PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 108th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

Vol. 149

WASHINGTON, TUESDAY, JANUARY 28, 2003

No. 15

Senate

The Senate met at 10:31 a.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore (Mr. STEVENS).

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, Sovereign of America, source of our strength, motive of our unity, and basis of our commitment to serve in Government, we praise You for the privilege of living in this land of freedom and opportunity. Grant us wisdom, grant us courage for the facing of this cruel, crucial hour of history. Inspire us with vision as we confront the enemies of despotism and terrorism in the world today.

On this day of the State of the Union Address by our President, we ask for Your special blessing on him in this strategic time in history. We renew our loyalty to him as our President, our attentiveness to listen to his vision, and our thoughtful reflection on his convictions on the awesome issues before our Nation and our terrorist-troubled world.

When the President stands before the Joint Session of Congress and the Nation, clear the prayer channels as we join with Americans everywhere in intercession for Your divine guidance for him. Be with the Senators as they live out their primary dedication to You, their patriotism for America, and their creative debate on the national and international soul-sized issues confronting our Nation. Bless our President and both Houses of Congress on this important day. You are our Lord and Saviour. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable LARRY E. CRAIG, a Senator from the State of Idaho, led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore (Mr. CORNYN). The majority leader.

SCHEDULE

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, today the Senate will be conducting morning business to allow Senators to speak and to introduce legislation. Under the previous order, at 12:30 p.m., the Senate will recess until 2:15 p.m. for the weekly party lunches. As previously announced, there will be no rollcall votes today.

This evening, the President will deliver his State of the Union Address. I ask all Members to be in the Senate Chamber by 8:30 p.m. so we can proceed as a body to the House Chamber for the President's speech which will begin promptly at 9 p.m.

For the remainder of the week, the Senate will consider any legislative or executive matters that become available. There may be some additional nominations that are reported by the committees of jurisdiction, and it is my hope that the Senate will be able to act on those nominations in a timely way.

In addition, it will be necessary to act on a further continuing resolution this week. Therefore, rollcall votes are possible this week.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the morning business time ordered for today be divided as follows: The time from 10:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. be under Republican control; the time from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. be under Democratic control. I further ask unanimous consent that upon reconvening from the party lunches recess, the time from 2:15 p.m. to 3:15 p.m. be under Democratic control; the time from 3:15 p.m. to 4:15 p.m. be under Republican control; finally, that the time from 4:15 p.m. to 5 p.m. be equally divided between the two parties.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, can we modify the request so that we lock in which Democrats expect to be here? Some of the times are more than 10 minutes, so we will need to ask unanimous consent to do that. I will go over that now with the consent of the Republican leader: From 11:30 a.m. to 11:45 a.m., Senator DURBIN; 11:45 a.m. to 12 noon, Senator BOXER; from 12 noon to 12:15 p.m., Senator STABENOW; from 12:15 p.m. to 12:30 p.m., Senator BIDEN; from 2:15 p.m. to 2:45 p.m., Senator KENNEDY will be in control of the time. There will be some other Senators who will speak, but Senator KENNEDY will allot the time. From 2:45 p.m. to 3:05 p.m., Senators BOXER and JEFFORDS; from 3:05 p.m. to 3:15 p.m., Senator SCHUMER.

This throws morning business off by 15 minutes. If the leader wants to take 15 minutes for the Republicans at 5 o'clock, that will be appropriate, but from 4:15 p.m. to 5 p.m., Senators DAYTON and DORGAN control that time.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, the reason there is some discussion is that we do need to be out of the Chamber by 5 o'clock to prepare for this evening; so if we can have some modification of the time—

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the note I was given had the wrong time. It will be from 4:45 p.m. to 5 p.m., Senator DAYTON.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the majority leader so modify his request?

Mr. FRIST. I so modify my request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, over the course of the week, as I mentioned, we will likely have votes. We will be dealing with the continuing resolution and, I am very hopeful, nominations as they come forward.

With respect to Friday, I expect there to be no rollcall votes, and we likely will not be in session on Friday out of consideration for the Democratic gathering and planned meeting. That will be similar to the following Friday as well. We will have further announcements on that schedule during the course of the week.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, if I may say before the leader leaves the floor, I believe we had a productive week last week. It was extremely difficult and contentious at times. When it ended, I think it was good. I hope the leader will use whatever influence he has, which is significant, to have the conference move forward. We need to get this bill done. I hope the leader will do whatever he can to have the House and the Senate begin meeting immediately, and, of course, the way it works is the administration is heavily involved in those conferences. This is so important. I hope we start that "yesterday."

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I, too, will encourage our colleagues in the Senate and in the House of Representatives and the administration with regard to having an expeditious process. We all did work very hard. We had a recess that had been initially planned, and with the goal of being able to accomplish what we all set out to accomplish—and that is completion of these appropriations bills—all of us came back from that recess, worked together hand in hand, and accomplished a lot. So over the course of today, we will be talking to our colleagues on both sides of the aisle, and bicamerally, so we can expeditiously bring this legislation to a conclusion.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of morning business not to extend beyond the hour of 12:30 p.m., with the time to be divided as previously ordered, and with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho is recognized.

Mr. CRAIG. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. CRAIG, Mr. CRAPO, and Mr. LOTT pertaining to the introduction of S. 219 are printed in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced bills and Joint Resolutions.")

THE STATE OF THE UNION

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, tonight our President comes to Capitol Hill, as Presidents historically do, to deliver a State of the Union Message both to us here in Congress and to the country at large. I would have to say that this State of the Union probably, in his Presidency, is one of the most critical.

We have a very bold President who has not ducked from any of his responsibilities, and in so he has been a very dynamic, forceful leader for our country. Tonight I believe he comes to Capitol Hill to challenge us here in the Congress on a variety of fronts, to challenge us to do our work in a bipartisan way, not only for our country and for the citizens of our country but for the world at large. This is a President who tonight will speak on a variety of topics. Let me talk about four areas I think he will dwell on for much of his time.

First of all is growing our economy and creating jobs. There is no question that we are in, and have come through, a recession. We have men and women in our country who are out of work. The economy has slowed. The revenues to government have frustrated our States. Certainly we have to recognize and deal with that here, as revenues have declined. But most important, clearly it is an issue of men and women out of work. He will challenge us to grow our economy and to create new jobs, and he will do so by the dynamic approach of the stimulus package that will have tax reduction in it, to get money back into the economy and out to not only the job creator but middle-income Americans themselves, those who are the hard-working men and women of our country.

It will be argued from the other side, with oftentimes the gnashing of teeth and the wringing of hands, that somehow the President is going to take money away from Government. Somehow, it is Government, if you leave the money in Government, that will create all of these jobs and will provide the safety net and the security for the American people. Yet just last week we saw our colleagues on the other side offer amendment after amendment that would have driven up our deficit by nearly $450 billion to $500 billion over the next several years. They clearly demonstrated that their intent is to keep all the money they can get and spend it, instead of in any way trying to create a package that will not take money out of the pockets of the working men and women of our country but will also generate the incentives that will cause the economy of this country to reinvest and to create jobs.

Over the next several months—and I hope it will only be a couple of months—the Finance Committee here in the Senate, and hopefully the House Ways and Means Committee, will come forth with a budget and a budget proposal that will include within it, I trust, many of the incentives that our President is proposing in his economic stimulus package that he will talk about tonight. We can be a positive force in the economy by rewarding and recognizing both investment and hard work, instead of penalizing them by taking more and more, or by creating the kinds of hurdles or obstacles that the investment community has to take to reinvest in the economy. So I hope we listen closely to that proposal tonight, as our President visits with us about it.

He has obviously talked about—and I think will talk again tonight—strengthening and improving health care in this country. We worked at it a long while last year. We were at the threshold of dealing with Medicare reform and prescription drugs. Those probably are some of the most difficult areas with which to deal, but the most important. Prescription drugs have become a dynamic part of health care delivery in this country, yet we still deal with an old Medicare model that is not paying its way to the provider and the caregiver. As a result, many of our senior citizens are having difficulty finding a primary care provider, and are paying $300, $400, $500, $600 a month oftentimes, and more, for prescription drugs. We can deal with that this year and we can deal with it in a bipartisan way. The President has supported us in that.

But last year, struggle as we might, somehow some of my colleagues thought it was an issue better left unaddressed until after the election. Why? I suspect they thought they could take it to the people and somehow gain political favor by arguing that one side or the other had denied the senior citizens of this country access to a viable modern Medicare program with prescription drugs. I believe that argument fell hollow. What was heard by all of us who were out running for reelection last year was: Congress, do your work. Do it on a timely basis. Do it on a responsible basis. Yes, and do it in a bipartisan way. But don't drag your feet, don't argue, and, most important, don't in every way avoid getting your work done, failing to address the problem with the argument that somehow you will gain political favor by doing so; that will not work.

I think the President may also talk about something else that is reshaping American health care, and that is, of course, excessive lawsuits that are causing doctors literally to pack their bags and move to other States that have been bold enough to do tort reform over the last several years and where, as a result, the cost of insurance for care providers is not as great as it is in other areas of our country. This is something we have to deal with here. Yes, we have to look at a certain segment of our economy right in the eye and say fair is fair. A reward for malpractice suit should not make both the patient and his attorney multimillionaires in a single act. Clearly, a person injured by malpractice should be rewarded for that injury. None of us argue that. But the fact that in some instances predator lawyers can make a million dollars or more a case doesn't make a lot of sense to me, and I don't think it makes a lot of sense to the consumers, who now find they have to pick up the bill because of malpractice insurance that some doctors are now paying that is in the $200,000 to $300,000 to $400,000 a year range. That is, by any definition, excessive. I think our President will speak to that this evening, will talk about tort reform, and charge us, this Congress, in a bipartisan way to deal with that responsibly.

It is obvious to me, at least, that many Americans will be tuning in tonight to listen to the President on those issues. But obviously there is now another issue on which he will spend, I would guess, a good deal of time. That is the issue of defending peace and security at home and abroad. The President came to us last year in a post-9/11 environment with a very bold reform package. In the waning days of the last Congress, we produced a new agency of our Government entitled the Department of Homeland Security. That was a bold step on the part of our President. Anyone on the other side who says that we are less secure today as a country than we were before 9/11, or that we are not as secure as we ought to be, fails to recognize the significant amount of money and the major steps that have been and are now being taken to build greater security for the citizens of our country.

I was chuckling a little bit the other day when a Member of this Senate talked about not having accomplished anything. I thought, my goodness, that Senator must never travel on the airlines anymore, must never go through security checks that sometimes take 20, 30, and 40 minutes, that sometimes require all of your bags to be inspected, your shoes taken off, your coat and jacket to be taken off.

I have seen, and I am sure the Presiding Officer has seen, 4- and 5-year-old kids almost strip-searched and wanded at the airports. Arguably, that is security. Frustrating? Yes. But I think our airlines today are substantially more secure than they have been. They will become increasingly secure as we refine security, and the people at those checkpoints become all the more efficient in their jobs. That is part of what this Congress has accomplished.

Certainly border security has become increasingly tight. The ability to identify illegal aliens who may be here for a purpose of doing us harm is now an aggressive process, well underway. Our Department of Justice has moved very aggressively to find, apprehend, and prosecute those where cases can be effectively built that they are, in one form or another, here with a purpose other than finding work and providing beneficial service to this economy.

For anyone to say we are less secure today is a surprise to me. Does it say we are as secure as we ought to be? Certainly not. But it also suggests, in light of the threat of terrorism, that we, as a country, live differently today and must think differently in a post-9/11 environment, that we must be constantly vigilant and, yes, our agencies of government—whether it be Federal, State, or local—must improve their abilities. And they are being given the resources to do just that, to the tune of hundreds of millions of dollars. Certainly, that is a challenge. I think it is a challenge that the President will speak about this evening.

Lastly, and certainly as important, will be the issue of security abroad. Our Nation is a humane and civil nation. We are a peace-loving nation. We have always taken war as a very serious undertaking and one from which—while we do not enjoy it in any way when it comes to our own citizens' security and the security of freedom-loving citizens and allies around the world—we have not stepped back. Certainly, in a post-cold-war environment, we recognize, as the world's superpower, that awesome responsibility and force we have.

This President—and I have heard him, as have all of us—speaks very clearly to that, recognizing not only his responsibilities as our President and Commander in Chief, but it is a responsibility he does not take lightly nor does he take casually. He sees it as a huge responsibility and one that he and his Cabinet treat most seriously.

In doing so, he has operated both in a bold and cautious fashion. For anyone to suggest anything less than that did not hear our President's speech at the United Nations and his willingness to challenge them to do their job with the passage of the U.N. resolution that, in fact, finally put inspectors back into Iraq to do just that, to inspect and to find if Saddam Hussein had lived up to the original U.N. resolution, first and foremost, and, secondly, to see if, in fact, he was continuing to build weapons of mass destruction and if he had gained any kind of nuclear capability.

It has already been well established that he has both chemical and biological weapons. Those were found. Those were recorded. Yet somehow today the world is cautiously saying: Well, that doesn't seem to count anymore. It is what you find today or tomorrow that will cause this country and our allies to disarm Saddam Hussein.

I do not think the President or his people see it that way. And while they have been willing to give the United Nations ample time to respond, this President does have a responsibility, and that responsibility is, yes, to the world at large and the freedom-loving people around the world, but his responsibility is to us, here at home, to make sure the actions we take in foreign policy increasingly reflect on our security and our stability.

I think the President will talk about that this evening, as certainly he and his Cabinet have been involved in that over the last good number of weeks and months. It has been one of his primary missions, along with bringing this economy back to life and moving us forward as a country.

This is a critical speech for our country, both here and abroad, as this President speaks to us and to the American people about his vision of leadership and responsibility, to move our economy, to create jobs, to put people back to work and, at the same time, to strengthen and improve health care and the general well-being of the citizens.

He will, by his proposal of faith-based approaches, encourage us to deal with acts of compassion. The President wants to apply compassion to some of the deepest problems in America. That is a side of our President that has been badly underestimated by some. He will urge Congress to pass both his faith-based and citizen service initiatives. Why? Because it is in the best interest of this country to do so. For good people to be helping good people who are in need of help, with some assistance from our Government, at a tremendously lower cost and in a considerably more compassionate way, is exactly what this President will speak to in that initiative.

Lastly, of course, as I have mentioned, is defending the peace and the security at home and abroad. September 11, nearly 2 years ago now, was a time of awakening under an attack and a loss of our fellow citizens' lives that we didn't think could happen. While some experts had studied the issue over the years and had told us that someday it would happen, I don't believe there was ever a true belief that it could happen here. Now we know it can.

For us to think it will never happen again would be to dramatically underestimate not only the ability of the human mind to figure a new approach but the intent of terrorists to do our citizens and our country wrong.

We have made some great steps forward in reshaping Government and its agencies to be more sensitive, to be able to connect the dots of intelligence and information and, out of that, to make an assessment as to the security of our country.

Also, this President has gone much beyond that. He has reached out to the world at large and challenged people not to in any way encourage or ignore a risk of terrorism and to deal with terrorists as if they were enemies of the world and enemies of the state. Clearly, we have a role, as a very powerful country, in working with our allies to make sure terrorism and terrorists have no safe haven anywhere in the world. That is why our President insisted that U.N. resolutions be enforced and that we go back into Iraq, as the United Nations inspections team has over the last several months, to determine whether Saddam Hussein was living up to U.N. resolutions that largely were to disarm and neutralize him after the Desert Storm war over a decade ago.

That will be another important part of his speech this evening, as he assesses that for us and challenges us, both as a country and as a Congress, to work with him in the days to come.

Trade and jobs and the economy on one hand, security on another, these are issues that Congresses in the past have faced and this Congress will face. Our challenge is to be able to work together, not for one side to gain political advantage over the other but to see how we can best solve these problems. Many of them, if not most, will have to be dealt with in a bipartisan way so that our country truly does come together not only to make ourselves more secure, but in that security to be able to live in a good life, to be able to have the resources and the wherewithal to sustain life in both a livable and enjoyable fashion. That is the American dream. Most important, that is the American responsibility, be it here at home or to the world at large. That is our challenge.

I believe our President will once again challenge us this evening to greatness.

With that, Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Illinois is recognized for 15 minutes.

THE PRESIDENT'S STATE OF THE UNION ADDRESS

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, this is one of those big days in Washington. It happens every year with the President's State of the Union Address. We look forward to it. It is an opportunity for the entire membership of the Senate and House to gather on the floor of the House of Representatives and bring in the Members of the Cabinet, Supreme Court Justices, the diplomatic corps, and Joint Chiefs of Staff. The President of the United States comes before us in a well-publicized event to speak from his heart about the State of the Union, our Nation.

For about an hour—some Presidents take a little longer than others—the President has center stage, as he should; he is our leader, our Commander in Chief. There is an air of anticipation during this lead-up time to the State of the Union Address because, until he speaks the words, we are never quite sure what he is going to say. The White House, whether it is under a Democrat or Republican, will tantalize us with hints and little notions, but I have found in the time I have served in Congress that sometimes they are misleading and they don't tell you the whole story. It is not until you go into the House Chamber and sit in the chair and listen to the President that you hear firsthand what is on his mind.

You are not certain, as well, about the people he will honor and pick out. It has become a standing tradition, I think since President Reagan, for the President to invite people to sit in the gallery, usually with the First Lady. They are pointed to with pride as great Americans who have done extraordinary deeds. There is a lot of speculation who will be up there. Will it be the family of a Reservist who has been activated for a potential war in Iraq, a firefighter, a policeman, or a member of the health professions who has distinguished himself or herself in our homeland security? You are never sure. It is this uncertainty which leads to the excitement about the State of the Union Address.

But we learned today in a story published in the Chicago Tribune that some people living here in Washington, some who work on Capitol Hill, have no uncertainty about what the President is going to say. This morning, in the Chicago Tribune, in an article written by Jeff Zeleny, it was disclosed that the White House has invited a select audience of Republican lobbyists and political executives down to the White House today to hear the State of the Union Address. I think that is unprecedented. I don't think there has been a time before when a President has invited in lobbyists, special interest groups, to hear the State of the Union Address in advance.

These top strategists and opinion leaders are going to attend a "closed-door State of the Union briefing inside the White House complex." Who will be included? We are not sure of all of them. There will be about 70 top strategists, pollsters, and conservative groups, such as American Cause, founded by Pat Buchanan; Americans For Tax Reform, whose leader is Grover Norquist, someone who is well known in political circles in Washington. Then, of course, the lobbyists for the biggest corporations are going to be there in advance for the sneak preview, including personnel from AT&T and Eli Lilly, which is a major pharmaceutical company. They get a chance, before the American people, to hear the State of the Union Address.

