Vol. 157

WASHINGTON, MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 2011

No. 144

Senate

The Senate met at 3:30 p.m. and was called to order by the Honorable CHRISTOPHER COONS, a Senator from the State of Delaware.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Sovereign God, our lips sing Your praises and our souls rejoice in You. We pause now in prayer to enter Your throne room and seek Your face. Thank You for the opportunity You give our lawmakers to protect our freedoms and to share with others the hope that is ours as a free people. Use them to increase joy and peace in our world and to bring hope to the hearts of the dispossessed. Help our Senators to see more clearly the spiritual values that are the heritage and guide for this land we love. Let their thoughts, words, and actions be acceptable to You today and always, O Lord, our strength and our Redeemer.

Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable CHRISTOPHER COONS led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. INOUE).

The assistant legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, September 26, 2011.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable CHRISTOPHER COONS, a Senator from the State of Delaware, to perform the duties of the Chair.

DANIEL K. INOUE,
President pro tempore.

Mr. COONS thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. REID. Mr. President, following leader remarks, the Senate will be in a period of morning business until 4:30 p.m. At that time the Senate will resume consideration of the motion to concur in the House message to accompany H.R. 2608, the continuing resolution. The filing deadline for second-degree amendments to the House message is 5 p.m. At 5:30 p.m. there will be a cloture vote on the House message with the Reid of Nevada amendment.

DISASTER RELIEF

Mr. REID. Mr. President, 2 weeks ago the Senate passed a bipartisan bill to fund the Federal Emergency Management Agency, known as FEMA. For 2 weeks House Republicans have been sitting on that bill and taking no action. The House of Representatives has refused to act on a bipartisan bill to fund FEMA for the next year. Not only have they not moved that bill in any way but they left town. The House of Representatives, as we speak, on the eve of the government shutting down next Saturday, just a few days from now, and with FEMA on the verge of having no money, left. They are gone. They are not in Washington. It is hard to negotiate with people who are not here. It is hard to do legislation when one part of our bicameral legislature is not here.

Democrats are not giving up on funding FEMA and keeping our government open. We are here. The Senate is in session. The House Republican bill that would have killed 45,000 American jobs did not have the votes last week to pass the Senate. It was not even close. There were 36 votes, but that does not mean we have to shut down the government or abandon Americans in need. Democrats have made a good-faith effort to compromise.

Today the Senate will consider compromise legislation to fund FEMA and keep the government open without killing jobs. Our compromise includes a clean continuing resolution, a bill to fund the government for the next few weeks. Republicans in both Chambers have already agreed to and voted for the funding levels in this continuing resolution, so this should not be a controversial vote for them; they have already voted for it.

The legislation also includes $3.65 billion in funding for FEMA, which will give American communities ravaged by floods, wildfires, tornadoes, and other disasters the help they need. We know House Republicans support that funding level as well since they voted for it last week. Democrats would have given FEMA more, as we did with our vote last week.

It is interesting; President Obama has declared disasters in 48 of the 50 States this year. Unfortunately, though, this bill will force us to revisit this issue in a few weeks when FEMA funds will be depleted again. But this compromise legislation will cure FEMA's immediate needs. I urge my colleagues to do what is right and support this good-faith compromise to help disaster victims now. In effect, we are waiting for the House to take action on the bill that funds everything for a year, which they should do. But in the meantime, we have the opportunity here to vote today on legislation that takes the level that has already passed the House. I do not know how much more we could compromise or how much more fair we could be. I urge my colleagues to do what is right and support this good-faith compromise to help disaster victims and help them now.

The folks on the ground in States that have been hard hit by disasters, people who have seen the devastation firsthand, are all saying the same thing: There is no more time to waste. The U.S. Conference of Mayors has begged us to act, a bipartisan group of Governors has pleaded with us to act, and tens of thousands of Americans in every State in the Union are demanding we act. Republicans must not continue to block FEMA, blocking them from getting the resources it needs to help disaster victims.

This compromise legislation should satisfy House Republicans and includes their own much lower FEMA funding number. It satisfies Democrats because it does not include a $1.5 billion cut that would kill jobs. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers have warned us that this cut would kill 45,000 jobs at a time when our economy and our country can least afford it.

Here is what the Chamber of Commerce has said. The Chamber of Commerce is not a lapdog for Democrats. I appreciate the work they do. But certainly we need to listen to what they are saying, and my Republican colleagues need listen to what they are saying. This is a direct quote:

This loan program promotes manufacturing in the U.S. and is an important component of America's energy security.

Promotes manufacturing.

Here is what the National Association of Manufacturers said, also certainly not out there promoting Democrats all the time. They try to be fair. The National Association of Manufacturers:

Defunding [this program] would hurt manufacturers and their employees.

How much more direct could it be? Putting this offset in here is absolutely wrong. Democrats believe and American auto producers agree you should not have to choose between saying no to disaster victims and killing American jobs.

As you can see, this legislation is fair to both sides. It will get disaster victims the help they need without killing jobs. It is a commonsense solution that should pass both Chambers with bipartisan support. We will vote on it shortly. I am cautiously optimistic that my Republican colleagues here in the Senate will not force a government shutdown. By not voting for our bill, that is what it is.

Earlier this month when the Senate passed bipartisan legislation funding FEMA, which I talked about earlier, 10 Republicans joined Democrats in voting for the bill. It would have given FEMA nearly twice the funding this compromise legislation gives FEMA. At a time when those 10 Republicans said they believed disaster relief should be immune from partisan politics, they believe their constituents should not wait a moment longer for help, I can only assume those Republicans are as angry as I am over the delays by their Republican colleagues in the House. In the week since that vote—it has not been long, a very short period of time, a matter of days—the disasters have not gone away in the home States of Missouri, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Maine, Nevada, North Dakota, Alaska, Florida, Pennsylvania. These are the States where Republican Senators voted for this bill, and rightfully so. Roads and bridges, homes, schools, in those States and many others must still be repaired and replaced. In fact, millions of dollars of this restoration work—most of it—has been stopped in those 10 States. Work on nearly $\frac{1}{2}$ billion worth of reconstruction nationwide has been delayed because FEMA is out of money.

Even with construction projects at risk in communities that were only just beginning to get back on their feet, FEMA's disaster fund will still run out of money this week. As to what date, that is debatable. FEMA has devoted every penny in its coffers to pay for food and shelter for families who lost their homes in major disasters in the last few months. There is not a dime left for anything else. Even now that money is going to run dry if we do not do something quickly. That is why I am hopeful Republicans will do the right thing today.

We must remember that we are not talking about zeros on a budget spreadsheet. FEMA takes care of people who have lost their moms and dads, sons and daughters, spouses and friends and others. Without additional funding, thousands of people who have lost literally everything they have owned will be forced to go without food and shelter. The reconstruction will be delayed in communities where homes, schools, roads have been wiped off the map by tragedy so terrible it is difficult to comprehend.

I brought a chart here to show some of the devastation. The upper lefthand corner is a picture of part of Joplin, MO. There is some of it that is wiped out. You see a few structures and cars left in the rubble. The fire is still burning. This picture was taken just hours after that storm hit.

I have talked on the floor about the windstorm, the winds of almost 300 miles an hour—I said, winds of 300 miles an hour, not almost. One of my Senator friends came to me and said, that could not be true; I do not think that is true. I knew I was right because in the last week or 10 days I went to a briefing with the National Science Foundation. They put forward some of the new things they have invented and are now developing, and one of those is to gauge how hard the wind blows. It is interesting to note that we have a number of recorded storms blowing more than 300 miles an hour. On this one they do not have the exact number down, but probably that. This is one of the worst storms to ever hit our country.

Here is a picture of Nags Head, NC. This is Hurricane Irene. It not only washed homes out to sea, it washed other facilities out to sea and devastated homes underwater. You can see the picture of the two people sitting on those steps. That was probably one of the seaside homes. It could have been a structure right on the coast, but it is gone. The home has been washed into the sea. It is not only in North Carolina but other places.

You can see here in the lower right-hand corner a small picture of the fires in Texas. The fires in Texas burned more than 2,000 homes. They have had thousands of fires in Texas. Look at it. You can see in the background there are homes burning. It is hard to comprehend the destruction that took place there.

Cairo, IL, is a unique place because it is spelled like Cairo, but they pronounce it "Kay-row." That is a picture of Cairo, IL. It is a good-sized city. The Mississippi River has overflowed its banks. It swept away everything in its path. This is more important than politics. Tornadoes, hurricanes, droughts, floods are just some of the devastation that has affected our citizens.

Here we are, having passed a bill and sent it to the House. They have done nothing with it. We have overwhelming bipartisan support here, and they are gone. They had that 2 weeks ago, and they are gone. What we are doing here should be more important than partisan posturing for every Member of the Republican Party—and, frankly, every Member of the Democratic Party. I know it is to me.

President Truman once said:

America was built on courage, on imagination and an unbeatable determination to do the job at hand.

If there were ever a time when we have the obligation to do the job at hand, it is here. And to think that work in Joplin, MO, has basically come to a standstill or work in Nags Head, NC, has come to a standstill or in Cairo, IL, and, of course, all through Texas—only a few of the projects as a result of Hurricane Irene and Tropical Storm Lee are being worked on now.

So I don't think anyone can understand the devastation unless one has been there. I know I can't. No amount of money can ever replace what the people of Joplin or Cairo have lost. When I say "unless a person has been there," I am trying to be as empathetic as I can, but I have never been involved in a flood such as that, anywhere near that, and certainly not the fires we have seen, not a tornado, not a tropical storm. So no amount of money can ever replace what the people of these devastated areas have lost, but at least we can help them get back on their feet. We can help them start over. That is what FEMA does. That is what FEMA's job is. So it is up to us to get the funds to FEMA so they can do their job.

Would the Chair announce the business for the day.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will be in a period of morning business until 4:30 p.m., with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The Senator from Louisiana.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I wish to speak for up to 15 minutes, and I may extend my time as the debate goes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

FEMA FUNDING

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I wish to follow up on the remarks of Leader REID by reminding everyone how unfortunate but in some ways necessary this situation is.

This whole debate, in my view, is worth having. It is unfortunate it is so close to the end of the year because the Senate actually offered a bill, as the Presiding Officer may remember, earlier in September to try to avoid getting to this last minute. But this whole controversy started just a few days after Hurricane Irene had raked the east coast and wreaked havoc from North Carolina, through Connecticut, into Vermont and New Hampshire, and people are still reeling. The way this controversy started was Representative CANTOR said: Before we can provide help, we need to find an offset in the budget. In other words, before we can help the victims of Irene—the thousands of homes that were flooded, the electrical wires on the ground, the businesses flooded out—we have to go to Washington and find a program to cut. I strongly objected then, and I have objected every day since then to that Cantor doctrine. So this is an argument and a debate worth having.

This could have been completely avoided if, the day after, Representative CANTOR, with all the outcry from his own district and newspapers around the country, many of which editorialized against that position, would have just said: I am sorry, I made a mistake. And I have had to say that in my political career: I am sorry, I made a mistake. But instead of saying that, he doubled down, and he doubled down on the backs of people from Pennsylvania, to New York, and actually to Louisiana and Mississippi because it is our projects that have been stopped for the last 6 weeks. FEMA, as far as Louisiana is concerned, was out of money 6 weeks ago.

This is what the Cantor doctrine looks like to a very clever cartoonist. I am going to put this up in my office and keep it forever. It says:

Welcome to the Republican disaster relief hotline. At the tone, please tell us the emergency and how you plan to offset the cost of your rescue.

Here is Grandmother sitting on the roof, with her little cat on the chimney, with her television and her cane, calling FEMA.

I am the appropriations chair of this committee, as my colleagues know. It is a good thing I am chairing this appropriations committee because I happen to know a lot about disaster relief, having to lead the effort for the gulf coast in the wake of Katrina, Rita, Gustav, and Ike. This is not a little matter, as some of the press reported over the weekend. I have read most of the editorials from coast to coast. Some have written: Why is Congress arguing? This is such a minor matter. I don't think the $40 billion it took to rebuild the gulf coast is a minor matter, and I don't think any taxpayer in America would think $40 billion is a minor matter.

This Cantor doctrine must be rejected. I am not the only one who believes this. There are wonderful articles and editorials in papers all across the country. I am going to read some of them today. I am so glad people were working through the weekend and focusing on this debate.

From Colorado, the Denver Post writes:

... and some Members of Congress are so bent on budget cutting—

They are referring to the Republicans, of course—that they happily seize the opportunity to demand concessions, despite the larger impact on our struggling economy. In this case, it is demanding that money for the Federal Emergency Management Agency to provide emergency disaster assistance to communities hit by flood, fire, and other manner of natural disasters, be offset by comparable cuts to the Federal budget. Demanding such offsets is unprecedented in terms of emergency relief, and it has again manufactured the prospects of a shutdown. To be clear, we are not supporting a blank check—

And neither am I. I have been an appropriator since I was 23 years old. I am 56. I understand balanced budgets and debt limits and curbing government spending. I have been a part of those efforts. The last time we had a balanced budget, a Democrat was in the White House—Bill Clinton—as the Presiding Officer knows. We understand there is no such thing as a free lunch or a blank check, and we are going to pay for these disasters, but we don't have to pay for them while Grandmother is on the roof. We can figure out how to pay for it later and send help to her now.

The article goes on to say:

... but we think any near-term spending cuts are best dealt with by the super committee as opposed to a symbolic standoff that sends ripple effects beyond Washington.

This is the Brattleboro Vermont Reformer:

Though individuals eligible for Federal disaster aid and State and city governments recouping emergency response costs are still receiving funds, projects dating back as far as Hurricane Katrina are once again waiting for money. How did House majority leader Eric Cantor of Virginia respond? He said: "Change like this is hard."

The paper goes on to say:

However, not as hard as waiting for power lines to get restrung along the Auger Hole Road, wondering when, if ever, you will be able to move back into your waterlogged home or when your road might become passable again. Though Congress has about a week to get everything ironed out, we can expect this argument to go down to the last minute.

I wish we weren't here at the last minute. I wish to remind everyone that the Senate passed—with a bipartisan response to this, which provided the money FEMA needed without the offset—it was passed bipartisanship with 10 Republicans and all the Democrats and sent to the House. They could have passed that bill, and we would all be gone now, with FEMA replenished, set up for the next year, and the jobs program, which is really a private sector effort to create jobs in America, would be untouched and would be moving forward.

This argument started when Representative CANTOR came up with a new tea party agenda, which is for flood victims to let FEMA know what offset can be required before they are rescued.

Other newspapers throughout the country, including Pennsylvania, say:

Much of northeast Pennsylvania needs Federal assistance to recover from flooding, but two of the region's representatives—

In this case, both Republican Representatives—offered an unacceptable condition.

They go on to say—they list the Members.

They say:

The problem isn't the Senate, which earlier had passed a bill by a positive vote that included 10 Republicans to appropriate more than $7 billion for FEMA that handles disaster relief. That fund could run dry. The House responded with a bill that would provide $3.7 billion, but only if two loan programs for energy development projects were rescinded.

Senator HARRY REID, they say, "goes on to offer a compromise with the House." But I guess we are in the time of no compromise and take whatever hostages you can. In this case, the tea party Republicans want to take hostage the Grandma who is on her roof asking for help.

Even the New York newspapers:

Congress shouldn't allow disaster aid for people devastated by Tropical Storm Irene to be stalled by a fight over how much is enough and how to cover the tab.

We are willing to negotiate with the House over how much. We believe our number of $6.1 billion is not enough for the year, and I think the records will show as we move forward that I am accurate. But given the situation we are in, we don't need to fight over that amount because if $6.1 billion isn't enough, most certainly $3.5 billion that the House has offered isn't enough, and we can work that out later on and that is what Leader REID has offered. But requiring an offset, particularly an offset from a program that Republicans themselves supported, that was signed into law by President Bush, and that is supported by the chamber of commerce, the National Manufacturers Association, the League of Cities, the National Conference of Mayors, and an offset that has created 40,000 jobs, that is a road I don't think we should go down.

If it is a manufacturing program today that the new Cantor doctrine requires, as one of these great articles this weekend said, maybe next time we have a disaster, we will have to offer up education programs; and the next time we have a disaster, we will have to offer up a fourth of our transportation budget; and the next time we have a disaster, we will have to offer up aid to Israel; or maybe the next time we have a disaster, we will have to offer up something else. When does the offering up stop?

The worst time to negotiate how to find funding after a disaster is when emotions are high, when people are really at their sort of emotional limit, particularly the disaster victims themselves. We want to argue and debate these things when cool heads prevail and once we get the estimates. It is hard, within a week or two or three of an emergency, to even know what those estimates are. We have to wait for the insurance adjusters to go out, for the FEMA adjusters to go out, for people to even get back to their communities to assess the damage.

Believe me, I have been through this. It was months after the aftermath of Katrina before people in my city of New Orleans and in parts of my State could even get back into their neighborhoods—months. Not days, not weeks, months. I remember people along the gulf coast having to come in on foot with chainsaws to try to get back. It took them days.

