanus.

This bill also would encourage safety improvements. By contrast, the current system actually discourages companies from engaging in research. Many fear research aimed at improving an existing product will be used against them to demonstrate they knew the product was not as safe as it could be. Certainty in the legal system would reduce this counterproductive effect.

In addition, the legislation would encourage wholesalers and retailers to deal with responsible and reputable manufacturers. This, in turn, would lead to better products for consumers. Under the conference agreement, product sellers would be legally responsible for products manufactured by companies that are insolvent or do not have assets in the United States. This should increase the quality of the products found on the shelves of U.S. businesses.

Mr. President, I have just outlined five ways this bill benefits consumers. First, it will mean more jobs. Second, it will lower the cost of the goods they purchase. Third, it will mean a greater selection of goods from which to choose. Fourth, it will encourage testing to make goods safer. Finally, it will help to maintain and, in some cases, improve the quality of products available to consumers.

A bill that is bad for consumers? How can they say that with a straight face?

PRODUCT LIABILITY REFORM AND THE INJURED

Mr. President, we also have been subjected to a great deal of nonsense that this bill would limit the rights of victims. Opponents paint the picture of injured victims being harmed further when the courthouse door hits them in the face.

Not only does this conference agreement leave intact a full range of victims rights, it actually improves the current system in at least two very critical ways. First, the system we have today is plagued by delay. Second, compensation that eventually is received often is inequitable. Curtailing frivolous lawsuits—all this legislation really seeks to achieve—would significantly improve both problems.

Currently, product liability suits take a very long time to process. A General Accounting Office study found, on average, that product liability cases took 2½ years to move from filing to trial court verdict. Other studies indicate it is more like 5 years. Most product liability cases are settled before trial, but even these cases suffer from delay. One plaintiff's attorney explained that ''most settlement negotiations get serious only a week or so before trial is scheduled to begin.''

Delay often results in undercompensation of victims. Many victims are forced to settle their claims for less than their full losses so they can obtain compensation more quickly. These individuals often are forced into this decision because of inadequate resources to cover medical and rehabilitation expenses while their case drags on.

Another way in which the current system inequitably compensates victims concerns proportionality. Numerous studies demonstrate the current tort system grossly overpays people with small losses, while underpaying people with the most serious losses.

A bill that limits victims rights? Try a bill that strengthens them.

THE TRUTH ABOUT PRODUCT LIABILITY REFORM

There you have it, Mr. President—the truth about what it is we are trying to accomplish. The truth about how this bill would help consumers, small businesses and, yes, even those injured in the use of a product.

The truth is, we would not change anything that is right with America's current civil justice system. Rather, we would curb the abuse of frivolous lawsuits that cost each and every one of us in a wide variety of ways each and every day. The courthouse doors stay open. Consumers retain a full complement of rights. Lawsuits would continue to provide a strong check on corporate behavior. Concepts such as contingent fees would continue to allow citizens with limited means to bring suit.

The truth, Mr. President, is that election year politics threaten to kill this effort. The truth is, we all lose if that happens. The truth is the American people know the current system is broken and want us to fix it. A recent poll conducted in my home State found 83 percent of South Dakotans responding feel ''the present liability system has problems and should be improved,'' while only 10 percent said ''the present liability lawsuit system is working well and should not be changed.''

The truth is, that out there in the real America, this is not viewed as a partisan issue. Seventy-eight percent of Democrats, 83 percent of independents, and 88 percent of Republicans in South Dakota responding to the survey I just quoted say there are problems that need to be fixed. Mr. President, the message is clear. Our constituents do not believe this should be a political fight. I cannot for the life of me understand why some among us wish to make it so.

We should adopt this conference agreement. This body approved a virtually identical bill last year. Nothing done in conference should change anyone's reasoning. This is a moderate and reasoned bill. Let us do what is right. Adopt the conference agreement and send it on to the President. Hopefully, he will remember the strong commitment he demonstrated to product liability on two separate occasions just a few short years ago. Hopefully, he will not allow special interests to continue playing politics. The stakes are simply too high.

THE NEED TO ADDRESS LIABILITY FOR BIOMATERIALS

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, this bill contains a very important provision ensuring the availability of raw materials and component parts for implantable medical devices. This provision is necessary if Americans are to have continued access to a wide variety of life-saving devices, such as brain shunts, heart valves, artificial blood vessels, and pacemakers. To address this issue, Senator LEIBERMAN and I cosponsored the Biomaterials Access Assurance Act of 1994, which has been incorporated in the Product Liability Fairness Act which we are debating today.

Currently, the manufacturers and suppliers of materials used in implantable medical devices are subject to substantial legal liability for selling relatively small amounts of materials to medical device manufacturers. These sales generate relatively small profits and are often used for purposes beyond their direct control. Due to their small profit margins and large legal vulnerability for these sales, some of the manufacturers and suppliers of these materials are now refusing to provide them for use in medical devices.

It is absolutely essential that a continued supply of raw materials and component parts is available for the invention, development, improvement, and maintenance of medical devices. Most of these devices are made with materials and parts that are not designed or manufactured specifically for use in implantable devices. Their primary use is in nonmedical products. Medical device manufacturers use only small quantities of these raw materials and component parts, and this market constitutes a small portion of the overall market for such raw materials.

While raw materials and component parts suppliers do not design, produce or test the final medical implant, they have been sued in cases alleging inadequate design and testing of, or warnings related to use of, permanently implanted medical devices. The cost of defending these suits often exceeds the profits generated by the sale of materials. This is the reason that some manufacturers and suppliers have begun to cease supplying their products for use in permanently implanted medical devices.

Unless alternative sources of supply can be found, the unavailability of raw materials and component parts will lead to unavailability of life-saving and life-enhancing medical devices. The prospects for development of new sources of supply for the full range of threatened raw materials and component parts are remote, as other suppliers around the world are refusing to sell raw materials or component parts for use in manufacturing permanently implantable medical devices in the United States.

The product liability concerns that are causing the unavailability of raw materials and component parts for medical implants is part of a larger product liability crisis in this country. Immediate action is necessary to ensure the availability of raw materials and component parts for medical devices so that Americans have access to the devices they need. Addressing this problem will solve one important aspect of our broken medical product liability system.

This issue came to my attention when I was contacted by one of my constituents, Linda Flake Ransom, about daughter Tara who requires a silicon brain shunt. Without a shunt, due to Tara's condition called hydrocephalus, excess fluid would build up in her brain, increasing pressure, and causing permanent brain damage, blindness, paralysis, and ultimately death. With the shunt, she is a healthy, happy, and productive straight A student with enormous promise and potential.

Tara has already undergone the brain shunt procedure five times in her brief life. However, the next time that she needs to replace her shunt, it is not certain that a new one will be available due to the unavailability of shunt materials. This situation is a sad example that our medical liability system is out of control. It is tragic, but not surprising, that manufacturers have decided not to provide materials if they are subject to tens of millions of dollars of potential liability for doing so.

It is essential that individuals such as Tara continue to have access to the medical devices they need to stay alive and healthy. Addressing this issue by enacting the Product Liability Act would help to ensure the ongoing availability of materials necessary to make these devices. It would not, in any way, protect negligent manufacturers or suppliers of medical devices, or even manufacturers or suppliers of biomaterials that make negligent claims about their products. However, it would protect manufacturers and suppliers whose materials are being used in a manner that is beyond their control.

Mr. President, we must act today to ensure the continued availability of biomaterials to ensure that the lives of Tara and thousands of other Americans are not jeopardized. I ask unanimous consent that a column from the Wall Street Journal entitled ''Lawyers May Kill My Daughter'' be printed in the RECORD. In this column, Tara's mother eloquently describes her daughter's condition and the need for this legislation.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Wall Street Journal]

LAWYERS MAY KILL MY DAUGHTER

(By Linda Ransom)

Our daughter Tara was diagnosed at birth with hydrocephalus—sometimes called ''water on the brain.'' In the old days, there was no treatment for hydrocephalus. Most babies diagnosed with it died within months. The lucky few who survived were severely handicapped. These days, the only medical intervention that works is a surgically implanted device called a shunt, made of silicone. The shunt is a tube and a pump that diverts excess fluid from Tara's brain.

Kids outgrow shunts, which is why Tara has already had five shunt surgeries. She will need more. There are no guarantees that there won't be complications from the surgeries—she's already had meningitis, hypotonia and temporary blindness. But before the new flexible silicone plastics were developed, shunts were not successful. We know that there are no guarantees even with a silicone shunt, but at least we have something that works.

Tara has come a long way. Eight years old, she has mastered skipping, jumping rope, roller skating and all the other things that kids do at her age. Until this year, she didn't even need glasses. She never read the ''risk'' statistics because she has been too busy reading the original 14 books of the Wizard of Oz series. Tara is currently in the third grade at Magnet Traditional School in Phoenix. She has been the top student in her class for the past two years, with most of her skills well above the fifth grade level.

More importantly, Tara is the perfect example of hope—hope in the skill of her surgeons, in advances in medical technology, and improvements in the shunt itself. She is also the symbol of our faith—faith in our belief that God's miracles are the hands of the surgeons and the minds of the scientists who make the discoveries and create the devices.

Without a shunt, however, she faces increased pressure in her brain leading to progressive retardation, blindness, paralysis and death. In the U.S., there are approximately 50,000 hydrocephalics like Tara depending on shunts to stay alive. That is about the same number of Americans who died in Vietnam. Hydrocephalics will never get their own wall in Washington, but they would leave behind just as many devastated families.

Although scientists are working on new and better shunts, no one can guarantee that a shunt will be available the next time Tara needs one. Because of lawsuit abuse, the silicone from which the shunt is made may no longer be available.

Dow Corning, the only manufacturer of raw silicone used in shunts, last year filed for bankruptcy as a result of thousands of lawsuits against their silicone breast implants. (These implants were recently found to be safe in numerous studies, including a Harvard report released in the current Journal of the American Medical Association.) Despite a preponderance of evidence that silicone products are safe, lawyers have signaled that they will now make all silicone devices a focus of their next big class action.

Because of liability and legal blackmail, chemical companies are no longer willing to sell the raw materials that go into these desperately needed products—from pacemakers and heart values, to knee joints and cataract lenses. For Tara's shunt, there are no alternative materials or suppliers that can be used.

No one denies there should be just compensation for gross errors, like the man in Florida who had the wrong leg amputated. But how can anyone be for speculative lawsuits against all silicone products when people desperately need these devices to live? How can anyone put the interests of a small group of trial lawyers seeking the next big class action lawsuit over the lives of children?

This lottery system creates big winners, but it also creates new losers. In Sara's case, no amount of money can buy a product that may no longer be manufacured because of a lack of raw materials—even if it is a life-saving device.

Lack of availability is creating a black market for medical devices in other countries. Tara's neurosurgeon told us that shunts are so scarce in Russia today, they are removed from bodies during autopsies and then used in new patients. Would you want a used device if you needed a pacemaker? Would you want to buy a shunt on the black market? Would you want your child to be on a waiting list for one?

The good news is there are reform efforts under-way in Arizona and at the federal level. The Senate is planning to vote, as early as today, on legislation to place reasonable limits on punitive damages and eliminate unfair allocations of liability in all civil cases. This would protect all Americans—not just the manufacturers of medical products but also small businesses, service providers, local governments and nonprofit groups. Above all, it would save children like Tara. Unfortunately, even if the bill passes, President Clinton has said he will veto it.

I'm not a legal expert. I'm just a desperate mother. But I know that reasonable changes must be made to protect everyone. Enact civil justice reform. Don't take hope away from Tara.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the conference report to H.R. 956, The Commonsense Product Liability Legal Reform Act of 1995.

This is an important piece of legislation that is the result of more than a decade's worth of effort. I would like to congratulate the members of the Conference Committee, led by Senators GORTON and ROCKEFELLER, on their diligence in coming up with a final conference report.

This bill will help to reign in unnecessary, costly, and time-consuming product liability cases. There is a lot of talk in this town about cutting regulations and making American companies more competitive. But when the talk is over nothing much has changed.

The product liability bill originally passed the Senate more than 10 months ago after prolonged debate. The final conference report is similar to the Senate-passed bill in scope and focus rather than the wide-sweeping reform found in the House bill.

This bill is conspicuous not for what is in it, but for what is missing. The House approved sweeping legal reform last year that would have addressed other civil cases, besides products, including lawsuits against doctors, charities, and volunteer organizations.

However, it does have important provisions on punitive damages, joint and several liability, statute of limitations, statute of repose, workers' compensation subrogation standards. It also covers product sellers and States rights.

This bill does not work against consumers; nor is it for manufacturers. In fact many proponents of products liability reform who had hoped and worked for broader reform are disappointed in its narrow scope. H.R. 956 merely attempts to block the free-for-all that has taken hold of our court system.

Everybody wins under this bill. Consumers will see products ranging from football helmets to life-saving new drugs become more widely available and less costly.

And it will not limit the legitimate rights of victims to sue or to receive full compensation for their injuries.

This legislation is a good step in the right direction. It will not stop lawsuits, but it will put some restraints on the out-of-control legal battles we have seen in recent years.

That is why it is so frustrating to hear President Clinton say that the reforms included in the bill go too far. This was a bipartisan effort to get a bill that would be enacted into law.

Negotiations between the House and the Senate were tempered with caution to ensure that it would get the support needed to be passed by the Senate.

Once again efforts by reform-minded folks in Congress is threatened by a President that has put plaintiff lawyers interests above those of regular Americans. Politics once again rears its ugly head. The losers are consumers, manufacturers, and true victims who find themselves locked in a case-clogged court system.

Mr. President, once again I ask my colleagues to take a close look at this legislation and vote in support of cloture.

CONTINGENCY-FEE LAWYERS' NONSENSE ABOUT THE COMMONSENSE PRODUCT LIABILITY AND LEGAL REFORM ACT OF 1996

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, a document being circulated by the Association of Trial Lawyers of America [ATLA] and their allied professional interest groups makes the accusation that the conference report on H.R. 956, the Commonsense Product Liability and Legal Reform Act of 1996, is radically different than the bill passed by the Senate. The contingency-fee lawyers' argument about commonsense product liability reform is unfounded.

Anyone who reads the conference report and compares it to the Senate bill can see for themselves that, except for change in the time period, not the narrow scope, of the statute of repose and two slight modifications to the additional amount provision, the conference report is virtually identical to the Senate bill. All familiar with the history of this bill also know House Members delayed going to conference, and then agreeing on a conference report, for almost a year until it became apparent that Senate allies of the trial bar would not support legal fairness legislation going beyond the Senate bill.

Facts are a stubborn thing for these lawyers, because as hard as they try to avoid them or argue around them or simply ignore them, as is often the case, the facts never change. And, the fact is that the product liability conference report is a narrow and limited proposal that almost mirrors the Senate's version of H.R. 956.

STATUTE OF REPOSE

H.R. 956, contains a narrow statute of repose, which places an outer time limit on stale litigation involving a limited category of products, workplace durable goods, that is, machine tools used in the workplace, that are over 15-years old. If the defendant made an express warranty in writing as to the safety of the specified product involved, and the warranty was longer than the period of repose—15 years—then the statute of repose does not apply until that warranty period is complete. The provision does not apply in any case involving a toxic harm, or in any case involving motor vehicles, vessels, aircraft, or trains used primarily to transport passengers for hire.

The only difference between the conference report and the Senate bill is the conference report's 15-year period; the Senate bill contained a 20-year limitation. Otherwise, the provision, including the limited category of products covered, is unchanged.

Approximately one-third of the States have enacted statute of repose legislation; no State provides a more liberal time period or is more favorable to potential plaintiffs in terms of its scope that the narrow provision in H.R. 956. Support is also found by comparing the proposed 15-year period to the laws of industrial nations which directly compete with the U.S. to provide jobs. The EC Product Liability Directive, implemented by 13 European nations and Australia, and Japan's new product liability law, which became effective July 1, 1995, each adopt a 10-year statute of repose which applies to all products. H.R. 956 will help level the playing field against foreign competitors abroad which put American jobs at risk.

The contingency-fee lawyers argue that the conference report extends the statute of repose to virtually all goods. This statement is wrong. Section 101(7) of the conference report narrowly defines the term Durable good as follows:

DURABLE GOOD.—The term ''durable good'' means any product, or any component part of any such product, which has a normal life expectancy of 3 or more years, or is of a character subject to allowance for depreciation under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 and which is—

(A) used in a trade or business;

(B) held for the production of income;

(C) sold or donated to a governmental or private entity for the production of goods, training, demonstration, or any other similar purpose. (Emphasis added).

Both the conference report and the Senate bill only apply to goods which have either a normal life expectancy of 3 or more years or are of a character subject to allowance for depreciation under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 and are used in a trade or business, held for the production of income, or sold or donated to a governmental or private entity for the production of goods, training, demonstration, or any other similar purpose. A machine tool is an example of product with a long life expectancy, subject to depreciation, which is used in trade or business.

The contingency-fee lawyers are misleading the public to believe that the workplace use limitation has disappeared from the conference report. It has not.

THE ADDITIONAL AMOUNT OR ADDITUR PROVISION

Recognizing that a flexible approach to punitive damages is likely to deliver strong bipartisan support for legal reform, opponents have challenged the constitutionality and content of the provision in H.R. 956 which permits a judge a safety valve to go beyond the proportionate limits set for punitive damages against larger businesses and award additional punitive damages (up to the amount of the jury verdict) in cases of egregious conduct in a desperate effort to shake support. The provision is constitutional and represents good public policy.

The conference report additional amount provision, as mentioned, contains two slight modifications to the Senate bill. First, a controversial provision in the Senate bill that would have allowed the defendant the right to a new trial if the court used award an additional amount of punitive damages has been removed from the legislation and does not appear in the conference report. This change was made in response to requests from the administration and several Senators just before the final Senate vote. The absence of the new trial language does not affect the constitutionality of the provision. Research by the U.S. Department of Justice indicates that the safety valve provision in H.R. 956 is constitutional.

Second, the Senate bill language was modified in the conference report to clarify that the additional amount which can be awarded may not exceed the jury's initial award of punitive damages. The jury is not informed of the statutory limit. This language strengthens the constitutional foundation of the provision. Opponents' seventh amendment right to jury trial arguments are without merit.

PRODUCT LIABILITY DOES NOT EXTEND TO NEGLIGENT ENTRUSTMENT

Once again opponents are trying to mislead and confuse product liability actions, which are covered by the conference report, with negligent entrustment cases, which are not covered by the legislation. As in the past, they use attention-getting, but irrelevant examples, such as drunk driving cases and gun violence.

The trial lawyers' hollow argument is based on the applicability section of the conference report, which says that the act applies to any product liability action brought in any State or Federal court on any theory for harm caused by a product. The reason for this broad definition is to assure that the bill covers all theories of product liability, that is, negligence, implied warranty, and strict liability. The argument then looks to the section dealing with product sellers, which imposes liability when a product seller fails to exercise reasonable care with respect to a product. The argument continues that a product seller's failure to exercise reasonable care in selling a gun to a minor, convicted felon, or mentally unstable individual would not be actionable, because the product seller was negligent with respect to the purchaser and not the product.

This argument reflects an obvious misconstruction of the bill. To make this clear, one only need look to the acts covered by product sellers in the conference report. This appears in the definition of product seller. The bill says that it is applicable to product sellers, but only with respect to those aspects of a product, or component part of a product, which are created or affected when before placing the product in the stream of commerce. The definition then addresses those things where the product seller produces, creates, makes, constructs, designs, or formulates * * * an aspect of the product * * * made by another. See §101(14)(B). This is classic product liability.

To make the point crystal clear, the product seller section specifically provides that the conference report does not cover negligent entrustment or negligence in selling, leasing or renting to an inappropriate party. Section 103(d) expressly states: A civil action for negligent entrustment shall not be subject to the provisions of this section but shall be subject to any applicable State law.

For these reasons, the bill would not cover the situation described by the trial lawyers. It also would not cover a seller of liquor in a bar who sold to a person who was intoxicated or a car rental agency that rents a car to a person who is obviously unfit to drive.

In sum, the product liability bill covers product liability, not negligent entrustment or failure to exercise reasonable care with regard to whom products are sold, rented or leased.

TRIAL LAWYERS' OTHER ARGUMENTS ARE SIMILARLY WITHOUT ANY MERIT

The trial lawyers' desperate attempt to portray the conference report as to the right of the Senate bill includes a couple of other minor points which are so hollow and petty that they deserve only brief attention. First, the notion that the conference report expands the product seller section beyond the Senate bill, changes burden of proof rules for persons who irresponsibly misuse or alter products or seek punitive damages is completely meritless. The falsity of these arguments is apparent from the language of the conference report and the Statement of Managers. Second, the argument that the findings in the legislation are not supported is foolish. The subject of Federal product liability reform has been reviewed by Congress for 15 years and been the subject of hundreds of hours of hearings and floor debate.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I am voting for cloture on the conference report on product liability legislation because I believe, on balance, that the issue should be decided by a majority vote of the Senate.

In deciding to support cloture, I am significantly influenced by the fact that the conference report corrects my principal concern: punitive damages on egregious cases.

A decision on whether to support cloture depends upon a variety of factors such as whether there should be more debate to fully air the issues or whether a constitutional issue or some other fundamental matter is involved which warrants a super-majority of 60.

In the past, I have voted for cloture on product liability legislation in circumstance where I thought the matter should reach the Senate floor for a majority vote.

On this state of the record on this bill, I think there should be a majority determination, so I am voting in favor of cloture.

Mr. COATS. Mr. President, I rise today to urge my colleagues' support for this very important product liability reform legislation. This legislation is a conservative, but significant attempt to begin the process of curbing a civil justice system gone awry, a system that has been overwhelmed by the logistical burdens and economic costs of unnecessary and unwarranted litigation.

Mr. President, it is very appropriate that Congress begin to address this broad problem in the area of product liability reform. For it is this area of law that has become, perhaps, the most unruly, and which is having an increasingly adverse impact on the U.S. economy. There are several important provisions contained in this bill. However, I will limit my comments to the section dealing with biomaterials.

The purpose of this section is to provide a defense to the suppliers of biomaterials, or parts, which are used in the manufacture of implantable medical devices. What this section will do is insure the continued availability of the raw materials that are absolutely critical to the development of implantable medical devices. Under the current legal system, claimants who sustain harm from a medical device are encouraged to go after the company with the deepest pockets, the one they can get the most money from. Often times, this entity is the innocent supplier of the raw, biomaterials, that are utilized in the manufacturing of the device. This, in spite of the fact that the biomaterials supplier did nothing to cause the injury or harm.

Mr. President, the result of this vicarious liability on the part of the biomaterials supplier is that, economically, they cannot afford to supply the materials to the manufacturer because the risk of being innocently swept up into litigation is too high. You see, the volume of material they provide to the bio-manufacturer represents such a small percentage of their total sales that it is simply not cost effective to take the risk. They are driven out of the market by the risk of litigation.

Located in my home State, Mr. President, in Bloomington, IN, there is a very special company: Cook International. This company truly represents what is great about our economic system. Unfortunately, it also represents how a system gone awry can harm both business and the consumer.

Cook International manufactures medical devices. One product line is medical catheters. These catheters are high precision devices used for various medical procedures.

A true American success story, Cook International began operating out of the founder's home. It has rapidly grown into an international corporation manufacturing the very finest in precision medical catheters. Vital to these instruments is teflon. However, under the threat of potentially being swept up in a product liability law suit, Cook's suppliers have served notice that they will soon cease to provide the vital materials for the manufacture of these life saving catheters.

Without this legislation, Mr. President, companies like Cook will be forced to find new suppliers of biomaterials or simply cease to manufacture these products. The costs of this result can be measured in lost time, lost jobs, and lost lives.

Mr. President, this is a very simply provision. If a company meets all specifications of the manufacturer; if they are in no way involved in the actual manufacturing or sale of the biomedical device; if they have acted in good faith in meeting their contractual obligation to the manufacturer; they cannot be swept up in a product liability lawsuit simply because they have deep pockets. This is fundamentally fair.

I urge my colleagues to support this very responsible effort at reforming our product liability legal system. I urge them to do so in order to preserve and ensure the growth of the American manufacturing industry. I urge them to do so because it is absolutely vital to our biomedical industry.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, today, I will vote against cloture on the Product Liability Reform Act conference report. I believe the Senate should have a careful and thorough debate on the consequences of this conference report.

We should not close the courthouse door to those with legitimate grievances. Nor should we close debate on an issue as serious and far-reaching as product liability reform. I particularly do not want to close debate when there is disagreement on the consequences on this conference report.

Mr. President, I voted for the Senate's version of the product liability bill. I absolutely believe Congress should enact a reform measure to reduce frivolous law suits and have national uniform product liability standards. I also believe that when it comes to public health and safety, those who are responsible must be held accountable for their actions.

The Senate bill achieved a balance which addressed the valid concerns of the business community while protecting the rights of citizens with legitimate cases. That's why I voted for it.

I made it clear at the time that moving beyond the Senate bill was unacceptable to me. I said, ''To move beyond the Senate bill would be a mistake. The scales on this are delicately balanced. If those scales are tipped, it is unlikely I will support this bill.''

Mr. President, over the past several days, I have carefully assessed the conference report on product liability. I have weighed the arguments made by its supporters and its opponents. Always I have asked whether the conference report represents the same bill I voted for in 1995, or whether it was changed, tilting the delicate balance I talked about last spring.

Let me be clear. I do believe we need reform in this area. My job as a U.S. Senator is to save jobs, to save lives, and to save communities. I do want to reduce frivolous lawsuits. I want to remove barriers which stifle innovation. I want us to be economically competitive.

At the same time, public health and safety are paramount with me. I want consumers to have some assurance that the products they use are safe. And if products are defective and cause harm, consumers should know they can seek justice and redress through our courts. I do not want to shut the courthouse door to people with legitimate claims.

That's why I have grave concerns about this conference report. This conference report does, indeed, tip the balance.

Let me tell you why:

First of all, under the conference agreement, consumer products not covered by the Senate bill will now be covered. The caps and other restrictions under the conference report apply to a wide range of consumer products and appliances, not just to those used in trade or business.

Second, the conference report adds another barrier to people who are seeking punitive damages. Under its provisions, an injured person will now have to demonstrate that the wrongdoer's conduct was the proximate cause of harm instead of merely resulting in harm. This is a much more difficult standard.

Third, the bill could unacceptably shift the burden of proof in cases where the alcohol and drug defense is used. Under our Senate bill, a defendant was required to prove the plaintiff was under the influence of drugs or alcohol. This conference agreement leaves this issue entirely up to the States.

Finally, the conference report fails to specifically state that the 2-year statute of limitations will be suspended in cases where a court has issued a stay or injunction. The Senate bill was quite clear on this point. I fear the conference agreement's silence on this issue will result in injustice.

For instance, in cases similar to the Dalkon Shield case, a court could issue a stay, and the statute of limitations could run out for people who have legitimate claims. I fear this defect in the conference report will prevent women who have suffered from defective products from seeking justice.

Mr. President, I know there are disagreements on each of the points I have just outlined. I know that people interpret the conference agreement's language on these and other issues in very different ways.

But, I must say that these very differences of opinion have reinforced my conclusion that I must oppose cloture and this conference agreement. When there are such deep and serious differences about the impact of this legislation, I must lean on the side of protecting consumers. I must place my obligation to protect public health and safety first.

Therefore, I will oppose cloture today. And I will oppose this conference report.

Mr. President, before concluding my remarks, I must acknowledge the tremendous work done by my esteemed colleague, Senator ROCKEFELLER, on this legislation. He has fought diligently to uphold the Senate's position on product liability reform. And, I must say that he has succeeded on a number of issues. His fight has been a valiant one, and I regret that I am not able to stand by his side today.

Let me just say, this year is not over yet. Many of us want genuine reform we can all support. Although I cannot support the conference agreement before us today, I hope we can go back to the drawing board. I want us to produce a bill which reflects the balance that is needed between the concerns of business and those of consumers. I would be proud to support such a bill.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the conference report to the Product Liability Fairness Act.

I would first like to commend and congratulate my distinguished colleagues, Senators GORTON, ROCKEFELLER, and PRESSLER for their longstanding leadership on this issue and on this bill. They have labored long and hard over several Congresses to come up with a bill that is measured and fair, and that will accomplish meaningful and important reforms of our product liability system.

This bill will benefit American workers and consumers. The only people who may be truly hurt by this bill are some of the Nation's trial lawyers.

I hope this bill will not fall victim to election year politics. It is a good bill and one that we have needed for a long time.

When this bill was on the Senate floor last spring, I supported efforts to broaden it so that its key provisions on punitive damages and joint and several liability would apply to all civil lawsuits.

We succeeded in passing a Dole-Exon-Hatch amendment to broaden the punitive damages provision. Unfortunately, the bill with that provision in it could not survive cloture and the amendment was removed.

While I continue to support broader civil justice reforms—and would particularly like to see this Congress at least enact a bill to protect religious and nonprofit organizations and volunteers from excessive punitive damage awards—I offer my enthusiastic support to this product liability bill.

Even though it is a modest bill, it represents a significant step in the right direction toward removing some of the outrageous litigation abuses in our system.

Anyone who has looked at the substance of this bill will realize that this is a limited, reasoned effort that is long overdue. This bill should not even raise the question of a Presidential veto.

But unfortunately, it has.

The ink was barely dry on this compromise bill before the President, coming to the defense of a limited and narrowly focused interest group—trial lawyers—and at the expense of American competitiveness, American jobs, and American consumers, declared he would veto this bill.

For the sake of our constituents across the Nation, we should be crystal clear about where the opposition to this sensible bill comes from. It does not come from the American people, and it does not come from American workers and consumers.

Product liability reform is supported by the overwhelming majority of Americans. They have indicated their frustration with crazy lawsuits, outrageous punitive damage awards, and abusive litigation. They see a complete lack of common sense in our civil justice system.

They want change from a status quo that has been unfair and that has encouraged irresponsible litigation in this country. It is our responsibility to deliver that change. And it should be the President's responsibility to sign this bill.

Given the President's last-minute veto of the securities litigation reform bill, which came following appeals from a few well-placed, well-heeled trial lawyers, we probably should not be surprised by the President's obstructionist position on this bill.

Despite the sincere, tireless efforts of a leading member of his party, Senator ROCKEFELLER, to work out a bipartisan position, the President has apparently opted to defend the status quo.

Senator ROCKEFELLER should take some heart in the fact that while he may be no more successful in selling this bipartisan bill to the White House than his colleague Senator DODD was in selling the securities litigation bill, Senator DODD ultimately crossed the finish line.

We should at least be clear that the President's opposition to this bill comes only from the well-heeled trial lawyers who have taken advantage of our litigation system for their own benefit.

For too long, our citizens have been the ultimate victim of lawsuits and threats of lawsuits that go beyond the bounds of common sense. It often is not fair, and it often is very extreme.

By some estimates, nearly 90 percent of all companies can expect to become a defendant in a product liability case at least once. Estimates of the costs of product liability litigation range from $80 to $117 billion per year. That is simply too high.

Our national resources should not be misdirected to pay for extreme and unproductive litigation costs. We heard many, many references to these costs when this bill was on the floor last spring. We heard that 20 percent of the price of a ladder goes to pay for litigation and liability insurance, that one-half of the price of a football helmet goes to liability insurance, and on and on. Just who does President Clinton think is paying these additional costs?

This bill seeks to reduce the litigation tax burdening our economy and stifling innovation and job-growth. At the same time, it aims to ensure that those individuals who are harmed by defective products are compensated by the parties who rightfully should bear responsibility for wrongdoing.

This is an important point given the disinformation circulating about this bill. This legislation does not deprive any American of his or her right to sue.

We need these reforms because it has become evident that we cannot address these problems comprehensively without a uniform, nationwide solution to put a ceiling on at least the most abusive litigation tactics.

Products produced in one State move in interstate commerce. Manufacturers, product sellers, and individuals from one State may find themselves being sued in another State.

We need to protect citizens of some States from the product liability litigation costs imposed on them by other States' legal systems.

We need to assist those affected by laws in States where the legislatures have attempted reforms only to be thwarted by some State courts.

This bill does that by encouraging commonsense, responsible, and fair litigation.

For one, this bill reforms joint and several liability. I have spoken before about a case against Walt Disney World in which Walt Disney World was judged to be only 1 percent at fault for injuries a woman suffered when her fiance rammed into her on a grand prix ride at Disney World. Under principles of joint and several liability, Disney World was forced to pay 86 percent of the damages. (Walt Disney World Co. v. Wood, 515 So.2d 198 (Fla. S. Ct. 1987).)

This bill strikes a sensible balance by limiting joint and several liability to economic damages. This fairness approach means that defendants will be chiefly responsible for the harm that they cause rather than the harm caused by other defendants.

Other provisions also promote fairness. It is 100 percent wrong to paint them any other way.

Take the 2-year statute of limitations. That gives parties a reasonable time in which to take legal action after they know, or should have known, of an injury and its cause, at the same time that it prevents late-in-the-day lawsuits.

Who can argue with these commonsense provisions, except some of our Nation's trial lawyers who benefit from the increased fees they receive from unfair recoveries?

The bill imposes liability on product sellers only under certain circumstances in which the product seller is responsible for the safety of the product it sells. A product seller should not be held hostage to a lawsuit if the manufacturer caused the damage and the plaintiff can and should be suing the manufacturer.

The bill similarly provides that those who rent or lease products should be liable only where they themselves have actually been negligent or otherwise responsible for the harm—not where they are simply in the supply chain and have done nothing wrong.

The bill provides a defense if the plaintiff was intoxicated or under the influence of drugs and if that accounted for more than 50 percent of the responsibility for the harm caused. What is wrong with that provision?

The bill reduces damages payable by a manufacturer if harm is caused by any misuse or alteration of the product.

The bill includes a limit on punitive damages in product liability cases of two times the amount of economic and noneconomic losses. That permits an adequate punishment where punishment is called for, but puts some restraint on runaway punitive damages.

We did make some accommodations in this provision, including an exception allowing judges to go beyond the limits of the bill. This provision was tightened up in conference, and I think it was improved somewhat. Although I continue to have some reservations that the additur provision represents a weakening of the bill's punitive damages provision, I support this bill.

The provision that we added on the floor to protect small businesses has remained in the conference report. That provision applies to small businesses having less than 25 employees and individuals whose net worth does not exceed $500,000. In cases involving either of those as defendants, punitive damages cannot exceed the lesser of $250,000 or two times economic and noneconomic losses.

This worthy provision prevents small businesses and individuals from facing punitive damages in excess of $250,000.

The conference report adopts the House version of the statute of repose, which sets a 15-year limit beyond which manufacturers could no longer be sued in a product liability action. Of course, other parties having physical responsibility for the product, like product sellers or renters, would continue to bear responsibility.

I believe it is important to stress that punitive damages are in addition to make whole, compensatory relief. The administration produced its policy with respect to the Gorton substitute product liability bill on April 25, 1995, and was critical of the punitive damage limitations in the bill.

In the President's statement this past weekend indicating that he would veto this legislation, the President again criticized the punitive damages provisions—even though those provisions have since been modified in an attempt to address his concerns.

On May 2, 1995, I received a letter from Prof. George Priest of the Yale Law School responding to the administration's policy. I think he gets to the heart of why the administration's concerns then and now are misplaced, in error, and an excuse to veto this bill.

Let me read from that letter.

Professor Priest—responding to the bill's then punitive damages limit of three times economic damages or $250,000, whichever is greater—writes:

The Administration opposes the cap on punitive damages on the grounds that the cap ''invites a wealthy potential wrongdoer to weigh the risks of a capped punitive award against the potential gains of profits from the wrongdoing.

I note that the administration used that exact same phraseology in its statement of administration policy issued on March 16, 1996.

Professor Priest went on to write:

Meaning no disrespect, the administration's position displays a naivete unworthy of the serious problems created for consumers and low-income consumers, in particular, by the current absence of limits on potential punitive damages awards.

The administration appears to criticize and to want to prevent the calculation by potential defendants of future potential damages. That position cannot be sensibly maintained because it ignores the only purpose of punitive damages, which is to deter. There can be no deterrence without a calculation of a possible future penalty. The entire system of punitive damages is premised on the hope that potential wrongdoers will engage in such calculations and decide against engaging in harm-causing behavior. If there were no such calculations, there would be no deterrent effect. The issue, thus, is what the level of potential punitive damages ought to be in order to obtain appropriate deterrence.

Although the administration does not address the issue, it is well established in the analysis of modern tort law (and hardly controversial within the academy) that the calculation of compensatory damages alone is sufficient to create the appropriate deterrence of loss. Additional punitive damages awards surely reinforce the deterrent effect of compensatory damages, but at a cost: Where punitive damages awards are excessive or unpredictable (which the administration seems to want), producers are deterred from sales altogether and withdraw products and services from markets. Excessive or unpredictable punitive damage awards, thus, harm consumers and low-income consumers most of all because low profit margin products and services are the first to be withdrawn.

Many scholars believe (and I am among them) that the current problems created by excessive punitive damages are so severe that a cap of three times economic damages is still too high and that consumers—again, especially the low income—would benefit from a stricter cap.

I think that statement accurately and precisely sets out the reasons that I and so many others have come to the conclusion that punitive damages must be limited to benefit consumers. It is simplistic and inaccurate for opponents of this bill to claim that unlimited punitive damages benefit consumers. They do not.

I note that the proportionality limit in the current bill was moderated to two times the sum of economic and noneconomic damages.

Simply put, all of the provisions in this bill are commonsense provisions that level the playing field and encourage fairness in our product liability system. They are changes that Americans want and deserve.

I could go on and on about ridiculous product liability cases that Americans are sick of hearing about.

Everyone has heard of the McDonald's coffee case, but remember the McDonald's milkshake case? I spoke at length about that on the floor last spring.

A man had purchased a milkshake at the McDonald's drive-through, put it between his legs, spilled it all over himself, and got into an accident with another driver. That driver sued McDonald's on a product liability theory and claimed that McDonald's should have warned the milkshake drinker not to drink milkshakes and drive. (Carter v. McDonald's Corp., 640 A.2d 850 (N.J. 1994).)

Or how about the president of the Dixie Flag Manufacturing Co. who testified before the Commerce Committee last April. His company was sued by a man who stopped to help some employees at another company lower a flag. The man claimed that, while holding the flag, he was blown off the ground by a strong gust of wind and that the flag ripped, causing him to fall and hurt himself. He sued the flag company, claiming that the flag was unreasonably dangerous. That is bad enough, but what is worse is that there was no evidence that Dixie Flag had even sold the flag at issue.

We have just got to restore some common sense into our legal system.

The examples and the abuse go on and on.

Our large and small businesses and our consumers and workers are being overwhelmed with litigation abuse.

The vice president of the Otis Elevator Corp. provided us with information indicating that his company is sued on the average of once a day. Once a day.

Although Otis wins over 75 percent of its cases, on average over the past 3 years it has spent $20 million per year on liability costs, about half of which has gone to attorneys' fees.

These are staggering costs that should take our breath away. They represent resources which could be going to create new jobs or undertake new advancements. Our national resources should be going to productive uses—not to unnecessary and overblown litigation and insurance costs.

In short, I hope the Senate will stand up for what is right and what the American people want and need. We should send this bill to the President.

And, the President should sign it.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, there is a broad bipartisan consensus that we must do more to curb lawsuit abuse in America—the kind of abuse that has turned suing your neighbor into the newest American pastime.

This bipartisan compromise bill is an important first step: It will restrain outrageous and costly lawsuits that inhibit economic growth, threaten small businesses, and inflict a litigation tax on American consumers of $152 billion a year—that's right, $152 billion a year.

I want to congratulate Chairman PRESSLER, and particularly Senators GORTON and ROCKEFELLER for their hard work—years of hard work, really—on this important legislation. I also want to thank Senator LOTT for his assistance in resolving the differences between House and Senate.

But despite all the work, all of the bipartisanship, all of the sweet whispers of support out of the White House, suddenly we are voting on a bill that is under a threat of veto.

Why? Well, let us take a look at what President Clinton said last Saturday when he issued his veto threat. President Clinton said that he was concerned about federalism and an ''unwarranted intrusion on State authority.'' But this argument was long ago dismissed by such concerned parties as the National Governors Association. In fact, the Governors, including then-Governor Clinton, called for a uniform national standard, stating that it would ''greatly enhance the effectiveness of interstate commerce.''

In other words, this sudden attack of States rights fever is misplaced.

President Clinton also said last Saturday that he was concerned the bill would ''prevent injured persons from recovering the full measure of their damages.'' But compensatory damages are not affected by this legislation at all. And punitive damages are available for exactly those situations for which they were intended—situations which involve wrongdoing or egregious conduct.

That is what the President said.

What the President did not say however was that he has been under enormous pressure to veto this measure from the wealthiest and most powerful special interest lobby in America: the trial lawyers.

Mr. Clinton has been one of the most-favored recipients of their largess. The Center for Responsive Politics found that lawyers and lobbyists funneled a grand total of $2.6 million to Mr. Clinton's 1992 campaign. That of course vastly understates the real number, since it is often impossible to identify the source of the real donors. In just the first 9 months of 1995, lawyers and law firms have pumped another $2.5 million into the President's campaign coffers.

If money talks, this money screams. And what it screams is very simple: kill each and every attempt at legal reform. Now, I'm not one to assume just because someone gives you money, they call the tune. But this message has apparently been heard down at the White House loud and clear.

Consider the record: President Clinton instigated a filibuster to stop legal reform that covered small business and charities and volunteer organizations last year.

President Clinton pulled a much-publicized flip-flop and vetoed the securities litigation reform late last year. Fortunately, Congress overrode his veto.

President Clinton now threatens to veto a modest and bipartisan bill that he once suggested he would support.

This is unfortunate, but how it happened is worse.

Before he said he would veto this bill, President Clinton's allies did something very cynical. Mr. Clinton's friends on the Hill made sure that the protections from lawsuit abuses in this compromise bill would not be extended to charities and nonprofits.

Why would they do that? Everyone professes to want such protections passed into law. Yet, they insisted.

Well, obviously, it would have been more difficult to veto a bill that offered protections for charities and volunteer organizations. It would have interfered with posturing as the defender of the little guy. So, those protections had to go. And 2 days after those protections were deleted by his allies, President Clinton issued his veto threat.

I don't intend to play this game. Charities and volunteer organizations deserve relief, not cynical politics as usual.

Elaine Chao, president of the United Way of America, recently wrote a passionate plea calling for protections for charities, so caseworkers in family counseling agencies, literacy tutors, and volunteer fundraisers won't be chased away by the threat of liability.

All Americans should be outraged, as Elaine Chao puts it, by ''the proliferation of frivolous lawsuits that treat charities and nonprofits as pinatas, as so many bags of goodies to be plundered.''

That's why Senator HATCH and I have introduced a bill that provides such relief. Our bill would protect charities and nonprofits like the Little League and Girl Scouts. I intend to bring it to the floor for consideration as soon as possible.

The President and his allies will then be asked to make a simple choice between protecting charities or enriching trial lawyers.

President Clinton, please do not block this measure again. Do not let the heavy hand of special interests stay the helping hand of charities.

Mr. President, with nearly 19 million new suits filed per year—1 for every 10 adults—no one is immune from the lawsuit epidemic. The cost of defending yourself in an average, nonautomotive case is about $7,500. That is money you lose even if you win your case.

The lawyers, of course, never lose. It is time that this stopped.

I hope President Clinton will reconsider his ill-advised veto threat. In the meantime, I urge my colleagues to pass this bill.

Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise today in support of H.R. 956, a bill to reform product liability law.

A few months ago, the 104th Congress took the first momentous step toward legal reform. Over President Clinton's veto, we passed H.R. 1056, a bill to reform securities litigation.

This legislation will significantly curb the epidemic of frivolous lawsuits that are diverting our Nation's resources away from productive activity and into transaction costs.

In passing H.R. 956, the Senate will be taking an equally important second step on the road toward a sane legal regime of civil justice.

Our current legal system, under which we spend $300 billion or 4.5 percent of our gross domestic product each year, is not just broken, it is falling apart.

This is a system in which plaintiffs receive less than half of every dollar spent on litigation-related costs. It is a system that forces necessary goods, such as pharmaceuticals that can treat a number of debilitating diseases and conditions, off the market in this country.

This is a system in which neighbors are turned into litigants. I was particularly struck by a recent example reported in the Washington Post. This case involved two 3-year-old children whose mothers could not settle a sandbox dispute—literally, a preschool altercation in the sandbox—without going to court.

Something must be done about this situation and this litigious psychology, Mr. President, and this bill puts us on the road to real, substantive reform.

It institutes caps on punitive damages, thereby limiting potential windfalls for plaintiffs without in any way interfering with their ability to obtain full recovery for their injuries.

It provides product manufacturers with long-overdue relief from abusers of their products.

And it protects these makers, and sellers, from being made to pay for all or most noneconomic damages when they are responsible for only a small percentage.

First, as to punitive damages. No one wants to see plaintiffs denied full and fair compensation for their injuries. And this bill would do nothing to get in the way of such recoveries.

Unfortunately, punitive damages have come to be seen as part of the normal package of compensation to be expected by plaintiffs. George Priest of the Yale Law School reports that in one county, Bullock, AL, 95.6 percent of all cases filed in 1993–94 included claims for punitive damages.

Punitive damages are intended to punish and deter wrongdoing. When they become routine—one might say when they reach epidemic proportions—they end up hurting us all by increasing the cost of important goods and services.

For example, the American Tort Reform Association reports that, of the $18,000 cost of a heart pacemaker, $3,000 goes to cover lawsuits, as does $170 of the $1,000 cost of a motorized wheelchair and $500 of the cost of a 2-day maternity hospital stay.

We can no longer afford to allow this trend to continue. I am glad, therefore, that this bill begins to cap punitive damages—although in my judgment it only makes a beginning in that area.

I am particularly glad that the bill imposes a hard cap of $250,000 on punitive damages assessed against small businesses—the engine of growth and invention in our Nation.

Of course, punitive damage awards are not the only things increasing the costs of needed products.

Throughout the debate over civil justice reform I have been referring to the case of Piper Aircraft versus Cleveland. I use that example because it shows how ridiculous legal standards can literally kill an industry—as they did light aircraft manufacturing in America—and cost thousands of American jobs.

In Piper Aircraft, a man took the front seat out of his plane and intentionally attempted to fly it from the back seat. He crashed, not surprisingly, and his family sued and won over $1 million in damages on the grounds that he should have been able to fly safely from the back seat.

These are the kinds of decisions we must stop. Drunken plaintiffs, plaintiffs who abuse and misuse products—plaintiffs who blame manufacturers and sellers for their own misconduct—should not be rewarded with large sums of money. They may deserve our concern and sympathy, but we, as a people, do not deserve to pay for their misconduct through the loss of entire industries.

I am happy that this bill establishes defenses based on plaintiff inebriation and abuse of the product because I believe these defenses will benefit all Americans.

Finally, it seems clear to me that no manufacturer should be held liable for noneconomic damages which that individual or company did not cause.

In its common form, the doctrine of joint liability allows the plaintiff to collect the entire amount of a judgment from any defendant found partially responsible for the plaintiff's damages.

Thus, for example, a defendant found to be 1 percent responsible for the plaintiff's damages could be forced to pay 100 percent of the plaintiff's judgment.

This is unfair. And the unfairness is aggravated when noneconomic damages are awarded.

Noneconomic damages are intended to compensate plaintiffs for subjective harm, like pain and suffering, emotional distress, and humiliation.

Because noneconomic damages are not based on tangible losses, however, there are no objective criteria for calculating their amount. As a result, the size of these awards often depends more on the luck of the draw, in terms of the jury, than on the rule of law. Defendants can be forced to pay enormous sums for unverifiable damages they did not substantially cause.

This bill would reform joint liability in the product liability context by allowing it to be imposed for economic damages only, so that a defendant could be forced to pay for only his proportionate share of noneconomic damages.

As a result, plaintiffs would be fully compensated for their out-of-pocket losses, while defendants would be better able to predict and verify the amount of damages they would be forced to pay.

This reform thus would address the most pressing concerns of plaintiffs and defendants alike.

Mr. President, problems will remain with our civil justice system after this bill is made into law—if this bill is signed by President Clinton and made law.

Charities and their volunteers will remain unprotected from frivolous lawsuits.

Our municipalities will remain exposed to profit-seeking plaintiffs.

And the nonproducts area of private civil law in general will remain unreformed—3-year-olds and their mothers may still end up in court over a sandbox altercation.

In the last session I and some of my colleagues fought for more extensive, substantive, and programmatic reforms to our civil justice system. These were consistently turned back.

I believe at this point it is time for us to consider more neutral, procedural reforms, such as in the area of Federal conflicts rules, to rationalize a system we cannot seem to tame.

But I am certain, Mr. President, that this bill marks an important step toward a fairer, more reasonable and less expensive civil justice system.

This is why I am frustrated that President Clinton has threatened to veto this bill.

The President has stated repeatedly that he would support balanced, limited product liability reform. He has been singularly unhelpful in his opposition to more far-reaching reforms that would do more for American workers and consumers. But he has claimed that he would support product liability reform.

Now the President is claiming that this legislation is somehow unfair to consumers.

Mr. President, is a system in which fifty seven cents of every dollar awarded in court goes to lawyers and other transaction costs fair to consumers of legal services?

Is it really pro-consumer to have a system in which, as reported in a conference board survey, 47 percent of firms withdraw products from the marketplace, 25 percent discontinue some form of research, and 8 percent lay off employees, all out of fear of lawsuits?

Please tell me, Mr. President, are consumers helped by a system in which, according to a recent Gallup survey, one out of every five small businesses decides not to introduce a new product, or not to improve an existing one, out of fear of lawsuits?

The clear answer, I believe, is that consumers are hurt by our out-of-control civil justice system, a system which makes them pay more for less sophisticated and updated goods.

I respectfully suggest that President Clinton look beyond the interests of his friends among the trial lawyers to the interests of the American people as a whole.

If he looks to that interest he will find a nation hungry for reform, yearning to be freed from a civil justice system that is neither civil nor just, seeking protection from egregious wrongs, but not willing to sacrifice necessary goods, important public and voluntary services, and the very character of their communities to a system that no longer produces fair and predictable results.

If we in this chamber consult the interest of the people, Mr. President, we will pass this bill. If President Clinton consults that primary interest, he will sign the bill and make it law.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, today's vote marks the return of the product liability issue to the Senate. It was about 1 year ago, May 10, 1995, when I voted for final passage of the Senate version of the product liability bill.