Why would the White House want to open the doors for these special interest groups to hear the State of the Union Address before the President speaks to the American people? Well, it is certainly a special privilege he has granted to them. But it also reflects on what he is going to say in that State of the Union Address. He is certainly not bringing in these Republican strategists and business leaders and special interest groups to hear something they are going to find unsettling. He is really assembling a chorus of praise for those who will say after the speech that it is the best ever.

When the President really speaks to America and its issues, I just wonder, will we witness the same level of moral outrage from the conservative cable commandos as we heard in years gone by when special interest groups were invited to the White House? For this President to make history by bringing in lobbyists to hear the address before the people of the Nation, I am anxious to hear all of the people you see on cable channels and the reaction they will have.

Frankly, I am disappointed. I think this is a special moment for all of America. It is really not a special treat for lobbyists. Traditionally, this has been a moment for all America, to hear the President speak from his heart. When I reflect on what the President might say this evening, I know for certain he will speak about security, terrorism, North Korea and Iraq. That goes without saying. Those will be the issues that certainly will draw together many in Congress, Democrats and Republicans, on a bipartisan basis to stand behind our fighting troops and behind America as a leader in the world.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DURBIN. Yes, I am happy to yield to the Senator.

Mr. REID. I also read that article in the Senator's hometown newspaper, and I am wondering, if this is a closed hearing, is this a focus group? And I wonder if the lobbyists don't like certain lines of that speech, or certain paragraphs or phrases, do you think he will change the speech?

Mr. DURBIN. I don't know. Someone said this morning the White House said it is baked and he is not going to change a word of it. I cannot say if they are being called in as a focus group to see if there is anything they find objectionable. I think it is probably more likely that they already know in advance they are going to have a warm reception from the special interest groups for the State of the Union Address.

Mr. REID. I ask the Senator, also, based on what was reported in the Senator's home State newspaper, it appears to me, in answering my own question, that maybe they had a lot more to do with writing that speech than one would necessarily think. I think these people already know what is going to be in the speech, if you represent Eli Lilly. You can tell about that from what went on on the floor last week.

Mr. DURBIN. Eli Lilly is a special case. You will remember when we passed the homeland security bill to keep America safe from terrorism, someone stuck in a special provision that helped that drug company, which is based out of Indianapolis, IN. There was, I guess, embarrassment all around when it was discovered. Many times, these provisions are stuck in a bill in the hopes nobody will find them. Well, they were found and many people objected to that on the floor. If the Senator will remember, we had a vote on this issue. Several Republican Senators said they were embarrassed that a drug company would get a special break in the homeland security bill, which had nothing to do with homeland security, and it was going to come out soon. Despite that momentary embarrassment, the fact is that Eli Lilly is front and center in the White House when special interest groups are called in to have a preview of the President's State of the Union Address. That is troubling. I hope the press will ask those who made this decision whether they have not compromised the integrity of that institution as relates to the State of the Union Address. Why in the world is the President letting this happen?

I know what is going to be said tonight. The President is going to speak to us about Iraq. I think it bears repeating, as I said last week, America's future is about more than Baghdad. It is about the challenges that moms and dads across America worry about every single day. It is about more than Iraq. It is about the rock and the hard place which millions of Americans find themselves between when they deal with the Bush-burdened economy. How bad is this economy? How likely is it that this President will do something now at the end of 2 years to turn it around? The numbers are staggering. The numbers I give you are not cooked by Democratic strategists. These are numbers reported by President Bush's own agencies of Government.

We have had the first back-to-back years of job loss in America in 50 years; the worst job creation record of any President in 58 years, with 2.3 million private sector jobs lost since the beginning of this administration; a 43 percent increase in unemployment rates since President Bush took office—43 percent; the loss of $4.9 trillion in the stock market. Did my colleagues notice what happened yesterday in the stock market? People who follow this, as they should, know the Dow Jones hit 8,000. It lost 141 points in 1 day. What does it mean? It means for people who have stocks that they own directly or through mutual funds for their savings or their retirement, as the people say on the late night talk shows, they have seen their 401(k)s turn into 201(k)s—and maybe 101(k)s, if we are not careful. It is hard to even smile at that suggestion because a lot of people who counted on the stock market for their future have seen it disappear over the last 2 years during the Bush administration.

We have seen the elimination of a surplus in our budget. When President Clinton left office—and these are indisputable facts—we were generating a surplus each year to pay off the debt of America. Well, we are back in debt again. We are back in deficit. The projection is that this next year, the deficit we will face in America will be the worst deficit in 20 years, worse than any deficit under President Ronald Reagan, President Bush's father, or the early years of the Clinton administration. We are back in the deficit world.

What will the President say about that tonight? Will he remind us that his response to the deficit is a $676 billion tax break primarily for the wealthiest people in America? Think about that for a moment. At a time when we are in recession, at a time when we are most certainly to be involved in war in the Middle East—I pray that does not happen, but most certainly we are going to see that, with added expense to the taxpayers—at a time when we should be funding the security of America, our homeland security, instead of meeting those obligations, the President has said give a tax break to the wealthiest people in America—a $90,000-a-year tax break to people who make $1 million a year in income.

Because of our deficits and because of the President's tax cuts, he is unable to fund things which are critically important to America. President Bush's plan is no stimulus to our economy. It is, in fact, a debt burden that we are passing on to our children and grandchildren. We have classrooms that assemble with us regularly in Washington to talk about what is going on in Washington. The sad news for those young students is that this administration, with the cooperation of this Republican Congress, is running up the balance on America's mortgage for our kids to pay. That mortgage, incidentally, is money taken directly out of the Social Security trust fund to fund the tax breaks for the wealthy people in America. That is not fair.

I think the President should address the real challenges facing America, real job creation, a stimulus plan that will put people back to work, not one that is going to help the folks who sit around the country club and try to figure out what to do with their portfolios but the people on Main Street who are trying to keep their small businesses open and the folks who are struggling to keep their jobs.

One million American workers who have run out of unemployment have been left behind by this administration. There will be more to follow unless the President changes his approach.

Secondly, this President should address the costs of health care in America. Health insurance expenses have become a crippling liability on businesses and families who cannot afford to buy protection. Instead, the President is going to talk about tort reform, an important issue but one that does not bear directly on the cost of health insurance and the run-up we have seen there. He is going to talk about privatizing Medicare. So we are going to say to senior citizens, for the first time they have a choice: They can pick their doctor or they can have their prescription bills paid, but they cannot have both. Boy, is that the future of health care in America?

We also need to give a helping hand to middle-income families. Would it not be great to have the President say tonight: We are going to provide a tax deduction for college education expenses for middle-income families? Think about families worried whether their kids can afford to graduate from college because of all the debts they are going to have. Would it not be great for the President to say, "I believe in education"; instead of this being a tax break for millionaires, this will be a tax break for working families. Unfortunately, we should not hold our breath.

The President should also promise to fund his program of No Child Left Behind. He has created a mandate on every State and school district in America to do certain things, but he has refused to fund it. It is an unfunded mandate when the States are deep in debt. That is not fair, and the President should rise to that challenge.

Senator BOXER of California will speak to protecting the environment, so I will not dwell on that, but this President in 2 years has a dismal record. When it comes to the polluter pays for Superfund sites, the President says, no, the taxpayers should pay, not the polluting industries. That is plain wrong.

The President should commit himself to protecting Social Security. We know the baby boom generation is coming along in big numbers and they will be needing Social Security and Medicare. This President ignores that and instead increases the deficit and the debt of America at the expense of Social Security.

Finally, as to homeland security, listen carefully to see if we hear the following words tonight in the State of the Union Address: Osama bin Laden. Let's see if the President even mentions the name of the person we believe was responsible for September 11 who has disappeared from the headlines, disappeared from the news stories, because our pursuit of him has, frankly, not ended as we wanted. Let's see if the President mentions that effort. Let's see if he mentions investing in police and firefighters and health care across America to provide real security to the people of this Nation.

I yield the floor.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

AN ANXIOUS NATION

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I say to my friend from Illinois I always appreciate his remarks both on the floor and when he is out meeting with people via the media. He puts his finger on a lot of important issues. He mentioned that I was going to speak about the environment. This afternoon, I will take on that issue. I will mention it this morning, but my idea this morning, in the few hours before the State of the Union, is to basically address the President of the United States from this Chamber in a way to urge him to address the anxiety of the American people because I think the state of the Union, if it can be summed up in one word, is anxious.

I want to go through why I think that is the case. So as we get ready to take part in a wonderful ritual where the Members of the Senate will gather in this Chamber—and I know the Chair, as a new Member, will experience this amazing feeling of patriotism and excitement as we gather here to make that march across the Capitol to join our colleagues in the House—we think very seriously about the state of our Union and what we hope the President will say.

In the spirit of great respect, I want to tell the President, through this short talk of mine today, what I am hearing from my constituents about the state of our Nation.

When I say "Mr. President" in my talk, it is directed at President Bush.

Mr. President Bush, I must tell you that the state of the Union today is anxious—anxious about the twin threats of war and terrorism, about the health of our economy and our environment; anxious about our children's education and our family's health care; anxious about our basic civil rights, including our right to privacy and the right to make personal decisions without Government interference.

Mr. President, the people are anxious and they are worried that you are leading us prematurely down a lonely path to war while ignoring other serious threats to peace and that you have lost your focus on terrorism.

As Senator DURBIN said, the people have not heard a word about Osama bin Laden, whom you placed at the top of your terrorist list. We have not heard a word about him in months.

Many believe that you are heading down the wrong path on the economy; that you are leaving too many children behind; that you are sacrificing our environment at the altar of the special interests; and that you are failing to address the health care issue.

People worry that you are actively seeking to reverse the constitutionally protected right to privacy. Two examples of this are your attacks on the right to choose and your selection of Admiral Poindexter, who was convicted of lying to Congress, to lead the Total Information Awareness Program, collecting vast amounts of personal information and intelligence about ordinary American citizens.

I am very pleased there was an amendment which passed to essentially do away with that program, but we do not know what the House of Representatives will do in conference.

Mr. President, you have not stated at all that you are for getting rid of this agency which will know everything there is to know about any citizen they decide to follow around via their use of computers.

Here is the stark contrast to where we were a year ago, when the entire world stood with the President and with all the American people as we struggled to recover from the terrorist attacks and prevent their recurrence.

I saw Senator BIDEN on a talk show yesterday. He reminded us that a headline in a French newspaper said: We are all Americans. What a moment that was in history; the world was united behind us. Somehow we have lost that leadership. We need to get it back. Today America stands far too alone when it comes to foreign policy challenges.

Many thoughtful Californians of both political parties are saying U.N. inspectors must have more time to do their work. I hope the President will state that tonight. Three weeks ago, Colin Powell said the inspectors were gaining momentum. We also know we have yet to give the inspectors a lot of information we have about what has been going on in Iraq. Information is power. The inspectors need that information, first, to find out what happened to the weapons; second, so we can make a case that we do not have to deal with Saddam Hussein alone. I don't want to see us deal with Saddam Hussein alone. Could we beat him militarily? Absolutely. But what happens after when we are alone? What happens to sharing the costs of human life? We need our allies with us, and more than Great Britain.

Yes, Iraq must disarm. After all, Saddam Hussein said he would; he has to. He agreed to the resolutions. We have to keep in mind more arms were destroyed by the weapons inspectors in Iraq after the first Persian Gulf war than we destroyed by our bombs. That is a very important point reiterated by Madeleine Albright and by others. We have a great deal of information to give the inspectors. Let's give it to them. As long as Iraq is the focus of worldwide attention, as long as the inspectors are there, as long as we are having the no-fly zones patrolled by our planes and our allies in the north and the south, this man is boxed in. He cannot put a big toe outside of that country. He cannot do anything to harm us.

I believe, therefore, we have time to avoid the devastation of war and, once again, to build the case and keep the international community with us. I worry with this focus on Iraq that we have a foreign policy elsewhere in the world that is one of deliberate negligence. As a matter of fact, if I had to put a word or two to the Bush doctrine, it appears to be a policy of designed neglect, except for Iraq. We ignore the problems. We wait for the crisis to hit us. This modus operandi is causing serious trouble in North Korea because North Korea was ignored and now it has complicated a crisis that grew out of this neglect.

Closer to home in Latin America we see unrest. I ask, why do we see unrest? We have ignored the countries in our own hemisphere. We ignored Mexico. You promised there would be a new day. Yet we see the Foreign Minister of Mexico resigning out of frustration that he cannot even get a meeting with anyone in America who has any power. To have control over what goes on, that is foreign policy.

At home, people are anxious and worried. They are worried about terrorist attacks. I am introducing a bill that will enable us to have countermeasures placed on our commercial airlines so if someone held a shoulder-fired missile aimed at one of our commercial airlines, at a takeoff or landing period, when they are most vulnerable, there would be countermeasures on that plane. The President has been studying this issue. The President is spending tens of billions on missile defense for long-range intercontinental missiles. Perhaps it is up to $60 billion. A fraction of that would retrofit all of our planes.

And, by the way, when we take care of homeland security in such a manner, we create jobs, good-paying jobs, as well. Yet we will be prepared for what will come.

We have to fund homeland security. I know Senator SCHUMER is going to talk about that later today.

Let me finish by discussing the economy. We have watched this economy spiral downward for 2 years. We have seen this economy in a free fall. We have seen the stock market in a free fall. We have seen people in the country say: My God, I cannot retire. I was planning to retire. I will have to work 5 or 6 years because my retirement nest egg is essentially gone or so greatly reduced people cannot imagine.

The unemployment rate, which was 4.2 percent when President Bush took office, now stands at 6 percent nationwide. In my home State, it is at a 5-year high of 6.6 percent. This is bringing anxiety and angst to the people. More than 2.4 million private sector jobs have disappeared. Mortgage foreclosures have reached record levels. The stock market has lost trillions of dollars. We have gone from surpluses in our Federal budget to deficits as far as the eye can see. We are headed to a path of the worst economy in 50 long years.

In California last month alone the State lost 25,800 jobs. That is real people. What is your answer? Give tax breaks to the people who have jobs, who have earned millions of dollars, who are earning $1 million a year? You want to give them back $87,000, while my middle-class people are going to get back $87 a year. Where is that fair?

More than that, what kind of stimulus is that? Think about it. Someone who earns $1 million a year is going to take that $87,000-a-year tax cut. What are they going to do with it? They already have a new refrigerator in every home they own. They already have a new car or two parked at every home they own. They already have their vacations prepaid. What are they going to do? They are not going to do anything with that money that is going to stimulate the economy. The greatest secret of America is that our middle class is what makes the country great. It is our working families who will go out and spend that money in this economy, buying a new car. My friend from Michigan knows that is important. The millionaires have their cars. It is the middle-class working people, if they get a good deal on a car, who will go out, if they feel a little more economically secure, and purchase that car. More of the same of the trickle down to the rich, which never gets down to this country, will not get us out of the economic nightmare in which we find ourselves.

What the President wants to do to Medicare sends shivers up and down my spine. My friend from Michigan will talk about health care. I hope she talks about the fact that the so-called Medicare reform is the end of having a chance to pick your own doctor. They are blackmailing Medicare patients into thinking if they stay in that plan where they can choose their own doctor, they will not get any prescription drugs. This President wants them all in the HMOs. I say to my friend, and to the President of the United States, if the HMOs did a good job, that would be one thing. If we could pass a Patients' Bill of Rights giving people rights in an HMO, giving them the treatment they need, giving them the preventive care they need, giving them the quality doctors they deserve, it would be a different story. But pushing people into HMOs before we have solved the HMO abuse problem, and then saying, well, if you do not do that you do not get your medicine, I hope people in this country will rise up against that plan.

Mr. President, you have another 9 hours. I hope you take that plan out of your speech. I hope you will take that tax cut plan out of your speech and rewrite it and give the tax cuts to the middle class and give the tax cuts to the working poor. That will stimulate this economy and make it a 1-year stimulus that doesn't drain the revenues of Government in the outyears so that we are in deficits for as far as the eye can see. Give those tax breaks to the small business people. They are going to spend it on plant equipment.

Mr. President, go back to your speech and take a look at what you are doing on education. Fully fund the No Child Left Behind Act.

Mr. President, if you continue with your "leave no millionaire behind" plan, you will have no money for your Leave No Child Behind plan. You can't have it both ways. You can't go to war, promise people education, promise them this, promise them that, promise them homeland security, and then give away all the money to the millionaires and have nothing to fulfill your promises.

People are on to this. They see it. You are doing it over and over again—with homeland security, not spending the money we need. The burden is falling on the cities and the States and the localities. I met with the mayors. Do you know what they said? Senator, when something goes wrong and, God forbid, there is a terrorist attack, someone is going to call 911. They are not going to call the White House, with all due respect. And they are not going to call me either.

I used to be in local government. I respect those people. We are hanging out local government to dry—the local police, the local fire departments, and the rest. That is wrong. It is all in the name of giving tax breaks to millionaires who don't need it and won't spend it. It is unfair and it is hurtful.

I will close, because my friend, Senator STABENOW, is here, on one of the topics I will speak more about later, and that is the state of our environment. If you look back at the progress we have made in the last 50 years and more, you will see a wonderful story emerging on the environment. You will see Republican Presidents and Democratic Presidents who stood up and had great plans for this environment. Teddy Roosevelt, Dwight Eisenhower, Richard Nixon, Bill Clinton—they all made the environment stronger. Everywhere you turn, Mr. President, you are rolling back that progress.

So the state of the Union is anxious. They are anxious on all of these issues. Millions of Americans are waiting to feel less anxious. I hope, Mr. President, you will think about that before delivering your speech tonight.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SESSIONS). Under the previous order the Senator from Michigan is recognized.

HEALTH CARE

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I first thank my friend from California for her usual eloquence. I agree totally with her sense of what our people are feeling in terms of the anxiousness about possible war, the anxiousness about education for our children, about health care, about jobs, about homeland security. I thank Senator BOXER for her comments this morning.

I will follow up talking about an area that is so important to each of our families and is a growing concern to businesses in the country and to workers in the country; that is the whole question of health care.

We know there is a growing sense of anxiousness. When I sit down with small businesses across Michigan, they tell me their fastest growing cost is their health care premiums. In some cases they are doubling. When I talk to the big three automakers and the other manufacturers in Michigan, I hear the same thing. When I hear from Chrysler that they are spending more on health care than on the raw materials for the vehicles—I am concerned. This shows me we have a serious, serious crisis, a health care crisis.

At the same time, we all have spoken about the seniors of our country who are choosing between their food and their medicine. This is real. People are asking us to act. Words are not enough. Rhetoric is not enough. We have to act in a way that provides opportunity for quality, affordable, accessible health care.

On the eve of the State of the Union Address, I rise to ask the President of the United States what he intends to do. Will he, in fact, change his record and work with us on issues of health care in a bipartisan way, to actually get something done? I worry, myself, because of the record I have seen in the last 2 years. We have a record of this administration on health care that, unfortunately, is bad medicine for the American people. We have attempted on several occasions to move forward policies and proposals that are in the best interests of the American people. This administration continues to oppose those.