That is another reason why we do not want to have to find an offset to fund disasters. We want to do a couple things. We want to budget as carefully as we can in advance. I want to answer this argument that: Oh, well, the reason Congress is in this pickle is because they did not budget for disasters. I am going to put up a chart in a minute—if staff will grab that one for me—to show that we have budgeted for disasters. We have not budgeted as adequately as we should. This has been a problem for Democratic Presidents and Republican Presidents.

But I have to say, as chair of this committee, I have doubled the amount of money—more than doubled the amount of money—in anticipation of disasters to try to get in front of it. But no one—unless they had a crystal ball—could have predicted that 48 out of 50 States would have had disasters this year in America. It is unprecedented. We would have had to have a crystal ball that was always right and never, ever wrong to be able to predict we would have had that many disasters.

What can we do in the future? I have offered to my colleagues—Senator BLUNT, Senator SNOWE, and others—that I will work with them in the future to get a bill that mandates that Democratic and Republican Presidents, regardless of party, would have to send to us—budgeted and paid for—at least a 10-year average of previous disasters.

But I have to say, even if we would have had that law in place—which is the best we can all collectively think of; and universities or businesses would recommend the same—we still would have underestimated this last year, and we still would have underestimated Katrina and Rita. That is why I am on the floor making this argument.

I know it is inconvenient for Members to have to come back this week. I know people wanted to be away this week to work in their districts. But this is an argument and a debate worth having. I hope our side will prevail, but if not, at least we put up the fight that I think is necessary to make the argument to the American people.

But even if we had a crystal ball and even if we had budgeted more than the $1.8 billion we budget every year, approximately, out of Homeland Security, look what happened when Katrina and Rita and Wilma hit. This went up to $45 billion—Katrina, Rita, and Wilma. Wilma, you will remember, was one of the storms that hit Florida. In the year before, Florida had four storms. Dennis, Ivan, Frances, and Charley hit Florida in 1 year.

I believe that is why Senator RUBIO and Senator NELSON understand the hollowness and the danger of the Cantor doctrine. Because had this doctrine been in effect when these four hurricanes hit Florida back in 2004, the people of Florida would have had to come to Congress, and before we could spend one dime to help them, we would have had to find a $3 billion offset. Mr. President, maybe we would have gone to your State and taken the money out of your transportation program or gone to my State or gone somewhere to find $3 billion, but we did not. We sent Florida their $3 billion, and we will pay for it over time.

I do not know what we would have done on the gulf coast had the people of the United States enforced the Cantor doctrine, which was to find $45 billion like that—like that—before we could have sent money to Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana or Texas. I could go on and on and on.

One of the more disappointing positions Republicans are holding, particularly Representative CANTOR, which is very disappointing, is that we have to scramble to find offsets for Americans who are in trouble, but we can just send free money to Iraq and Afghanistan. We do not have to send an offset to rebuild Iraq. We do not have to find an offset to rebuild Afghanistan. But we have to scramble around here and find an offset to help the people of our country.

Third point. Some of the House Members have stood and said: Senator LANDRIEU is wrong. We have offset emergency funding in the past. That is correct. We have offset emergency funding, but emergency funding is different than FEMA funding. We have emergencies such as dams break and levees break and the Corps of Engineers needs extra money. Over the course of time, we have, occasionally—because we want to be responsible with the budget when we can, and when we have time to figure it out, we most certainly can find offsets in programs that are not working as well. So we can eliminate that and push some of that money to emergency funding. We have done it in the military. We have done it for the Corps of Engineers. But if we do this, this will be the first time we have required an offset for FEMA funding in the history of our country.

I think it is a road we do not want to go down, and it can be avoided. We do not have to walk down this road. We can eliminate the offset completely. FEMA may—under the last 24 to 48 hours—be able to stretch their money through Friday. We can even accept the House number, which is the lower number. It is not going to be adequate. We are going to be back here literally in 8 weeks having the same debate. But they are hardheaded and insistent that they want to continue to have this debate week after week after week. But at least the $3 billion will jump-start all our programs that are stalled and many of them are in my State, which is why I am spending a lot of time on this, but I am also concerned about everybody else's State. It will give us enough money to get through Thanksgiving, maybe the first of the year. It is not going to be enough for all next year.

That is a reasonable compromise. On the side of that compromise is the Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers, four Governors of disaster-hit States—two Republicans and two Democrats—the National League of Cities, and the National Conference of Mayors. That is just to name a few.

There are editorials across the country from Pennsylvania to New York, to Louisiana. The Times-Picayune, my own newspaper, of which I am very proud, editorialized for this position that to require an offset before one can be rescued is not the American way. We do not require it when we declare war or disaster. We go ahead and send the troops, and we fund them later. I do not believe we want to go down this road.

So Leader REID has brought us back to try to work through it. Again, the Senate, earlier in September, passed a bipartisan resolution. The House rejected it for their own reason, insisting that we have an offset. We are back saying that is a wrong policy to adopt. This is not the right time in America to adopt it. If we were going to adopt it, this is definitely the wrong program to eliminate. This program has created, with the private sector—this is not government jobs. These are private sector jobs that have been created. Republican leaders in the House—and I am going to read those letters for the RECORD this afternoon again—supported the program, wrote letters to the Secretary asking for this funding to be spent in their districts, and then they turn around and offer this as an offset when it is unnecessary, unprecedented, and absolutely wrongheaded.

For the legislators, the Congress men and women along the gulf coast, it is particularly disturbing. After receiving $45 billion—Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas—after Katrina and Rita and not one penny offset while it was going on—we are all going to be paying for it for many years to come in our regular budgeting process—to then turn around and say, when the east coast needs help: Oh, no, we need to find an offset today.

That is how this argument started. I do not like to fight. I like to cooperate. I am one of nine siblings. I have two children myself. I have been happily married to my husband for 23 years. We resolve things by talking and negotiating in our home. We do not like to fight in our family.

But I have learned one thing: Some things are worth fighting for, win or lose. I have led this effort. I have been proud to lead it. I am so grateful to my colleagues on the Democratic side, both in the House and the Senate, who have spoken on this point, who have changed their schedules to support this. Win or lose, it is right to stand against the Cantor doctrine and the tea party agenda.

I guess this is where this comes from. We have never seen this before. Never have we offset a dime of FEMA funding. We have offset emergency funding, we have offset defense emergencies, Corps of Engineers emergencies, HUD community development block grant money we have offset but not FEMA.

But the Republican caucus in the House has run us right down to the wire, not willing to negotiate, not willing to even recognize the bipartisan bill we sent over there. Sometimes we say “bipartisan” around here if we have one Republican and all the Democrats. We kind of brag because we have bipartisanship. This was 10–10—Republican Senators. That is a big number today. We broke a Republican filibuster on this with 10 Republican Senators who said ERIC CANTOR was wrong. Now is not the time. We do not have to find an offset. Let's negotiate. Let's work through this. They were right. I hope they will stand strong. I hope the leadership can work this out. But, again, if we cannot, it was worth, in my view, the fight over this to say: The Cantor doctrine is dangerous for the country.

Let me just remind everyone—because I have spoken about the gulf coast—these are 48 States represented that have been hit by disasters. The only States that have been spared a natural disaster are Michigan and West Virginia. But as the Senators from Michigan will tell us, they have been experiencing their own economic disaster now for almost 6 years, an economic meltdown in Michigan. Because of the crash of the auto industry and the foreclosure disaster and the crash of some of the Wall Street banks and other banks, Michigan has been very hard hit. West Virginia is always one of our poorer States, with great assets, but they struggle all the time. So we can honestly say all 50 States are in need of help.

Why don't we help them? We have a supercommittee set up. Many of us are working hard on closing the deficit gap. We have already cut trillions, literally trillions, of dollars from this budget over the last 2 years. We have trillions more to cut and we have revenues to raise. But this time we have to find money in this budget—in this case for something that is wholly unprecedented and unnecessary—they recommend a program that is actually helping to turn around a very weak job outlook. It is creating jobs. It has created 40,000. It could create more public-private partnerships, promoting loans to auto companies that are creating new and different kinds of automobiles so we can minimize our dependence on foreign oil, we can start building again in America, we can start manufacturing again in America.

Again, it is a program—some of the newspapers reported it—Democrats support. This is a program George Bush signed into law. This is a program that Republicans and Democrats have supported. This is a program that actually works to put Americans back to work. Why would they pick this one? Why would they pick any one? But why would they pick this one? Because they wanted to pick a fight, and they knew we were not just going to say: OK, fine. So we did not pick this fight. I did not pick this fight. Representative CANTOR started it when he decided on a Cantor doctrine that would make disaster victims have to find an offset before they could be helped.

I am going to close with where I started, with this cartoon that says it all:

Welcome to the Republican disaster relief hotline. At the tone, please tell us the emergency and how you plan to offset the cost of your rescue. . . .

This is not America. We have gone too far. If this kind of government is on the tea party agenda, I suggest they remove that item for consideration. This is not the way we operate our government in the United States. We are there for people in their time of need.

We do not ask them to find an offset. We will pay for this. We are working to have our budget balanced. But we do not put this kind of pressure on tax-paying Americans, who hardly ask us for anything. But when their home is washed away, when their business is destroyed, they expect FEMA to be there and they do not have to scramble around with their congressional delegation or their mayors or their counsel members or their local representatives to wring their hands and say: What program can we suggest Congress cut so we can get our meals today or our shelter for next week?

It is not the way we do business. I hope as Members come back tonight to talk about this, we can find a way forward, keep our government operating, and do what is right for Americans and our country.

I yield the floor and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. LANDRIEU. There are other Members who are coming down to speak. But while I have this time, I wanted to just add a few other comments to the RECORD.

First of all, over the weekend, there were some reports and some statements made that this was a manufactured crisis by one of our colleagues on one of the big talk shows on Sunday morning.

First of all, that infers this is not a real crisis, that it was just made up because we enjoy fighting here in Washington. Nothing could be further from the truth.

This is not fun to do, but sometimes this is necessary. Sometimes it is necessary to draw sharp lines between policies because the outcome affects people's lives. Where would we have been along the gulf coast had that Cantor doctrine been in effect and used when Katrina hit the gulf coast? Instead of New Orleans and Biloxi and large portions of the gulf coast being rebuilt today, we would still probably be debating where we were going to find the money to do the work. Now, that is No. 1.

No. 2, the crisis may not be real for the whole country right now, today, as we speak on Monday, but I promise, for people in many States—and I will find this document which I have used several times in debate on the Senate floor—it is pages and pages, too numerous to mention—they are already having a crisis because these line items and numbers represent projects that have already been pink-slipped, shut down.

Government is still operating through this week, and we are going to work this out. We are not going to let the government shut down over this. I promise you—if I have anything to say about it. I might not, and my caucus may overrule me, but it is worth arguing about to try to see if we can come to some reasonable compromise, which Leader REID has offered.

But there is already a crisis. For those who think this is manufactured, why don't they spend time this afternoon calling some of these small businesspeople who have shut down their operations?

They were building a road in Alaska, and they stopped because FEMA stopped their funding weeks and weeks ago. This isn't made up by MARY LANDRIEU. We can call Craig Fugate or anybody on this list if anyone thinks this is manufactured. They have stopped their projects because FEMA technically ran out of money months ago. They are operating on fumes. They stopped paying for all of their regular work that was going on rebuilding lots of places in America so they could give out their emergency aid to the east coast. They had no choice because we didn't give them enough money to make it through the year.

I sent a letter to the leadership on this issue months ago because I know this; I am the chair of the committee. They keep saying to me: Senator, we are running out of money. I have been saying this—and I will present letters for the RECORD. Anyone who follows this knows this is true. This is not a manufactured crisis.

This whole issue started when Representative CANTOR decided that the way to fix this problem was to cut something in the budget and have to offset something in order for us to move forward, and then the gears stopped. It was like he just threw a wrench in the gears. Everything was going along quite smoothly.

I know the American people are tired of the fighting and the name calling. I am, proudly, a centrist Democrat. I am still proud to say that. I have negotiated on probably every major deal that has been done—or compromised. I have been a part of almost every one for the 15 years I have been here. Some people don't like that about me, but I think that is good, and I am proud of it.

I most certainly am not one of the ones who like to start a partisan brawl just for the heck of it. This is an important principle. The principle is this: Should Americans have to scramble to find offsets while the water is rising and the wind is blowing, when we don't require the same for emergencies overseas? We don't scramble to find offsets when a famine happens or a drought hits in Africa. We send money because that is what Americans do. Yet our people are calling for help at home and somehow—this is on the tea party agenda—before we can send them help we have to find an offset in Washington, an offset that everybody agrees to. Good luck.

There are very few things here that two people agree to, let alone 535. If I had to do that, Mr. President, for Katrina and Rita, I don't know what I would have done.

We are in a crisis. It may not be for everybody in the country right now, like it could be next week if the government shuts down, which it will not. We are going to find a way forward. But for these people it has been a crisis for several months. Bridge projects are shut down, libraries are shut down, and all the workers have been sent home or told not to expect a paycheck on this project. I don't know how many people will continue to work without receiving a paycheck. Maybe some people are still doing that.

No. 2, we sent $1.3 trillion to Iraq and Afghanistan in the last 7 years—$1.3 trillion, not requiring one offset. Yet people in Florida are looking for help as are people in Vermont, and the Cantor doctrine says we have to find cuts in the budget.

The Senator from Florida wants to speak. I want to be accurate in this debate, so I want to correct one thing I said. I said that never before have we offset FEMA money. My staff corrected me and said that one time in history, in recent memory, we did that for a small amount of FEMA money when President Clinton was the President because the Republicans had just come into power and argued about it back then. President Clinton, to his credit, found an offset they could agree to, and they did it.

I don't think we should make this a routine exercise. It is not right for the flood victims or the taxpayers in the long run. Eventually, we will find a way to pay for these things, so let's reason together.

HARRY REID sent us a reasonable compromise. The House should focus on this and try to take this compromise—if we can. It has been worth discussing because this is going to go into law one way or the other, and we are going to be living with the consequences. Those of us on the gulf coast who are in hurricane alley—I will show this chart, and it is quite disturbing. I will put it up again.

This chart shows from 1851 to 2008. These lines represent every hurricane that has hit the lower 48. These large colored lines are Katrina, Gustav, Rita, and Ike. Most certainly, along the east coast people should know that this is just what happened. There was also a tornado chart that showed where the tornadoes hit, and there was one for the earthquakes. Every part of the country at some time experiences a disaster. We don't have to run up to Washington and gut the education programs overnight or gut our transportation programs overnight or try to call a special committee meeting to find out where we can come up with $1 billion by Friday to send to FEMA. We send it, and then we make those decisions over time. It is the way any corporation would operate, it is the way any family would operate, and it is the way our government should operate.

Again, if we take this Cantor doctrine to its ridiculous extreme, we would have firetrucks screaming down the street while a house is on fire, and before they turn the hose on, they would ask the family to come out and they would ask them what they should cut in the city budget before they turned on the water. We can only make reasonable assumptions about what disasters there will be—their frequency and their rate. If we go under a little bit, then we have to provide the money until we can fix it in the long run.

I am going to yield the floor. I thank the Members for engaging in this debate.

Reid amendment No. 660 (to amendment No. 659), of a perfecting nature.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the time until 5:30 will be equally divided and controlled between the two leaders or their designees.

The Senator from Florida is recognized.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, I want to comment before the Senator from Louisiana leaves the floor. It is kind of like we have seen this movie before. If I recall, it was Friday. The Senator from Louisiana and I were out here with this chart talking about the same thing, showing all of these paths of hurricanes and how those folks who live along the gulf and the Atlantic coast understand what natural disaster is.

We are playing with people's lives when we threaten not to fund FEMA, which can respond to these. How many of these do we have to have to get through to these decisionmakers who are blocking the funding of FEMA because of some ideological position? There are people out there who are hurting in Tuscaloosa, AL; in Joplin, MO, all throughout New England, and along the Atlantic coast—and who knows what is going to happen? Hurricane season goes until the end of November.

I want to tell the Senator from Louisiana how much I appreciate her bringing this to our attention over and over again. We need to remind people that there are certain things that only the government can do, and this is one of them. When people are in need, they have to rely on emergency functions from their government. That is one of the main reasons of having a government. Hopefully, that message will get through.

Mr. President, I want to speak about, basically, this budget conundrum in which we find ourselves. In a little less than an hour, we are going to vote on a motion to cut off debate just to get to the bill that would continue to fund the government after this Friday so that the government can operate.

Speaking of movies that we have seen before, didn't we see this movie back in early August? Then it was over a different question of whether the government could continue to pay its bills. But in essence it was the same thing. In that case it was the lifting of the debt ceiling. In this case it is to keep the appropriations going, starting October 1.

So if we have seen this movie before, didn't Senators and Members of Congress go home in August? And didn't they hear from their people, and the people said: What in the world are you all doing? What are you thinking? Have you guys gone off the rails, that you would threaten the shutdown of the government and all the necessary functions of the government, which would then imperil our economy more already than it is now imperiled in this recession?