Yet before final passage, I voted against cloture four times. I voted against cloture because I had reservations about some of the provisions in the bill, including the absolute punitive damage cap and one way preemption clauses within the bill. However, after cloture was achieved, I voted in support of final passage in the hopes that the Senate and House conferees, working in conjunction with the White House, would reach a reasonable, balanced, and fair compromise.

Unfortunately, the conference report, rather than improving the bill, raises more questions and concerns. In the Senate bill, the language made it clear that the following would be excluded from the definition of product, electricity, water delivered by a utility, natural gas, or steam. However, the conference report adds an exception that in application, swallows the exclusion. The exception provides that if electricity, water delivered by a utility, natural gas, or steam is subject under State law to strict liability, the provisions of the product liability conference report apply. This is an expansion of the Senate bill.

Also, in the Senate bill, the provision regarding negligent entrustment was found in the applicability section and it provided that nothing in the title, the products liability bill, would apply to negligent entrustment cases. However, in the conference report, the negligent entrustment language is moved to the seller liability section and therefore negligent entrustment actions are not excluded from the provisions of the bill. Does the Senate really want to send a signal to those who, for example, serve alcohol to minors that their liability is substantially reduced?

The conference report language changes the Senate bill's provision on statute of repose by reducing the number of years and inserting ambiguity on the scope of products covered under statute of repose. The statute of repose is reduced from the Senate bill's period of 20 years to the conference report's period of 15 years. Changes in the definition of durable goods have raised ambiguity over whether the statute of repose remains applicable to only durable goods used in the workplace.

Finally, my concern remains about provisions which change State law only when that law is unfavorable to negligent manufacturers. If the goal is to create a uniform Federal law, the conference report should not make exceptions for States in the areas of statute of repose and punitive damage cap formulas.

I regret that I am unable to vote for cloture on this conference report. I remain supportive of reasonable and balanced product liability reform. My vote for final passage of the Senate bill on May 10, 1995, is a testament to my position.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to this conference report.

Like most Americans, I believe we would all be better off with fewer lawsuits. But, as we vote on this legislation, we must also ask ourselves if we are being fair to average Americans who are injured by dangerous products.

As I will discuss in more detail in just a moment, I believe my home State of Montana has done a fine job of discouraging unnecessary litigation and excessive damage awards. We have found a balance—a fair balance—that works for Montana and I believe other states should be allowed to the same.

BILL INTRUDES ON STATE RESPONSIBILITIES

This past December, I supported welfare reform legislation. My reason, in essence, was that a Federal program was broken and could be managed better by State governments.

The product liability bill before us now does just the opposite. It takes State laws which are not broken and subordinates them to a Federal law. It preempts the civil law of all 50 States and expands Federal powers into an area which, for two centuries, has been governed by the States. That is a very grave decision, and it is one we should not take unless there is absolutely no alternative.

Now, I am not an absolutist on this point. In some unusual cases—in particular, when States are violating the rights of individuals—the Federal Government should step in. For example, the Federal Government was right to intervene and eliminate segregationist Jim Crow laws through the Civil Rights Act and the Voting Rights Act.

But in this case, State governments are exercising their tort law responsibilities perfectly well. There is no reason for the Feds to take over.

THE MONTANA CASE

Let us look at the case of Montana to see why.

Our Chief Justice, the Honorable Jean Turnage, summed it up in a letter he wrote to me in 1994 in his capacity as President of the Conference of Chief Justices. In that letter he said:

Federal preemption of existing State product liability law at this point is an unwise and unnecessary intrusion upon the principles of federalism.

Justice Turnage is on very firm ground. Over time, Montana has drafted and amended our State laws to make sure they reflect our needs. For example, our legislature has imposed a punitive damage cap in medical malpractice cases. We also let small businesses register as limited liability companies to reduce their exposure to civil suits.

And Montana has already solved many of the other problems this product liability reform bill attempts to address.

LIABILITY ALREADY REFORMED IN MONTANA

First, we strike a fair balance between plaintiffs and defendants. The doctrine of joint and several liability is a good example.

Montana applies joint liability only when defendants are more than 50 percent responsible for a person's injury. Defendants who are less than 50 percent liable are accountable only for the amount of injury directly attributable to their wrongdoing.

This makes sense. Defendants should not be held jointly liable when they are only minimally responsible. Conversely, the injured should not go uncompensated when a defendant is more than half responsible.

So we have found a balance on liability. And this bill would destroy the balance. Because if it passes, Federal law would void Montana's joint and several liability statute completely.

MONTANA COURTS FAIR IN PUNITIVE DAMAGES

Second, look at Montana's treatment of punitive damages.

Again, we looked at the issue and found a solution that meets our needs. Our courts award punitive damages only in limited circumstances where a corporation clearly acts in a reckless way that endangers public safety.

We allow juries to award punitive damages only when a product manufacturer or seller is guilty of actual fraud or malice. Montana juries awarded these punitive damages a grand total of three times since 1965. And under H.R. 956, Montana juries would have great difficulty awarding punitive damages even when the defendant has shown total disregard and disrespect for the health and welfare of the consumer.

PROTECTING MONTANA WORKERS COMPENSATION LAW

Last but not least, I am deeply concerned about how this legislation could seriously harm Montana small businesses.

I recently asked Prof. David Patterson of the University of Montana School of Law to review this conference report and advise me of its potential impacts on Montana business. Professor Patterson is an acknowledged expert in Montana workers compensation law. He is also chairman of the State Bar Ethics Committee.

Professor Patterson has advised me that this conference report could have unfavorable, perhaps unintentional impacts * * * on Montana employers.

Specifically, he points to its provisions overriding existing Montana workers compensation law. As it is today, Montana workers compensation law protects employers from virtually all workplace-related products liability suits. But Professor Patterson believes the legislation before the Senate would eliminate or significantly errode these protections for Montana employers. I find that deeply troubling.

Mr. President, I ask that the full text of Professor Patterson's letter to be printed in the record immediately following these remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. BAUCUS. Now, I believe that many companies have legitimate grievances with some of the State tort laws. But they should take the complaints to the States and do the job there. It is simply unnecessary—and really, it is wrong—to bring in Federal law enforcement and Federal courts to nationalize the tort laws. And its potential impacts on Montana workers compensation law show how dangerous—and costly for small businesses—this can become.

As Chief Justice Turnage said, it is unnecessary and unwise for Congress to try and take over these State responsibilities. Montana has managed its liability laws for over 100 years. We have exercised our rights in a responsible and balanced way. And we should be able to do so for the next hundred years.

And Congress, for its part, should get back to its real business and what the people expect—working together to balance the budget, raise the minimum wage, and help our families provide themselves and their children with a secure future.

Re H.R. 956 counterproductive for Montana employers.

Sen. MAX BAUCUS,
Senate Hart Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SEN. BAUCUS: As a Montana law professor who teaches workers-compensation courses, I urge you to consider, before voting on H.R. 956, the ''Common Sense Product Liability Legal Reform Act of 1996,'' how surely and severely Section 111 of that bill would impact Montana employers and their workers compensation insurers.

Section 111(a)(3) of H.R. 956 clearly rewards manufacturers and sellers of defective workplace equipment who blame employers for injuries to their employees. Consequently, even employers who are otherwise immune from liability under Montana's workers compensation scheme will frequently be dragged into costly lawsuits between injured workers and the manufacturers or sellers of defective machinery.

H.R. 956 will also increase workers compensation premiums in Montana by forcing Montana employers and their workers compensation insurers to pay for workplace injuries which are currently the responsibility of manufacturers and sellers of defective products. Whatever its other merits, H.R. 956 undeniably shifts additional costs of workplace injuries caused by defective products onto Montana employers.

Finally, and perhaps most dangerously, H.R. 956 seriously jeopardizes the core immunities historically enjoyed by Montana employers. H.R. 956 forcibly injects the issue of employer fault into a previously no-fault state workers compensation scheme. The bill also expressly preempts all inconsistent state statutes—including those guaranteeing exclusive-remedy protection to employers. If (as seems likely) the Montana Supreme Court, in any of several pending appeals, finds limits to such a faultbased workers compensation system under Montana's Constitution, then H.R. 956 will automatically preempt the exclusive-remedy statutes now taken for granted by Montana employers.

Please consider carefully the unfavorable, perhaps unintentional, impacts of H.R. 956 on Montana employers. Please contact me if I can provide additional information or assistance. Thank you.

Respectfully,

Prof. DAVID PATTERSON.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FRIST). Who yields time?

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from the State of Washington.

Mr. President, we are about now to vote on what I think is an enormously important bill in terms of human beings and in terms of the prospects for a better growing economy. However, I will be specific in my closing remarks.

There has been so much confusion about what is and what is not covered under product liability in the conference report, and I think that is because there has been a very deliberate attempt to mislead people during the course of this debate and prior to it.

There is one example I hope will enlighten my colleagues. Yesterday I received a letter from MADD, Mothers Against Drunk Driving, which incorrectly quoted the legislation and, from that, concluded that drunk driving cases would be protected. That is totally wrong. Drunk driving cases will not be covered by this bill. Here is what MADD said. The bill covers ''harm caused by a product or product use''. Here is the correct quote, Mr. President. The bill covers ''harm caused by a product.'' It is product liability that we are talking about—not product use but product. There is a huge difference.

Mr. President, many other well-meaning workers and people have been totally mislead about what this bill covers. The issue of what is covered and what is not covered is this: Is it the product that causes harm? If yes, then it is covered in the bill. However, if the person using the product that causes harm—such as the driver of a car—the case is not covered by this bill.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I read the law, and it is properly quoted by MADD. We doublechecked because we heard some rumors. So checking it out, we found that the MADD position in opposition to this legislation is the same as I included in the RECORD, you can read the exact language which says ''any several action brought, or any theory of harm caused by a product or product use''—period, end quote. So they know what they are talking about.

Now to the confusion. You saw that 30-minute demonstration we had out here about strict liability and utilities. They wrote that in the double negative fashion because they did not want to say we are going to exempt strict liability. So they have done so by covering it in this bill.

Right to the point, they tell the gas company to go ahead and get reckless and not worry about punitive damages for the simple reason that now, having been written that way, you have to have malice.

I could cover a plethora of things. The solution is within the States. The Senator from Rhode Island was correct. We have been on it for 15 years. The State of Tennessee has acted. The State of South Carolina has acted. When we say it is a moderate, bipartisan bill, the opposition is moderate and bipartisan. There is bipartisan opposition because this goes totally against the grain. When I was sent up here some 29 years ago standing for States rights, here comes the crowd finally saying let us have education back to the States; Medicaid, let us have it back to the States; crime and block grants back to the States; welfare, the Governors say, come, give it to us, back to the States. The States are doing the job. The majority leader runs around with a tenth amendment in his pocket and pulls it out, and says we have government going back to the States. But the business crowd downtown wrote this sorry measure. It is not bipartisan with respect to the conference. We were never asked into that conference; never considered. That had not happened. That had not happened.

I found out about this on CBS when they talked about the silly case of women going into the men's room.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Who yields time?

The Senator from Washington.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, this debate can come down to an example involving one individual, a young girl, and one company. The young girl is Tara Ransom, whose story is told in today's Wall Street Journal, and who with her parents has come to my office. Tara is one of 50,000 hydrocephalics in the United States with a condition that previously could not be treated at all and was a literal terror to its victims and to their parents.

She has, nonetheless, led a normal life, almost a normal life, due to a series of silicon shunts which have to be replaced every year or so due to her growth rate.

It is now becoming next to impossible for Tara to get such a silicon shunt because the one company, Dow-Corning, that is willing to manufacture it, is in bankruptcy largely due to product liability litigation and is threatened with class actions.

Dow-Corning simply manufactures the silicone. In one of these shunts its net return is $1 or $2. As the Presiding Officer as a physician knows, not every medical device works perfectly at all times and under all circumstances. I think it is almost inevitable that among those 50,000 hydrocephalics, or the numbers of thousands who use these shunts at some point or another, one of them is going to die, and there will be a threat of a lawsuit against every one who had anything to do with the shunt. The manufacturer of the material itself would be brought right into that lawsuit. Its liability, even if it wins, the cost of its attorney's fees will be far more than the gross sales price of all of the silicone it sold. So it will not sell the material. We now in some parts of the world have a black market in these shunts for exactly this reason.

So to save the trial lawyers, to deal with all of the abstractions we heard from here today, Tara Ransom and others like her may soon not be able to get the very devices that have allowed them to lead reasonably normal lives. If this bill passes—and I refer you to the statement of Senator MCCAIN—that will no longer be the case. It is one of the harms, one of the outrages, in our present legal system which will be controlled by this bill.

Mr. President, the Cessna airplane company—in the late 1970's general aircraft in the United States was being manufactured and shipped at the rate of more than 17,000 a year. By 1982, it was down to almost just more than half of that. By 1986, claims hit $210 million a year. By 1991, Piper went into bankruptcy. By 1993, 100,000 jobs had been lost in general aviation largely due to our present product liability system. By that time, fewer than 1,000 planes per year were being manufactured in the United States as against 17,000. In August 1994, this Congress passed the General Aviation Revitalization Act. All it consisted of was a statute of repose at 18 years for aircraft. That is all that was in that reform. Already there has been a rebound. The very next year more aircraft were manufactured than were manufactured before, and this year Cessna is building a $40 million plant to hire 2,000 people to get back into this business.

That, Mr. President, is what this debate is all about—whether or not young people and older people will be able to get medical devices that they need without the manufacturers being frightened out of the business by liability costs, and whether or not industries in the United States will be able to operate successfully to hire people to produce goods that people would like to buy.

We have a legal system now which has hurt our competitiveness, has driven up prices, has reduced the choices that the American people have, all to oblige a handful of trial lawyers. This bill is a modest beginning to create a redress in that balance and to restore the economy of the United States and to provide better products for more people at a lower cost more of the time. It is just as simple as that, Mr. President.

Mr. President, how much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Twenty-four seconds.

Mr. GORTON. I yield the remainder of my time.

Have the yeas and nays been ordered?

READY TOMORROW: DEFENDING AMERICAN INTERESTS IN THE 21ST CENTURY

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, as we near the end of this century, we must be prepared to deal with the changing realities of the post-cold-war world and to meet the new challenges of the 21st century. My purpose in speaking today to the Senate is to open a debate on the continuing need to reshape our national security strategy and military force structure to address those new challenges.

We have already made several attempts to deal with these new realities. The Base Force and Bottom Up Review processes were laudable early efforts. However, we have not yet made the difficult decisions to adapt to the challenges created by the collapse of the Soviet Union and the Warsaw Pact. Our current strategy and force plans are not structured to meet the challenges of the future.

The potential threats to our national security interests today and in the future are different from those of the cold war; they are less deterrable by traditional means and often less easily defeated. We no longer face a superpower threat from the former Soviet Union, although we must be ''prepared to prepare'' to defend against an emerging major power threat. We must deal with a wide range of lesser threats throughout the world, including: regional and ethnic conflicts in which the United States could easily become involved; the rise of extremist and radical movements; the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and the means to deliver them; the increasing capability of individuals and nations to attack us through our dependence on technology, particularly information and communications systems; and finally, both domestic and international terrorism.

As has been all too common in the past, our military planning focuses on maintaining the force structure that proved effective in winning the last war, while too little attention has been given to the changing and uncertain nature of future conflicts.

We must now undertake another effort to reshape our strategy and force structure, an effort which is innovative and forward-thinking rather than constrained by the accepted principles of the past. A key focus of this effort must be ensuring that our defense strategy and military forces are flexible and capable of quickly evolving to meet any new threats.

In this effort, we cannot ignore the fiscal realities of our debt-ridden Federal Government. Planning for our future military capabilities must be tempered by a realistic view of fiscal constraints on future defense budgets, without allowing those constraints to become the dominant factor in our decisions about future defense requirements. We must be prepared to accept the cost of being a world power. In short, we must focus on the most cost-effective means of maintaining the military capabilities necessary to ensure our future security.

Mr. President, we now face a significant gap between our force plans and the resources available to implement them. By 1995, the defense budget had been cut by more than 35 percent in real, inflation-adjusted dollars in just 10 years. Independent assessments of the cost of the BUR force show that it exceeds the funding levels dedicated by the current administration in the Future Years Defense Program [FYDP] by $150 billion to $500 billion.

As a result, we have been confronted by a series of Hobson's choices. We have had to choose among cutting force strength, maintaining readiness, or funding force modernization within the constraints of continually declining defense budgets. The result has been reductions in all three areas.

Over the past 5 years, we have reduced our military manpower levels by more than half a million people. After a dangerous trend 3 or 4 years ago of declining military readiness, there is now broad agreement that we have restored current levels of operational activity and readiness of the smaller BUR force. However, we have done so by foregoing the modernization programs required to ensure the effectiveness of that small force.

The Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff has repeatedly warned that procurement accounts are seriously underfunded, and the Vice Chairman has said we face a ''crisis'' in weapons procurement.

Because of the modernization crisis, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs has set a procurement funding goal of $60 billion per year. However, the President's fiscal year 1997 defense budget includes only $39 billion for procurement—nearly $5 billion less for procurement than was projected in the previous year's budget and far short of the Chairman's target. The administration now projects the $60 billion procurement funding goal will not be reached until the year 2001—3 years beyond the Chairman's target.

Mr. President, there is a dangerous long-term impact of postponing essential force modernization programs. America's future military readiness hinges on our ability to retain technological superiority over any potential adversaries. We have already seen some reduction in United States capabilities to fight in a single contingency such as the Persian Gulf. The continuing failure to invest wisely in military modernization programs has put our future readiness at risk.

We must reverse the alarming practice of postponing essential weapons modernization programs. To do this, we need to do one of two things—either increase the overall defense budget, or spend our available defense resources more wisely.

Last year, the Congress added $7 billion to the President's request for national defense and projected adding $14 billion to the planned fiscal year 1997 defense budget. However, the President requested $9 billion less for defense in fiscal year 1997 than Congress provided in fiscal year 1996.

Mr. President, I strongly support much-needed efforts in Congress to slow the too-rapid decline in defense spending. However, with continuing pressure to balance the Federal budget and alleviate our Nation's long-term fiscal crisis, there is, in my view, little realistic prospect of significant, sustained increases in defense spending in the future.

Therefore, it is imperative that we—the Congress and the administration—begin a debate to develop new ideas to ensure the best possible U.S. military force, capable of meeting the challenges of the future, within the fiscal constraints of today's defense budgets. Today, I want to offer my thoughts on the issues that must be considered in that debate.

Mr. President, our national security strategy must complement a credible foreign policy. The United States can and should use diplomacy to guide the course of world events, rather than simply observing and acquiescing in them. Indecision, hesitation, and vacillation in the conduct of our foreign policy only encourage aggression by our potential adversaries, possibly leading to conflict.

A strong military force is essential to maintaining the credibility of our foreign policy. The existence of capable and ready military forces, combined with the credible threat of their use when necessary to defend our national security interests, serves to deter the outbreak of conflict. If deterrence fails, those forces must be prepared to react early and decisively to prevail in war. Without both a credible foreign policy and a strong military force, the ability of the United States to shape the future course of world events is severely hampered.

As I noted earlier, our Nation's fiscal situation makes it likely that the defense budget will, at best, remain at the current level, despite recent efforts in Congress to increase the defense budget. This level is widely recognized as inadequate to fund the force structure necessary to support our current strategy of engagement and enlargement, based on a capability to fight and win two nearly simultaneous major regional contingencies [MRCs].

Further, the two-MRC strategy is focused too narrowly on large conventional conflicts in the Persian Gulf and Korea. It must be broadened to ensure attention to all possible conflict scenarios, not just the current military capabilities of Iraq and North Korea.

Current fiscal reality, which makes unlikely future significant increases in defense spending, as well as an overly narrow focus of our current strategy demand that we reassess both our strategy and our force structure. Therefore, many U.S. planners, including senior planners on the Joint Staff and the military staffs of the Armed Services, are already in the process of considering a single MRC strategy in which the United States would only be able to fight one major conflict at a time.

In conducting a reassessment of our future force requirements, we should focus on a flexible contingency strategy supported by an affordable, flexible force. Our force planning should provide, at a minimum, sufficient levels to decisively prevail in a single, generic MRC. At the same time, we must recognize the existence of many lesser threats and maintain the capability to inflict unacceptable damage on an adversary should one or more of these threats materialize.

This more realistic approach to future force planning will eliminate the gap between our current strategy and fiscal reality. While planning for a flexible force with the ability of fighting a single MRC, possibly together with one or more lesser threats, may necessitate the acceptance of some additional risk in certain areas, it is far better than to plan for forces and capabilities that will never materialize within the limits of likely future defense budgets.

FUTURE FORCE STRUCTURE

The nature of foreseeable conflicts requires that we continue to provide for a force structure containing air, land, and see elements that are flexible enough to adapt quickly to unforeseeable situations. Our warfighting forces must be capable of responding quickly and effectively to any potential challenge and should be designed to supplement the military forces of our allies in order to provide the greatest military capability in the future at the lowest possible cost.

Very briefly, let me describe the principal warfighting capabilities that must be maintained to ensure our readiness in the future.

Naval forces: Our naval forces are at the forefront of our forward presence, crisis response, and power projection capability. They are among the most likely to be called to respond to a crisis and the most likely to be used in the early phases of any regional conflict.

Naval vessels should be self-sustaining and have significant offensive capability while providing for their own defense. Automation of weapon systems and support equipment aboard these vessels should be pursued to minimize the number of personnel required to produce an efficient, lethal fighting platform.

Much of our power projection capability will continue to be provided by carrier-based air power, increasingly supplemented by cruise missiles and other long-range strike systems. Political uncertainties, making the use of forward air bases problematic, mean that we cannot always rely upon these assets in a crisis situation. One only has to remember the United States bombing of Libya in 1986, and the restrictions on over-flights of certain countries, to realize that we must maintain a sufficient force of aircraft carriers if we want to provide the capability of ever-ready air power.

Marine expeditionary forces will continue to fill a critical role in any future force structure because of their flexibility and the ease with which they can be dispatched to regional hot spots. These forces must be supported with sufficient lift, mine warfare capability, and shore fire support.

Our submarine force will continue to play an important role. We must, however, re-examine the numbers and mix of the planned post-cost war realities. Today's threats make it possible to scale back plans to replace the current, very capable attack submarine force with an all-new class of stealthy, high-technology submarines.

Air power: Air power that can be quickly deployed and engage the enemy with devastating effect is a critical element of any future force structure. Our air assets must be maintained at the forefront of technology in order to pose a viable threat to our enemies.

Our tactical aircraft must have the capability to deliver precision weapons on enemy targets. Multimission platforms and maximum firepower per platform should be absolute requirements, as the cost of aircraft continues to climb at an enormous rate. Precision-guided stand-off weapons, such as cruise missiles, will increasingly become the weapon of choice for their ability to attack enemy targets without endangering air crews and expensive platforms.

Procurement of self-protection equipment is both necessary and cost-effective. Every effort should be made to build upon existing electronic and other countermeasures, including expendables.

At the same time, we should explore opportunities to increase the use of remotely piloted vehicles [RPVs] and unmanned aerial vehicles [UAVs]. Both RPVs and UAVs offer great potential to provide a cheaper, more effective means of gathering information and delivering ordnance, while minimizing risk to our air crews.

We must act now to resolve the issue of strategic versus tactical bombers. We must maintain a viable offensive capability at an affordable cost. Therefore, we must carefully consider cost versus capabilities in assessing the effectiveness of our strategic and tactical bombers in a conventional role. Current information supports a decision to cap the B–2 bomber program at its present fleet size and give higher priority to precision-guided munitions and improved tactical fighter/bomber forces.

Ground forces: As our overseas basing continues to decline, we must reassess our requirement for large ground-based forces. This will require greater emphasis on allied capabilities for ground combat missions. U.S. ground forces must be readily deployable, requiring a reassessment of the balance between heavy and light forces. Greater emphasis and reliance on smaller, lighter, and more automated systems may be appropriate.

We need to retailor both our active and reserve forces to concentrate our resources on forces we can rapidly deploy or move forward within a few months. We do not need units, bases, reserves, or large stocks of equipment that we cannot project outside the United States without a year or more of mobilization time.

Information technology will continue to revolutionize the battlefield, giving ground commanders unprecedented levels of situational awareness on the battlefield. We must ensure that resources are dedicated to providing these essential technological enhancements.

Our ground forces must be properly equipped to maintain superior offensive and defense capabilities. Increased night warfighting capabilities, increased survivability of tanks and heavy artillery, and improvements in antiarmor defenses are particularly important. Increased capability to detect, defend, and survive in a biological or chemical warfare environment is absolutely essential.

Special Operations Forces: We must continue to maintain the capability to conduct special military operations in a variety of missions. Special operations forces expand the range of options available to decisionmakers by confronting crises and conflicts below the threshold of war. These forces must be able to respond to specialized contingencies across the conflict spectrum with stealth, speed, and precision.

Strategic Lift: We must continue to focus on improving our ability to move personnel and equipment overseas. The limits we face on the forward deployment of our forces, in a world where our forces could be required in any region of the globe, means that strategic lift has become increasingly important. We must increase our efforts to procure the necessary lift capacity to maximize the mobility of our forces.

National Guard and Reserves: The Reserve and Guard components of the Armed Forces should be tasked primarily with those mission areas which support rapid power projection and require little training prior to deployment. Combat arms units in the Guard and Reserves that cannot be mobilized within a very short period of time cannot play a decisive role in conflict resolution. By restricting the Guard and Reserves to those areas where proficiency can be maintained with minimal unit training time, we can minimize the risk that essential military forces will not be prepared if they are called upon in a crisis situation.

The missions most appropriate to the Guard and Reserves, commonly referred to as combat support or combat service support, are those directly related to a civilian occupation, such as transportation specialists, medical support, public affairs, and computer and information specialists.

There are, however, certain military missions which should not be assigned to the Reserves or Guard. These missions, such as heavy armor and infantry, require constant physical conditioning and training in large unit exercises, and are best left to the active forces which can be maintained in a ready state for rapid deployment.

Other force capabilities: Other high-priority force capabilities include cost-effective theater and national missile defense systems, effective counter-proliferation and proliferation detection capabilities, safe and reliable nuclear deterrent forces, and technologically superior, maintainable space-based systems.

These essential force capabilities will not exist in the future without sufficient investment in modernization programs. Our ability to counter future threats will not depend on stealthy submarines or more long-range bombers. Instead, we should emphasize the capabilities most effective in likely future conflicts; namely, adequate strategic sea and air lift, enhanced amphibious capability, next-generation tactical aircraft, deployable light ground forces, and improved command, control, and communications systems. Investment now in these high-priority programs will ensure our future readiness.

TIERED FORCE READINESS

Mr. President, during the 1970's, the United States allowed its military to become hollow by failing to dedicate adequate resources to the day-to-day operational readiness of our Armed Forces. Defense budget increases in the 1980's restored the readiness and morale of our forces and provided much-needed investment funding.

Because of the continuous decline in defense budgets since the mid-1980's, however, we heard warnings from our highest-ranking military officers of a similar readiness crisis in the early 1990's. We heeded those warnings and managed to reverse the alarming trends toward another hollow force by dedicating increasing shares of our smaller defense budgets to the readiness of our forces.

Today, we are permitting our forces to become hollow in a different way. We are shortchanging military modernization, as we did in the 1920's and 1930's. Then, our military forces were antiquated and inadequately equipped, requiring several years and many millions of dollars before they were prepared to fight our enemies in World War II. Because of our failure to adequately fund the investment accounts, our forces today face a future armed with rapidly aging equipment which is difficult and expensive to maintain and operate.

We must stop postponing essential modernization programs. To maintain the force capabilities I have described, and to keep them modernized, we must look for savings elsewhere in the defense budget.

There are many approaches to streamlining defense operations and activities that could result in cost savings and which should be done to ensure the best value to the American taxpayer. We should consider revisiting our infrastructure requirements, modernizing and making more efficient cross-service activities, and greater privatization on nonmilitary activities. However, the magnitude of savings from these efficiencies is negligible in comparison to the funding required to modernize and maintain a ready military force.

Another approach we should consider, which would save scarce defense resources and make available needed funding for critical modernization programs, would be to reevaluate the readiness requirements of our military forces. Although, to a limited extent, the Military services currently maintain forces at varying readiness levels, a comprehensive, force-wide review must be performed to ensure the future overall readiness of our forces.

Criticality of forces in any future crisis should be the determining factor of the degree of day-to-day readiness that each military unit should maintain. An evaluation should include two key factors: First, the likelihood that forces will be called upon to respond to a military crisis, and second, the timeframe in which those forces would be deployed. Forces could then be categorized by readiness tiers based on the degree of day-to-day readiness at which they should be maintained.

It is important to differentiate this proposed tiering of readiness requirements from the current fluctuations in unit readiness which are caused by training or operational deployments. For example, our Navy carrier forces are maintained at the highest readiness level while on cruise, fall back to a very low level when they first return to homeport, and then gradually regain their readiness as they prepare for the next deployment. The proposal outlined above for tiered force structure readiness would categorize units based on their criticality to a crisis situation, not on these normal training fluctuations.

The following delineation of our forces at three different levels of military readiness is proposed as the starting point for a discussion of the concept of tiered readiness.

Tier I—Forward-Deployed and Crisis Response Forces: In peacetime, our forward-deployed military forces support our diplomacy and our commitments to our allies. Our forward military presence takes the form of fixed air and ground bases that are home to U.S. forces overseas, and our forward-deployed carriers, surface combatants, and amphibious forces. Some special operations forces are also forward-deployed, both at sea and ashore. Reserves become part of the equation through our military exercise programs.

In the event of a crisis, these forward-deployed forces are most often called upon to respond first to contain the crisis. In addition, our crisis response forces must be able to get to the region quickly and be able to enter the region using force, since we cannot assume that ports or airfields will be available. These qualifications limit the types of forces that must be ready to respond quickly in a crisis:

Air forces are limited to aircraft that can make a round trip from a secure base.

Land forces include airborne units.

Sea forces include carriers, surface combatants, and amphibious forces within a range of a few days.

The Army afloat brigade and naval maritime prepositioning forces can respond quickly and, supported by airborne and amphibious forces, can expect to have a secure port and airfield in the region when they arrive.

Because they must be able to respond effectively within a matter of days, forward-deployed and crisis response forces must be maintained at the highest state, or tier, of readiness.

Tier II—Force Buildup: History shows that crises can usually be resolved or contained by the deployment of only a small portion of our military capability. In the past 50 years, the United States has responded militarily to crises throughout the world over 300 times, but we have deployed follow-on forces in anticipation of a major regional conflict only 5 times. These include the forward deployment of United States troops in Europe at the onset of the cold war; the deployment of forces to Korea in 1950; the deployment of forces in response to the Cuban missile crisis in 1962; deployment to Vietnam in the 1960's; and deployment to Southwest Asia in 1990.

Although follow-on forces have been used only rarely, we must still maintain the forces necessary to halt an escalating crisis.

Buildup forces are those that can deploy and achieve combat-ready status within a matter of weeks rather than days. These follow-on forces require permissive access to the theater of operations. There must be airfields available for land-based tactical aviation, ports available to receive land forces and logistics support, and property available for assembly and training areas and supplies and maintenance activities.

Unlike initial response forces, these forces may be maintained at a lower level, or tier, of readiness since they will not be required in the theater of operations until after the initial stages of the conflict. They must, however, maintain the ability to return to a high state of readiness within a short time.

Tier III—Conflict Resolution: In only three of the cases mentioned above—Korea, Vietnam, and Southwest Asia—were we engaged in sustained conflict, requiring a large-scale deployment of United States forces.

Forces that seldom deploy must be maintained and available to ensure that we have the force superiority to prevail in any conflict. Conflict resolution forces include those that deploy late in the conflict because of limited airlift or sealift, and the finite capacity of the theater to absorb arriving forces. Also included are the later-arriving heavy ground forces, naval forces that have not already deployed, and air forces that become supportable as airfields and support capability in theater expands.

These combat units should be maintained at a third, or lowest, tier of readiness. They would not be required in the theater of operations until after about the sixth month of the conflict and would, therefore, have sufficient time to make ready for deployment.

Finally, we must reexamine the practice of maintaining combat units for which there is either no identified requirement under our national military strategy, or which cannot be deployed to a theater of operations until after a time certain following the outbreak of a conflict—perhaps 9 months to a year. We should not be spending scarce defense funds on combat forces which do not significantly enhance our national security.

Adjusting the readiness requirements of our military forces requires a thorough reassessment of our warfighting strategy and tactics. We must recognize that maintaining force readiness at different levels, or tiers, may increase the potential risk in the near term. However, the alternative is an antiquated force of the future which would not be capable of effectively protecting our national interests. The resources saved by tiering readiness could be reinvested in modernization and recapitalization of most needed capabilities. The long-term result of tiered readiness may very well be a more capable force for the future, and a force which is affordable under foreseeable fiscal constraints.

The ideas presented in this paper are designed to spur a much-needed debate about U.S. national security strategy and military force structure for the 21st century. The President and the Congress share in the responsibility of providing adequate military forces, properly trained and equipped to deal with whatever consequences a changing world holds for the United States.

We have an opportunity to chart a new course for national security, and we cannot afford inaction when offered a chance to abandon ''business as usual.'' If we ignore the difficult issues facing us today, we will fail in our most basic responsibility—protecting the security of the American people.

I thank my friend from New Mexico, my neighbor. I know how important the issue is that he brings before the Senate. I appreciate his indulgence.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. I say to Senator MCCAIN, might I just comment that not only what he spoke of is vitally important but, as I reviewed the President's budget—not for the details as it pertains to these areas where the Senator finds deficiencies but in terms of the funding—I find that it is $14 billion in budget authority under what was requested in our budget resolution after long negotiations between the House and the Senate. I do not believe that would help any of that. It would only make it somewhat worse. But I wanted to make that comment.

PUBLIC RANGELANDS MANAGEMENT ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Chair lays before the Senate,S. 1459, the Public Rangelands Management Act.

The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1459) to provide for uniform management of livestock grazing on Federal land, and for other purposes.

The Senate proceeded with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, let me try to talk to the Senate about where we are.

We have before us a public lands reform act that deals with grazing and other multiple uses, principally with grazing as one of the multiple uses, and the reform in that for those who are ranching on public domain.

There are a number of Senators on our side and certainly on the Democrat side who want to speak to this issue. There are a number of Senators who have amendments. Let me make a few observations about that.

First, I want to thank the Democrat leader, Senator DOLE, my friend Senator BINGAMAN, and other Democrats who are working on this bill because, as I gather, we are going to try to accommodate each other and in the next couple of days get this matter to a final vote.

The Republican leader has graciously given us the rest of today, most of tomorrow, and tomorrow night as long as is necessary to get this bill finished. For that we very much appreciate his generosity of the Senate's time. But I would say there has also been some comment about our leader about not having any votes on Friday. I would suggest he has also indicated to me that he would like to see this bill finished Thursday night, if we are going to have a Friday without votes to be followed by a Monday, as I understand it, without votes.

So I ask that anyone who has an amendment to this bill—I only know of two at this point, and I have not seen one of them, but the other I am pretty familiar with—I hope they will accommodate us by getting to their manager and to the floor whatever amendments they might have. We do not need any surprises, and there will be none because there are no time agreements on the amendments.

So, if we need a couple of hours to look them over, we can either do it in advance, or we will do it while the Senate is in session here on the floor.

I understand Senator BUMPERS has an amendment that changes the grazing fees. I say to all the Senators present that I have not seen it yet. We are asking that it be presented as soon as possible. When I sit down, I will go try to find out where it is.

AMENDMENT NO. 3555

(Purpose: An amendment in the nature of a substitute to the Public Rangelands Management Act of 1995)

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I have, in behalf of a number of Senators—myself, the chairman of the committee, Senators MURKOWSKI, CRAIG, THOMAS, BURNS, KYL, CAMPBELL, HATCH, BENNETT, KEMPTHORNE, SIMPSON, PRESSLER, and DOLE—a substitute for the pending measure. It is understood that it will be the first thing tendered to the Senate.

On behalf of those Senators and myself, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Mexico (Mr. DOMENICI), for himself, Mr. MURKOWSKI, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. THOMAS, Mr. BURNS, Mr. KYL, Mr. CAMPBELL, Mr. HATCH, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. KEMPTHORNE, Mr. SIMPSON, Mr. PRESSLER, and Mr. DOLE, proposes an amendment numbered 3555.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under ''Amendments Submitted.'')

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, on the floor right now I see four Senators on our side who might want to speak. I would like to propose the following: Senator BINGAMAN is here, and he would like to speak. I would like to yield to my fellow colleagues on this side for some opening remarks and intersperse that between Republicans and Democrats. Is Senator CAMPBELL prepared to make opening remarks?

I propose that Senator BINGAMAN go first. Then, if he is ready, for him proceed, and then we will go over to our side in which two Senators will speak.

I am going to leave the floor. Let us say that after Senator BINGAMAN, Senator BURNS will make his own agreement as to which one would go first. Senator BUMPERS will not be ready until at least 4:30 or a little later.

So why not handle it that way?

Mr. President, Senator STEVENS has been waiting patiently on the floor. I ask unanimous consent that he be given 2 minutes as if in morning business to introduce a bill, after which we will follow the informal format that we just agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. President, I, too, have to leave the floor. I thank my colleagues for permitting me to make this statement.

(The remarks of Mr. STEVENS pertaining to the introduction of S. 1629 are located in today's RECORD under ''Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.'')

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that two members of my staff, Charles Hunt and Sharon Miner, be given floor privileges during the entire proceedings on S. 1459.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Colorado is recognized.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Thank you.

Mr. President, I rise today to voice my support for the Public Rangelands Management Act, and for the courageous efforts of my distinguished colleague and neighbor, Senator DOMENICI.

While I was sitting here, I was just reading a disparaging ad that was taken out in the Wednesday, March 13, 1996, issue of the Albuquerque Journal, the largest city in New Mexico. I have to tell you, nothing could be farther from the truth than this ad. It accuses the Senator from New Mexico of trashing the public lands, of drying up the streams, of driving people off the land, and practically everything except raping the West.

I thought it was very unfortunate that the shrillness of the debate has gotten to that point. But I guess that is what we all face when we try to make changes around here—that we have to face some pretty angry people.

But, from my perspective, the Senator from New Mexico has shown great courage in trying to solve the problem that we have been dealing with for decades here in the U.S. Congress.

As many of you know, the showdown in the West over cattle and grazing rights has been going on for a long time. In the old days, the differences were simply settled over a shot of whiskey or with a shot from the Winchester. But today, with our elevated laws and regulations, we attempt to settle our differences using the power of legislative language and administrative rulemaking. However, it is clear when you read ads like that, that the raw passions and emotions over the management of livestock on public lands often persevere and drive these very strong debates. Unfortunately for the family rancher whose very livelihood is dependent on the fate of these laws and regulations, our debates have reached such emotional heights that we have almost forgotten what actually happens to the family that has to make a living on the land.

But this issue should not be about emotions or politics. It should not be driven along partisan lines.

The debate today should not be about who is right and who is wrong, on whichever version of rules and regulations we are looking at. It should not be about the environmentalists versus the ranchers. The debate should be about how to best nurture sustainable ecosystems on the public lands in the West while still maintaining a consistent, healthy, and viable environment for ranchers and farmers to make a living on the public lands.

I believe the bill of the Senator from New Mexico does that. He has worked on it with a number of us from the West for many months. We have gone through trial and error and met with a great resistance. I think perhaps we finally have something that can pass.

I ask my colleagues for a moment to put themselves in the shoes or boots, as the case may be, of the western rancher today. There is a lot of mystique over who they actually are and what they do. Oftentimes we hear debates in the Senate about the so-called welfare ranchers or the rich CEO's or tycoons or perhaps surgeons who bought some land out West, and have some grazing permits but do not actually know how to ranch. We hear these stories of people taking advantage of the system. But I am here to tell you most of us who really believe in the West and ranching in America are not here to defend them. We are here to try to defend our friends, and neighbors. These are the people we know who have helped build Western America and who have a very strong belief in taking care of the land.

Contrary to perception that these folks somehow make a mint off the public lands, most independent cattle ranchers today are struggling with weak and unpredictable markets and increasing instability of rules and regulations that govern the way they do their daily chores. The uncertainty of Federal legislation often puts ranchers in a precarious position when they have to borrow money from their local bank. They have no idea what to tell the banker regarding the stability of their permit, given the inability of Congress to resolve this issue.

Raising livestock is a tough business, and I venture to say that those who have survived the back breaking work, the tough climate, the market fluctuations and the political pressures, too, are simply in it because they love the land and animals that subsist off it. These are people who care about the land not only because they have to, but because they want to.

I think I can tell you with certainty that any rancher who does not take care of the land simply does not stay in business. I know for a fact that they are better stewards than they are often given credit for.

Over the last few years, the Department of Interior, in my opinion, has engaged in kind of a deceitful and arrogant attempt to override westerners and our ability to make decisions for ourselves. The underlying message of the Department of Interior's rangeland reform basically states that we are not smart enough to figure out what is good for us. Indeed, according to the regulations promulgated last summer by the Secretary of Interior, we apparently need the assistance of beltway bureaucrats, national environmental groups, and virtually everyone else in the country with a peripheral interest in our business in order to make even the smallest decisions on our ranches, including where to put a water holding tank or a cattle guard.

Unlike the administration's proposal, the Public Rangelands Management Act, which Senator DOMENICI has introduced will empower local people to make the decisions that affect them directly. This bill does nothing to prevent broader public participation in management plans or recreational activities on the public lands.

Under S. 1459, affected interests are given the opportunity to comment on seven different kinds of proposed decisions affecting grazing allotments. By managing the public participation process, S. 1459 will provide much needed relief for permittees and Federal land managers from frivolous protests from out-of-State activists who oppose any use of the public lands whatsoever.

I believe that the Department of the Interior's rangeland reform is an undermining effort to overturn a lifestyle that has been part of the history of this Nation. In its zealous attempt to increase the diversity of the biological life on the range, it is threatening that lifestyle and operation that is already endangered. As I mentioned earlier, ranching is a tough business and it has become increasingly more difficult. Literally hundreds of ranchers in the West who were in business just 5 or 6 years ago, have already gone into bankruptcy.

In my own State of Colorado, many real estate developers are taking advantage of the unstable market and buying ranchers out to split up their land and subdivide the property into small units and tracts. Ironically, by attempting to increase diversity on the range, the rangeland regulations as they are promulgated by the Secretary of the Interior will only assist the paving over of the brush, the grassland, and the fields, putting them all under concrete and plywood. I think even the most ardent environmentalists would prefer to see cattle in those meadows and fields rather than pavement and condominiums.

In fact, if we look at the Department of the Interior's own reports, we can see evidence that indicates that the rangelands are in some of the best conditions they have ever been and continue to improve. For example, according to the Deer and Elk Management Analysis Guide published in 1993 by the Colorado Division of Wildlife, Colorado's elk population is estimated to have increased from 3,000 animals in 1900 to 185,000 in 1990. That report also indicates that Colorado's deer population is estimated to have increased from 6,000 animals in 1900 to 600,000 in 1990.

As a western Senator who has worked closely with grazing for many years, I truly understand the difficulty of trying to achieve a consensus on this issue. I have to say that the time has run out, and S. 1459 presents us with the best and I think perhaps the last chance to balance the concerns of the environmentalists with the concerns of the ranchers in a constructive manner. If you take away all the rhetoric, you will find that this bill has been crafted from collaboration and compromise.

In closing, Mr. President, I submit for the RECORD two resolutions. One was passed by the Colorado State Joint House and Senate Memorial Committee supporting the Public Rangelands Management Act. The second is a resolution from Club 20 which is an organization built from 20 counties in western Colorado which also declares their support for Senator DOMENICI's bill. I ask unanimous consent to have those printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the resolutions were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COLORADO SENATE JOINT MEMORIAL 96–3

Whereas, The federal rangelands are currently in the best condition that they have ever been in; and

Whereas, The condition of the federal rangelands has improved and continues to improve through the efforts of holders of federal grazing rights; and

Whereas, As a consequence of the efforts of holders of federal grazing rights, the improvement of the federal rangelands has resulted in stabilized and increasing populations of big game and wildlife, and further efforts will continue to provide long term benefits to big game and wildlife; and

Whereas, The western livestock industry is a vital component of the economy of Colorado and the economy of the United States, providing the people of the nation and the world with a reliable and healthy source of food; and

Whereas, Fees for grazing on federal lands must reflect a fair return to the federal government; and

Whereas, The Public Rangelands Management Act (S. 1459) has been introduced in the United States Congress; and

Whereas, The objectives of the Public Rangelands Management Act are to promote healthy sustainable rangelands and to enhance the productivity of federal lands while at the same time facilitating the orderly use, improvement, and development of those lands; and

Whereas, The Public Rangelands Management Act gives consideration to the need for stabilization of the livestock industry, scientific monitoring of trends, the environmental health of riparian areas, and the needs of wildlife populations dependent on federal lands; now, therefore,

Be It Resolved by the Senate of the Sixtieth General Assembly of the State of Colorado, the House of Representatives concurring herein:

That we, the members of the Colorado General Assembly, strongly urge the Congress of the United States to pass the Public Rangelands Management Act (S. 1459).

Be it further Resolved, That copies of this Memorial be sent to the Majority Leader of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, and the Secretary of the United States Department of Interior.

RESOLUTIONS BY VOICE OF THE WESTERN SLOPE, SINCE 1953

PUBLIC RANGELANDS MANAGEMENT ACT

Whereas: 73% of the Western Colorado is owned by the federal government, mostly in the form of BLM and Forest Service lands, and

Whereas: The use of these lands for grazing is critical to the economic viability of Western Colorado's livestock industry and to the communities supported by that industry, and

Whereas: The Interior Department's recently-adopted revised grazing regulations provide an unfair and unacceptable environment for the livestock industry to operate in, specifically in terms of the makeup of local grazing advisory councils, lack of incentives for investment in the range resource by the permitees, lack of provisions to encourage stability through the use of extended permit terms, and lack of needed efficiencies in the administration of grazing management on these public lands, and

Whereas: The formula for determining the livestock grazing fee needs to be established in an equitable manner, in law, in order to provide fair return to the public and a reasonable rate for permitees, now therefore be it Resolved by the Board of Directors at its 1995 Fall Meeting that CLUB 20 supports the concepts embodied in S. 852 and H.R. 1713 as introduced, specifically:

Addition of public representatives on local grazing advisory councils while still allowing majority representation by those with an economic interest at stake,

Adoption of a new formula for establishing the public lands grazing fee in order to ensure a fair return to the public and a reasonable rate for permitees, Provisions to ensure proper management of public lands resources through NEPA-documented land use plans, range monitoring and enforcement.

Streamlining of the NEPA documentation process to allow for full public participation in the development of area land use plans without unnecessarily encumbering local agency officers and preventing them from carrying out sound range management.

RESOLUTION BY VOICE OF THE WESTERN SLOPE, SINCE 1953

RANGELAND REFORM 1994

Whereas: Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt has proposed grazing reforms which contain many administrative changes unacceptable to the West, and

Whereas: CLUB 20 has always supported the multiple use of public lands, and food production, as a component of the multiple use of public lands, contributes significantly to the total food production of the United States, and

Whereas: As a whole, ranchers have been excellent stewards of the rangelands, benefiting both livestock and wildlife, and

Whereas: CLUB 20 believes Secretary Babbitt's proposed regulatory rangeland reform will ruin the livestock industry and substantially affect the total economy of Western Colorado, and

Whereas: It is not in the best interest of Western Colorado for affected ranches to be subdivided and sold in small parcels, and now therefore be it

Resolved by the CLUB 20 Board of Directors at its Fall Meeting, September 10, 1993, the CLUB 20 cannot support the administrative changes suggested in the proposed ''Rangeland Reform '94''.

Mr. CAMPBELL. In addition, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a Denver Post editorial of March 13 of 1995. Although I will not read the whole thing, which endorses S. 1459, I wish to read the first paragraph which states under the headline, The Domenici Grazing Bill Fosters Better Stewardship:

Some Eastern-based environmental groups have been waging a political holy war against the Public Rangelands Management Act authored by New Mexico Senator Pete DOMENICI, but it seems clear that both the long-term environmental and economic interests of the West would be well served by this legislation to provide some badly needed stability and balance to the management of the public lands.

This is from one of our State's largest newspapers.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DOMENICI'S GRAZING BILL FOSTERS BETTER STEWARDSHIP

Some Eastern-based environmental groups have been waging a political holy war against the Public Rangelands Management Act authored by New Mexico Sen. Pete Domenici. But it seems clear that both the long-term environmental and economic interests of the West would be well served by this legislation to provide some badly needed stability and balance to the management of public lands.

Domenici's bill is basically a response to new rangeland management rules proposed in February by Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt after many hearings and much debate. Critics of the Domenici bill are now trying to kill it in the belief that it is less favorable to the environmental lobby than Babbitt's rules. While they are undoubtedly right on that point, the critics are overlooking a crucial fact: What a liberal Democratic administration can arbitrarily impose, the next conservative Republican administration can arbitrarily repeal.

Administrative mandates without the permanence of law thus raise the specter of wild oscillations in policies that lock everything up after one election, then encourage short-term plunder after the next. That's the opposite of what the West needs—a policy that fosters long-term stewardship of the land, rewarding users who manage it carefully and punishing the greedy or stupid who abuse it for short-term gain. Both Babbitt and Domenici are aiming at that goal, but only Domenici is trying to cast it into long-term law.

The swinging-pendulum policies of recent years clearly have been bad for all concerned. Ranchers who aren't sure they can continue leasing land have no incentive to make expensive investments to control erosion or other problems. Likewise, past policies have been too slow to punish the small minority of ranchers who have neglected the land. In contrast, Domenici's bill, S. 852, encourages the Department of Interior to enter into cooperative agreements with permit holders for ''the construction, installation, modification, maintenance, or use of a permanent range improvement or development of a rangeland.''

Importantly, the Public Rangeland Management Act would allow grazing leases to be issued for up to 15 years—encouraging lessees to make long-term improvements and to carefully nourish the land. And while it would increase grazing fees approximately 30 percent from existing levels, the PRMA would also establish future fees by a formula keyed to the actual value of such leases as reflected in the price of the animals that can be raised on them. Again, by assuring a fair return to taxpayers and ranchers alike, the Domenici bill would reduce the risk of radical ''windfall or wipeout'' oscillations in fees which could themselves encourage overgrazing or other misuse of the land.