I am talking about a Medicare benefit for all seniors for prescription drugs under Medicare that is affordable, that is dependable, that is available to all of our seniors—this President has consistently opposed that approach. Whether it is also making prescription drugs affordable for all Americans and lowering the prices for our businesses—the President has opposed efforts to open the doors to Canada to drop prices immediately, and he has opposed efforts to make sure we have more competition in the system by closing the generic drug law loopholes. Generic drugs are made by those companies that do not do research but take the formulas after the patents expire and are able to develop and put on the market lower cost prescription drugs, oftentimes exactly like the brand-name drugs. We know they can drop the prices up to 70 percent by just having the generic drug laws work.

We have business coalitions formed across the country urging us to pass laws to shut down the loopholes so competition can work to bring prices down. Unfortunately, even after we passed a bill in this body, in the Senate, the administration has opposed it.

We have innovative State solutions like what has been done in Maine where the State wants to come in and use its bulk purchasing power and leverage that to negotiate lower prices on behalf of the uninsured who pay the top prices in the world right now for their prescriptions. Our State governments understand that. Our Governors want the flexibility to be able to bulk purchase and lower prices. This administration has opposed it.

We need fair prices for Medicare providers. While we have seen some willingness, and I appreciate that, to focus on the cuts that have been put into place for our physicians—that certainly needs to be done—what about the home health agencies that are closing? What about our nursing homes? What about our hospitals, our teaching facilities? We have a crisis in health care, and the last thing we need to do is to be making more cuts to Medicare or Medicaid. Yet the administration has, to date, opposed fixing the Medicare problem.

The Patients' Bill of Rights, a real Patients' Bill of Rights so that those who are in HMOs have the opportunity to have the physician of their choice and to have the rights available to them they wish to have to protect their families, a strong Patients' Bill of Rights—this administration has consistently opposed that, as well.

And what about assistance to States for Medicaid? Right now 25 percent of Michigan's State budget is Medicaid. We have a $2 billion deficit in Michigan out of a $9 billion budget. Our new Governor is doing a wonderful job of trying to make the numbers add up, but without Federal support and help they will not add up and people will be hurt and doctors and health facilities will be hurt. Yet, consistently, when we have tried to put forward plans on this floor, even plans that have passed the Senate have not made it all the way because this administration will not support efforts to help our States and to help Medicaid.

Finally, there was a commitment made to double the National Institutes of Health funding by 2003. The administration supports funding cuts that will not meet that goal.

Unfortunately, the Bush record on health care to date has been bad medicine for the American people. I ask the President today, rather than moving forward with the proposals we are hearing about attempting, essentially, to privatize Medicare, this evening I urge him to reassess and to join us in bipartisan efforts to make sure our citizens have the health care they need and our businesses can afford.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Ms. STABENOW. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. DURBIN. I would like to ask the Senator two brief questions, but first I salute her for her leadership. Since she has arrived in the Senate, she has been the most outspoken advocate for making health care affordable and accessible for Americans.

Let me make certain I understand. As you describe it, President Bush's proposed Medicare reform will say to seniors: If you want prescription drug coverage, you have to leave the Medicare Program and go into an HMO.

Because we have not passed the law giving people in an HMO the right to pick their own doctor, what he is saying to seniors is: If you want to have your choice of prescription drugs, then you have to give up your choice of a personal doctor.

Is that what the choice is?

Ms. STABENOW. That is absolutely correct. I thank my friend from Illinois, who is always in the Chamber fighting on behalf of the people of his State and the country.

There is no doubt about it, while the President is talking about increased choices, what he is really saying is, if you want to get help with your exploding prescription drug costs, if you want to stop having to pick between meals and your medicine, then you are going to have to go into a private insurance company, an HMO, where they will decide about your doctor. In fact, he is not willing to support a Patients' Bill of Rights to make sure they get what they need while they are in the HMO.

Mr. DURBIN. One last question. I know the Senator has more to add. Is there anything you heard about what the President is going to suggest that will lower the cost of health insurance for families and businesses across America, an exploding item in terms of their expenses which is pushing more and more people into the situation of being uninsured, underinsured, or putting more and more of their paycheck, every week, into the cost of their health insurance? Has the President suggested anything that will address that?

Ms. STABENOW. Unfortunately, no. We have seen a consistent effort to put forward plans that are supported by the brand name pharmaceutical industry itself or by the insurance companies, but not those things that will lower prices and make health care more affordable and more available.

Last summer, with a very rigorous debate on the Senate floor and a strong bipartisan vote, we passed a bill that would create more competition to lower prescription drug prices; it went to the House of Representatives where it did not see the light of day. Unfortunately, without the President's support and leadership, it will continue to be that way. We need the President to step up and say that the fact that prescription drug prices are going up three times the rate of inflation every year and that is too much.

It is too much. Our businesses cannot sustain that. They cannot sustain seeing their health care premiums double. At the same time, if you are an uninsured senior in this country, you are paying top dollar. Isn't it ironic that of all of those who pay for prescription drugs around the world, the people who pay literally the most for their medicine are uninsured people, most of whom are seniors, because they do not have anybody negotiating on their behalf. They do not have Medicare right now coming in and saying: We are going to negotiate a group price. So they pay the highest price.

Why wouldn't it make sense to have Medicare coverage? The brand name companies do not want Medicare negotiating on behalf of 40 million seniors and the disabled to lower prices. So what they have come up with is this scheme that would essentially not allow the clout of buying power because Medicare would not directly be providing the prescription drug coverage. But they want to act as if they would like to have prescription drug coverage for seniors, so they come up with this plan that would say: We will help you with your medicine if you go into a private-sector HMO.

By the way, in Michigan, now we have seen, since the inception of what is really Medicare+Choice—which is the plan that has already been out there for private sector Medicare HMO coverage—more than 51,000 seniors in Michigan have been disenrolled because plans have withdrawn from Michigan. In fact, we do not have any HMOs in the Upper Peninsula. We have very few plans in Michigan.

In fact, my own mother, who was in an HMO and enjoying the coverage under Medicare+Choice, was dropped because the plan withdrew from Michigan. So we only have four private sector HMO plans in Medicare left in Michigan, and they only serve 2 percent of the eligible Medicare beneficiaries in the State—2 percent—and the majority are in nine counties in southeastern Michigan, with the rest of the State not being covered. By the way, none of those plans are accepting new people or new enrollees.

So the President says: Let's take this plan that covers very few people, where it is not working, and let's say if you want Medicare prescription drug coverage, you have to go through this failed plan. I, for the life of me, cannot understand why this approach is being put forward except for the fact that certainly from the prescription drug industry's standpoint, it is better than going under Medicare.

So, Mr. President, I would ask this evening for you to please speak to the anxiety, the anxiousness that we all feel, that Americans feel for our families, for our businesses, that workers feel when they now find their pay being frozen so their employers can afford the explosion in the health care crisis. I would like you to speak to those issues in very real ways. Do not offer failed plans just to be able to speak about this issue. Join with us in bipartisan efforts that we know will work, efforts that have been supported by the private sector as well as the public sector, efforts that are supported by workers, by seniors, by all of those who have a stake in making sure that health care is affordable and available.

We had a plan. We had a bill, S. 812, that passed this Senate last summer. I commend all of my colleagues on both sides of the aisle who voted for that legislation. We can cut prices that lower premiums for our businesses. We can provide Medicare coverage. And we can do it in a real way.

I urge, tonight, that the President speak to us. And I invite him to join with us in a plan that will work.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Delaware is recognized.

IRAQ

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, as President Bush prepares to address the Nation on the state of the Union, we stand, to state the obvious, at a precipice of a momentous decision: War, war with Iraq.

The American people, and the world, for that matter, are waiting to hear what the President's decision is and his rationale for it. They are waiting to hear a clear explanation of why war may be the only remaining alternative and what will be expected of them not only in winning the war but what will be expected of the American people for us to win the peace.

A generation ago, I and my entire generation learned a very important lesson. That lesson was: No matter how brilliant or how well thought out a foreign policy may be, it cannot be sustained without the informed consent of the American people.

To date, there has been no informed consent. That is not a criticism; it is just an objective observation. For the President, to date, has not had the requirement, in the hope of avoiding war, to inform the American people in detail of what the consequences of war will be and what will be expected of them.

To date, the American people only know that Saddam Hussein is a brutal dictator, who has used weapons of mass destruction against his own people, and that he is the man who invaded Kuwait, and we expelled him. They are not sure as to whether or not he is an imminent threat; that is, a threat to those security moms, not soccer moms, who are in their living rooms and are worried about the health of their children and the safety of their homes.

The American people are confused, I would respectfully suggest, by the President's talk and the administration's talk of a new doctrine of preemption, and whether or not this is the basis upon which we are arguing we should act, or that we are acting to enforce, essentially, a peace agreement, a peace agreement signed by Saddam Hussein at the end of the Kuwaiti war that said: In return for me being able to stay in power, I commit to do the following things.

They are under the impression—the American people—because of the signals being sent by the Secretary of Defense and his civilian subordinates, that this war will be short, essentially bloodless, and, just as in 1991, Johnny will come marching home again in several weeks, if not several months, after a decisive, bloodless military victory.

The American people are assuming we will lead a very broad coalition of other nations and have the world behind us in our effort. They further assume, contrary very much to the hard evidence, that the defeat of Saddam Hussein will be a major setback for Osama bin Laden and al-Qaida and other terrorist organizations.

In short, they are under the assumption that one of the reasons we are moving against Saddam is that we will literally make terrorists' actions much less probable in the United States of America than they are today. For why else would we use all this power we have assembled in the gulf to go after Iraq rather than using all this power to go after Osama bin Laden in Afghanistan and in northwestern Pakistan where he most probably is according to our intelligence community?

They put it together. Obviously, the President would not take 250,000 forces, invade, if we must, Iraq, if he didn't think that would materially affect what I, as an American man, or woman thinks is the greatest threat to me, another 9/11. They also assume, contrary to any hard evidence, that Saddam Hussein is months away from developing a nuclear weapon that could strike American soil, for which he has no capacity, nor in any reasonable prospect in the future would he have any capacity to send a nuclear weapon airborne from Iraq to the United States.

Lastly, they seem to think the financial cost of this war will be manageable and not cause any further economic disruption, for why else for the first time in American history is the President of the United States calling for war, the possibility of war involving 250,000 American troops, at the very same time he is going to call, tonight, for a $650 billion tax cut? That has never been done in the history of the United States of America. Obviously, they think the President wouldn't do that unless this was going to be pretty costless, this war.

In short, I don't think the American people have been told honestly what will be expected of them and what additionally may be asked of them if things don't go so well. I think they will go well. I am one who has not been happy in the way we have proceeded, who thinks this war will be prosecuted in a way that will absolutely, to use the expression younger people use, blow the mind of the world in terms of our military prowess. But it may not.

Why is it so critical to inform the American people? Why, beyond their democratic right to know, is it so vital? I will answer that by telling you a story.

On December 8, 2002, I was in Qatar being briefed by General Franks, witnessing the preparation for war, and the war games were being carried on. There were assembled in this secure room—a gigantic hangar with a movie screen literally larger than the size of the wall behind the Presiding Officer, probably somewhere around 30 feet high and 40 feet wide—200 generals. I have never seen so many stars in my life, other than when I was a little kid lying on my back looking up on a crystal clear night in the middle of the summer.

I was asked, after being briefed by these warriors, whether or not I would address the assembled crowd, all active military personnel planning this war. These men and women to a person were ready to go and were secure in their knowledge that they would successfully complete their mission if asked to by defeating Saddam Hussein, if ordered to do so. What they were unsure of was us, the politicians, and whether we were willing to tell the American people exactly what was likely to be asked of them and were the American people willing to continue to give them the support they were going to need over a long haul, not the short haul? And it will be a long haul, regardless of how quickly and successfully we wage this war.

For those fighting men and women in this room know it is going to be necessary to stay in Iraq for a long time, to have tens of thousands—I predict over 75,000 American forces remaining in Iraq a minimum of a year and a half and, I predict, 5 years after we secure victory. And they wanted to know whether or not the American people knew that, for they don't want to be over there a year from now when the debate comes up and it is between another $20 billion to stay in Iraq and $20 billion for education or for a tax cut. We have no right to put them in that squeeze again, as happened a generation ago.

They also wanted to know if Saddam, as some suggest—and I am revealing nothing; I am not speaking from classified reports—and his 120 to 150,000 Republican Guard, the only ones we are really worried about, their capacity, if they retreat to Baghdad, a city, a city of 5 million people, are the American people prepared to continue to support our military when they see the inevitable happen? Innocent women and children being killed. We know what will happen. We know if they retreat to Baghdad they will retreat to hospitals, apartment complexes, and our fighting women and men, if this happens—and it is not sure it will—would have to go door to door. They were worried that the response would be the same response that occurs seeing Israelis knocking down a building or seeing a child killed in the crossfire.

They are worried they will become the bad guys, particularly, as I said, if the Republican Guard falls back to a city of 5 million people. Imagine going house to house in Philadelphia or Houston, routing out 2, 5, 10, 20, 50, 70,000 fighters. I told them that I believed this generation and the American people would pay whatever price and pledge its support to them, but only if they had informed consent. But that has not been done yet, and it must be done.

For while it is reasonable to expect the best, it would be irresponsible not to prepare for the worst. Iraq could lash out against Israel, Saudi Arabia and/or Kuwait in an effort to start a wider war. It could use weapons of mass destruction against our troops or its neighbors. It could destroy its oil fields and those of its neighbors. It could start giving away its weapons of mass destruction to terrorists.

It could create a humanitarian nightmare among the Kurds in the north and the Shia in the south, denying them food or medicine, even using chemical weapons against them, as Saddam has done in the past, and as I saw for myself when I met the survivors a month ago in northern Iraq.

Maybe none of these unintended consequences will occur, but there is a decent chance that one or more will. We must put every chance on our side and prepare the American people for what is bad as well as what is good. Hopefully that will be done tonight or sometime soon by the President, but not after the fact. The world, our allies, also are waiting for a clearer explanation of why war.

I just returned from the World Economic Forum and found myself confronted with the most uniform and significant anti-American sentiment I have ever encountered in my career of 30 years dealing with foreign leaders abroad. Not a single American diplomat, elected official, American journalist, businessman or labor leader would disagree with the assessment I just gave you.

It raises several questions that need to be answered. Why do they feel this way? Why should it matter? And if it does matter, what should we do about it? Why? There are multiple reasons, and my pointing them out to a predominantly non-American audience of hundreds if not thousands of world leaders was not always appreciated the last 4 days, let alone agreed with. Let me give you some of the reasons why they feel the way they do, not all of which are legitimate, by any means.

There is a lack of strong leadership in the respective countries that has been unwilling to tell their people the truth about Saddam Hussein and the commitment their country and the world made to deal with him when he sued for peace over 10 years ago. There are selfish economic motives on the part of some of our allies with regard to their favored position with regard to oil or telecom and scores of other areas.

Another reason is the resentment of America's predominant position as the world's most powerful military and economic nation as well as our cultural dominance, from Coca-Cola to rap music to English on the Internet, all of which they resent in the same way we would all resent if tomorrow our States predominantly said, we are going to switch to a different language because a predominant number of people in our State speak that language. This is compounded by the belief that the President is being pushed by the right wing of his administration to further leverage this predominant position into an even more dominant position relative to the rest of the world. It is also compounded by an inability to contribute much in the way of a fight, either by augmenting our military strength or their own, as well as a seething resentment at our unwillingness to use the forces they offered us in Afghanistan after declaring that an article 5 breach had occurred under our NATO treaty.

With regard to Iraq specifically, many don't see Saddam as a credible threat to them. Their people don't believe our assertions. They say he no longer has the weapons of mass destruction that we know he has. They believe in the aftermath of victory, we will not stay until there is a stable Government in Iraq—as we have not stayed in Afghanistan sufficiently—and they believe the resulting power struggle within Iraq, in their region, will have disastrous consequences for their Governments because they have all heard this administration say it will not be engaged in nation building. And they all know, and everyone knows, we are going to have to be engaged in nation building after we win the war.

All of this is compounded by the obvious discussion within the administration: The announcement of a new doctrine of preemption that has yet to be explained to us, let alone them; the appearance of a great power being petulant when a President stands before the world and says "I am growing impatient, I am getting tired"; the apparent contradiction in the rest of the world's mind of the treatment of the threat from North Korea, which has weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear, has a record of proliferation, and has violated international agreements, and we are talking to them; whereas, Iraq, which has no nuclear weapons—we cannot find the weapons of mass destruction, and there is scant evidence of similar proliferation—they say we speak with two different voices—the feeling that the administration has acted, without serious consultation, unilaterally in unceremoniously withdrawing from further negotiations, from international structures, such as climate control, criminal courts, ABM, and others.

Isn't the only thing that matters whether we make it work in the long run, which is what they hear from some in this administration? Won't it all disappear when we succeed, as we hear some in this administration say, because everybody loves a winner, right? Wrong. It matters what other nations think because our most basic immediate interests cannot be fully secured without a longer term cooperation with these other nations because we must convince them and not coerce them.

Let me give a few examples of what our most immediate vital interests are. Crushing international terror: How can you do that without cooperation from the intelligence services from Jakarta to Berlin, from Paris to Beijing, from Moscow to Rio? Preventing North Korea from escalating its nuclear programs and proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, and doing so without a war: How can we succeed without the cooperation of Russia, China, Japan, and South Korea, other than through war? All of this leads to the perception that some within the administration argue that it is better to go it alone. They have a belief that is the President's position. I don't believe it is his position, but what do they hear? They hear the theories proffered by some in the civilian Defense Department saying, if we move in the face of world public opinion, the rest of the world knows we will mean business and the more we do it alone, the more we will impress upon the rogue nations that they better change or they are next. They also hear us saying that Europe is tired, indecisive, and ultimately unwilling to do what is necessary to keep the peace and commands too much of our resources and attention, particularly, as the Secretary of Defense said, "old Europe," France, and Germany. They keenly resent these characterizations.

I think this is an inaccurate description of where President Bush is, but I do believe, though, that his choice of words and failure to clearly explain his choices and basis for action when we do act has been dangerous to our standing in the world, which leads me to a second question.

Why should it matter what our standing is—what the rest of the world thinks of us? I believe it matters a lot. Preventing a nuclear war on the subcontinent between India and Pakistan matters. But as we announced a unilateral pronouncement of a "new" doctrine of preemption—whatever that means is yet to be explained—that leads to the conclusion in India and Pakistan that if we can act preemptively, why can they not act preemptively against one another? Conveying our values to the rest of the world so as to diminish the misunderstanding of our motives runs constantly into some of the assertions that come from some in this administration.