One would think Members of Congress got that message. Yet here we are again, in late September, after having gone through that drill in early August. We are going through the same thing again—this brinkmanship, this partisan ideological brinkmanship that has all the vestiges of being all balled up in electioneering politics and a Presidential election. That is not any way to run a country.

Let me tell you why I think—if the folks out across America will start letting their elected representatives know they have had enough—why we might see some change. With that cataclysmic confrontation we went through in early August, in order to get the government to pay its bills, we set up a structure—a process in law—where there was immediate debt reduction of some $1 trillion, but there is supposed to be—and I am rounding—another $1½ trillion done by this supercommittee that is supposed to report by Thanksgiving, and then we are to vote on it. Remember, a week and a half ago, the Presiding Officer and I and 34 other Senators—Republicans and Democrats alike—went to the Senate press gallery and we stood and said: We want a big deal of deficit reduction. A lot of us were suggesting what we want is tax reform in the process, getting rid of a lot of the clutter in the Tax Code that is so inefficient in the way of tax preference to individual special interests, which have grown exponentially over the last 20 years, since the last tax reform measure, which was 1986, and instead utilize that revenue, which would be revenue gained, to simplify the Tax Code and lower rates. The actuaries tell us that would, in fact, crank up the engine of growth and from that growth would come additional revenue.

Why is that so hard? Every constituent I have talked to seems to think that is a fairly good idea. You know what they say? They say it sounds like common sense.

Mr. President, I see other Senators on the floor who wish to speak. I want the Senator from New York to know I have been speaking to some of his constituents—the titans on Wall Street—who are saying the same thing: What in the world are you guys doing? Have you all lost your minds?

We have an opportunity to do something. If we will have as our north star some common sense, bipartisanship, and keeping in mind what is good for the country and not for our particular little ideology, then we can get something done.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. First, Mr. President, let me thank my colleague from Florida. He knew I was waiting, and I know he cut short his remarks, so I appreciate that. But more importantly than that, I appreciate his insight, his articulation of our situation, and his desire to help the people of Florida. Nobody works harder for the people of Florida than the Senator from Florida. They know disaster just about better than anybody else, given their geographic situation. So his fight for FEMA dollars is a fight for every citizen of that great State of Florida, where I must say many of my former constituents now reside, so I have a special care about Florida as well. I thank him for both his courtesy and his insightfulness.

FEMA runs out of money very soon. Already, recovery projects in more than 40 States have been halted so FEMA can focus their last dollars on responding to the latest disasters. To have FEMA not working in Joplin, MO, where we all saw the pictures, and because of the dangers that Hurricanes Irene and Lee created, is unheard of in this country. It is unheard of.

The Senate has already passed the bipartisan bill to replenish FEMA's coffers, providing $7 billion in immediate relief, not just for FEMA but the Army Corps. I can tell you that in my State we need Army Corps relief as well as FEMA relief because so many of our rivers have changed course. They have flooded. I think I mentioned earlier the Erie Canal—the locks—are no longer by the river because the storm's force changed the course of the Mohawk, so the river is here and the locks are here—the great historic Erie Canal. So we provided this $7 billion.

A reasonable person might say—all our constituents are saying—to get government to work, the most logical thing to do would be quick passage by the House so we could begin to get those dollars out the door. Instead, House Republicans decided to take emergency disaster aid and leverage it to force cuts to a jobs program they themselves used to support. If there has ever been a case of playing politics, that is it. If they don't like this jobs program, fine, fight it out in the regular course of business, but don't hold FEMA dollars hostage to cut jobs. The American people don't want that choice. Help those who are in the middle of a disaster. Is the only way we can help them to cut jobs in Michigan or Louisiana or other States, at a time when our country is hurting for jobs? That is not America, and that is not what our constituents have asked us to do. The jobs program they want to end, before they are willing to provide more disaster aid, is not some radical program. It was started under the Bush administration. It was passed with a bipartisan majority.

I understand their anguish. We have to cut funding. But we don't have to do it like this. We don't have to do it on the backs of the people of Schoharie County, whose homes have been blown away, or the people of Binghamton, who are in shelters because there is no rental housing for them. We don't have to do it on their backs. That is not fair. If our Republican colleagues want to have a fight over a program they used to support but now say the circumstances have changed, fine, we should have that. That is what we are here for. But don't hold disaster aid hostage.

I want to say this, lest people think the Democratic stand is some way-out-there, leftwing stand. Guess who supports us. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers. Because they know what we are doing is right. Those are groups that are almost always supporting Republican initiatives. So when they say we are right, doesn't that send a shot across the bow to my colleagues to back off this ideological, narrow, my-way-or-the-highway position?

Most importantly, the House Republican approach would require that we kill 40,000 jobs in order to help our fellow Americans put their lives and businesses back together after this year's record disasters. That is not right, it is unprecedented, and I would say it is not the way we have done things in this country in the past.

The CR we will vote on this afternoon is a fail-safe measure. It is a bill that will keep the government running at funding levels agreed to by Democrats and Republicans in the debt ceiling negotiations. It is a good-faith effort to compromise and contains the same amount of disaster relief funding House Republicans supported.

It falls short of fully funding FEMA, as we did in the bipartisan bill passed 2 weeks ago, with 10 Republican votes, but we are working to meet our colleagues on the other side of the aisle in the middle in order to break the impasse. Will they move a little to the middle to meet us, or will they insist the only way to go is a bill that failed in this Chamber with a bipartisan vote against it of 59 to 36? Is Speaker BOEHNER saying to us a bill that fails in the Senate 59 to 36 is the only way to go, when it is so wrong and not supported by the Chamber of Commerce; when it is pitting jobholders, and the future of this country in terms of energy independence, against each other versus disaster assistance? That is not fair. The only difference between our bill and the House bill is it doesn't require the job-killing cuts the Chamber of Commerce opposes and that our fragile economy can't afford right now.

We know there has been a lot of pressure on the 10 Senate Republicans who joined us 2 weeks ago to fight full disaster funding. I hope they do not cave in to the pressure exerted by the extreme minority in the House that demands job cuts as a precondition for disaster relief. I would urge them not to do it. If they can't resist that pressure, what is their solution? They know the House bill is a dead letter here.

The path forward is clear. The Senate has already spoken on the political bill sent to us by the House. We must pass this commonsense, middle-of-the-road compromise measure that is now before the Senate. It will provide disaster aid to hard-hit communities across the country immediately and prevent an unnecessary government shutdown.

We shouldn't even be talking about shutdown. Why are we? Because the other body decided to attach disaster relief to government funding. We are not just holding jobs hostage, we are holding government funding hostage in a my-way-or-the-highway presentation take it or leave it or your government shuts down, take it or leave it or 40,000 people lose their jobs. That is not fair and that is not right.

Every aspect of our plan has already received major bipartisan support. Voting for it is the right thing to do. We must put politics aside at a time when the economy of this country is so fragile. We must avoid even coming close to a government shutdown. We must do what is right for our country. And what is right for our country is to pass the compromise measure that has had bipartisan support in the past and vote for it on the floor of the Senate in the next half hour.

One other comment. My great colleague from Louisiana has done an incredible job. She has been showing this, but in case people missed it over the last hour, it is a great little cartoon. There is a nice lady with a gray bun and little glasses talking on the telephone. There is her TV on the roof of her house, which has, obviously, been flooded. This cartoon is humorous, but I have seen flood levels up to this level on house after house after house across large parts of the eastern part of New York. She is on the phone, saying: "Welcome to the Republican disaster relief hot line. At the tone, please tell us the emergency and how you plan to offset the cost of your rescue."

When the next disaster comes and people are struggling, are we going to have to debate how much to cut education funds? In the next disaster, when people have experienced an earthquake, are we going to have to debate how to help those people while we talk about how much to cut Border Patrol funds? In the next disaster, when fires are ravaging across Texas or New Mexico or California, are we going to debate how much we have to cut food safety inspectors? That is not our way, and that is why we need to support this bill which has bipartisan elements and has been supported by Members of both parties. That bill is a compromise bill. It is the middle-of-the-road bill that is on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. President, I yield my time, and I thank my great colleague from Louisiana for the great job she has done.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana.

Ms. LANDRIEU. I thank the Senator from New York, who has been a strong clarion voice on this issue. He has helped to crystalize what this is about. He is exactly right.

I want to read into the RECORD, as the Senator from Illinois comes to speak, from several articles around the country that have editorialized exactly on the position that he ended on, and it is the point of this whole debate—whether we accept the Cantor doctrine, which requires an offset before we send help to people who are stranded or flooded out or in an ice storm or in the middle of a tornado or whether we have to have Washington cut the budget first.

The central Pennsylvania newspaper said it well. They said:

It is easy to generalize and say our government spends too much money and needs to cut all government programs. Then a tornado wipes out Joplin, MO, or a hurricane called Irene slams into the East Coast destroying countless homes and lives in Vermont or a flood devastates communities in Derry Township, Middletown and Harrisburg, PA. It is then we count on our local, state and federal governments for help and, in particular, for the federal government to support us with disaster relief. We have certainly seen this year through wind, fire and rain—the ice could be next to come—that FEMA's financial efforts cannot be tied to some sort of Congressional pay-by-the-disaster system.

We cannot decide with each new catastrophe where we will find money, stripping funds from transportation this month and education the next.

That is what this debate is about. We did not choose this fight. It was started by Representative ERIC CANTOR. There was a moment in time when he said we must offset this disaster.

Some of us stood right up and said: No, we will not.

I see the Senator from Illinois, but I sent four letters as the chair of this committee as early as February. Please don't let anyone in the press criticize me for waiting until the last minute. February 16, 2011, I sent a letter saying: Heads up. This is going to be a problem.

Not many people listened. Then I sent another letter in March, then I sent another letter in May, and then I sent another letter May 11. We are now in September. One can accuse me of a lot of things. I most certainly make mistakes, but not being ahead of this one is not one of them. I knew this was going to happen.

Here we are. This was not started by HARRY REID. It was not started by Leader DURBIN from Illinois. It was started when ERIC CANTOR said, despite the fact that we sent $1.3 trillion to Iraq and Afghanistan to build cities and communities and houses in Iraq and Afghanistan, we cannot send any money to Vermont or to New Hampshire or to Virginia—his own State, which is mind-boggling to me—until we find a program to cut. Then they cut a program that has bipartisan support that is creating jobs in America.

I will yield the floor. The Senator from Illinois always has some interesting things to add to the debate, and I appreciate his support and leadership.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BEGICH). The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. I ask unanimous consent to speak for 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, let me say to the Senator from Louisiana, she has been a clarion and consistent voice on this issue because she has seen it and lived it. Anyone representing the State of Louisiana can give a lesson to all of us about what happens when the unexpected occurs and people lose their homes, their businesses, their lives. They are uprooted.

We had some folks from New Orleans in Chicago. They were leaving New Orleans to come to one of our fabulous winters because they had nowhere to go, and I saw the look in their eyes. They did not know where to turn. At that moment in time, many people across America count on the American family. That is who we are and we represent that family in the Senate.

We stand for this country and for the families who are suffering through no fault of their own. When the Senator from Louisiana comes and tells us: Be careful when we set a standard that says before we can send the first dollar to someone who has lost their home or their business or their farm or whatever we have to come back to Washington and go through a budget debate and decide where we are going to cut—out of money for education and medical research and the like. That is not the way it has ever happened. Emergency spending is emergency spending.

I have lived through it—nothing like what my colleague went through in Louisiana, but the floods of 1993 in downstate Illinois, I was in pretty decent shape when it was over for all the sandbags I filled and pushed around with thousands of volunteers. We saw what happened. There were terrible things that happened, and I think the Senator from Louisiana would agree with me that flooding is one of the worst. It doesn't go away. It sits there destroying people's homes and everything they own, and when it finally goes away, what a mess. Also, in the Midwest, we have a little thing called a tornado. I grew up as a kid in downstate Illinois listening for the siren and heading for the basement. We did that I don't know how many times, sometimes in the middle of the night. But look at what happened to Joplin, MO. This beautiful town in Missouri was almost wiped off the map by a tornado.

What do we tell the people who survive the next day? Sorry, Congress has to meet and debate and we will get back to you? Of course not. We stand and help people—scores of volunteers, hundreds of volunteers who come in for the Red Cross and so many other agencies and all the first responders. Governors don't say: We will see if the Federal Government will pay for this before we go in and help and provide lifesaving efforts. They do it, anticipating we will stand with them.

Now Congressman CANTOR of Virginia decides there should be a new approach: We need Congress to get together and debate before we help people who are victims of disasters.

That is a serious mistake. We have to stand by people, whether they live in red States or blue States, whether they are Democrats, Republicans, Independents. We stand by one another and that is critically important.

Let me say to the Senator from Louisiana, I think the thing I noticed over the weekend in Illinois, as I traveled around, was how fed up people are with what is going on in Washington on Capitol Hill. When they see us break down into another cussing match over shutting down the Government, they say: For goodness' sake, grow up—grow up and accept your responsibility.

We are here today accepting a grown-up responsibility. The House of Representatives is not here today. I hope they are going to send a message to us that they found a solution or, if not, I hope they are planning on returning this week because we have work to do.

On Saturday, the spending for the Government ends. Once again, we face a shutdown, a shutdown which would cause unnecessary hardship to innocent people all across America. If you think you have heard this script before or watched this movie before, you have. This is the third time this year the House leadership has pushed a shutdown in front of us and said: That is it. Take it or leave it.

That is no way to run a Congress, and it is no way to run a great nation. We need to come together and agree. I will tell everyone what Senator REID, the leader on the Democratic side, did to try to reach an agreement. We had originally asked for $7 billion additional money for FEMA for next year. I will bet we need it. But Senator REID said: In an effort to compromise, I will cut that request in half. We can get back together if we need it. There was an effort in consensus and compromise. It was totally rejected by the House. That is not a good way to act.

I also wish to add to what the Senator from New York, Mr. SCHUMER, said earlier about this idea that the only way to pay for disasters is to eliminate jobs in America. How wrong is that? To go from a natural disaster to making our economic disaster worse? But that is what the House wanted to do. They wanted to eliminate jobs that are created by programs that have worked. Let me give an example.

This intelligent, fuel-efficient vehicle program has put money into major automobile manufacturers to create more manufacturing jobs in Illinois, where we have had more jobs, good-paying American jobs for workers, that cannot be shipped overseas, with a good salary and good benefits. What is wrong with that picture? Isn't that what we are hoping for the rest of America as well?

All across the Midwest, these car manufacturers have used this program and more than 40,000 jobs have been created and the House Republicans have said: Let's eliminate that and pay for disasters with it—totally upside-down thinking. We have to be thinking about helping those in distress, and we have to be thinking about creating jobs. We can do both.

I take no backseat when it comes to tackling the deficit and debt in this country. I have been engaged in this debate for quite a while now and intensely over the last year and a half. But every economist and every clear-thinking person has said, before we start serious deficit reduction, take care of our immediate needs—that would be the defense of America and responding to disasters—and make certain this recession is behind us. We cannot balance the budget with 14 million Americans out of work. So get busy creating jobs. And we are going to. The President has come up with a proposal which I think makes sense, giving a payroll tax cut to working families. In my State of Illinois, where the average family makes about $53,500 a year, President Obama's payroll tax cut would mean an additional $1,500 a year for them, which is going to be about $125 a month in their paychecks. I bet they can use it as they watch the price of gasoline go up to $4.50 and go back down and go up again. They can use it.

It also said: Let's give small businesses a tax credit and a tax incentive to hire the unemployed. I know, we all know, creating jobs in America has to start with small business. The Senator from Louisiana heads up that committee. She knows it. She has been the most aggressive spokesperson for that cause of any in the Senate.

The same is true of where we are spending our money. We should be investing in America. In the suburbs of Chicago, in Morton Grove, IL, at the Golf Middle School, they took me on a tour of the 60-year-old school, and it is hard to imagine how they keep it going. They took me down to the boiler room. I don't think too many Senators spend too much time in boiler rooms in schools today, but I did, looking at a 60-year-old boiler. The fellow, Jim Burke, who keeps it running, said it cost them $180,000 last year to keep this old, antique system going. They need a new HVAC system for the hundreds of kids going to this school. That is an example of buying products in America, installing them in America, and investing in America, so kids can be educated and can succeed in America. That is a plan we all should endorse in both political parties.

In just a few minutes, we will have a vote on the floor, and I hope we will vote in a bipartisan fashion in a clear voice to say we are going to stand behind the victims of disasters across America, the American family can come together, and we are not going to cut jobs in order to reduce the pain people feel in disasters.

We can do both, create American jobs and make certain those who are struggling through those disasters have the help they need.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Ms. LANDRIEU. I thank the Senator from Illinois. I continue to be amazed at his energy, in terms of leadership and what he does in Washington and his home State of Illinois. I appreciate the comments he has brought to this debate.