Some of the more hysterical opponents of the bill have claimed it would ban hiking, fishing or hunting from the public lands. The simplest answer to that charge is that it is an outright lie. The bill in fact encourages conservation, control of soil erosion and ''consideration of wildlife populations and habitat, consistent with land-use plans, multiple-use, sustained yield, (and) environmental values.''

The bill does give an important role to ranchers themselves in establishing grazing policies, recognizing that families who, in some cases, have managed public lands for more than a century are obvious sources of expertise and concern for their long-term welfare. But local citizens, public officials and environmental groups are also given seats at the policy table.

The Public Rangeland Management Act isn't perfect, and we welcome efforts to improve it as it wends its way through Congress. But it is a good start toward the wiser stewardship the public lands so clearly require.

Mr. CAMPBELL. So with that, Mr. President, I will yield the floor and simply urge my colleagues to support this well-crafted legislation. Under the leadership of Senator DOMENICI, it has taken many of us much time and effort.

I thank the Chair.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMPSON). The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I wish to once again repeat and inquire as to whether or not we might see and be able to read the Bumpers amendment with reference to increased grazing fees. If it is prepared, I hope somebody would let us see it. We would like to have a vote as soon as possible and that would be the one we would vote on.

Mr. President, I am going to very quickly yield to my friend, Senator BINGAMAN, and then to the Senator from Wyoming.

Could I just take 3 minutes? I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. President, when I became a Senator 24 years ago, I knew nothing about grazing, nothing about rangeland, nothing about public domain. I traveled New Mexico and met some of the finest people in the world. It just so happens that more times than not they were ranchers or ranching families. They had their house out there on a little piece of private property and some of their own property and then they had permit land. Some of them had been there for two generations, maybe in succession in their family. I can guarantee you that I never met finer folks, nor have I ever met folks who are more dedicated to maintaining the public domain and their stewardship. They just reeked in stewardship of this land. They always talked about it in terms of how they preserved it, how it maintained their families and how so long as they could keep that together and keep the rangeland in good condition, they could be there and enjoy this lifestyle and this manner of living.

We are in danger of many things in the western public domain lands. Some say the West is gone and urbanization shall take over. I do not really believe that. There is so much public domain and open space that the Federal Government is going to have to decide now and for decades to come how they want the people of this country to utilize it. Many, many years ago, order was made out of total chaos and the Taylor Grazing Act was passed for America.

It recognized multiple uses, and a simple proposition that you could graze cattle, pay a reasonable fee to the Government, do maintenance on that land to be able to tend to those cattle, and in addition have hunting, fishing, recreation, and the other things that go with it—namely, multiple use. Nothing, in my opinion, has changed. We ought to have multiple use. But we do not have to destroy the lifestyle of ranchers in our State and across the West, in an effort to maintain this multiple use.

If anyone would like to go to New Mexico and visit the ranchers today, he would see there are no rich ranchers. For those who worry about us representing rich ranchers, if they are rich they were rich before they got on the ranch. They are not getting rich on the ranch. As a matter of fact, there are more ranchers in New Mexico close to bankruptcy than any time in our history. After 3 years of drought and incessant demands made upon them by the Secretary of Interior and his rules and regulations, and excessive demands made upon their stewardship every time they turn around, we have them on the brink of disappearing without us having to pass laws that will make them disappear, or even without enforcing Secretary Babbitt's rules, which will surely, within a decade, even without droughts, see to it that ranching is a disappearing way of life.

In addition, I suggest, just to add to all the fury, cattle prices have come down half—is that correct, I say to my friend?

Mr. BURNS. A third.

Mr. DOMENICI. A third. So, look out where the rancher has 500 head. It is worth a third less this year than last year. With the drought setting in, they are cutting back. So they do not have any great shakes for those who are worried about rich ranchers and those of us in the West who are representing them, representing rich ranchers. We are trying to represent a way of life. In northern New Mexico, hundreds and hundreds of Hispanic Americans, in the third and fourth generation, have small ranches with few, maybe 100, 200 head, and some far less, on their annual permit of head on the range.

Frankly, this bill that is before us, contrary to everything that has been said, does not take away any rights from hunters and fishermen and those women who hunt and fish. We just repeated it over and over in the bill, that whatever their rights were, they remain.

There are some who want us to resolve all the issues between the hunting-fishing population and the ranchers. There is always some kind of problem with the public domain, some kind of friction. So some would like it resolved in this bill to the satisfaction of one group or the other. I believe we leave it just where it was. It is other regulations that concern us.

Before we are finished, we will elaborate to the Senators who have interest, and the American people who are interested, the long litany of new regulations that Secretary Babbitt would impose on the rangeland. Frankly, the Interior Department, under his leadership, is playing very, very cute. None of those things are going to bite until perhaps next year or the year after. But, by the time those regulations are imposed on the ranchers, in my State and across the West, what I have just described as the condition will be far worse.

I cannot believe that those who want habitat for wildlife, those who want hunting and fishing on the public domain, where cattle is also permitted to graze—I cannot believe that they truly believe they will be better off if cattle are not on the public domain. For those who were for cattle free—at one time the yell was ''Cattle free by '93.'' I do not know what it is now, but it is not too many years off, for many of those who oppose this bill.

I wonder what we are going to do to supply water and habitat and all the things that are jointly used by the cattle that graze and the wildlife that inhabits the land. Who is going to pay for all that? Is the Federal Government going to go out and develop these water sources for them? Of course not.

Nonetheless, there are some who would like this bill today to permit those who have a public interest—just a public interest—permit them to get into the details of operating a ranch. We have withstood that. We give them, the environmentalists and others, conservationists—we give them plenty of input in this bill and plenty of opportunity to be part of it. But we have resisted permitting those who have just a public interest to get into the day-by-day management, get into the day-by-day reissuing of permits. We firmly believe that is not the way it ought to be done. It will yield nothing but havoc on the range, which needs stability these days, as it has never needed it before.

So, perhaps by Thursday night we will get a few questions answered and finish up some votes. I am very hopeful we will add stability to the West in the public domain, and will at least indicate that, while many of us do not understand, many Senators do not come from our areas, we are willing to say give this lifestyle, the lifestyle of being a cowboy, a private cowboy who owns a ranch—permit that lifestyle to exist for a few more decades.

I yield the floor.

Mr. BINGAMAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, many of us in this body have tried to resolve the controversies that surround grazing on public lands. We have been working on it for several years. I also believe, as my colleagues who have already spoken believe, that a healthy livestock industry on the public lands is in the best interests of the country. Furthermore, I believe that the continued uncertainty that surrounds this industry, and the continued controversy that surrounds it, benefits nobody.

However, unlike some of my colleagues who support this bill, S. 1459, I contend that the uncertainty and the controversy will not be resolved by this bill. I believe it will not be resolved because the bill, as it now reads, in the substitute form, does reduce public input into decisions related to our public lands. It does elevate grazing into a preferred status as a use of our public lands. And, third, it does unduly limit the ability of the land managers who work for the public to carry out their responsibilities.

I believe that the resolution of these disagreements and these controversies can only be achieved when a balance is struck that respects the needs of all public land users, not just the ranchers. For a number of years, I and many of my colleagues have done what we could to ensure that any reform effort that was enacted would be fair to both livestock producers and the American public. My colleague has referred to the drought that we have experienced in the West. Certainly we have in my part of the country, in New Mexico. There has been a severe drought, and we are still in a very severe drought which adversely affects anyone who is trying to make a living in agriculture.

He also referred to the low prices of cattle. Again, that is a very real problem for people in the ranching industry in my State. I certainly do not dispute that. I think that is a very real concern and one which we are taking into account in the position that I will advocate here today.

But the other part was references to the efforts of the Secretary of the Interior to run these people out of a way of life, and to put in place extremely onerous provisions that will terminate their ability to use the public lands. There I have to disagree with much of what my colleague said.

Last summer, after many months of meetings, I think probably the most extensive set of public meetings that I am aware of having had conducted, at least in recent years, since I have been in the Senate, the Secretary of Interior and the President did promulgate regulations that sought to achieve a balance between the various uses of our public lands. If we are serious about providing stability and certainty to public land livestock producers, we need to adopt a balanced solution that, first of all, addresses the concerns of livestock producers; second, respects the need of all public land users—the needs that they have; and, third, provides some reasonable authority to the agencies that we have given responsibility to manage the public lands.

If we deviate from the balance in either direction, we are merely inviting continued strife and uncertainty as the aggrieved group, whichever group it happens to be, pursues legislative or regulatory fixes.

The Babbitt regulations, which have been referred to by my colleague, create some legitimate concerns for the permittees in my State.

In the substitute which several Senators and I intend to offer later in the discussion, we try to fix those specific concerns that have been pointed out to us and restore the balance that needs to be there in our grazing policies. However, if we pass S. 1459 in its current form, as the substitute was sent to the desk, we go beyond fixing those concerns and, in my view, we once again will throw the grazing policy of this country out of balance. This lack of balance will fester, just like the permittees' concerns have been festering, and lead to more instability and more lawsuits and more hard feelings.

We will likely be addressing this issue again in future years if we err on the side which I fear this bill will cause us to err on. We cannot afford to let that happen. We owe it to the grazing permittees, to their families and communities that rely on the livestock industry, as well as to other public land users and the American public in general, to resolve the dispute now in a balanced and sustainable manner that will withstand the test of time.

Mr. President, I want at this point to go through some of the specific concerns we have with S. 1459. In order to do that, let me put up a couple of charts just to keep track of where I am in the discussion.

A first concern which I have repeated numerous times—and let me say by way of introduction, the bill we are now considering is not the bill which was introduced last summer by my colleague from New Mexico. It is an improved bill. I think the designation of the earlier bill, S. 852, in my view, was substantially more lopsided and one-sided than this bill is, but significant problems still exist in the legislation. Let me go through those.

One of those major problems is that grazing is still given preference as a use of the public land over other uses in the legislation. First, let me talk about conservation use.

It is ambiguous in S. 1459 whether conservation use of a grazing allotment is allowed. Conservation use is where the permittee would voluntarily refrain from grazing all or a portion of the allotment in order to improve the health of the range. Sponsors of the bill will claim that such uses would be permitted. However, I will submit for the RECORD a letter that The Nature Conservancy has sent to me concerning this matter, dated March 16, 1996.

That letter states, Mr. President, and I will quote a couple sentences:

But our qualification—

That is qualification to be a permittee.

has been challenged in a case now before the Interior Board of Land Appeals. Part of the argument was that because we were resting an allotment, we could not be said to be ''in the livestock business'' (as required by the regulations that would be reinstated by S. 1459), despite the fact that at other locations we own, raise and sell domestic livestock and depend on the revenues we get from the cattle business to support our operations.

Creating a category of ''conservation use'' of Federal grazing permits would make it clear that The Nature Conservancy could hold a permit and rest it.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD this letter from Russell Shay, who is the senior policy adviser to The Nature Conservancy.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE NATURE CONSERVANCY,
Arlington, VA, March 16, 1996.

Hon. JEFF BINGAMAN,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR BINGAMAN: Thank you for asking us about our use of grazing permits on public lands, and the potential impacts of new grazing legislation on them. We currently hold 23 of the more than 26,000 federal grazing permits on Bureau of Land Management (BLM) or Forest Service lands. Those 23 permits are spread across 9 different states. Our review of BLM and Forest Service records has not found any other conservation organizations to be currently listed as owners of federal grazing permits.

The Nature Conservancy and cooperating ranching partners actively graze domestic livestock on about half of our allotments. The others are being rested in non-use being annually approved by the local BLM or Forest Service professional land manager. Our permits were each approved by local managers whose judgement was that The Nature Conservancy was qualified to hold them. But our qualification has been challenged in a case now before the Interior Board of Land Appeals. Part of the argument was that because we were resting an allotment, we could not be said to be ''in the livestock business'' (as required by the regulations that would be reinstated by S. 1459), despite the fact that at other locations we own, raise and sell domestic livestock and depend on the revenues we get from the cattle business to support our operations.

Creating a category of ''conservation use'' of federal grazing permits would make it clear that The Nature Conservancy could hold a permit and rest it. It would also provide a framework that would allow for local consideration of such uses and their effects through public participation in the land-use planning and allotment management plan approval processes.

Sincerely,

RUSSELL SHAY,
Senior Policy Advisor.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I think it is clear when you analyze the bill—and I am sure we will have more discussion on this—it is clear that entities that are not engaged in the livestock business under the language of this bill could not hold a permit in their own name, and I think that is something we should correct. We will propose to do that in the substitute that we offer.

A second concern, which is on this chart—I hope that people can see this; I am sure most cannot—but a second concern that I have with S. 1459, a second way in which grazing is given a preference is that S. 1459 will, for the first time, allow permittees to hold title to permanent range improvements on forest land.

For example, under existing law and regulations, a Forest Service grazing permittee is granted a permit to construct a range improvement and the title to that improvement is in the name of the United States. That has always been the law in our national forests.

S. 1459 will allow the permittee to hold title in proportion to the value of the contribution that that permittee has made for the cost of construction, and that is a major change for those who are permittees in the Forest Service.

A third way in which grazing is given a preference is that S. 1459 statutorily provides for granting private property rights on BLM land as well as on forest land. The old BLM grazing regulations provided only regulatory authority for granting title to permanent range improvements on BLM land. This would take what was in the old regulations promulgated under the administration of Secretary Watt and would put that into statute for the first time.

A fourth ground for concern is the wording of the objectives in the bill. Here my reading of the objectives is that they favor the stability of the livestock industry over the needs of wildlife. The objectives are extremely important in this, as pointed out in the Congressional Research Service report, which makes the very important point that under section 105(A), management standards and guidelines are to be consistent with the objectives and become directly effective upon plans by operation of law.

Under section 134(A), terms and conditions of a permit must be necessary to achieve the objectives of title I. Therefore the objectives have more significance than would be true if they provided only a general guidance unrelated to particular processes.

A fifth concern with regard to grazing being a preferred use of the lands, Mr. President, is that S. 1459 provides for cooperative range improvement agreements with permittees and lessees only. Currently, about 17 percent of all BLM range improvements have nonpermittee cooperators, such as Quails Unlimited.

The old grazing regulations provided that the Secretary could enter into a cooperative range improvement agreement with any person. This bill goes further in restricting the Secretary, further than the regulations promulgated in the Watt administration or developed in the Watt administration, and says that the Secretary is only able to enter into these cooperative agreements with permittees and lessees.

Let me move to the second of the three major points I want to make at this time, and that is this bill does reduce the extent of public involvement.

The first way in which it reduces the extent of public involvement is that it denies the right of affected interests, people who are determined to be affected interests, to protest grazing decisions on public land and national forests. S. 1459 allows an affected interest to be notified of proposed decisions and given an opportunity for comment and informal consultation. However, only an applicant, or permittee, or lessee may protest a proposed decision. Further, in the absence of a timely filed protest, the proposed decision becomes final.

Again, referring to the Congressional Research Service analysis, it says:

A protest, similar to a predecisional appeal that gives the public an opportunity to object to a proposal, gives the agency an opportunity to change or modify its course before commitment of further time or effort.

These provisions appear to mean—these provisions being S. 1459—appear to mean that unless an applicant or permittee protests a proposed decision, comments or other input from other sources will not be taken into account because, absent a protest, the proposed decision does become final. If this is a correct reading, then the opportunity for comment and consultation does not appear to be meaningful.

A second way in which public involvement is reduced is, it is possible that only ranchers, under our reading of the bill, would qualify to file an appeal of a final decision affecting the public lands. A person who is adversely affected—and that phrase is a term of art, because it is used in the legislation—a person who is adversely affected within the meaning of 5 U.S.C. 702 is permitted to appeal. This cited code refers back to the relevant statute.

In this case, the relevant statute would be S. 1459. On that issue, the analysis by the Congressional Research Service says that the persons included within this provision are not clear. The cited code section refers back to the relevant statutes, thereby setting up a circularity.

Since the CRS report was published, new appeals language has been added that further clouds the situation. It states—I will quote this from the bill—it says:

> Being an affected interest, as described in section 1043, does not in and of itself confer standing to appeal a final decision upon any individual or organization.

Mr. President, a third way in which public input, involvement is reduced is that S. 1459 exempts on-the-ground management from the provisions of the National Environmental Policy Act, or NEPA. As the bill is presently presented, the National Environmental Policy Act, commonly known as NEPA, is going to be the topic of a great deal of our discussion. NEPA is one of the main tools used by land managers to analyze the health of the land and to analyze the potential affect on the land.

S. 1459 exempts on-the-ground management from NEPA. In discussing the elimination of NEPA in site-specific situations, this Congressional Research Service report states:

> An activity could readily comport with a land use plan and yet have many harmful aspects if carried out in a particular area. Therefore, the elimination of site-specific analysis is a significant change in current law and procedures, and could result in significant effects on the conditions of the land.

In place of NEPA, S. 1459 proposes a review of resource conditions. Essentially, the bill states that upon the issuance, renewal or transfer of a grazing permit or lease, at least once every 6 years the Secretary shall review all available monitoring data from the affected allotment. The central problem with this provision is that monitoring data usually consists of very specific measures of vegetative attributes. That monitoring data, in many cases, is not available.

A fourth reason that I would cite why public involvement is reduced under this bill is, aside from the grazing advisory councils, the public is not given a say in range improvements. The old grazing regulations allow affected interests a say in the development of range improvements. As I read the provisions of this bill, it does not.

Let me move to the third major concern that I have, Mr. President. That is that S. 1459, as drafted, and as being considered here, unduly ties the hands of lands managers. It does so in several respects. First of all, the application of terms and conditions needed to protect the land requires the development of a formal allotment management plan under this bill.

Currently, less than 25 percent of BLM land and national forest allotments have allotment management plans prepared for them. The old grazing regulations' terms and conditions were attached as needed to protect resources and no allotment management plan was required.

A second reason that I believe the current bill, Senate bill 1459, ties the hands of land managers is that the number of animal unit months would be established in land use plans in this bill. The land use plan often covers millions of acres, contains very general language, and S. 1459 would require costly, time-consuming land use plans and amendments to establish and make changes in grazing use for each allotment. In the old regulations, specific grazing use was determined through site-specific analysis, not through amendments to the entire land use plan.

A third reason that the hands of land managers will be tied by this legislation is that in conducting monitoring activity, S. 1459 requires the manager to give prior notice, to the extent practicable, of not less than 48 hours. This exception to the notice creates a burden of proof that has never existed before.

I also point out this creates a burden of proof when a land manager is dealing with a grazing permittee which does not exist when dealing with any other permittee on our public lands. Someone involved in the oil and gas industry certainly is not entitled to any 48-hour notice prior to monitoring activity taking place. It is inconsistent with the concept of these being public lands, Mr. President, to say that the manager of those public lands has to give notice 48 hours in advance before being able to view the lands and determine the condition. In the old grazing regulations no such advanced notice was required.

A fourth way in which the hands of land managers are tied, in my view, in this bill is that S. 1459 would allow a sublease in cases where permittees neither own nor control the livestock. In the old regulations, ownership or control of the livestock was required. As I understand it, that is an appropriate requirement because clearly the BLM or the Forest Service cannot be expected to go around trying to find who is accountable for damage to the public lands. They have a right to assume that the person that has the permit or the lease has control of the livestock or ownership of that livestock and can be held accountable for what happens on the land.

Mr. President, let me just conclude this set of initial comments here by saying that I do believe that we need to keep working to get a balance. We will offer later in the debate a substitute proposal which we believe does a better job of striking a middle ground and addresses the specific concerns that have been raised in the current Department of Interior regulations but does not repeal them entirely, as this legislation would. We believe that it gets us much closer to something that looks out for the interests of all those who have a valid interest in the use of the public lands.

So I will stop with that, Mr. President. I know there are many others on the floor who wish to speak. I yield the floor.

Mr. THOMAS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I rise in support of the Domenici bill. I would like to give a little background on it. I think later in the debate it will be necessary for us to talk a little bit about the comments of the Senator from New Mexico in that I think they are exactly where we are in terms of wanting more bureaucracy, wanting the bureaucracy to have more and more input. That is precisely what we want to get away from.

Let me just say one thing in terms of this idea that keeps rising up that grazing is the preferred use. Let me read from page 6 here, on line 14.

> Nothing in this title shall limit or preclude the use or the access of Federal lands for hunting, fishing, recreational, watershed management, or other appropriate multiple-use activities in accordance with applicable Federal and State law in the principal or multiple use.

Not only is it there in this instance, it is there in a number of instances and has been the focus of our interest over the last several months. I really do not think there is any substance to that kind of an argument, although we continue to hear it.

Mr. President, let me be a little broader. I think one of the things about this whole debate is that there is a unique aspect to western public lands. Most Members of this body are not as familiar with them. I think you have to start with the uniqueness of the West. You have to start with the uniqueness of the idea that Western States run anywhere—in my State from 50 percent Federal ownership, and in Nevada, I think, as high as 80 to 85 percent Federal ownership. I think you have to talk about that a little bit. I brought a map to give you some idea of the kind of complexity involved in the management of public lands.

First of all, there are a number of kinds of public lands. The idea that public land is public land is not the case. Many people in New Jersey would say, ''Well, public land must mean Yellowstone Park or Teton Park.'' It does not. There is a substantial difference. We have the parks which were reserved and withdrawn for a special purpose by the Congress. We have the forest which was reserved by action of the Congress. You have Indian reservations. You have other kinds of lands that were withdrawn—wilderness in the forest. These things were all set aside for a specific purpose because of the uniqueness of that land.

The remainder is basically what we are talking about here. We are talking about those lands that were residual lands, lands that were left in the State after the homesteaders came and took up the base lands, took up the lands, frankly, where the water is, where the winter feed is, took up the most valuable lands, and the others were left there. That is basically what we are talking about.

Let me tell you from a standpoint of a westerner, if we do not have a multiple-use policy for the lands, we have very little economic future to look forward to. By ''multiple use,'' we are talking about hunting and fishing, talking about outfitting and mining, talking about oil, talking about grazing. These things have for a very long time been compatible with one another.

Some of this map is hard to see. The colored part belongs to the Federal Government. The green color is the Forest Service, the purple is the park, and all of this yellow are BLM lands. We can see how interspersed they are. This is particularly unique. These are called the checkerboard lands. When the West was developed and the railroads were encouraged to be out West, they were granted 20 miles on either side of the railroad, and every other section belongs to the Federal Government. In between are private sections. For the most part, there are no fences there. You do not manage these separately. These are very unproductive lands. This land probably takes 100 acres for one cow unit to last for a year. This is not the kind of land that people think about when they think about a pasture in Indiana.

When we were in the House, we went through this thing about the fees. The chairman of the committee was from Indiana. He had this pasture where the grass grew this big, and he could not figure out why the fee should not be the same for this land as it is for his land. It is quite different.

What we have in terms of landownership patterns you have to take into account. Here is a blowup of the checkerboard land. Every other section here belongs to the Federal Government; the others are private. These are interspersed. The blue ones happen to be State lands. You can see, in order to manage this stuff, you have to have some of these local folks do it.

Now, talking very briefly about the condition of the range, this is the figure put together by the Bureau of Land Management in Wyoming. It talks about the percentage of acreage in a condition class. This green is called excellent and good; the red dotted line is poor. This starts in 1974 and goes up to 1993. This is the good and excellent here. This is the condition of the range. This is the poor down here. It has improved substantially.

Let me give you another reason why that is the case. This is the big game population on public lands in Wyoming. We talk about the multiple uses being able to work together. Here is antelope. In 1962, we had 97,000 of those rascals running around; now we have 226,721. I got one last year. Now, deer, 87,000; go up to 250,000. Elk, 12,000 in 1962; now 35,000. You can see the percentage increase over a 28-year period.

My point is that the range is in good shape. The range is carefully husbanded by these ranchers. Why? Not just because they are entirely gratuitous, but because their future depends on year after year usage of this resource.

I must tell you, having grown up there, that this wildlife would not do well if there was not somebody out there using this land for something else and preparing water, often digging out a spring and damming it up so there is water available, not only for cattle or sheep, but also for wildlife as well.

It is a very unique thing, Mr. President. I think we need to start with understanding that. Western cattlemen, western livestock people, of course, a very important part of our society, not only because of these families that live and work there but because these are the sustaining families for the small towns that are there. This is the economy for much of the West. This is a historic time now of low prices for cattle, as everybody knows. The considerable loss to predators has also been a problem and makes it much more difficult to make a living.

Now we face, I think, excessive regulations put on by the Bureau of Land Management. The Senator from New Mexico mentioned the number of trips of the Secretary out there. He is right. I was involved in very many of those. For 2 years we had meetings, meetings, and meetings. When the regulations were put out, they were put out almost precisely as they were initially. You can have meetings until you are green in the face; that does not mean there will be any difference. That is a fact.

That is where we are. We are seeking to make some changes here from this movement by the Secretary for more and more bureaucracy in Washington, to some movement where there is more impact of the people, more decisionmaking by the people who live there. I do not think there is any question that rangeland reform will drive families off the range, create some economic problems in our areas. We worry about that, naturally. Maybe the broader, more generic concern, however, is the maximum, ultimate best use of multiple resources. Grass is a renewable resource, one that you manage.

This Public Rangelands Management Act is a great step forward. It is something we have worked on for over a year. We have taken it to our friends on the other side of the aisle; we have talked about it; they have come back; they have agreed to some things; we have put in much more than we have changed for ourselves. However, there are some changes in which we do not basically agree. One of them is the degree of bureaucratic involvement in this bill.

We have established and very carefully established a relationship and a balance between grazing and hunting and those activities. Personally, I come from a place where hunting and fishing is a very major function between Cody, WY, and Yellowstone Park. There is grazing, but hunting and fishing is equally important from the economic standpoint. I understand that. We balance that. That is what this bill does.

I think for too long over the last several years the grazing question has zeroed in on the fee. The Secretary does not even have a change in the fee. We have a fee. We have a simplified fee based on the value of the product, based on the average value of the livestock, and it raises the fee even in spite of the economic condition that livestock people are in. This is not a question, this time, about fee. It is a fee that is based on the product.

Too often there are comparisons made between this land and this land, these services and these services. I am sure we will hear, ''Well, the State charges more, gets paid more, private gets paid more.'' Yes; they do. They also provide a great many more services. You can have exclusive use of State land, but you cannot do that with public land.

There are differences. Someone said it is a little like the difference between a furnished apartment and an unfurnished apartment. That is exactly right.

Mr. President, I think we have a great opportunity to move forward to do something that has needed to be resolved for a very long time, and I think this moves toward that resolution. And I think the bill, as it stands, is one that has been considered and approved by many people. It is time, certainly, for us to come to closure on it. I have been disappointed that each time we have tried to do something, we get a lot of disinformation from BLM. I do not think that is an appropriate role. We have been involved in that over a good period of time.

So, Mr. President, I am sure we will be back to talk some more about the specifics of the issue that have been brought up. I do not believe that this limits public input. I do not think that is true at all. On the contrary, we are seeking to deal with issues like NEPA and to try and say the NEPA law requires that activity in relation to a major Federal action.

Last year, we had a proposal in the Forest Service that every renewed grazing permit have a NEPA process. Ridiculous. If you ever heard of excessive bureaucracy, that is it. Indeed, the NEPA process takes place on the land use plan which takes up a number of allotments. That is the reasonable thing to do. I do not think there is anybody who would argue you should have a NEPA process for every renewable grazing lease. That was already seen to be not workable.

Mr. President, I am glad we are talking about it here. As I said, this is kind of an opening statement for me. I want to come back, as we go forward, to talk about some of the specific things that were talked about here.

Let me say, finally, that I have no doubt that this is a question about the livelihood of families in the West. This is a question of small ranchers who depend on this public land to go with their deeded land, to be able to sublease. They were able to do that in the past, and they can do it now only if the BLM agrees to that. That is what it says in the bill. That is the way it ought to be.

So, Mr. President, I hope that we can move through these issues, and I hope that we can end up with a reasonable way to provide multiple use in the West, protect the environment, which all of us who live there want to do, and, at the same time, be able to use those resources so that those families in the West can make a living as they do over the rest of the country.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DORGAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I will be brief today. We are here on the floor of the Senate talking about a grazing bill. I have spent a substantial amount of time on this issue this year. I cannot tell you the number of meetings I have had in North Dakota with ranchers, environmentalists, hunters, and others, talking about the various proposals that exist in the grazing legislation that has been offered by Senator DOMENICI, the substitute that was previously offered by Senator BINGAMAN and myself in the Energy Committee, and other iterations of each.

This is another one of those cases where in debate on the floor of the Senate, it seems to me, there is a little bit of truth on both sides. Each side takes their side of this issue and tends to take it out here and make a caricature out of it. The fact is that we have a circumstance with respect to publicly owned lands in many of our States that are used for a lot of purposes, where ranchers in my State—not big ranchers, but family ranchers—are trying to make a living grazing their cattle on public lands, as has been provided for many years with respect to the multiple use of these lands. They work hard and they do not ask for much from anybody.

Most of these folks are not big. They are family-size ranches. They are subject to the whims of the weather and subject to the ups and downs of cattle prices, and sometimes they have an awful time.

I notice that the Senator from Connecticut has something he wants to do. I will be happy to yield for a moment.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, we have been informed that Senator DODD will introduce a distinguished guest. He will then ask that we be in recess for a period of time.

I yield to Senator DODD for that purpose.

VISIT TO THE SENATE BY THE PRESIDENT OF HAITI

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, we have the high honor of having with us in the U.S. Senate today the President of Haiti, Rene Preval, who is visiting us in the Senate today. My colleague from Georgia, Senator COVERDELL, and I had a very good meeting in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

RECESS

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess for 5 minutes so that our colleagues may have the opportunity to greet President Preval.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 5:05 p.m., recessed; whereupon, the Senate, at 5:11 p.m., reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. COATS).

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. DORGAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, as I was saying, this piece of legislation is a piece of legislation that deals with grazing issues that are important issues to people who ranch and who graze cattle on public lands. I indicated previously that there is some truth on every side here on this issue, and that each side seems to stretch some here and there to make their point.

I think there is a legitimate question with respect to some of the management practices, especially on the grasslands in North Dakota. I think there is a legitimate question about the management practices that create circumstances where a rancher who is grazing on public lands wants to move a water tank and months and months and months pass, and they do not get an answer. Some of these little issues that they ought to get resolved ought to be resolved. They ought not to wait forever for some answer. So ranchers get upset on that kind of management of public lands, and they have a right to be upset about that. We ought to resolve some of those problems and address some of those problems.

Senator DOMENICI has offered a piece of legislation that has gone through a couple of different drafts. Senator BINGAMAN and I offered a substitute in the Senate Energy Committee on two occasions I believe; maybe one. But we offered a substitute. We said that there are some things that we think have merit in Senator DOMENICI's approach, and there are some things that we think need to be improved upon and changed.

So we wrote a substitute that we think addresses the real problems that exist without causing some other problems. We are here wanting to solve problems—not create problems.

I say this to those who argue, as some have in the recent editorials in the last day or two in the largest newspaper in our State, that this is a ''land grab'' by ranchers; that they want to seize control of public lands, period, end of story. That is not an accurate assessment of what is going on.

I am prepared to support some legislation to address these issues, as I think the Senator New Mexico, Senator BINGAMAN, does and as others do on the floor who have spoken. We may want to address it in a slightly different way. But, nonetheless, all of us come here saying there are some legitimate problems that ranchers have, and we ought to address some of those problems.

Those who make the charge—as was made a couple of days ago in an editorial in our largest newspaper that this is a ''land grab''—that it simply would turn the keys to the Federal lands over to the ranchers with no input from anybody else is wrong. I will not support that. That is not what our substitute says. Frankly, that is not what the Domenici bill says. We come at this sometimes from different ways, and we, because we offer a substitute, think the bill moves too far in some areas. But all of us believe these are multiple-use lands—public lands available for multiple use—and that they ought to remain that way.

I really believe that hunters have a right to these lands. Hikers have a right to these lands. Environmentalists own these lands as well. These are multiple-use lands, and will remain multiple-use lands. And I would not support anything—not a substitute, anything—if someone brought a proposition to the floor that says this is not your land, and that this land belongs to ranchers. It is not my view. I will not support anything that supports that view. That is not what we are saying.

The substitute offered in the Energy Committee by Senator BINGAMAN and I says there are some problems and let us address those problems. Let us not address those problems by creating more problems for ranchers. Let us not address them restricting any access for anybody else. Let us simply address them the way they ought to be addressed.

I hope, as we talk through this set of issues in the next day or so—and hopefully we will have a vote tomorrow on this, and we will have a vote I think on a substitute that Senator BINGAMAN and I will offer along with some others—I understand that there will be a vote on an amendment by Senator BUMPERS on grazing fees. There may or may not be other Senators who come to offer amendments on the issue. But I hope when we get to the final stages of this process that most of us will understand that we are aiming for the same thing—we want to solve some problems. We do not want to create others.

I would say to those in my State, North Dakotans, who are interested in this issue that these are multiple-use lands and will remain multiple-use lands. I feel very strongly that hunters and others have an interest in these lands, and I will not do anything to restrict that interest. By the same token, I come to the Senate wanting to solve some problems that ranchers have. They graze cattle and have some problems with respect to the management structure. And I am interested in solving those problems.

As we debate and discuss this, let us really deal with the facts on each side, and let us—each of us—represent what we want the answers to be to these problems. At the end of the day we count votes in the Senate. We do not weigh them. So whoever has the votes to advance their proposal, that is what public policy will be. And I hope, at the end of this, public policy will be one that says these are lands that belong to our country—all of the people of our country—and should be available for all of the people in our country to use. But some of the salt-of-the-Earth people in our country also are people who ranch, who work hard, who try to beat the odds, the weather, the prices, and they have some management problems, and we ought to address some of them. That is my interest in this legislation.

I will return to the floor with my colleague, Senator BINGAMAN, offering a substitute, and we will have a discussion about that. I will also, when I return to the floor, join in some discussion I am sure with Senator DOMENICI, Senator CRAIG, Senator BURNS, and others. While we might disagree on some parts of this bill we agree on others.

I commend all of those who are involved in this discussion because I think that this is an interesting discussion about the use of public lands, and I hope that we will shed more light rather than cause more fog in the next day or so.

Mr. President, with that, I yield the floor and I will return to the floor with Senator BINGAMAN and offer a substitute.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I understand that Senator BURNS has been waiting a long time and wants to speak on our side. I am pleased that Senator BUMPERS is here. If all goes well, as soon as he is finished, the Senator may get the floor and offer his amendment, debate it, and try to vote this evening. Is that all right?

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, it is immaterial to me when we vote. We can vote this evening or possibly tomorrow. I am not prepared to enter into a time agreement at this moment. If the Senator from Montana would like to proceed, my chief cosponsor, Senator JEFFORDS, will be here in about 2 or 3 minutes. If the Senator wants to proceed, that is fine.

Mr. DOMENICI. He will proceed now, and then Senator BUMPERS will follow.

Let me just talk to Senator BUMPERS for a minute on the timing. I understand his amendment is an amendment to increase grazing fees. That is the one which he has given us. He may have others. I just wanted to tell him what I told the Senate when I did not think he could be here. The leader wants us to finish tomorrow because he has a commitment to Senators that there will be no votes on Friday. We will be in tonight, if need be rather late, and then come back on this, I think, at noon tomorrow.

So we will give the Senator all of the time in the world because he is entitled to it. But I hope on his amendment that sometime later he might give us an idea when he might vote this evening so we could get one vote on this bill accomplished this evening.

Mr. President, before I yield, let me say to Senator DORGAN that I thank him for the way he has handled himself here on the floor this afternoon. I think his comments were very well taken. I think there is a lot of excess language on both sides of this. I mean ranchers frequently say, if this happens, they are out of business; they are gone. Environmentalists say, ''If you do not do this, the public land is all going to be owned and confiscated by ranchers, and we will lose all of our rights.'' Frequently neither of those views are accurate.

We are going to try our best to have a multiple-use bill when we leave the Senate, get one from the House, and send it to the President. We have no intention of taking away any rights—we do, however, want to protect grazing, and try to put it in a secured position. But we are not trying to take away any of the other rights. We are doing our very best to try to see that they are there.

Mr. DORGAN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DOMENICI. Of course.

Mr. DORGAN. With respect to the schedule, of course, that is up to the leaders. I would suggest I do not think there is a circumstance where you are going to see a filibuster that succeeds on this legislation. I think there is a general understanding that this legislation will be resolved by the end of tomorrow, and I hope that if we get to a circumstance where someone wants to offer an amendment, and it is going to take us until 8 or 9 tonight, and we are not going to call people back for tonight, we could roll that vote first thing in the morning.

So I would urge the leaders and the managers of the bill to consider that because I do not think this is a case where if we do not vote by 9 o'clock tonight, we are not going to have the bill out of here tomorrow. I do not know of anyone who is going to stall the bill tomorrow.

Mr. DOMENICI. Let me just make sure that the Senate understands that I do not intend, if we have some kind of understanding about how many amendments and we will finish tomorrow, to keep the Senate in until 9, if we have consent to debate it tonight and vote tomorrow. I thought we would get through the first amendment sooner than that, by 6 or 7. If not, I will talk to the leader about the Senator's idea.

I thank the Senator. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COATS). The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I thank my friends from New Mexico for the leadership they have shown on this issue.

It is a wonderful day to start the debate on this particular issue, the first day of spring. Even though the weatherman has not chosen to cooperate properly in greeting this day for the most part across the country, a little bit colder than usual, the Earth is starting to shed its winter chill and the frost is giving way to the warmth that lives within this great Earth. It is also the time of renewal, when those seeds that have laid in the Earth and those grasses that were dormant, are starting to show some signs of growth. It starts to give the Earth a different hue.

It is also a pretty exciting time in livestock agriculture, too, a time for newborn calves and lambs, a special time of the year for those who are attached to the land in a very, very special way.

It is a season that also gives us renewal. This transformation that we have, this promise of renewal every spring, every year, this renewable resource that renews itself, happens right before our eyes and it assures us that the future is now and will ever be.

I realize it is hard to see the significance of the season by those who have never really experienced that special attachment to the land.

In saying that, it is time for the Senate and this Congress to bring some common sense, some predictability, and stability to the folks who really deserve it, the people who are charged with the business of caretaker of our lands and our resources that come from those lands. They are good caretakers because it behooves them to be good caretakers. I just do not know of any good or successful rancher who loves and cares for his livestock and his land, who lives for the day that he will finally turn over the reins and the ownership of that ranch to the next generation, whether it be a son or son-in-law or daughter or daughter-in-law, who does not live for that. They teach their next generations how important this caretaking is. If we in this country are to hand to our children and to our grandchildren a better ranch and therefore a better world, where they can work, where they can sustain life, where they can recreate in an environment of clean air and clean water, then we must dedicate ourselves to the idea that Washington must, in a different way, make regulations and work with the local people to make sure it happens.

After hour after hour of discussion both here in Washington and on the ground on this particular subject, it is time now to move forward with a rangeland bill that we can be proud of and that we know will work and has the support of everybody involved.

If one could have written a rangeland bill that has all the principles of multiple use, maybe this is not quite perfection. If we were to write one that reflects the dedication to pursue sensible environmental policy, that preserved the gains that we have made in the last 50 years on our rangeland, then I would say this one probably is not perfection either, for, you see, those folks who are charged with the caring of this land, they became concerned about our range conditions a long time ago. They just did not start in 1980 or 1986 or 1984 or 1990, and for sure not 1996.

Range management was put together after World War II and after the Great Depression and great droughts of the dirty thirties.

In this bill, as presented by Senator DOMENICI of New Mexico, we have taken a giant step to the resolution of a very, very contentious and emotionally charged issue, and at times it has defied common sense and good judgment because there are groups that probably have had to raise some money and this is probably a pretty good issue on which to do it.

As we look at the future of these lands, we must be careful as to what the people who are actually the caretakers of these lands provide for the rest of America to enjoy, for it is in the best interests of these people to care for these lands. Without the continual regeneration of the grass and the land they care for, they have nothing to graze. They are out in the cold. They are out of business.

We have heard that there are those who are concerned about wildlife. Please read all the journals of Lewis and Clark. Please read of the people who entered these lands long before there was a rancher there. Read in the journals how there was no wildlife at all, that they ate their horses in the dead of winter, and the only wildlife—and it was sparse—was along the rivers, the Missouri and the Yellowstone and the rest of them. That was in the north country. Those lands were not claimed during the homestead days. It was for one reason: There was no water. Very harsh land. But with people who cared and people with new and innovative ways to bring water into grasslands, there came the wildlife. I can give you all kinds of figures on the increase in antelope, deer, whitetail deer, muleys, elk, whatever you want to count. There are more of them now than at any time since the Great Depression.

I am not going to do anything that is going to harm the habitat of wildlife or harm my way of life. I like to hunt. I am chairman of the Sportsmen's Caucus in this body. I am not going to do anything to harm that. I would ask these people, where are some of our supporters whenever hunters' rights come up? Where are they then? Are we playing with a double-bitted ax here?

Section 102, paragraph (c) says:

> Nothing in this title shall limit or preclude the use of and access to Federal land for hunting, fishing, recreational, watershed management or other appropriate multiple-use activities in accordance with applicable Federal and State laws and the principles of multiple use.

How much clearer must it be? It is even written in plain, everyday English.

So, as we talk about this issue, we will all have a lot more to say about it. I agree with my friend from North Dakota, we have run into some problems. We have not been able to move a water tank when we wanted to. The decisions from BLM did not come fast enough, or decisions from the U.S. Forest Service did not come fast enough. But do we create two or three layers more of bureaucracy to make that decision? The best decisions are made at the local level. Do we have to call Washington to change a gate? I would say no, not and be good caretakers of the land, because if they delay the decision of moving the water tank, maybe they will delay the decision about moving some stock that should be moved. Maybe there is some real environmental damage that could be done because of the inability to make a decision 2,100 miles away from where the grazing activity is taking place.

The challenge that awaits this and every Congress from here on out will be the effect of how we manage public lands or the policy we set for those resources found on public lands. This bill seeks to provide an effective, reasonable management of our natural resources. Effective management means it will allow those close to the land, who have not only economic but also social involvement with a community, allow them to manage those resources, not as they see fit but as nature sees fit.

The terms of this bill, to make grazing an acceptable practice in the management of our Federal public lands, is that asking too much? Do we just let the grass grow up every year? Some years you are going to have drought, and it is not going to grow up. But let us say we got a lot of growth last year, this year there is a lot of dead grass around, and it burns. It will burn. In its path you put at jeopardy life, property, even residences. I do not know how many people on this floor have ever faced one of those fires. They are not a fun thing. They are pretty scary. But the people who are caretakers of this land face that every day.

Do you want to talk about prices of cattle? I can talk about that. I have a hard time relating $58 and $62 steers and heifers ready to be brought to market, and little T-bone steaks at Giant at $4.50 to $6 a pound. There is not too much relationship here. Packers say they are not making any money. You know how packers are.

Cattlemen will be hurt, but we will not feel it here in this town because, in this town, April 15, the shrimp boat comes home and we will get our check. They will get theirs this fall. But it will be 35 percent less than it was last year, and we think we are doing them a favor. Those who pay the bills in that community, who provide the services to local government—schools, roads, public safety—all of this comes out of that check when he sells the product this fall.

So, as we talk about this, and we will bring up more points as we go along, I just want to remind folks what we are dealing with here and how delicate the balance is between good management on range and bad management.

In 1979, I started a little activity in Montana called Montana Range Days. It started off with about 200, 250 people who would attend every year. We had super starters, 8-year-old, 9-year-old kids, identify plants, weeds, grasses; identify carrying capacity on range, capacity conservation, watershed—3 days sleeping on the ground out on the range. I kind of helped that get started. It is bigger now than it was in 1979, under the leadership of Taylor Brown, who took over the Northern Ag Network when I left that organization. So we are pretty familiar with rangeland and what they teach in the colleges, and how they teach management and things that can happen on a range.

By the way, a range is not used for just about any other purpose. The only way we got to harvest that resource out there is through animal agriculture.

So, we will talk about the merits of amendments and the merits of this bill. But I ask my colleagues to think and look, and really look at it objectively, without any outside influence, to see exactly who contributes what to a neighborhood, to a community, to a county, and to a State, and look at the practices and look how far we have come in the development of better range for everybody. There is a lot more to be hunted, there are a lot more fish in the rivers, because there has been good stewardship on our range, because it is profitable for a rancher to do so.

The future of our public lands rests in our hands. We had an opportunity to make the future meaningful for all people, and I hope my fellow Members will work with us and vote with us to provide a sustainable and stable future for the land, for the livestock producer, and the people who enjoy those public lands.

Let us look at the real merits of what we are doing here and the effect it has on people. I am just talking about people. I have heard it from the other side, ''We are the compassionate folks. We care.'' We will find out how much they care and the compassion they have for people.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 3556 TO AMENDMENT NO. 3555

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BUMPERS], for himself, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. BRADLEY, and Mr. KERRY, proposes an amendment numbered 3556 to amendment No. 3555.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Susanne Fleek, a fellow from the Department of the Interior, be granted the privilege of the floor during the debate on grazing legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 3557 TO AMENDMENT NO. 3556

(Purpose: To increase the fee charged for grazing on Federal land)

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I have a second-degree amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. JEFFORDS] proposes an amendment numbered 3557 to amendment No. 3556.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

In lieu of the language proposed to be inserted by the Bumpers amendment insert the following:

SEC. 135. GRAZING FEES.

(a) GRAZING FEE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law and subject to subsections (b) and (c), the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture shall charge a fee for domestic livestock grazing on public rangelands as provided for in section 6(a) of the Public Rangelands Improvement Act of 1978 (43 U.S.C. 1905(a)) and Executive Order 12548 (51 F.R. 5985): Provided, That the grazing fee shall not be less than:

$1.50 per animal unit month for the 1997 grazing year;

$1.75 per animal unit month for the 1998 grazing year; and

$2.00 per animal unit month for the 1999 grazing year and thereafter.

(b) DETERMINATION OF FEE.—(1) Permittees or lessees who own or control livestock comprising less than 2,000 animal unit months on the public rangelands during a grazing year pursuant to one or more grazing permits or leases shall pay the fee as set forth in subsection (a).

(A) the average grazing fee (weighted by animal unit months) charged by the State during the previous grazing year for grazing on State lands in which the lands covered by the permit or lease are located; or

(B) the Federal grazing fee set forth in subsection (a), plus 25 percent.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this section—

(1) State lands shall include school, education department, and State land board lands; and

(2) individual members of a grazing association shall be considered as individual permittees or lessees in determining the appropriate grazing fee.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, this is kind of bringing back memories to me here today. I remember fondly my first year in the U.S. Senate. After 14 years as a Member of the House of Representatives, I came to the Senate in 1991, excited to represent my State. Respecting the customs of this honorable institution, I worked to learn the rules and procedures of the Senate. It was not until September of my first year that I actually made a speech longer than 5 minutes on the Senate floor.

During this first long speech—it was long, as many may remember, or maybe somebody remembers—I discussed the issue we are here debating today, that is grazing fees. At the time, in September 1991, I authored a grazing fee amendment that would have increased the fee from $1.97 per AUM, or animal unit month, to $5.13 per AUM, in 5 years. We did this in response to a similar amendment which passed the House overwhelmingly during that summer, which would have raised the fee to $8.70 per AUM.

The amendment I offered in 1991 failed, and the House proposal was removed in conference. The primary argument against this first grazing amendment was that such a fee would have bankrupt many small ranchers. We revisited the grazing fee issue 1 year later, in August 1992. Again, we offered a proposal which would have required those ranchers grazing on Federal land to pay their fair share of its use.

This time, however, we exempted the small farmers, about which so much concern was expressed, those having fewer than 500 head. Therefore, the increase would only have affected the largest of the ranchers. This amendment also failed, but by a smaller margin.

The opponents of the second grazing fee amendment argued that a grazing fee increase should not be included on an appropriations measure, but considered only during debate on grazing reform legislation.

Today is the day when that opportunity has arisen again. I want to take this time to do what I have been told, and that is to bring it up on an appropriate piece of legislation and leave the small farmers alone. That is what my amendment does.

I believe today it is time to finally change this longstanding inequity; an inequity because when you compare this to what private people have to pay or pay on State grazing lands, this is a real giveaway. I do not mind it for small farmers, but I do mind that the large corporate owners own 9 percent of the permits, but have 60 percent of the AUM.

Senator BUMPERS' amendment requires that all ranchers operating on Federal land pay a fee equal to the State grazing fee. His amendment says they ought to pay at least what they have to pay to the State, forget about private lands, but at least they ought to pay what is paid for using State land.

The second-degree amendment I just offered exempts all small ranchers and allows them to continue to pay the lower Federal fee that is presently at dispute here.

Mr. President, my second-degree amendment will protect small family ranchers who currently rely on Federal lands to support their business. A few years ago, I had the opportunity to tour several western ranches and visit with small family ranchers. I empathize with them and recognize that out in the West, so much land is owned by the Federal Government and if you do not have an opportunity to utilize that land, you have no opportunity. During this visit, I gained great appreciation and respect for the lifestyle of these small farmers. I made many friends in Wyoming. These ranchers embody not only a piece of our Nation's history, but also a piece of our Nation's future.

I realize that these farmers are facing a daily struggle to keep their ranches operating, a fact I have taken into consideration in drafting this amendment. Keeping with the theme of Senator DOMENICI's bill, my amendment protects these farmers. In fact, my amendment places a lower fee on these farmers than the fee contained in the pending bill.

So if you want to look out for the small farmers, this is the opportunity to do it, better than even the underlying Domenici bill.

On my amendment, the fee for small ranchers will be $1.50 per AUM, animal unit month, in 1997. This is 20 percent less than the fee in the underlying bill—20 percent less.

Instead, my amendment addresses the large ranchers who for years have been making millions off the public lands and costing taxpayers up to $200 million annually. Not only are these ranchers paying a grazing fee that is 60 percent less than what it was 10 years ago, but they are also the beneficiary of Federal programs for range improvements, predator control, and emergency feed programs.

Mr. President, it is time to take a closer look at these large ranchers and start charging them an honest and equitable price for the land from which they are profiting. An interesting phenomenon has occurred in the Federal grazing program. Although the large ranchers hold only 9 percent of the Bureau of Land Management grazing permits, they comprise over 60 percent of the active use of animal unit months on public lands. Nine percent of the permit holders are big corporations owning 60 percent of the AUM's.

Who are these ranchers? Let me give you some examples. One is Willard Garvey of Willard Garvey Industries, which recorded $80 million in sales in 1991. Wow, boy, do they need help from the Federal Government.