Let me get right to it, Mr. President. It matters what other nations think, and it matters that although we can force other nations to do things, it matters how we do it. Here is an example. There is a new Government in Turkey—newly elected represented by an Islamic Party. That Islamic Party recently won the election, and the Prime Minister is a guy named Gul. The real operator is a guy named Erdogan. They were leading this Islamic Party and they have decided they want to have Turkey remain a secular state and they want to be integrated into Europe with regard to the EU. It is very much in the interest of the United States of America—very much—that that happens. We do not want an Islamic state; we want a secular state looking west.

So what is the problem? We can offer $5 billion and essentially buy the support to allow us to launch from Turkey. But if we do that in the absence of a worldwide consensus that what we are doing is right, we may meet our immediate goal and lose a heck of a lot. Here is an example. Right now, in Turkey—which I recently visited and I know the Presiding Officer knows this—over 85 percent of the Turkish people are unalterably opposed to a war with Iraq and unalterably opposed to Turkey cooperating with us in being able to successfully prosecute that war. So what happens if we go to war and we launch from Turkey with the support of the new Islamic leadership without having changed the minds of the people in Turkey and/or the world, to suggest that this is not merely us, but that it is sanctioned by the world that we do this? Well, the roughly 35 to 40 percent of this Islamic Party that is radical Islamic will play to its populist instincts and cause incredible trouble for the existing administration in Turkey and, I believe, force them to move away from their commitment to a secular state.

So that old biblical proverb, what does it profit a man if he gains the world and loses his soul—paraphrasing it—what does it profit us to move prematurely on Iraq from Turkey if the end result is that we radicalize a government that is represented by the Islamic Party.

What have we gained?

I will answer the third question, and then conclude. So what should we do? I have argued that out of our self-interest it matters what other nations think. So what should we be doing? I begin by saying, given where we are now, coupled with Saddam Hussein being in material breach—that is a fancy phrase for saying not explaining what he has done with the weapons of mass destruction we know he has—those two things may force us to choose between the better of two not-so-pleasant options.

The option I would choose in this circumstance, if we do not get world support, is that Saddam is in material breach of the latest U.N. resolution. Yesterday's damning report by the U.N. inspectors makes clear again Saddam's contempt for the world and it has vindicated the President's decision last fall to go to the U.N.

The legitimacy of the Security Council is at stake, as well as the integrity of the U.N. So if Saddam does not give up those weapons of mass destruction and the Security Council does not call for the use of force, I think we have little option but to act with a larger group of willing nations, if possible, and alone if we must. Make no mistake about it, we will pay a price if that is the way we go. We will have no option, but we will pay a price, a price that could be significantly reduced if from this moment on we act, in my humble opinion, more wisely.

What should we be doing from this point on? I will be very brief now and expand on this later. One, we should lower the rhetoric. We should not appear to be the petulant nation, wondering why the rest of the recalcitrant world will not act with us, showing our impatience. It does not suit a great nation well. It would not suit my father well, were he alive. It does not suit someone of stature well—and we are a nation of stature.

Two, we should make the case not only privately to our partners by sharing more proof of Saddam's crimes and possessions, but also to our people and in turn to the whole world. Legally, he is in breach, but going to war based on that legal breach will cost us in ways we would not have to pay if we go to war with the rest of the world understanding that there is something there beyond the failure to account.

The third thing we should do is give inspectors more time, for their very presence in Iraq diminishes the possibility of sharing weapons of mass destruction with terrorists or continuing their quest for nuclear weapons. Inspectors are not a permanent solution. We know from our experience of the last decade that Iraq will try to make their mission impossible. We also know that sustaining a massive deployment of troops is expensive and hard on our men and women in uniform. But right now the inspectors are helping us build support for our policy, both at home and abroad, and we should let them keep working in the near term.

The fourth thing we should do is articulate clearly and repeatedly not only the legal basis for our action, if we must move, but our commitment to stay until we have a stable Iraq, and that means the following: The President should state clearly tonight, we are not acting on a doctrine of preemption, if we act. We are acting on enforcement of a U.N. resolution that is the equivalent of a peace treaty which is being violated by the signatory of that treaty, and we have a right to do that and it is the world's problem. It is not what we hear out of the civilian Defense Department, this cockamamie notion of a new doctrine of preemption which no one understands.

Two, our objective has to be clearly stated as eliminating weapons of mass destruction and not the destruction of Iraq, for that is the President's purpose.

Thirdly, we will in fact participate in nation building; we will seek U.N. support and we will tell the American people what we are asking of them and why, for they have no idea now what is expected of them. They do not know what the costs will be to remove Saddam and they should. They do not know how many troops will have to stay in Iraq to secure the country, and we have estimates, and what it will take to get a representative government that lives up to its international obligations.

Can we count on our friends and allies to share the burden? Can we afford to attack Iraq, fully fund homeland security, cut taxes for the wealthiest Americans, and finish the unfinished war on terrorism in Afghanistan and other places?

These questions should never be excuses for inaction, but they must be answered if we want the American people's support and we want to avoid the mistakes of the past.

I yield the floor.

S-CHIP PROGRAM

Mr. CHAFEE. I have been working for the last several months with a bipartisan group of Members from both the House and Senate to protect funding for the S-CHIP program, which provides critical health care to millions of our children. In my State, over 12,000 children participate in this program. There is strong, bipartisan support for a 2-year S-CHIP proposal developed last fall that would preserve $2.7 billion in Federal S-CHIP funds that either expired at the end of fiscal year 2002 or will expire at the end of the current fiscal year. Our proposal also establishes a redistribution formula for the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services to use to quickly redistribute unspent fiscal year 2000 funds to those States that have exhausted their allotments and need additional funds.

Under Federal law, CMS is required to redistribute all unspent 2000 funds this year, but there is no Federal requirement on what formula it is to use. CMS is currently holding off redistributing unspent 2000 funds because it is awaiting congressional action. However, a few States, including my own State of Rhode Island, need the redistribution of 2000 funds as soon as possible so they have sufficient funds for the rest of the year to maintain services to the children currently on S-CHIP.

This S-CHIP issue is very time sensitive. State are beginning to plan their upcoming budgets for fiscal year 2004, which starts July 1 in most States. We do not want to distort State S-CHIP spending decisions by making it impossible for States to plan, in determining how much in Federal S-CHIP funds they will have and for how long those funds will be available. Some States may unnecessarily scale back S-CHIP eligibility as a result because they will assume they will have far less in Federal funds available than previously expected.

It now appears that we cannot address this issue in the omnibus appropriations bill. I appreciate the willingness of the chairman of the Finance and Budget Committees, Senators GRASSLEY and NICKLES, to work with me and the other Senators involved to address this issue in both the fiscal year 2004 budget resolution and then to move this legislation quickly in the Finance Committee.

Having said this, I think it is imperative for us to work with CMS so that they can move forward to begin to distribute some of the unspent 2000 funds to States like mine that are facing a serious S-CHIP funding problem.

There is a way to move forward to address the immediate redistribution issue of the unexpended fiscal year 2000 funds. CMS can redistribute some of the unexpended fiscal year 2000 funds immediately to those States that face shortfalls in the coming months. This can be done administratively. We certainly want CMS to begin to redistribute at least some part of these funds to those States that are relying on this redistribution to maintain their child caseloads. For example, CMS could redistribute 100 percent of half of the unexpended funds now leaving the rest to be redistributed once Congress has acted on this legislation. As we in Congress move ahead to complete action on this full proposal, CMS should move forward on the immediate redistribution issue.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. I am pleased to join my colleagues today in highlighting the need for timely congressional action to secure funding necessary to protect children on the S-CHIP health program. Nearly 21,000 children benefit from this program in my State of West Virginia. The S-CHIP program was created in 1997 with a bipartisan group of members to provide $40 billion over a 10-year period to extend health insurance to some uninsured children.

Senator CHAFEE and I, along with other Senators, worked last year to develop a proposal that would address the long-term funding shortfall confronting the S-CHIP program over the next several years. While this was not considered last year, in the end, we were able to develop this 2-year compromise with the authorizers in both the House and Senate as a first step towards a long-term solution for S-CHIP's funding issues. The compromise is a very reasonable one, providing assistance both to those States that have spent their allocations and need additional resources to serve their S-CHIP children as well as States that need a bit more time to utilize their S-CHIP allocations.

I share my colleagues' concerns that this issue is a very timely one, and demands fast action on our part. I recognize that the first step is to include the necessary funds for this bipartisan 2-year proposal in the fiscal year 04 budget resolution, and then to consider the specific legislation in the Finance Committee. I would hope that Chairman GRASSLEY and Senator BAUCUS would work to schedule a markup of this proposal as quickly as possible after the budget resolution is approved. We cannot wait to act on this until later this year when it is expected that we would consider broader health care measures. Contrary to what some have said, this is an emergency for our States and uninsured children. I look forward to working with my chairman on the Finance Committee, who deserves credit along with Senator BAUCUS for developing this 2-year approach, to move this proposal through the Congress as quickly as possible.

Ms. SNOWE. I would like to thank my colleagues for their willingness to work with me on restoring funding to the State Children's Health Insurance Program that is essential to ensuring continued health care coverage for America's children.

For the past week, I have worked with my colleagues to secure this agreement that will restore $2.7 billion in expired—or soon to expire—S-CHIP funding. This compromise that has been endorsed by our Nation's Governors would ensure that this funding remains in the program and continues to provide children with access to the care that is vital to their healthy development.

I appreciate the willingness of Majority Leader FRIST, Finance Committee Chairman GRASSLEY and Budget Committee Chairman NICKLES to work with us in developing this agreement. Because of their commitment to finding a solution, we are able to move forward with this important policy.

I believe this agreement is the most appropriate way to restore the S-CHIP funding. Because the budget resolution adopted by the House of Representatives does not include adequate budget authority to restore this funding, the floor amendment that I filed to the omnibus appropriations bill would be subject to a budget point of order in the House. Given that this point of order would lie against the provision, the likelihood that the House would strip this during conference is great. In light of these circumstances, I believe this agreement is the most appropriate way to ensure that this funding is restored.

The agreement that was struck would—in exchange for withdrawing the amendments that my colleagues and I filed to the omnibus appropriations bill to restore S-CHIP funding—provide the support of the majority leader and Chairmen GRASSLEY and NICKLES to make necessary changes that will remove the budget hurdles that have prevented this legislation from being enacted.

Specifically, Senator NICKLES has provided his commitment to reallocate through the fiscal year 04 budget process additional budget authority for S-CHIP in fiscal year 03 and fiscal year 04. Senator NICKLES, I am confident that under your leadership, the budget process will move smoothly and expeditiously and that we will be able to speed the adoption of this proposal in both the Senate and House of Representatives.

Further, Chairman GRASSLEY has agreed to move this policy through his committee as soon as the necessary changes are made to the budget allocations. Again, under his strong leadership I am confident that we will get this done.

Finally, Majority Leader FRIST has agreed to place the legislation on the Senate Calendar as soon as it is reported from the Finance Committee.

I might add that while I am aware that this agreement was forged in the Senate, the underlying policy proposal was developed through a bipartisan, bicameral process led by Senators GRASSLEY and BAUCUS last fall. I hope the House of Representatives will work with us to make the necessary changes to the fiscal year 03 and fiscal year 04 budget allocations and to see this vital policy enacted in a timely manner.

Since 1977, States have made historic progress in their effort to insure low-income children under S-CHIP. In fact, the National Center for Health Statistics just released data this month showing that the percentage of children 17 years of age and younger with health insurance has increased from 86.1 percent in 1997 to 91.2 percent during the first half of 2002. During this same period of time, statistics show the percentage of children insured by Government programs, such as S-CHIP, also increased to 27.2 percent. While these statistics are encouraging, a great deal of work remains if we are to address the critical issues of affordability and accessibility of health insurance, especially as they relate to health care for our children.

These compelling statistics reinforce the necessity that Congress must act to restore the expiring S-CHIP funds. If we delay, we could jeopardize the substantial progress that has been made since 1997 in increasing the number of insured children in America. It is estimated that without restoration of this funding, almost 1 million children could lose health insurance coverage.

How it works is this—once passed, the policy would restore $2.7 billion in S-CHIP funding that has either reverted to the Treasury or is scheduled to revert to HHS for redistribution. On October 1, 2002, $1.2 billion reverted to the Treasury in unspent S-CHIP funding from 1998 and 1999. If we do not recapture this funding, it will be lost to the program. Our agreement allows the States to reclaim this unspent money and provides until the end of Fiscal Year 04 to spend it on health insurance provided by S-CHIP.

It also strikes a compromise between States that have spent all of their 2000 and 2001 allotments, and those that have not, by dividing the funding evenly between them. Those States that have not spent all of their allocations would be able to retain half of their funding, while the remaining States would receive additional allotments from the redistributed funding.

It also rewards those States that used Medicaid to expand access to health care for low-income children prior to the creation of S-CHIP, by allowing them to access some of their S-CHIP funding to serve this population. This compromise has the endorsement of the National Governors Association and children's health advocates from across the country.

In my home State of Maine this proposal would allow the State to keep $13.24 million in S-CHIP funding and would provide until the end of Fiscal Year 04 to spend it. I don't know about your State, but in Maine $13.24 million will help provide health care assistance to a lot of children—children who otherwise would not have access to immunizations, well-baby visits, and yearly checkups.

While my colleagues and I have agreed to forgo the appropriations process as the vehicle to move this package, we certainly have not abandoned our effort to restore the funding. In fact, we are more committed than ever to seeing the S-CHIP funding restored and have added the support of the majority leader and chairs of the Finance and Budget Committees. Adding their endorsement to this effort, which already has garnered strong bipartisan support, will help to speed its passage.

In closing, I would like to highlight a quote from Secretary Thompson when his agency released the positive new data I referenced earlier regarding the level of health insurance for children in our country. He said, "More and more children are getting the health care they need, thanks in large measure to our success in working with States to expand health coverage through the S-CHIP program. We are giving Governors the flexibility they need to continue to expand coverage to more children, and our strategy is paying off for children and parents alike."

This strong endorsement of S-CHIP should act as an impetus to getting this policy enacted and ensuring that we do so in a timely fashion. Again, I appreciate the support of my colleagues and look forward to working with you as we move forward to enact this policy.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I thank my colleagues for their attention to this important children's care policy. They are correct that something must be done to address the funds that have and will revert to the Treasury in the near future. They are also correct to the constraints within the omnibus bill. I strongly support the State Children's Health Insurance Program. It is a program that provides health care for over 16,000 low-income children in my State.

Senators CHAFEE, SNOWE, and ROCKEFELLER are looking to address a necessary maintenance issue within S-CHIP. As Senator SNOWE noted, I worked very closely with Senator BAUCUS, Senator CHAFEE, Senator ROCKEFELLER, Chairman TAUZIN, and Representative DINGELL on a bipartisan, bicameral proposal that would have addressed expired S-CHIP funds.

The proposal reflected a balanced approach to redistributing S-CHIP funding taking into account that some States are spending through their existing allotments and other States are ramping up their programs and will need additional funding in the years to come.

This proposal did not pass the Senate last year, but it is a fair approach to redistributing S-CHIP funds. Unfortunately, I cannot support including this policy at this time. The omnibus is a poor vehicle for this necessary maintenance.

I am sympathetic to the intent of this policy, although this is neither the time nor the place to address this issue. The Senate and the House have an agreement with the administration to keep the omnibus appropriations bill under $750 billion. The S-CHIP policy costs over $1.2 billion in budget authority in 2003. An amendment of this nature would break that agreement and that is simply not acceptable. I appreciate the willingness of Senators SNOWE, CHAFEE, and ROCKEFELLER to accept this reality.

I assure my colleagues that I will work with them in the near future to update the S-CHIP redistribution policy in the near future as chairman of the Finance Committee. It is my understanding that Senator NICKLES, the chairman of the Budget Committee, is also interested in a regular order approach and that he is interested in putting money aside in the budget to address the needs of S-CHIP.

With this in mind, I believe the most appropriate way to address this issue is to work with the chairman of the Budget Committee, Senator NICKLES, to secure sufficient funding for this bipartisan S-CHIP proposal and then to address it in the Finance Committee. I will also continue my work with Energy and Commerce Committee Chairman TAUZIN, so the Senate and the House can move forward in a coordinated fashion.

I assure my colleagues that I will work with them once the Budget Resolution for fiscal year 2004 has been adopted to move legislation quickly through the Finance Committee that reflects a bipartisan, bicameral 2-year agreement on S-CHIP.

Mr. NICKLES. I thank Chairman GRASSLEY for bringing this issue to the attention of Senators today. I appreciate the work of Senator SNOWE, Senator CHAFEE, and Senator ROCKEFELLER to resolve this, however I agree that the omnibus appropriations bill is not the appropriate vehicle to address the issue of the S-CHIP redistribution system. The legislation does affect spending for the next fiscal year and, as such must be addressed within the fiscal year 2004 budget resolution. I have spoken with Senator SNOWE and would be happy to work with her to address this issue. I will work closely with Senator GRASSLEY and others as we craft that resolution to secure the funds necessary for the Finance Committee to consider this S-CHIP proposal.

SEC. 212. WEST COAST GROUND FISH FISHERY CAPACITY REDUCTION. (a) The Secretary of Commerce shall implement a fishing capacity reduction program for the West Coast groundfish fishery pursuant to section 212 of Public Law 107-206 and 16 U.S.C. 1861a (b)-(e); except that the program may apply to multiple fisheries; except that within 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall publish a public notice in the Federal Register and issue an invitation to bid for reduction payments that specifies the contractual terms and conditions under which bids shall be made and accepted under this section; except that section 144(d)(1)(K)(3) of title I, division B of Public Law 106-554 shall apply to the program implemented by this section.

(b) A reduction fishery is eligible for capacity reduction under the program implemented under this section; except that no vessel harvesting and processing whiting in the catcher-processors sector (section 19 660.323(a)(4)(A) of title 50, Code of Federal Regulations) may participate in any capacity reduction referendum or industry fee established under this section.

(c) A referendum on the industry fee system shall occur after bids have been submitted, and such bids have been accepted by the Secretary, as follows: members of the reduction fishery, and persons who have been issued Washington, Oregon, or California Dungeness crab and Pink shrimp permits, shall be eligible to vote in the referendum to approve an industry fee system; referendum votes cast in each fishery shall be weighted in proportion to the debt obligation of each fishery, as calculated in subsection (f) of this section; the industry fee system shall be approved if the referendum votes cast in favor of the proposed system constitute a simple majority of the participants voting; except that notwithstanding 5 U.S.C. 553 and 16 U.S.C. 1861a(e), the Secretary shall not prepare or publish proposed or final regulations for the implementation of the program under this section before the referendum is conducted.

(d) Nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit the Pacific Fishery Management Council from recommending, or the Secretary from approving, changes to any fishery management plan, in accordance with applicable law; or the Secretary from promulgating regulations (including regulations governing this program), after an industry fee system has been approved by the reduction fishery.