I wish to say the vote we are going to have in a few minutes is going to decide whether we are going to change the way we help disaster victims. We are either going to do it the way we have pretty much always done it—when a disaster strikes, the Federal Government steps up; we are there. We encourage our Governors and mayors and local elected leaders to roll up their sleeves, work side by side with people, and take care of business, basically, get people out of harm's way, move them into shelters, comfort them, console them, keep families together, and then work with them in weeks and months and sometimes it takes years to get these communities back up and operating—or we are going to adopt the Republican sort of tea party/Cantor doctrine, which is “my way or the highway,” which is why we are having this debate a week before the end of the fiscal year, which says we are going to have to find money with each new catastrophe. We are going to have to find money by stripping money from either education or transportation or, in this particular case, stripping money from a program that creates private sector jobs—a public/private partnership, a lending program that helps new and emerging companies get the financial wherewithal to manufacture new automobiles in America and puts Americans to work.

In fact, what is amazing about this offset that the Republicans have chosen to have this whole debate about is, it is an offset of a program that is supported by Republicans themselves. In fact, many Republicans in the Senate and in the House have actually sent letters—and I am going to read one or two of those right now—to the Secretary of Energy asking for funding out of this exact program for creating jobs in one State, which is a legitimate thing to do. It is done all the time. There is nothing wrong with that. What is wrong is then turning around and coming to Washington and voting to gut this program under the guise that we need to do so to help disaster victims.

I have a number of letters and I ask unanimous consent they be printed at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Ms. LANDRIEU. I am going to read a letter written by the Members of the Indiana delegation. At least three Republicans have signed this letter: Senator LUGAR from Indiana, Representative DAN BURTON from Indiana, and Representative MIKE PENCE from Indiana.

They wrote, on June 25:

We write today to highlight the remarkable automotive innovation occurring in Indiana—and the tremendous potential for Hoosiers to lead our national effort in transforming the automotive sector. Indiana is uniquely qualified and prepared to lead the nation and the world in the development and commercialization of advanced battery, electric drive vehicles and other innovative transportation technologies.

Hoosiers are committed to reaching our national goal of reducing our dependence on foreign oil, and they are actively researching, developing, and manufacturing technologies that will be cleaner and create lasting jobs.

The Hoosier state is the most manufacturing-intensive state in the union and is home to some 700 automotive related companies which employ more than 130,000 workers. Moreover, Indiana's broad diversity of domestic and international companies, its long experience manufacturing light duty, heavy duty, recreational and military vehicles, and its rich legacy pioneering the development of the electric power train makes the state a national hub for automatic automotive technology development.

They go on and on. They say:

Indiana already is home to a number of established and emerging battery and electric vehicle technology companies. . . .

In addition, Indiana's world-class research universities including Purdue University, Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis, and the University of Notre Dame have formed an active research and development partnership.

The letter goes on to say what a great job they are doing. “We strongly encourage you to give full consideration to the innovative applications for federal investment made by Indiana companies” through the electric drive vehicle battery component manufacturing initiative and the $25 billion Advanced Technology Vehicle Manufacturing Loan Program. That is the exact loan program Republicans from Indiana have written to ask funding for that they are now eliminating to pay for disasters. If this were a program that was not working, if this were a program that did not create jobs in America, if this were a program that Republicans privately and publicly acknowledged was not a good program, that would be one thing. But to run home and cut ribbons, to say you are creating jobs in Indiana or in New York or in Illinois and then run up here and cut the program, claiming you have to do so to help disaster victims when it is just about unprecedented in the history of our country, there is something terribly wrong.

We do not need to be destroying jobs; we need to be creating them. We do not need to be making excuses about how we do not have to help victims of disasters; we need to be helping them.

I guess I take this a little bit personally because while the rest of the Members sort of say things like: Well, FEMA is not really running out of money, and they can probably make it until Friday—there is some talk about that going on. There are some technical ways that could be done—I wish to remind everyone here that this is already an emergency for over 400 projects that were shut down weeks ago. If you are a small business owner who had a subcontract building a road in Alaska, it is an emergency for you because you were shut down and you cannot make payroll. You already bought the supplies to build the bridge, and nobody on the Republican side is caring about your crisis.

FEMA is technically out of money as we speak. The only way they are continuing to operate is because they have shut down these projects.

This is the third time in the last 6 years, to my knowledge, that projects have been shut down across the country. Why is that right? Many of those projects are in Louisiana, some of them are in Mississippi, and some of them now are in Joplin. If you were in a disaster that happened a few years ago, because Republicans either will not budget the money or will not budget enough money or every time you go to ask for a dime, they require an offset somewhere else—truly what is happening is disaster victims in other parts of the country are subsidizing this foolishness.

This does not fall equally on the backs of Democrats and Republicans. I know people are tired of hearing it, but it does not. HARRY REID did not start this fight. MARY LANDRIEU did not start this fight. DICK DURBIN did not start this fight. ERIC CANTOR of Virginia, a Republican leader, started this fight when he said: We cannot fund the 2011 disasters without an offset.

So in this whole debate, what they have done is shut down projects in Louisiana and Mississippi despite the fact that I have said: We don't really need an offset. We have made arrangements in next year's budget. It is unprecedented, Representative CANTOR. Your State is going to be hurt as well.

He doesn't seem to care. But I do care, and I do think it is worth talking about.

I don't know if we will win this battle today. I don't know if we will win this vote this afternoon. I am not the whip. I do not count the votes. All I do is keep my eyes on the people who are in disasters because I have had to for the years I have been, unfortunately, the Senator from Louisiana who has been through the worst natural disaster our country has ever known. I have walked through too many destroyed neighborhoods, I have cried with too many people, and I have watched what they go through.

For me, this is not a simple change. This is a major change which we cannot afford in this country and which our people do not deserve. We cannot have a budget meeting every time there is a disaster in America and try to run up here and in 30 minutes or 2 days or a week decide what program we are going to slash that everybody can agree to so we can send help, whether it is to West Virginia or to Florida or to Michigan or Louisiana. That is no way to run a government.

Now tea party people and Republicans want to bring change to Washington. I welcome some of that change but not this. This is not a change we need. This is not a good policy for America. I am not opposed to change. I am adaptable. I am a centrist. I am a moderate. I can listen to what Republicans and Democrats say, and I am proud of that. It is a strength. I consider it a strength, not a weakness. This is not a change I can support lightly, and that is what this fight is about. We may be forced to change, but if we are, I want the people of America to know this was ERIC CANTOR's idea. This is on the tea party agenda. I do not think it should be on America's agenda.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, DC, June 25, 2009.

Hon. DR. STEVEN CHU,
Secretary of Energy, James Forrestal Building,
Independence Avenue, SW., Washington, DC.

DEAR SECRETARY CHU: We write today to highlight the remarkable automotive innovation occurring in Indiana—and the tremendous potential for Hoosiers to lead our national effort in transforming the automotive sector. Indiana is uniquely qualified and prepared to lead the nation and the world in the development and commercialization of advanced battery, electric drive vehicles and other innovative transportation technologies.

Hoosiers are committed to reaching our national goal of reducing our dependence on foreign oil, and they are actively researching, developing and manufacturing technologies that will be cleaner and create lasting jobs.

The Hoosier state is the most manufacturing intensive state in the union and is home to some 700 automotive related companies which employ more than 130,000 workers. Moreover, Indiana's broad diversity of domestic and international companies, its long experience manufacturing light duty, heavy duty, recreational and military vehicles, and its rich legacy pioneering the development of the electric power train makes the state a national hub for automotive technology development. Indiana's proven experience positions it to be the leader in next-generation batteries and electric drive vehicles. Hoosier companies like Delco Remy and later Delphi were ahead of their time in producing batteries systems for advanced technology vehicles, leading the development of the battery system for the EVI, GM's first and only electric vehicle.

Indiana already is home to a number of established and emerging battery and electric vehicle technology companies. Our state is also a national hub for battery systems development and testing for the defense and national security industry with unique assets like the U.S. Navy's Naval Surface Warfare Center Crane, which has forged strong partnerships around energy storage technologies with several top defense contractors across Indiana.

In addition, Indiana's world-class research universities including Purdue University, Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis and the University of Notre Dame have formed an active research and development partnership around next-generation battery technology and are working with a network of industry partners to accelerate technology transfer. These university partners are also collaborating with Indiana's statewide community colleges to develop new degree programs and curriculums needed to prepare the Hoosier workforce for advanced battery technology jobs.

Most importantly, Hoosiers have committed themselves to the goal of transforming our transportation sector. Diverse stakeholders recognize that no one company has all the answers and that success requires collaboration and partnership that crosses multiple industry boundaries. Hoosier companies have forged a number of joint partnerships involving Fortune 500 companies, innovative start-ups anti leading research institutions to leverage their assets and accelerate the development of advanced battery and energy technology solutions. Likewise, community support is palpable, with a steady stream of interest from local governments, schools, universities and non-government groups.

We strongly believe that Indiana is the smart choice for investment of grants, loans and other federal support for the research, development and commercialization of advanced automotive technologies and fuels. In particular, several Hoosier companies have applied for existing grants and loans through the $2 billion Electric Drive Vehicle Battery and Component Manufacturing Initiative and the $25 billion Advanced Technology Vehicle Manufacturing Loan Program. As you evaluate these proposals, we encourage you to remember the strong multiplier effect that will come by investing in a state already committed and with a broad base of support and experience.

Indiana's automotive and energy technology industries are uniquely positioned to participate in these new programs. Their experience, technical expertise, and commitment to collaboration would provide significant leverage for any federal investment. Investing in Hoosier innovation will make America safer, make our economy stronger and make our environment cleaner.

We strongly encourage you to give full consideration to the innovative applications for federal investment made by Indiana companies and institutions to accelerate the commercialization of high performance, safe, and cost effective advanced battery technologies.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Richard G. Lugar, Evan Bayh, Dan Burton, Peter J. Visclosky, Steve Buyer, Mark E. Souder, Mike Pence, Baron P. Hill, Joe Donnelly, Brad Ellsworth, André Carson.

UNITED STATES SENATE,
Washington, DC, February 16, 2011.

The PRESIDENT,
The White House,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I was pleased on August 29th, 2010 when you spoke at Xavier University on the fifth anniversary of Hurricane Katrina about the will to keep up the fight to recover from that catastrophic event. During the speech, you spoke right to the survivors of the disaster and said, "My administration is going to stand with you—and fight alongside you—until the job is done. Until New Orleans is all the way back, all the way."

I am asking you to stand with me now. Based on the latest estimates from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), the Disaster Relief Fund is expected to be exhausted in June. I understand that a minimum of $1.565 billion is needed just to meet the costs of eligible projects for the balance of this fiscal year. This shortfall is largely the result of past catastrophic and major disasters, such as Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, Gustav, Ike, the Midwest floods of 2008, and the Tennessee floods of 2010.

In the absence of an emergency supplemental request from you, the House Republican Leadership has decided to include $1.565 billion of non-emergency funding in H.R. 1, now pending before the House. In order to pay for this funding, H.R. 1 reduces funding for the Coast Guard, FEMA, and State and local first responders and emergency managers, the very agencies that are responsible for preparing for and responding to future disasters. It is true that in these tough economic times, it is critical that we make disciplined funding decisions, but it makes no sense to strip agencies of the resources they need to prepare for future disasters in order to pay for the costs of past disasters. We simply cannot return to the days when FEMA could not do its job. Therefore, I ask you to submit, without delay, a request for emergency supplemental funding.

Without your request for the needed amount of funding, I am concerned that history will soon repeat itself. Last year, FEMA was forced to stop making payments for over five months to my State and States across the Nation for recovery efforts from past disasters. In addition to the $1.565 billion that is necessary to continue disaster recovery this year, FEMA estimates that $6 billion will be required in FY 2012-2014 to pay for the recovery costs of past catastrophic disasters. Such funding simply cannot be accommodated within the existing budget of the Department of Homeland Security. I am concerned that if only the amount to cover known costs for FY 2011 is requested, $1.565 billion, then FEMA and OMB will once again have to stop making payments to States. There is no reason for this to happen again. It is imperative that in this and future budgets you request a sufficient amount of funding for both the known costs of past disasters and the estimated costs of future disasters.

In your August 29th speech, you said, "I wanted to make sure that the federal government was a partner—not an obstacle—to recovery here in the Gulf Coast." Unfortunately, the budget process applied to the Disaster Relief Fund is an obstacle to recovery in Louisiana and the whole Nation. Your Administration has done a lot to help my State of Louisiana recover. I ask for your renewed commitment to continue that effort.

With kindest regards, I am

Sincerely,

MARY L. LANDRIEU,
United States Senator.

UNITED STATES SENATE,
Washington, DC, March 17, 2011.

The PRESIDENT,
The White House,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: Based on the latest estimates from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), the Disaster Relief Fund is expected to be exhausted in June, at the very beginning of the hurricane season. A minimum of $1.565 billion is needed just to meet the costs of eligible projects for the balance of this fiscal year. This shortfall is largely the result of past catastrophic and major disasters, such as Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, Gustav, and Ike, the Midwest floods of 2008, and the Tennessee floods of 2010.

There are currently 49 States that are recovering from major disasters that you have declared under the Robert T. Stafford Act. All of these recovery efforts would be put on hold if FEMA is forced to stop disaster payments. Last year, FEMA was forced to stop such payments for five months, delaying recovery and increasing costs across the Nation. We should not allow history to repeat itself.

Further complicating this funding problem is the imminent onset of the flood season. The National Weather Service is projecting that the country is at risk of, "moderate to major flooding this spring", particularly in the Midwest. The tragic events in Japan have reminded us of the potential consequences of a catastrophic disaster. In responding to a catastrophic disaster such as Hurricane Katrina, the current Disaster Relief Fund balance would be exhausted in three days.

In the absence of an emergency supplemental request from you, the House Republican Leadership decided to include an additional $1.565 billion of non-emergency funding for the Disaster Relief Fund in H.R. 1. In order to pay for this shortfall, H.R. 1 reduces funding for the Coast Guard, FEMA, and State and local first responders and emergency managers, the very agencies that are responsible for preparing for and responding to future disasters. It is true that in these tough economic times, it is critical that we make disciplined funding decisions, but it makes no sense to strip agencies of the resources they need to prepare for future disasters in order to pay for the costs of past disasters. This problem only gets worse next year. FEMA estimates the additional shortfall in FY 2012 to be $3 billion.

We simply cannot return to the days when FEMA could not do its job. Therefore, we ask you to submit, without delay, a request for emergency supplemental funding. H.R. 1, as it passed the House, contains $159 billion of emergency funding for Overseas Contingencies because the Department of Defense cannot absorb the cost of the wars within its base budget. Similarly, the Department of Homeland Security cannot absorb the costs of catastrophic disasters in its base budget.

Funding shortfalls in the Disaster Relief Fund with an emergency designation is consistent with past practice, by Democrats and Republicans alike. Since 1992, $110 billion out of $128 billion appropriated to the DRF has been emergency spending, primarily for Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, Gustav, and Ike, and 9/11. In your budget estimates, you have included an allowance for disaster costs, a responsible recognition of the potential costs of disasters. However, absent an emergency supplemental request, this allowance is nothing more than an unfulfilled promise to communities recovering from disasters.

We thank you for your consideration of this important matter.

Sincerely,

Mary Landrieu, Sheldon Whitehouse, Tom Harkin, Dianne Feinstein, Al Franken, Joe Lieberman, Barbara Boxer, Richard Durbin, Jack Reed, Kent Conrad, Amy Klobuchar, Frank Lautenberg, Ron Wyden, Jay Rockefeller.

UNITED STATES SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS,
Washington, DC, May 2, 2011.

The PRESIDENT,
The White House,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: On February 18, 2011 and March 17, 2011, I wrote you urging that you request an emergency FY 2011 supplemental to address the shortfall in funding in the Department of Homeland Security Disaster Relief Fund. The $1.2 billion shortfall for FY 2011 was largely the result of past Presidentially-designated catastrophic disasters, such as Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, Gustav, and Ike, the Midwest floods of 2008, and the Tennessee floods of 2010. Regrettably, no request was submitted to the Congress. The recent tornados make this request all the more urgent demonstrating once again that natural disasters are indeed unpredictable, expensive, and require our compassionate and effective response.

In the absence of an emergency supplemental funding request, Congress had to make the difficult decision to cut the base budget for the Department of Homeland Security by $1 billion to accommodate the shortfall in fiscal year 2011. The only other alternative was for the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) to stop making payments for past disaster recovery efforts when they were estimated to run out of money in July of 2011, the beginning of the hurricane season. Congress determined that it made no sense to compound the pain of communities devastated by past disasters by stopping the recovery process.

As Chairman of the Homeland Security Appropriations Subcommittee, I am now drafting the FY 2012 Homeland Security Appropriations bill. We have scrutinized your $43.6 billion request. With one glaring exception, I find the request to be balanced and responsive to the many threats that this Nation faces. Regrettably, as in FY 2011, the request does not include any funding to address what FEMA estimated before the most recent disaster to be a $3 billion shortfall for the Disaster Relief Fund for FY 2012.

This past week, you told the victims of the tornados in Alabama that you would make sure that they were not forgotten. You made a similar promise in New Orleans on the fifth anniversary of Hurricane Katrina. These promises cannot be fulfilled without funding for the recovery effort, efforts that often take many years of sustained investment.