One is J.R. Simplot, who has an estimated fortune of $500 million. Great one to give subsidies to. He was on the cover of Fortune magazine as one of the great entrepreneurs of our society, and we give him that kind of a break.

Another is the Rock Springs Grazing Association that has over $1.6 million in assets. I have a list of large ranchers, including Texaco, Getty Oil, Hilton—wow, boy, do they need help. I ask you, why is it that these large companies are receiving Federal subsidies when, in many cases, small family ranches operating on private lands at many times the cost receive nothing?

My amendment is a first step in remedying this obvious disparity. My amendment will raise the grazing fee for large ranchers who have permits holding more than 2,000 animal unit months. It will raise it to a level equal to the grazing fee charged by the State. This is all we are doing. This is for the big guys, the large ones, the huge guys who do not need help. We say, at least you ought to pay what other farmers are paying to the State. Not only will this bring the Federal fee to fair market value—that is what is charged by private owners—but will also give the States more control over grazing in their own State. By creating a two-tier program, my amendment protects the lifestyle of the small ranchers in the West who are more than worthy of Federal assistance. By creating a two-tier program, we will help do what should be done, and that is to get equity over the expenditure of Federal funds.

The amendment will retain a low grazing fee for over 90 percent of the ranchers leasing public lands. Over 90 percent of the ranchers will be getting this assistance. It will raise the fee for the remaining 9 percent of the ranchers who operate the large and highly profitable ranches, and, in doing so, my amendment will raise approximately $13 million annually in revenue; that is, we are really converting and just giving the money that was going to those huge ranchers out there, with the exception of $13 million which will go to help defer the cost of the program, to the small ranchers. That, I believe, is a fair deal for the taxpayers and a real benefit to those small family ranchers out in the West who need the assistance, whereas the large corporate ones certainly need no assistance.

Mr. President, let me summarize. My second-degree amendment exempts small ranchers. Only large corporate interests who hold Federal grazing permits will be affected by the underlying Bumpers amendment.

Again, remember that 9 percent of the permit holders are large corporate entities, or wealthy individuals, and they control over 60 percent of the AUM's. And 91 percent of the ranchers holding permits to graze on Federal lands will pay less with my amendment than the pending legislation, and only those 9 percent, the very wealthy corporations and individuals, will have to contribute a fair cost of what they are getting at the State level, not at the private-lands level, which would even be higher.

So let us vote for the small ranchers. I urge my colleagues to vote for my second-degree amendment.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. BAUCUS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I want to say a few words in support of the basic bill we are debating, the Domenici bill. I appreciate the parliamentary position we are in; that is, the Bumpers amendment on fees pending with the Jeffords second-degree amendment pending. I want to direct my comments not to those specific amendments—the first- and second-degree amendments—but rather to the substance of the bill.

I want to begin by reminding my colleagues what this debate is really all about, and also what it is not about.

I want to begin by pointing out that, frankly, this bill fundamentally is about providing ranchers with grazing rules that are fair, grazing rules that are predictable, and grazing rules that are certain.

The Domenici bill is also about assuring that where grazing does occur on Federal lands, it does not occur at the sacrifice of wildlife, it does not occur at the sacrifice of quality or public access. Namely, we honor the principle of multiple use. The goal, simply put, is to see that ranchers stay in business while assuring outstanding hunting and fishing. It is that simple. I might say, in my State of Montana this balance exists, and it exists today, and I want to see that balance continue.

Let me add a word about what this debate is not about. This debate is not about protecting those few ranchers who abuse the land. As far as I am concerned, the holder of any grazing permit has the right to graze livestock on his public land. That is the right of that permittee. But that right comes with a responsibility, a responsibility to be a good steward of the land, good steward of water and wildlife and allotment. If that responsibility is not met, if the land is abused, then that permit should be ended, it should be terminated. Basically, that is what should be done, that is what should happen.

In my State of Montana, there is a famous painting painted by the great cowboy artist Charlie Russell, who had the unique gift for capturing the life of the Old West on canvas. There is one Russell painting that comes to mind called ''Waiting for a Chinook,'' also known as ''The Last of 5,000.'' It was painted by Charlie Russell as he was sending a card and letter back to the owner of the ranch. The owner happened to be in New York City. This is a ranch he was associated with in Montana.

It is a painting of a lone cow. It is a lone cow standing in the middle of a blizzard. Coyotes are circling and waiting for that cow to fall. It was a year when most of the herds in Montana were decimated. This pretty much sums up the challenges that we have faced as ranchers in Montana.

Ranchers have to face the severity of Montana winters. They have to deal with predators, not only coyotes, but wolves. They have to deal with very wide swings in the cattle market cycles. While the Russell painting does not reflect it, today's ranchers have to deal with the challenge and frustration of Canadians pumping beef into the U.S. market and meatpackers manipulating market prices. So, taken as a whole, it all makes for a mighty uncertain livelihood.

That is what S. 1459 is about. It is about giving ranchers a Federal grazing policy that is stable and fair, that will encourage ranchers to remain good stewards of both their private lands and the public lands where they graze. The bill provides the tools to set Federal policy in that direction. It gives ranchers the stability of 12-year permits. It is very important. It recognizes the investments that ranchers make in range improvements, also important, and protects individual water rights, equally important in the West.

As I was listening to the Senator from Vermont talk about these big ranches of the West, there is one point the Senator from Vermont seems to forget—that it does not rain in the West. In Vermont, it rains a lot. Here you get about 40, 50 inches of rain. In my part of the country, west of the 100th meridian, the average rainfall is about 14, 15, 16 inches a year. That is all year around, including snow and rain. That is why there are big ranches in the West. You have to have a lot more space to graze your livestock because there is not a lot of rain for the grass to grow.

The bill also, I might say, Mr. President, protects not only water rights, but it makes the Forest Service and BLM grazing rules much more uniform, also important, because ranches have one set of regulations on BLM land and a different set on Forest Service lands. It helps to assure that Federal grazing policy is basically the same whether it is BLM or Forest Service land.

The predictability of this bill benefits not only ranchers, but all users of our public lands; that is, hunters, rock hounds, birdwatchers, hikers, you name it.

There is a popular bumper sticker I frequently see on cars passing by as I am walking across my State of Montana. Let me tell you what that bumper sticker says. It says, ''Cattle, Not Condos.'' That is what would happen if our family ranches simply became too unprofitable to stay in business. The land would be subdivided. Wildlife habitat would be fragmented. Access to many of our favorite fishing holes would be cut off, as stream and riverfront lots are sold for cabin sites. We would lose the great sense of openness, wide open spaces that help make Montana the ''Big Sky State.''

John Schultz of the Gran Prairie Ranch, near Grass Range, in Fergus County, summed it up when he wrote me, ''The recreationists and hunters use this land extensively * * ,'' that is the land that this rancher owns, private land as well as public land, '' * * however, there is only one man who maintains the water and manages the grass so the plant population is diverse and in good condition. Not only do the livestock benefit, but the wildlife do as well.''

The simple fact is that a strong, viable ranching industry is of benefit to all Montanans. It benefits the small communities that rely on the ranchers' business, and it benefits sportsmen who enjoy the outstanding hunting opportunities created by large tracks of undeveloped wildlife habitat. It helps provide the tax base for many of our rural communities, our schools, and our hospitals. That is what this bill is about.

It is about establishing a Federal policy that helps us be good stewards of the land and remain economically viable. It is a policy that makes the Federal Government a partner rather than a pest.

Let me go back to what this bill is not about. It is not about excluding the public from having a full say in how we manage our public lands. It is not about compromising on environmental protection.

Critics of this bill maintain that the bill bars meaningful public participation when it comes to range improvement. That is not accurate. Under the bill, a simple postcard guarantees an interested citizen a seat at the table for virtually every decision affecting range management on our public lands. They will be given notice of all proposed permit actions and provided with an opportunity to comment and informally consult with BLM or Forest Service land managers before a decision is made. Following that decision, they have the right to lodge an administrative appeal. If they are still unhappy, they can take their grievance to Federal court. So under this bill the door is open to the public at virtually every stage of the process.

This legislation also recognizes the progress that the current resource advisory councils have made in developing standards and guidelines for responsible grazing on our Federal lands. The work of these councils will continue to serve as the basis for setting grazing standards.

Most importantly, these standards will be developed by Montanans, not Washington bureaucrats.

The legislation also maintains high environmental standards for ranchers. Just listen to this. Today, over 70 percent of lands managed by the BLM in Montana are rated good to excellent —70 percent. That is, 70 percent of the BLM lands in the State of Montana are rated good to excellent. Less than 5 percent of the BLM land is in poor condition; that is, not great, could be a lot better, but it is not bad. So, 70 percent good to excellent; 5 percent in poor condition.

The legislation provides the tools, however, to assure that the conditions in the poor allotments are improved.

On-the-ground decisions reflect sound science. The bill requires a permit-level review of monitoring data every 6 years to ensure that good stewardship is not only the goal, but is actually being practiced.

In closing, I want to go back to what this bill is about. It is about putting into effect fair, balanced grazing rules that will allow our ranchers to make a living.

It is also about recognizing that sportsmen and recreationists use the public lands. It is their right, too. That Federal policy must be one of mutual respect and accommodation for all legitimate uses of the resources. We have to work together, come together.

That is what this bill does. It helps reduce the division, the acrimony, the dissension of all the groups that have been trying to deal with this policy. It helps bring people together. That is what this does. It goes a long way to strike a balance, which I think is very helpful to better and more sound Federal land policy. I urge its adoption.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to be added as a cosponsor to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I want to thank Senator BAUCUS for his cooperation. He has worked with us on trying to make the bill better, and clearly from the first bill we introduced, into the second draft and the final one we put in today, I think we improved it from everybody's standpoint. I want to say he has been consistent with us. I am very appreciative. I yield the floor.

Mr. BUMPERS addressed the Chair.

AMENDMENT NO. 3556 TO AMENDMENT NO. 3555

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I would like to open my remarks by simply saying that this amendment is not vindictive, it is not designed to put small ranchers out of business, and indeed it would not. I consider it to be an eminently fair amendment.

Mr. President, for the benefit of people who do not deal with this issue and really do not understand what this debate is about, let me start off by saying there are 270 million acres of land that literally belong to the taxpayers of America. Most of it, admittedly, is in the western States. However, some of it is in my State and your State. Mr. President, there are currently 270 million acres of land that are subject to grazing permits.

How many permits? Twenty-two thousand. How much money do we get? Mr. President, we receive $25 million and change. Therefore, we are not here debating money. That is really not the issue here. There is not much difference in the amount of money between the bill of the Senator from New Mexico and the Bumpers amendment. I will tell you, however, where the difference is. The difference is in fairness. The difference is in who pays the fee and what happens to the money.

Now, the principal thrust of my amendment and the second-degree amendment of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. JEFFORDS], is to protect—let me repeat, to protect—small ranchers. That is who the Senator from New Mexico says he wants to protect. He has a lot of small ranchers in New Mexico that are totally dependent for their livelihood on grazing. I want them protected.

I do not want my intelligence insulted by continually talking about small ranchers when 9 percent of the permittees, bear this in mind, there are 22,000 permittees and 9 percent of those permittees control 60 percent of the AUM's. What is an AUM? It is an animal unit month. It is the amount of forage needed to graze one horse, one cow, five sheep, or five goats for 1 month. An AUM is the basis on which farmers or ranchers are charged for grazing their cattle. They may start off with 200 head and they may keep 200 head for 6 months and they will pay, today, in 1996, $1.35 for each month for each of those 200 head that graze on Federal land. If the rancher sells off 100 head on the first of July, his rent is cut in half.

I was a drugstore cowboy, among other things before I came to the Senate. I had 125 cows and maybe 80 calves.

Mr. DOMENICI. Did the Senator graze those on the public domain?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. SNOWE). The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. BUMPERS. They were raised on private land. However, other people in Arkansas currently graze on Forest Service lands. Moreover, fees paid on eastern Forest Service lands, including Arkansas, are currently calculated using a formula that is different than the western Forest Service lands. The formula for eastern Forest Service lands is based on fair market value and is currently $2.50 per AUM. Additionally, any new or vacant permits on eastern Forest Service lands are competitively bid.

When I was elected Governor of my State, I charged five times as much per AUM for my farm lands as the Federal Government receives now.

I did not just fall off a turnip truck when it comes to cattle. I raised cattle for several years and I know something about it. I enjoyed some good times and some bad times. I will never forget back in the late 1960's, the story about two farmers meeting. My area of Arkansas is cattle and poultry farming. Two farmers met in the restaurant. One said, ''I lost $100 already this morning.'' The other said, ''How on Earth did you do that?'' He said, ''My cow had a calf.'' That is how bad prices were for cattle.

Back to the point, not only do 9 percent of all BLM permittees control 60 percent of the AUM's, according to GAO, 2 percent of the 22,000 permittees control 50 percent of all the land. Who are they? I will come back to that in just a moment.

When I begin providing you with a list of the kind of people, and they are not exactly small ranchers, who control hundreds of thousands of acres of land and run thousands of acres of cattle, you will see that we are not talking about that small rancher that everybody in the Senate wants to protect. We are talking about billionaires, millionaires, and big corporations.

What do they receive? At this very moment, they may be in a State that charges up to $10 per AUM for grazing cattle on State lands. They may have to pay $10 for per AUM on State lands. But if they get a permit from ''Uncle Sucker'' they pay $1.35 per AUM. Here are some of the fees that the States charge. I have been through this so many times on mining, and it is the same old story. Here is what the U.S. Government receives, $1.35 per AUM; Arizona, $2.16; Colorado, $6.50; Idaho, $4.88; Montana, $4.05; Nebraska, $15.50; New Mexico, $3.54; Oklahoma, $10; Oregon, $2.72; South Dakota, $7; Utah, $2.50; Washington, $4.55; and Wyoming, $3.50.

Why in the name of God does the Federal Government charge $1.35 per AUM? What do the States know that we do not know? I tell you what the States know. They know what the value of their land is.

The argument will be made, ''Senator BUMPERS, you do not seem to understand the way BLM and the Forest Service hassle our people. It is just terrible how put upon they are.'' I know there is some truth to that. I know that some of these bureaucrats of the BLM and the Forest Service can be overbearing. I also know that most of those ranchers do not want them around, period.

Now, the reason I am standing here is twofold: No. 1, I want a grazing bill that is fair, that protects small ranchers and no. 2, I want a grazing bill that restores the rangelands of this country.

Madam President, I want you to look at this very carefully on why the States are so much smarter than we are when it comes to leasing their lands for cattle grazing.

Even this Senator had enough sense not to charge $1.35 when folks were standing in line to pay me $10. Why do we continue to do this? I want you to look at this chart. Since 1981—incidentally, Madam President, in 1981, the U.S. Government was getting $2.31 for an animal unit month. The current PRIA formula takes cattle prices into consideration. The cattle prices are very low right now. That is one of the reasons that I want to make sure that we protect the small ranchers. They are having a terrible time surviving right now.

It is interesting to look at the trend of the Federal fee level—we received $2.31 in 1980. In 1996, 15 years later, we are receiving $1.35. That is $1 less per AUM than we received in 1980.

What is the trend with regard to fees charged on State lands? The States are not dummies. They did what any prudent landowner would do. They have raised their rates from an average of $3.22 per AUM in 1980 to $5.58 per AUM in 1995. That translates into approximately a 50-percent increase. What is the trend of the private sector? They are smarter than the States or the Federal Government, either one. In 1981, they were receiving an average of $7.83 per animal unit month on private lands. Today they are receiving an average of $11.20 per AUM. Look at poor old Uncle Sucker. Not much money involved, I repeat, but a big principle.

Why would some of these billionaires not be clamoring for Federal lands? They did not get rich by being stupid. They are mining the Federal Treasury, too. Who are they? One of my favorites, Newmont Mining. Talk about somebody mining the Federal Treasury. Newmont Mining is one of the biggest gold producers in the country, mining on lands that they bought from the Federal Government for $2.50 an acre. They are mining billions of dollars' worth of gold on it and not paying the U.S. Government one red cent. They are not just satisfied with owning gold lands. They want some of these grazing permits. So what do they have? They control 12,000 AUM's. What are we doing? We are charging $1.35 per AUM to Newmont Mining Co., one of the wealthiest companies in the world.

Who else? Incidentally, here is a good one. Mr. Hewlett and Mr. Packard. They started a good company. I noticed a while ago that their stock went down today. They are a big computer manufacturer. Everybody knows Hewlett-Packard. Mr. Hewlett and Mr. Packard graze cattle on nearly 100,000 acres in Idaho. Why? Because it adjoins a ranch they own. Mr. Hewlett and Mr. Packard pay $1.35 per AUM on that Federal land. Why can Mr. Hewlett and Mr. Packard not pay a fee that is at least a little closer to fair market value than $1.35 per AUM.

There is a company called Nevada First Corp. How many AUM's do you think Nevada First has? They have 56,000. They are a subsidiary of the Garvey Industries Corp., with a net worth of $80 million. Then there is Anheuser-Busch. Everybody knows who Anheuser-Busch is. Sunday afternoon, I was coming back on an airplane, and my staff had given me a memo on this debate and a newspaper article about how much public land Anheuser-Busch controlled with grazing permits. I asked the gentleman sitting on my left, ''Do you work for Anheuser-Busch?'' He said, ''No.'' I said, ''In that case, I will let you read this.'' He handed it back to me and said, ''Surely, you are not surprised by that.'' I said, ''No, I am not surprised.'' We went on our separate ways.

Anheuser-Busch, which ranks 80th in the top 500 corporations in America, holds four permits that total 8,000 AUM's. I have nothing against Anheuser-Busch. I have been a Cardinal fan all my life. That was all we could get on the radio when I was a kid. They are a good corporation, as far as I know.

Then there is an organization named Bogle Farms. Bogle Farms has 40,000 AUM's on two permits in New Mexico. In 1991, their net worth was $15 million.

Dan Russell—I do not know these people—currently holds 10 permits covering 200,000 AUM's. The issue is not whether or not he is a rancher. The issue is whether, if he controls 200,000 AUMs, we should subsidize his cattle at the same rate that small ranchers pay.

Mr. DOMENICI. Will the Senator yield for a moment?

Mr. BUMPERS. For what purpose?

Mr. DOMENICI. We are going to agree on a procedure.

Mr. BUMPERS. I yield for that purpose.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that following the two rollcall votes scheduled to begin at 12 noon on Thursday, the Senate resume the grazing fee bill and the pending Bumpers amendment No. 3556, that debate on that issue be equally divided in the usual form, and at 2:00 p.m., the Senate proceed to vote on or in relation to the Bumpers amendment, without any intervening action or debate.

I further ask that there be a minimum of 75 minutes, equally divided, prior to the vote in relation to the Bumpers amendment.

I further ask unanimous consent that following the disposition of the Bumpers amendment, Senator BINGAMAN be recognized to offer an amendment.

Mr. BUMPERS. Madam President, reserving the right to object —and I know the Senator from New Mexico did not prepare this—but the first vote which is to occur at 2:00 p.m. is supposed to be after the two votes. But it anticipates an hour and 15 minutes. So I ask that it be changed to an hour and 15 minutes following the close of the second vote.

Mr. DOMENICI. I did that. I said: Further, that a minimum of 75 minutes, equally divided, prior to the vote in relation to the Bumpers amendment.

Mr. BUMPERS. Second, there is one correction there. The first vote should be on the JEFFORDS amendment to the Bumpers amendment.

Mr. DOMENICI. No. We did this on purpose. We want the first amendment to be on the Bumpers underlying amendment. If our desires prevail, then Jeffords goes with it. If not, you are here and you can do whatever you want.

Mr. BUMPERS. Well, obviously, I cannot object to that. You have a perfect right to move to table.

Mr. DOMENICI. I think it is fair that we take both amendments down with a vote.

Mr. BUMPERS. The reason I have strong objection to that—and I am going to talk a great deal about that—is that the Jeffords amendment is an amendment with which I agree. I like it. I like it in some respects better than I do my own. I want for the people of this body to understand that if they vote to table the Bumpers amendment, they will not get a chance to vote on the Jeffords amendment, which I think most of them would like to do.

Mr. DOMENICI. You may prevail on that, which means we will have a vote.

Mr. BUMPERS. I would not want to preclude the possibility of making a tabling motion prior to the Jeffords amendment prior to that time.

I would like to add that to the unanimous consent agreement.

Madam President, to ensure the RECORD is clear, I would like to make this statement as a part of the unanimous consent agreement; that is, that at any time prior to the expiration of the hour and 15 minutes, or immediately thereafter—Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BRADLEY. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BRADLEY. Madam President, today the Senate will have the opportunity to return a bit of market discipline to the Federal grazing program. At a time when the Congress is cutting assistance to the poor, to education, and to a wide variety of other vital services, we cannot ignore any potential sources of additional Federal income. The Federal grazing program must also begin to pay its own way.

The fee contained in S. 1459 covers only a small part of the actual cost of the grazing program. The Bumpers amendment seeks to increase this fee to a level at least a bit closer to what would be the fair market value of grazing services by adopting State grazing prices. According to the Congressional Research Service, the 12 States they studied charge from about 1½ to 10 times as much as what is charged for grazing land under this Federal bill. While there may be small differences in the condition of some State and Federal grazing lands, any differences do not justify a fee disparity of 10 times grazing. Many of my colleagues are fond of saying that the States know best regarding most programs. Just return programs to the States, they say and programs will magically improve. Well, why cannot we look to the States when it comes to revenue, too? State programs are managed to bring in money to support their schools. They cannot afford to subsidize grazers at the expense of their children's education. As a result, no State studied charges anything like the Federal fee. By adopting the State level, we also insure that fees are appropriate for local conditions.

Madam President, this amendment is simple. The rest of the bill is not. According to the statement of administration policy submitted on S. 1459, the bill severely limits the ability of public land managers to protect the land and its resources and manage lands for multiple use. The bill curtails most public participation in grazing management decisions and activities, and severely weakens the requirements for compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act.

The bill also contains troubling water rights language which, according to the Department of the Interior, may bar transfer of water uses from Federal to private land and language which would prevent ranchers from taking land out of production for conservation uses. In other words, they have to keep it in grazing.

Worst of all, the bill violates the spirit under which Federal lands are supposed to be managed—for multiple uses which benefit all of the people and not just a few, organized groups. Our public lands belong to all Americans, whether they hike, bird watch, or graze livestock. Whether they live in Wyoming or New Jersey. They should never become the exclusive province of any one use.

Madam President, I urge my colleagues to vote for this Bumpers amendment, a fiscally conservative amendment, and later for the Democratic substitute that will be offered by Senator BINGAMAN which makes needed changes in the underlying bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 3556, AS MODIFIED

Mr. BUMPERS. Madam President, I send a modification of my amendment to desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is so modified.

The amendment (No. 3556), as modified, is as follows:

SEC. 135. GRAZING FEES.

(a) GRAZING FEE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law and subject to subsections (b) and (c), the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture shall charge a fee for domestic livestock grazing public rangelands as provided for in section 6(a) of the Public Rangelands Improvement Act of 1978 (43 U.S.C. 1905(a)) and Executive Order 12548 (51 F.R. 5985):

Provided, That the grazing fee shall not be less than: $1.50 per animal unit month for the 1997 grazing year; $1.75 per animal unit month for the 1998 grazing year; and $2.00 per animal unit month for the 1999 grazing year and thereafter.

(b) DETERMINATION OF FEE.—(1) Permittees or lessees who own or control livestock comprising less than 2,000 animal unit months on the public rangelands during a grazing year pursuant to one or more grazing permits or leases shall pay the fee as set forth in subsection (a).

(2) Permittees or lessees who own or control livestock comprising more than 2,000 animal unit months on the public rangelands during a grazing year pursuant to one or more grazing permits or leases shall pay the fee equal to the higher of either—

(A) the average grazing fee (weighted by animal unit months) charged by the State during the previous grazing year for grazing on State lands in which the lands covered by the permit or lease are located; or

(B) the Federal grazing fee set forth in subsection (a), plus 25 percent.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this section—

(1) State lands shall include school, education department, and State land board lands; and

(2) individual members of a grazing association shall be considered as individual permittees or lessees in determining the appropriate grazing fee.

Mr. DOMENICI. May we make the unanimous-consent request now?

Mr. BUMPERS. Yes.

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, let me just say that if we can get this, our leader has authorized me to say there will be no more votes tonight. But we have to get this first.

I ask unanimous-consent that the following—let me do this.

I stated the unanimous-consent previously. I ask that that unanimous-consent which I stated, and which I send to the desk in writing to reaffirm, be granted at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BUMPERS. Reserving the right to object, there will be an hour and 15 minutes following the close of the second vote tomorrow.

Mr. DOMENICI. We set 75 minutes.

Mr. BUMPERS. OK. Fine. I accept that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOMENICI. Now we can say in behalf of the majority leader that there will be no more votes tonight.

Mr. CHAFEE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. CHAFEE. I just wanted to know. There will be no more votes. But will the discussion continue on this particular amendment tonight, or is it going to be continued also tomorrow?

Mr. BUMPERS. No. The amendment will be the subject of an hour and 15 minutes of debate tomorrow.

Does that answer the Senator's question?

Mr. CHAFEE. Yes. In other words, you are winding up the debate pretty soon here.

Thank you.

Mr. BUMPERS. We will debate tonight as long as anybody wants to say anything on this, and then we will shut the Senate down as soon as we run out of debate.

AMENDMENT NO. 3557 WITHDRAWN

Mr. BUMPERS. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the Jeffords amendment be withdrawn.

AMENDMENT NO. 3556, AS MODIFIED

Mr. BUMPERS. Madam President, I do not want to belabor these rich folks too long. The last one that I want to point out to for the edification of my colleagues is the gentleman by the name of J. R. Simplot from the great State of Idaho. He is 86 years old and has obviously been a great entrepreneur. I do not know a thing in the world about him. I assume he is a very fine man. In 1991, Forbes magazine identified him as one of the wealthiest individuals in the United States. Furthermore, he is on the cover of Fortune magazine in November 1995. Here is the magazine, if anybody would care to look at it.

His sales that year were $3 billion. And Mr. Simplot, to his credit and to his ingenuity, controls 50,000 AUM's in Idaho, Oregon, and Nevada.

Finally, a Japanese named Kaiku controls 6,000 AUM's on 40,000 acres of Federal land in Montana.

What does our amendment do? I will not belabor the point because it is very simple. We make a distinction between that group of people that I showed you a moment ago. Look at this chart, colleagues. We make a distinction in what people in this category pay, and what people in this category pay.

Ninety-one percent of the permittees under our amendment will pay just a little bit more than they would pay under the Domenici proposal, and in some years less than the Domenici proposal. Ninety-one percent of them will pay just a few cents more than Senator DOMENICI's bill requires.

This other 9 percent, which control 60 percent of all the AUM's, will pay either the same amount as the small ranchers, plus 25 percent, or a weighted average of the State fees charged in the State in which the permit is located, whichever is higher.

That is as fair as a proposition could be. You can accept this amendment and agree that these people have taken advantage of a generous Congress who passed this law and gave these permits to people thinking they were helping poor ranchers make a living. And now we find 60 percent of this land and AUM's are controlled by the richest people of America. Even under our proposal, to require these rich people to pay the weighted average of what the State charges, will still be in most instances around 100 percent less than what the private sector charges for grazing.

Madam President, why are we defending a system that promotes the use of the public lands for the wealthiest when it was intended for the poorest? Because it is an old law and we just simply have not been able to turn it loose and make it work the way it was supposed to.

When I came here in 1975, I found out that the Federal Government was leasing Federal lands for oil and gas leasing by lottery, like a bingo game. If you won the lottery, you got the land for $1 an acre. When I began to raise questions about it, they said, ''We are trying to make sure those little mom and pop operations get some of this Federal land.''

We started checking the little mom and pop operations, and guess what was happening? They were retirees in Florida. They were elderly people who were snapping up these lottery chances because they were advertised all over America by a bunch of snake oil salesmen. And if they did happen to win the lottery, what do you think they did with it? They took it to Exxon, and if Exxon thought it had potential, they paid them a fortune for it.

That is what we did for mom and pop operators. We made people, who did not know what a drilling rig looked like, wealthy because we refused to change that old law. I just made my mining speech yesterday so I am not going to make that again, but how many times have I heard that old story about those poor little old mom and pop mining companies out there?

It turns out, as I began to examine it, that we are helping the biggest corporations in the world—not the United States, in the world. Now, here is deja vu. If someone argues that the State's rates are too high, I will answer that they have people standing in line wanting these permits. And when then they say, ''But that mean old BLM hassles us. They make us sort of take care of the land.'' But you know something else that the BLM and the Forest Service do? They take 50 percent of the rent and put it back into the land. How many landlords do you know that take 50 percent of the rent they receive and put it back into improvements of your apartment or your house? Fifty percent goes back to improve the very land where these cattlemen are running their cattle.

Madam President, the Public Rangelands Management Act was passed in 1978. As I stated earlier, the fee under that formula has declined. In 1980, the fee was $2.36 and in 1996, the fee is $1.35. Our amendment would use the same formula and simply raise the minimum.

My amendment requires 91 percent of the deserving ranchers to pay very little more than they are paying right now. In 1999, our rate would go to $2 and under Senator DOMENICI's amendment the fee would be $1.85—15 cents difference. Who is going to quibble about that? However, under our amendment these people, the wealthiest people in America, would have to pay more.

Madam President, two quick points, and I will conclude and let others speak who wish to. Karl Hess, a senior fellow at the Cato Institute, which is not exactly a citadel of liberalism, no bleeding heart liberals over at Cato, simply believes that the Government ought to get fair value for its assets. Here is a statement by Mr. Hess:

> Domenici's bill is bad for ranchers, bad for public lands, bad for the American taxpayer. It will not improve management of public lands and it will not be a fix for the hard economic times now faced by ranchers. What it will do, however, is deepen the fiscal crisis of the public land grazing program by plunging it into an ever-deepening deficit. If western ranchers insist on supporting this bill and the additional costs associated with it, they should be prepared to pay the price. Tagging the majority of Federal grazing fees to state grazing rates is one essential step in that direction.

I yield the floor.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I rise today in support of S. 1459, the Public Rangelands Management Act of 1995. Rangeland reform is important both for the health of our public lands and the ranching industry in the Western States. I commend my colleague from New Mexico, Senator DOMENICI, for his work in bringing this bill to the Senate floor.

Let me make clear up front, S. 1459 is not an attempt to weaken existing environmental laws applicable to grazing. All major environmental laws continue to apply as written. This bill provides for better rangeland management by establishing standards and guidelines at the State or regional level, so that rangeland policy can take regional differences into account. Nothing is more important to me than the preservation of these multiple-use lands for present and future generations. I would not, and could not support anything to the contrary.

There continues to be debate about what is an appropriate fee for grazing on public land. It is important that the Government realize a fair return for the use of Federal lands. This legislation prescribes a new formula for calculating grazing fees. Under this formula, fees would rise approximately 30 percent over the present level.

For those who make their living from the land, and who put food on the table for all of us, we want to offer some certainty for the future. We must protect rancher's private property rights, provide stability on grazing allotments, and offer sufficient incentives for sound long-term resource management practices.

Critics have suggested that S. 1459 provides for grazing and livestock activities as the dominant use on the allotments. That is simply not true. The bill explicitly provides that the public lands will continue to be accessible to all multiple-use activities.

It has also been suggested that this legislation will curtail public participation in the decisionmaking process. The public's opportunity to participate in the NEPA and FLPMA processes is not affected by this legislation. It does, however, address the problem of who can appeal allotment management decisions by limiting appeals to persons who have affected interests. This will enable Federal land managers to review appeals more expeditiously and will shorten the delays in achieving a final implementation plan. This process will allow permittees and lessees to carry out their business without the heavy financial losses usually associated with lengthy delays.

Most importantly, this legislation provides for periodic monitoring of rangeland resource conditions. The Secretaries of Agriculture and the Interior have the ability to amend allotment plans where resource conditions dictate. I believe that the bill therefore reflects a wide variety of environmental and user concerns; and I urge its favorable consideration.

Mr. CAMPBELL addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to clarify the issue grazing fees on public lands. As I mentioned before in my opening statement, I believe there is a grave misperception about ranchers who utilize public lands. For those of you unfamiliar with ranchers or the ranching business, let me tell you that it is not a lucrative business. I believe it is this misperception that drives the efforts to try to hike up the grazing fees to unacceptable heights. Opponents of the new fee structure proposed in S. 1459, argue that ranchers don't pay fair market value. Well, I would like my colleagues to explain to the rest of us, how one can determine what fair market value is.

For example, when doing a fair market value appraisal, appraisers compare the value of similarly situated pieces of property—they compare apples with apples. When opponents of the proposed grazing fee compare the prices charged to lease private or State lands with the grazing fees ranchers pay for BLM or Forest Service lands, however they are comparing apples with oranges. They simply are not the same thing.

My friends from Arkansas and Vermont, are attempting to draw comparisons between apples—State lands, and oranges—Federal lands, to legitimize their logic. States fees are structured under an entirely different scenario than Federal fees. State lands are administered for completely different purposes and goals compared to Federal lands. To compare the fee dollars and cents on a chart is simply not fair.

With their amendments, my colleagues are attempting to utilize the State fee structure to create a more fair return to the Government and taxpayer. However, as I have stated before, this logic is flawed.

If we follow this rationale utilized in this amendment, by implementing the State rate fees, we might as well streamline the process and manage the public lands according to State management systems. Heck, if we charge a grazing fee according to State rates, manage the Federal lands like State lands, we might as well turn the whole operation and ownership over to the States. I suspect there are many Members in this body that would not agree with this type of logic.

Furthermore, the grazing fee structure in the Bumpers amendment is fundamentally unfair to ranchers. This proposal does not fully consider the investment that ranchers already have made in building their lots and stock ponds. In addition, the profit margins for many ranchers is small, and thousands of ranchers have already fallen into bankruptcy. Raising the fees as this amendment proposes to do will drive even more ranchers into economic insolvency.

Mr. President, the fee structure proposed by S. 1459 would establish a fair system. It is a very simple and straightforward method for calculating the grazing fee that would apply to western BLM and Forest Service lands.

Quite simply, you would take the 3-year average of the total gross value of production of beef cattle for the 3 years preceding the grazing fee year—based on data supplied by the Economic Research Service of the USDA—and multiply that number by the 10-year rolling average of 6-month Treasury bills. That number would be divided by 12, the number of months in a year. The dividend would be the grazing fee, expressed in dollars per animal unit month. S. 1459 would increase the fee by an average of about 50 cents per AUM.

Anyone who truly understands the grazing fees, will understand that there is only one agency that really attempts to compile data about private leased lands—it is the USDA's Economic Research Service—and that is why they are the source of the critical data used in this fee formula.

Mr. President, I am deeply concerned about this misperception of grazing fees that has become a symbol representing unfair subsidies and environmental degradation. Fee increases are imminent, and most people here understand that. However, these increases must be carefully structured with appropriate data. S. 1459 achieves this, by establishing a grazing fee formula that protects the rancher while allowing for equitable returns to the Federal Government.

I would like to abbreviate my comments because I know my colleagues want to get out of here at a decent hour this evening. I was over in the office listening to the Senator from Arkansas and the Senator from Vermont, and I have to tell you I think they are just simply missing the target. I would ask my colleagues to oppose both their amendments.

As I understand the Jeffords amendment in the second degree, is attempting to put corporate interests in the same category as the family rancher, who has spent years and years of hard work to make his ranch grow. I think that is a mistake. It seems to me that we are confusing the issue of large and small ranchers and real ranchers with corporate operations.

I know in our State of Colorado we give special 100-year awards to ranchers and farmers. If the family has stayed with the land for 100 years, we give them an award at our State fair every year to try to encourage them to stay on the land. Many of those ranchers have sacrificed a great deal and their families have sacrificed too in order to make the ranch grow.

Some have done well over the years and invested in other things, but their primary income still comes from the ranch. This reality is a little different than the reality I have heard described by the two Senators and their amendments. I understand that the amendments that are being offered now are an attempt to try to get the corporate people out of ranching, and both Senator BUMPERS and Senator JEFFORDS mentioned Anheuser-Busch and Hewlett-Packard and a number of others, Simplot and Texaco, and so on.

I think most of us recognize that there are corporations in America that have bought ranches or bought permits to use as some kind of a tax shelter. I understand that. Most of us understand that. That is not who we are trying to protect. I know the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. THOMAS] and I have a lot of friends who fall into the first category that I was trying to describe. Those people who have worked the land, stuck to the land and sacrificed to keep the land are the ones we are concerned about. We are not in any way trying to protect the big corporations from using ranching legislation as a tax writeoff.

It would seem to me what they should introduce perhaps is an amendment to prevent nonranchers from buying permits, or to specify the criteria for permittees. It seems to me that is who they are trying to identify are those people who are abusing or misusing, if I can use their words, the system of ranching and the system of using permits.

Now, I wanted to also respond to the Senator from Arkansas question of quote, ''Where does the money go?'' I will tell you where the little money ranchers gain in profit goes. It goes onto Main Street. It goes into hardware stores, and it goes into the grocery stores, and it goes into the used car lot and everyplace else—the banks, too, if there is some left over. Maybe it even goes for recreation or vacations. For the most part, however, usually the little that is left over goes back into the ranch to improve the ranch. I don't think people understand that ranching is the economic backbone for many rural communities in the West. When one rancher goes down, the whole community is affected. People up in the administration like to talk about the interconnectedness of ecosystems. Well, the rural ranching communities are a great example of an interconnected community. One element goes down, and the whole system crashes.

It seems to me, knowing what I do, as a western Senator, about ranching, when you kill the ranching industry—you also kill Main Street. I believe a disproportionate increase in a fee could do just that, and there are many studies that have indicated that a fee increase would indeed have devastating repercussions for the rancher and the community. This is obviously a serious issue to many small towns in the West, in probably eight or nine States at the very least. A blind and politically driven fee increase would result in putting real hard-working people on the welfare lines, and destroying property tax bases in our region. I do not think that is what our goal ought to be.

The Senator from Arkansas also mentioned one person in particular which he used to convince folks, in his catch-all kind of shotgun attack, that large ranchers are the same as corporate ranchers. That man was a man by the name of Dan Russell. I happen to personally know Dan Russell, although I do not know him well. I met him years ago, clear back in the 1960's. I disagree strongly with the Senator from Arkansas' characterization of his operation as some type of heartless, profit-driven corporate industry.

Dan Russell's family has ranched for almost 100 years on both sides of the Sierra Nevada Mountains in California and Nevada, too. He probably made 98 percent of his money or more from ranching, although he has probably invested in other things, too. Yes, he did make money, but I do not think that is against the law and it should not be against the law.

Dan Russell may have made money, but one factor that the Senator from Arkansas failed to mention is that Dan is known as one of the most community-minded people in the foothills of the Sierra Nevada Mountains. Dan's profit has been a profit for his community. If you go to Folsom, CA, a small town northeast of Sacramento, you find the Dan Russell Arena, which Dan donated. A lot of events are held there for the community. He is known as a civic leader and community-minded citizen who has made his money through real ranching, not because he had an interest in Texaco or something else. Dan's contributions to his local community should be commended, not condemned.

I would now like to address the issue of fair market value. This issue comes up in this debate time after time. There is a great misperception about the fees for public lands, as if, somehow, ranchers in the West are ripping off the taxpayer because they do not pay the same amount for their AUM as a rancher in some other State that has to rent private land. I have private land. My wife's family used to have permits. I can tell you there is a big difference between private land and permits on public lands. The public land permits do not have the same sorts of benefits you could get on private land. Developments, improvements, anything you would not have to pay or provide on private lands, you have to pay for out of your own pocket on public lands. You get a lot more for your money with private rentals than you do with the permits. I think it is simply a bad comparison.

I would like to illustrate the ludicrous nature of this comparison with a couple of examples. I live out West where, if you want to go get your own Christmas tree at Christmas, you can do it on public lands. You can get a $5 permit from the Forest Service and go cut a tree. Virtually any tree of any size that you can carry out of there, is only $5. Yet, if you go downtown to any city in America and you buy a tree on the lot, it will probably cost you $5 a foot. So how do you go about comparing the two? If you use the same rationale in the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas, we should start charging folks $5 a foot for the trees on Forest Service land. I have a hunch though, that if you told everybody who wanted to go out in the forest and cut his or her own Christmas tree, many of whom have built traditions off of this practice year after year, that we were going to charge them $5 a foot for any tree they pack out of the forest, they would probably get pretty darned angry about it. Is it fair? How about this example: In Denver, CO, if you go to the zoo to see eagles, hawks, coyotes, snakes, alligators, elk, and deer or whatever kind of animal, you pay $6. If you drive about 30 minutes from the zoo to the foothills of the Rocky Mountains, you could easily see a lot of these animals, and you wouldn't be charged a cent. Under the Senator from Arkansas' logic with fair market value, maybe we ought to charge anybody who wants to see a deer, who goes out in the forest, $6 to go out and look at deer. There would be a national uprising if we even suggested something like that.

This business about fair market value is simply a classic case of apples and oranges. It does not fit and it is not fair.

Finally, I would like to address another example that demonstrates the difficulties in ranching on public lands. Currently, under the rangeland reform regulations and the Bingaman substitute amendment, the permittees on public lands who have put money into improvements are not allowed to have any ownership over the investments they make. The ranchers simply have to put in that money themselves—there are no Federal grants to assist them—and they get very little in return in the end. Under the Domenici bill, there are real incentives for permittees to improve their allotments. Unless you provide real incentives for the rancher, the condition of the range will continue to be substandard. This is not the fault or responsibility of the rancher. It is the responsibility of the Federal Government. It just makes sense—people have to feel empowered, they have to feel like they have a stake in what they work on, in order for them to be proactive in improving the conditions.

In any event, I did want to come down just for a moment and voice my opposition to both the Jeffords amendment and the Bumpers amendment. I think they are both just shots in the dark, and by trying to go after the big corporations they will create casualties amongst the hard-working family ranchers of the West.

With that, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. THOMAS. Madam President, just for a moment, I, too, cannot resist the opportunity to make some comment on what we have heard over the last few minutes. I guess it is because I have heard it a half a dozen times since I came here to the Congress in 1989. Every year this same thing goes on, we go through this same business.

Basically, the first decision you have to make is the question of, as the previous speaker said, ''highly subsidized grazing.'' Let me quote for you a study that was made by Pepperdine University. It was a comparative analysis of economic and financial conditions. It happened to be in Montana, between ranchers who have Federal lands and those who do not. These are just a few of the findings.

> Montana ranchers who rely upon access to Federal lands and grazing do not have a competitive advantage over other ranchers in the State. Livestock operators with direct access to Federal forage do not enjoy significant economic or financial advantages over ranchers who do not utilize Federal forage.

It goes on and on. This is not my study; it is an academic study from Pepperdine University.

The point of the matter is, there is a great deal of difference between what you buy in State lands and what you buy in private lands and what you get in public lands. The Senator was talking about comparing it to Arkansas. What do they get, 35, 40 inches of moisture a year? In Wyoming, we get 6 or 8. There is a substantial difference there. Out in the Red Desert, where much of this land is, it takes 100 acres for one animal unit year. That is what it takes. It is different.

State lands you can fence. State lands you can—they are better quality lands. Generally they are small, isolated tracts that are enclosed. It is not comparable.

The Senator was talking about $1.35. Our bill does not talk about $1.35, it talks about $1.85. It talks about going up from where we were. It has a formula based on the price and the value of cattle. It does not treat different people differently.

The Senator keeps mentioning the Rock Springs Grazing Association, that it is a great corporation. It is not a great corporation. It is a combination of relatively small ranches.

I keep hearing about it every year, the same thing. I just do not understand it. It is interesting, of course, that all those who talk about this come from nonpublic-land States. I guess that might have something to do with it.

In any event, I oppose these propositions. I think the formula has nothing to do with the price of cattle. It has nothing to do with the idea of what it is you are buying. Anyone who thinks there is a comparative value between private leasing and public lands just has not taken a look at it. They just have not taken a look at it.

Madam President, I am sure we will talk about this some more tomorrow, and should. But I want to tell you that this whole idea of trying to establish two classes of users is not even supported by the Secretary of the Interior over time. It has never been used before. The idea that the whole thing is subsidized simply is not the case. It is a matter of utilizing the resources on a multiple-use basis.

Tell me how many private land leases are also shared with hunters and fishermen and leased to oil? They are not that way. That is not the way it is. So, it is interesting to me that we continue to have this same discussion every time this comes up. Fortunately, that position does not generally prevail.

Madam President, we will pursue it some more tomorrow. For tonight, I yield the floor.

Mr. GRASSLEY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Just for a minute I want to speak on the bill before us, and then I want to ask permission to speak as in morning business for about 7 or 8 minutes.

Before I speak in morning business, most of the time I only speak on agricultural issues as they relate to the Midwest—the cattle, the pork, the production of corn, production of soybeans, and some wheat. But I think a lot of things that could be said on that issue can be said on this bill as well.

Part of the problem that the Senators from the West are having comes from a lot of constituents who are legitimately expressing concern about the environment, legitimately expressing concern about the good management and a good economic return for the Federal Government on land that the taxpayers own, who do all this legitimately. But they forget, in the process, they are not appreciating what the consumer of America has in the way of production of food in America.

I think too often the 98 percent of the people in this country who are not producing food—remember, that is 2 percent of the people in this country producing the food that the other 98 percent eat, or another way to put it, one farmer in America will produce enough food not only for Americans but for people outside of America to feed another 124 people—the 98 percent do not really appreciate the fact that food grows on farms, it does not grow in supermarkets.

They are so used to going to the supermarket, getting anything they want anytime they want it and just pay for it. Every time you pay for it, you think you are paying for a very expensive item. But, in fact, food in the United States, not only being of the highest quality, is also a cheaper product in America than any other country in the world.

The consumers of America spend about 9 or 10 percent of their disposable income on food. Look at any other country, and the percentage is in the high teens and low twenties, and in some of the countries of Eastern Europe, it could be 40 percent of income spent just on food.

I know none of you is going to buy the argument when I say we are talking about subsidies for farmers. Just think of the subsidy that the consumers of America get from the efficient production of food in America that consumers in other places in the world do not get from production of food by their farmers.

I do not expect anybody to buy the argument that the farmers of America are subsidizing the food bill of consumers of America by 40 percent, but that is a fact, because we produce so efficiently, we produce such a high-quality product that it is just a little irksome for those of us who are involved in agriculture to sit around here and listen to this lack of appreciation of what the farmers do for the consumers of America, what 2 percent of the people do for the other 98 percent, what we not only do in the way of production of food and fiber, but what we do to create jobs in America, because whatever starts out at the natural resources of America, whether it be on the row-crop farms of the Midwest or the grazing lands of the West, the start of that product there, when you trace that product from the farm through the consumer of America, you are talking about a food and fiber chain that is 20 percent of the gross national product of America.

That is jobs for a lot of people other than the 2 percent of the people who are farmers. Quite frankly, a lot of income returned on labor is much greater than the return that the farmer gets for labor.

So you can go ahead in this debate over the next day or two and have all the fun you want to about doing what you think is right for the environment or what you think is right for a return on investment for the taxpayers who have money invested in public land and give the farmers of America a bad time. We probably have to take it because we are such a small segment of the population, but I would like to see, once in a while, an appreciation from the people in the Congress of the United States, not only this body but the other body as well, for the 2 percent of the people who provide a good product and a cheap product for the consumers of America.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business for 7 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE VOID IN MORAL LEADERSHIP—PART II

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, yesterday, I spoke about the void in moral leadership in the White House.

I felt obliged, as Teddy Roosevelt said, to speak the truth about the President.

Let me quote him once more.

Some of my colleagues may not have heard me yesterday.

He said it is absolutely necessary that we have full liberty to tell the truth about the President and his acts.

> Any other attitude in an American citizen is both base and servile.
> To announce that there must be no criticism of the President . . . is not only unpatriotic and servile, but is morally treasonable to the American public . . .
> It is even more important to tell the truth, pleasant or unpleasant, about him than about anyone else.

I quoted yesterday from another great President, also named Roosevelt. Franklin D. Roosevelt. He said,

> The Presidency is not merely an administrative office . . .
> It is more than an engineering job . . .
> It is pre-eminently a place of moral leadership.

That is why it is important to reflect on this issue.

I speak about the moral leadership issue because I believe it is critical.

Because it is lacking.

I make a distinction between leadership and moral leadership.

Leadership means the capacity for exercising responsible authority.

There are many in this body who are outstanding leaders.

This is reflected in the many important laws we write for the Nation.

Moral leadership is different.

Moral leadership means we do not just pass laws for the rest of the Nation, and exempt ourselves.

It means we pass laws and we apply them to ourselves, as well.

We set the example.

We say one thing, and we do it, too.

That is what I mean by moral leadership.

This Congress, for example, in one of its very first deeds, passed the Congressional Accountability Act.

In doing so, for the very first time we applied the laws to ourselves that we passed for the rest of the country.

That is moral leadership, Madam President.

That is setting an example.

It says, ''Watch what we do, not just what we say.''

It is not often that Congress is able to exhibit moral leadership.

We do things more by consensus and compromise.

The reality of Congress is, we usually do things ugly.

Foreigners always have the best observations about our form of government. de Tocqueville, of course, is the most famous example.

But a Russian visitor, Boris Marshalov, once observed, ''Congress is so strange. A man gets up to speak and says nothing. Nobody listens—and then everybody disagrees.

Madam President, that's precisely why leadership from the White House is so important.

The individuality of the President is required to provide the moral leadership for the Nation that Congress, as a body, cannot.

The country desperately needs it.

That is what Franklin Roosevelt was talking about.

Yesterday, I talked about why the White House has covered up all its nonlegal activities, on both Whitewater and Travelgate.

It is because the activity of those in the White House conflicts with their projected image.

In the words of syndicated columnist Charles Krauthammer, it is ''political duplicity * * * The offense is hypocrisy of a high order. Having posed as our moral betters, they had to cover up. At stake is their image.''

Yesterday, I referred to and quoted from the new book by James B. Stewart, ''Blood Sport.''

The book reveals much about the Clintons to which Mr. Krauthammer alluded. Mr. Stewart raises several questions about the Clintons.

One is about their willingness to abide by the same standards that everyone else has to meet. A second is about whether they abide by financial requirements in obtaining mortgage loans. A third is whether they should have accepted favors from people who were regulated by the State of Arkansas.