(e) The Secretary shall determine, and state in the public notice published under paragraph (a), all program implementation aspects the Secretary deems relevant.

(f) Any bid submitted in response to the invitation to bid issued by the Secretary under this section shall be irrevocable; the Secretary shall use a bid acceptance procedure that ranks each bid in accordance with this paragraph and with additional criteria, if any, established by the Secretary: for each bid from a qualified bidder that meets the bidding requirements in the public notice or the invitation to bid, the Secretary shall determine a bid score by dividing the bid's dollar amount by the average annual total ex-vessel dollar value of landings of Pacific groundfish, Dungeness crab, and Pink shrimp based on the 3 highest total annual revenues earned from such stocks that the bidder's reduction vessel landed during 1998, 1999, 2000, or 2001. For purposes of this paragraph, the term "total annual revenue" means the revenue earned in a single year from such stocks. The Secretary shall accept each qualified bid in rank order of bid score from the lowest to the highest until acceptance of the next qualified bid with the next lowest bid score would cause the reduction cost to exceed the reduction loan's maximum amount. Acceptance of a bid by the Secretary shall create a binding reduction contract between the United States and the person whose bid is accepted, the performance of which shall be subject only to the conclusion of a successful referendum, except that a person whose bid is accepted by the Secretary under this section shall relinquish all permits in the reduction fishery and any Dungeness crab and Pink shrimp permits issued by Washington, Oregon, or California; except that the Secretary shall revoke the Pacific groundfish permit, as well as all Federal fishery licenses, fishery permits, area, and species endorsements, and any other fishery privileges issued to a vessel or vessels (or to persons on the basis of their operation or ownership of that vessel or vessels) removed under the program.

(g) The Secretary shall establish separate reduction loan sub-amounts and repayment fees for fish sellers in the reduction fishery and for fish sellers in each of the fee-share fisheries by dividing the total ex-vessel dollar value during the bid scoring period of all reduction vessel landings from the reduction fishery and from each of the fee-share fisheries by the total such value of all such landings for all such fisheries; and multiplying the reduction loan amount by each of the quotients resulting from each of the divisions above. Each of the resulting products shall be the reduction loan sub-amount for the reduction fishery and for each of the fee-share fisheries to which each of such products pertains; except that, each fish seller in the reduction fishery and in each of the fee-share fisheries shall pay the fees required by the reduction loan sub-amounts allocated to it under this paragraph; except that, the Secretary may enter into agreements with Washington, Oregon, and California to collect any fees established under this paragraph.

(h) Notwithstanding 46 U.S.C. App. 1279(b)(4), the reduction loan's term shall not be less than 30 years.

(i) It is the sense of the Congress that the States of Washington, Oregon, and California should revoke all relinquishment permits in each of the fee-share fisheries immediately after reduction payment, and otherwise to implement appropriate State fisheries management and conservation provisions in each of the fee-share fisheries that establishes a program that meets the requirements of 16 U.S.C. 141861a(b)(1)(B) as if it were applicable to fee-share fisheries.

(j) The term "fee-share fishery" means a fishery, other than the reduction fishery, whose members are eligible to vote in a referendum for an industry fee system under paragraph (c). The term "reduction fishery" means that portion of a fishery holding limited entry fishing permits endorsed for the operation of trawl gear and issued under the Federal Pacific Coast Groundfish Fishery Management Plan.

TRANSPARENCY AND ACCOUNTABILITY

SEC. 584. (a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) There is a lack of transparency in the revenues and expenditures of the national budgets of many developing countries that receive United States assistance.

(2) In such countries, official revenues—particularly from natural resource extraction—are often unreported, under-reported, or inaccurately recorded by foreign government agencies.

(3) Such inefficiencies—which in some instances mask outright theft—result in the failure of such governments to adequately provide their citizens with social, political, economic, and legal benefits and opportunities, and undermine the effectiveness of assistance provided to such countries by the United States and other international donors.

(4) Good governance and respect for the rule of law are critical to a nation's development.

(1) Those countries whose central governments receive foreign assistance from the United States;

SEC. 586. SENSE OF THE SENATE WITH RESPECT TO NORTH KOREA. It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) North Korea has violated the basic terms of the Agreed Framework Between the United States of America and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, signed in Geneva on October 21, 1994 (and the Confidential Minute to that agreement), and the North-South Joint Declaration on the Denuclearization of the Korean Peninsula by pursuing the enrichment of uranium for the purpose of building a nuclear weapon and by "nuclearizing" the Korean peninsula;

(2) North Korea has announced its intention to restart the 5-megawatt reactor and related reprocessing facility at Yongbyon, which were frozen under the Agreed Framework, and has expelled the International Atomic Energy Agency personnel monitoring the freeze;

(3) North Korea has announced its intention to withdraw from the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, done at Washington, London, and Moscow on July 1, 1968 (21 UST 483);

(4) the Agreed Framework is, as a result of North Korea's own actions over several years and recent declaration, null and void;

(5) North Korea's pursuit and development of nuclear weapons is of grave concern and represents a serious threat to the security of the United States, its regional allies, and friends;

(6) North Korea must immediately come into compliance with its obligations under the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and other commitments to the international community;

(7) any diplomatic solution to the North Korean crisis must achieve the total dismantlement of North Korea's nuclear weapons and nuclear production capability, including effective and comprehensive verification requirements, on-site monitoring, and free access for the investigation of all sites of concern;

(8) the United States, in conjunction with the Republic of Korea and other allies in the Pacific region, should take measures to ensure the highest possible level of deterrence and military readiness against the multiple threats that North Korea poses;

(9) since 1995, the United States has been the single largest food donor to North Korea, providing $620,000,000 in food aid assistance over that time;

(10) North Korea does not allow full verification of the use of food aid assistance, as shown by the failure of North Korea to permit the World Food Program to introduce a system of random access monitoring of such use in North Korea and the failure of North Korea to provide the World Food Program with a list of institutions through which World Food Program food is provided to beneficiaries;

(11) the failures described in paragraph (10) fall short of humanitarian practice in emergency operations in other parts of the world; and

(12) North Korea should allow full verification of the use of food aid assistance by—

(A) providing the World Food Program with a list of institutions through which World Food Program food is provided to beneficiaries;

(B) permitting the World Food Program to introduce a system of random access monitoring in North Korea; and

(C) providing access for the World Food Program in all counties in North Korea.

This division may be cited as the "Foreign Operations, Export Financing, and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 2003".

(b) In this section:

(2) The term "poverty line" means the poverty line (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget, and revised annually in accordance with section 673(2) of the Community Services Block Grant Act (42 U.S.C. 9902(2))) applicable to a family of the size involved.

projects, productions, workshops, or programs that will encourage public knowledge, education, understanding, and appreciation of the arts.

SEC. 314. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be expended or obligated to complete and issue the 5-year program under the Forest and Rangeland Renewable Resources Planning Act.

SEC. 315. None of the funds in this Act may be used to support Government-wide administrative functions unless such functions are justified in the budget process and funding is approved by the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations.

SEC. 316. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, none of the funds in this Act may be used for GSA Telecommunication Centers.

SEC. 317. None of the funds in this Act may be used for planning, design or construction of improvements to Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House without the advance approval of the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations.

SEC. 318. Amounts deposited during fiscal year 2002 in the roads and trails fund provided for in the 14th paragraph under the heading "FOREST SERVICE" of the Act of March 4, 1913 (37 Stat. 843; 16 U.S.C. 501), shall be used by the Secretary of Agriculture, without regard to the State in which the amounts were derived, to repair or reconstruct roads, bridges, and trails on National Forest System lands or to carry out and administer projects to improve forest health conditions, which may include the repair or reconstruction of roads, bridges, and trails on National Forest System lands in the wildland-community interface where there is an abnormally high risk of fire. The projects shall emphasize reducing risks to human safety and public health and property and enhancing ecological functions, long-term forest productivity, and biological integrity. The projects may be completed in a subsequent fiscal year. Funds shall not be expended under this section to replace funds which would otherwise appropriately be expended from the timber salvage sale fund. Nothing in this section shall be construed to exempt any project from any environmental law.

SEC. 319. No timber sale in Region 10 shall be advertised if the indicated rate is deficit when appraised using a residual value approach that assigns domestic Alaska values for western redcedar. Program accomplishments shall be based on volume sold. Should Region 10 sell, in fiscal year 2003, the annual average portion of the decadal allowable sale quantity called for in the current Tongass Land Management Plan in sales which are not deficit when appraised using a residual value approach that assigns domestic Alaska values for western redcedar, all of the western redcedar timber from those sales which is surplus to the needs of domestic processors in Alaska, shall be made available to domestic processors in the contiguous 48 United States at prevailing domestic prices. Should Region 10 sell, in fiscal year 2003, less than the annual average portion of the decadal allowable sale quantity called for in the Tongass Land Management Plan in sales which are not deficit when appraised using a residual value approach that assigns domestic Alaska values for western redcedar, the volume of western redcedar timber available to domestic processors at prevailing domestic prices in the contiguous 48 United States shall be that volume: (i) which is surplus to the needs of domestic processors in Alaska, and (ii) is that percent of the surplus western redcedar volume determined by calculating the ratio of the total timber volume which has been sold on the Tongass to the annual average portion of the decadal allowable sale quantity called for in the current Tongass Land Management Plan. The percentage shall be calculated by Region 10 on a rolling basis as each sale is sold (for purposes of this amendment, a "rolling basis" shall mean that the determination of how much western redcedar is eligible for sale to various markets shall be made at the time each sale is awarded). Western redcedar shall be deemed "surplus to the needs of domestic processors in Alaska" when the timber sale holder has presented to the Forest Service documentation of the inability to sell western redcedar logs from a given sale to domestic Alaska processors at a price equal to or greater than the log selling value stated in the contract. All additional western redcedar volume not sold to Alaska or contiguous 48 United States domestic processors may be exported to foreign markets at the election of the timber sale holder. All Alaska yellow cedar may be sold at prevailing export prices at the election of the timber sale holder.

SEC. 320. A project undertaken by the Forest Service under the Recreation Fee Demonstration Program as authorized by section 315 of the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies Appropriations Act for Fiscal Year 1996, as amended, shall not result in—

(1) displacement of the holder of an authorization to provide commercial recreation services on Federal lands. Prior to initiating any project, the Secretary shall consult with potentially affected holders to determine what impacts the project may have on the holders. Any modifications to the authorization shall be made within the terms and conditions of the authorization and authorities of the impacted agency.

(2) the return of a commercial recreation service to the Secretary for operation when such services have been provided in the past by a private sector provider, except when—

(A) the private sector provider fails to bid on such opportunities;

(B) the private sector provider terminates its relationship with the agency; or

(C) the agency revokes the permit for non-compliance with the terms and conditions of the authorization.

In such cases, the agency may use the Recreation Fee Demonstration Program to provide for operations until a subsequent operator can be found through the offering of a new prospectus.

SEC. 321. REVISION OF FOREST PLANS. Prior to October 1, 2003, the Secretary of Agriculture shall not be considered to be in violation of subparagraph 6(f)(5)(A) of the Forest and Rangeland Renewable Resources Planning Act of 1974 (16 U.S.C. 1604(f)(5)(A)) solely because more than 15 years have passed without revision of the plan for a unit of the National Forest System. Nothing in this section exempts the Secretary from any other requirement of the Forest and Rangeland Renewable Resources Planning Act (16 U.S.C. 1600 et seq.) or any other law: Provided, That if the Secretary is not acting expeditiously and in good faith, within the funding available, to revise a plan for a unit of the National Forest System, this section shall be void with respect to such plan and a court of proper jurisdiction may order completion of the plan on an accelerated basis.

SEC. 322. No funds provided in this Act may be expended to conduct preleasing, leasing and related activities under either the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 181 et seq.) or the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1331 et seq.)

within the boundaries of a National Monument established pursuant to the Act of June 8, 1906 (16 U.S.C. 431 et seq.) as such boundary existed on January 20, 2001, except where such activities are allowed under the Presidential proclamation establishing such monument.

In entering into agreements with foreign countries pursuant to the Wildfire Suppression Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 1856m) the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior are authorized to enter into reciprocal agreements in which the individuals furnished under said agreements to provide wildfire services are considered, for purposes of tort liability, employees of the country receiving said services when the individuals are fighting fires. The Secretary of Agriculture or the Secretary of the Interior shall not enter into any agreement under this provision unless the foreign country (either directly or through its fire organization) agrees to assume any and all liability for the acts or omissions of American firefighters engaged in firefighting in a foreign country. When an agreement is reached for furnishing fire fighting services, the only remedies for acts or omissions committed while fighting fires shall be those provided under the laws of the host country and those remedies shall be the exclusive remedies for any claim arising out of fighting fires in a foreign country. Neither the sending country nor any organization associated with the firefighter shall be subject to any action whatsoever pertaining to or arising out of fighting fires.

SEC. 326. A grazing permit or lease issued by the Secretary of the Interior or a grazing permit issued by the Secretary of Agriculture where National Forest System lands are involved that expires, is transferred, or waived during fiscal year 2003 shall be renewed under Section 402 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, as amended (43 U.S.C. 1752), Section 19 of the Granger-Thye Act, as amended (16 U.S.C. 580l), title III of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act (7 U.S.C. 1010 et seq.), or, if applicable, section 510 of the California Desert Protection Act (16 U.S.C. 410aaa-50). The terms and conditions contained in the expired, transferred, or waived permit or lease shall continue in effect under the renewed permit or lease until such time as the Secretary of the Interior or Secretary of Agriculture as appropriate completes processing of such permit or lease in compliance with all applicable laws and regulations, at which time such permit or lease may be canceled, suspended or modified, in whole or in part, to meet the requirements of such applicable laws and regulations. Nothing in this section shall be deemed to alter the statutory authority of the Secretary of the Interior or the Secretary of Agriculture: Provided, That where National Forest System lands are involved and the Secretary of Agriculture has renewed an expired or waived grazing permit prior to fiscal year 2003 under the authority of Section 504 of the Rescissions Act of 1995 (Public Law 104-19), the terms and conditions of the renewed grazing permit shall remain in effect until such time as the Secretary of Agriculture completes processing of the renewed permit in compliance with all applicable laws and regulations or until the expiration of the renewed permit, whichever comes first. Upon completion of the processing, the permit may be canceled, suspended or modified, in whole or in part, to meet the requirements of applicable laws and regulations. Nothing in this section shall be deemed to alter the Secretary of Agriculture's statutory authority.

SEC. 327. In awarding a Federal Contract with funds made available by this Act, the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior (the "Secretaries") may, in evaluating bids and proposals, give consideration to local contractors who are from, and who provide employment and training for, dislocated and displaced workers in an economically disadvantaged rural community, including those historically timber-dependent areas that have been affected by reduced timber harvesting on Federal lands and other forest-dependent rural communities isolated from significant alternative employment opportunities: Provided, That the contract is for forest hazardous fuels reduction, watershed or water quality monitoring or restoration, wildlife or fish population monitoring, or habitat restoration or management: Provided further, That the terms "rural community" and "economically disadvantaged" shall have the same meanings as in section 2374 of Public Law 101-624: Provided further, That the Secretaries shall develop guidance to implement this section: Provided further, That nothing in this section shall be construed as relieving the Secretaries of any duty under applicable procurement laws, except as provided in this section.

Loans or other obligations entered into pursuant to this subsection shall be in such form and denominations, have such maturities, and be subject to such conditions as may be prescribed by regulations issued by the Secretary.

“(2) The Secretary may prohibit a public housing agency from obtaining a loan under this subsection only if the rehabilitation or replacement housing proposed by a public housing agency is inconsistent with its Public Housing Agency Plan, as submitted under section 5A, or the proposed terms of the guaranteed loan constitutes an unacceptable financial risk to the public housing agency or for repayment of the loan under this subsection.

RECESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will stand in recess until 2:15 p.m.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 12:45 p.m., recessed until 2:15 p.m. and reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Ms. MURKOWSKI).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KENNEDY. Madam President, I understand we are in morning business; is that correct?

EDUCATION

Mr. KENNEDY. Madam President, I welcome the fact that the leadership has given this time to express our strong views on a very important issue, the whole issue, the quality of education for the children of this country.

It was just about a year ago, Members—I see Senator REED of Rhode Island, Senator DODD from our committee—remember clearly this Nation came together, Republican and Democrat, to sign the No Child Left Behind Act, the gateway of opportunity, of progress, for academic achievement and accomplishment.

We all looked forward to smaller classes, better trained teachers, after-school programs. We looked forward to this with great hope and great anticipation. We looked forward to parental involvement so parents could understand how their children were learning in local schools, with greater accountability for students, for schools, for teachers and parents, and also for the Congress of the United States.

As we come to the time of the President of the United States speaking, if we listen carefully to what is happening all across this country, we will hear we have failed in our understanding and commitment to education and the administration has failed in giving life to our promises in the form of resources to make sure those promises are kept.

Listen to what the Governor of Delaware, Ruth Ann Minner, said recently: Delaware has asked local school districts to return $10 million from current year budgets. The impact of those kinds of budget-cutting measures takes a tremendous toll in providing enough teachers to continue progress to reduce class size, which is so important to the quality of education. Federal programs, such as No Child Left Behind or IDEA, implemented without adequate Federal funding—no matter that we share the goal and the vision—represent an empty promise.

We have had debates here on whether we have provided the resources or not. Let's listen to what is happening across the country.

In a Washington Post article today, it says Oregon today is on the verge of cutting 15 days, potentially 24 days, from its school year. The United States ranks 18th among the industrial nations in school year length. How can we expect American schoolchildren to learn in 180 days as much as Korean children learn in 220? And now Oregon may cut back to 165 days of the school year.

The New York Times reported on the impact on the children. Linda Pattison, a fourth grade teacher here uses her fingers to check off the lessons that she usually teaches but will skip. Her pupils will not study the metric system, arithmetic, electricity and science, nor Oregon's history and social studies. "I can only compare this to my divorce," said the teacher.

More than 100 school districts in 8 States have moved to 4-day weeks to cut costs. Oklahoma City has cut bus service entirely for 1,000 students. In Barnstable, MA, they are charging an additional $200 for music education, $200 for busing, and $1,800 now for all-day kindergarten. In Centennial, MN, schools have upwards of 30 students per class. Class sizes have grown significantly in the last year. In Colton, OR, academic classes in the junior high have as many as 41 students per teacher. That's not education; that's crowd control.

I don't fault these communities. They are in a bind. Local schools cannot meet the high standards on a tin-cup budget.