It is true that in these tough economic times, we must make disciplined funding decisions, but it makes no sense to strip agencies of the resources they need to deter, prepare for, and respond to future disasters in order to pay for the costs of past disasters. Yet without leadership from the Administration, we were forced, in the full-year continuing resolution, to cut funding below your request for first responder equipment and training grants, cyber security, port security, transit security, and aviation security. Frankly, given the increased threat of home-grown terrorism that you eloquently spoke of in your State of the Union Address, and the evolving threat that Secretary Napolitano has testified to, these cuts were neither responsible nor cost-effective.

Your FY 2012 request of $1.8 billion, which is based on a projection of the five-year average of disaster costs excluding catastrophic disasters, includes no funding for the known costs of past catastrophic disasters. As a candidate, you rightly criticized your predecessor for hiding known costs from his budget.

I urge you to seek emergency funding for the documented $3 billion shortfall for FY 2012. As you know, it is consistent with past practice, by Democrats and Republicans alike, to fund Disaster Relief Fund (DRF) shortfalls with an emergency designation. Since 1992, $110 billion out of $131 billion appropriated to the DRF has been true emergency spending. You include in your budget an allowance for disaster costs, which is a responsible recognition of the potential costs of disasters. However, absent an emergency funding request, this allowance is nothing more than an unfulfilled promise to communities recovering from disasters.

The Department of Homeland Security simply cannot absorb a $3 billion shortfall in the proposed budget of $43.6 billion for fiscal year 2012. Absent an emergency request, the priorities that you have identified in your request to secure the homeland will all regrettably be jeopardized.

Congress will begin drafting fiscal year 2012 appropriations bill this month. In the continued uncertainty of how the Administration will address the shortfall, I fear the House will make the same irresponsible cuts it proposed in H.R.1, only deeper, including cuts in FEMA, the Transportation Security Administration, United States Coast Guard, United States Secret Service, cyber, port, and transit security, and grants to State and local governments to equip and train first responders. In light of the threats this Nation faces, such cuts make no sense.

I ask that you submit an emergency funding request for the estimated shortfall for fiscal year 2012 without delay. Disaster victims in 49 States, including the victims of the recent tornados that have crossed this Nation, would be impacted if FEMA were forced to stop disaster recovery payments next spring.

With kindest regards, I am

Sincerely,

MARY L. LANDRIEU,
Chairman,
Subcommittee on Homeland Security.

U.S. SENATE,

Washington, DC, May 11, 2011.

Hon. BARACK OBAMA,
The White House,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: As the waters of the Mississippi River continue to rise each day, communities in the lower Mississippi River valley are bracing for widespread flooding. In my state of Louisiana, farms and towns along the Mississippi and in the Atchafalaya Floodway are busy preparing to safeguard lives and property from devastation, and we need your help.

The U.S. Army Corps and FEMA should continue their ongoing efforts to notify individuals of the impending risk and help them to escape from harm. I urge you to also move swiftly to approve the pending and anticipated requests for disaster declarations in the affected parishes of Louisiana. While I appreciate the emergency declarations that have already been issued for Louisiana and other states, more help will be needed to fight the flood waters and help communities to recover.

Specifically, I believe that public and individual assistance from FEMA, crop disaster, conservation, and watershed assistance from USDA, fisheries disaster assistance from NOAA, disaster loans from SBA, and housing vouchers and recovery grants from HUD will be needed in some communities. Further, I urge you to instruct all of these agencies to perform expedited damage assessments in order to determine eligibility for Federal assistance.

By all accounts, the Mississippi River and Tributaries (MR&T) Project is performing as intended and critical investments over many decades have paid huge dividends in reducing damage. However, not all communities in the path of these flood waters have adequate protection, and additional system upgrades will ultimately be required. According to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, only 88 percent of the MR&T Project has been completed since its initiation after the Great Flood of 1927. I call on you to join me in analyzing these remaining needs and developing a strategy to address them as soon as possible.

Sincerely,

MARY L. LANDRIEU,
United States Senator.

Ms. LANDRIEU. I see the Senator from West Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. MANCHIN. Mr. President, I think we all appreciate so much the passion and compassion our colleague from Louisiana has for the people of America—not just the people of Louisiana but all over America. I thank her for taking this fight and making sure people understand what we are fighting for. Being one of the other centrists in this body—and I think we have a majority right now—three of us—I appreciate all of us being in attendance.

I rise today to address the enormous frustration the American people must feel witnessing their government and their leaders engaging in another futile political exercise. Our government is being driven—and I agree with the Senator from Louisiana that we are not going to shut down over this, but it is unbelievable to get into the fuss we are in right now, to make people believe we could come to the brink of another when we just went through this bloody mess in August.

There is not a State in this great Nation that has not suffered the terrible tragedy and cost of a natural disaster. While there are many government programs and issues we should vigorously debate, we surely cannot question the responsibility of government to help our communities in their darkest moments. In the America I believe in, we don't look the other way when a community is suffering from the pain of a natural disaster. We stand to offer a helping hand. It is this spirit of helping each other that has defined this Nation since its very beginning, and we cannot let politics destroy that spirit.

Our belief in helping each other is a bedrock value for this country, and it runs much deeper than a belief in a political party. We are Americans, and for the sake of this great Nation I know we all love, these petty squabbles that define this place must end. That is why we must fund FEMA disaster relief and why I voted for a Senate bill that would fund FEMA through the end of the fiscal year.

Yes, we all agree that funding for disaster relief should be paid for in these most difficult times and especially now that we are looking at these deficits we have accrued. Yes, we must save and set aside that money. My grandfather once told me, Mr. President—and I think you can appreciate this, being a small businessperson—you can't give someone the shirt off your back if you don't have a shirt to give them. We have to plan and work hard to make sure we can put ourselves in position to help others.

Yes, we must return to the path of fiscal responsibility where we manage our budgets wisely and put away enough money for the eventual disasters we know will strike. In my great State of West Virginia, we have a contingency fund. We know we are going to have floods and challenges throughout our State, and we set aside, every budget year, X amount of dollars, and we accumulate that to use for a crisis. We can do the same right here in this great country of ours and in the Nation's Capital.

It is absolutely wrong—no ifs, ands, or buts about it—to pay for disaster relief out of funds that are creating jobs, with the potential of creating more jobs. Are there problems with some of the programs? Absolutely. Can we fix those programs? Absolutely. Should we eliminate programs that cost too much and offer little return? Absolutely. But are we so desperate to score political points that we eliminate a program—the Advanced Technology Vehicles Manufacturing Loan Program—which is actually helping to bring jobs back to America? For the record, that program is credited with saving or creating 39,000 American jobs, most with the Ford Motor Company, an American manufacturer. It is something we need more of in this country. It is a program with support from both the chamber of commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers. In fact, Ford actually moved a hybrid battery facility from Mexico to Michigan because of this loan program. I can think of a lot of loan programs we should fight over, but are we really going to defund a program that has helped bring jobs back to America? I don't think so.

So where do we go from here? Well, of my Republican and Democratic leaders, I respectfully ask them to consider how simple a choice we face. We can rebuild America or we can afford to pay for it. We can choose to fund FEMA or afford to pay for it. We can do all of this if we face the fact that we cannot continue to go into debt and spend billions in Afghanistan while suggesting that in order to fund FEMA, we must cut a program that actually helps to create jobs in America.

As I have said before, we must choose between rebuilding Afghanistan or rebuilding America. Today, we can make that choice. I, along with many of you, choose to rebuild America. At a time when our economy is strugglingly and our deficit is exploding, I cannot believe we in Washington would choose to rebuild another nation at the expense of our own. We can do better for this, and for the sake of our Nation's future, we must to better than this. We should not engage in a political theater that makes the false choice between funding disaster relief or eliminating a jobs program that actually helped create American jobs.

It is time for us to set our priorities. It is time for us to rebuild America, not to rebuild Afghanistan or Iraq. Helping America to rebuild during times of natural disaster must be a priority that cannot be defined by partisanship.

In West Virginia alone, several projects worth nearly $½ million have now been put on hold because of the bickering and squabbling that goes on. Those projects include funding to help individuals whose property was damaged in the severe snowstorms in 2009, flooding in 2010, as well as critical equipment that monitors waterflow in areas prone to flooding, equipment that is vital for forecasting river levels during our floods. This doesn't make any sense to me, and I know it doesn't make any sense to the people of West Virginia.

I cannot believe that any American would choose to lose billions more in waste and corruption in Afghanistan while we ignore the needs of our neighbors here at home—our neighbors who just this year survived tornadoes, floods, and hurricanes, and who need shelter and food.

I would like to offer the following amendment to offset the cost of funding FEMA by eliminating $1.6 billion from programs that will fund nation building in Afghanistan and instead direct that money to FEMA, to programs that rebuild America.

I yield the floor.

AFFORDABLE CARE ACT

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I thank Senator STABENOW for her work in protecting children's dental coverage. I want to clarify any confusion about the Finance Committee's intent when we adopted her amendment, C-7, on pediatric dental coverage. As I understand it, her intent was to ensure that commercial stand-alone dental plans could participate fairly in an exchange and could also operate outside an exchange. The Senator expressly provided that these stand-alone dental plans could operate outside State or Federal exchanges.

Ms. STABENOW. That is correct and I thank the Senator for all his efforts in support of children's dental coverage as well and for this opportunity to clarify the intentions of my amendment. I offered this amendment to allow competition in the marketplace for dental benefits by allowing traditional stand-alone dental plans to participate both in and outside an exchange, just like health plans that provide coverage for medical care. The amendment ensured that stand-alone dental policies may fulfill the requirements of the essential health benefits package when paired with a qualified health plan covering all benefits other than pediatric oral health services within the exchange. To quote directly from the amendment, it indicated that "required pediatric dental benefits in the non-group and small group markets (in and outside an exchange) may be separately offered and priced from other required health benefits."

Many American families today receive dental coverage through stand-alone dental plans. Failure to properly implement the amendment as it was intended could result in serious disruptions in the dental coverage these families receive. That is why it is important that we get this right, and I appreciate the opportunity to make this clarification.

Mr. BINGAMAN. I thank the Senator for clarifying this issue.

Also Senator STABENOW and I want to thank the Chairman for working so closely with us and a number of our colleagues to ensure that the Affordable Care Act includes children's oral health care as part of the essential benefits package that health insurers must offer in order to participate in health insurance exchanges. In doing so, we fully recognized that too many children suffer needlessly from dental problems that are overwhelmingly preventable and that oral health is integral to their overall health.

Ms. STABENOW. Yes, I completely agree, Senator BINGAMAN. In fact our colleagues on the Finance Committee also overwhelmingly agreed that children must have access to oral health care, which is so critical to their overall well-being. We talked about the story of Deamonte Driver, a 12-year-old Maryland boy who died from a brain infection caused by tooth decay. He couldn't get access to an $80 dental procedure that would have saved his life. When his condition got worse, he ended up enduring two emergency surgeries, weeks of hospital care, and $250,000 worth of medical bills—but it was all too late. Stories like this remind us of the importance of dental care for children, which is why the pediatric element of the essential health benefits package expressly includes oral care.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Senator STABENOW, I want to be sure that we clarify any confusion about the Finance Committee's intent when we adopted your amendment, C-7, on pediatric dental coverage. As I understand it, the Senator's intent was to ensure that commercial stand-alone dental plans could participate fairly in an exchange. When we adopted the Senator's amendment, we understood that children receiving coverage through an exchange would have the same level of benefits and consumer protections, including all cost sharing and affordability protections, with respect to oral care. This holds true whether they received pediatric oral care coverage from a stand-alone dental plan or from a qualified health plan.

Ms. STABENOW. That is correct, Senator BINGAMAN, and I thank you for this opportunity to clarify my intentions. The amendment ensured that stand-alone dental policies may fulfill the requirements of the essential health benefits package when paired with a qualified health plan covering all benefits other than pediatric oral health services within the exchange. To be clear, I intended for stand-alone dental plans to fully comply with the same level of relevant consumer protections that are required of qualified health plans with respect to this essential benefit. To quote directly from my modified amendment C-7 that was adopted in committee, "... stand-alone dental plans must be allowed to offer the required pediatric dental benefits directly and to offer coverage through the Exchange and must comply with any relevant consumer protections required for participation in the Exchange."

Mr. BINGAMAN. I thank the Senator for clarifying this point.

Mr. BAUCUS. I wish to thank Senator BINGAMAN for raising this issue, and Senator STABENOW for clarifying the intentions. I would like to echo the Senator's comments and reiterate the importance of ensuring that a full and affordable oral health benefit and the consumer protections we so carefully drafted apply equally to the pediatric oral care benefit whether offered by a stand-alone dental plan or a qualified health plan in an exchange.

Mr. BINGAMAN. I thank Senators BAUCUS and STABENOW for their assistance in clarifying this issue.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. President, I rise today to speak against the process by which this body is passing major legislation as we approach the end of this fiscal year. Last week we were asked, without debate or amendment, to pass at least a half dozen bills reauthorizing or extending expiring laws and spending authorities—some of which authorize the expenditure of billions of dollars over the next year.

Actions such as this are a big part of what gives Washington a reputation for being dysfunctional. The fact that authorizations for many programs expire on September 30 each year is not a secret. Nor is it a secret when September 30 will come around each year. But instead of planning ahead, working for weeks or months to address a foreseeable need, and actually doing its work on time, Congress resorts to passing massive bills at the last minute when there is not time for serious scrutiny or changes.

It is unconscionable this body would avoid debating such programs in a meaningful way. I would ask my colleagues, can you be sure these programs are working as efficiently as possible? Can you assure the American people the Federal Government is maximizing value for their tax dollars? Are these bills taking meaningful steps to eliminate waste and duplication within these programs?

We would know the answers to those questions if these bills had gone through the normal process of consideration in committees and on the Senate floor. Senators would have the chance to ask questions to the officials administering the programs and propose changes to them. Instead, we are faced with bills that have had very little—if any—process in the Senate at a time where even a week's delay to consider the bills will result in the programs expiring. That is unacceptable and should be embarrassing to the Senate as an institution.

We need to change the way Congress does its business. Part of that is reining in excessive spending and having more robust debates regarding the allocation of scarce taxpayer dollars. We must do better in the future.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, over the last week or so I have outlined, here and in a letter to the Joint Select Committee on Deficit Reduction, a seven-part plan to reduce the deficit in ways that do not overburden American working families or damage economic growth. In my letter and in three previous speeches on the Senate floor, I have pointed out that revenues, and not just spending cuts, are necessary if we are to achieve significant deficit reduction. And I have discussed four proposals for restoring revenues: combating offshore tax havens; ending the corporate stock option loophole; and ending loopholes for hedge fund managers and derivatives traders.

Today I want to discuss three additional changes to our tax system that will make it more efficient and more equitable. We should make two tax rate changes: ending the unsustainable Bush-era tax cuts for the wealthiest Americans, and restoring capital gains tax rates to something approaching the rates in place under President Reagan. Also, we should replace the IRS's antiquated tax lien system. These proposals, combined with the other points of my plan, could reduce the deficit on the order of $1 trillion over the next 10 years.

Now, some of my colleagues may balk at the notion of reversing years of tax breaks for the wealthiest Americans. But I believe if we take off our ideological blinders, if we look at facts—hard, stubborn facts—the need for these reforms is clear.

First, we should allow Bush-era tax cuts to end for those making more than $250,000. The case for this change is straightforward: It would restore a measure of fairness to the tax code that has been sadly lacking for more than a decade, and it would reduce the deficit by hundreds of billions of dollars.

Supporters of the tax cuts in 2001 and 2003 made a number of promises. President Bush said his cuts "will bring real and immediate benefits to middle-income Americans." And yet in the decade since they began, the incomes of middle-class Americans have stagnated. According to the U.S. Census Bureau, the typical American household's income, when adjusted for inflation, actually fell more than 8 percent from 2001 to 2010. President Bush said his tax cuts would increase the pace of job creation. And yet during the Bush years, jobs grew at roughly one-third the rate that we enjoyed during the Clinton administration. President Bush said "we can proceed with tax relief without fear of budget deficits, even if the economy softens." And yet just those tax cuts going to the wealthiest 1 percent of Americans have added hundreds of billions of dollars to the deficit since 2001. So, these tax cuts have failed to deliver the promised benefits, and they have driven us deeper and deeper into debt. Ending them will bring down the deficit; President Obama's proposal to end the cuts for high-income earners would reduce the deficit by an estimated $866 billion over 10 years.

What these tax cuts did deliver is a striking and continuing rise in income inequality. It's no coincidence that as we passed a series of tax cuts whose benefits overwhelmingly flow to the wealthiest Americans, those wealthy individuals have seen their fortunes rise. A few decades ago, the wealthiest 1 percent of Americans took home 10 percent of all income. Today, they get 24 percent of all income. As those at the top have prospered greatly, middle-class wages have stagnated—again, down more than 8 percent, for the median American household, since the Bush tax cuts took effect.

A second proposal also would bring down the deficit and bring more fairness to the tax code: restoring capital gains tax rates closer to those in place during the Reagan administration. Capital gains are income from the increase in value of an asset, such as a stock. Today, thanks to the Bush-era tax cuts, the top rate on capital gains is 15 percent. That's substantially lower than the 28 percent rate included in President Reagan's Tax Reform Act of 1986.