Last week, Mr. Stewart was interviewed by Ted Koppel on ''Nightline.'' In that interview, Mr. Stewart calls this a story about: ''the Arrogance of Power, what people think they can do/and get away with/as an elected official, then how candid and honest they are when questioned about it.''

He offers an illustration. It is a quote from the First Lady. She was advised by White House staff to disclose everything rather than stonewall. Let the Sun shine in, they said. But the First Lady rejected that advice. She said, according to Mr. Stewart, ''Well, you know, I'm not going to have people poring over our documents. After all, we're the President.''

Madam President, I will put the entire interview of Mr. Stewart by Mr. Koppel into the RECORD.

That way, the RECORD will reflect the full context of Mr. Stewart's words, so that I am not accused of misleading the American people.

But Mr. Stewart's observations, as well as those of Mr. Krauthammer, heighten the public's awareness of a moral leadership void in the White House.

So I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the interview of Mr. Stewart by Mr. Koppel.

There being no objection, the interview was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From ''Nightline'' Mar. 11, 1996]

TED KOPPEL [voice-over]. The Whitewater controversy, accusations made and denied.

JAMES STEWART [Author, ''Blood Sport'']. Mrs. Clinton, essentially, took singlehandedly the control of this investment.

HILLARY CLINTON. We saw no records, we saw no documents.

TED KOPPEL [voice-over]. New questions about the Clintons' credibility.

JAMES STEWART. I think the death of Vincent Foster is the pivotal event in this story.

HILLARY CLINTON. There were no documents taken out of Vince Foster's office on the night he died.

President BILL CLINTON. An allegation comes up, and we answer it, and then people say, ''Well, here's another allegation. Answer this.''

JAMES STEWART. The President practically screamed over the phone. He said, ''I can't take this anymore. I'm here in Europe and they're asking me about Whitewater.''

TED KOPPEL [voice-over]. Now, the picture may become a little clearer. Tonight, new details about Whitewater, Vince Foster and damage control.

ANNOUNCER. This is ABC News Nightline. Reporting from Washington, Ted Koppel.

TED KOPPEL. This program may be the first you've heard about ''Blood Sport,'' a new book which becomes available later this week, but it will not be the last. To begin with, you need to know how and why the book came about. The idea appears to have originated with Hillary Clinton. In any event, it was her close friend, Susan Thomases, herself a lawyer, who approached the author, Jim Stewart, and suggested that those closest to the First Family and, indeed, the President and the First Lady themselves, would be willing to cooperate with an objective, outside-the-Beltway writer on a detailed, no-holds-barred Whitewater book.

Stewart, a lawyer and former page one editor of the Wall Street Journal, had impeccable credentials. He had shared in a 1988 Pulitzer Prize for his reporting on insider trading. In 1991, he published the book ''Den of Thieves,'' about financial fraud in the 1980's. Stewart took up the offer and even had one lengthy meeting with Mrs. Clinton at the White House, but the promised cooperation never materialized, although a number of people close to the Clintons did ultimately talk. Stewart went ahead and wrote the book anyway. Jim Stewart is a meticulous writer, which is another way of saying that there are few blaring headlines, but dozens of troubling revelations.

To understand what Jim Stewart has done, you need to refresh your memory on what the Clintons have variously claimed and insisted. The Clintons have insisted, for example, that they were only passive investors in Whitewater, and had virtually nothing to do with it themselves.

HILLARY CLINTON. We gave whatever money we were requested to give by Jim McDougal. I mean, he was the one who would say, ''Here's what you owe on interest, here's what your contributions should be.'' We did whatever he asked us. We saw no records, we saw no documents.

TED KOPPEL. The Clintons insist that they have fully cooperated with the investigation of Whitewater, but that they have been dogged by one unproved allegation after another.

President BILL CLINTON. That's really the story of this for the last four years. An allegation comes up and we answer it, and the people say, ''Well, here's another allegation. Answer this.'' And then, ''Here's another allegation. Answer this.'' That is the way we are—we're living here in Washington today.

TED KOPPEL. And only a couple of weeks ago, after the FDIC released a report prepared by Jay Stevens, a former Republican U.S. attorney not known to be friendly toward the Clintons, there was this.

MARK FABIANI [Associate White House Counsel]. This report blows out of the water the allegations that have been made about the First Lady and the Rose Law Firm, and it undermines the contention of those who would extend these Whitewater hearings endlessly on into the future.

TED KOPPEL. That may be as good a place as any to introduce Jim Stewart, the author of ''Blood Sport,'' in his first television interview on the book, and let me have you respond right away, because the White House is obviously very proud of the fact that Jay Stevens, Republican, no friend of the Clintons, supervised a report by the FDIC which, in effect, according to the White House, found the Clintons blameless in the—in the Whitewater affair. Is that an overstatement?

JAMES STEWART [Author, ''Blood Sport'']. Well, I think the White House reaction is misplaced optimism. The report is good news, as far as it goes, but it doesn't go very far. It explicitly says that it's not the definitive report on many of the questions that have arisen here, and there is still an independent counsel investigating all of these and even more allegations. As long as the independent counsel investigation continues, a real threat hovers over this President.

TED KOPPEL. Why or how do you explain the fact that Jay Stevens, who, as I say, has no particular love for the Clintons, why would he end an investigation if, as you say, it's incomplete?

JAMES STEWART. He was retained to investigate the narrow question of whether the government should sue the Clintons or others to regain losses from Madison Guaranty, and he concluded there was no evidence to warrant a suit against the Clintons or the Rose Law Firm to do that, and I think that's the right conclusion. I do not conclude that Madison Guaranty losses flowed to the Clintons.

TED KOPPEL. What then, do you conclude, that—I mean, try and give it to me in a broad sense. What is it that you would say if you were obliged, in 15 or 30 seconds, to summarize what is troublesome about Whitewater and what will still come back to haunt the Clintons?

JAMES STEWART. Well, I think the Whitewater investment and the story of that is important because it shows many things about the Clintons. It shows their willingness to hold themselves to the standards that everyone else has to meet. It shows their willingness to abide by financial requirements in obtaining mortgage loans. But I think, most of all, it shows their willingness, while in Arkansas, to accept the favors of people who were regulated by the state.

Their attitude to this, which bordered on the negligent in the beginning, clearly indicated a mindset which said, ''Somebody else will take care of us because of our power as highly elected officials in the state of Arkansas.''

TED KOPPEL. In a sense, Jim, that's a negative way of saying the same thing we heard Mrs. Clinton say at the beginning of this broadcast. In other words, let somebody else take care of this. She put, in a more positive sense, i.e., ''We had nothing to do with this. If Jim McDougal came and said, 'You owe so-and-so-much in interest,' we paid it, but we never saw documents, we never had an active role in this Whitewater affair.'' To which you would say what?

JAMES STEWART. Well, that simply isn't true. I think it may have been true in the very beginning of the investment, when there were still high hopes that this would make money and the McDougals could handle everything, but by 1986, when the McDougal empire was crumbling, it was not true. At that point, Mrs. Clinton essentially took, singlehandedly, the control of this investment. She was the one who negotiated the loan renewals with the bank that held the mortgage. She was the one who handled all the correspondence. She was the one who went over all the numbers. She had possession of all the records.

TED KOPPEL. It is your contention that she vastly inflated the value of the Clintons' interest in Whitewater.

JAMES STEWART. That's correct.

TED KOPPEL. Correct?

JAMES STEWART. As I'm sure anybody who has ever applied for a mortgage knows, you have to disclose your assets in such a financial disclosure statement, and there are warnings on these forms to be honest about this, to be accurate, to be careful, not to use uncertain judgments, because to inflate that can be a federal crime. And yet Mrs. Clinton valued Whitewater at $100,000 on a 1987 financial disclosure document, right after the bank itself had visited the property and concluded the most generous estimate for their half-interest would be $52,000.

TED KOPPEL. So when you're talking about a $100,000 evaluation, you're not talking about the value of the whole property, but the Clinton's half-interest?

JAMES STEWART. They valued their half-interest at $100,000.

TED KOPPEL. I ask you this question advisedly, reminding our viewers that you have some experience as a lawyer. Is that a crime?

JAMES STEWART. It is a crime to submit a false financial document. In fact, their partners, the McDougals, are on trial in Little Rock this week for having submitted false financial documents to financial institutions. But to prove a case like that, a prosecutor would have to prove that it was knowingly a false submission. We haven't heard an explanation from either Mrs. Clinton or the President about that document, and that ultimately would be a question for a prosecutor and a jury to decide.

TED KOPPEL. I bring you back, Jim, to what we heard the President say just a few moments ago, again, at the top of this broadcast, sort of this—this cry of ''What in heaven's name are we supposed to do? Somebody makes an allegation, we respond to the allegation. Somebody makes a new allegation, we respond to that allegation.'' This sounds like another one of those allegations. How do you respond to—to what the President is saying?

JAMES STEWART. Well, I don't think these allegations would be coming out, or the revelations, in this kind of slow, drip-by-drip process, if the White House and the Clintons had been forthright from the beginning, when this first surfaced in the campaign. Get the story out. They came to me, or they sent someone to me, allegedly because they wanted to get the whole story out, and they had been advised at the time—and I told them the same thing—that to stop these inquiries, get in front of the story. Tell us what happened, and don't leave holes in the story. Be complete. Err on the side of completeness, and if people are bored, they can ignore it. But that has never been the strategy they have employed.

TED KOPPEL. Let's take a short break, Jim. When—we come back, we will talk about what Vince Foster knew about Whitewater and a number of other subjects.

TED KOPPEL. And back once again with Jim Stewart.

You begin with the suicide of Vince Foster, and clearly believe that his suicide is pivotal to understanding everything that's happened to the Clintons in—in subsequent months and years. Have you reached any conclusion as to why he committed suicide?

JAMES STEWART. Well, first of all, there was the things [sic] he enumerated in—in the note that he wrote, and I think foremost among those was probably his concern about the handling of the firing of employees in the travel office, but what I think I can contribute that's new is that there were things bothering him that were so serious he didn't dare write them in his note, he didn't confide them to his wife. He was worried about his marriage. He was very much enmeshed in what we now know as Whitewater, and he knew of things that hadn't come to light that could prove embarrassing. He was concerned about the deterioration of his relationship with the First Lady, and I think there's a good chance he knew of the problems that Webster Hubbell was about to face, given his handling of clients in the Rose firm.

TED KOPPEL. When you talk about Web Hubbell, I should point out, first of all, Vince Foster, Hillary Clinton, Web Hubbell had all been partners at the—at the Rose Law Firm together. Web Hubbell then came with the Clintons to Washington, was briefly the assistant attorney general of the United States, and you write that in the months before Vince Foster committed suicide, that he went over to Web Hubbell's house and went down in the basement to look at what?

JAMES STEWARD. Well, there were files in Web Hubbell's basement that had been removed from the Rose Law Firm during the campaign by Web Hubbell and Vince Foster. Web and Vince, during the campaign, went through the Rose Firm and removed anything that they thought might be controversial or create problems for the campaign, and this including many of the billing records relating to Hillary Clinton's work for Madison Guaranty and other matters. And one day Vince Foster went over and he and Web Hubbell got into the basement, they went to the boxes, and they went through those materials looking for these particular files, which they did get and turn over to the First Lady. But also in those files were all of this other material, including a lot of the Whitewater material, bank records from Whitewater, and the billing records, as I mentioned before.

TED KOPPEL. Is it—is it your impression that Vince Foster then took those billing records to the White House, to his office?

JAMES STEWART. It's certainly a possibility. I don't know for sure, and nobody's said they recalled him taking documents out of the basement. But those documents in the basement were later all turned over to the Williams and Connolly firm after they learned that Web Hubbell had all these documents, and they supposedly turned all those documents over to Congress. So these records did not surface there. So that suggests to me that somehow, between their first being removed from the Rose firm to their being discovered, they were in Vince Foster's office.

TED KOPPEL. Talk to me for a moment about—about Travelgate, but first of all, let's take a look at something the First Lady said, I believe in her interview with Barbara Walters, about the whole Travelgate affair.

HILLARY CLINTON [''20/20'']. I think that everyone who knew about it was quite concerned, and wanted it to be taken care of, but I did not make the decisions, I did not direct anyone to make the decisions, but I have absolutely no doubt that I did express concern, because I was concerned about any kind of financial mismanagement.

TED KOPPEL. Mrs. Clinton presents herself in that interview as exercising a sort of passive role. ''Yes, I may have expressed some concern about but I certainly didn't initiate it.'' There is a memorandum by David Watkins, I believe. Tell the story of that memorandum, because it, of course, suggests something totally different, but the White House itself ultimately produced that memorandum and made it available. Why is that significant?

JAMES STEWART. Well, the facts, as I discovered, on the travel office affair, are as follows. I learned, before the production of this memo, that in fact, whatever her own personal belief about this is, Mrs. Clinton was the first person to suggest to David Watkins that these people be replaced.

TED KOPPEL. David Watkins being?

JAMES STEWART. He was the head of management in the White House and was the person in charge of personnel in the White House, including the travel office.

TED KOPPEL. Right.

JAMES STEWART. She was the first one to say to him, ''We need our people in this office.'' Did she literally say ''Fire them''? No. But the implication seemed very clear to him and to everyone else who spoke with her, and that's what set in motion the chain of events that led to their being fired.

TED KOPPEL. But the—the memorandum that David Watkins wrote to his own file about all of this, and about falling on his sword for the First Lady, is a memorandum that the White House itself, after all, made available. Now, that certainly puts them in a good light, doesn't it?

JAMES STEWART. Well, I don't think so. First of all, that memorandum had been under subpoena for a considerable period of time. The independent counsel, the predecessor to Kenneth Starr, had subpoenaed that particular document. Meanwhile, I think the White House was aware that all this information was soon going to be made public. I have no idea how they found it, when they did, or why they decided to—to make it public when they did, but I do know that the week before that, I and my fact checker were checking the details about the First Lady's involvement in the travel office affair with the White House press office, with people in the White House, and had even faxed them material that dealt with this very subject, and almost immediately after that the memo itself appeared.

TED KOPPEL. What you're suggesting, Jim, is that because you indicated that something about this was going to be in your book that they then decided to—to make it public before it became public in your book?

JAMES STEWART. Well, as I said, I don't know why they did it. All I can say is, I had all this information in the book, we were fact-checking this information with the White House, so the White House knew this information was going to be in the book and shortly after that the memo appeared. But I'm sure the White House will say that no, that had nothing to do with it.

TED KOPPEL. Let's take another short break. An inside peek at the White House damage control operation when we come back.

TED KOPPEL. There was, Jim Stewart, considerable debate going on within the White House, you discovered, about how much to reveal, when to reveal it, how cooperative to be, and at one point there is a—a line that I suspect is going to be a rather devastating line that the First Lady uttered in reference to all of this.

JAMES STEWART. Well, you're—you're right. The—there was internal advice, especially from David Gergen, to turn everything over, and this was seriously considered until the First Lady interrupted at one point and said, ''Well, you know, I'm not going to have people poring over our documents. After all, we're the President,'' suggesting that, by virtue of grandeur and power of the office, that they somehow should not have to endure such an experience.

TED KOPPEL. The key questions, I think, ultimately may become not so much what happened during Whitewater, but what happened in more recent months, in terms of either covering things up or not being as forthcoming with information. There is one story that—that you uncover having to do with the Paula Jones story, this is the young lady who charged sexual harassment against then-Governor Clinton, and the—and the Arkansas state troopers who were then guarding Mr. Clinton. What is that all about?

JAMES STEWART. Well, I think it's well-known at this point that the troopers surfaced with some accounts of their experiences while in the security detail of the governor. What I think hasn't gotten much attention is that before these reports were published, and before the troopers actually made the final decision to reveal what they claim to know, there was pressure applied to them to try to get them not to speak out, and I think the most significant example of this came when the President of the United States himself called one of these troopers and offered him a federal job. That trooper subsequently decided not to participate. He was not one of the troopers who subsequently did tell stories to anyone, so if the goal of that job offer was to get this trooper to remain silent, it worked.

TED KOPPEL. Is there not one trooper who, in fact, ended up with a federal job?

JAMES STEWART. The head of the governor's security detail did end up with a federal job, but the trooper who heard directly from the president and decided not to participate did not accept it. He said he didn't—didn't want one of these jobs, he wanted to stay in Little Rock.

TED KOPPEL. Now, again, let me draw on some of your experience as a lawyer. If, indeed, that could be—that could be proved true, the charge that you—that you make in your book, that would be a federal crime, would it not?

JAMES STEWART. Well, that, again, could be a federal crime. I think the—the issue here is was a job offered explicitly in exchange for something else?

TED KOPPEL. Let me ask you—and I realize this—this may be the most difficult question I ask you of all—after having written a book that is 400 pages-plus, how do you—how do you reduce it to a conclusion as to culpability, lack of culpability, whether this is a story that has just been blown way out of proportion, whether it is simply being kept alive for partisan reasons now and is—is doomed to do so for the rest of this year because there is a presidential election and because, you know, for the Clintons, the unfortunate timing that your book is coming out right now—how do you summarize everything you've learned?

JAMES STEWART. Well, my interest is not partisan, and my interest is not narrowly was a law broken. I think to sum up the whole book is a study in the acquisition and wielding of power, and in the end, it's a study of the arrogance of power, what people think they can do and get away with as an elected official, and then how candid and honest they are when questioned about it. I think that is what it reveals, I think, most significantly about the Clintons.

TED KOPPEL. And—and to those who say, has all of this investigation, the congressional investigations, the independent prosecutors, the time that you have spent in putting this book together, you know, was the—was it all worth all the money and the time and the effort and the pain?

JAMES STEWART. I think, in the end, we'll find that it was, that the truth is important in our society, that justice is important in our society. I don't think you can put a price tag on those things. Yes, it's terribly expensive, and at times it seems very wasteful, and at times it's nasty and it's partisan. It often is a blood sport, as Vince Foster said. But why is that? It's 'cause the truth was never honored in the first place, and I hope if there's any lesson that comes out of that, that people in the future will recognize that.

TED KOPPEL. Jim Stewart, thank you.

I'll be back in a moment.

TED KOPPEL. The controversy over ''Blood Sport'', this book, will be the subject of a segment on ''Good Morning America'' tomorrow.

That's our report for tonight. I'm Ted Koppel in Washington. For all of us here at ABC News, good night.

Mr. SIMPSON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BENNETT). The Senator from Wyoming.

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, today we debate a bill of tremendous importance to my State and to many Americans who draw their livelihood from the land. I am speaking specifically about ranchers, that often maligned group of individuals who have played such an enduring role of the development and prosperity of our Western States over the years—and individuals they are.

It is difficult to conceive of a greater distortion than the continuing ugly portrayal of those in my State being described as big-time cattle barons, Cadillac cowboys, few in number and great in wealth and rapacity and greed. The reality is far, far different. There are more than 25,000 ranchers whose livestock grazes on these western lands all over our Western States.

In Western and Midwestern States, more than 50 percent of all beef cattle graze these lands at one time or another during the year. If cattle were driven from these lands—and this administration seems to advocate that; that has been the pressure from them—large numbers of ranchers would surely go out of business. That is the stark reality. It is also a very cynical and deceptive canard that alleges that if this bill were to pass, public access to these Federal lands would be simply cut off. Instead, this bill reaffirms that use of these public lands for nongrazing purposes, shall continue in accordance with State and Federal law, already in effect.

I am very pleased to support this bill. So many have worked so hard. I commend the occupant of the chair, Senator DOMENICI, and so many people who have worked so hard. My colleague from Wyoming, Senator CRAIG THOMAS, has done a yeoman's task, and does it well.

I support Americans who make their living off the land. I support a healthy environment. Who does not? I get tired of that argument. Good Lord, I have lifted more lumber on the environmental laws when I was a State legislator than half the people who bark and howl at the moon in this place. I support public access to our public lands. I support the principle of multiple use, an unknown description to several people in this body. It is indeed impossible to believe that we cannot pursue all of these objectives simultaneously, which this bill does.

What I do not support is this one-size-fits-all solution for local problems. These are issues which very much require a rich participation in the form of the expertise and concerns of the local people, those who are closest to the problems and those who, I might say, care the most and are affected the most. It makes little sense for the beltway environmentalists to have veto power over the common sense and experience of those who have lived and worked and grubbed that land from nothing for generations.

Mr. President, this bill is moderate and balanced and inclusive and fair, and yet it is being described by certain special interests as a sinister, venal, even Republican conspiracy—we have had some good bipartisan support on this issue through the months—to turn back the clock on environmental protection. That shows up, I guess, in focus groups. That is not what this is. This charge is preposterous and made by people who do not want to stop with simply regulating the proper role of livestock on the public lands. It is made by people who would abandon all concept and principle of multiple use altogether.

Let there be no mistake here—the groups opposing this bill hold as their ultimate goal the outright abolition of livestock from public lands. Let us be very clear. I believe that is very evident in slogans such as ''cattle free in '93,'' which was gleefully chanted into the vapors with such fierce conviction, less than one Presidential term ago, as the type of genuine extremism which has played too great a role in this debate.

From a purely scientific perspective, there is not a scintilla of evidence demonstrating that responsible grazing has been detrimental to the rangelands—not one—rather, an ever-growing body of scientific data suggesting it has been a critical component—critical component—of good range health. It is also irrefutable that the range is in far better condition today than it was 40 years ago. That is not my opinion. That is according to the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management.

The condition of the public lands is the best it has been in this century. Yes, we have more cattle grazing on these lands, but we also have more elk, deer, antelope, and even coyotes. We take good care of them, too. How can this be so? The good stewardship of our ranchers, that is how.

Mr. President, I want to just briefly show some photographs. They are rather remarkable. The first, I think, if you can discern—these are unique in their own historical context because the top ones on each of these panels were taken in 1870 by the renowned William Henry Jackson during his photographic survey of the Wyoming Territory. He was working for the USGGST, the U.S. Geological and Geographical Survey of the Territories at the time. This same expedition eventually reached the Yellowstone area. When he got to Yellowstone, he took some extraordinary photos that were so influential in gaining national park status for Yellowstone National Park in that spectacular region.

He, along with Thomas Moran, the artist, upon returning with the material and presenting it to the Congress in 1872, formed Yellowstone Park as a pleasuring ground for the enjoyment of the American people. You would never know that, as people forget the organic act. That is what it was set up for.

When these photographs were taken, all of the pictured lands were Federal. They were all owned by the Federal Government.

But here we are, and over 100 years later, then Prof. Kendall Johnson, of the Range Science Department at Utah State University, attempted to exactly re-create the location and the exact point from which Jackson set up his extraordinarily cumbersome equipment. And with the great plates and the weight of them and hauling them through the West—which was a feat in itself—he re-created Mr. Jackson's photos as a means of studying the condition of rangelands in Wyoming. I am indebted to him for the use of these photographs that were published in his book called ''Rangeland Through Time.''

Some of the lands pictured in the lower panels are Federal and some are private, but all of them are livestock grazed. Every single photo in the lower area is being livestock grazed, all of them.

So the top photograph here shows land about 50 miles north of Rawlins, WY.

This photo was taken in 1870, August 28, about the same time that the Sun family started ranching there. It looks as if the original ranchers took some pretty tough-looking country to decide to work on, but they have been right there ranching ever since that picture was taken.

If you look at the bottom photo just taken a few years ago, the exact same location, you will see the fruits of their stewardship. Do not tell me about environmental devastation wrought by selfish and greedy ranchers. We see trees, cottonwoods. We see extraordinary vegetation, hay lands. That is it, right there. This was the way that God had it. God has had some helpers.

These two photos then were taken on the Laramie River about 5 miles north of Wheatland on August 10, 1870. The top photo was taken in 1870 and the bottom was taken over 100 years later. You will notice that the riparian habitat has been so lush that you cannot even see the river. Here it is in the original form, and here it is 20 years ago. Here is the riparian habitat, and this is all grazing country. As I say, you cannot even tell where the river is because of the lushness of the growth. Again, do not tell me our ranchers do not understand good ecomanagement.

The next pair of photos were taken about 40 miles south of Douglas, pretty rugged country, the same respective time as the previous pair of photos, August 12, 1870. Now, this is a real one—notice the pine and the growth, and here is one taken almost 100 years later. Look at the trees, look at the pine. All of this is grazing land. Look at the grass. This is just rock. Here is grassland, and here is all of this being grazed for decades. Do not tell me, again, about ranchers devastating the land.

Another pair of pictures, the fourth, showing this widespread phenomenon, same timeframe, 1870, August 20, northwest of Douglas, WY. The scene shows a treeless and barren landscape. There it is and there is the camp. People were camping there, probably the first white people to go through—not the first humans. This entire area is near the old Bozeman Trail, Ft. Laramie, up past Ft. Phil Kearny, into Montana. Of course, it was just 5 years after this, on June 25, 1876, that Custer had his rather unfortunate occasion at Little Bighorn. At the bottom we see, again, 100 years later, the grasses are lush and thick, trees are abundant by prairie standards—cottonwoods, water, grasslands, all of it grazed.

It was not a Ph.D. in ecomanagement that resulted in this recovery. Rather, it was the common sense of ranchers who depend for their survival upon the health of these lands. When your family depends on your stewardship, you pay awful close attention, very, very close attention.

Finally, two photos taken on the North Platte River. This was the area of several great Indian struggles in the history of my State, southwest of Casper, WY. A young man named Caspar Collins was killed in an Indian skirmish there. In 1870, these lands were totally overgrazed and treeless; August 25, 1870. By 1986, they had recovered to become well grassed, with riparian habitat abounding. Here is the same photo. Here is water. Here are trees, cottonwoods, native grasses, hayfields, irrigation. So do not tell me about ranchers being poor stewards of the land.

I always like to ask environmentalists what it is they find so appealing about my beautiful State of Wyoming where I am a fifth generation. My grandfather came to this rugged country in 1862 through Ft. Laramie. He was with the Conner expedition, and he ended up going up that trail to Ft. Phil Kearny and was there during what was called the Fetterman massacre. He was a sutler. That is a chap who sells tobacco, boots, and booze to the soldiers. He was good at that. Fincelius G. Burnett. He was there when this great historical battle took place. Then he lived in what was called Fremont County, and he became the boss farmer of Chief Washakie. One of the great Shoshonie leaders of all time had my great grandfather as his boss farmer. That is what he called him. He even gave him land on the reservation. He said, ''I will not take it because it will cause you a lot of pain in the years to come,'' and my grandfather deeded it back. It was a good thing to do because the lands that are there now that did go into private hands have caused some pain.

I ask these environmentalists about Wyoming and what they find so appealing about our great State. The answers I always get reference such things as rugged, natural beauty, the wildlife, the clean streams, the clean air, and great fishing. I say, well, how in Heaven's name do you think it has managed to stay that way all these years? Somebody must have been taking care of it. I tell them that we have been engaged in land use activities for over 100 years. How do you think Wyoming has managed to remain the natural jewel that it is? It is because those of us that live there refuse to let it become ripped and ruined and torn to bits. It is because those citizens who depend upon these lands for their livelihoods have taken such good care of them over time. That is how.

When you are a Republican from Wyoming, you get accused of some very interesting things on the issue of the environment. But I was in the State legislature for 13 years. In the State legislature we put on the books the toughest mine land reclamation law in the United States, in the largest coal-producing State in the United States, Wyoming; the toughest Clean Air Act, which was six times more stringent than the Federal Clean Air Act; a Clean Water Act; a Plant Sighting Act which said, if you are going to come and set up a great type of structure here, an infrastructure, you will see to it that you address the accompanying social and domestic problems. We made them cough up the front end money. That is what I did when I was in the legislature.

I do tire of the paternalistic approach of people who come up to me and ask about saving the State that we already saved. We get a little tired of them hanging around. In this kind of debate, they all use the same fax machine, and all the organizations that chop you to shreds all having interlocking boards of directorate. They really are something. They all live pretty well, a lot of them on inherited wealth. If they do go to work, they find out what the rest of us find out: Work is healing, therapeutic and keeps your mind off cows messing around on the riparian bank and streams. It clears the air. I want that to happen. I get tired of that paternalistic business.

Mr. President, it is no accident that our public grazing lands, each parcel of which is the responsibility of the lessee, are in such good shape today. We have other areas of our planet which are not in good shape, where people have ripped, ruined and torn it up, whether in the oceans, the mountains, or the plains. And this bill puts the powerful tool of self interest to work in favor of the environment instead of against it. It recognizes the basic law that its opponents seem not to understand—that the worst thing in the world for the environment is not mining, logging, ranching, or multiple use; the worst thing in the world for the environment is poverty.

Look at every past civilization of the Earth; before disappearing into the vapors of history when they have finally used up every resource, cut the last tree, shot the last deer, caught the last fish, overpopulated the entire system, their last contribution is a devastated environment. That is what happens. Travel anywhere in the world to any impoverished developing country and you will see the truth of that. You may even come to understand that one of the most important human rights is the right to a job. I know that sounds evil. But that is a great human right—the right to work, the right to make a living.

So I can tell you what will happen. Here is one for the greenies to mull as they are sitting there having a little chardonnay by the campfire with their pals singing songs, of course, in the evening. Here is one for the greenies to mull: What do you think is going to happen when these old cowboys lose their grazing permit, lose the ability to use that land which they have been using for 60, 70 years? I will tell you. Do not miss this scenario. You lose the permit, you gather the kids around—some of them are downtown, or maybe they are working at the courthouse, or wherever they are—and make the decision to sell the place. Then start talking to your pals on the county commission, those county commissioners that you helped elect, and they will direct you to the zoning and planning commission; go to the zoning and planning commission, and they will say, Yes, we have a subdivision regulation there, you bet; go to the old local civil engineer and draw up the plans for the subdivision; and then sell the property for a subdivision in the midst of this magnificent kind of country, just so you can do a silly thing—eat. And then instead of cows for those same greenies to worry about—as they slosh the chardonnay on their shoes—they can worry about people messing up the area—a few hoof prints beside the creek will then start to look pretty good compared to septic tanks and leach fields. That is exactly where this one is going. So get involved in the great emotion of it, and watch these wily, canny people, who do not like to starve to death, pedal off their land and remove even the Sun family—Kathleen, Bernard, Dennis and the rest—perhaps, after 5 generations—remove themselves from ranching and decide to sell it and spend the winters in Arizona and the summers on that magnificent part of the ranch they kept for themselves. If anybody cannot understand this is what will happen, the drinks are on me.

Thank you.

Mr. MURKOWSKI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I commend my friend from Wyoming for telling how it really is. I thought his graphic pictures portrayed an awful lot of America that, unfortunately, few Americans see. The Senator's reference to those that would like to see something different done to that part of the American west, while explicit in its reference to the comfort around the fire and the chardonnay, I think reflect an unrealistic reference, if you will, to the responsibility that we have in this body to recognize the significance of grazing, as we know it today.

As chairman of the committee of jurisdiction, Energy and Natural Resources, I rise to support the substitute, S. 1459, which has been offered by Senator DOMENICI, the Public Rangelands Management Act.

While the livestock grazing issue is not significant in my State, there is reindeer grazing on Bureau of Land Management lands under regulations specific to Alaska and some cattle grazing on Fish and Wildlife Service lands on Kodiak Island. In the lower 48 States, however, livestock grazing is a part of western society. It is part of the history, and the heritage, of the American West. And it's a part of the social fabric of the West and a cornerstone of the western economy.

Because I understand the importance of livestock grazing to the rural western economy, to the ranching community and to the family structure, I want to lend my support to this important legislation and encourage my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support S. 1459.

Mr. President, as chairman of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, and as one of the three elected representatives of the State of Alaska in Washington, I have a strong interest in our Nation's natural resource and public land management policies. I believe the public lands in my State and in the lower 48 States contain abundant natural resources—timber, coal, oil and gas, minerals, and other renewable assets—that can be used to sustain the economic engine of this great country of ours. Our public lands are also a valuable recreational resource—they are used for hunting, fishing, camping, river running, bird watching, backpacking, skiing, off-road vehicle use, and other recreational uses. The fact is, our public lands are taking a great deal of pressure off our national parks for Americans who want to enjoy an outdoor experience.

And just as Alaskans are willing to allow their resources to be used prudently to better the future for Alaska's children and grandchildren, I believe American are wiling to use America's resources for the benefit of future generations. I do not believe a majority of Americans support locking up our public lands for preservation purposes. As chairman of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, I am obligated to speak out for responsible use of our public lands and natural resources in a way that I believe makes the most productive use of those lands and resources for all Americans.

One of the reasons I support S. 1459 is because of my concern about the Clinton administration's general attitude regarding public land use and, more specifically, about Secretary Babbitt's regulations and polices regarding activities on the public lands to conduct timber harvesting, livestock grazing, mining, and oil and gas exploration and development. There is an alarming trend toward driving traditional public land users—timber harvesters, ranchers, oil and gas drillers, and miners—off the public lands.

At least in the case of the oil and gas and mining industries, good, high-paying, long-lasting jobs and hundreds of millions of dollars in investment capital are being forced overseas because of a hostile attitude toward resource development on public lands. Also lost with those jobs and investment capital are untold millions of dollars in potential tax revenues and mineral receipts to the Federal Government and the States. Thousands of good, high-paying jobs in the timber industry have been lost, and are not likely to be recovered again. That is happening in the southeastern portion of my own State.

For the livestock industry, however, the story is different. Ranchers have been using the public lands for generations to make a living for themselves and their families. We are not talking about high-technology, high-paying jobs. We are talking in some cases about folks who are just able to eke out a living and pay their bills. The job is tough, the hours are long, and the pay is poor, but because many of them are fourth or fifth generation ranchers, they want to keep up the tradition, run their cattle or sheep, and live the simple lifestyle out in the open space of the West.

The ranches are not being forces overseas like the oil and gas and mining industries. They are simply being run out of business altogether—driven off the public lands like the cattle or sheep they herd—by an administration and an Interior Secretary hostile to their way of living. They're being run off the public range and ridiculed as relics of the past. They're criticized for receiving what some claim is a subsidy.

Mr. President, we are not talking about subsidizing and preserving the way of life for ''cute little German farms in Bavaria'' as one of my colleagues recently observed, we're talking about members of western society who are making a substantial contribution to their local and State economies, to the Federal Treasury, and to the feeding of tens of millions of people who consume their products every day.

What Secretary Babbitt set in motion with his Rangeland Reform 1994 regulations is symptomatic of a broader attitude toward public lands use and natural resource development from his Department. Secretary Babbitt's attitude seems to be ''lock up the public lands, keep them preserved for posterity's sake, and do not worry about all the lost jobs and economic benefits—we can get all those people retrained so they can be productive members of society again.''

What is troubling about that kind of attitude, Mr. President, is that it is elitist. It is elitist because it tells Americans that their public lands should be used only for the enjoyment of the preservationists and no one else. It says, ''the heck with the ranchers, the miners, the oil and gas drillers, the timber cutters and the others who want to use the public lands to make a better life for themselves, their families, or their country.'' It also says, ''the heck with the people who want to recreate, and hunt and fish on the public lands.''

In the case of livestock grazing, that approach takes away the lifestyle so many people have freely chosen, despite the hard work and low pay. It takes away a portion of the western culture. it takes away a pillar of the West's economy. It takes away revenues to the Federal Treasury and to the States whose education systems and public services rely so heavily on the public lands.

There is one aspect of the grazing debate that I appreciate more than some of the others because of my experience as a former banker. And that is how difficult it is now for ranchers to secure lending to support their operations or to make improvements. More and more banks are asking tougher and tougher questions before they loan money to ranchers because of the seeming instability of the livestock industry—instability that is brought about by the regulatory malaise caused by Secretary Babbitt's rangeland reform regulations. More and more banks are denying loans because they believe livestock operations cannot be conducted profitably given the current regulatory climate. That is why we need to act now to bring the stability ranchers and their lenders need.

As for the substance of this legislation, Mr. President, S. 1459 starts with the premise that public lands should continue to be used for multiple use purposes. The No. 1 finding on page 3 of the bill says, and I quote: ''multiple use, as set forth in current law, has been and continues to be a guiding principle in the management of public lands and national forests.'' Multiple use is a guiding principle for public lands management now, and the bill says right up front that multiple use will continue to be the guiding principle. It says so throughout the bill. So any claim, Mr. President, that this bill establishes grazing as the dominant use of the public lands is false. That is one of the false claims we will hear over and again about this bill, Mr. President, but such a claim has no basis in fact.

The multiple use foundation of this bill is further exemplified by the explicit declaration that nothing precludes use of and access to Federal land for hunting, fishing, recreation, or other appropriate multiple use activities in accordance with Federal and State law.

Environmental protection of public rangelands is ensured by S. 1459 in several ways. The bill states as its first objective the promotion of ''healthy, sustained rangeland.'' Another objective is to ''maintain and improve the condition of riparian areas which are critical to wildlife habitat and water quality.'' S. 1459 also calls for: the establishment of State or regional standards and guidelines for addressing rangeland condition; consideration of the environmental effects of grazing in accordance with NEPA, the National Environmental Policy Act; approval of cooperative agreements and coordinated resource management practices for conservation purposes or resource enhancement; and penalties for failure to comply with permit terms and conditions or environmental laws and regulations. All of these provisions add up to a serious effort to protect the condition of the rangeland and to improve its condition where such improvement is needed.

A lot criticism has been directed at the public participation aspects of this legislation, Mr. President, and I want to explain what S. 1459 does in that regard. The bill makes absolutely clear that affected interests will be notified of proposed decisions, and does nothing whatsoever to prevent those interests from having dialogue with Federal land managers concerning management decisions on grazing allotments. That is the case now and that has always been the case. The bill also makes clear that those citizens whose interests are adversely affected can appeal decisions of the land managers. Further, the bill gives the interested public the opportunity to participate in Resource Advisory Councils, the Grazing Advisory Councils, and the NEPA process.

What the bill does not do, Mr. President—much to the disappointment of Secretary Babbitt and the other opponents of this legislation—is allow anti-public lands or anti-grazing activists from Boston and elsewhere to micromanage and second-guess every single decision regarding grazing and what happens on each individual grazing allotment for the price of a 32-cent stamp. Appropriate public participation in public lands management decisions is healthy and constructive. We do not have a problem with that, Mr. President. We welcome appropriate public participation.

What we do have a problem with, however, is elevating in statute the legal status of an individual who lives hundreds of miles away who wants to dictate what happens on a grazing allotment out West, and whose form of public participation consists of mailing a protest postcard to the land management agency. We do not need more lawsuits spawned by armchair quarterbacks who have never seen a grazing allotment. Nor do we need to have every single decision of the public lands manager second-guessed by self-proclaimed experts.

Mr. President, there are many other positive aspects of S. 1459 that deserve mentioning. But my colleagues who have labored long and hard trying to put together a grazing reform bill that can enjoy bipartisan support are anxious to speak to the many positive features of the bill.

I want to tell my colleagues about the process we have been through this year on grazing reform, Mr. President, because I believe it is important that they know about the intense interest in this issue, and even more intense interest in passing legislation that will provide stability, certainty, and predictability for the foreseeable future. This is such a contentious issue that we do not need to be revisiting grazing every session of Congress.

Earlier last year, May 25, another grazing bill, S. 852, was introduced by Senators DOMENICI, CRAIG, BROWN, CAMPBELL, HATCH, BENNETT, BURNS, SIMPSON, THOMAS, KYL, PRESSLER, KEMPTHORNE, CONRAD, DORGAN, DOLE, and GRAMM. Senators BAUCUS, NICKLES, and INHOFE subsequently joined as cosponsors.

A companion bill to that measure, H.R. 1713, was introduced in the House. The House Subcommittee on National Parks, Forests, and Public Lands of the House Resources Committee held a hearing in July.

A hearing on the Senate bill was held in June by Senator CRAIG's Subcommittee on Forests and Public Land Management, and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources reported the bill on July 19, 1995.

S. 852 was placed on Senate Calendar but went nowhere as a result of apparent lack of sufficient support.

Following the August recess, a bipartisan effort was mounted to craft a bill that would address the deficiencies of S. 852 was initiated by several Members on our side, Senators DOMENICI, THOMAS, KYL, CRAIG, and BURNS, and included several of our Democrat colleagues, Senators REID, BRYAN, CONRAD, BAUCUS, BINGAMAN, and DORGAN.

After several weeks of staff discussions and Member involvement, a revised bill was drafted that addressed some 16 areas where there seemed to be general bipartisan agreement. Shortly thereafter, the Senate began consideration of the Balanced Budget Act of 1995. Grazing provisions were not included the in Senate version of the Balanced Budget Act, but the House version did contain a handful of provisions, only one of which would have produced revenues—the grazing fee provision. In the end, the House receded to the Senate approach and no provisions on grazing were included in the Balanced Budget Act.

On November 16, 1995, Senators DOMENICI, KYL, CRAIG, THOMAS, and BAUCUS wrote me to request that the Energy Committee consider the new draft proposal, which was reported as S. 1459 on November 30.

In December and January, Mr. President, our side met with Democrat Members and staff several times in an attempt to incorporate changes desired by the Democrat Members in order to address concerns raised by their constituents and support this measure. We went what we believed was the extra mile to address their concerns.

At the end of January, Mr. President, we had only five unresolved issues. We made clear to our colleagues that we could accommodate their concerns on some of these issues. On a few others, we probably could not agree because of fundamental differences in approach. However, we believed that the unresolved issues could be decided on the floor through the amendment process, Mr. President, which would allow our colleagues to offer proposals to address the remaining issues on which we seemed divided.

That brings us to where we are now, Mr. President. At a crossroad. We are at a crossroad with this grazing bill because we have gone about as far as we can without harming what we believe are the legitimate concerns of the livestock industry. We believe we have ample environmental safeguards in the bill, Mr. President, and more than adequate opportunity for public participation.

If our Democrat colleagues whose interests we have tried so hard to address cannot support this bill now, Mr. President, it is not for a lack of effort on our part to accommodate their concerns. It is not because of sincere effort on our part to include them in the process of drafting this legislation. And it is not because we did not seek their input and ideas as to how we could make S. 1459 better legislation.

I would suggest Mr. President, that those who cannot support this legislation—even though we have bent over backwards to accommodate the interests of our western Democrat colleagues—are making their decision not on the merits of the bill but rather on the basis of a desire to make nonuse of the public lands the dominant use.

We're at a crossroad not only with this grazing bill, but also with the administration's public lands and natural resources policies. We can either choose between Secretary Babbitt's Rangeland Reform 1994 regulations, which will hasten the end of livestock grazing on the public lands, or we can choose an approach that makes significant improvements in the way livestock grazing is managed while allowing ranchers to continue to graze cattle and sheep on the public range. The same choice is true for other public lands use issues: We can either ship our jobs, our capital, our mineral receipts, and our tax revenues overseas or we can keep them here and allow responsible use of our public lands for resource development activities and other multiple-use purposes.

The choice for me is clear, Mr. President. On this one, I am going to side with the ranchers over the elitists. I urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. President, I support the Domenici substitute for three specific reasons. First, it is pro-environment. It is profamily, and it is pro-economy. The substitute contains, I think, significant provisions to protect the great landscape of the American West that will lead to more money being spent to improve those rangelands specifically.

Furthermore, I think it keeps the families together, the families of rural America, the families out west, because it will allow them to continue what they have been doing for five and six generations—that is, producing livestock on the public lands for the benefit of all Americans.

Further, the Domenici substitute is pro-economy because it will generate more fees to the Federal Government and provide a stable regulatory climate for livestock production on the public lands, and preserve livestock production as an economic pillar, which it has been on the rural communities of the West.

Now, Mr. President, you might wonder why a Senator from Alaska is speaking on grazing issues. Well, it is not significant in my Western State of Alaska, although we do graze a significant herd of ''Santa Clause's reindeer'' on public land. But it is really part of the history and heritage of the American West, a part of the social fabric of the West, and it is really a cornerstone of the western economy.

So I want to lend my support to this issue and this legislation. I encourage my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support the Domenici substitute because I understand and really appreciate the importance of this issue to the West. I want to assure you that those who have risen to speak on behalf of this amendment do as well, because they are the ones ultimately accountable for their stewardship to their constituents.

I have a strong interest in our Nation's natural resources, public lands, and management policies. I believe the public lands in my State and in the other lower 48, as we refer to them, contain tremendous natural resources—our timber, coal, oil, gas, minerals, and other renewable assets that can be used to sustain the economic engine of what made this country great.

I firmly believe that through science and technology, we can do it right, we can do a better job than we have done. I feel, in many cases, the old rules relative to environmental oversight and various other aspects of regulatory mandates are really out of date. We have had new technology come along. We are operating under the same rules, same regulations, and a very narrow focus, Mr. President, and a very narrow interpretation. As we look at resource development, we are looking at world markets.

We have the experience and expertise in the United States to do a better job, particularly with our renewable resources, and grazing is a renewable resource. We could do a better job in the renewability of our timber. But as we look at what is happening, we are depending on imports, such as imported beef and timber products, coming from countries that do not have the same sensitivity and responsibility in developing and maintaining the renewability of the resources that we do.

So are we not being a little irresponsible to shed that responsibility on other countries and simply look to importation? Well, I think we are. Just as we in Alaska are willing to allow our resources to prudently contribute to the future of those in our State and the grandchildren that are coming along, I believe Americans are willing to use America's resources and resource development to benefit future generations.

So I support Senate bill 1459 because of my concern about the current administration's general attitude regarding public land use. More specifically, it would be the regulations and policies of the Secretary of the Interior regarding activities on public lands to conduct timber harvesting, livestock, grazing, mining, oil and gas exploration, and development as well. I think, Mr. President, as we look a little further, we see an alarming trend toward driving traditional public land users—timber harvesters, ranchers, oil and gas drillers, and miners—off public lands. Where are they going?

We are driving those jobs out of the United States, we are sending our dollars overseas, and we are importing those products. As our President communicates concern over the loss of high-paying jobs and offsets that by more low-paying jobs, the realism is that many of these blue-collar jobs are high paying. But if we do not develop our resources, we are not going to have them.

The Interior Secretary's approach seems to be to drive these good, high-paying, long-lasting jobs—hundreds of millions of dollars of capital investment—overseas, all with no worry, so to speak, because we will make up for those lost jobs somehow. Well, I think that is an attitude problem. As we look at oil imports alone, now we are currently importing over 54 percent of the total crude oil that we consume. We are simply becoming more dependent on the Mideast. We are only perhaps a terrorist act away from another oil crisis.

So, Mr. President, as we come back to the issue at hand, it is just not about grazing; it is about utilization of the public land in a responsible manner.

I think it is difficult for ranchers without this relief. As a former banker, I think I can comment with some degree of accuracy on the circumstances. It is difficult for ranchers to secure lending to support their operations and to make improvements that are needed. And more and more banks are going to be tougher and tougher before they loan money to ranchers because of the seeming instability of this industry and where it is going. That is brought about by the regulatory malaise caused by the current administration's rangeland reform regulations. I have been told by some of my banker friends that they are denying loans because they believe livestock operations cannot be conducted properly given the economic uncertainty in the industry. I think that is why we need to act now to bring stability that the ranchers need and that certainly the lenders require.

That is another reason I support the Domenici amendment. As for the substance of the so-called substitute, the bill starts with the premise that public lands should continue to be used for multiple use.

The No. 1 one finding on page 3 of the bill says: ''Multiple use, as set forth in current law, has been and continues to be a guiding principle in the management of public lands and national forests.'' Multiple use is a guiding principle for public lands management now, and the bill says right up front that multiple use will continue to be the guiding principle. It says that throughout the entire bill.

So any claim, Mr. President, that this bill establishes grazing as a dominant use—that has been used time and time again in this debate—of public lands is simply false, and it is inaccurate. This is one of the many claims that we will probably hear over and over again in this debate. But such claims simply have no basis in fact.

Next, I want to say how astounded I am that the Democratic substitute to be offered on the other side of the aisle says absolutely nothing in title I about protecting use, of and access to, Federal land for the experience of hunting, fishing, recreation, watershed management, or any other appropriate multiple-use activity. The question is, why? I wonder if we are to conclude from our friends on the other side of the aisle that they care only about these activities on national grasslands and not about such activities on the BLM or Forest Service rangelands. I hope that some of my colleagues will address that because I think it is a legitimate criticism.

Next, Mr. President, I want to emphasize again how compatible the Domenici bill will be with the environment. The bill states as its first objective the promotion of healthy, sustained rangeland. Another objective is to ''maintain and improve conditions of repairing areas which are critical to wildlife habitat and water quality.''

The Domenici substitute also calls for the establishment of State or regional standards and guidelines for addressing rangeland conditions; consideration of the environmental effects of grazing in accordance with NEPA, the National Environmental Policy Act; and approval of cooperative agreements and coordinated resource management practices for conservation purposes.

Mr. President, all of these provisions add up to a very, very serious effort to protect the public rangelands and to improve their conditions where such improvements are needed.

So, Mr. President, we are going to hear a lot of criticism in this debate about public participation in the grazing management process. But, in my view, there are far more opportunities for public participation and a broader role for the so-called affected interests in the Domenici substitute than in the substitute which we will see from the other side.

Under the Domenici substitute, for example, for the first time the public will be given the opportunity to comment on reports by the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture summarizing range-monitoring data. This is a positive improvement and one that will not be provided in the substitute from our colleagues on the other side of the aisle.

What the Domenici substitute does not do, Mr. President, is allow out-of-State antipublic lands, antigrazing activists to simply micromanage and second-guess every single decision regarding grazing and what happens on each individual grazing allotment for the price of a 32-cent stamp, which, as you and I know, is possible now.

Appropriate public participation in public land management decisions is healthy. It is constructive. We do not have a problem with that. We welcome appropriate public participation.

Finally, Mr. President, it is our hope that the Domenici substitute ends the bureaucratic nightmare that livestock producers have been living because of widely differing rules and regulations of not one, but two Federal agencies—the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service. The Domenici bill would require coordination of livestock administration between these two agencies. It would require them to issue regulations simultaneously to address grazing on public lands.

Livestock producers need some degree of certainty. They need regulatory stability. We believe, Mr. President, that the Domenici substitute will provide that certainty and that stability.

I believe Senate bill 1459, as proposed to be amended by the Domenici substitute, will allow family ranchers to continue enjoying the lifestyle they have enjoyed for generations. It is hard work. It is low pay and long hours. If you ask any one of the small family livestock operators, he or she will tell you that they would not want to do anything else or anything any differently. Are we going to take that away from them? I hope not.