I see my colleagues here. I think they would share with me the hope that tonight the President of the United States will make it clear that help is on its way to those families, to those teachers, to those parents; that we believe the investment in those children will make a real difference, in terms of our economy and in their ability to acquire skills. It will make a difference in terms of young people being able to make a difference for our society and for our democracy and for our leadership. This is something I hope, on the one hand, he will explain, why we have not been able to do it and, second, that he will have a change of mind and he will say—again, what I believe this President understands—what we have failed to follow through with, and that is that we are going to invest in our children and our children's education.

I thank our colleagues who are here. I see my friends from Rhode Island and Connecticut. I know they want to say a word on the subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. Madam President, I rise to respond and echo the comments of Senator KENNEDY. A year ago, with much hope and great fanfare, we all looked at the signing of the No Child Left Behind Act as a positive step forward, a recognition that we could not simply sit back and let education in the United States continue on its then-current course.

We also hoped the great rhetoric would be matched with real resources. Sadly, those resources have not materialized. The President, only a few weeks after signing the bill, released his budget numbers for fiscal year 2003 which significantly reduced funding for the No Child Left Behind Act. In fact, the President's budget contained the smallest increase overall for education funding in years. A small increase, but nothing commensurate with the kind of expectations that were generated by the No Child Left Behind Act.

We fear—I fear—that that same reality will be visited upon us this evening in the State of the Union speech, and next week when the President releases this year's budget. There will be no significant increase overall in education spending.

The President may point to an increase in title I that he has advertised, a $1 billion increase. That would raise title I funding to $12.3 billion. But let me remind all who are listening, that $12.3 billion is about $6 billion less than the authorized figure in the No Child Left Behind Act.

I can remember the discussions, the debate when we were urging a level of title I funding that would be adequate to deal with the challenges we have placed on all the school districts in this country, to be accountable and to perform at a level that is equal to the challenges of this new and very demanding world we face. So the title I money is an increase, but it is insignificant compared to the target we established, agreed on, and fought for in the No Child Left Behind Act.

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I am happy to yield.

Mr. KENNEDY. Seeing the Senator from Connecticut here, does my friend from Rhode Island remember that we had a specific vote? I believe it was a vote on a Dodd-Collins amendment, which ended up with 79 votes, Republicans and Democrats alike. Seventy-nine Senators voted for that full funding here on the floor of the Senate. Yet we were unable to get that kind of support from the administration. Republicans, Democrats alike here on the floor of the Senate said this is a priority for us. Does the Senator remember? This is not a partisan issue. We were joined, were we not, by Republican colleagues?

Mr. REED. Indeed, you are correct, I say to the Senator. We were joined by practically every Member of the Senate regardless of party and region. They believed, as we did, in the need for real resources, particularly for the title I program. What the President is proposing is more of a cosmetic increase in title I, rather than the kind of increase we need to do the job.

I was listening to Senator KENNEDY, my colleague from Massachusetts. He laid out the current dilemma of local school districts, where they are cutting class days, they are charging for transportation, they are charging for music education. That is in response to the current distressed economy. Don't forget, school districts are now required to do much more, by the Federal Government, by the No Child Left Behind Act. They are in a situation where they have to cut costs. At the same time, they have to respond to more challenges, more mandates from the Federal Government. It is getting worse.

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the Senator yield for another point?

Mr. REED. I am happy to yield.

Mr. KENNEDY. I see we are joined by another member of the committee, the Senator from New York.

Would the Senator not agree with me, and I hope my colleagues would comment, one of the very sad aspects of this is, not only are they having the cuts, but where there are percentage cuts—which have taken place and which were initially proposed in my own State of Massachusetts—in the wealthier communities, they are making up the difference.

I have several illustrations which show how communities that have greater affluence are making up the difference of what they are getting shortchanged, but the poorer districts are once again left high and dry. In well-off Manhattan Beach, CA, parents and the district raised $1.4 million in private funding to pay for music and art staff and teacher aides. The average home in this district is worth $900,000. Also, in a wealthy Kansas City suburb, the Belinder Elementary School brought in proceeds from parent donations earlier this year to help pay the salaries of a nurse, counselor, and foreign language teacher. The efforts raised $78,000 in two weeks to pay for positions that would have been cut as the district faced a $6 million shortfall. But in poor communities, parental philanthropy is not an option—and the children in those communities will be left behind. In Boston, Massachusetts, principals were told to brace for a $60 million cut—and there is no hope for making up that money from somewhere else. According to Boston's Chief Operating Officer, Michael Contompasis, this means, "... humongous layoffs. Everything is on the table." So, again, those children who come from particularly trying and difficult or disadvantaged circumstances are paying even a higher price.

Mr. REED. I think that is absolutely right. I think the Senator from Connecticut might have a comment also, and I yield to him for a comment.

Mr. DODD. Madam President, I thank our colleagues from Massachusetts, New York, and Rhode Island who are here to talk about this issue. In just a few short hours from now we are going to hear the President address the Nation on the State of the Union. If you were to ask the question, what is the state of the union, to the average person, if the question were to be asked, I suppose, of the average family, you may get this sort of analysis: How secure is my family economically? Personally? What does our future look like? That is not a bad question, when you ask how are you doing.

When it comes to the issue of education, I think the answer has to be:

Worried about how I see the future for my family and our children. I am relying on the Federal Government to be a supporter of basic needs in education.

You have to be able to listen to the rhetoric. You will hear a speech tonight. I presume it will be a good one. Presidents normally give pretty good speeches on the State of the Union. But I also think, as my colleagues pointed out, matching up the rhetoric, the language, with the action is critically important. It is the same as we would ask of anyone else. It is nice to hear words about diversity of higher education, nice to hear about making college more affordable, and leaving no child behind. But then you quickly have to ask, Now, what have you done to increase the diversity of our populations in higher education? What have you done or what are you doing to make higher education more affordable? And what, in fact, are you doing to see to it that no child is left behind in our elementary and secondary public school education system?

If you look at those three issues alone—as our colleagues already pointed out here, but it deserves being repeated—in the area of diversity, of course, we find the President attacking the affirmative action programs in the country.

My friend from Rhode Island is maybe in a unique position to talk about the United States military, the United States military academies, and what a remarkable job they have done. He is a graduate of West Point and was a distinguished officer in the United States Army for many years, as a professor at West Point. Certainly our military academies have demonstrated how having affirmative action perhaps has contributed significantly to the strength and well-being and diversity of our officer corps in the United States.

In fact, I would argue that the affirmative action programs in our military academies are exactly the affirmative action programs the President has attacked at the University of Michigan and elsewhere.

Second, I ask my colleagues from Rhode Island, New York, or Massachusetts, what has happened to make college more affordable? We have asked that Pell grants be supported. Yet the administration has said already—maybe they will change their mind tonight; I hope they do. Nothing would please me more than to have the President announce in the State of the Union tonight that he is supporting the full funding of the Pell grant program. I hope this evening he will talk about that.

Third, of course, our colleagues have already spoken out about the Leave No Child Behind legislation, with special education, where we are abysmally short. The White House did not stand up last year in support of special education and still continues to oppose the $4.6 billion necessary to meet the goals.

But my colleague may want to comment on the diversity issue, since he is a graduate of the West Point Academy and knows how important those programs have been to strengthening the United States military. I ask him whether or not that is the case.

Mr. REED. Reclaiming my time, whatever is left, I believe in fact that it is a model for the kind of program that recognizes talent, effort and initiative, but also considers that we want not just a student body at West Point, but also an officer corps in the Army that represents every segment of society. I also serve currently as Chairman of the Board of Visitors at West Point. We have the opportunity to review the admissions process every year.

Frankly, it is a success. The admissions policy at West Point provides an opportunity to broaden, diversify, and make better the institution with some very talented individuals.

Let me put it in perspective. I graduated in 1971. We had two African-Americans in my class. Today, African-Americans make up 8 percent of the student body. Frankly, the military has a larger representation of minorities than that 8 percent, but it represents an officer corps that is both diverse and, let me emphasize, talented. There is no sacrificing standards. There is no sacrificing ability. There is no sacrificing patriotism or anything else. We get wonderful people.

To me, affirmative action is not about quotas. It is about looking beyond just the people who want to show up in the front ranks because they have gone to good high schools, they have parents helping them along, and all the other things that lead them to even apply to West Point. It is about looking beyond that. It has been very successful.

I also suggest that it has been represented by the success of those young men and women in our military forces who are now general officers. The Commandant of Cadets of West Point today is an African-American officer, a graduate of West Point. That would have been exceptional 30 years ago.

Mr. DODD. If my colleague will yield, I asked someone once to define or describe affirmative action. They said: Senator, affirmative action is when someone tells you they can't find somebody, try again. If they still can't, try again.

What my colleague from Rhode Island is saying, when we talk about the success and the wisdom of affirmative action, it has been because of places such as West Point Academy and other of our military academies, where they have tried again to identify and find qualified students and consider them as enrollees to these universities where, in fact, they may have looked into a lot of issues other than just the simple criteria that you might apply to everyone else. As a result of that, they have been able to bring people into our academies. It is not a determining factor, but a factor, in considering the admissions to these academies. Is that not true?

Mr. REED. That is exactly correct.

Frankly, the other argument that is made against affirmative action programs is that they stigmatize the beneficiaries. That could not be further from the truth when it comes to the wonderful officers who have graduated from West Point, Annapolis, and the Air Force Academy. They walk out well qualified, well prepared, well trained. There is no stigma. It is with pride that they serve their country.

Mr. DODD. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Madam President, we have several Members who want to speak. Our time runs out at a quarter of the hour. I am told, because of the extraordinary circumstances that took place on Sunday afternoon, we would yield from 18 minutes to 15 minutes of the hour to our friend from Florida to make some comments about the world champion team. But I ask unanimous consent that the remaining time be divided between the Senators from New York, Maryland, and Vermont.

Mr. SARBANES. May I have 30 seconds?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SARBANES. Madam President, I just want to say to the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts, in this chart about the President breaking his promise to the Nation's children about No Child Left Behind, and the budget, which fails to fund the No Child Left Behind legislation, that is being done in order to have a tax cut that will assure that no millionaire is left behind. That is exactly what has happened.

The President's commitment, with respect to budget priorities, is to give this huge tax break on dividends so that no millionaire will be left behind. Meanwhile, we are leaving behind tens of thousands of schoolchildren all across America.

I thank the Senator.

Mr. KENNEDY. The Senator is quite correct.

Madam President, the time up to 18 minutes before the hour I ask be divided between the Senator from New York and the Senator from Vermont. I hope the Senator from New York will comment about the increase in tuition. At the New York state universities, I understand it has increased 41 percent. I yield to the Senator.

Mrs. CLINTON. Madam President, the Senator from Massachusetts is correct. As is his custom, he has done his homework. He knows we are facing dire circumstances in New York. I know many other places around the country are as well.

But I want to focus, for my limited time, on what is going to happen in my State. News reports tell me that when the Governor addresses the budget—probably tomorrow—he will be announcing drastic cuts in education, totaling as much as $1.2 billion.

This is the first time in a decade that the New York education system will face an absolute cut in its budget. This is not that we are decreasing the amount of the increase; this is an absolute cut.

New York City, which I am sure you know, has a million children in the school system—some of the best kids you will ever meet, and also some of the poorest kids from some of the toughest circumstances.

New York City, which receives 40 percent of the State education funds, stands to lose almost $500 million. How will that be dealt with? You know how it is going to be dealt with. We are going to be laying off teachers. We are going to be putting more children into already crowded classrooms. We are going to be limiting opportunities for advanced placement classes, for lab classes, for the extra kinds of credits in classes that particularly needy children need.

We are going to be looking at delays and actually the stopping of maintenance and other repairs, so that we are going to have not only overcrowded classrooms, overcrowded schools, with very few of the teachers who are needed, but we are going to be basically sending a message to our kids that: You remember that rhetoric. Remember that bill that was signed about Leave No Child Behind? Well, you are not in that group. We don't know how we define that group anymore because we sure are not talking about the million kids in the New York City school system or the hundreds of thousands of kids in Buffalo and Rochester, and Syracuse, and Albany, and Binghamton, and Elmira, and out on Long Island—kids who are going to get left behind.

What is the alternative to all these drastic cuts? It is to try to raise the local taxes to make up for both the Federal and State cuts. I have to tell you, first of all, many parts of New York already do a tremendous job in trying to provide the best quality education for the children in their schools. I live in a community that proudly pays very high property taxes because of what we then can provide to the children from this community. But many places will not be able to do that. At a certain point, the kind of disconnect between bold pronouncements about cutting Federal taxes—which have the impact of forcing States to make very difficult decisions, which have the further impact of forcing local communities either to do without essential services or to raise their taxes—somehow that old shell game is going to get exposed; and so it should.

We were promised, when we passed Leave No Child Behind, that the resources would be there. That promise is being broken. Yes, it is. It is being broken. By breaking it, we are leaving millions and millions of children behind. And as the Senator from Massachusetts so well knows, we are leaving many children in New York behind.

So I hope we will try to redress this extraordinary decision and, similarly, that we will look at what is going to happen in postsecondary education where the Pell grant has lost its purchasing power, where in a State such as ours we are slashing tuition assistance programs plus increasing tuition at the same time.

Something has to give. And what will give is that thousands of students will leave our institutions of higher learning because they will not be able to afford to stay. I think that is a bad bargain for New York and a bad bargain for America.

I appreciate the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts allowing me to express specifically the concerns I have about my State.

Mr. KENNEDY. As I understand, in about 2 minutes the Senator from Florida will be recognized, and after that the Senator from Vermont.

There are just two items I want to mention and repeat. One is that in Oregon we have now about 180 days of education. Some districts are thinking of going to 165 days. If all of the school districts in our country were to follow this example, that would put us as 23rd in the world in terms of the amount of time children are studying in school—where we talk about being No. 1. We talk about being No. 1? We are penalizing our children.

But a second point. And the Senator spoke very eloquently about the increase in tuition.

Does the Senator not agree with me that today the indebtedness of students who come primarily from working families, who have the ability, the academic desire to succeed and excel, are now indebting themselves three times what they were just 10 years ago because of the escalation in tuitions? And therefore, we are saying to a whole group of sons and daughters of working families, that in effect, the opportunity for education, even though you have the ability and the academic success, you will effectively be denied continuing education?

Mrs. CLINTON. The Senator is absolutely accurate. The problem is made even worse by a phenomenon that has occurred over the last several years where much of the aid that the colleges themselves have provided has gone away from need-based aid to so-called merit-based aid. So students who come from families such as mine are meritorious—and I am very proud of that—but then they are taking those dollars, those very scarce collegiate scholarship dollars, they are taking them, when they don't need them, and thereby depriving other students who do need them from that access. So it is both the Federal and State programs and even the colleges' own programs which, combined, are leaving hundreds of thousands of worthy, meritorious, needy students behind.

We are doing it on both ends of the education spectrum. As the Senator so well knows, we are setting ourselves up for a very unfortunate set of circumstances.

If you ask the question: How does this country become richer, safer, smarter, and stronger?—any list of answers that has any basis in evidence, fact, or logic will tell you, investing in education. We know investing in education increases the lifelong earnings of college graduates by $600,000. Every year of postsecondary education will provide between 5 to 15 percent more in annual earnings. Yet here we are closing the door to college education, basically telling a lot of kids who depend on loans, depend on grants, depend upon increasing student debt: I am sorry; you are not in our plans for the future.

That is a terrible mistake for this country to make.

Mr. DODD. Will my colleague yield on that point?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts has 2 minutes remaining.

Mr. KENNEDY. I think we had an agreement that the Senator from Florida was yielded my time so he can make an important statement about the Buccaneers.

Mr. DODD. Who are the Buccaneers?

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, in the midst of these deadly serious subjects that we are talking about, I want to bring a little bit of levity and a bright spot from an extraordinary football game that has now caused the world champions to have the sun especially shining brightly in the State of Florida and, in particular, in the Tampa Bay region.

This resolution commends the Tampa Bay fans because they have been so faithful over the years. This is a miracle. It is a miracle that it has finally happened to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers and, oh, do they deserve it—the most valuable player of the game, the best NFL defensive player, the best defensive record in the whole league, the quarterback himself being from Florida.

I could go on and on. But just to cap off my statement of offering a little lightheartedness to an otherwise very serious day is to point out that I went to the junior Senator from California, as the junior Senator from Florida, to say: Is it worth it to you before the game to have a little friendly wager?

We had a crate of Florida oranges versus a 25-pound box of California almonds. I said: Why don't you throw in a little Napa Valley chardonnay as well.

I am going to be enjoying that. Our staff will be enjoying it, for the sake of all of our people in Florida who have a big smile on their face.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time controlled by the Senator from Massachusetts has expired. The next 20 minutes will be controlled by the Senator from Vermont and the Senator from California.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Connecticut.

EDUCATIONAL INVESTMENT

Mr. DODD. I want to address a question to our colleague from New York and also my colleague from Vermont. What I am about to say is also something he has talked about in the past. We are often told we are now in a period of international crisis and that resources cannot really be allocated as much as we would like for education given these other demands.

Certainly my colleagues are aware, historically, some of the most significant investments we have made as a nation in terms of education have occurred right in the midst of some of our most significant crises as a country.

In 1787, shortly after the American Revolution, at a time when there was great demand for resources, we insisted that land be set aside in new territories, specifically the Federal Government did, for institutions of higher learning. Right in the middle of the Civil War, there was the Morrill Act, authored by a Senator from Vermont, that created the land grant colleges. Here we were in the greatest crisis in the history of the United States, and yet the Congress and the President in the midst of all of that believed we ought to be doing everything we could to establish land grant colleges.

Then, of course, prior to the end of World War II, the GI bill is another example. Here is a nation at war and demand for resources are great; our Nation is in peril, although it was toward the end of the war. Yet the Congress and the President thought it was so critically important that we allocated resources for furthering the advancement of higher education.

I don't know if my colleagues would like to briefly respond to that point.

Mrs. CLINTON. I would respond in support of the observations that the Senator from Connecticut has made. It is deeply troubling to me that in the current atmosphere in which we find ourselves, the first victim seems to be the future.

We are shortchanging the future and, in particular, we are shortchanging our children. I don't believe any previous generation of Americans, as the Senator has illustrated, has ever done this before. We are about to become the first generation that deliberately, intentionally, will leave our children worse off than we were.

I find that absolutely mind-boggling. I cannot even grasp it. We talk about our parents, the greatest generation, who sacrificed, who planned for the future, who made big investments in education, in highways, in research and development, in infrastructure, in health care, and here we are about to dismantle the work they so carefully put into place, starting with education but by no means ending there.

It is a moment of real concern and should be talked about, not just in this Chamber but throughout our country. What is it exactly we intend to leave our children besides a more dangerous world and a pile of debt?

Mr. DODD. I thank my colleague for her answer. She is absolutely correct.

It would be a unique and historic tragedy if we were the first generation to not fulfill its obligations to the coming generation.