The theory in slashing capital gains tax rates was that lower rates would encourage investment, job creation and economic growth. But as has been the case with slashing ordinary income tax rates for the wealthy, cutting capital gains taxes simply has not delivered what supporters promised. Given the stagnation in middle-class living standards that we have seen since the 1980s, it is difficult to argue to middle-class Americans that reducing capital gains rates made them better off.

Instead, this is another benefit that flows overwhelmingly to the wealthiest among us. According to the Tax Policy Center, more than 75 percent of the benefit from lower capital gains taxes goes to those with incomes over $1 million a year, and 94 percent of the benefit to those above $200,000.

This tax break for the most fortunate of our citizens also adds tens of billions of dollars each year to the deficit. The Congressional Budget Office earlier this year estimated that raising the capital gains rate by just 2 percentage points would reduce the deficit by about $50 billion over 10 years. Raising the top rate closer to Reagan-era levels would bring far more deficit reduction.

Those who fight to preserve these high-income tax cuts call attempts to end them "class warfare." Ending these tax breaks won't start a class war. It will help end one—a war that, for more than a decade, has taken a devastating and immediate toll on the middle class, and created huge new deficits that damage their future prospects as well.

The simple fact is that if we are to ensure that the burden of deficit reduction falls equitably, and that all our citizens are asked to contribute toward this goal, we must address these upper income tax cuts that have helped balloon the deficit. Deficit reduction will require spending cuts, and some of those cuts will fall hard on working families. But we can't ask them to carry the entire burden. That would be contrary to common sense, because spending cuts alone cannot achieve real deficit reduction. And it would be contrary to any sense of fairness. We all have to contribute.

Our constituents are speaking, and speaking loudly, on this topic. And they are speaking eloquently. Let me tell you about an email I received from a constituent a few weeks ago about our deficit.

This Michigan resident and her husband consider themselves upper middle class—though she wrote that "many would call us wealthy." She wrote to me that we need to cut spending, and to compromise to do it. "I will like some cuts and hate others and that is OK with me!" she wrote.

But she also wrote: "I also strongly urge you to consider passing what many would call tax hikes. . . . We are willing to pay a bit more to help our country and safeguard our children's futures." Upper income Americans, she wrote, "aren't paying taxes at a fair and just rate. Fix this."

And we should fix it. This constituent of mine said she was part of a "silent majority" in favor of increasing revenue. I am not sure how silent they are, but she is certainly part of a majority. In a recent Washington Post-ABC News poll, 72 percent of Americans—and 54 percent of Republicans—said they favored increasing taxes on those who make more than $250,000 a year as part of our deficit reduction strategy. Americans are strongly in favor of a balanced approach to deficit reduction that protects working families. They are asking us to fight for the middle class, and it is time we did so.

Let me discuss briefly the tax lien proposal. Tax liens are a basic tool to collect unpaid taxes. Today, Federal law requires liens to be filed on paper in more than 4,000 locations around the country, determined by the location of the lien. The IRS maintains a service center that does nothing but monitor dozens of varying local requirements for lien filings, track filings, and release liens once they are paid.

I have introduced legislation, S. 1390, along with Senator BEGICH, to replace this antiquated system with an electronic federal tax lien registry available to the public on the Internet at no cost. The IRS estimates that this change would not only save millions of dollars in administrative costs, but also enable the IRS to release liens more quickly once they have been paid and free up employees and resources for other work. Equally important, a public electronic registry could help encourage those who owe taxes to settle their bills and take enormous pressure off taxpayers who have paid what they owe.

Let me come back to where I started last week. Congress faces a difficult task in the weeks ahead. We must agree to $1.2 trillion or more in deficit reduction over the next decade. Failure to agree on a plan means automatic budget cuts through the sequestration process—including greatly damaging cuts to defense and other important Federal programs.

In my letter to the Joint Select Committee and here on the floor, I have outlined ways to avoid that outcome, proposing commonsense changes that bring equity to our Tax Code and restore lost revenue. If we reject that course, it almost certainly means damaging cuts in important programs—programs that keep our nation safe, that keep our faith with senior citizens and veterans, and that prepare our children for the future. Rejecting that course almost certainly means a failure to significantly reduce the deficit, because spending cuts alone are not enough to accomplish the deficit reduction we need.

The choice is ours. I hope we will not allow ideology to blind us to the reality of our budget situation, to the needs of middle-class families, or to the strong and consistent message from Americans who are demanding a balanced approach to reducing the deficit.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, how much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no time remaining on the Democratic side.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, the Senator from West Virginia is absolutely right. We have tens of billions of unspent dollars sitting in accounts for Iraq and Afghanistan for rebuilding roads and such there. Let's spend it in America. Let's spend it on America. It is American tax dollars. Let's spend it on America.

I yield the floor.

Mr. REID. Has the time arrived for the vote?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes.

Mr. REID. In fact, before we do that, I note the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MANCHIN). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that if cloture is not invoked on the pending Reid motion to concur with an amendment, the majority leader be recognized to withdraw the pending motion to refer and the pending motion to concur with an amendment; that the majority leader be recognized to offer a new motion to concur with an amendment, the text of which is at the desk—amendment No. 665; that there be no amendments, points of order, or motions in order to the Reid motion to concur other than budget points of order and the applicable motions to waive; that there be up to 10 minutes of debate equally divided between the two leaders or their designees prior to vote a vote on adoption of the Reid motion to concur with an amendment; further, that the Reid motion be subject to a 60-vote affirmative threshold; that if the Reid motion to concur with an amendment is agreed to, the Senate proceed to the consideration of H.R. 2017 and that the majority leader be recognized to offer an amendment, the text of which is at the desk; that it be the only amendment in order to the bill; that the amendment be agreed to, the bill, as amended, be read the third time, and the Senate proceed to vote on passage of the bill, as amended, all with no intervening action or debate; and that if the Reid motion to concur with an amendment is not agreed to, the majority leader be recognized.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Pursuant to rule XXII, the clerk will report the motion to invoke cloture.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close debate on the Reid motion to concur in the House amendment to the Senate amendment to H.R. 2608, with an amendment No. 656.

Harry Reid, Daniel K. Inouye, Tom Udall, Charles E. Schumer, Richard J. Durbin, Mary L. Landrieu, Patty Murray, Patrick J. Leahy, Richard Blumenthal, Benjamin L. Cardin, Sheldon Whitehouse, Sherrod Brown, Maria Cantwell, Daniel K. Akaka, Jack Reed, Debbie Stabenow, Kay R. Hagan.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By unanimous consent the mandatory quorum call has been waived.

The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate on the motion to concur in the House amendment to the Senate amendment to H.R. 2608, with an amendment No. 656, offered by the Senator from Nevada, Mr. REID, shall be brought to a close? The yeas and nays are mandatory under the rule.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from Washington (Ms. CANTWELL) and the Senator from Virginia (Mr. WEBB) are necessarily absent.

Mr. KYL. The following Senators are necessarily absent: the Senator from Texas (Mr. CORNYN), the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. BURR), the Senator from Georgia (Mr. CHAMBLISS), the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. DEMINT), the Senator from Texas (Mrs. HUTCHISON), the Senator from Illinois (Mr. KIRK), the Senator from Kansas (Mr. MORAN), and the Senator from Alaska (Ms. MURKOWSKI).

Further, if present and voting, the Senator from Texas (Mr. CORNYN) would have voted "nay."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motions are withdrawn.

MOTION TO CONCUR WITH AMENDMENT NO. 665

Mr. REID. I move to concur in the House amendment to the Senate amendment to H.R. 2608 with an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. REID] moves to concur in the House amendment to the Senate amendment to H.R. 2608, with an amendment numbered 665.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Text of Amendments.")

Mr. REID. Mr. President, under the previous order, there will be now up to 10 minutes of debate, equally divided between the two leaders.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I know everyone is in a hurry, and I will be as fast as I can.

Tonight can best be summed up by JOHNNY ISAKSON, the Senator from Georgia, who said: It is only worth fighting when there is something to fight for.

We have basically resolved this issue. I wish to recognize the leadership of Senator LANDRIEU. She chairs the Homeland Security Subcommittee on Appropriations. She is our expert on disaster. She has done a wonderful job of maintaining this in the eyes of the public.

In Friday morning's vote, we established, beyond a shadow of a doubt, that the Senate can't pass the House-passed CR. It got 36 votes. We couldn't pass it no matter what happens. With today's vote, Senate Republicans are showing they will back up the House vote on the question of offsetting spending in 2011. That is the vote we just took. But today's news also points a way that is more understanding and certainly a way out. Today's news story has come out saying FEMA disaster aid has enough money to last through this fiscal year. This afternoon, I received word from Jack Lew, of OMB, and FEMA that they will be able to get through the week without additional funding. That means they can get through the fiscal year without more money. I think it is very clear this is the right way to go. It shows us the way out and means we no longer have to fight 2011 funding.

I repeat what I said at the very beginning; that is, the way out is to focus on 2012. If we no longer need 2011 funding, then we can pass a bill that funds just 2012. This compromise should satisfy Republicans. It includes their own 2012 FEMA funding number, and it should satisfy the Democrats because it does not include the offsets we have talked about so much. It would be a win for everyone because we could end without another government crisis.

I appreciate Senator MCCONNELL for being understanding and working with us in this regard. But I end this from where I started, Senator JOHNNY ISAKSON: Let's fight when there's something to fight about. There is nothing to fight about tonight.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I am going to very briefly walk us through where we have been and where we are.

After tonight's vote, I think the best path forward is clear. The quickest and surest way to get FEMA all the disaster funds it needs and to put an end to any talk of government shutdown would have been for the Senate to take up and pass the House-passed CR right away.

As we know, our friends on the other side will not agree to that. However, earlier today, as we all know, FEMA indicated it already has the funds it needs for the duration of the current CR—which is, basically, this week—without the billions more in funding Democrats have been calling for.

Quite frankly, I think this is a vindication of what Republicans have been saying all along: Before we spend the taxpayers' money, we should have a real accounting—a real accounting—of what is actually needed.

We also believe that, in these days of huge deficits, we need to prioritize our spending around here.

That said, with this next vote, I think the majority leader has found a path forward, one that will continue to fund the government and which gives FEMA the funds it needs without any added emergency spending for the rest of this current fiscal year—in other words, this week—emergency funds that FEMA now says it doesn't need.

So tonight we will have had, after the next vote, two votes: One to reject deficit finance disaster spending without necessary spending cuts elsewhere and one to keep the government operational and to provide responsible disaster funding into November.

The CR, should it pass, will be within the top line we agreed to last summer. We have already basically voted on this top line. It will provide FEMA $2.65 billion in funding next fiscal year to continue the recovery efforts. It will not contain any emergency spending for this current fiscal year—the rest of this week. So it will drop both the emergency spending and the provisions paying for that spending from the House-passed bill.

Again, my preferred path forward would have been to pass the House bill. But since our friends on the other side have rejected that approach, I believe this is a compromise that is a reasonable way to keep the government operational.

So now that we have demonstrated that there aren't enough votes to support more on offset spending, I am going to vote, and would encourage my colleagues to vote, in favor of the clean CR, which is the next vote we are going to have.

In my view, this entire fire drill was completely and totally unnecessary, but I am glad a resolution appears to be at hand.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. REID. This, tonight, is the JOHN-NY ISAKSON solution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to concur in the House amendment to the Senate amendment with an amendment No. 665, offered by the Senator from Nevada (Mr. REID).

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 79, the nays are 12. Under the previous order requiring 60 votes for the adoption of this amendment, the motion to concur with an amendment is agreed to.

(The bill will be printed in a future edition of the RECORD.)

DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2012

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of H.R. 2017, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 2017), making appropriations for the Department of Homeland Security for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2012, and for other purposes.

Thereupon, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations, with an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the Department of Homeland Security for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2012, and for other purposes, namely:

TRIBUTE TO GROVER CLEVELAND
"G.C." GARLAND

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to an accomplished educator and veteran who has dedicated his life to teaching young Kentuckians. Mr. Grover Cleveland "G.C." Garland was involved with the Laurel County School System for over 50 years, where he played a vital role in changing the face of education in Laurel County before finally retiring in 1988.

G.C., 79, graduated from Bush High School in 1948 at the age of 16. At 18, he began teaching at Sasser School, part of the Laurel County School District, after only 2 years of college—his oldest student was 16, barely 2 years younger than him. G.C. spent another year teaching before he joined the U.S. Air Force to serve his country in the Korean war.

G.C. received his basic training in San Antonio, TX, and was transferred around before ending up in Fairbanks, AK. While on leave from his duties G.C. met his wife of 56 years, Joan, at the Ocean Wave Skating Rink in Fariston, KY.

In January 1956, G.C. was discharged from the Air Force and returned to Kentucky, where he returned to school at the University of Kentucky and received a degree in secondary education. He majored in math, history, and political science. After graduation, G.C. and his family returned to Laurel County and he began teaching at Bush. During his 8 years at Bush, G.C. received his master's degree and also assumed the role of part-time guidance counselor.

In 1965, G.C. assumed the position of central office supervisor after Laurel County School Superintendent Hayward Gilliam asked him to help build Laurel County's first million-dollar high school. He spent 13 years as supervisor before being hired as the Laurel County superintendent in 1978. In his 10-year tenure as superintendent, he oversaw several major projects, including the construction of Cold Hill Elementary and junior high schools North and South Laurel Middle Schools.

In 2006 Mr. Garland was honored when the Laurel County school administration named one of the new office buildings after him—the G.C. Garland Administration Building, on the campus of London Elementary School. Furthermore, two of G.C.'s daughters, Jan and Sharon, currently work at Bush Elementary School.

Grover Cleveland "G.C." Garland's lifetime of work and dedication to the education of Kentuckians is truly an inspiration to the people of our great Commonwealth. The Laurel County Sentinel Echo recently published an article highlighting and thanking G.C. for his service to the people of Kentucky. I ask unanimous consent that the full article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BUILDING A LEGACY
(By Sue Minton)

For more than 50 years Grover Cleveland (G.C.) has been involved with the Laurel County School System, except for four years he served his country in the U.S. Air Force, and one year teaching another county.

The 79-year-old entered Murray Elementary School (Clay County) at the age of five and finished his elementary years at Burning Springs Elementary.

"Burning Springs was a three-room elementary school and they didn't teach every grade every year," Garland said. "They were not teaching the fifth grade the year I was supposed to be in the fifth. I was promoted to the sixth grade and this put me two years ahead of myself. I always did well academically, but socializing and sports were a problem for me. I was a nerd in today's language."

Before Garland entered high school, his parents moved from Clay County to Laurel County and he continued his education at Bush High School, graduating in 1948 at the age of 16.

Then having completed two years of college, the 18-year-old found himself teaching at a one-room school.

"The year was 1950 and I was teaching in the Laurel County School District at Sasser School, teaching grades first through eighth," he recalls. He had one student, a girl, who was 16, just two years younger than he was at the time.

"That first year I also had two beginners. This concerned me," he added. "I thought, how would I ever deal with them. By the end of the school year I was more proud of them than any of the other students. You could really see what they had accomplished."

For his second year Garland was transferred to Valley Grove, the last one-room school built in Laurel County. "I had only taught there half a year when I received greetings from President Harry Truman. I didn't let them draft me; I joined the Air Force. The Korean Conflict was raging at that time."

Garland received his basic training at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas. He was later transferred to Keesler Air Force Base in Biloxi, Miss., where he remained for two years before going to Low Air Force Base in Denver, Colo.

"I was in Denver three months before I was transferred to Fairbank, Alaska with Project Remote," he said. "While there I developed back trouble and was transported to a bigger hospital at Scott Air Force Base in Illinois. The doctors were getting ready to do surgery when the surgeon went on leave. I was sent to Walter Reed Medical Center in Washington, D.C. where I had surgery."

"After recovering from back surgery, I returned to Laurel County to get my wife, Joan, and my car," he added. "I got married before going to Alaska, but she couldn't go with me. I only had about six months left in my enlistment period and we returned to Washington, D.C."

Although both Garland and his wife, Joan, were from Laurel County, they had not met before.

"I met Joan on leave from the Air Force at the Ocean Wave Skating Rink at Fariston," he recalls. "We planned on getting married at Christmas in 1954, but I got my orders for Alaska in October. I asked her if we could get married before I left and she said 'yes.'" The couple have been married 56 years.

In January 1956, Garland was discharged from the U.S. Air Force. He and Joan returned to Kentucky and Garland returned to education.

He attended the University of Kentucky, receiving a degree in secondary education majoring in math, history and political science. While at UK, Garland taught one year at an elementary school in Bourbon County. Also, his son, Ronald Wayne, was born. (Wayne is now a chemical engineer for Eastman Chemical Company in Kingsport, Tenn.)

Garland and his family moved back to Laurel County and he started teaching at Bush School. For eight years he taught mostly math.

He remembers teaching trigonometry to one senior class. "The class had an average I.Q. of 120. Those students have gone on to do great things. I wish we put more emphasis on the Gifted and Talented Program these days."