We need to provide the proper regulatory climate to allow the family ranchers to continue to earn their living on public rangelands. We need to continue to allow the livestock industry to make its vital contribution to the rural economy of the West. We need to provide incentives for the livestock operator to keep caring about the land that he or she lives on. Yes; ranchers are environmentalists, too. They hunt, they fish, and they recreate. They enjoy the outdoors on the lands in their areas just like others. The only difference is they know better how to take care of the land and how to preserve it. They have a vested interest in continuing to care about those rangelands because their rangelands are also their hunting grounds and their fishing streams.

Mr. President, the Domenici substitute is good for the environment. It is good for the family. It is good for the rural western economy. And it is basically good public policy.

I urge my colleagues to support the Domenici substitute, Senate bill 1459.

I ask unanimous consent to be added as a cosponsor of that legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I would suggest that those who cannot support this legislation for whatever reason, even though we have, in my opinion, bent over backward to accommodate the interests of our western colleagues on the other side of the aisle, are making their decisions, unfortunately, not on the merits of the bill but rather on the basis of a desire to make nonuse of the public lands the dominant use. Think about that, Mr. President. We are at a crossroads not only with this grazing bill but also with the administration's public lands and natural resource policy. We can either choose between Secretary Babbitt's rangeland reform, the 1994 regulations, which will hasten the end of livestock grazing on public land, or we can choose an approach that makes significant improvements in the way livestock grazing is managed while allowing ranchers to continue to graze cattle and sheep on public land.

The same choice is true for other public land use issues. We can either ship our jobs, ship our capital, our mineral receipts, and our tax revenues overseas, or we can keep them here and allow responsible use of our public lands for resource development activities and other multiple-use purposes and to benefit, obviously, Americans who are looking for and need those jobs.

The choice is clear on this one. I am going to side with the ranchers over the elitists. I urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. President, that concludes my statement.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period for the transaction of routine morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO PETER A. JENNINGS

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, today I want to take a moment to commemorate the long and distinguished life of Peter A. Jennings, an outstanding American who passed away last November.

Peter Jennings was born June 9, 1911, in the small town of Bridgewater, SD, and passed away on November 3, 1995, in Fort Meade, SD. Throughout his life he was very dedicated to his family, his community, and his work.

As a father and husband, Peter epitomized the term ''family values.'' He spent his life taking care of his family by always putting their needs and concerns first. He is survived by his wife of 56 years, Anita Sessions Jennings, his son Thomas Jennings, and his sisters Bernadette Stoltz and Irene Rotert. As an active member of his community, Peter was constantly working to improve the quality of people's lives. He belonged to the DAV, VFW, American Legion, Catholic Order of Forresters, the Retired Officers Association, and the Knights of Columbus.

Peter served in the U.S. Army for much of his life, including 26 years of service at four VA medical centers in Fort Meade, SD; Kerrville, TX; Indianapolis, IN; and Hines, IL.

During my travels as a U.S. Senator, I am constantly humbled by the people of my State and the basic principles by which they live their lives: a love of family, an obligation to community service, and a strong commitment to an honest day's work. Peter A. Jennings lived by those principles, and we remember him today.

NOMINATION OF LTG MICHAEL RYAN, U.S. AIR FORCE

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, the Air Force Times (March 25, 1996 edition) contains a story entitled ''Senate Delays Ryan Nomination.'' The story states that Lieutenant General Ryan's promotion to a fourth star ''is being delayed in the Senate according to congressional and military sources.'' The story adds that the ''reasons for the delay were unclear as of March 15, but sources said Ryan's involvement in the Buster Glosson affair in 1994 may be tied to the delay.'' With no foundation whatsoever, the story then links me to this action by stating: ''The aftertaste of the Glosson struggle has remained bitter, especially for one of his ardent congressional supporters, Sen. SAM NUNN, D-Ga.''

That is absolutely inaccurate.

In the first place, I strongly support the nomination of Lieutenant General Ryan for his fourth star and have not been involved in any hold. Lieutenant General Ryan was nominated on February 26, 1996 and favorably reported by the Committee on March 12, 1996. I am confident that he will be confirmed by the Senate and I urge the Senate to act immediately to confirm this fine officer.

Second, when I was chairman of the Armed Services Committee in 1994, during Lieutenant General Ryan's previous nomination, I took the lead in ensuring that Lieutenant General Ryan was confirmed. That was at the same time we were considering the issues regarding Lieutenant General Glosson's retirement. Lieutenant General Ryan was nominated on July 12, 1994, approved by the Committee on July 27, 1994, and confirmed on August 25, 1994.

Third, when our committee issued its report on the Glosson matter, I ensured that the following material was placed in the committee report, citing the special panel we had established:

> The Panel Report specifically states: ''We wish to be absolutely clear that in our view Generals Nowak, Ryan, and Myers were truthful in their testimony to the IG investigators and to us.'' The Panel notes that ''the reputation of these men for veracity and integrity is unimpeachable.''
> The Panel Report also observes: ''Generals Nowak, Ryan, and Myers acted with the utmost integrity in reporting what they considered to be inappropriate attempts to influence a promotions board and in asking to be excused from service on that board. Their actions in this regard were proper and helped maintain the integrity of the Air Force promotions system.''
> The committee concurs with these views. The committee notes that its favorable recommendation on the nomination of Lieutenant General Glosson is based upon his overall record of service and does not imply any reservation about the Panel's findings with respect to Lieutenant General Nowak, Lieutenant General Ryan, and Major General Myers.

It is simply wrong to suggest ''the aftertaste of the Glosson struggle has remained bitter'' for me. On the contrary, I have worked hard to ensure that those, like Lieutenant General Ryan, who did their duty in the Glosson matter have not been adversely affected.

REPEAL OF MANDATORY DISCHARGE OF ARMED FORCES MEMBERS WITH HIV

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I am especially gratified that the Senate voted yesterday for fairness and against bigotry by repealing the provision in the recent Department of Defense Authorization Act requiring the mandatory discharge of members of the Armed Forces who are HIV-positive.

Yesterday's Senate action clearly demonstrates that this misguided policy's days on the statute books are numbered. The Senate looked at the facts and listened to the Nation's military and medical leaders, and not a single Senator was willing to defend the mandatory discharge provision.

The reality is that military personnel with HIV are serving their country effectively and should be allowed to continue to serve. They may not be fighting on the frontlines, but they are still dedicating themselves to serving our country.

A few examples prove the point. One of the persons affected is a senior enlisted man in the Navy. He is a gulf war veteran who has served over 17 years. During that time, he has earned numerous decorations, including two Navy Achievement Medals and four Good Conduct Medals. Yet under current law, this sailor will be discharged before receiving the retirement he worked so hard and honorably to earn.

Another affected service member is an Army sergeant. This soldier has served for over 15 years, receiving outstanding evaluations and a chest-full of medals. He fears for the fate of his wife and newborn child if he is dismissed from the service before his retirement.

Another member of the Armed Forces, a Navy woman, has served for 7 years, consistently receiving top evaluations.

It is fundamentally unfair that these and hundreds of other productive service members will all have their careers cut short for no valid reason.

Magic Johnson has not served in the military. But he is living with HIV. He has shown America that people with HIV do not have to sit on the bench. They can participate, and even be stars. In a recent article in the Los Angeles Times, Mr. Johnson appealed to us to give the same opportunity to service members with HIV that his fellow athletes gave him. He wrote:

> Service members with HIV are in the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marines. They are shipbuilders, military police, trainers, recruiters, sonar technicians, communications specialists, engineers, researchers, administrators, and more. They are American men and women who want to work hard and be part of the toughest military in the world. They live to serve—and they shouldn't be a casualty of prejudice. They deserve better. America deserves better.

Magic Johnson is right. The DOD Authorization Act is wrong. As a result of yesterday's overwhelming Senate vote, we are a major step closer to ending this unacceptable discrimination against dedicated members of the Armed Forces. I urge the House of Representatives to accept our repeal of this disgraceful provision.

LABOR COMMITTEE PASSAGE OF OSHA REFORM LEGISLATION

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, last week, the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee completed a long and, unfortunately, contentious markup of S. 1423, the Safety and Health Reform and Reinvention Act that amends the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970.

While I am very aware of the importance of not overburdening businesses with mountains of paperwork and regulation, I am also cognizant, as a cosponsor—along with my old friend Senator Jacob Javits—of the legislation that created OSHA, of the important need to protect the health, safety, and lives of employees.

Much of the debate and discussion that took place during Labor Committee hearings and markups was really over the balance between protections for employees and burdens on employers. During one committee hearing on the topic, a businessman testified in support of a proposal that would prohibit fines on a business if it were to be found in substantial compliance with OSHA regulations. The witness went on say that substantial compliance ''does not mean perfection or even near perfection. It does mean better than average.''

Mr. President, I would not expect perfectly safe conditions or perfect health protections for myself and we probably should not attempt perfection under OSHA rules. We should not, however, settle for better than average safety. I am sure that none of my colleagues would feel comfortable flying on an airline that advertised as having better than average safety. Would any of us feel comfortable using a piece of machinery or operating an electrical device knowing that there was an average chance of being electrocuted or being injured? I do not believe ''better than average'' is good enough for America's workers.

Another concern of mine centers on the ability of workers to request onsite inspections by OSHA. I recently received some interesting material from the Rhode Island Committee on Occupational Safety and Health [RICOSH]. One of these cases is a good example of the value of OSHA inspections.

Without an onsite inspection, problems that occurred at a Narragansett, RI jobsite may well have taken a different turn. During construction, workers noticed that the temporary support structure for a poured concrete floor had become dangerously overloaded. The workers placed a call to OSHA. At first, the owner and his engineer and architect all insisted that the 2 x 4's would support a concrete slab. Instead, they suggested to OSHA that the deflection was the result of moist sea breezes causing the support timers to swell combined with expansion caused when the Sun warmed one side of the timbers. At first glance, these all sound like credible explanations. Upon inspection, Mr. President, it was learned that structural calculations were based on a 2½ inch concrete slab. In reality, the slab was 3 inches thick. Obviously, the inspection was the key to discovering the actual cause of the deflection in the concrete slab. Just imagine the number of injuries and even deaths that may have taken place if because of a phone or fax interview, instead of an inspection, OSHA had determined that the culprit was sunny days and humid nights.

Mr. President, I feel that I also must comment on the commotion during the last markup session. After approving three very good amendments—two Democratic and one Republican—by voice vote on the first day of the markup, the committee was asked to vote again on the amendments at the beginning of the last markup. Unfortunately, all three of the votes were along party lines and two of the previously approved amendments failed. I regret very much that this commotion took place and hope that in the future, cooler heads prevail.

FEDERAL CONSTRUCTION METRICATION: A YEAR END REPORT

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I would like to call to the attention of my colleagues the Metric in Construction 1995 Year End Report by the Construction Metrication Council of the National Institute of Building Sciences located here in Washington, DC.

I found the information outlined in the ''Status of Federal Construction Metrication'' chart to me most interesting. In many portions of the Federal Government, projects have been constructed in metric for 2 years or more and, contrary to the beliefs of many, the sky has not fallen in.

I also recommend the rest of the council's report to my colleagues. As the report says, 93 percent of the world's population uses the metric system. I continue to believe that the United States will remain at a competitive disadvantage with our global trading partners until we join that 93 percent.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Metric in Construction 1995 Year End Report be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

METRIC IN CONSTRUCTION 1995 YEAR END REPORT

Almost all federal construction programs are now converted to the metric system and most agencies are designing and constructing projects in metric units.

So reported over 20 federal agency representatives at the November 1995 meeting of the Construction Metrication Council (see the agency-by-agency status report on pages 3 and 4). Building on years of work by the nation's voluntary codes, standards, trade and professional construction organizations—and with their support and participation—federal construction is providing the catalyst for the long-awaited metrication of the nation's construction industry.

THE NUMBERS

Government is a major player in the construction industry by virtue of its role as provider of highways, bridges, dams, water and sewer systems, parks, prisons, military bases, space centers, laboratories, embassies, courthouses, schools, and numerous other public facilities. Federal appropriations for construction, including grants to state and local governments, total about $50 billion annually. In 1996, over $20 billion in construction will be designed in metric units and up to $10 billion more put out for bid. By the year 2000, metric construction will approach the $50 billion federal total, not including billions more in state and local matching funds.

Annual U.S. construction expenditures are about $500 billion yearly with roughly one-half allocated to commercial, institutional, industrial and civil works and the other half to homebuiding. Thus, within a few years federally funded metric construction will amount to about 20 percent of all nonresidential construction, with state and local metric construction adding substantially to that percentage.

THE IMPACT

American architectural, engineering, and construction firms already use metric measures in their overseas work, and government's buying power rapidly will expose the remainder of nonresidential construction to the metric system. Given this as well as the rapid globalization of the construction industry (just look at the multilingual packaging with metric measurements on the shelves of your local hardware store), nonresidential construction is likely to convert to the metric system within a decade or so. Homebuilders, who are involved in virtually no foreign or governmental work but are nonetheless closely intertwined with the rest of the construction industry, probably will adopt metric measures a few years later.

Of course, the metric transition could take place faster, as it has in other countries, or, given America's ambivalence toward the metric system, slower. But 93 percent of the world's population uses metric measures and it is only a matter of time before the U.S. construction industry, which accounts for 6 million jobs and 8 percent of the gross national product, joins the nation's automobile, health care, and electronics industries (among others) in completely converting to the metric system.

When it does, metrication will bring more than efficiency and better quality control to construction: it will benefit every American by helping our nation compete more effectively in the global marketplace.

THE RESULTS

Hundreds of millions of dollars in federally funded metric projects have been placed under construction in the past three years and the results speak for themselves. As noted in the last Metric in Construction newsletter:

Conversion has proven to be much less difficult than anticipated.

There has been no appreciable increase in design or construction costs.

Architects and engineers like working in metric units.

Tradesmen adapt readily to metric measures on the job site.

Construction and product problems have been minimal.

However, three product-related issues have surfaced to date:

Reinforcing steel (''rebar''). The rebar industry first promoted and then withdrew a metric standard but not before most state highway departments had adopted it in their standard design drawings, at significant time and expense. The rebar industry currently is balloting, through ASTM, a new metric standard and hopes to unify everyone behind it over the next year or so.

Recessed lighting fixtures. Several lighting manufacturers opposed the introduction of modular metric recessed fixtures for use in modular metric suspended ceiling systems. Such fixtures proved to be readily available from other manufacturers, however, and now the opposing manufacturers are supplying them too. All other suspending ceiling components, including T-bars, lay-in tiles and air diffusers, are available from a variety of manufacturers in modular metric sizes.

Concrete masonry block. Block is also a modular material, but modular metric (so-called ''hard metric'') block is slightly smaller than current inch-pound block. The block industry, as represented by the National Concrete Masonry Association, argues that producing and keeping an inventory of two sizes of otherwise identical block is costly and, in many cases, too costly for the smaller producers that constitute the bulk of the block industry. The industry further argues that inch-pound block can be economically cut to fit any dimension, inch-pound or metric, and that the specification of metric block is therefore both unnecessary and economically damaging to block producers.

In response to these concerns, the General Services Administration, in its July 1993 Metric Design Guide, encouraged the allowance of either inch-pound or metric block in metric projects. The Construction Metrication Council endorsed GSA's position in the September-October 1993 Metric in Construction newsletter. Since then, contractors have had difficulty obtaining bids on metric block in a number of instances. The Council therefore strongly encourages designers to allow the use of either inch-pound or metric block or to specify nominal wall thicknesses only, thereby leaving the decision to the contractor, with cost the deciding factor.

Metric in Construction is a bimonthly newsletter published by the Construction Metrication Council to inform the building community about metrication in U.S. construction. The Construction Metrication Council was created by the National Institute of Building Sciences to provide industrywide, public and private sector support for the metrication of federal construction and to promote the adoption and use of the metric system of measurement as a means of increasing the international competitiveness, productivity, and quality of the U.S. construction industry.

The National Institute of Building Sciences is a nonprofit, nongovernmental organization authorized by Congress to serve as an authoritative source on issues of building science and technology.

The Council is an outgrowth of the Construction Subcommittee of the Metrication Operating Committee of the federal Interagency Council on Metric Policy. The Construction Subcommittee was formed in 1988 to further the objectives of the 1975 Metric Conversion Act, as amended by the 1988 Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act. To foster effective private sector participation, the activities of the subcommittee were transferred to the Council in April 1992.

Membership in the Council is open to all public and private organizations and individuals with a substantial interest in and commitment to the Council's purposes. The Council meets bimonthly in Washington, D.C.; publishes the Metric Guide for Federal Construction and this bimonthly newsletter, and coordinates a variety of industry metrication task groups. It is funded primarily by contributions from federal agencies.

THE REPUBLIC OF TUNISIA'S 40TH INDEPENDENCE DAY

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today to acknowledge the 40th anniversary of the independence of the Republic of Tunisia. Since gaining independence from France on March 20, 1956, Tunisians have been dedicated to pursuing a path of progress.

Although this small North African country has limited natural resources, it has shown great initiative by successfully devoting a majority of its assets to promoting its people and developing its economy, stressing education as the key to its future. The private sector has contributed greatly to the economy and, as a result, Tunisians have created a diversified, market-oriented economy. While the United States has assisted the Tunisian economy through focused development programs, Tunisia has been able to advance beyond our assistance and is quickly approaching an era of economic partnership with us.

The friendship between the United States and Tunisia dates back almost 200 years when our two countries signed a friendship treaty. Since that time, we have had an outstanding relationship marked by respect, cooperation, and a mutual commitment to freedom and democracy. We have a strong military alliance, routinely engaging in regular joint exercises and program exchanges. Strictly defensive in nature, the Tunisian military force is among the best trained and most professional in the Arab world. Like the United States, Tunisia is dedicated to the peaceful resolution of conflicts and has participated in many peacekeeping operations around the world.

Despite the volatile situation in North Africa, Tunisia has played a key role in preserving stability and peace. Further, they have been at the forefront of the struggle against terrorism, intolerance, and blind violence. They have appealed to the world community through various organizations, including the United Nations, to adopt strict measures in order to combat terrorism and extremism.

In addition, Tunisia has played a significant role and is a key supporter in securing peace in the Middle East. They were the first Arab State to host a multilateral meeting of the peace process and to welcome an official Israeli delegation in Tunis, thus promoting a dialog between Arabs and Israelis. Since that initial meeting, they have hosted two other events and are scheduled to host others. As a result of their efforts, in January of this year, Tunisia and Israel agreed to establish formal diplomatic relations.

Earlier this week, Tunis served as the host city for the Joint Military Commission meeting, further demonstrating their dedication to peace in the Middle East and reinforcing the cooperation between the United States and Tunisia.

Mr. President, I would like to congratulate our friends in Tunisia on successfully achieving this milestone and commend them for their peacekeeping efforts.

FORTY YEARS OF TUNISIAN INDEPENDENCE

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, legend has it that more than 200 years ago, the bey of Tunis, as token of esteem and friendship, sent one of his finest stallions to U.S. President George Washington. Unfortunately, customs officials in the nascent republic denied entry to the horse, which spent its remainder of its days in the port of Baltimore. After this somewhat rocky start, I am happy to report that U.S.-Tunisian relations have improved considerably. Today, in fact, marks the 40th anniversary of the establishment of the Republic of Tunisia as an independent country, a time during which Tunisia has enjoyed a strong and healthy relationship with the United States. Today I wish to congratulate Tunisia for its many accomplishments, and to highlight some of the instances of cooperation between our two countries.

In recent years, Tunisia has taken positive steps towards the establishment of a more democratic system of government. Although the ruling party continues to dominate the political scene, Tunisia has made an effort to broaden political debate, including recent passage of an electoral law that reserved 19 seats of the National Assembly for members of opposition political parties. Because the government has placed a high priority on funding social programs, today Tunisia has literacy and life expectancy rates that are among the highest in the region. I hope that the United States will continue to work with Tunisia on efforts such as these to open up the political process and to improve the living standards of the population. This should help Tunisia to overcome some of the difficulties it continues to encounter in balancing secular and Muslim interests in the country.

Tunisia also has a very impressive economic record. In the last 10 years, the government has turned to economic programs designed to privatize state-owned companies and to reform the banking and financial sectors. As a result, Tunisia's economy has grown at an average rate of 4.5 percent over the last 3 years, and its economic success has had a beneficial impact on Tunisia's international standing. Tunisia joined GATT in 1990, and in 1995, the government signed a free-trade accord with the European Union.

In contrast to some of its Arab neighbors, Tunisia has achieved particular success in the promotion of women's rights. Under the direction of President Ben Ali, the number of Tunisian women and girls receiving an education—up through the university level—has risen dramatically. Women are protected under the law from forced early marriages and domestic violence. I applaud these steps and urge the Tunisian government to continue its efforts to expand personal freedoms for all of its citizens.

Tunisia and the United States have also explored ways to cooperate on international security issues. In fact, the 14th Annual Joint Military Commission of Tunisia and the United States met in Tunis over the last 2 days. Tunisia also has played an active role in U.N. peacekeeping missions, contributing military contingents to operations in Cambodia, Somalia, the Western Sahara, and Rwanda.

Finally, Tunisia has been a welcome force for moderation I the Middle East peace process. The government has taken an active role within the Arab community in promoting better ties with Israel. In April of this year, Israel and Tunisia will establish official interests sections to facilitate political consultations, travel, and trade. Tunisia has condemned the recent suicide bomb attacks in Israel and has called for greater international efforts to fight terrorism.

As I alluded to earlier, the relationship between the United States and Tunisia goes back nearly 200 years, to the very beginnings of American independence. Tunisia was among the first to recognize the United States as a sovereign country. As Tunisia celebrates the 40th anniversary of its own independence, I ask my colleagues to join me in offering a sincere expression of congratulations.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, today Tunisia celebrates its 40th anniversary of independence from French colonialism. I want to join in congratulating Tunisia on its social and economic accomplishments of the last 40 years, and to thank the Tunisians for their historic friendship with America.

Two years ago I visited Tunisia with Senator SIMON and Senator REID. Initially, our visit was planned to meet with President Ben Ali, who at that time was President of the Organization of African Unity. However, we quickly learned that Tunisia itself is a story of many other achievements as well.

As a small, secular Muslim country, nestled between two major, unstable powers, Libya and Algeria, Tunisia is playing an important and positive role in international politics. Because of its geography, it is a member of both the Middle East and Africa, and I am impressed how it has taken an active position in both regions.

In 1982, after Yasir Arafat was driven from Beirut, Tunisia opened its doors and hosted the Palestinian Liberation Organization for 14 years. I believe that Tunisia's secular and developed society had a moderating influence on Arafat, which was a critical factor in launching the Middle East peace process. Likewise, it is no surprise to me that Tunisia was the first Arab country to host a U.N. multilateral meeting in connection with the Middle East peace process, or that it will be among the first Arab countries to establish formal diplomatic relations with Israel next month.

Tunisia has also tried to help mediate some of the conflicts between its neighbors in sub-Saharan Africa. President Ben Ali served as President of the Organization of African Unity at a time when the OAU was being re-vitalized as a regional organization, and he helped begin preparations for a conflict resolution center at the OAU. Just this week, Tunisia hosted a regional conference on the Great Lakes which addressed the heated conflicts in Rwanda and Burundi, and the effects of refugees in Central Africa.

Tunisia has also, by necessity, been at the forefront of the international struggle against terrorism. Out of geographic necessity, it has worked diligently and consistently in international efforts against violence and extremism. Indeed, despite the terrorist threats it faces from Algeria and Libya on all its borders, Tunisia still attended the recent international conference on terrorism in Sharm-el-Shekh, and re-affirmed its commitment to moderation.

I believe Tunisia needs to be supported for these important steps. It is an invaluable partner as we form alliances for the 21st century. But Tunisia should also be congratulated for its economic and social achievements. In many areas—particularly family planning, opportunities for women, education, and economic reform—Tunisia can provide a model of development in the Mediterranean.

When I was in Tunisia, I was greatly impressed by the government's commitment to family planning and the development of opportunities for women. Tunisia is one of the world's success stories in family planning: birth control is widely available for those who desire it, and government clinics are focussed on promoting women's health. This was a very far-sighted and constructive decision by the government. As a result, the country has been able to harness the potential of most of its population, and, not coincidentally, has made significant economic gains.

Because of these effective programs, Tunisia was graduated from United States assistance, and is now entering an era of partnership with the United States. Indeed, in many ways, Tunisia is a fine example of a foreign aid success.

Tunisia has great potential for leadership in the 21st century. But it is a country facing severe security risks. As we appreciate its accomplishments of the last 40 years, we must commit to do what we can to ensure Tunisia will continue to develop politically and economically, and enable it to continue to support United States goals of stability and democracy in the Middle East and Africa.

NATIONAL DOMESTIC VIOLENCE HOTLINE

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, last week I came to the floor to announce the realization of another component of our initiative to prevent violence against women—the National Domestic Violence Hotline. At that time, I indicated that I would come to the floor every day for 2 weeks, whenever my colleagues would be kind enough to give me about 30 seconds of time, to read off the 800 number to the hotline.

The toll free number, 1–800–799–SAFE, will provide immediate crisis assistance, counseling, and local shelter referrals to women across the country, 24 hours a day. There is also a TDD number for the hearing impaired, 1–800–787–3224.

Mr. President, roughly 1 million women are victims of domestic violence each year and battering may be the single most common cause of injury to women—more common than auto accidents, muggings, or rapes by a stranger. According to the FBI, one out of every two women in America will be beaten at least once in the course of an intimate relationship. The FBI also speculates that battering is the most underreported crime in the country. It is estimated that the new hotline will receive close to 10,000 calls a day.

I hope that the new National Domestic Violence Hotline will help women and families find the support, assistance, and services they need to get out of homes where there is violence and abuse.

Mr. President, once again, the toll free number is 1–800–799–SAFE, and 1–800–787–3224, for the hearing impaired.

THE BAD DEBT BOXSCORE

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, the Federal Government is running on borrowed time, not to mention borrowed money—more than $5 trillion of it. As of the close of business yesterday, March 19, 1996, the Federal debt stood at $5,058,839,098,883.55. On a per capita basis, every man, woman, and child in America owes $19,128.56 as his or her share of the Federal debt.

More than two centuries ago, the Continental Congress adopted the Declaration of Independence. It's time for Congress to adopt a Declaration of Economic Responsibilities along with an amendment requiring the President and Congress to produce a balanced Federal budget—now.

TRIBUTE TO THE CORONADO HIGH SCHOOL THUNDERBIRD BAND OF EL PASO, TX

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, it is with much pride that I rise today to recognize the 160 members of the Coronado High School Thunderbird Band who will be representing North America in the Russian Republic's Freedom Day Parade this May. These gifted student musicians from El Paso will travel to Moscow this spring to celebrate the rise of democracy there and to share their extraordinary musical talents with the people of Russia.

It was last September when Richard Lambrecht, the students' band conductor, received the phone call from the Russian Ministry of Culture, inviting the Coronado students to perform in the Freedom Day celebration held annually in Red Square. Since that moment, the students, their parents, and their avid supporters have been working tirelessly, day and night, to raise the necessary funds for this once-in-a-lifetime trip and to maintain their exceptional grade point averages.

This recognition is a fitting testament to the dedication, character, and talent of these Texas teenagers. But it is not the first honor the Thunderbird Band has received. In fact, the band has received the Sudler Flag and the Sudler Shield for both concert and marching performance by the John Phillip Sousa Foundation. These awards are given to only two bands annually, representing the best in the United States for that year. Coronado is one of only three bands to have ever received both designations.

In addition to honoring the Thunderbird Band for this achievement, I would also like to welcome both Alexander Demchenko, the Russian Minister of Culture, and General Victor Afanasiev, the Russian General Conductor, to the United States. These two officials will be visiting the Coronado students on March 27 in El Paso. The Republic of Russia has generously offered to finance a portion of the band's traveling costs, and I would like to thank them for their country's cooperative efforts in making this trip a reality for the Coronado students.

Mr. President, I am confident that the Coronado High School Thunderbird Band will represent the people of Texas, the United States, and North America with both honor and distinction. I congratulate them on this remarkable accomplishment, and I wish them the best of luck in their future endeavors.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. JOHNSTON:

S. 1627. A bill to designate the visitor center at Jean Lafitte National Historical Park in New Orleans, Louisiana as the ''Laura C. Hudson Visitor Center''; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

THE LAURA C. HUDSON VISITOR CENTER DESIGNATION ACT OF 1996

• Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I am pleased today to introduce a measure to designate the visitor center at 419 Rue Decatur in New Orleans, LA, as the ''Laura C. Hudson Visitor Center.''

For almost 24 years I have been privileged to serve in the U.S. Senate. For some 20 of those years I have been blessed with the able assistance of Laura Hudson, who completed her Senate service last August, as my legislative director and indispensable right hand.

In so many ways, Laura personifies the best tradition of Senate service—beginning in one capacity and growing into so many more. The young history postgraduate, who took a legislative-correspondent position in my office in 1975, quickly grew beyond that and has been my invaluable counsel on a variety of legislative challenges over the years.

There are parks and preservation projects, in Louisiana and beyond which exist solely because of the personal commitment and legislative skill of Laura Hudson, whole regions of the globe, such as Micronesia, routinely neglected by many in the Congress, receive a respect and recognition in Washington due heavily to Laura's devotion. That component closeup program, which brings hundreds of students and teachers each year from the former trust territories of Micronesia, is but one example of Laura's passion.

Moreover, I am convinced that the relationship between our country and many of the developing and emerging economies, such as China, Vietnam, and Indonesia, profit in immeasurable ways from the understanding and leadership of staff persons such as Laura.

This is a woman, Mr. President, who has forsaken many opportunities in the private sector because of a deep belief in the merits of public service, and a belief in the simple tenet that she could make a difference. More often than we acknowledge, it is the Laura Hudsons who made a qualitative difference in our daily work product. In honor of her unparalleled contributions, I am introducing this legislation today.

I know that Laura will continue to contribute, as only she can, to public policy. But I will miss her in a way immediate and direct, as will so many of her longtime colleagues in the Senate. But I know they join me in expressing appreciation and best wishes as Laura enters an exciting new chapter of her life.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the bill appear in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1627

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SEC. 2. LEGAL REFERENCES.

Any reference in any law, regulation, paper, record, map, or any other document of the United States to the visitor center referred to in subsection (a) shall be deemed to be a reference to the ''Laura C. Hudson Visitor Center''.●

MUSIC LICENSING LEGISLATION

● Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I introduce legislation that would lift a burden off of small businesses who currently pay fees to music licensing organizations under a complicated and cumbersome copyright law.

Introduction of this legislation reflects what I consider a fair position. This bill acknowledges the different sides, and aims to reach a compromise position. This legislation comes after hours and hours of negotiations with different interests over the course of several months.

Under current law, music licensing organizations are permitted to collect fees from those who play a radio or television in their commercial establishment. The music may be background music, or it may be music played at half-time during a football game. The music license fee applies to shoe stores, to diners, to shopping centers or any other business establishment.

The artists who create this music certainly deserve compensation for their intellectual property. In fact, those artists are compensated for their labors. When a song is played over a radio or TV, the broadcaster pays for the rights to play that song. When we are at home, and we turn on the radio, we are not expected to pay a second fee. Yet, if a radio is played at a commercial establishment for no commercial gain, a second fee is charged for the music. This double-dipping smacks of unfairness.

In addition, there is tremendous inequity in the way licensing companies assess these fees. The businesses are unable to see a list of the songs that are available for licensing. The businesses are unable, because of the market inequity, to bargain for a fair price. Instead, we have an anticompetitive environment where two or three licensing companies control almost all of the music available. Small businesses have two options: pay the preordained fee or turn off the radio or TV.

The approach I have taken to address this problem aims at leveling this playing field. The legislation I am introducing would require the licensing companies to make a list of their repertory available so businesses can know what products they are paying for.

The legislation would exempt small businesses from paying the fee for music played over radio and TV if a fee has already been paid. Where music has already been paid for by the broadcaster, the copyright owner has in fact been compensated.

In addition, the legislation would establish arbitration to resolve disputes over fees. As it stands, if a retail store wishes to contest the fees paid to one of the licensing companies, they have to go to a court in New York. Moreover, full blown litigation in any case is often prohibitively expensive.

The legislation would require the music licensing companies to offer per period programming licenses—in other words allow radio stations to purchase licenses for shorter time periods instead of 24 hours a day if they are only playing music in short spots between religious, news, or talk shows. I hope my colleagues will join me in leveling the playing field and will support this bill.

I ask unanimous consent that letters in support of this bill from the National Federation of Independent Business, the National Religious Broadcasters, the National Restaurant Association, and the National Retail Federation be included in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF INDEPENDENT BUSINESS,
Washington, DC, March 20, 1996.

Hon. HANK BROWN,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR BROWN: On behalf of the more than 600,000 members of the National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB), I would like to express our support for your compromise music licensing legislation. NFIB believes this proposal will resolve many of the serious problems that exist between the small business community and the music licensing societies—ASCAP, BMI and SESAC.

In a recent NFIB survey, more than 92 percent of small-business owners called for music licensing reform. The time has come for fairness in music licensing.

While your bill is different from S. 1137, it addresses many of the issues that are of great importance to small business owners. It allows small businesses to play incidental music on radios and TV's without violating federal copyright law. In addition, the measure gives small business owners the right to arbitrate fee disputes in local forums rather than forced to file a lawsuit in New York City. Many small businesses across the country cannot afford the added expense of traveling to New York City to dispute fees levied by BMI or ASCAP. The legislation does protect the nine state music licensing laws that have been enacted and the other 15 states with legislation pending.

NFIB commends your efforts to fashion a workable compromise and we look forward to working with you to enact music licensing reform legislation.

Sincerely,

DONALD A. DANNER,
Vice President,
Federal Governmental Relations.

NATIONAL RELIGIOUS BROADCASTERS,
Manassas, VA, March 19, 1996.

Hon. HANK BROWN,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR BROWN: On behalf of National Religious Broadcasters, I want to commend you and Senators Thurmond, Faircloth, Helms and Thomas for introducing legislation to address the inequities and abuses in the current system for licensing copyrighted music. Our organization, which represents over 800 religious broadcast stations and program providers, is grateful for your leadership and is prepared to support you in any way possible to pass this bill in the 104th Congress.

Legislation is badly needed to rectify the injustices forced upon Christian radio by the entertainment licensing monopolies, ASCAP and BMI. For years, our members who use limited amounts of music in their programming have tried to negotiate a fair license that would allow them to pay simply for the music they play and not be charged as if they played copyrighted works all day long.

In the face of monopoly powers granted to ASCAP and BMI by the federal government, and in the absence of clear Congressional policy to guide competition in the licensing arena, we find we have no leverage with which to negotiate a fair ''per program license''. Your bill goes a long way toward solving that problem.

We also understand your bill will require the music licensing monopolies to disclose in a practical and user-friendly way the songs for which they have the rights to collect royalties, and it will not allow ASCAP, BMI or any other licensing organization to bring infringement actions against music users for songs that are not listed in their publicly available data bases. These provisions, together with an effective per program license, are critical to establishing music licensing rules that bear some resemblance to a free market system.

In addition to our strong support for your bill, I also urge you and your cosponsors to block any copyright-related legislation in the Senate that does not incorporate music licensing reforms. It would be unconscionable for Congress to enact any measures that enhance the economic clout of the music licensing monopolies without first correcting their abusive business practices. In the view of religious broadcasters, the current system essentially forces Christian radio stations to indirectly subsidize immoral, violent and sexually explicit entertainers—entertainers who reap millions in royalties from the unfair blanket licenses small religious broadcasters are forced to buy. Please see the attached resolution passed by the NRB Board of Directors in February in this regard.

Thank you again for taking a stand for fairness in music licensing. In doing so, you're also making a stand for the positive, life-changing power of religious radio. The millions of Americans whose lives are enriched every day by religious broadcasts are watching this issue very carefully.

Sincerely,

E. BRANDT GUSTAVSON, L.L.D., President.

NATIONAL RETAIL FEDERATION,
Washington, DC, March 19, 1996.

Hon. HANK BROWN,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR BROWN: On behalf of the National Retail Federation and the 1.4 million U.S. retail establishments, I am writing to support your compromise legislation to amend federal copyright law to provide the nation's retailers with protection against the arbitrary pricing, discriminatory enforcement and abusive collection practices of music licensing organizations.

Retailers of all sizes, particularly smaller establishments in your state, are confronted daily by costly and unreasonable demands from music licensing organizations. These organizations have monopoly power to set rates and therefore, retailers are frequently asked to pay outrageous and unfair licensing fees to play music which is only incidental to the purpose of their business.

Under your legislation, business establishments that use radio or TV music with less than 5,000 square feet of public space would be exempt from licensing fees as long as the music was purely background or incidental to the purpose of the business, and customers were not charged a fee to listen to the music. While not all retailers are covered under this compromise, we believe it represents significant progress. Your bill also gives businesses the right to arbitrate fee disputes in local forums rather than being forced to file lawsuits in New York and requires music licensors to provide consumers with full information about the music they are purchasing.

Thank you for your leadership on behalf of America's Main Street. Your efforts and those of your staff to provide relief are greatly appreciated. We look forward to working with you to enact this legislation.

Sincerely,

JOHN J. MOTLEY III,
Senior Vice President, Government and Public Affairs.

NATIONAL RESTAURANT ASSOCIATION,
Washington, DC, March 19, 1996.

Hon. HANK BROWN,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR BROWN: On behalf of the National Restaurant Association and the 739,000 foodservice establishments nationwide, we would like to express our support for your compromise music licensing legislation. We believe this proposal will resolve many of the serious problems that exist between the business community and the music licensing societies—ASCAP, BMI, and SESAC.

As you know, your legislation represents major concessions by the business community and is different from S. 1137, the Fairness in Musical Licensing Act of 1995. More importantly, however, you measure addresses many of the issues that are of great significance to restaurateurs throughout the country. These include:

Allowing for a logical expansion of current law to allow small businesses to play incidental music on radios and TVs without violating federal copyright law.

Giving businesses the right to arbitrate fee disputes in local forums rather than being forced to file a lawsuit in New York City.

Requiring music licensors to provide consumers with full information on the product—the music—they are buying.

All of this is done while protecting the nine state laws that have been enacted and the other 15 states with legislation pending. As you know, S. 1619, introduced by Senator Hatch would preempt all state music licensing laws. It also, in our opinion, fails to address the number of the problems that exist with the societies including arbitration and access to repertoire.

Senator, as you know, restaurateurs from around the country have faced harassment, frivolous lawsuits, and arbitrary and onerous licensing fees. On behalf of the entire industry, we want to thank you and your staff for the countless hours you have devoted to reach a reasonable compromise. We fully support your efforts and will work towards enactment of your bill.

Sincerely,

ELAINE GRAHAM,
Senior Director, Government Affairs.

KATY MCGREGOR,
Legislative Representative.●

By Mr. STEVENS (for himself, Mr. DOLE, Mr. ABRAHAM, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. BROWN, Mr. COATS, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. COVERDELL, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. D'AMATO, Mr. FAIRCLOTH, Mr. GRAMS, Mr. GREGG, Mr. HATCH, Mr. HELMS, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. INOUYE, Mr. KEMPTHORNE, Mr. KYL, Mr. NICKLES, Mr. SIMPSON, Mr. SMITH, and Mr. THOMPSON):

S. 1629. A bill to protect the rights of the States and the people from abuse by the Federal Government; to strengthen the partnership and the intergovernmental relationship between State and Federal governments; to restrain Federal agencies from exceeding their authority; to enforce the 10th amendment to the Constitution; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

THE 10TH AMENDMENT ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 1996

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, today, on behalf of 23 of my colleagues, as well as Governors, attorneys general, State legislators, and mayors across the Nation, I rise to introduce the 10th Amendment Enforcement Act of 1996.

The 10th amendment was a promise to the States and to the American people that the Federal Government would be limited, and that the people of the States could, for the most part, govern themselves as they saw fit.

Unfortunately, in the last half century, that promise has been broken. The American people have asked us to start honoring that promise again: to return power to State and local governments which are close to and more sensitive to the needs of the people.

The 104th Congress and in particular, the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act, started to shift power out of Washington by returning it to our States and to the American people. Today we continue that process.

The 10th Amendment Enforcement Act of 1996 will return power to the States and to the people by placing safeguards in the legislative process, by restricting the power of Federal agencies and by instructing the Federal courts to enforce the 10th amendment.

The act enforces the 10th amendment in five ways:

First, the act includes a specific congressional finding that the 10th amendment means what it says: The Federal Government has no powers not delegated by the Constitution, and the States may exercise all powers not withheld by the Constitution;

Second, the act states that Federal laws may not interfere with State or local powers unless Congress declares its intent to do so and Congress cites its specific constitutional authority;

Third, the act gives Members of the House and Senate the ability to raise a point of order challenging a bill that lacks such a declaration or that cites insufficient constitutional authority. Such a point of order would require a three-fifths majority to be defeated;

Fourth, the act requires that Federal agency rules and regulations not interfere with State or local powers without constitutional authority cited by Congress. Agencies must allow States notice and an opportunity to be heard in the rulemaking process;

Fifth, the act directs courts to strictly construe Federal laws and regulations that interfere with State powers, with a presumption in favor of State authority and against Federal preemption.

Before the bill was even introduced, I received letters of support from many Governors and attorneys general—men and women from across the Nation and from both parties who support our efforts to return power to the States and to the people.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill and letters from Governors Allen, Bush, Engler, Leavitt, Merrill, Racicot, Cayetano, and Thompson, and from Attorneys General Bronster, Condon, and Norton be included in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, as the Supreme Court has stated, just as the separation and independence of the coordinate branches of the Federal Government serves to prevent the accumulation of excessive power in any one branch, a healthy balance of power between the States and the Federal Government will reduce the risk of tyranny and abuse from either front.

The 10th Amendment Enforcement Act of 1996 will prevent overstepping by all three branches of the Federal Government, and will focus attention on what State and local officials have been advocating for so long: the need to return power to the States and to the people.

S. 1629

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This act may be referred to as the ''Tenth Amendment Enforcement Act of 1996.''

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(a) in most areas of governmental concern, State governments possess both the Constitutional authority and the competence to discern the needs and the desires of the People and to govern accordingly;

(b) Federal laws and agency regulations, which have interfered with State powers in areas of State jurisdiction, should be restricted to powers delegated to the Federal Government by the Constitution;

(c) the framers of the Constitution intended to bestow upon the Federal Government only limited authority over the States and the People;

(d) under the Tenth Amendment to the Constitution, the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people;

(e) the courts, which have in general construed the Tenth Amendment not to restrain the Federal Government's power to act in areas of State jurisdiction, should be directed to strictly construe Federal laws and regulations which interfere with State powers with a presumption in favor of State authority and against Federal preemption.

SEC. 3. CONGRESSIONAL DECLARATION.

(a) On or after January 1, 1997, any statute enacted by Congress shall include a declaration—

(1) that authority to govern in the area addressed by the statute is delegated to Congress by the Constitution, including a citation to the specific Constitutional authority relied upon;

(2) that Congress specifically finds that it has a greater degree of competence than the State to govern in the area addressed by the statute; and

(3) if the statute interferes with State powers or preempts any State or local government law, regulation or ordinance, that Congress specifically intends to interfere with State powers or preempt State or local government law, regulation, or ordinance, and that such preemption is necessary.

(b) Congress must make specific factual findings in support of the declarations described in this section.

SEC. 4. POINT OF ORDER.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) INFORMATION REQUIRED.—It shall not be in order in either the Senate or House of Representatives to consider any bill, joint resolution, or amendment that does not include a declaration of Congressional intent as required under section 3.

(2) SUPERMAJORITY REQUIRED.—The requirements of this subsection may be waived or suspended in the Senate or House of Representatives only by the affirmative vote of three-fifths of the Members of that House duly chosen and sworn. An affirmative vote of three-fifths of the Members of the Senate or House of Representatives duly chosen and sworn shall be required to sustain an appeal of the ruling of the chair on a point of order raised under this subsection.

(b) RULE MAKING.—This section is enacted—

(1) as an exercise of the rule-making power of the Senate and House of Representatives, and as such, it is deemed a part of the rules of the Senate and House of Representatives, but is applicable only with respect to the matters described in sections 3 and 4 and supersedes other rules of the Senate or House of Representatives only to the extent that such sections are inconsistent with such rules; and

(2) with full recognition of the Constitutional right of the Senate or House of Representatives to change such rules at any time, in the same manner as in the case of any rule of the Senate or House of Representatives.

SEC. 5. EXECUTIVE PREEMPTION OF STATE LAW.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 559 the following new section:

''SEC. 560. PREEMPTION OF STATE LAW.

''(a) No executive department or agency or independent agency shall construe any statutory authorization to issue regulations as authorizing preemption of State law or local ordinance by rule-making or other agency action unless—

''(1) the statute expressly authorizes issuance of preemptive regulations; and

''(2) the executive department, agency or independent agency concludes that the exercise of State power directly conflicts with the exercise of Federal power under the Federal statute, such that the State statutes and the Federal rule promulgated under the Federal statute cannot be reconciled or consistently stand together.

''(b) Any regulatory preemption of State law shall be narrowly tailored to achieve the objectives of the statute pursuant to which the regulations are promulgated and shall explicitly describe the scope of preemption.

''(c) When an executive branch department or agency or independent agency proposes to act through rule-making or other agency action to preempt State law, the department or agency shall provide all affected States notice and an opportunity for comment by duly elected or appointed State and local government officials or their designated representatives in the proceedings.

''(1) The notice of proposed rule-making must be forwarded to the Governor, the Attorney General and the presiding officer of each chamber of the Legislature of each State setting forth the extent and purpose of the preemption. In the table of contents of each Federal Register, there shall be a separate list of preemptive regulations contained within that Register.

''(d) Unless a final executive department or agency or independent agency rule or regulation contains an explicit provision declaring the Federal government's intent to preempt State or local government powers and an explicit description of the extent and purpose of that preemption, the rule or regulation shall not be construed to preempt any State or local government law, ordinance or regulation.

''(e) Each executive department or agency or independent agency shall publish in the Federal Register a plan for periodic review of the rules and regulations issued by the department or agency that preempt, in whole or in part, State or local government powers. This plan may be amended by the department or agency at any time by publishing a revision in the Federal Register.

''(1) The purpose of this review shall be to determine whether and to what extent such rules are to continue without change, consistent with the stated objectives of the applicable statutes, or are to be altered or repealed to minimize the effect of the rules on State or local government powers.''.

(b) Any Federal rule or regulation promulgated after January 1, 1997, that is promulgated in a manner inconsistent with this section shall not be binding on any State or local government, and shall not preempt any State or local government law, ordinance, or regulation.

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding after the item for section 559 the following:

''§ 560. Preemption of State Law.''.

SEC. 6. CONSTRUCTION.

(a) No statute, or rule promulgated under such statute, enacted after the date of enactment of this Act, shall be construed by courts or other adjudicative entities to preempt, in whole or in part, any State or local government law, ordinance or regulation unless the statute, or rule promulgated under such statute, contains an explicit declaration of intent to preempt, or unless there is a direct conflict between such statute and a State or local government law, ordinance, or regulation, such that the two cannot be reconciled or consistently stand together.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any ambiguities in this Act, or in any other law of the United States, shall be construed in favor of preserving the authority of the States and the People.

(c) If any provision of this Act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the Act and the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

STATE OF UTAH,
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR,
Salt Lake City, March 18, 1996.

Hon. TED STEVENS,
Chairman, Government Affairs Committee,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Thank you for your recent correspondence sharing with me your proposal to strengthen the 10th Amendment by requiring the federal government to restrict its legislative and regulatory activities to those powers delegated to it under the Constitution.

As you know, I have spent a great deal of time over the past few years working on 10th Amendment issues, and I am very supportive of your proposed legislation. As I have studied the history of the 10th Amendment, it has become clear to me that we must act overtly to strengthen this important precept of the Constitution, or it will continue to erode away.

Let me provide some background on why I believe this is so important. The founders of our country attempted to carefully balance power between the competing interests of the states and the national government. They worried that the national government might gain too much power, so they gave states tools, or rules, that if followed would maintain the healthly tension necessary to protect self-governance by the people and prevent any level of government from overstepping its bounds.

Among those rules or tools given to states were these:

The 10th Amendment, which reserved any power not specifically delegated to the national government to the states and the people. Clearly, the founders intended the national government to stay within the bounds of duties enumerated in the Constitution.

The election of U.S. senators by state legislatures. Having senators directly accountable to state legislatures would keep the national government in check. If the national government centralized authority or passed bills disliked by the states, legislatures could call their senators in for an accounting. It would not be likely for the Congress to usurp state authority if senators owed their political lives to state legislatures. The power was carefully balanced and the tension was healthy.

The ability of state legislatures to initiate constitutional amendments. This also would keep the national government in check because if it got out of line the states could take action to rein it in. It is clear that the founders intended state leaders to have the ability to initiate constitutional amendments.

The sense that state leaders would rise in indignation and band together to oppose congressional centralization of authority and usurpation of power. In Federalist 46, James Madison predicted that ''ambitious encroachments of the federal government on the authority of the state governments . . . would be signals of general alarm. Every government would espouse the common cause . . . plans of resistance would be concerted.'' States would react as though in danger from a ''foreign yoke,'' he suggested.

Those were some of the tools the founders put in place to safeguard the roles of both levels of government and to prevent either from becoming too dominant.

It would likely be a matter of some bitterness and disappointment to the founders if they were to return today to see what happened to the finely-crafted balance, the healthy tension that they built into the Constitution. As they see a national government that dictates to states on nearly every issue and that is involved in every aspect of citizens' lives, they might wonder what happened to those tools and rules they established to maintain balance.

The sad fact is that each one of those tools has either been eroded away, given away, or rendered impossible to use. Thus, today there does not exist any restraint to prevent the national government from taking advantage of the states. To their credit, leaders of the Republican Congress have gone out of their way to involve governors in important decisions. But there is nothing permanent in that relationship. With a change in leadership, state leaders could easily be relegated to their past status as lobbyists and special interest groups. Over the past several decades, they have had to approach Washington hat in hand, hoping and wishing that Congress will listen to them. There has been no balance of power, no full partnership in a federal-state system. States must accept whatever the Congress gives them. States have no tools, no rules, ensuring them an equal voice.

Let's look at what happened to those tools and rules the founders so carefully provided to ensure balance.

The 10th Amendment has been eroded to the point that in the minds of most Washington insiders it barely exists. The preponderance of congressional action and federal court decisions over the past 60 years have rendered the 10th Amendment nearly meaningless. It would barely be recognizable by the founders. States did not defend or guard it properly and it no longer protects states.