I said the Homestead Act. It was the Northwest Ordinance of 1787 that was an example of a country in crisis that still found time to invest in its educational needs. I don't know if my colleague from Vermont wanted to comment on that as well. It was Senator Morrill from Vermont who created the land grant colleges. The University of Connecticut was one of the beneficiaries of that idea. Right in the middle of the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln and the Congress said: We ought to be investing in the educational needs of the Nation, and authored that legislation. I know my colleague from Vermont has spoken eloquently for and fought for higher education. I thought he might want to comment on those decisions.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Vermont is proud of the fact that it has provided leadership throughout the centuries, and the Morrill Act did more for expanding the ability of education for our young people to strengthen this Nation than any other action that has been taken since.

I thank the Senator for bringing up the history, especially relative to my own State.

STATE OF THE UNION

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, as the President prepares to address the Nation, I hope he will remember that homeland security starts here at home, and that he addresses the critical domestic priorities facing our Nation at this time. Today, very briefly, I want to discuss a few of those priorities.

In last year's State of the Union Address, the President highlighted his and Congress's bipartisan efforts on education. He discussed how education was integral to having a secure Nation with a well-educated and trained workforce that would grow and strengthen our economy.

President Bush said:

Good jobs begin with good schools, and we've made a fine start.

But you cannot educate our children on the cheap, and I am afraid that is what the President is asking our Nation's educational system to do. Last year's Bush administration budget was the worst education budget in 7 years.

The Bush budget fell $7 billion short of the resources promised in the No Child Left Behind Act, and it cut funding for the legislation's initiatives by $90 million. It also proposed less than half of the Federal commitment to special education. This $11 billion shortfall negatively affects all of our public school students and shifts billions of dollars more to local property taxes.

At the same time, our communities are being forced to make decisions on defraying education budget shortfalls. Some schools are having to cut days off of their years and time off for the students. That is a crisis that should not happen. Some school districts are considering shortening the school year in order to be able to live within their budget. Some schools no longer have money to hire substitute teachers for the remainder of the school year.

We have a responsibility to ensure that every individual has the opportunity to receive a high-quality education, from prekindergarten to elementary and secondary, to special education, to technical and higher education and beyond. Unfortunately, any gains that have been made in education achievement are currently in jeopardy due to the lack of funds at the local, State, and Federal levels.

There is nothing more important to our Nation's future, to our homeland security, and to our economy than ensuring we have a top-notch educational system that is the envy of the world.

I call on the Bush administration to make education funding and our children's future a higher national priority.

THE ENVIRONMENT

Mr. President, I also want to briefly discuss the Bush administration's record on environmental issues.

As the ranking member of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, I am sorry to report that the Bush administration continues to move us backward instead of forward in our efforts to protect our environment.

Weekly, usually on Friday afternoons, when the press is all asleep, or whatever, the Bush administration stages the below-radar attacks on public health and the environment. The administration ignores the abundant proof of imminent and long-term threats from pollution that endanger our lives and our ecosystems.

Today and every day since the administration took office, approximately 82 people will have died prematurely due to sickness and lung disease caused by fine particulate matter from powerplant pollution, which could and should be prevented.

Today and every day since the administration took office, up to 160 acres of vital wetlands have been converted for development or paved over. Instead of trying to slow the rate of wetlands destruction, the administration is seeking to ease existing wetlands protection.

Today and every day since the administration took office, the Nation adds around 16 million tons of carbon dioxide to the atmosphere, each year contributing 25 percent of the world's total carbon. This raises the risk and threat of global warming.

Shortly after being sworn in, the President reversed his commitment to control greenhouse gases and has not looked back once. I am afraid the Bush administration's environmental policies have been more focused on protecting the special interests than protecting the air and water and land that we all share.

In closing, on the issues of education funding and the environment, I am afraid our Nation has taken two steps back rather than one step forward. I can only hope that for the good of this Nation we can come together and once again move this Nation in the right direction.

How much time do I have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senators have 10 minutes of their 20 minutes remaining.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I reserve the remainder of our time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. BOXER. Madam President, Senator REID asked if I could extend this time until 3:30. I make that unanimous consent request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair, in my capacity as a Senator from Alaska, objects.

CONCERNS OF CALIFORNIANS

Mrs. BOXER. All right. Madam President, I was here earlier to discuss the State of the Union as I saw it in California, and I reported that my constituents—Democrats, Republicans, Independents, young, and old—are very anxious about where we are. They are anxious when they see that we had a surplus that, in 2 short years, has turned into a raging deficit. They are anxious that we are on the brink of war without a lot of our allies coming along. They are anxious about their pension plans. Many are having to work longer and harder because of what happened with the stock market losing trillions of dollars in value. They are anxious about seeing a Nation that has lost its way on foreign policy and domestic policy. They have asked me to address some of these issues in every way that I can.

This afternoon, I am here to address the issue of the environment. I am very proud that Senator JEFFORDS is here on the floor, because he is fighting very hard for clean air. He has introduced legislation—the Clean Power Act—to take on the challenges we face with 2 billion tons of carbon dioxide, which causes global warming; 45 million tons of mercury, which poisons fish and endangers the health of children and pregnant women; 6 million tons of nitrogen oxide, which creates smog and causes asthma; and 13 million tons of sulfur dioxide, which causes acid rain, premature death, and lung disease. He has authored a very good bill to cure this problem.

The administration is not supporting his bill. They have written their own bill called "Clear Skies." Many I know are calling it "dirty skies." If we would just leave the Clean Air Act intact, as it is, we would clean up the air far faster than this administration rollback. That is just one more example of a series of rollbacks that we are seeing done by this administration.

Frankly, the people of California, from both political parties, who cherish their environment, love to see the ocean, the forests, the lakes, and the rivers, and they cherish clean air. We have made so much progress and we want the Clean Water Act to stand intact. They are anxious, they are concerned, and they are puzzled as to why this administration is turning its back on Presidents—Republicans and Democrats, starting with Teddy Roosevelt who made the environment a non-partisan issue, and President Eisenhower who said the Alaskan Wildlife Refuge should be left intact, and President Nixon who created the Environmental Protection Agency, and President Clinton who did so many far-reaching things on the environment, protecting acres of land of roadless, beautiful areas, and used his executive pen to make sure that beautiful areas of our country are off limits to special interests because we believe when we got this land from God that it is our responsibility to preserve it and leave it in better condition than we found it.

We take this very seriously in California. This is not a partisan issue. I have people who voted for President Bush coming up to me and tugging at my sleeve: What is the matter with this administration?

Every Friday, late at night, when the press operations have shut down, they are making yet another rollback. The people in my State want me to fight against it, and I intend to do so.

Let's talk about this attack in specifics. One in every four Americans lives within 4 miles of a Superfund site. This chart has little dots that represent Superfund sites. Seventy million Americans live within 4 miles of a Superfund site. Ten million of those are children who are at risk of cancer and other health problems.

My State happens to have the second highest number of sites after New Jersey, but as we can see, there are sites in almost every State in the Union. These Superfund sites are dangerous. They include chemicals such as arsenic, benzene, DDT, and brain-damaging toxins like lead and mercury.

In 1980, Congress enacted the Superfund law. During the last 4 years of the Clinton administration, an average of 87 final cleanups occurred each year. Let's look at what is happening under George Bush. Half of those sites are being cleaned up. Worse than that, who is now paying? Under Bill Clinton and under Republican Presidents before him, including George Bush's father, we taxed the polluters. The polluters paid to clean up their mess.

When I was growing up, my mother always said: Clean up your mess. She did not want to hear me say: It is somebody else's responsibility, mom. It is not mine.

Wrong. If you make a mess, you clean it up. Simple. That goes for polluters. That is why we set up the Superfund. The polluter pays was the rule of the day.

Now what is happening? This President does not support the Superfund fee on the biggest polluters. We see where the taxpayers used to pay only 18 percent of the cleanup costs, in this year are going to pay 50 to 54 percent of the cleanup costs. After this year, there will be almost nothing left in the Superfund, and this will be 100-percent paid for by taxpayers at a time when this President is depleting the money we already have by giving tax cuts to the people who earn over a million dollars a year, who do not need it.

So what is wrong with this picture? This President refuses to stand behind a bipartisan effort to reinstate the Superfund fee. I have introduced the bill with Senator CHAFEE, a Republican. This President will not support that and instead supports using general taxpayer funds to clean up Superfund sites.

Polluter pays is a principle that has worked. It has been supported by people of both parties and Presidents of both parties. It seems to me our people are in danger, and this administration is walking away from the Superfund.

I want to talk a little bit about clean water because this is very important. The Bush administration is working to remove Federal protection from many waters, including many creeks, streams, small ponds, and wetlands. These bodies of water have long been protected by the Clean Water Act. There was a rule published late in the day, and the effect of the rule is that 20 to 30 percent of our bodies of water could be exempted from the Clean Water Act. Why on earth would anyone want to do that when we see the results of the Federal Government's now saying that 20 to 30 percent of our water bodies no longer are covered by the Clean Water Act will be more polluted waterways? We already know the Nation's waters are getting dirtier, and almost half of our lakes, streams, rivers, and coastal estuaries are not safe for fishing, for swimming, or for boating.

How many people have taken their children on a vacation only to go down to a lake, go down to an ocean and find the sign, "Polluted. You may not enter this body of water"?

We will kill off the remaining populations of 43 percent of endangered or threatened species that rely on wetlands for survival. We will deplete drinking water sources.

Mr. President, I ask about the time. My understanding from Senator HARRY REID was we had time until 3:15. He asked me if I could then extend that to 3:30. No one is on the floor from the other side. Because there is no one on the other side, I ask unanimous consent—and I think if I do not get that unanimous consent, it says to me that people on the other side of the aisle, the Republicans, are not interested in allowing free speech to move forward. There is no one in the Chamber. I am happy to cease and desist when the next speaker comes. I ask unanimous consent that until another speaker comes that I be able to complete my remarks on the war on the environment that is going on each and every day, that is hurting our air, hurting our water, hurting our country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CRAPO). I have been advised by the leadership of the majority that they do intend to use their time, and so in my capacity as a Senator from Idaho, I object to the request.

Mrs. BOXER. I once more ask unanimous consent that I be able to speak until the next speaker comes to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous rules, the Senator from California's time has expired. However, her side has until 3:15. She may ask unanimous consent to use that time.

Mrs. BOXER. That is what I have been doing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator has until the hour of 3:15 or until a Senator from her side wants to claim that time.

Mrs. BOXER. I have been asked to take that time. That is what I was trying to convey to my friend. I ask for an additional 2 minutes because it took 2 minutes for the Chair to figure out that I actually could take HARRY REID's time. Would that be all right?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I am very feisty today because I see an attack on our environment. I want to make the case, and I am going to try to do it in the remaining 7, 8, or 9 minutes I have.

If we move away from the Clean Water Act, what we will see is more polluted waters, more waterborne illness, higher drinking water filtration costs, more flooding, fish kills, and impaired sports fishing—that is why we have so many sports fishermen with us—fewer waterfowl and less recreational hunting. That is why we have so many recreational hunters with us as we try to resist this move to remove bodies of water from the Clean Water Act.

We will see reduced tourism, less spending on bird watching, ecotourism, and wildlife photography. I know my colleague understands the importance of tourism to our States. People come to see the beautiful wildlife, have a hunting or fishing trip, to take photographs, to show their children what wildlife really is. It is a hard time for those of us who believe so much that protecting the environment is a bipartisan issue.

I want to talk about something that is very near and dear to my heart because when I came to the House of Representatives in the 1980s, we learned that 100,000 dolphin were being killed every year because of destructive fishing practices, including Purse-Seining on dolphin. Many people now know what that is because Greenpeace called it to the world's attention. When tuna swim, they swim underneath the dolphin, and so unless one is really careful, they are going to throw their nets over the dolphin, and the dolphin are going to be killed or harmed. This practice was occurring in the 1980s. One hundred thousand dolphin were being killed each and every year because of dolphin deadly methods of fishing.

I have to say the young people of America turned the tide because kids would say to their parents: This is wrong to do to the dolphin, and if it means we are not going to take a tuna sandwich in our lunch, fine. We will boycott tuna until the tuna fishermen catch the tuna in a way that does not harm the dolphin.

Happily, the Congress passed the law I wrote. All the law said was we should create a label called a "dolphin safe" label, and if the tuna in that can was caught in a way that did not harm the dolphin, the manufacturer could, in fact, put that on the can.

What happened as a result of that legislation? By the way, it costs no money at all. It was just letting the consumer know the truth. The dolphin kill went down to 2,000 a year from 100,000 a year. That was because of the "dolphin safe" label of 1990.

The label was not that well respected. In about 1997, there were moves to weaken it. Basically, we held firm. Now the Commerce Department under George Bush has decided, forget all that, you can use the "dolphin safe" label even if you go back to purse seining on dolphin—as long as no one saw any dolphin die.

Scientific studies say that just does not work. When you harass the dolphin and you use the helicopters and you chase the dolphin and you torment the dolphin, we know what happens. They are not reproducing and they are not healthy. Yet this Bush administration wants to change the label. Now, fortunately, groups have gone to court and gotten the administration to guarantee that it will not change the meaning of "dolphin safe" until the court has examined this issue. For the moment, the "dolphin safe" label stands.

I put the administration on notice: If they persist in this, we will start another boycott. Americans do not agree with the administration putting free trade ahead of the dolphin. I can state that 75 percent of Americans want to make sure that label means something.

I have been in public life having first been elected in the 1970s, and I have always been a fighter for a clean and healthy environment. In all the years I have been in office, I have never seen such an attack on the environment. I have a list of every single attack on the environment this administration has made. It is published. We did it in chart form. We have four charts. Each shows repeals or rollbacks of an environmental law or regulation. It can be found on the NRDC Web site. If I were to have it on a piece of paper, it would roll out 32 feet.

Two hundred rules and regulations have been rolled back by this administration against the will of the American people, many of them on Friday afternoon. I am here to say on behalf of many on this side of the aisle—and some on the other—we believe protecting the environment is an American value.

It is not a Democratic value or a Republican value, it is an American value. We cherish our God-given environment. We cherish our forests, our streams, our lakes, our oceans. We believe it is important we keep the air clean, the water clean.

We will continue to come to the floor and make the case that this is the most anti-environmental administration in recent history. It is amazing when we compare contributions of a Republican President, Teddy Roosevelt, a Republican President, Richard Nixon, a Republican President, George Bush 1—who, by the way, said we should test poor children for lead in their blood. That is important to find out if they are sick or healthy. If they have lead in their blood, we should take action. This President tried to repeal that rule until we called him on it and pointed out it costs $13 a child and he stopped it. He tried to say we should not try to take arsenic out of water. We called him on it.

Mr. President, the state of the Union is anxious—about the economy, it is anxious about jobs. It is anxious about a number of things: The possibility of war; it is anxious about a foreign policy that is in totally different directions where one country has inspections going on and we don't trust the leader of that country, we are ready to go against him, and another country has nuclear weapons and we are going to resolve that diplomatically. The country is anxious. They are anxious about the state of their environment. They do not want to have another Friday come and find out their rules for clean air, clean water, beautiful forests, are under attack.

I am here to say to the President: I know you are doing the last-minute rewriting of your speech. Think about what we are saying today. Democrats have come here in good faith to point out their differences. Reach out to us. Have a plan for the economy that is going to work. Say you will follow in the bipartisan traditions of environmental protection. Work with us on a foreign policy that is consistent and does not wait until a crisis hits but actually is proactive. Work with us on prescription drugs. Work with us so that people can get health insurance. We are ready, we are willing, and able to work with you.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, it is my understanding we now have 1 hour from this minute under our control.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

THE PRESIDENTIAL BURDEN

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, the President of the United States has an awesome responsibility. I don't think anyone in America would say that he does not realize what his responsibility is and that he is not working as hard as any person could to try to do the right thing for our country, in both our domestic agenda, our homeland security, and, of course, our national defense.

He has a heavy burden. He must do something that stimulates the economy, that puts people back to work, and at the same time he must spend everything that is necessary to secure the people in our country who live here and to make sure that our young men and women who are fighting the war on terrorism, who are fighting for our freedom and our country, wherever they may be in the world, have everything they need to do the job we are asking them to do.

I have been listening to a lot of the comments that have been made on the floor today. I would like to take each of the areas that have been mentioned and try to talk about what the President's agenda is and why he is trying so hard to beef up our economy, at the same time fighting a very long and, frankly, iconoclastic war on terrorism.

This is a new kind of enemy. It is not the kind of enemy that is one country or two countries. It is no particular country. It is not the kind of enemy we always have had one which wanted to kill or harm us but didn't want to hurt themselves. No, this is an enemy that is willing to blow itself up in order to harm Americans. It is even an enemy that would tell their children, teach their children, educate their children, that suicide, in order to harm Americans and freedom-loving people, is a good thing.

This is a difficult kind of war. Our President knows we are fighting on every front, that we are trying to find the enemy, no matter where they are. If they are in the caves in Afghanistan or if they are in Iraq or if they are in North Korea or if they are in our own country, the President is doing everything he can to execute this war and to tell the people of the United States we must stand together. We must stand together and keep the spirit of our country if we are going to have the patience and the resolve to beat this new kind of enemy.

That is what our President is trying to do. He doesn't want to make war. He doesn't want to make war on Iraq or anyone else. But he also knows that if we are going to keep another 9/11 from happening—God forbid a 9/11 with a nuclear weapon or biological or chemical weapon—if he is going to prevent that from happening in our country, he is going to have to have the full support of the American people. That is exactly what he is trying to get, by talking about the problems in Iraq, talking about what Saddam Hussein is doing.

The people who have seen Saddam Hussein, who have seen the treachery of this despot, know he is someone we must not have in control of a country and with the potential of having a weapon of mass destruction.

I know the President tonight is going to talk about the war on terrorism and all the things he is doing and all the young men and women who are on their way to the Middle East to make sure we are negotiating from a position of strength. But I know this President's very last resort is war. It is not the 1st resort, nor the 2nd resort, nor the 3rd resort, nor the 100th resort. But he knows that unless Saddam Hussein knows we mean business—we will do what we say we are going to do—we are going to lose this war on terrorism. That is the leadership the President of the United States is showing.

The President, in addition to the burden of having to prosecute a war, also has the burden of having to make sure our domestic economy stays strong, because it will be very difficult to prosecute a war if our domestic economy continues to erode.

We passed a tax cut 2 years ago under the leadership of President Bush and with strong support from Congress. That tax cut has helped a lot of people. I believe that tax cut kept us from going into a deeper recession. Now the President is trying to stimulate the economy, and the President is looking at history, and what has happened when we have had tax cuts in history has been phenomenal.

In 1964, President Kennedy led the fight for tax cuts. In 1965—1 year later—the gross domestic product rose 8 percent. Over the next 5 years, it rose 48 percent. Unemployment fell from 5.2 percent in 1965 to 3.5 percent in 1969. Five years later, revenues had risen for the U.S. Government by 66 percent. There was a $5.9 billion deficit in 1965 but a $3.2 billion surplus in 1969. That was the effect of the tax cuts of 1964.