"Also, our daughters, Sharon and Jan, were born during my tenure at Bush."

Garland later accepted the responsibilities of a half-time guidance counselor.

"The guidance counselor program began while I was at Bush," he said.

"I picked-up my master's degree while I was teaching at Bush and it was at this time the National Defense Education Act began. The government got all excited after Russia launched the satellite Sputnik, thinking other countries were superior to the United States in math and science. This spurred more training for math teachers and guidance counselors. I was in both categories, so I got a lot of those institutes. I made a summer job out of going to school. Joan said I was a professional student."

It was during one of the institutes at UK during the summer of 1965 that Garland was contacted by then Laurel County School Superintendent Hayward Gilliam. "Mr. Gilliam told me he wanted to bring me into the central office as a supervisor. He said he was going to build a new high school and wanted me to help him. At that time we still had 12 to 14 one-and-two room schools. They had been good in their day, but their day had long since passed."

Garland relates a story pertaining to a one-room school.

"When I went into the central office it was during Lyndon Johnson's term and they had just discovered poverty in these hills." The Council of Southern Mountains in Berea had gathered some books they wanted to send to our one-and-two room schools. People had donated the books; they were mostly for adults. One of the schools received some of these books in a blue footlocker. A representative from the council came down to see where his books had gone and what good they had done. I took him to the school. They had a substitute teacher that day and she had no idea where his books had gone. He noticed a big blue patch on the front door and said 'at least the box was useful.' They had taken part of the footlocker and patched a hole on the front door."

He recalls how the new school, Laurel County High School, was built.

"Before I took the supervisor's job I talked to some people and was told they didn't think the district could build a new school. The district was in debt. But, Mr. Gilliam was determined. That was the same year of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act (ESEA), the 'big' federal aid program that offered funds to areas in poverty. It was broken down into different programs, one being the Title I Program. Laurel County's first allotment of Title I money was $414,860. That was a lot of money in those days. We still had those one-and-two room schools, were short on teachers and short overall on classrooms. The people over ESEA first said no construction with the funds. Susan Lou Young and I came into the central office at the same time as supervisors and we went with Mr. Gilliam to Frankfort to speak with the state coordinator of Title I. We were told we could not use the funds for construction. Mrs. Young said, 'Looks like we are just too poor to be helped.' The coordinator later said he thought about that and went to Washington, D.C. They agreed some of the money could be used for construction."

Among the first building projects were libraries and reading rooms on the existing consolidated schools, followed by a lunchroom at Bush School.

Mr. Gilliam approached Garland saying he could purchase a 60-acre farm for $2,000 an acre if he could get $80,000 from the Title I money."

"We told them in Frankfort how we were going to do away with the one-and-two room schools and consolidate so the students could have more Title I services," Garland added. "London School, and independent district, was bursting at the seams and had no room to expand. At this time they merged with the Laurel County School District, and in the 1970-71 school year Laurel County High School opened, partially built with Title I funds."

"This was the first million-dollar school in Laurel County," he added. "And the four old high schools became junior highs."

After 13 years as a supervisor and federal programs coordinator with the school district and the retirement of both Mr. Gilliam and the assistant superintendent, Garland pitched his hat in the ring for superintendent.

In 1978 Garland was hired as superintendent with a two-year contract. Joe McKnight came on-board as assistant superintendent.

In 1980 Garland's contract was not renewed and with 30 years of service to the district, he retired.

"That fall, the political climate changed. The superintendent was terminated and I applied to come back," Garland said. "I was hired, finished the former superintendent's term and received a four-year contract. I was superintendent for 10 years minus the 6 or 7 months when my contract was not renewed, retiring under my own steam in 1988."

Under Garland's administration, Cold Hill Elementary and the junior high schools, now North and South Laurel Middle Schools, were the major projects.

In 2006, Laurel County's current school administration paid tribute to his legacy in education by naming one of the new administration office buildings after him—the G.C. Garland Administration Building, located on the campus of London Elementary School.

Assistant Superintendent Joe McKnight succeeded Garland as superintendent. "Joe did a lot for the system. The second high school, north Laurel High School, Hunter Hills and the new Bush school were built while he was superintendent."

With two daughters in education—Jan teaching fifth grade and Sharon a guidance counselor, both at Bush Elementary School—Garland thinks the education field has changed a great deal.

"The facilities have changed dramatically over the years. We have always had good people, but there is no comparison to the facilities today as to 1965 when I went into the central office. Teachers are better trained today, at least in terms of college years and degrees and there is more and better funding of services for students. Teachers see it harder because of paperwork involved and discipline. I think paperwork takes away from time that could be used for instruction. But I guess students are like the rest of us, they are spoiled by all that has been handed to them. I just hope we don't hand them the debt to pay."

"I don't think society in general appreciates a good education. Not necessarily the children. I think we are a spoiled society. In my days in school when they talked about rights, they talked about responsibility as well. Since the 60s we have majored on rights with very little talk about responsibility."

"Again, we have always had good people in the Laurel County School System and I was always for the principals and assistant principals," he said. "In my time we kind of used them as a board of directors. They made it easier on us in the central office. They had a hand in setting the policies and they backed the policies."

Garland said he missed the students terribly for a while after he left the classroom, as well as the good people he worked with at the central office and the school system in general.

"I worked with a lot of good people," he said. "We had a great team. I give any credit due to my family, my church and all the people I worked with. Also, I think we all owe a debt of gratitude to our current board members and to all who have ever served in that role."

MONTANA TAA

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I want to thank all those Montanans who have participated in TAA and have shared their stories with me. They include Jerry Ann Ross, Wilfred Johnson, Daryl Blasing, Larry Netzel, Albert Drebes, and Kris Allen.

These Montanans embody the ideals of the TAA Program, which encourages people to keep trying, even when they have been let down or let go. Their hard work and perseverance led them to their success today.

I also want to thank a few more Montanans. These folks work tirelessly to deliver the TAA program and to help people like Jerry Ann and Larry get good-paying jobs. I want to recognize and thank the following: Kathy Yankoff, Elaine Eidum, Laura Gardner, and Wolf Ametsbichler.

And I want to thank the educational institutions that have helped to train these workers to find good-paying jobs. These include Flathead Valley Community College, University of Montana, especially the College of Technology; and Helena College of Technology.

I know these names are just a few of the many American success stories across the country.

For those Americans who have good paying jobs, keep at it. And for those of you who are looking for a job, help is on the way.

I am proud to support these Montanans. I am proud to support TAA.

HISPANIC HERITAGE MONTH

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today to join in the celebration of Hispanic Heritage Month and to recognize the many invaluable contributions that have been made by the Hispanic-American community.

For generations, a vibrant Hispanic community has worked tirelessly to enrich and strengthen our Nation.

With ancestors coming to the U.S. from Spain, Mexico, the Caribbean, and Central and South America, the Hispanic community's rich culture has enhanced the great diversity of the United States.

According to the latest census numbers, there are more than 54 million people of Hispanic heritage living in the United States, including 4 million in Puerto Rico alone.

All across America, a vibrant Hispanic-American community is contributing to all sectors of our economy and is playing a key role as small business entrepreneurs and government leaders on the Federal, State and local levels.

This is especially true in California, my home State, which boasts over 1,000 publicly elected officials of Hispanic heritage. These dedicated public officials serve as Members of the U.S. Congress, the California State Legislature, and hold numerous positions on the city and county levels of government.

This year, I was proud to support the nomination of Yvonne Gonzalez Rogers to serve as a U.S. District Judge for the Northern District of California. Her nomination is historic, as she would be the first Latina judge to serve on that court.

Judge Gonzalez represents an American success story, as her path in life has been extraordinary. Of her parents, her sixteen aunts and uncles, and their children, Judge Gonzalez Rogers is one of only three family members to attend college.

She has been able to rise from modest beginnings to graduate from two of the best universities in the country.

It is my hope that many more young people will follow Judge Gonzalez's journey. That is why I believe it is in America's best interest to give talented young adults who have good moral character and are dedicated to serving the United States the opportunity to succeed. The DREAM Act embodies the values of hard work that make this country great and I will continue to support this important legislation.

I believe it is also important to recognize the 1.1 million Hispanic Americans 18 years or older who are veterans of the U.S. Armed Forces. Americans of Hispanic descent have defended and served our country with valor in every conflict since the Revolutionary War.

Forty-one Hispanic Americans have received the Congressional Medal of Honor, the highest military award presented by the United States.

I commend our Hispanic-American veterans, as well as those on active duty, who have risked and given their lives for the safety and well-being of our Nation.

It is my hope that more of today's young people, including those of Hispanic heritage, will soon have the opportunity to pursue their dreams of obtaining a higher education degree or serving in the U.S. military.

On the larger front, we must continue to strive towards reforming our broken immigration system, which is crucial to the future success of the Nation's economy.

This country was built by people who risked everything because they believed in the promise and opportunities available in America. Part of the American dream is that anyone with a desire and a will to work can make a life for themselves here.

As the current generation of Hispanic Americans continues to strive to fulfill the American dream, I am pleased to celebrate their past accomplishments as well as their future achievements that will continue to make this country great.

TRIBUTE TO LAWRENCE H. LEE AND GERALD GRINSTEIN

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to two men whose influence has greatly benefitted my State.

My good friend Lawrence H. Lee was, at one time, the CEO of Western Airlines. As you may know, before merging with Delta Air Lines in 1986, Western was one of the largest airlines serving the western U.S.

In 1982, as an executive at Western Airlines, Lawrence was responsible for establishing a hub for the airline in Salt Lake City, UT. This would prove to be a consequential decision, both for the airline and, most especially, for the economic future of the State of Utah.

In the early 1980s, Western Airlines was on the verge of bankruptcy. Lawrence was appointed CEO in 1983 and tasked with the job of turning the airline around. Under his leadership, they were able to reduce costs and return Western to profitability. Ultimately, this success led to Western's merger with Delta Air Lines.

During his tenure as CEO of Western Airlines, Lawrence's right-hand man was none other than Gerald Grinstein, Delta's future CEO. An excerpt from Lawrence's journal gives an account of Mr. Grinstein's efforts to save Delta Air Lines and preserve its Salt Lake hub.

It is important to note that Delta's Salt Lake hub, which exists as a direct result of my friend Lawrence's decision to create a hub there for Western Airlines, is vital to Utah's economy. Salt Lake City is small relative to other major airline hubs in the U.S. Therefore, the city and its surrounding community receive an almost inordinate economic benefit from the presence of the Delta hub. Delta's Salt Lake hub attracts untold amounts of business to Utah. It was cited as a reason that Utah was able to secure the Winter Olympics in 2002. All told, Utah receives nearly $18 billion every year from commercial aviation, most of which is derived from Delta's presence in the market.

I thank my good friend Lawrence Lee for his contribution to Utah's growth and development. In his journal, Lawrence states that Gerald Grinstein should be considered a "Giant of Salt Lake City." I certainly agree. But, I believe much the same could be said about Lawrence Lee.

Mr. President, as testimony to the importance of Lawrence Lee and Gerald Grinstein to Utah's economic growth, I ask unanimous consent that an excerpt from the Personal Journal of Lawrence H. Lee be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EXCERPT FROM THE PERSONAL JOURNAL OF
LAWRENCE H. LEE—2011

When an “unfriendly takeover” of a public transportation company occurs, one of the most important events to transpire is the testimony of each of the two Chief Executive Officers before the United States Senate Commerce Committee. The answer to each of the Senator’s questions, and the way each Senator reacts to that answer, can pretty well predict whether or not they will bless the takeover.

This event took place between US Airways and Delta Air Lines. US Air had offered between eight and ten billion dollars to purchase Delta Air Lines while Delta was in bankruptcy. They had the financing arranged to buy Delta and it was apparent the Creditor’s Committee was in favor of their purchase arrangement.

Had you been given the job to select a candidate who would ultimately become Delta Air Lines’ CEO to testify at this hearing, what array of education, talent and experience might be included in your list of credentials? The future of thousands of employees and the financial health of at least one state’s economy would most likely hang in the balance of this person’s success in giving convincing testimony at this Senate hearing.

If I had been given that job, this is what I might have submitted as requirements to assure victory.

Graduate from the law school of an acclaimed university.

Be the Chief of Staff to an influential United States Senator.

Practice law as Chief Counsel to the Commerce Committee of the U.S. Senate.

Be Counsel to the Senate Merchant Marine and Transportation Subcommittee. Serve on a major airline’s board of directors.

Ultimately be appointed Chief Executive Officer of that company.

Merge the airline with a partner who would keep the airline’s current hub operations in place.

Be appointed to the merged airline’s board of directors and so impress the others on the board that they would extend the person’s tenure beyond the mandatory age for leaving the board.

Take over the leadership of that airline when it is financially crippled and then take it through bankruptcy.

SO BEGINS MY ACCOUNT OF GERALD GRINSTEIN’S
RESCUE OF DELTA AIR LINES AND THE SALT LAKE AIRLINE HUB

One must look at Grinstein’s post-graduate history in order to understand how decades later he arrived at a point where his actions, while the airline was in bankruptcy, were crucial to the future economy of Utah.

Not long after Jerry graduated from Harvard Law School and entered the political arena, he obtained a position in Washington as Chief Counsel to the U.S. Senate Commerce Committee and Counsel to the Merchant Marine & Transportation Subcommittee. This put him in touch with some very important Senators; several who were still serving when he was CEO of Delta Air Lines.

Grinstein was introduced to Western Airlines by Neil Stewart, Western’s Vice President Governmental Affairs. Neil knew him when he was Administrative Assistant to the Senator from the State of Washington, Warren G. Magnuson.

Dominic P. Renda, then CEO of Western, was seeking a replacement for a retiring board member from Seattle. He asked Stewart for a suggestion and Neil recommended Gerald Grinstein who was then elected to the Board of Directors in 1977. During a later discussion with an influential member of Western Airline’s board of directors, Bishop Victor Brown, I discovered that we both had the feeling that there was something special about Jerry. Although he had never held an executive position in a corporation, we felt he had un-tapped potential.

In the 1980’s, Salt Lake City seemed ready to do what was necessary to become a greater draw for new industry. To have this happen, the right people were in place; especially the new Mayor, Ted Wilson. He had based his campaign on the expansion of the Salt Lake Airport. When I arrived in February, 1982 with the news that Salt Lake City was to be Western’s main hub operation, it was as though Mayor Wilson had been awaiting our arrival. He welcomed us with open arms.

With the successful completion of the Salt Lake hub, and subsequent building of the “D” concourse, Western Airlines was in the position to meet the new deregulated marketplace; however, our cost structure was still too high to fight off the new low-cost carriers. This led to continued losses.

By April 1, 1983 I was asked to take on the chore of turning Western around. I knew I would need someone at my side who was a good communicator with fresh views; someone who was strong and yet sufficiently flexible to step into a new career.

Western was on the edge of bankruptcy, so the changes required had to be made quickly. From the moment I was asked to be the CEO I knew Jerry Grinstein was the man that could fill this position. In January, 1984, he accepted the position of President and Chief Operating Officer.

We at Western Airlines were successful in lowering costs, showing a record annual profit; and a potential groom, Delta Air Lines, had proposed marriage. In their proposal, Delta offered Western two seats on their board of directors. Jerry, then the CEO, took one of them. Later his experience and performance was deemed so valuable that the Delta board waived the “age 70 and out” rule so Jerry could stay on the board.

When Leo Mullin, Delta’s CEO, resigned, Jerry was asked to be the President and CEO. Delta was in grave financial condition. Grinstein did everything in his power to keep Delta out of bankruptcy, but the pilot’s cooperation did not come early enough to keep this from happening. Therefore, on September 14, 2005, Delta and its subsidiaries filed a petition for bankruptcy protection.

During this bankruptcy, US Airways, Inc. made an unsolicited eight-billion dollar offer to buy Delta Air Lines. Their plan was filed and was being evaluated by the Creditors Committee. Grinstein had submitted Delta’s plan for recovery to this same group and one was being weighed against the other.

The Creditors Committee knew that the merging of Delta with US Airways would require government approvals. There was a strong employee program mounted at Delta to fight off this takeover. Nevertheless, in spite of their efforts, rumors persisted that the Creditors Committee felt US Airways offer was best and that they could get the government approval necessary to allow it to go forward; that is, until Jerry Grinstein appeared before the Senate.

Jerry, and Doug Parker, CEO of US Airways, were asked to testify before the Senate Transportation Sub-Committee; the same august body to whom Jerry had once served as counsel. Grinstein was in his favorite element. He was calm, collected and totally prepared to defend his plan to exit bankruptcy over Parker’s plan to purchase Delta.

There was standing room only and the public area was filled with uniformed personnel from Delta Air Lines. Pilots in their full regalia were lining the walls. Those who had initially resisted Grinstein’s attempts to cut costs were now on his side and cheering him on.

At one critical point of the long examination, Parker made a speech on how he was going to maximize profits from his proposed venture and a Senator asked where he was going to get the aircraft to accomplish this feat. His quick answer was, “From Delta.” The pilots along the wall went ballistic. Jerry handled this well and the meeting soon ended.