States gave away the power to have their U.S. senators directly accountable to state legislatures. There was good reason for this, as graft and corruption sometimes occurred in the appointment of senators by legislatures. States ratified the 17th Amendment making senators popularly elected, and citizens should not be asked to give up the right to elect their senators. But while it does not make sense to try to restore that tool, it should be replaced with something else more workable.

The ability of states to initiate constitutional amendments has never been used and is essentially unworkable. Clearly, the founders intended for state leaders to be able to initiate amendments as a check on federal power, but it has never happened and likely never will. The Congress sits as a constitutional convention every day it is in session, and can propose constitutional amendments any time it desires. But many citizens have an enormous fear of state leaders coming together to do the same thing, even though any amendment proposed would require ratification by three-fourths of states. Thus, this tool provided by the founders has become impractical and does not protect states from federal encroachment.

The fourth tool was the founders' belief that state leaders would jealously guard their role in the system and rise up in opposition to federal intrusions. That has not happened, especially as state governments have become dependent on federal dollars and have been willing to give up freedom for money. States have proven themselves to be politically anemic. Instead of mobilizing against federal encroachments, state leaders have spent their time lobbying for money and hoping for flexibility.

Thus, it is no wonder that states have little true clout as budget cuts are made and as the pie is being divided in Washington D.C. There is no healthy tension. States have no tools or rules to protect themselves. What is passing for federalism in Washington today is not a true sharing of power, but a subcontracting of federal programs to states. The federal government is merely delegating, not devolving true authority.

Because the tools protecting states have been rendered ineffective, it is important that Congress replace them with new versions that accomplish what the Founders intended. That is why I am so supportive of your Tenth Amendment Enforcement Act. It would help prevent all three branches of the federal government from overstepping their constitutional authority and would help restore the careful balance put in place by the Founders.

I thank you for your efforts to return power to the states and to the people. Please count me among the supporters of this legislation.

Sincerely,

MICHAEL O. LEAVITT,
Governor, State of Utah.

COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA,
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR,
March 12, 1996.

Hon. TED STEVENS,
Member, U.S. Senate, Chairman, Committee on Governmental Affairs, Washington, DC.

DEAR TED: Thank your for your letter regarding the Tenth Amendment Enforcement Act of 1996.

Two centuries ago, the challenge to individual liberty came from an arrogant, overbearing monarchy across the sea. Today, that challenge comes all too often from our own federal government, which has ignored virtually every constitutional limit fashioned by the framers to confine its reach and thus to guard the freedoms of the people.

In our day, the threat to self-determination posed by the centralization of power in the nation's capital has been dramatically demonstrated. Under my administration, Virginia has challenged the constitutionality of federal mandates in court, and I have testified before the Congress in support of restoring powers to the States and the people.

The legislation you are proposing will help the States and the people regain prerogatives usurped by an overbearing federal government. I wholeheartedly support your efforts and would be pleased to work with you to highlight the impact of federal intrusion in Virginia.

With kind personal regards, I remain,

Sincerely,

GEORGE ALLEN.

STATE OF MICHIGAN,
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR,
Lansing, MI, March 19, 1996.

Hon. TED STEVENS,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR STEVENS: I am writing in support of the Tenth Amendment Enforcement Act of 1996, which I understand you intend to introduce this week. Congressional action of this type is necessary to restore vigor to this often-neglected provision of our constitution and I wholeheartedly support your effort to do so.

Congress has over the years run roughshod over state concerns and prerogatives and has generally lost sight of the fact that ours is a federal system of government. In that system, the federal government has only those powers specifically delegated to it and enumerated in the constitution, with the balance remaining with the states or the people. Too often in our recent history the federal government has ignored the meaning of the Tenth Amendment in a mad rush to impose a one-size-fits-all approach in areas of traditional state and local concern. This approach stifles innovation and takes the policy debate further from the people by centralizing decision-making in Washington, D.C.

A recent example of federal intrusion into a matter best left to the states is the Motor Voter law, which imposes an unfunded mandate on the states to offer voter registration services at state social services offices. Michigan must comply with this requirement even though nearly 90 percent of its eligible population is already registered to vote. In fact, Michigan demonstrated the states' superior ability to craft innovative solutions in areas such as this when it initiated the motor voter concept some 21 years ago by offering voter registration services at Secretary of State branch offices. The imposition of a federal ''solution'' in this area ignores the fact that states are better positioned to address the needs of their citizens and can do so without prodding from the federal government.

The Tenth Amendment Enforcement Act of 1996 will help restore the balance to our federal system that the framers of the constitution intended. It will do so by requiring congress to identify specific constitutional authority for the exercise of federal power. This will have the salutary effect of reminding the congress that it can legislate only pursuant to an enumerated power in the constitution. Requiring congress to state its intention to preempt existing state or federal law or interfere with state power should assist in limiting the intrusion the federal Motor Voter law exemplifies.

I recently offered amendments to the National Governors' Association's policy on state-federal relations that the governors adopted at our 1996 winter meeting. That policy calls upon Congress to ''limit the scope of its legislative activity to those areas that are enumerated and delegated to the federal government by the constitution.'' The Tenth Amendment Enforcement Act of 1996 will help reinvigorate this fundamental constitutional principle and for that reason enjoys my full support.

Sincerely,

JOHN ENGLER,
Governor.

OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR,
STATE OF MONTANA,
Helena, MT, March 6, 1996.

Hon. TED STEVENS,
Chairman, U.S. Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN STEVENS: I am writing in support of your proposed legislation entitled the Tenth Amendment Enforcement Act of 1996. I applaud your efforts to protect states from federal legislation that, while perhaps unintentionally, has had a strangling effect on the states' ability to act effectively on behalf of their citizens.

The failure to respect states' rights takes a variety of forms, from unfunded mandates to complex requirements that prohibit states from adopting innovative programs to solve problems that may be unique to the state or region. I am sure it is difficult to determine which functions the federal government should properly manage and which should be left to state or local governments. I think most would agree, however, with the intent of the Tenth Amendment—that a better balance must be struck between the federal government and each of the states.

The revitalization of government is essential in these times of declining trust and diminishing respect of its cities. The Tenth Amendment Enforcement Act of 1996 would make government more responsive to our citizens and help restore the public's faith in the policy process.

I hope your proposal is received well in Congress. I know it would be received well in the states.

Sincerely,

MARC RACICOT,
Governor.

STATE OF WISCONSIN,
OFFICE OF FEDERAL/STATE RELATIONS,
Washington, DC, March 5, 1996.

Hon. TED STEVENS,
Chairman, Rules & Administration Committee, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN STEVENS: I am writing you in support of legislation that you intend to introduce in your committee regarding the Tenth Amendment. Your vision in regard to this delegation of powers should be commended. Our founding fathers would applaud your courageous efforts.

As you know, the Tenth Amendment restricts the federal government's legislative and regulatory activities to those powers delegated to the federal government under the U.S. Constitution.

Since I have held elective office I have always been a staunch supporter of States Rights' and a firm believer that decisions are best made at the local level. Your bill identifies the problems associated with the lack of enforcement of the Tenth Amendment at present and aims to amend some of these inconsistencies.

Under the Tenth Amendment, federal laws may not interfere with state or local powers unless Congress declares its intent to do so, and Congress cites its specific constitutional authority. Allowing Members of Congress to challenge future legislation that attempts to supersede the Tenth Amendment in my opinion would be beneficial.

As Governor of the State of Wisconsin, I have always been a firm believer that legislation is a far better course of action than litigation. Your bill would do away with needless regulation, infringement of states' abilities to provide quality services to its residents', and encourage local decision making opportunities.

The Tenth Amendment Enforcement Act of 1996 would prevent confusion between the three branches of government and would keep the pressure on Washington to address the concerns Governors have been advocating for years; the need to return power to the states and to the people.

Again, I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for your support on this important legislative matter. Please do not hesitate to contact me in the future.

Sincerely,

TOMMY G. THOMPSON,
Governor.

STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE,
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR,
Concord, NH, February 26, 1996.

Hon. TED STEVENS,
U.S. Senate, Chairman, Committee on Governmental Affairs, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR STEVENS: Thank you for your letter outlining your introduction of the Tenth Amendment Enforcement Act of 1996. I am pleased to offer my strong endorsement of this piece of legislation.

The individual states have seen a continual degradation of their power and sovereignty during the past 60 years. Beginning with the creation of the welfare state through President Roosevelt's New Deal in the 1930's, the federal government has inappropriately usurped power traditionally left to the states. Issues such as education, crime, commerce and the environment have been coopted at the federal level. The result is an erosion of local control and the creation of a system of twisted rules and regulations. This overregulation has stifled State initiatives and innovations. The time has come to say enough is enough.

In the State of New Hampshire, many examples exist of federal overreaching. The most telling of these is our continuing attempts at reforming welfare. Our ambitious program would end welfare as we know it, putting people into the workforce. It is based upon the simple notion that those who are able to work for a living should do so. Instead of collecting a welfare check, individuals would receive unemployment benefits and job training. The result would be a motivated workforce, properly trained and prepared to sustain themselves instead of accepting government largesse. Unfortunately, the federal government has gone out of its way to hinder our efforts. New Hampshire is not alone in this fight. Each state has a similar story to tell.

Liberty is defined by American Heritage as the ''condition of being free of restriction or control.'' It is clear that this definition does not relate to our current set of circumstances. The individual states are the engines of democracy, pushing new and exciting concepts which enrich the country as a whole. The states have been thwarted in their efforts to accomplish this. The time has come to reassert the authority of the Tenth Amendment and to return power back to the states and to the individual where it belongs. I believe that the Tenth Amendment Enforcement Act of 1996 will do this and strongly support its passage.

Very truly yours,

STEPHEN MERRILL,
Governor.

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA,
OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL,
Columbia, SC, March 14, 1996.

Hon. TED STEVENS,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR STEVENS: Please accept this letter as a pledge of support for the Tenth Amendment Enforcement Act of 1996, which you are introducing in the Senate. This is clearly one of the most important pieces of legislation to come before Congress this year.

As attorney general of South Carolina, I see first-hand the trouble that arises every time the federal government oversteps its boundaries and intrudes on states' rights. In fact, South Carolina can claim one of the most egregious examples of the federal government meddling in states' affairs with disastrous results.

Several years ago, when I was a solicitor in Charleston, S.C., a local hospital approached me with a plea: Help us do something about crack babies. In increasing numbers, pregnant women were abusing crack cocaine and giving birth to addicted newborns, who cry and shake uncontrollably, refuse to take food and, too often, ultimately die in intensive care.

Working with the hospital, I developed a program to aggressively confront pregnant women with the consequences of their drug use. Over five years, we presented all pregnant women who tested positive for cocaine with a choice: seek drug treatment or face arrest and jail time.

The program was undeniably successful—until the federal government intervened. Without offering any reasonable alternative solutions for saving these crack babies, federal officials came to Charleston and yowled about discrimination and privacy rights. When we refused to back down, they resorted to blackmail. They continued with the program.

So, now, once again, these crack babies cry unconsolably in Charleston—thanks to the federal government's intrusion where is has no business.

There are myriad other examples of ways the federal government ignores the 10th amendment—with effects that would be laughable if they didn't do so much harm. A sampling:

The Hunley. The federal government claims it owns the H.L. Hunley because it won the Civil War. However, the first submarine to sink another vessel lies on soil that belonged to the state of South Carolina even before the United States came into existence. Although common and maritime law, as well as state and federal statutes, point to South Carolina's ownership of the sunken submarine, the federal government's insistence on interfering in South Carolina affairs will cost all of the nation's taxpayers. Worse, its meddling in this matter has caused this war treasure to sit at the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean, rusting away, until the issue can be resolved with the federal government.

The Citadel. Traditionally, education has been a province of the states. And polls show that the majority of South Carolinians—both male and female—want the option of single-gender education offered by The Citadel. But the federal government thinks it knows what's best for South Carolinians and is trying to destroy an outstanding educational environment that South Carolinians overwhelmingly support.

Tobacco regulation. The Food and Drug Administration is trampling on states' turf with its new proposals for regulating cigarettes and chewing tobacco. Perhaps its silliest demand is that all advertising label cigarettes as ''a nicotine-delivery device.'' The fact is, Congress has not given the FDA power to regulate tobacco except in limited instances. Everything else is up to the states—at least, it's supposed to be. We know the laws in South Carolina, and we can enforce them without Washington's ''help.''

Garnishment of wages. The federal government is threatening to sue South Carolina for not complying with a federal law that authorizes the garnishment of wages of people who get behind on student loans. The problem is, the law contains no express provision applying its terms to state government. In fact, its language attempts to override state laws altogether. It provides no clear direction to state governments, but now we're faced with the possibility of defending South Carolina in a suit.

Motor Voter. South Carolina is one of seven states to challenge the ''Motor Voter'' law that allows people to register to vote when they obtain a driver's license. The issue is not easy and accessible registration; we already have that in place. The issues are the rights of sovereign states and unfunded federal mandates. The federal government demanded that South Carolina spend a million dollars to expand its voter registration program—without giving the state a dime. Then, when we began to implement the program, the Justice Department demanded that the state contact all the people who theoretically could have registered while we were in litigation. And it ordered a monthly report on our progress. This micro-management of state business by the federal government should be an outrage to all U.S. citizens.

In closing, the legislation you are proposing promises a meaningful solution to the federal government's continued disregard of the 10th Amendment. Count me in as an enthusiastic supporter of the bill, and let me know of anything I can do to promote its passage.

With kindest personal regards,

CHARLES MOLONY CONDON,
Attorney General.

STATE OF HAWAII,
DEPARTMENT OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL,
Honolulu, HI, March 4, 1996.

HON. TED STEVENS,
U.S. Senator, Chairman, Committee on Governmental Affairs, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR STEVENS: As the Attorney General for the State of Hawaii, I am writing to express my strong support for the Tenth Amendment Enforcement Act of 1996 (''TAEA'').

There have been far too many instances in which federal laws impede, interfere with, or nullify state legislative or administrative actions to the detriment of the interests of the people of Hawaii. This has occurred in large part because the federal courts have given much congressional legislation very broad preemptive scope, in many cases far beyond what it appears Congress itself intended. These preemption rulings have prevented the states from enforcing and implementing needed state policies in areas of traditional state concern, while at the same time failing to serve any significant federal interests.

In my fourteen month tenure as Attorney General of Hawaii, examples of important state policies which were frustrated by preemption rulings made by the federal courts include the striking down of Hawaii's employment disability discrimination laws as applied to airline pilots, see Aloha Islandair v. Tseu, Civ. No. 94–00937 (D. Haw. 1995), appeal filed, C.A. No. 95–16656 (9th Cir.), the overturning of state labor department discretion to bar preexisting condition limitations in state-wide employee health care plans, Foodland Super Market v. Hamada, Civ. No. 95–00537 (D. Haw. 1996), appeal filed (9th Cir.), and the nullification of a state law merely asking the State's two major newspapers, granted the privilege of doing business under a joint operating agreement with antitrust immunity, to turn over their tax returns to the state Attorney General, for subsequent disclosure to the United States Justice Department, in order to assess the economic consequences of, and the newspapers' continued need for, the antitrust immunity, see Hawaii Newspaper Agency v. Bronster, Civ. No. 95–00635 (D. Haw. 1996), appeal filed, C.A. No. 96–15142 (9th Cir.).

Enactment of the TAEA would be a significant step in reversing this disturbing trend, and would help restore state direction over areas of predominant, if not exclusive, state concern. Under the TAEA (Section 6), preemption would only occur when Congress has explicitly stated that a given area is preempted. This would curtail the potentially unlimited sweep of the ''implied preemption'' doctrine, and ideally result in a more narrowly construed ''express preemption.''

Although certain provisions of the TAEA may pose procedural difficulties, or raise some questions of interpretation, I support the overall effect of, and goals behind, the TAEA, and specifically endorse Section 6, which would do much to minimize unwarranted preemption of state actions. I would, however, broaden the language of Section 6(a) to clarify that federal law shall not preempt ''State or local government law, ordinance, regulation, or action,'' unless the statute explicitly declares an intent to preempt. This should ensure that all types of state action, including, for example, state discretionary administrative actions not commanded by any rule or statute, are not preempted without express congressional statement of intent to do so.

Thank you for your support of these critical state interests.

Very truly yours.

MARGERY S. BRONSTER,
Attorney General.

STATE OF COLORADO, DEPARTMENT OF LAW, OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL,
Denver, CO, March 15, 1996.

Re Tenth Amendment Enforcement Act

HON. TED STEVENS,
U.S. Senate, Hart Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR STEVENS: I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed Tenth Amendment Enforcement Act of 1996. The proposal is an important part of the continuing effort to return to the States matters which properly belong within their control.

Every state has a vast number of examples of federal laws and regulatory actions which have interfered with state powers and objectives. I will mention just a few examples from Colorado.

The federal government has been especially intrusive into state affairs in the area of the environment. The country faces many environmental problems, from our quality problems to hazardous waste cleanups. The states are diligently working to solve these problems, while taking into account local needs and concerns. Federal interference with state efforts often results in less protection to the environment and less experimentation by the states.

For example, in 1994, Colorado passed legislation which was intended to encourage businesses to perform voluntary audits of their environmental compliance and to promptly correct any violations found. In exchange for these voluntary efforts, state regulators will not impose penalties for the violations. This program, which will be of great benefit to the environment, is severely hampered by the federal Environmental Protection Agency's refusal to give the same assurances, that is, to refrain from prosecuting companies that voluntarily report and correct violations.

Another example of EPA hindering state efforts at experimentation concerns Colorado's attempts to put in place a unique water quality testing program. Colorado was one of the first states to attempt to employ a different biomonitoring test. Rather than encouraging these efforts, EPA continuously rejected Colorado's regulation implementing the program until the state rule was drafted to be word-for-word like a comparable federal regulation.

Another example in the area of the environment concerns air quality. Our state has been developing strategies to deal with air quality issues for years. But our problems and solutions are unique since Colorado is a high elevation state. A federal ''one size fits all'' approach does not work here. The Environmental Protection Agency's answer—a centralized emissions testing program—has created large implementation costs and reduced state flexibility in addressing pollution problems. Even though Colorado drivers will expend hundreds of millions of dollars in testing costs over the next few years, State officials have no practical alternatives if the program does not work or if better solutions are discovered.

Another example of federal intrusion into matters of state concern arose recently in Colorado with regard to the Medicaid program. As you know, Congress' 1993 change to the Hyde Amendment made federal funds available for abortions terminating pregnancies resulting from rape and incest, but did not require that States pay for any abortions. However, an official at the federal Health Care Financing Administration wrote a letter concluding that states must pay for the disputed abortions. Based solely upon this letter, and without any change in federal statutes or regulations, several federal appellate courts have required States to pay for these procedures, notwithstanding state laws to the contrary.

Colorado state officials are in an impossible dilemma because our state constitution forbids the use of public funds to pay for these procedures. To avoid violating the state constitution but still be consistent with federal mandates, state officials must either (1) withdraw from the Medicaid program and forfeit hundreds of millions of dollars in federal funds, thereby denying thousands of low income Colorado residents access to needed medical care or (2) face contempt citations from federal judges. This problem could have been avoided if federal officials clearly understood their own responsibility to protect state prerogatives.

The federal ''motor voter'' law presents a different type of intrusion. This law doesn't treat States just like the private sector, it actually imposes special burdens simply because they are States. As the Supreme Court recognized in Oregon v. Mitchell, 400 U.S. 112

(1970), it is peculiarly the right of States to establish the qualifications of voters in state elections. In the absence of a constitutional violation such as an outright denial of the right to vote, the States should have control over voter registration. This sort of unfunded mandate is simply not justified, particularly since even though this law unquestionably interferes with the States' internal affairs, it has not appreciably increased turnout at the polls.

The Tenth Amendment Enforcement Act helps turn the tide in favor of State prerogatives. Particularly noteworthy is the proposal's focus upon agency rulemaking. This is important in two respects. First, many of the most intrusive instances of federal preemption come not by virtue of congressionally-enacted legislation, but through extensive regulations promulgated by administrative agencies and expanding upon the congressional authorization.

Second, statutes seeking to limit subsequent congressional enactments are of limited efficacy, since each subsequent Congress is not bound by the acts of its predecessors. However, focusing upon the regulatory process does not present this problem. My only suggestion would be to include a review or sunset provision requiring every agency to ensure that all of its current rules comply with this new requirement by some date certain, or risk having them invalidated. This would ensure that agencies review the numerous existing federal regulations currently impinging upon Tenth Amendment values—which is, after all, what led to this proposal.

I appreciate your willingness to carry this proposal forward, and encourage you to continue your efforts to restore a proper balance in our federal system.

Sincerely,

GALE A. NORTON,
Colorado Attorney General.

By Mr. WELLSTONE (for himself and Mr. WYDEN):

S. 1630. A bill to prevent discrimination against victims of abuse in all lines of insurance; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

THE VICTIMS OF ABUSE INSURANCE PROTECTION ACT

• Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I am very pleased to be joined by Senator RON WYDEN today in introducing the Victims of Abuse Insurance Protection Act, legislation that will outlaw discrimination by insurance companies against the victims of domestic violence in all lines of insurance.

With this legislation, we are trying to correct an abhorrent practice by many insurance companies—the denial of coverage to battered women. It is plain, old fashioned discrimination. It is profoundly unjust and wrong. And, it is the worst of blaming the victim. Denying women access to the insurance they require to foster their mobility out of an abusive situation must be stopped.

There are many stories of women who have been physically abused and have sought proper medical care only to be turned away by insurance companies who said they were too high risk to insure.

In Minnesota, three insurance companies denied an entire women's shelter insurance because, ''as a battered women's shelter, we were high risk.'' The Women's Shelter in Rochester, MN, was told that it was considered uninsurable because its employees are almost all battered women.

Another shelter in rural Minnesota purchased a car so that women and children in danger who were trying to leave an abusive situation could use this anonymous vehicle and thus the abuser could not track their automobile to find them. The shelter could not find a company to provide them with automobile insurance once the companies knew of the risks surrounding battered women.

A woman in Iowa named Sandra was denied life insurance after the company found out that she had been beaten up twice. In one incident, she had been so badly beaten by an ex-boyfriend that her cheekbones were splintered, and one of her eyes had to be put back in its socket. Her mother, Mary, was the one who originally applied for the life insurance policy, explaining

I didn't ask for a lot of coverage. I just wanted to apply for thousand dollar coverage, just enough that if something happened, God forbid, that we could at least bury her.

Mary was angry about the denial, so she wrote to State officials and the Iowa Insurance Commissioners Office tried to intervene on their behalf. In four separate letters, the insurance company officials stated they denied the coverage because of a history of assaults. In one letter they defended their decision by citing numerous documents which showed that people involved in domestic violence incidents are at a higher risk of death and injury than others, and, therefore, not a good risk.

There are so many stories about victims of domestic abuse being denied fire insurance, homeowners insurance, life insurance, and health insurance—denied because they were victims of a crime. Domestic violence is the leading cause of injury to women, more common than auto accidents, muggings, and rapes by a stranger combined. It is the No. 1 reason that women go to emergency rooms.

This bill goes a long way toward treating domestic violence as the crime that it is—not a voluntary risky behavior that can be easily changed and not as a preexisting condition. Insurance company policies that deny coverage to victims only serve to perpetuate the myth that victims are responsible for their abuse.

In order to address the practice of insurers using domestic violence as a basis for determining whom to cover and how much to charge with respect to health, life, disability, homeowners and auto insurance, this legislation prohibits insurance companies from discriminating against victims in any of the following ways: Denying or terminating insurance; limiting coverage or denying claims; charging higher premiums; or terminating health coverage for victims of abuse in situations where coverage was originally issued in the abuser's name, and acts of the abuser would cause the victim to lose coverage.

This legislation also keeps victims' information confidential by prohibiting insurers from improperly using, disclosing, or transferring abuse-related information for any purpose unrelated to the direct provision of health care services.

Mr. President, insurance companies should not be allowed to discriminate against anyone for being a victim of domestic violence. We may never know the full extent of the problem, but it is grossly unfair practice and should be prohibited.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1630

SEC. 3. DISCRIMINATORY ACTS PROHIBITED.

(a) IN GENERAL.—No insurer or health carrier may, directly or indirectly, engage in any of the following acts or practices on the basis that the applicant or insured, or any person employed by the applicant or insured or with whom the applicant or insured is known to have a relationship or association, is, has been, or may be the subject of abuse:

(2) Restricting, excluding, or limiting insurance or health benefit plan coverage for losses as a result of abuse or denying a claim incurred by an insured as a result of abuse, except as otherwise permitted or required by State laws relating to life insurance beneficiaries.

(3) Adding a premium differential to any insurance policy or health benefit plan.

(4) Terminating health coverage for a subject of abuse because coverage was originally issued in the name of the abuser and the abuser has divorced, separated from, or lost custody of the subject of abuse or the abuser's coverage has terminated voluntarily or involuntarily and the subject of abuse does not qualify for extension of coverage under part 6 of subtitle B of title I or the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1161 et seq.) or 4980B of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. Nothing in this paragraph prohibits the insurer from requiring the subject of abuse to pay the full premium for the subject's coverage under the health plan. The insurer may terminate group coverage after the continuation coverage required by this paragraph has been in force for 18 months if it offers conversion to an equivalent individual plan. The continuation of health coverage required by this paragraph shall be satisfied by any extension of coverage under part 6 of subtitle B of title I or the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1161 et seq.) or 4980B of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 provided to a subject of abuse and is not intended to be in addition to any extension of coverage provided under part 6 of subtitle B of title I or the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1161 et seq.) or 4980B of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

(b) USE OF INFORMATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—No insurer may use, disclose, or transfer information relating to an applicant's or insured's abuse status or abuse-related medical condition or the applicant's or insured's status as a family member, employer or associate, person in a relationship with a subject of abuse for any purpose unrelated to the direct provision of health care services unless such use, disclosure, or transfer is required by an order of an entity with authority to regulate insurance or an order of a court of competent jurisdiction or by abuse reporting laws. Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed as limiting or precluding a subject of abuse from obtaining the subject's own medical records from an insurer.

(2) AUTHORITY OF SUBJECT OF ABUSE.—A subject of abuse, at the absolute discretion of the subject of abuse, may provide evidence of abuse to an insurer for the limited purpose of facilitating treatment of an abuse-related condition or demonstrating that a condition is abuse-related. Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed as authorizing an insurer or health carrier to disregard such provided evidence.

SEC. 4. REASONS FOR ADVERSE ACTIONS.

An insurer that takes any adverse action relating to any plan or policy of a subject of abuse, shall advise the subject of abuse applicant or insured of the specific reasons for the action in writing. Reference to general underwriting practices or guidelines does not constitute a specific reason.

SEC. 5. LIFE INSURANCE.

Nothing in this Act shall be construed to prohibit a life insurer from declining to issue a life insurance policy if the applicant or prospective owner of the policy is or would be designated as a beneficiary of the policy, and if—

(1) the applicant or prospective owner of the policy lacks an insurable interest in the insured; or

(2) the applicant or prospective owner of the policy is known, on the basis of police or court records, to have committed an act of abuse.

SEC. 6. SUBROGATION WITHOUT CONSENT PROHIBITED.

Except where the subject of abuse has already recovered damages, subrogation of claims resulting from abuse is prohibited with the informed consent of the subject of abuse.

SEC. 7. ENFORCEMENT.

(a) FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION.—The Federal Trade Commission shall have the power to examine and investigate any insurer to determine whether such insurer has been or is engaged in any act or practice prohibited by this Act. If the Federal Trade Commission determines an insurer has been or is engaged in any act or practice prohibited by this Act, the Commission may take action against such insurer by the issuance of a cease and desist order as if the insurer was in violation of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act. Such cease and desist order may include any individual relief warranted under the circumstances, including temporary, preliminary, and permanent injunctive and compensatory relief.

(b) PRIVATE CAUSE OF ACTION.—An applicant or insured claiming to be adversely affected by an act or practice of an insurer in violation of this Act may maintain an action against the insurer in a Federal or State court of original jurisdiction. Upon proof of such conduct by a preponderance of the evidence, the court may award appropriate relief, including temporary, preliminary, and permanent injunctive relief and compensatory and punitive damages, as well as the costs of suit and reasonable fees for the aggrieved individual's attorneys and expert witnesses. With respect to compensatory damages, the aggrieved individual may elect, at any time prior to the rendering of final judgment, to recover in lieu of actual damages, an award of statutory damages in the amount of $5,000 for each violation.●

By Mr. PELL:

S. 1631. A bill to authorize the Secretary of Transportation to issue a certificate of documentation with appropriate endorsement for employment in the coastwise trade for the vessel Extreme, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

COASTWISE TRADING PRIVILEGES LEGISLATION

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I am introducing a bill today to direct that the vessel Extreme, official No. 1022278, be accorded coastwise trading privileges and be issued a coastwise endorsement under 46 U.S.C. 12106 through 12108.

The Extreme is 70.9 feet in length, 18 feet in breadth, has a depth of 10.8 feet, and is self-propelled.

The purpose of the legislation I am introducing is to allow the Extreme to engage in coastwise trade and fisheries of the United States. When the owners purchased the boat, they were unaware of the coastwise trade and fisheries restrictions of the Jones Act. They assumed that there would be no restrictions on engaging the vessel in such limited operation. Although the vessel was constructed in North Carolina, it was built for a foreign customer; thus it did not meet the coastwise license endorsement in the United States. Such documentation is mandatory to enable the owner to use the vessel for its intended purpose.

The owners of the Extreme are therefore seeking a waiver of the existing law because they wish to engage the vessel in limited commercial use. Their desired intentions for the vessel's use will not adversely affect the coastwise trade in U.S. waters. If they are granted this waiver, it is their intention to comply fully with U.S. documentation and safety requirements.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill and my statement be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1631

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. CERTIFICATE OF DOCUMENTATION.

Notwithstanding section 27 of the Merchant Marine Act, 1920 (46 U.S.C. App. 883), section 8 of the Act of June 19, 1886 (24 Stat. 81, chapter 421; 46 U.S.C. App. 289), and sections 12106 through 12108 of title 46, United States Code, the Secretary of Transportation may issue a certificate of documentation with appropriate endorsement for employment in the coastwise trade for the vessel EXTREME, United States official number 1022278.

TITLE I. MANAGEMENT OF GRAZING ON FEDERAL LAND

Subtitle A—General Provisions

SEC. 101. FINDINGS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(2) through the cooperative and concerted efforts of the Federal rangeland livestock industry, Federal and State land management agencies, and the general public, the Federal rangelands are in the best condition they have been in during this century, and their conditions continues to improve;

(3) as a further consequence of those efforts, populations of wildlife are increasing and stabilizing across vast areas of the West;

(4) grazing preferences must continue to be adequately safeguarded in order to promote the economic stability of the western livestock industry;

(5) it is in the public interest to charge a fee for livestock grazing permits and leases on Federal land that is based on a formula that—

(A) reflects a fair return to the Federal Government and the true costs to the permittee or lessee; and

(B) promotes continuing cooperative stewardship efforts;

(6) opportunities exist for improving efficiency in the administration of the range programs on Federal land by—

(A) reducing planning and analysis costs and their associated paperwork, procedural, and clerical burdens; and

(B) refocusing efforts to the direct management of the resources themselves;

(7) in order to provide meaningful review and oversight of the management of the public rangelands and the grazing allotment on those rangelands, refinement of the reporting of costs of various components of the land management program is needed;

(8) greater local input into the management of the public rangelands is in the best interests of the United States;

(12) it shall not be the policy of the United States to increase or reduce total livestock numbers on Federal land except as is necessary to provide for proper management of resources, based on local conditions, and as provided by existing law related to the management of Federal land and this title.

(b) REPEAL OF EARLIER FINDING.—Section 2(a) of the Public Rangelands Improvement Act of 1978 (43 U.S.C. 1901(a)) is amended—

(3) a grazing program on National Grasslands can be responsibly carried out while protecting and preserving recreational, environmental, and other multiple uses of the National Grasslands.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this title is to provide for improved management and more efficient administration of grazing activities on National Grasslands while preserving and protecting multiple uses of such lands, including but not limited to preserving hunting, fishing, and recreational activities, and protecting wildlife habitat in accordance with applicable laws.

SEC. 204. REMOVAL OF NATIONAL GRASSLANDS FROM NATIONAL FOREST SYSTEM.

Section 11(a) of the Forest Rangeland Renewable Resource Planning Act of 1974 (16 U.S.C. 1609(a)) is amended by striking the phrase ''the national grasslands and land utilization projects administered under title III of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act (50 Stat. 525, 7 U.S.C. 1010–1012),''.

SEC. 205. MANAGEMENT OF NATIONAL GRASSLANDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, acting through the Chief of the Forest Service, shall manage the National Grasslands as a separate entity in accordance with this title and the provisions and multiple use purposes of title III of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act (7 U.S.C. 1010–1012).

(f) HUNTING, FISHING, AND RECREATIONAL ACTIVITIES.—Nothing in this title shall be construed as limiting or precluding hunting or fishing activities on National Grasslands in accordance with applicable Federal and State laws, nor shall appropriate recreational activities be limited or precluded.

(g) VALID EXISTING RIGHTS.—

(2) INTERIM USE AND OCCUPANCY.—

(A) Until such time as regulations concerning the use and occupancy of the National Grasslands are promulgated pursuant to this title, the Secretary shall regulate the use and occupancy of such lands in accordance with regulations applicable to such lands on May 25, 1995, to the extent practicable and consistent with the provisions of this Act.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

THE TULALIP SUPERFUND SITE

• Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I ask that a copy of a letter from Elliot Laws, EPA Assistant Administrator, on the subject of the Tulalip Superfund site be printed in the RECORD immediately following my remarks.

The letter from EPA clarifies that the Agency fully intends to comply with the report language included in the fiscal year 1996 Senate VA–HUD and independent agencies report on the Tulalip Superfund site. In addition, the letter promises to provide further information on the liability of the Tulalip Tribe for the cleanup of the Superfund site.

The letter follows:

U.S. ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY,
Washington, DC, March 19, 1996.

Hon. SLADE GORTON,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GORTON: Thank you for inviting us to meet with you on Monday, March 11, 1996, concerning the Tulalip Landfill Superfund Project. This is to summarize the meeting with Timothy Fields, Jr., Deputy Assistant Administrator, Office of Solid Waste and Emergency Response, and Kathryn Schmoll, Comptroller, and to reiterate the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) commitment to work closely with you and to carefully and thoroughly consider issues you have raised regarding this matter.

The meeting focused on three key issues you raised: conducting alternative dispute resolution (ADR) with the interested parties, performing a baseline risk assessment, and incorporating the results of these activities into a new review of remedial alternatives for the site. We also discussed EPA's recent decision to issue an Interim Record of Decision (ROD) for the source areas of the site, and other issues relating to allocation of remedial costs.

EPA has already taken a number of steps consistent with the goals you have laid out. For example, we have engaged the potentially responsible parties (PRPs) and others in an extensive dialogue on Tulalip. The Region extended the public comment period on the proposed remedial action plan from 30 days to 80 days, held two public meetings, reviewed and responded to voluminous comments, and thoroughly documented the remedy selection process before publishing the interim ROD. The Agency also generated an extensive record of written communications with the PRPs addressing the cleanup alternatives and the differences between the reviews which the PRPs and EPA have performed. Senior EPA Headquarters management also met with representatives of the PRPs in order to hear and respond to their concerns with the remedy selection process.

Publishing the interim ROD is part of a comprehensive effort to identify and address all actual and potential risks associated with this site. It is designed to control migration of contaminants from the source areas of the site and follows the Agency's guidance of presumptive remedies for landfills. This allows for a prompt remedy selection process based on a brief site characterization and risk assessment effort.

Nevertheless, the Agency is currently conducting a full baseline risk assessment to evaluate the off-source portions of the site. Thus, concurrent with this interim action to prevent further environmental degradation, EPA is evaluating the impacts of the site on the surrounding area and the risks associated with those impacts. This baseline risk assessment is scheduled for completion in the Summer of 1996. It will form the basis for the final ROD, which will address all remaining aspects of the site. EPA expects to issue this final ROD in Summer 1997, after receiving and responding to public comment on the risk evaluation. Again, the issuance of the interim ROD was in no way intended to interfere with our ability to address the interests and concerns raised by yourself and by other parties.

Since, the interim remedy will address the source contamination at the Tulalip site in the most timely and cost-effective manner, EPA designed the baseline risk assessment assuming the interim action would be taken for the on-source areas while continuing investigation of off-source areas. The findings of the baseline risk assessment will be used as the basis for review of the interim ROD, to the extent practicable, and the selection of the final remedy.

EPA has furthermore initiated an ADR settlement project for Tulalip. In cooperation with many of the principal respondents for the site, the Agency has employed a neutral, third-party facilitator to assist in allocating remediation costs. The PRPs are currently working to establish the criteria which the facilitator will use to assign liability for the costs of the cleanup. We understand that the facilitator will most likely consider a combination of factors in assigning liability which will probably include both tonnage (contribution) and the degree of involvement/responsibility for the activities which led to the current site conditions.

However, the exact terms of this agreement are the subject of ongoing discussions among the PRPs and their representatives.

In the meeting, you asked a hypothetical question regarding the Tulalip tribe's liability for a portion of the cleanup costs. With respect to estimates of liability, EPA notes that it has published costs estimates only for de minimis settlers as part of an early settlement offer. If other PRPs have estimates of their potential liability, these may represent their own estimates, made for business and planning purposes. However, they are not EPA estimates, and we have not reviewed or concurred with the assumptions on which they may have been based. Again, these issues relating to liability for cleanup costs are to be resolved through the ADR process. We will provide a further update on this issue to you in the future.

As a final note, EPA also seriously evaluated the lower-cost options which several of the PRPs have supported. These alternatives do not provide a cap for the site and would therefore not comply with the minimum applicable State landfill closure requirements. I have enclosed letters from the State of Washington and tribal representatives that present their views in support of EPA's remedy selection decisions.

I believe this letter is responsve to the concerns you raised at the March 11 meeting, and I appreciate your continued interest in the Superfund program and the Tulalip Landfill Superfund cleanup.

Sincerely,

ELLIOTT P. LAWS,
Assistant Administrator.●

COMMENDING TUNISIA ON ITS 40TH ANNIVERSARY OF INDEPENDENCE

● Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the country of Tunisia which will celebrate its 40th anniversary of independence on March 20, 1996. I would like to congratulate this country, which has made tremendous strides in socio-economic development and in furthering the Middle East peace process.

In the last four decades, Tunisia has played a key role in preserving stability and peace in North Africa. Tunisia is also playing a key role in the Middle East peace process. It was the first Arab country to host a United Nations multilateral meeting in the peace process. Tunisia also hosted an official Israeli delegation in Tunis to encourage the dialog between Arabs and Israelis. Most recently, in January 1996, Tunisia and Israel agreed to establish formal diplomatic relations, and interest sections will be opened in Tunis and Tel Aviv by mid-April 1996.

Tunisia has been a leader in the struggle against terrorism, intolerance, and blind violence. Tunisia appealed to the world community, within the framework of the United Nations, the Organization of African Unity, the Arab League, and the Organization of Islamic Countries, to adopt strict measures in order to combat terrorism and extremism.

I would also like to commend Tunisia on its social and economic achievements. Tunisia has devoted the bulk of its resources to improving the quality of life of its people and to the development of its economy. Education is a key issue in Tunisia. The Government appropriates approximately 30 percent of the annual budget to education, social services, housing, and health care. This results in a highly skilled labor force. Today, 23 percent of Tunisian job seekers are university graduates and 42 percent are vocational training school graduates.

The private sector is playing a key role in the economic development of Tunisia, and as a result, Tunisians have created a diversified, market-oriented economy. Manufacturing accounts for 21 percent of domestic production, agriculture for 15 percent, and tourism for 7 percent. Domestic growth rates have averaged more than 4 percent per year, and the budget deficit has been halved in the last 4 years.

Tunisia welcomes and encourages foreign investment and has preferential access to a number of important regional markets. Tunisia is a member of the World Trade Organization. It enjoys duty free access for Tunisian products in European Union countries and most Arab countries. The United States assisted Tunisian economic growth through focused development programs such as the Generalized System of Preferences. As a result, Tunisia has proudly graduated from United States economic assistance and is now entering an era of economic partnership with the United States.

Tunisia has been a close and reliable ally of the United States and has cooperated with the United States in advancing tolerance, openness, peace, and stability. The bonds that have been created over the years between our two countries have continued to improve. I can only share the aspirations of all Tunisians for a prosperous and peaceful future on this, the 40th anniversary of independence.●

THE ATKINSON GRADUATE SCHOOL OF MANAGEMENT ACCREDITATION

● Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, this year Willamette University's Atkinson Graduate School of Management celebrates its 20th anniversary with an extremely prestigious award. Already considered a pioneering spirit in management education, the Atkinson School can profess a singularly unique achievement: accreditation from both the National Association of Schools of Public Affairs and Administration [NASPAA] and the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business [AACSB]. It is the first school in the country to receive both accreditations—it is my alma mater, located in Salem, OR.

Representatives from both the AACSB and the NASPAA visited the school in February 1995 and initiated an intense review process. After the review, the two organizations awarded the Atkinson school unanimous recommendations for accreditation. The two review boards commended the school for the program's focus on teamwork and practical application, the teaching staff's commitment to quality instruction and growth of their students, the uniqueness of the school's mission, and the outstanding facilities. The admissions and placement services received high praise as well.

These two distinguished national and international accreditations testify to the impressive and ground-breaking work being done at the Atkinson School. Long recognized as a leading institute of management education, the accreditations provide the school with recognition world wide, recognition that is duly deserved and places the school among the elite institutions of the Pacific region. Out of the more than 700 business schools in the Nation, the AACSB accredits 292. Among the Nation's 220 programs offering master's degrees in public management, the NASPAA accredits about half.

The Atkinson School offers a curriculum that features quality instruction in both business and public management that will prepare students for the future in our global business community. It is telling that in a school that recognizes the importance of global management and multinational influence, international students comprise 25 percent of the total student body. The Atkinson School has distinguished itself as a model for the expanded role of an American institution, a role that embraces the cultures and perspectives of other nations.

The Willamette University, nestled in the fertile Willamette Valley of Oregon, has long cultivated and developed inquisitive minds. The Atkinson School continues this storied tradition as its devotion to quality business management education aims for the 21st century. I wish to congratulate all the staff, supporters, and students who have participated in the unequaled success of the Atkinson School. I would also like to mention the outstanding leadership of the Atkinson School dean, G. Dave Weight, and the agenda of former Willamette University president, George Herbert Smith, whose vision led to the creation of the Atkinson School. A promising future faces the Atkinson School as it prepares its students to compete successfully in the demanding global business environment.

Mr. President, I ask that the Atkinson School's formal mission statement be printed in the RECORD.

The statement follows:

MISSION STATEMENT

The Mission of the Atkinson Graduate School of Management is to identify and convey principles of management shared by successful enterprises in the business, government and not-for-profit sectors. Consistent with these principles, the School educates managers to cooperate as well as compete, to create as well as to operate, and to learn as well as to know. Atkinson extends to management education the teaching and learning traditions of Willamette University, a small, liberal arts institution. Pursuing Willamette's mission to serve its community with distinctive graduate, professional education, the Atkinson School aims to be the preeminent small, independent management program in the Pacific region.●

MICHAEL SHEA

● Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, Michael Shea, age 8, of Dillon MT, was tragically killed in an accident on June 30, 1995.

Although Michael's life was taken, he helped save the lives of four other people. All are in good health, leading normal lives today because Michael was an organ donor.

On the day of his death his heart was flown from Montana to Seattle to be transplanted in a 4-year-old girl, Paige Roberts. Paige, who was born with a complex heart defect, had been waiting for a donor for 3 months. This 4-year-old little girl is alive today thanks to Michael.

Michael also donated his liver to a Baltimore woman. One of his kidneys was given to a girl in Seattle and the other to a woman in southwest Washington. All are now in good health.

The tragedy of Michael's death has given other people the hope of life. We so easily forget how fragile life is. We take for granted the advancement of medicine in this country. Michael's heart was used for the second pediatric heart transplant in Children's history. It is so easy to forget that medicine is about saving people's lives. We get caught up in debates about health care and forget the real importance of it—it is about saving people's lives.

I would also like to mention Michael's mother, Eileen, for her strength. The void left by the absence of Michael can not be easily filled for Eileen or any of the Shea family. It is certainly not easy to lose a child that should—in theory—outlive you. Eileen is a model mother. She took the time to explain death to Michael when his grandfather died, to explain the significance of being a donor for herself and let him come to his own decision on the subject. And Michael told her he wanted to be an organ donor. I admire her courage when faced with the death of a son, she understood the importance of giving life to others.

While the sound of Michael's footsteps racing up and down the stairs may have been silenced in Eileen's house, the echo of his generosity reminds us all of the fragility of life and the importance of medicine. Although modern medicine could not save Michael, it did help save four other people's lives.

We can all learn from Michael's generosity and remember the importance of being a donor. This 8-year-old boy from Dillon, MT, is a heroic example for children and adults alike. We should all take the time to fill out a donor card. It is as easy as writing to Living Bank, P.O. Box 6725, Houston, TX 77265.●

BALANCED BUDGET DOWNPAYMENT ACT, II

● Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, yesterday the Senate voted to adopt H.R. 3019, a bill to make continuing appropriations for the remainder of fiscal year 1996. During consideration of this legislation, the Senate debated and then voted upon two amendments which I would like to discuss at this time. The first was an amendment by Senators BOND and MIKULSKI and the second was an amendment by Senator GRAMM.

The Bond-Mikulski amendment included provisions to boost funding for environment and housing programs. These increases include funding directed to the States to clean up our Nation's water and funding to streamline the programs at the Department of Housing and Urban Development. I believe the EPA funding level approved in last year's appropriations bill represented a reasonable, responsible allocation for environmental programs and oversight. At the same time, I understand how important the Superfund program and the EPA's State revolving loan fund for waste and drinking water infrastructure are to the State of Michigan and States across the country. Therefore, largely because the additional funding was fully offset, I supported this measure.

On the other hand, my support of this en bloc amendment should not be interpreted as support for several of the programs listed, including additional funding for the National Corporation of National Community Service. Paying Americans tens of thousands of dollars per year to volunteer for community service may be President Clinton's idea of a good program, but it's not mine, and I would prefer to see this funding eliminated.

The Gramm amendment would have struck that spending which remained in title IV of the bill following the adoption of the Bond/Mikulski and Specter amendments. This funding included $235 million for the Advanced Technology Program and several hundred million in international accounts. The President has indicated that without additional funding for programs like the ATP—which provides direct subsidies to some of America's wealthiest corporations—he would veto the overall bill and shut down the Federal Government once again. I think it is unconscionable that the President is willing to threaten all the programs of the Federal Government in order to provide McDonalds, AT&T, and Eastman Kodak with millions in direct subsidies, and for that reason I supported Senator GRAMM. Earlier amendments by Senators SPECTER and BOND had gone a long way toward meeting the demands of the President with regard to education, the environment, and housing. While some programs remaining in title IV are worthy of support, an overwhelming amount of the funding would have gone to corporate subsidies and other unnecessary spending.●

TITLE VIII—PRISON LITIGATION REFORM

SEC. 801. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ''Prison Litigation Reform Act of 1995''.

SEC. 802. APPROPRIATE REMEDIES FOR PRISON CONDITIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 3626 of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''§3626. Appropriate remedies with respect to prison conditions

''(a) REQUIREMENTS FOR RELIEF.—

''(1) PROSPECTIVE RELIEF.—(A) Prospective relief in any civil action with respect to prison conditions shall extend no further than necessary to correct the violation of the Federal right of a particular plaintiff or plaintiffs. The court shall not grant or approve any prospective relief unless the court finds that such relief is narrowly drawn, extends no further than necessary to correct the violation of the Federal right, and is the least intrusive means necessary to correct the violation of the Federal right. The court shall give substantial weight to any adverse impact on public safety or the operation of a criminal justice system caused by the relief.

''(B) The court shall not order any prospective relief that requires or permits a government official to exceed his or her authority under State or local law or otherwise violates State or local law, unless—

''(i) Federal law permits such relief to be ordered in violation of State or local law;

''(ii) the relief is necessary to correct the violation of a Federal right; and

''(iii) no other relief will correct the violation of the Federal right.

''(C) Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize the courts, in exercising their remedial powers, to order the construction of prisons or the raising of taxes, or to repeal or detract from otherwise applicable limitations on the remedial powers of the courts.

''(2) PRELIMINARY INJUNCTIVE RELIEF.—In any civil action with respect to prison conditions, to the extent otherwise authorized by law, the court may enter a temporary restraining order or an order for preliminary injunctive relief. Preliminary injunctive relief must be narrowly drawn, extend no further than necessary to correct the harm the court finds requires preliminary relief, and be the least intrusive means necessary to correct that harm. The court shall give substantial weight to any adverse impact on public safety or the operation of a criminal justice system caused by the preliminary relief and shall respect the principles of comity set out in paragraph (1)(B) in tailoring any preliminary relief. Preliminary injunctive relief shall automatically expire on the date that is 90 days after its entry, unless the court makes the findings required under subsection (a)(1) for the entry of prospective relief and makes the order final before the expiration of the 90-day period.

''(3) PRISONER RELEASE ORDER.—(A) In any civil action with respect to prison conditions, no prisoner release order shall be entered unless—

''(i) a court has previously entered an order for less intrusive relief that has failed to remedy the deprivation of the Federal right sought to be remedied through the prisoner release order; and

''(ii) the defendant has had a reasonable amount of time to comply with the previous court orders.

''(B) In any civil action in Federal court with respect to prison conditions, a prisoner release order shall be entered only by a three-judge court in accordance with section 2284 of title 28, if the requirements of subparagraph (E) have been met.

''(C) A party seeking a prisoner release order in Federal court shall file with any request for such relief, a request for a three-judge court and materials sufficient to demonstrate that the requirements of subparagraph (A) have been met.

''(D) If the requirements under subparagraph (A) have been met, a Federal judge before whom a civil action with respect to prison conditions is pending who believes that a prison release order should be considered may sua sponte request the convening of a three-judge court to determine whether a prisoner release order should be entered.

''(E) The three-judge court shall enter a prisoner release order only if the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that—

''(i) crowding is the primary cause of the violation of a Federal right; and

''(ii) no other relief will remedy the violation of the Federal right.

''(F) Any State or local official or unit of government whose jurisdiction or function includes the appropriation of funds for the construction, operation, or maintenance of program facilities, or the prosecution or custody of persons who may be released from, or not admitted to, a prison as a result of a prisoner release order shall have standing to oppose the imposition or continuation in effect of such relief and to seek termination of such relief, and shall have the right to intervene in any proceeding relating to such relief.

''(b) TERMINATION OF RELIEF.—

''(1) TERMINATION OF PROSPECTIVE RELIEF.—(A) In any civil action with respect to prison conditions in which prospective relief is ordered, such relief shall be terminable upon the motion of any party or intervener—

''(i) 2 years after the date the court granted or approved the prospective relief;

''(ii) 1 year after the date the court has entered an order denying termination of prospective relief under this paragraph; or

''(iii) in the case of an order issued on or before the date of enactment of the Prison Litigation Reform Act, 2 years after such date of enactment.

''(B) Nothing in this section shall prevent the parties from agreeing to terminate or modify relief before the relief is terminated under subparagraph (A).

''(2) IMMEDIATE TERMINATION OF PROSPECTIVE RELIEF.—In any civil action with respect to prison conditions, a defendant or intervener shall be entitled to the immediate termination of any prospective relief if the relief was approved or granted in the absence of a finding by the court that the relief is narrowly drawn, extends no further than necessary to correct the violation of the Federal right, and is the least intrusive means necessary to correct the violation of the Federal right.

''(3) LIMITATION.—Prospective relief shall not terminate if the court makes written findings based on the record that prospective relief remains necessary to correct a current or ongoing violation of the Federal right, extends no further than necessary to correct the violation of the Federal right, and that the prospective relief is narrowly drawn and the least intrusive means to correct the violation.

''(4) TERMINATION OR MODIFICATION OF RELIEF.—Nothing in this section shall prevent any party or intervener from seeking modification or termination before the relief is terminable under paragraph (1) or (2), to the extent that modification or termination would otherwise be legally permissible.

''(c) SETTLEMENTS.—

''(1) CONSENT DECREES.—In any civil action with respect to prison conditions, the court shall not enter or approve a consent decree unless it complies with the limitations on relief set forth in subsection (a).

''(2) PRIVATE SETTLEMENT AGREEMENTS.—(A) Nothing in this section shall preclude parties from entering into a private settlement agreement that does not comply with the limitations on relief set forth in subsection (a), if the terms of that agreement are not subject to court enforcement other than the reinstatement of the civil proceeding that the agreement settled.

''(B) Nothing in this section shall preclude any party claiming that a private settlement agreement has been breached from seeking in State court any remedy available under State law.

''(d) STATE LAW REMEDIES.—The limitations on remedies in this section shall not apply to relief entered by a State court based solely upon claims arising under State law.

''(e) PROCEDURE FOR MOTIONS AFFECTING PROSPECTIVE RELIEF.—

''(1) GENERALLY.—The court shall promptly rule on any motion to modify or terminate prospective relief in a civil action with respect to prison conditions.

''(2) AUTOMATIC STAY.—Any prospective relief subject to a pending motion shall be automatically stayed during the period—

''(A)(i) beginning on the 30th day after such motion is filed, in the case of a motion made under paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (b); or

''(ii) beginning on the 180th day after such motion is filed, in the case of a motion made under any other law; and

''(B) ending on the date the court enters a final order ruling on the motion.

''(f) SPECIAL MASTERS.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—(A) In any civil action in a Federal court with respect to prison conditions, the court may appoint a special master who shall be disinterested and objective and who will give due regard to the public safety, to conduct hearings on the record and prepare proposed findings of fact.

''(B) The court shall appoint a special master under this subsection during the remedial phase of the action only upon a finding that the remedial phase will be sufficiently complex to warrant the appointment.

''(2) APPOINTMENT.—(A) If the court determines that the appointment of a special master is necessary, the court shall request that the defendant institution and the plaintiff each submit a list of not more than 5 persons to serve as a special master.

''(B) Each party shall have the opportunity to remove up to 3 persons from the opposing party's list.

''(C) The court shall select the master from the persons remaining on the list after the operation of subparagraph (B).

''(3) INTERLOCUTORY APPEAL.—Any party shall have the right to an interlocutory appeal of the judge's selection of the special master under this subsection, on the ground of partiality.

''(4) COMPENSATION.—The compensation to be allowed to a special master under this section shall be based on an hourly rate not greater than the hourly rate established under section 3006A for payment of court-appointed counsel, plus costs reasonably incurred by the special master. Such compensation and costs shall be paid with funds appropriated to the Judiciary.

''(5) REGULAR REVIEW OF APPOINTMENT.—In any civil action with respect to prison conditions in which a special master is appointed under this subsection, the court shall review the appointment of the special master every 6 months to determine whether the services of the special master continue to be required under paragraph (1). In no event shall the appointment of a special master extend beyond the termination of the relief.

''(6) LIMITATIONS ON POWERS AND DUTIES.—A special master appointed under this subsection—

''(A) may be authorized by a court to conduct hearings and prepare proposed findings of fact, which shall be made on the record;

''(B) shall not make any findings or communications ex parte;

''(C) may be authorized by a court to assist in the development of remedial plans; and

''(D) may be removed at any time, but shall be relieved of the appointment upon the termination of relief.

(b) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) experience has shown that the failure of the District of Columbia educational system has been due more to the failure to implement a plan than the failure to develop a plan;

(2) national studies indicate that 50 percent of secondary school graduates lack basic literacy skills, and over 30 percent of the 7th grade students in the District of Columbia public schools drop out of school before graduating;

(3) standard student assessments indicate only average performance for grade level and fail to identify individual students who lack basic skills, allowing too many students to graduate lacking these basic skills and diminishing the worth of a diploma;

(4) experience has shown that successful schools have good community, parent, and business involvement;

(5) experience has shown that reducing dropout rates in the critical middle and secondary school years requires individual student involvement and attention through such activities as arts or athletics; and

(6) experience has shown that close coordination between educators and business persons is required to provide noncollege-bound students the skills necessary for employment, and that personal attention is vitally important to assist each student in developing an appropriate career path.

(a) PRIMARY RESPONSIBILITY.—The Board of Education and the Superintendent shall have primary responsibility for developing and implementing the long-term reform plan for education in the District of Columbia.

(3) assist in developing districtwide assessments, including individual assessments, that identify District of Columbia public school students who lack basic literacy skills, with particular attention being given to grade 4 and the middle school years, and establish procedures to ensure that a teacher is made accountable for the performance of every such student in such teacher's class;

(4) make recommendations to improve community, parent, and business involvement in District of Columbia public schools and public charter schools;

(5) assess opportunities in the District of Columbia to increase individual student involvement and attention through such activities as arts or athletics, and make recommendations on how to increase such involvement; and

(2) SPECIAL RULE.—If the Consensus Commission determines that the Board of Education has failed to take an action necessary to develop or implement the long-term reform plan or that the Board of Education is unable to do so, the Consensus Commission shall request the Authority to take appropriate action, and the Authority shall take such action as the Authority deems appropriate, to develop or implement, as the case may be, the long-term reform plan.

The Consensus Commission shall receive a copy of each public charter school's annual report.

SEC. 2856. INVESTIGATIVE POWERS.

The Consensus Commission may investigate any action or activity which may hinder the progress of any part of the long-term reform plan. The Board of Education shall cooperate and assist the Consensus Commission in any investigation. (d) The Secretary concerned shall terminate all payments into the Agriculture Fund or the Interior Fund, and pay any unobligated funds in the affected Fund into the United States Treasury as miscellaneous receipts, whenever the Secretary concerned makes a finding, published in the Federal Register, that sales sufficient to achieve the total allowable sales quantity of the National Forest System for the Forest Service or the allowable sales level for the Oregon and California grant lands for the Bureau of Land Management, respectively, have been prepared.

(e) Any timber sales prepared and recreation projects completed under this section shall comply with all applicable environmental and natural resource laws and regulations.

(f) The Secretary concerned shall report annually to the Committees on Appropriations of the United States Senate and the House of Representatives on expenditures made from the Fund for timber sales and recreation projects, revenues received into the Fund from timber sales, and timber sale preparation and recreation project work undertaken during the previous year and projected for the next year under the Fund. SEC. 201. (a) PUBLIC AND INDIAN HOUSING MODERNIZATION.—

(1) EXPANSION OF USE OF MODERNIZATION FUNDING.—Subsection 14(q) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 is amended to read as follows:

''(q)(1) In addition to the purposes enumerated in subsections (a) and (b), a public housing agency may use modernization assistance provided under section 14, and development assistance provided under section 5(a) that was not allocated, as determined by the Secretary, for priority replacement housing, for any eligible activity authorized by this section, by section 5, or by applicable Appropriations Acts for a public housing agency, including the demolition, rehabilitation, revitalization, and replacement of existing units and projects and, for up to 10 percent of its allocation of such funds in any fiscal year, for any operating subsidy purpose authorized in section 9. Except for assistance used for operating subsidy purposes under the preceding sentence, assistance provided to a public housing agency under this section shall principally be used for the physical improvement, replacement of public housing, other capital purposes, and for associated management improvements, and such other extraordinary purposes as may be approved by the Secretary. Low-income and very low-income units assisted under this paragraph shall be eligible for operating subsidies, unless the Secretary determines that such units or projects do not meet other requirements of this Act.

''(2) A public housing agency may provide assistance to developments that include units for other than units assisted under this Act (except for units assisted under section 8 hereof) ('mixed income developments'), in the form of a grant, loan, operating assistance, or other form of investment which may be made to—

''(A) a partnership, a limited liability company, or other legal entity in which the public housing agency or its affiliate is a general partner, managing member, or otherwise participates in the activities of such entity; or

''(B) any entity which grants to the public housing agency the option to purchase the development within 20 years after initial occupancy in accordance with section 42(i)(7) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended.

''Units shall be made available in such developments for periods of not less than 30 years, by master contract or by individual lease, for occupancy by low-income and very low-income families referred from time to time by the public housing agency from its central or site-based waiting list. The number of such units shall be:

''(i) in the same proportion to the total number of units in such development that the total financial commitment provided by the public housing agency bears to the value of the total financial commitment in the development, or

''(ii) not be less than the number of units that could have been developed under the conventional public housing program with the assistance involved, or

''(iii) as may otherwise be approved by the Secretary.

''(3) A mixed income development may elect to have all units subject only to the applicable local real estate taxes, notwithstanding that the low-income units assisted by public housing funds would otherwise be subject to section 6(d) of the Housing Act of 1937.

''(4) If an entity that owns or operates a mixed-income project under this subsection enters into a contract with a public housing agency, the terms of which obligate the entity to operate and maintain a specified number of units in the project as public housing units in accordance with the requirements of this Act for the period required by law, such contractual terms may provide that, if, as a result of a reduction in appropriations under section 9, or any other change in applicable law, the public housing agency is unable to fulfill its contractual obligations with respect to those public housing units, that entity may deviate, under procedures and requirements developed through regulations by the Secretary, from otherwise applicable restrictions under this Act regarding rents, income eligibility, and other areas of public housing management with respect to a portion or all of those public housing units, to the extent necessary to preserve the viability of those units while maintaining the low-income character of the units, to the maximum extent practicable.''.

(2) APPLICABILITY.—Section 14(q) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended by subsection (a) of this section, shall be effective only with respect to assistance provided from funds made available for fiscal year 1996 or any preceding fiscal year.

(3) APPLICABILITY TO IHAS.—In accordance with section 201(b)(2) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, the amendment made by this subsection shall apply to public housing developed or operated pursuant to a contract between the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development and an Indian housing authority.

(b) ONE-FOR-ONE REPLACEMENT OF PUBLIC AND INDIAN HOUSING.—

(2) Section 18(f) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence:

''No one may rely on the preceding sentence as the basis for reconsidering a final order of a court issued, or a settlement approved by, a court.''.

(3) APPLICABILITY.—In accordance with section 201(b)(2) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, the amendments made by this subsection and by sections 1002 (a), (b), and (c) of Public Law 104–19 shall apply to public housing developed or operated pursuant to a contract between the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development and an Indian housing authority.

(b) IMPLEMENTATION AND ENFORCEMENT.—

(1) STANDARDS FOR IMPLEMENTATION.—The Secretary shall establish standards to permit implementation of this section in fiscal year 1996.

(2) CONSULTATION.—Each public housing agency shall consult with the applicable public housing tenants and the unit of general local government in identifying any public housing developments under subsection (a).

(d) CONVERSION TO TENANT-BASED ASSISTANCE.—

(1) The Secretary shall make authority available to a public housing agency to provide tenant-based assistance pursuant to section 8 to families residing in any development that is removed from the inventory of the public housing agency and the annual contributions contract pursuant to subsection (b).

(2) Each conversion plan under subsection (c) shall—

(A) require the agency to notify families residing in the development, consistent with any guidelines issued by the Secretary governing such notifications, that the development shall be removed from the inventory of the public housing agency and the families shall receive tenant-based or project-based assistance, and to provide any necessary counseling for families; and

(B) ensure that all tenants affected by a determination under this section that a development shall be removed from the inventory of a public housing agency shall be offered tenant-based or project-based assistance and shall be relocated, as necessary, to other decent, safe, sanitary, and affordable housing which is, to the maximum extent practicable, housing of their choice.

(a) On and after October 1, 1995, and before October 1, 1997, the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall initiate a demonstration program with respect to multifamily projects whose owners agree to participate and whose mortgages are insured under the National Housing Act and that are assisted under section 8 of the United States Housing Act of 1937 and whose present section 8 rents are, in the aggregate, in excess of the fair market rent of the locality in which the project is located. These programs shall be designed to test the feasibility and desirability of the goal of ensuring, to the maximum extent practicable, that the debt service and operating expenses, including adequate reserves, attributable to such multifamily projects can be supported with or without mortgage insurance under the National Housing Act and with or without above-market rents and utilizing project-based assistance or, with the consent of the property owner, tenant-based assistance, while taking into account the need for assistance of low- and very low-income families in such projects. In carrying out this demonstration, the Secretary may use arrangements with third parties, under which the Secretary may provide for the assumption by the third parties (by delegation, contract, or otherwise) of some or all of the functions, obligations, and benefits of the Secretary.

(1) GOALS.—The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall carry out the demonstration programs under this section in a manner that—

(A) will protect the financial interests of the Federal Government;

(B) will result in significant discretionary cost savings through debt restructuring and subsidy reduction; and

(ii) minimizing the involuntary displacement of tenants;

(iii) restructuring the mortgages of such projects in a manner that is consistent with local housing market conditions;

(iv) supporting fair housing strategies;

(v) minimizing any adverse income tax impact on property owners; and

(vi) minimizing any adverse impact on residential neighborhoods.

In determining the manner in which a mortgage is to be restructured or the subsidy reduced, the Secretary may balance competing goals relating to individual projects in a manner that will further the purposes of this section.

(2) DEMONSTRATION APPROACHES.—In carrying out the demonstration programs, subject to the appropriation in subsection (f), the Secretary may use one or more of the following approaches:

(A) Joint venture arrangements with third parties, under which the Secretary may provide for the assumption by the third parties (by delegation, contract, or otherwise) of some or all of the functions, obligations, and benefits of the Secretary.

(B) Subsidization of the debt service of the project to a level that can be paid by an owner receiving an unsubsidized market rent.

(C) Renewal of existing project-based assistance contracts where the Secretary shall approve proposed initial rent levels that do not exceed the greater of 120 percent of fair market rents or comparable market rents for the relevant metropolitan market area or at rent levels under a budget-based approach.

(D) Nonrenewal of expiring existing project-based assistance contracts and providing tenant-based assistance to previously assisted households.

(b) For purposes of carrying out demonstration programs under subsection (a)—

(1) the Secretary may manage and dispose of multifamily properties owned by the Secretary as of October 1, 1995 and multifamily mortgages held by the Secretary as of October 1, 1995 for properties assisted under section 8 with rents above 110 percent of fair market rents without regard to any other provision of law; and

(2) the Secretary may delegate to one or more entities the authority to carry out some or all of the functions and responsibilities of the Secretary in connection with the foreclosure of mortgages held by the Secretary under the National Housing Act.

(c) For purposes of carrying out demonstration programs under subsection (a), subject to such third party consents (if any) as are necessary including but not limited to (i) consent by the Government National Mortgage Association where it owns a mortgage insured by the Secretary; (ii) consent by an issuer under the mortgage-backed securities program of the Association, subject to the responsibilities of the issuer to its security holders and the Association under such program; and (iii) parties to any contractual agreement which the Secretary proposes to modify or discontinue, and subject to the appropriation in subsection (c), the Secretary or one or more third parties designated by the Secretary may take the following actions:

(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and subject to the agreement of the project owner, the Secretary or third party may remove, relinquish, extinguish, modify, or agree to the removal of any mortgage, regulatory agreement, project-based assistance contract, use agreement, or restriction that had been imposed or required by the Secretary, including restrictions on distributions of income which the Secretary or third party determines would interfere with the ability of the project to operate without above market rents. The Secretary or third party may require an owner of a property assisted under the section 8 new construction/substantial rehabilitation program to apply any accumulated residual receipts toward effecting the purposes of this section.

(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development may enter into contracts to purchase reinsurance, or enter into participations or otherwise transfer economic interest in contracts of insurance or in the premiums paid, or due to be paid, on such insurance to third parties, on such terms and conditions as the Secretary may determine.

(3) The Secretary may offer project-based assistance with rents at or below fair market rents for the locality in which the project is located and may negotiate such other terms as are acceptable to the Secretary and the project owner.

(4) The Secretary may offer to pay all or a portion of the project's debt service, including payments monthly from the appropriate Insurance Fund, for the full remaining term of the insured mortgage.

(5) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary may forgive and cancel any FHA-insured mortgage debt that a demonstration program property cannot carry at market rents while bearing full operating costs.

(6) For demonstration program properties that cannot carry full operating costs (excluding debt service) at market rents, the Secretary may approve project-based rents sufficient to carry such full operating costs and may offer to pay the full debt service in the manner provided in paragraph (4).

(d) COMMUNITY AND TENANT INPUT.—In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall develop procedures to provide appropriate and timely notice to officials of the unit of general local government affected, the community in which the project is situated, and the tenants of the project.

(e) LIMITATION ON DEMONSTRATION AUTHORITY.—The Secretary may carry out demonstration programs under this section with respect to mortgages not to exceed 15,000 units. The demonstration authorized under this section shall not be expanded until the reports required under subsection (g) are submitted to the Congress.

(f) APPROPRIATION.—For the cost of modifying loans held or guaranteed by the Federal Housing Administration, as authorized by this subsection (a)(2) and subsection (c), $15,000,000, to remain available until September 30, 1997: Provided, That such costs shall be as defined in section 502 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as amended.

(g) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary shall submit to the Congress every six months after the date of enactment of this Act a report describing and assessing the programs carried out under the demonstrations. The Secretary shall also submit a final report to the Congress not later than six months after the end of the demonstrations. and the repayment date for the old capital investment; and

(B) for a new capital investment, a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration prevailing market yields, during the month preceding the beginning of the fiscal year in which the related project, facility, or separable unit or feature is placed in service, on outstanding interest-bearing obligations of the United States with periods to maturity comparable to the period between the beginning of the fiscal year and the repayment date for the new capital investment.

(b) NEW PRINCIPAL AMOUNTS.—

(1) PRINCIPAL AMOUNT.—Effective October 1, 1996, an old capital investment has a new principal amount that is the sum of—

(A) the present value of the old payment amounts for the old capital investment, calculated using a discount rate equal to the Treasury rate for the old capital investment; and

(B) an amount equal to $100,000,000 multiplied by a fraction whose numerator is the principal amount of the old payment amounts for the old capital investment and whose denominator is the sum of the principal amounts of the old payment amounts for all old capital investments.

(2) DETERMINATION.—With the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury based solely on consistency with this section, the Administrator shall determine the new principal amounts under subsection (b) and the assignment of interest rates to the new principal amounts under subsection (c).

(3) OLD PAYMENT AMOUNTS.—For the purposes of this subsection, ''old payment amounts'' means, for an old capital investment, the annual interest and principal that the Administrator would have paid to the United States Treasury from October 1, 1996, if this section had not been enacted, assuming that—

(A) the principal were repaid—

(1) NEW CAPITAL INVESTMENT.—The principal amount of a new capital investment includes interest in each fiscal year of construction of the related project, facility, or separable unit or feature at a rate equal to the one-year rate for the fiscal year on the sum of—

(A) construction expenditures that were made from the date construction commenced through the end of the fiscal year, and

(B) accrued interest during construction.

(2) PAYMENT.—The Administrator is not required to pay, during construction of the project, facility, or separable unit or feature, the interest calculated, accrued, and capitalized under subsection (f)(1).

(2) PAYMENT OF CAPITAL INVESTMENT.—Except as provided in subsection (e), this section does not affect the authority of the Administrator to pay all or a portion of the principal amount associated with a capital investment before the repayment date for the principal amount.

Part B of title II of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 238 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following section:

''ABORTION-RELATED DISCRIMINATION IN GOVERNMENTAL ACTIVITIES REGARDING TRAINING AND LICENSING OF PHYSICIANS

''SEC. 245. (a) IN GENERAL.—The Federal Government, and any State or local government that receives Federal financial assistance, may not subject any health care entity to discrimination on the basis that—

''(1) the entity refuses to undergo training in the performance of induced abortions, to require or provide such training, to perform such abortions, or to provide referrals for such training or such abortions;

''(2) the entity refuses to make arrangements for any of the activities specified in paragraph (1); or

''(3) the entity attends (or attended) a postgraduate physician training program, or any other program of training in the health professions, that does not (or did not) perform induced abortions or require, provide or refer for training in the performance of induced abortions, or make arrangements for the provision of such training.

''(b) ACCREDITATION OF POSTGRADUATE PHYSICIAN TRAINING PROGRAMS.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—In determining whether to grant a legal status to a health care entity (including a license or certificate), or to provide such entity with financial assistance, services or other benefits, the Federal Government, or any State or local government that receives Federal financial assistance, shall deem accredited any postgraduate physician training program that would be accredited but for the accrediting agency's reliance upon an accreditation standards that requires an entity to perform an induced abortion or require, provide, or refer for training in the performance of induced abortions, or make arrangements for such training, regardless of whether such standard provides exceptions or exemptions. The government involved shall formulate such regulations or other mechanisms, or enter into such agreements with accrediting agencies, as are necessary to comply with this subsection.

''(2) RULES OF CONSTRUCTION.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—With respect to subclauses (I) and (II) of section 705(a)(2)(B)(i) (relating to a program of insured loans for training in the health professions), the requirements in such subclauses regarding accredited internship or residency programs are subject to paragraph (1) of this subsection.

''(B) EXCEPTIONS.—This section shall not—

''(i) prevent any health care entity from voluntarily electing to be trained, to train, or to arrange for training in the performance of, to perform, or to make referrals for induced abortions; or

''(ii) prevent an accrediting agency or a Federal, State or local government from establishing standards of medical competency applicable only to those individuals who have voluntarily elected to perform abortions.

''(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

''(1) The term 'financial assistance', with respect to a government program, includes governmental payments provided as reimbursement for carrying out health-related activities.

''(2) The term 'health care entity' includes an individual physician, a postgraduate physician training program, and a participant in a program of training in the health professions.

''(3) The term 'postgraduate physician training program' includes a residency training program.''.

SEC. 3014. (a) The Senate finds that:

(1) Record low temperatures across the country this winter, coupled with record snowfalls in many areas, have generated substantial and sustained demand among eligible low-income Americans for home heating assistance, and put many who face heating-related crises at risk.

(2) Home heating assistance for working and low-income families with children, the elderly on fixed incomes, the disabled, and others who need such help is a critical part of the social safety net in cold-weather areas.

(3) The President has released approximately $900,000,000 in regular Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) funding for this year, compared to a funding level of $1,319,000,000 last year, and a large LIHEAP funding shortfall remains which has adversely affected eligible recipients in many cold-weather States.

(4) LIHEAP is a highly targeted, cost-effective way to help approximately 6 million low-income Americans to pay their energy bills. More than two-thirds of LIHEAP-eligible households have annual incomes of less than $8,000; more than one-half have annual incomes below $6,000.

(5) LIHEAP program funding has been substantially reduced in recent years, and cannot sustain any further spending cuts if the program is to remain a viable means of meeting the home heating and other energy-related needs of low-income people in cold-weather States.

(6) Traditionally, LIHEAP has received advance appropriations for the next fiscal year. This allows States to properly plan for the upcoming winter and best serve the energy needs of low-income families.

(7) Congress was not able to pass an appropriations bill for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education by the beginning of this fiscal year and it was only because LIHEAP received advance appropriations last fiscal year that the President was able to release the $578,000,000 he did in December—the bulk of the funds made available to the States this winter.

(8) There is currently available to the President up to $300,000,000 in emergency LIHEAP funding, which could be made available immediately, on a targeted basis, to meet the urgent home heating needs of eligible persons who otherwise could be faced with heating-related emergencies, including shut-offs, in the coming weeks.

(b) Therefore, it is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the President should release immediately a substantial portion of available emergency funding for the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program for fiscal year 1996, to help meet continuing urgent needs for home heating assistance during this unusually cold winter; and

(2) not less than the $1,000,000,000 in regular advance-appropriated LIHEAP funding for next winter provided for in this bill should be retained in a House-Senate conference on this measure.

SEC. 3015. LAND EXCHANGE

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the ''Greens Creek Land Exchange Act of 1996''.

(b) FINDINGS.—The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act established the Admiralty Island National Monument and sections 503 and 504 of that Act provided special provisions under which the Greens Creek Claims would be developed. The provisions supplemented the general mining laws under which these claims were staked.

(2) The Kennecott Greens Creek Mining Company, Inc., currently holds title to the Greens Creek Claims, and the area surrounding these claims has further mineral potential which is yet unexplored.

(3) Negotiations between the United States Forest Service and the Kennecott Greens Creek Mining Company, Inc., have resulted in an agreement by which the area surrounding the Greens Creek Claims could be explored and developed under terms and conditions consistent with the protection of the values of the Admiralty Island National Monument.

(4) The full effectuation of the Agreement, by its terms, requires the approval and ratification by Congress.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section—

(1) the term ''Agreement'' means the document entitled the ''Greens Creek Land Exchange Agreement'' executed on December 14, 1994, by the Under Secretary of Agriculture for Natural Resources and Environment on behalf of the United States and the Kennecott Greens Creek Mining Company and Kennecott Corporation;

(2) the term ''ANILCA'' means the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act, Public Law 96–487 (94 Stat. 2371);

(3) the term ''conservation system unit'' has the same meaning as defined in section 102(4) of ANILCA;

(4) the term ''Greens Creek Claims'' means those patented mining claims of Kennecott

Greens Creek Mining Company within the Monument recognized pursuant to section 504 of ANILCA;

(5) the term ''KGCMC'' means the Kennecott Greens Creek Mining Company, Inc., a Delaware corporation;

(6) the term ''Monument'' means the Admiralty Island National Monument in the State of Alaska established by section 503 of ANILCA;

(7) the term ''Royalty'' means Net Island Receipts Royalty as that latter term is defined in Exhibit C to the Agreement; and

(8) the term ''Secretary'' means the Secretary of Agriculture.

(d) RATIFICATION OF THE AGREEMENT.—The Agreement is hereby ratified and confirmed as to the duties and obligations of the United States and its agencies, and KGCMC and Kennecott Corporation, as a matter of Federal law. The agreement may be modified or amended, without further action by the Congress, upon written agreement of all parties thereto and with notification in writing being made to the appropriate committees of the Congress.

(e) IMPLEMENTATION OF THE AGREEMENT.—

(1) LAND ACQUISITION.—Without diminishment of any other land acquisition authority of the Secretary in Alaska and in furtherance of the purposes of the Agreement, the Secretary is authorized to acquire lands and interests in land within conservation system units in the Tongass National Forest, and any land or interest in land so acquired shall be administered by the Secretary as part of the National Forest System and any conservation system unit in which it is located. Priority shall be given to acquisition of non-Federal lands within the Monument.

(2) ACQUISITION FUNDING.—There is hereby established in the Treasury of the United States an account entitled the 'Greens Creek Land Exchange Account' into which shall be deposited the first $5,000,000 in royalties received by the United States under part 6 of the Agreement after the distribution of the amounts pursuant to paragraph (3) of this subsection. Such moneys in the special account in the Treasury may, to the extent provided in appropriations Acts, be used for land acquisition pursuant to paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(3) TWENTY-FIVE PERCENT FUND.—All royalties paid to the United States under the Agreement shall be subject to the 25 percent distribution provisions of the Act of May 23, 1908, as amended (16 U.S.C. 500) relating to payments for roads and schools.

(4) MINERAL DEVELOPMENT.—Notwithstanding any provision of ANILCA to the contrary, the lands and interests in lands being conveyed to KGCMC pursuant to the Agreement shall be available for mining and related activities subject to and in accordance with the terms of the Agreement and conveyances made thereunder.

(5) ADMNISTRATION.—The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to implement and administer the rights and obligations of the Federal Government under the Agreement, including monitoring the Government's interests relating to extralateral rights, collecting royalties, and conducting audits. The Secretary may enter into cooperative arrangements with other Federal agencies for the performance of any Federal rights or obligations under the Agreement or this Act.

(6) REVERSIONS.—Before reversion to the United States of KGCMC properties located on Admiralty Island, KGCMC shall reclaim the surface disturbed in accordance with an approved plan of operations and applicable laws and regulations. Upon reversion to the United States of KGCMC properties located on Admiralty, those properties located within the Monument shall become part of the Monument and those properties lying outside the Monument shall be managed as part of the Tongass National Forest.

(7) SAVINGS PROVISIONS.—Implementation of the Agreement in accordance with this section shall not be deemed a major Federal action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment, nor shall implementation require further consideration pursuant to the National Historic Preservation Act, title VIII of ANILCA, or any other law.

(f) RECISION RIGHTS.—Within 60 days of the enactment of this section, KGCMC and Kennecott Corporation shall have a right to rescind all rights under the Agreement and this section. Recision shall be effected by a duly authorized resolution of the Board of Directors of either KGCMC or Kennecott Corporation and delivered to the Chief of the Forest Service at the Chief's principal office in Washington. District of Columbia. In the event of a recision, the status quo ante provisions of the Agreement shall apply.

SEC. 3017. CONTINUED OPERATION OF AN EXISTING HYDROELECTRIC FACILITY IN MONTANA.

SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING THE BUDGET TREATMENT OF FEDERAL DISASTER ASSISTANCE.—It is the sense of the Senate that the conference on S. 1594, making omnibus consolidated rescissions and appropriations for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1996, and for other purposes, shall find sufficient funding reductions to offset the costs of providing any Federal disaster assistance.

SEC. 3019. SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING THE BUDGET TREATMENT OF FEDERAL DISASTER ASSISTANCE.—It is the sense of the Senate that Congress and the relevant committees of the Senate shall examine the manner in which Federal disaster assistance is provided and develop a long-term funding plan for the budgetary treatment of any Federal assistance, providing for such funds out of existing budget allocation rather than taking the expenditures off budget and adding to the Federal deficit.

SEC. 3020. None of the funds made available by this Act or any previous Act shall be expended if such expenditure would cause total fiscal year 1996 non-defense discretionary expenditures for:

(1) Agriculture, rural development and related programs or activities contained in this or prior year Acts to exceed $13,581,000,000;

SEC. 411. OWNERSHIP LIMITATIONS.

(a) SECURITIES LIMITATIONS.—No director, officer, or employee of the Corporation may acquire any securities, or any rights to acquire any securities of the private corporation on terms more favorable than those offered to the general public—

(2) pursuant to any agreement, arrangement, or understanding entered into before the privatization date, or

(3) before the election of the directors of the private corporation.

(b) OWNERSHIP LIMITATION.—Immediately following the consummation of the transaction or series of transactions pursuant to which 100 percent of the ownership of the Corporation is transferred to private investors, and for a period of three years thereafter, no person may acquire, directly or indirectly, beneficial ownership of securities representing more than 10 percent of the total votes of all outstanding voting securities of the Corporation. The foregoing limitation shall not apply to—

(1) any employee stock ownership plan of the Corporation,

(2) members of the underwriting syndicate purchasing shares in stabilization transactions in connection with the privatization, or

(3) in the case of shares beneficially held in the ordinary course of business for others, any commercial bank, broker-dealer, or clearing agency.

SEC. 412. URANIUM TRANSFERS AND SALES.

(a) TRANSFERS AND SALES BY THE SECRETARY.—The Secretary shall not provide enrichment services or transfer or sell any uranium (including natural uranium concentrates, natural uranium hexafluoride, or enriched uranium in any form) to any person except as consistent with this section.

(b) RUSSIAN HEU.—(1) On or before December 31, 1996, the United States Executive Agent under the Russian HEU Agreement shall transfer to the Secretary without charge title to an amount of uranium hexafluoride equivalent to the natural uranium component of low-enriched uranium derived from at least 18 metric tons of highly enriched uranium purchased from the Russian Executive Agent under the Russian HEU Agreement. The quantity of such uranium hexafluoride delivered to the Secretary shall be based on a tails assay of 0.30 U^{235}. Uranium hexafluoride transferred to the Secretary pursuant to this paragraph shall be deemed under United States law for all purposes to be of Russian origin.

(2) Within 7 years of the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall sell, and receive payment for, the uranium hexafluoride transferred to the Secretary pursuant to paragraph (1). Such uranium hexafluoride shall be sold—

(A) at any time for use in the United States for the purpose of overfeeding;

(B) at any time for end use outside the United States;

(C) in 1995 and 1996 to the Russian Executive Agent at the purchase price for use in matched sales pursuant to the Suspension Agreement; or,

(D) in calendar year 2001 for consumption by end users in the United States not prior to January 1, 2002, in volumes not to exceed 3,000,000 pounds U_3O_8 equivalent per year.

(3) With respect to all enriched uranium delivered to the United States Executive Agent under the Russian HEU Agreement on or after January 1, 1997, the United States Executive Agent shall, upon request of the Russian Executive Agent, enter into an agreement to deliver concurrently to the Russian Executive Agent an amount of uranium hexafluoride equivalent to the natural uranium component of such uranium. An agreement executed pursuant to a request of the Russian Executive Agent, as contemplated in this paragraph, may pertain to any deliveries due during any period remaining under the Russian HEU Agreement. The quantity of such uranium hexafluoride delivered to the Russian Executive Agent shall be based on a tails assay of 0.30 U^{235}. Title to uranium hexafluoride delivered to the Russian Executive Agent pursuant to this paragraph shall transfer to the Russian Executive Agent upon delivery of such material to the Russian Executive Agent, with such delivery to take place at a North American facility designated by the Russian Executive Agent. Uranium hexafluoride delivered to the Russian Executive Agent pursuant to this paragraph shall be deemed under U.S. law for all purposes to be of Russian origin. Such uranium hexafluoride may be sold to any person or entity for delivery and use in the United States only as permitted in subsections (b)(5), (b)(6) and (b)(7) of this section.

(4) In the event that the Russian Executive Agent does not exercise its right to enter into an agreement to take delivery of the natural uranium component of any low-enriched uranium, as contemplated in paragraph (3), within 90 days of the date such low-enriched uranium is delivered to the United States Executive Agent, or upon request of the Russian Executive Agent, then the United States Executive Agent shall engage an independent entity through a competitive selection process to auction an amount of uranium hexafluoride or U_3O_8 (in the event that the conversion component of such hexafluoride has previously been sold) equivalent to the natural uranium component of such low-enriched uranium. An agreement executed pursuant to a request of the Russian Executive Agent, as contemplated in this paragraph, may pertain to any deliveries due during any period remaining under the Russian HEU Agreement. Such independent entity shall sell such uranium hexafluoride in one or more lots to any person or entity to maximize the proceeds from such sales, for disposition consistent with the limitations set forth in this subsection. The independent entity shall pay to the Russian Executive Agent the proceeds of any such auction less all reasonable transaction and other administrative costs. The quantity of such uranium hexafluoride auctioned shall be based on a tails assay of 0.30 U^{235}. Title to uranium hexafluoride auctioned pursuant to this paragraph shall transfer to the buyer of such material upon delivery of such material to the buyer. Uranium hexafluoride auctioned pursuant to this paragraph shall be deemed under United States law for all purposes to be of Russian origin.

(5) Except as provided in paragraphs (6) and (7), uranium hexafluoride delivered to the Russian Executive Agent under paragraph (3) or auctioned pursuant to paragraph (4), may not be delivered for consumption by end users in the United States either directly or indirectly prior to January 1, 1998, and thereafter only in accordance with the following schedule:

(6) Uranium hexafluoride delivered to the Russian Executive Agent under paragraph (3) or auctioned pursuant to paragraph (4) may be sold at any time as Russian-origin natural uranium in a matched sale pursuant to the Suspension Agreement, and in such case shall not be counted against the annual maximum deliveries set forth in paragraph (5).

(7) Uranium hexafluoride delivered to the Russian Executive Agent under paragraph (3) or auctioned pursuant to paragraph (4) may be sold at any time for use in the United States for the purpose of overfeeding in the operations of enrichment facilities.

(8) Nothing in this subsection (b) shall restrict the sale of the conversion component of such uranium hexafluoride.

(9) The Secretary of Commerce shall have responsibility for the administration and enforcement of the limitations set forth in this subsection. The Secretary of Commerce may require any person to provide any certifications, information, or take any action that may be necessary to enforce these limitations. The United

(10) The President shall monitor the actions of the United States Executive Agent under the Russian HEU Agreement and shall report to the Congress not later than December 31 of each year on the effect the low-enriched uranium delivered under the Russian HEU Agreement is having on the domestic uranium mining, conversion, and enrichment industries, and the operation of the gaseous diffusion plants. Such report shall include a description of actions taken or proposed to be taken by the President to prevent or mitigate any material adverse impact on such industries or any loss of employment at the gaseous diffusion plants as a result of the Russian HEU Agreement.

(C) more than 800,000 separative work units contained in low-enriched uranium transferred under this subsection in any calendar year.

(d) INVENTORY SALES.—(1) In addition to the transfers authorized under subsections (c) and (e), the Secretary may, from time to time, sell natural and low-enriched uranium (including low-enriched uranium derived from highly enriched uranium) from the Department of Energy's stockpile.

(2) Except as provided in subsections (b), (c), and (e), no sale or transfer of natural or low-enriched uranium shall be made unless—

(A) the President determines that the material is not necessary for national security needs,

(B) the Secretary determines that the sale of the material will not have an adverse material impact on the domestic uranium mining, conversion, or enrichment industry, taking into account the sales of uranium under the Russian HEU Agreement and the Suspension Agreement, and

(C) the price paid to the Secretary will not be less than the fair market value of the material.

(e) GOVERNMENT TRANSFERS.—Notwithstanding subsection (d)(2), the Secretary may transfer or sell enriched uranium—

(1) to a Federal agency if the material is transferred for the use of the receiving agency without any resale or transfer to another entity and the material does not meet commercial specifications;

(2) to any person for national security purposes, as determined by the Secretary; or

(3) to any State or local agency or nonprofit, charitable, or educational institution for use other than the generation of electricity for commercial use.

Except as otherwise provided in this subchapter, the provisions of this subchapter and the amendments made by this subchapter shall be effective on the date of enactment of this Act.

PART I—GENERAL DEBT COLLECTION INITIATIVES

Subpart A—General Offset Authority

SEC. 5201. ENHANCEMENT OF ADMINISTRATIVE OFFSET AUTHORITY.

(a) Section 3701(c) of title 31, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(c) In sections 3716 and 3717 of this title, the term 'person' does not include an agency of the United States Government, or of a unit of general local government.''.

(b) Section 3716 of title 31, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by amending subsection (b) to read as follows:

''(b) Before collecting a claim by administrative offset, the head of an executive, legislative, or judicial agency must either—

''(1) adopt regulations on collecting by administrative offset promulgated by the Department of Justice, the General Accounting Office and/or the Department of the Treasury without change; or

''(2) prescribe independent regulations on collecting by administrative offset consistent with the regulations promulgated under paragraph (1).'';

(2) by amending subsection (c)(2) to read as follows:

''(2) when a statute explicitly prohibits using administrative 'offset' or 'setoff' to collect the claim or type of claim involved.'';

(3) by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d); and

(4) by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

''(c)(1)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B) or (C), a disbursing official of the Department of the Treasury, the Department of Defense, the United States Postal Service, or any disbursing official of the United States designated by the Secretary of the Treasury, is authorized to offset the amount of a payment which a payment certifying agency has certified to the disbursing official for disbursement by an amount equal to the amount of a claim which a creditor agency has certified to the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to this subsection.

''(B) An agency that designates disbursing officials pursuant to section 3321(c) of this title is not required to certify claims arising out of its operations to the Secretary of the Treasury before such agency's disbursing officials offset such claims.

''(C) Payments certified by the Department of Education under a program administered by the Secretary of Education under title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965, as amended, shall not be subject to offset under this subsection.

''(2) Neither the disbursing official nor the payment certifying agency shall be liable—

''(A) for the amount of the offset on the basis that the underlying obligation, represented by the payment before the offset was taken, was not satisfied; or

''(B) for failure to provide timely notice under paragraph (8).

''(3)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of law (including sections 207 and 1631(d)(1) of the Act of August 14, 1935 (42 U.S.C. 407 and 1383(d)(1)), section 413(b) of Public Law 91–173 (30 U.S.C. 923(b)), and section 14 of the Act of August 29, 1935 (45 U.S.C. 231m)), all payments due under the Social Security Act, Part B of the Black Lung Benefits Act, or under any law administered by the Railroad Retirement Board shall be subject to offset under this section.

''(B) An amount of $10,000 which a debtor may receive under Federal benefit programs cited under subparagraph (A) within a 12-month period shall be exempt from offset under this subsection. In applying the $10,000 exemption, the disbursing official shall—

''(i) apply a prorated amount of the exemption to each periodic benefit payment to be made to the debtor during the applicable 12-month period; and

''(ii) consider all benefit payments made during the applicable 12-month period which are exempt from offset under this subsection as part of the $10,000 exemption.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the amount of a periodic benefit payment shall be the amount after any reduction or deduction required under the laws authorizing the program under which such payment is authorized to be made (including any reduction or deduction to recover any overpayment under such program).

''(C) The Secretary of the Treasury shall exempt means-tested programs when notified by the head of the respective agency. The Secretary may exempt other payments from offset under this subsection upon the written request of the head of a payment certifying agency. A written request for exemption of other payments must provide justification for the exemption under thestandards prescribed by the Secretary. Such standards shall give due consideration to whether offset would tend to interfere substantially with or defeat the purposes of the payment certifying agency's program.

''(D) The provisions of sections 205(b)(1) and 1631(c)(1) of the Social Security Act shall not apply to any offset executed pursuant to this section against benefits authorized by either title II or title XVI of the Social Security Act.

''(4) The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to charge a fee sufficient to cover the full cost of implementing this subsection. The fee may be collected either by the retention of a portion of amounts collected pursuant to this subsection, or by billing the agency referring or transferring the claim. Fees charged to the agencies shall be based only on actual offsets completed. Fees charged under this subsection concerning delinquent claims may be considered as costs pursuant to section 3717(e) of this title. Fees charged under this subsection shall be deposited into the 'Account' determined by the Secretary of the Treasury in accordance with section 3711(g) of this title, and shall be collected and accounted for in accordance with the provisions of that section.

''(5) The Secretary of the Treasury may disclose to a creditor agency the current address of any payee and any data related to certifying and authorizing such payment in accordance with section 552a of title 5, United States Code, even when the payment has been exempt from offset. Where payments are made electronically, the Secretary is authorized to obtain the current address of the debtor/payee from the institution receiving the payment. Upon request by the Secretary, the institution receiving the payment shall report the current address of the debtor/payee to the Secretary.

''(6) The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to prescribe such rules, regulations, and procedures as the Secretary of the Treasury deems necessary to carry out the purposes of this subsection. The Secretary shall consult with the heads of affected agencies in the development of such rules, regulations, and procedures.

''(7)(A) Any Federal agency that is owed by a named person a past-due legally enforceable non-tax debt that is over 180 days delinquent (other than any past-due support), including non-tax debt administered by a third party acting as an agent for the Federal Government, shall notify the Secretary of the Treasury of all such non-tax debts for purposes of offset under this subsection.

''(B) An agency may delay notification under subparagraph (A) with respect to a debt that is secured by bond or other instruments in lieu of bond, or for which there is another specific repayment source, in order to allow sufficient time to either collect the debt through normal collection processes (including collection by internal administrative offset) or render a final decision on any protest filed against the claim.

''(8) The disbursing official conducting the offset shall notify the payee in writing of—

''(A) the occurrence of an offset to satisfy a past-due legally enforceable debt, including a description of the type and amount of the payment otherwise payable to the debtor against which the offset was executed;

''(B) the identity of the creditor agency requesting the offset; and

''(C) a contact point within the creditor agency that will handle concerns regarding the offset.''.

Where the payment to be offset is a periodic benefit payment, the disbursing official shall take reasonable steps, as determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, to provide the notice to the payee not later than the date on which the payee is otherwise scheduled to receive the payment, or as soon as practical thereafter, but no later than the date of the offset. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, the failure of the debtor to receive such notice shall not impair the legality of such offset.

''(9) A levy pursuant to the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall take precedence over requests for offset received from other agencies.''.

(c) Section 3701(a) of title 31, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

''(c) NOTICE OF CANCELLATION.—The foreclosure trustee shall file a notice of the cancellation in the same place and manner provided for the filing of the notice of foreclosure sale under section 3406(a).

''§ 3408. Stay

''If, prior to the time of sale, foreclosure proceedings under this subchapter are stayed in any manner, including the filing of bankruptcy, no person may thereafter cure the default under the provisions of section 3407(a)(2). If the default is not cured at the time a stay is terminated, the foreclosure trustee shall proceed to sell the security property as provided in this subchapter.

''§ 3409. Conduct of sale; postponement

''(a) SALE PROCEDURES.—Foreclosure sale pursuant to this subchapter shall be at public auction and shall be scheduled to begin at a time between the hours of 9:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. local time. The foreclosure sale shall be held at the location specified in the notice of foreclosure sale, which shall be a location where real estate foreclosure auctions are customarily held in the county or one of the counties in which the property to be sold is located or at a courthouse therein, or upon the property to be sold. Sale of security property situated in two or more counties may be held in any one of the counties in which any part of the security property is situated. The foreclosure trustee may designate the order in which multiple tracts of security property are sold.

''(b) BIDDING REQUIREMENTS.—Written one-price sealed bids shall be accepted by the foreclosure trustee, if submitted by the agency head or other persons for entry by announcement by the foreclosure trustee at the sale. The sealed bids shall be submitted in accordance with the terms set forth in the notice of foreclosure sale. The agency head or any other person may bid at the foreclosure sale, even if the agency head or other person previously submitted a written one-price bid. The agency head may bid a credit against the debt due without the tender or payment of cash. The foreclosure trustee may serve as auctioneer, or may employ an auctioneer who may be paid from the sale proceeds. If an auctioneer is employed, the foreclosure trustee is not required to attend the sale. The foreclosure trustee or an auctioneer may bid as directed by the agency head.

''(c) POSTPONEMENT OF SALE.—The foreclosure trustee shall have discretion, prior to or at the time of sale, to postpone the foreclosure sale. The foreclosure trustee may postpone a sale to a later hour the same day by announcing or posting the new time and place of the foreclosure sale at the time and place originally scheduled for the foreclosure sale. The foreclosure trustee may instead postpone the foreclosure sale for not fewer than 9 nor more than 31 days, by serving notice that the foreclosure sale has been postponed to a specified date, and the notice may include any revisions the foreclosure trustee deems appropriate. The notice shall be served by publication, mailing, and posting in accordance with section 3406 (b) and (c), except that publication may be made on any of three separate days prior to the new date of the foreclosure sale, and mailing may be made at any time at least 7 days prior to the new date of the foreclosure sale.

''(d) LIABILITY OF SUCCESSFUL BIDDER WHO FAILS TO COMPLY.—The foreclosure trustee may require a bidder to make a cash deposit before the bid is accepted. The amount or percentage of the cash deposit shall be stated by the foreclosure trustee in the notice of foreclosure sale. A successful bidder at the foreclosure sale who fails to comply with the terms of the sale shall forfeit the cash deposit or, at the election of the foreclosure trustee, shall be liable to the agency on a subsequent sale of the property for all net losses incurred by the agency as a result of such failure.

''(e) EFFECT OF SALE.—Any foreclosure sale held in accordance with this subchapter shall be conclusively presumed to have been conducted in a legal, fair, and commercially reasonable manner. The sale price shall be conclusively presumed to constitute the reasonably equivalent value of the security property.

''§ 3410. Transfer of title and possession

''(a) DEED.—After receipt of the purchase price in accordance with the terms of the sale as provided in the notice of foreclosure sale, the foreclosure trustee shall execute and deliver to the purchaser a deed conveying the security property to the purchaser that grants and conveys title to the security property without warranty or covenants to the purchaser. The execution of the foreclosure trustee's deed shall have the effect of conveying all of the right, title, and interest in the security property covered by the mortgage. Notwithstanding any other law to the contrary, the foreclosure trustee's deed shall be a conveyance of the security property and not a quitclaim. No judicial proceeding shall be required ancillary or supplementary to the procedures provided in this subchapter to establish the validity of the conveyance.

''(b) DEATH OF PURCHASER PRIOR TO CONSUMMATION OF SALE.—If a purchaser dies before execution and delivery of the deed conveying the security property to the purchaser, the foreclosure trustee shall execute and deliver the deed to the representative of the purchaser's estate upon payment of the purchase price in accordance with the terms of sale. Such delivery to the representative of the purchaser's estate shall have the same effect as if accomplished during the lifetime of the purchaser.

''(c) PURCHASER CONSIDERED BONA FIDE PURCHASER WITHOUT NOTICE.—The purchaser of property under this subchapter shall be presumed to be a bona fide purchaser without notice of defects, if any, in the title conveyed to the purchaser.

''(2) If the person to whom such surplus is to be paid cannot be located, or if the surplus available is insufficient to pay all claimants and the claimants cannot agree on the distribution of the surplus, that portion of the sale proceeds may be deposited by the foreclosure trustee with an appropriate official authorized under law to receive funds under such circumstances. If such a procedure for the deposit of disputed funds is not available, and the foreclosure trustee files a bill of interpleader or is sued as a stakeholder to determine entitlement to such funds, the foreclosure trustee's necessary costs in taking or defending such action shall be deducted first from the disputed funds.

''§ 3414. Deficiency judgment