Following this session, it was obvious to the Creditors Committee that approval from the government now looked risky and not long after, Delta’s plan was accepted. Grinstein’s testimony was the linchpin in blocking US Airways’ effort. No one else in the world could come close to accomplishing what Jerry did in that Senate Chamber. Jerry was at the right place at the right time to preserve the transportation service that Western Airlines established in May, 1982; the Salt Lake City Hub.

One might wonder why I place so much emphasis on this particular hub. I’ll explain this as briefly as I can. It is because, in ratio to population, Delta Air Lines brings to Utah an inordinate amount of employment and revenue, as compared to other major airline hubs in America.

In 2006 Campbell Hill was engaged by the Air Transport Association to survey all 50 States in the Union to see what percentage of their economy was derived from commercial aviation. Their study indicates that Utah is receiving close to eighteen-billion dollars a year from commercial aviation. The only States higher than Utah in percentage of employment from commercial aviation are Hawaii and Nevada; no surprise, considering their heavy tourist trade. This is why the Salt Lake City aviation hub is so vital to Utah’s financial system.

Another point to consider is that many of the companies that have opened businesses in Utah have stated that a major factor in their decision is the superior air transportation service available to them.

One other detail, the hub offers an immeasurable prestige to Utah by attracting many events that would otherwise book elsewhere. The greatest example of this is the 2002 Winter Olympics. To quote Kern Gardner, the man credited for recruiting Mitt Romney to organize those Olympics, “Without the Delta Air Lines hub we would never have been successful in bringing the Winter Olympics to Salt Lake City.” A point of interest, Kern was Chairman of the Airport Commission when Western decided to bring the hub to Utah. He was a great help to us at that time.

To me, the most significant contribution of the airline hub in Salt Lake City is the service it performs for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints who has its headquarters in Salt Lake City. The LDS Church has become a strong-worldwide entity and, with its large missionary program, books more travel than most big corporations. Recently there were non-stop flights added from Salt Lake City to Paris and to Tokyo. When this hub was formed by Western Airlines, we could only dream of such a local achievement. Without the LDS Church Headquarters in SLC it is doubtful one could support this direct-flight convenience.

By any measure, Grinstein should be considered “A Giant of Salt Lake City.” Through his efforts he helped preserve the “economic structure” of which I have spoken. Had US Airways been successful in their attempt to purchase Delta Air Lines, the multi-billion dollar a year contribution to Utah’s economy from the Salt Lake City aviation hub could have been severely disrupted.

Utah enjoys a finely-tuned transportation service and we owe Gerald Grinstein a debt of gratitude for helping to keep it in place.

RECOGNIZING THE ANTI- DEFAMATION LEAGUE

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, in the aftermath of September 11, Americans found strength in each other and in our common values. At a time when polarization and division seem to characterize the public debate on many of the important issues confronting our Nation, including terrorism and border security, the 10th anniversary of September 11 has been an occasion for us to reflect and refocus on the core values that unite us as Americans, including the belief that each person should be free to live without persecution, regardless of race, religion, or ethnicity.

It is in that spirit that I wish today to recognize the work of the Anti-Defamation League; which has carried out important work in opposition to the anti-Semitic sentiments of those promoting September 11 conspiracy theories. As we mark the 10th anniversary of September 11, we must strongly condemn the anti-Semitic conspiracy theories that blame Jews or Israel for carrying out the September 11 terrorist attacks that continue to this day.

The ADL also plays an important role in addressing the consequences of hate and fostering a dialog through its recent work with a broad coalition of groups. In its retrospective, "9/11 Ten Years Later: The Changing Face of Hate, Terrorism and Democracy in America," the ADL assesses the proliferation of anti-Semitic conspiracy theories related to the September 11 terrorist attacks, the nature and magnitude of homegrown extremism and terrorism, the growing problem of anti-Muslim bigotry, and the recalibration of the balance between security and individual rights. The ADL also has been a leader in promoting police-community partnerships and expanding training for law enforcement.

We face serious challenges in the fight against terrorism and violent extremism. In meeting those challenges, we as lawmakers should be inspired by efforts like those of the ADL to transcend division and differences.

On the occasion of the 10th anniversary of September 11, it is an honor for me to recognize the work of the ADL and underscore the importance of their message.

RECOGNIZING THE FREEPORT FLAG LADIES

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, today I wish to pay tribute to three truly remarkable Mainers—Elaine Greene, Carmen Footer and JoAnn Miller, affectionately known as, The Freeport Flag Ladies. It has been said that great things come in threes. That adage applies many, many times over for my friends and phenomenal Mainers, all retired and residing together in Elaine's home on School Street in Freeport. I am in awe of them and their story which is one of unabashed patriotism, limitless inspiration, and a love of country that makes us all inexcessibly proud.

Every Tuesday morning from 8 to 9 a.m., regardless of weather and irrespective of season, these renowned Flag Ladies have stood not far from another icon in Maine, L.L. Bean, with the presence and exuberance of not one, but three Statues of Liberty having come to life for the single purpose of paying rightful homage to those who have sacrificed for all of us—our brave service men and women and our first responders.

And incredibly, they have never, ever missed a Tuesday—not once. They have given up vacations and used the money they saved for this and other endeavors, including sending care packages to those fighting in Iraq and Afghanistan. They travel to Bangor International Airport two to three times a week to join the Maine Troop Greeters, or to Pease International in New Hampshire, they attend numerous troop send-off or welcome-home ceremonies, and Elaine estimates she has taken 1 million photos of the troops when they greet them at various locations.

These women project the inescapable belief that our strength and resolve as a State and a nation have always emanated not from Augusta, not from Washington, but from the people themselves—from tireless patriots of their own volition performing the most extraordinary of deeds. I well recall when we stood shoulder to shoulder as the steel beams from the Twin Towers—bequeathed by officials at Ground Zero to the town of Freeport—journeyed this past May from their hallowed home in New York to be enshrined in a 9/11 Memorial. Elaine, Carmen, and JoAnn's leadership in bringing the steel to Maine was instrumental.

How fitting it is that this massive steel beam that once undergirded the World Trade Center now undergird our spirits, our hearts, and our memories in Freeport. After all, there are only a finite number of steel pieces that remain from the Twin Towers, and the requests for them within America and around the world far exceed what is available. To have the proud distinction of displaying this beam—in which so much meaning is infused—defies description. But behind Maine's selection was the knowledge that we would be more than custodians of this patriotic emblem—that we would in fact be its steward. What better stewards than the Freeport Flag Ladies.

The words are difficult to find to adequately convey the height of my admiration, not to mention the sense of privilege I have felt when joining them on Main Street to wave American flags. People honk as they drive by, they wave, they stop and thank them—it really is something. Let me just say, it was the highest of honors to join Elaine, Carmen, and JoAnn on the 10th anniversary of the September 11 attacks in Freeport.

Ever since I learned of their exceptional response to the horrific events of 9/11, Tuesdays have never been the same for me, for my staff, and for the countless individuals who have encountered them in Freeport or heard about them in the news. Indeed, after the heinous acts that occurred that Tuesday morning on September 11, 2001, when President Bush asked us all, as Americans, to walk outside and light a candle in remembrance of those individuals taken tragically from us too soon, Elaine, Carmen, and JoAnn did just that. But they also kindled a deeper flame in all of us by bringing American flags with them to wave on Main Street in Freeport. And for that we are so very grateful.

It is fitting that these three women with backgrounds in health care have taken it upon themselves—one Tuesday at a time, one greeting at a time, one photo at a time, and one good word at a time—to help heal our Nation by harnessing the best of who we are and what we stand for, whether in the best of times or when facing adversity.

When considering their stalwart dedication to our country and those who serve her, I cannot help but recall one of Maine's giants and America's military heroes, GEN Joshua Chamberlain, who once said, "I long to be in the field again, doing my part to keep the old flag up, with all its stars." The Freeport Flag Ladies, by being civilian sentinels of freedom have indeed been doing their part for 10 years. Thank you Elaine, Carmen, and JoAnn.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

TRIBUTE TO DR. C. PAT TAYLOR

• Mr. BLUNT. Mr. President, today I pay tribute to Dr. C. Pat Taylor, who has served as president of Southwest Baptist University in Bolivar, MO, for the last 15 years, making him the longest serving president in the 133-year history of the school. Dr. Taylor already had an impressive record in higher education before coming to SBU in 1996. In the last 15 years he has added to that record of accomplishment and earned respect for his leadership and dedication to the students and community at Southwest Baptist University.

Southwest Baptist University is a very special place to me. I earned my undergraduate degree there and 20 years later served 4 years as its President. Dr. Taylor is my successor, and I have enjoyed watching the university grow and get even better under his leadership.

During his remarkable tenure at SBU:

Dr. Taylor has presented a record 11,881 degrees since 1996.

SBU has Missouri's third largest nursing degree program on its Springfield campus.

The number of student missionaries sent out in North American has doubled to more than 400 in the last decade, and Dr. Taylor hopes to see that continue to increase.

Student enrollment peaked at more than 3700 in the fall of 2009 and remains at 3,576 this semester.

The Partner in Excellence campaign between 1999 and 2005 raised a record $62 million to fund 13 major building projects for the arts, instructional technology and extended learning, sports and athletics, religious education, and campus parking.

The SBU endowment more than doubled during the last decade to over $19 million.

The school's first doctoral program was launched, and the number of physical therapy applications has grown each year.

"It's all God's blessing," Dr. Taylor has explained. "We've worked hard, but God has blessed it. It's not what we've done, but it's what God has done through us. When I really look at our success, it's because God has ordained that we will be successful."

I could not agree with Dr. Taylor more. I would add that Dr. Taylor is a blessing to Southwest Baptist University and the community. It is my hope that Southwest Baptist University continues to meet its mission as a "Christ-centered, caring academic community preparing students to be servant leaders in a global society." It is a bold calling, and I am certain SBU has the leadership and dedication in Dr. Taylor to see it fulfilled.●

TRIBUTE TO GLENN VANSELOW

● Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, today I want to recognize and honor Glenn Vanselow and wish him well upon his upcoming retirement from his position as executive director of the Pacific Northwest Waterways Association of Portland, OR.

Glenn has served as the executive director of the Pacific Northwest Waterways Association since 1989. His 22 years of service to Oregonians and all the residents of the Northwest have been invaluable. His advocacy on behalf of infrastructure projects in the region has been key to ensuring that Oregon's ports remain a vital component of our economy and laid a foundation for them to grow and flourish in the future.

He has been critical to helping build and maintain the locks, dams, hydropower and irrigation projects on the Columbia/Snake River system that have been so important to commerce in our region. He brought experience, know-how, leadership, and vision to critical navigation projects like the Columbia River Channel Deepening and the lock gate replacements just this past winter. And a few years ago, we were able to celebrate the completion of repairs to the Tillamook north jetty together.

Glenn has made many stops along the way in serving the Northwest. He is on the board of the Lower Columbia River Estuary Partnership, he co-chaired the Bi-State Water Quality Study for the Lower Columbia and served as chair of the Lower Columbia River Estuary Program in developing a management plan for ecosystem restoration. Past board memberships have included the Oregon Governor's Council of Economic Advisors, Regional Maritime Security Coalition-Columbia River, and University of Idaho College of Mines Advisory Board.

The legacy of Glenn's time with PNWA will be the permanent and long-term investments in Oregon that he helped move forward, the jobs those projects helped to create, and the families who have benefited from the great work the PNWA has done during his tenure. I know my home State of Oregon owes Glenn a great debt.

I congratulate Glenn on his significant contributions to the growth and development of the economy of the Pacific Northwest, and I wish him well in retirement.●

Mr. LEAHY. Madam President, the Senate today is expected to pass the Kate Puzey Peace Corps Volunteer Protection Act of 2011. I support this legislation and I commend its sponsors, Senator ISAKSON and Senator BOXER, and their counterpart in the House of Representatives, Congressman POE, for the efforts they have made to get it passed.

Kate Puzey was a young, vivacious Peace Corps volunteer in Benin when she was murdered. Not only was she the victim of a terrible crime, the Peace Corps mishandled her case, in fact it contributed to her death by failing to protect her identity after she sent an email expressing concerns about the actions of a family member of a Peace Corps employee. It was inexcusable, and it tarnished the Peace Corps' reputation.

This legislation is also a tribute to Kate Puzey's family, who never wavered in their determination to honor and remember Kate by doing everything possible to protect the safety of other Peace Corps volunteers. And I commend the former volunteers, who were victims of sexual assault when they served, who have joined with her family in this effort.

I support this bill and have been a strong proponent of reform at the Peace Corps to improve training, transparency, accountability, and the effective use of resources. In fact, the report accompanying the Senate version of the fiscal year 2012 Department of State and foreign operations bill, S. 1601, which was reported by the Appropriations Committee earlier this week, discusses several steps the Peace Corps should take in this regard. But as chairman of the State and Foreign Operations Subcommittee that is responsible for the Peace Corps' budget at a time when, like other Federal agencies, it is facing cuts, I want to take this opportunity to ask my friend from Georgia if he would clarify the intent behind a few of the bill's provisions.

Am I right in understanding that the Peace Corps has established an Office of Victim Advocacy and that the requirement in section 8A(e)(3) of a 24-hour sexual assault hotline can be met by ensuring that all volunteers have contact information for the Office of Victim Advocacy? I assume this provision is not intended to impose an onerous or impractical burden on the agency, but rather is intended to ensure that volunteers who are victims of sexual assault have reliable contact information for a Peace Corps employee who is appropriately trained to receive a report of sexual assault and provide the necessary information and support to the volunteer.

Mr. ISAKSON. Yes, that is correct. Peace Corps volunteers need contact information for 24 hour access to the Office of Victim Advocacy, and this is what we intend by a hotline.

Mr. LEAHY. Is it correct that section 8C(d), “Transition,” is specifically intended to ensure that the Office of Victim Advocacy assists returned volunteers who are attempting to access services through the Federal Employees' Compensation Act? While such services are not provided through Peace Corps, and the agency's role may be limited, the victim advocate can assist and guide returned volunteers through the Department of Labor process.

Mr. ISAKSON. Yes, that is the intent.

Mr. LEAHY. Is it also correct that section 8E(a), “Monitoring and Evaluation,” is not intended to impose new requirements on the agency, nor to supersede current requirements in law, such as those of the Government Performance Results Act—Modernization Act, enacted in 2010. The GPRA-MA requires agencies to develop strategic and performance plans, among other things. To the extent that the agency already meets the requirements of this subsection to monitor and evaluate country programs and directors, it would not have to expend additional scarce resources for these purposes.

Mr. ISAKSON. Yes, that is correct.

Mr. LEAHY. With respect to section 8F(a)(3), concerning stalking, the mandate that the agency protect the confidentiality of volunteers who report stalking to “the maximum extent practicable” would not preclude the agency from taking appropriate steps to ensure the safety and security of the volunteer, or to take other steps to provide services to him or her. A victim of stalking may be at risk of physical attack, and if other appropriate individuals need to be informed of the identity of a volunteer in order to take action to address a potential risk to that volunteer's safety or security, we would not want to prevent that. At the same time, the agency must ensure that it complies with all legal protections regarding confidentiality, including the Privacy Act.

Mr. ISAKSON. I agree with the Senator.

Mr. LEAHY. Concerning section 8H, "Removal and Assessment and Evaluation," we recognize that Peace Corps cannot guarantee or know with absolute certainty that a given site is safe. But we do want the agency to take all necessary steps to assess the safety of a volunteer's site if that volunteer expresses a legitimate concern that he or she is at risk of imminent bodily harm.

Mr. ISAKSON. Yes, that is what we expect.

Mr. LEAHY. This bill, once it becomes law, may require the agency to hire additional staff, and given the wording of section 10, "Offset of Costs and Personnel," that could mean cutting costs or laying off other staff. However, I want to be sure that unless the new employee is being added solely because of this law, and would not have otherwise been added, and that the new staff's responsibilities relate solely to implementing provisions of the law, the agency would not be required to eliminate another position. Personnel numbers at any agency fluctuate, so it is important to determine whether a particular employee was hired "to carry out the provisions of this Act," as indicated in subsection (2).

Mr. ISAKSON. The Senator is correct.

Mr. LEAHY. I thank the Senator, and again commend him and the Puzey family for this very important legislation. We all support the Peace Corps' mission and we want to do everything we can to help it succeed, and at the same time ensure that volunteers have the training and support they need. There are inherent risks whenever an American travels, studies, works, or serves overseas, especially in remote areas in poor countries where law enforcement and judicial systems are often corrupt or dysfunctional. But what happened to Kate Puzey should never have happened. We need to do everything reasonably possible to protect the safety of Peace Corps volunteers, and this bill represents a major step forward. I am very pleased that it bears Kate's name. I know Peace Corps Director Aaron Williams has already taken some significant steps in this regard, and that he shares our goal.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent the substitute amendment at the desk be agreed to; the committee-reported amendment, as amended, be agreed to; the bill, as amended, be read a third time and passed, the motions to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements relating to this matter be printed in the RECORD.