After the Reagan tax cut of 1981, the gross domestic product rose 4 percent the next year, 1982; 42 percent over the next 5 years; unemployment fell from 7.6 percent to 7 percent in 1986. Five years later, revenues had risen by 28 percent.

So it has been proven that tax cuts will give the economy the boost it needs.

We have seen a situation in America where corporations have been dissuaded, because of double taxation of dividends, from giving dividends. So people who are saving and investing in order to have retirement security have been getting fewer and fewer dividends because companies get nothing for paying the dividend. They have to pay taxes on the money first before they would issue a dividend. It is cheaper to go into debt. So we have seen debt financing rise, and dividends that go to shareholders that can help secure retirement have been going down.

Today in America, 50 percent of the people own stock and 50 percent of the people who get dividends are our senior citizens. These are people who have tried to provide for their retirement security, not looking to their Government but looking to themselves. That is what we want to encourage. That is why the President is trying to eliminate the dividends' taxes.

So we are trying very hard to stimulate the economy.

How are we doing it? We are doing it, of course, by trying to eliminate the double taxation of dividends, trying to encourage corporations to give dividends and help people who want to have that income to live on, who need that income. But we are also doing something else. We are trying to lessen the burden of the marriage penalty. Why would we have a marriage penalty in our country? We don't need to tax marriage, but that is what we do. And the President is trying to eliminate that. I have introduced the bill in the Senate to eliminate the marriage tax penalty.

We are also trying to bring down the tax rate for every bracket—yes, every bracket. Mr. President, 35 percent of the small businesses in our country will get relief if we lower the upper bracket. Everyone will get relief under the President's plan—everyone who pays taxes will get relief, and especially the small businesspeople in our country who desperately need this tax relief and are trying very hard to make ends meet in these tough times. We want to help them.

I think the President is doing a great job. I am very proud that he is trying to stimulate the economy. He is very concerned about people who have lost their jobs, people who are worried about their retirement security, and he is trying to do something about it. At the same time, he is taking on a massive war on terrorism, to make sure that freedom reigns in the world, to make sure that our way of life—democracy, freedom, free enterprise, self-reliance—lasts in the world—not a way of life that says that suicide is a good thing if you can kill other people at the same time, not a way of life that says people will never have a chance to have a role in their own government. There will be no self-government in a world of terrorism. We cannot allow that kind of power to take over the world. That is what the President is trying to do.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I compliment our distinguished Senator from Texas for the excellent remarks she has made about really what is going on right now and what the President is trying to do.

I, for one, want to help the President. I want to help him to help this economy. So I rise today in support of President Bush's growth and jobs plan, and I would like to take a few minutes today to tell you why I believe this is the right prescription for America at this time.

I know from talking to people in my own home State of Utah, and across the country, that our current economy is not meeting its full potential. This is crystal clear. The nationwide unemployment rate stands at 6 percent. And while that is better than usual after a recession, it is still far too high. Thousands of people in Utah and millions of people across the country are out there looking for work. Yes, most of them are finding jobs eventually, but jobs are far too scarce still. As long as there are people who want to work but cannot get work, we have a problem in our country.

The President's plan starts off by speeding up the tax reductions this body has already passed by a significant margin. This is just plain common sense. A big part of the tax cut we passed in 2001 was designed to be phased in over the following 10 years, with rate cuts, marriage penalty relief, and child tax credits increasing every few years. But since our economy is below its potential right now, then right now is the time to make the full amount of these tax cuts effective. Doing so would put money in people's pockets immediately. The IRS would change their withholding tables immediately after the accelerated tax cuts become law, so more money would show up immediately in workers' paychecks.

The President's plan to speed up the tax cuts now, right when we need them, will have an immediate, visible impact on practically every American taxpayer.

A key part of the President's plan is to accelerate marriage penalty relief and speed up the $1,000-per-child tax credit. Phasing in these family-friendly tax provisions slowly might have made some political sense 2 years ago, but today, when young families are wondering whether Mom and Dad will have a job next week, cutting the tax man's share of the pie will be a big help.

Waiting 3 to 5 years for family tax relief makes no sense in the middle of a slow economic recovery. Let's do it now. Let's provide a tremendous boost to millions of American families.

As to some of the media reports that the President's plan unfairly benefits the wealthiest people in the country and does little or nothing for low- or middle-income taxpayers, let me set the record straight.

According to the Treasury Department, a married couple with two children and an annual income of $40,000 would see their taxes decline, under the President's plan, by $1,133—from $1,178 to $45—in 2003.

In other words, under today's taxes, they would pay $1,178. That would be reduced $1,133 to where they have a tax bill of $45. That is for people who make $40,000 a year. For this family, there is not much more tax relief that can be given.

Under the Bush plan, 92 million taxpayers would receive, on average, a tax cut of $1,083 in the year 2003 and thereafter. Forty-six million married couples would receive an average tax cut of $1,716. Thirty-four million families with children would benefit from an average tax benefit of $1,473. Six million single women with children would receive an average tax cut of $1,384. Twenty-three million small business owners would receive tax cuts averaging $2,042. Talk about helping the middle class.

In my home State of Utah, over 646,000 taxpayers would get tax relief from the President's package. That is important to me. That is important to almost 650,000 people in the State of Utah.

Under our ultra-progressive income tax, the top 50 percent of income earners—those who made $27,682 in the year 2000 or more—that upper 50 percent, from $27,000 and up, paid over 96 percent of all the income taxes paid in this Nation.

Therefore, those who are paying most of the income taxes are naturally going to get much of the benefit of a tax cut. In fact, it is almost impossible to cut any tax without making the people who pay that tax better off.

Projections prepared by the Treasury Department show that 40 percent of the President's proposed tax cut would go to people with income over $200,000 per year. But it is important to note that this same group is paying 44.8 percent—almost 45 percent—of the total income tax.

If we enact the President's plan, people making over $200,000 a year will end up paying even a larger fraction of the Nation's income tax bill, 45.4 percent. On the other hand, people making less than $50,000 would pay less of the total share than they do now.

Further, the President's plan contains an important provision to increase the incentive for small business investment. I might have made this provision even stronger than the President chose to make it. But even as it stands, the increase to $75,000 per year of business expensing will be a boon to companies struggling to grow. It will increase the demand for business equipment and software, sectors that have been hit especially hard in this downturn. This proposal can help to revive business spending and create new jobs in industries that make machines, computers, and software.

I would like to debunk one particular false notion that is making the rounds here on Capitol Hill and in the media; the idea that lower income people spend all of their tax cut but the middle and higher income people will just save them.

It turns out that how much you earn does not have a night-and-day impact on the people's decision to spend. A recent study by the nonpartisan National Bureau of Economic Research concluded—and I quote—

Low-income households are not more likely to spend the rebate.

In fact, as this chart shows, it looks as though families with lower incomes actually tended to spend a smaller fraction of their rebate.

I will just point to this chart now. The modest income earners spent little of their rebates. Americans who earned up to $50,000 per year spent less than 20 percent of their 2001 tax rebate. But Americans who earned more than $50,000 a year spent over 25 percent of their rebate checks.

It would appear to me rebates are not the way to go if we want to stimulate the economy. Yet that is what our colleagues on the other side seem to think is the gold standard to help get the economy going.

I would now like to address the part of the President's package that has drawn the most attention, the plan to end the double taxation of dividends. Ending the double taxation of dividends will make stocks more valuable, it will make businesses more financially sound, and it will make it harder for a few wrongdoers to hide their corporate shenanigans.

Why do America's corporations load up on debt financing despite the fact that the higher debt levels increase the risk of bankruptcy? I will tell you why. Because our Nation's tax laws have always given them massive financial incentives to do just exactly that.

The reason is simple. When a corporation pays interest to bondholders, that payment is taxed only once. That is at the bondholder level. But, in contrast, when it pays dividends to stockholders, that payment is taxed twice—to both the corporation and the shareholder.

President Bush's economic growth plan contains a proposal to end this absurd incentive and, by doing so, his plan will strengthen the foundations of our economy and help ensure growth and new jobs for years to come.

This chart—"How the Double Taxation of Dividends Harms Our Nation"—shows that bankruptcies go up, corporate accountability goes down, and investment in capital formation also goes down. And that is where jobs are thrown to the wind.

Our Tax Code's harsh and unfair treatment of dividend payments harms the foundation of our economy in those three ways. It increases the number of bankruptcies, it weakens corporate accountability, and it slows the formation of capital.

By loading up on tax-deductible bonds and bank loans rather than issuing new shares of stock, corporations increase their chance of going bankrupt.

Our Tax Code should not encourage this behavior. When corporations load up on debt, they commit too much of their cash flow to making interest payments, and the danger of bankruptcy becomes all too real. Once we change this policy, businesses will find they have people lined up out the door to buy stocks that pay dividends. When companies hear of the clamor for dividend-paying stocks, they will have a much stronger incentive to pay for new projects and new factories by issuing new shares of stock rather than running to the bank or the bond market for a loan.

And then, if times get tough, businesses will not be as likely to declare bankruptcy and head to Federal court for a painful reorganization, as we are seeing today. Instead, many companies will be able to cut their dividend to shareholders, and continue business more or less as usual.

This is not speculation on my part. Just open up any textbook on corporate finance—books that are on the shelves of many an MBA—and you will see it yourself in black and white: Business managers are taught to weigh the benefits of tax-favored debt finance against the increased risk of bankruptcy. They even have a name for it. They call it the Trade-off Theory of Capital Structure. And it is caused by the double taxation of dividends.

Our Tax Code's inequitable treatment of equity also weakens corporate accountability. Dividend payments are cash-on-the-barrelhead evidence that a company is profitable.

While not a perfect measure by any means, it can be an important signal that a firm is solvent. As they say on Wall Street, "Profit is an opinion, but cash is a fact."

The Wall Street Journal reported recently that only about 30 percent of S&P 500 corporations pay any dividends at all. A crucial reason for this dividend drought is our Tax Code, which requires corporations to pay 35 cents in taxes for every dollar in profit and then, on top of that, requires taxpayers who get those profits in the form of dividends to pay personal income tax. The total government take, when state taxes are added, can exceed 70 percent. So what is the incentive to pay dividends—something we ought to be encouraging, rather than destroying.

Finally, our inequitable treatment of equity slows innovation and the formation of capital. The double taxation of dividend income cuts the flow of equity funding to all but the most promising investments. Good ideas go unexplored and promising investments go unfunded because they cannot guarantee enough after-tax profit to investors.

I believe it is important for Congress to eliminate the double taxation of dividends. It is important for our country and the stability of our business community. That is why I support President Bush's plan. By making shares a more attractive investment, his plan will boost demand for stocks and push up their value. By reducing the long-run risk of bankruptcy and encouraging companies to take on promising projects, it will be good for employees. And most importantly, ending the double taxation of dividends will make American corporations stronger, much more accountable, than they are today and more innovative in the years to come.

I am proud to be able to support the President's growth and jobs package, and I am looking forward to working with my colleagues on the Finance Committee, both Democrats and Republicans, to pass out a bill that give tax cuts to America's families, that gives small businesses an opportunity to grow, and that end the double taxation of dividends to strengthen both our stock market and the financial foundations of American business. This is an economic agenda that addresses the needs of today as well as the challenges of the future. The American people deserve no less.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, we are in morning business, I believe.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized for up to 32 minutes.

STATE OF THE UNION MESSAGE

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I have listened to some of the conversation that has gone on. Obviously, much of it has been pointed toward this evening's speech that we all look forward to from the President, the State of the Union, at which time he will outline at least some of his plans for the direction this country will take.

I am looking forward to it. The President has committed himself to going in certain directions. All of us understand that. All of us are in favor of the things the President wants to do. I suppose we have different views of how that might be done. That is the way it ought to be.

I do hope we don't spend all of our time simply criticizing; that we not use this as a sort of political fulcrum, but we really talk about the issues. No one could disagree with the notion that we are looking for ways to grow the economy and create jobs. Who can argue with that? No one. How you do it, yes, I suppose there are different views.

To strengthen and improve health care, certainly that is one of the issues all of us are faced with, whether it be Medicare, Medicaid, the CHIP program, or just general health care. We are all very much interested in it.

In my State of Wyoming, a rural State, we have a little different problem, but interestingly enough, we have problems the same as they do in Chicago or New York City. The cost, for instance, of liability insurance is higher in our State than it is some others, which is kind of strange. Nevertheless, we would all agree with the fact that we need to do something about that.

Obviously, the defense of our country against terrorism, the defense of our country against challenges overseas and security at home, no one disagrees. Again, we have different ways of doing it.

I would like to deviate from the issue for a moment to talk a little bit about—I guess, philosophically or in a broader sense—the notion of dealing with these issues in terms of a longer term view. We have held in my State of Wyoming over the last couple years several meetings; in fact, about 26 meetings in 23 counties. We call them Vision 20/20. We met with the people in the community, all of whom would come—some invited for special reasons—to talk about what they wanted their community and their family and their business to be in 20 years or 10 years or 15 years, how they envisioned the way things should be. Of course, as you might imagine, we found out there are different views from different people, but pretty much some of the same consistency in terms of wanting better jobs, better security, having health care, having freedom.

We find ourselves in this body, as in many bodies, as a matter of fact, dealing almost exclusively with those issues that are right now upon us, fixing what is going to happen tomorrow.

Of course, that is necessary. But it seems to me we would help ourselves a great deal and help our country a great deal if we could look a little further out into the future and say: What do we want this Government to look like in 15 years, what kind of a system would we think would be best for health care in 15 or 20 years, and then begin to get some kind of a general conception of where we want to be and where we think it is best to be for our country and for the people who live here. And then as we move through the daily issues and as we move toward the issues that we have to resolve, we can measure those against where we want to be and see if in fact they are contributing to the attainment of the goals we have set.

One of them certainly is the role of Government. We haven't talked about this as much lately as we used to. What is the role of the Federal Government? How much Federal Government do we want in our lives over a period of time? This, after all, is the United States of America. This is a federation of States. Most of us would agree that the Government that rules best is the one closest to the people. Obviously, there are roles for the national organization, there are roles for the Federal Government. But there are also limits that ought to be there, if we don't want the Federal Government to be the end-all of governmental activity.

What do we see there? How do we want to do that? Most people would believe there are some constitutional limits to the role of the Federal Government. We seem to have dismissed those to a large extent and find Government involved in nearly every aspect of our life.

That becomes kind of a political thing that we talk about. We talked about that last week—what can we do this week for somebody? We ended up with the other side of the aisle, in that week we spent trying to catch up with the appropriations, having proposals of $500 billion worth of spending that would grow Government over 10 years, at the same time complaining about a deficit. So we didn't have a good concept of where we wanted to go and measure against balancing spending and balancing the budget. Of course, we want to deviate from that from time to time, and the circumstances now require that we do something unusual, I am sure, about defense and terrorism and about the economy.

So we are obviously going to spend more money now than we would normally spend because it is not a normal situation. We hear all the time "back in 1998 we didn't have a lot of the problems that we have now." We have to deal with them. Overall, what do we want? We want a balanced budget. I think we want to be able to hold down spending, not increase it, which is what we hear about, frankly, all the time.

We need to take a look at terminating activities that are out of date. It seems when we get something going in the Federal Government, it is there forever. In the private sector, when you have a company or an operation of your own and you find something is not contributing to that, you have to change it. Not so in the Government. But that ought to be one of the directions we want to take.

Certainly, we ought to be able to do health care. What do we want over time with health care? We have already indicated pretty clearly over the past number of years, when it was tried in the last administration to have a Government-run program, we didn't accept that and most of us do not now. Obviously, some work needs to be done to help people who need help. But where do we want to be? Do we want this health care to be primarily in the private sector? I think so. Most people do. So these are things we need to talk about and think about and have a good deal of attention paid to. What is the role of the Federal Government on these issues?

I noticed the other day a quotation from President Clinton that Government's responsibility is to create more opportunities, and the people's responsibility is to make the most of it. I agree with that. I don't think his policies were in line with that, but I agree with that statement. So what we are talking about here primarily tonight—and I am sure for several months—is about strengthening America's economy. The President's economic agenda has two main goals: To encourage consumer spending that will boost economic recovery, and promote investment by individuals and businesses that will lead to the economic growth and job creation. Those are two different points of view, and I respect that. Their point of view is to distribute money to everybody. Over here, it is to create incentive to create jobs so you have a long-term, positive impact. We need to do that.

So we will have great discussions, of course, on all of these issues. That is the way it ought to be and, indeed, that is the way it is.

I see my friend from New Mexico here. I hope we can address ourselves on these issues and do it in a way that we can disagree without making a total political issue of each of them—talk about them on their merits, on what they will do for the country, and not the impact they will have in 2004. Frankly, we have had an awful lot of that. We need to move beyond that.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry. I thought I was to have 10 minutes. Am I too late for that?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are 22 and a half minutes available on the Republican side at this point. The Senator can take that time if he chooses.

Mr. DOMENICI. I will use 10 at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, it is rather amazing, in the United States we only have one country, we have one people, we have one President, and he gives one State of the Union Address. Today we began to see how difficult partisan politics has made the idea of having one President, because before our President—the one President we have—takes the one opportunity to address the American people as to what he would like to do and what he would like help from the Congress and the people on, we have an array of Democratic Senators come to the floor, all of whom have today set their own standard for what he ought to do, all of whom have criticisms of what he might say, all of whom suggest if he doesn't do this, it will not work.

Well, I submit the President will have a myriad of healthy ideas for the American economy, and I would like to discuss one major one for a few minutes with the Senate and the American people—that is, the concern we have in the United States about our economy not producing jobs as it should and, thus, creating worry among our people beyond the unemployed. Many Americans who are employed will not spend money, purchase, or build a new house because their fear causes restraint. The American economy is not producing jobs. The business investors don't want to invest because they are not sure what is going to happen, so they too are withholding. They are being investigated and have all kinds of pressures so they are holding back. Even with this combination, the American economy, when you add it all together, is moving ahead quite well. That piece of the economy or that element that we call the gross domestic product is increasing.

Normally, when it is increasing, you produce more jobs. The gross product is not going down, which is negative, meaning a recession; it is going up. In fact, sometimes in history, if it went up this amount, jobs would be increasing in large numbers. This time it is not happening. That is why we call it a "jobless" recovery.

Our President isn't laying blame on the Bill Clinton Presidency, when this recession started. I don't believe he has uttered a word about who caused it. I hope he does not tonight. As a matter of fact, on that score, we can all waste America's time talking about 3 years ago, what was going on—was the American economy on the downturn, and was President Clinton to blame or the Democrats?

The truth of the matter is a series of phenomena have occurred, including a huge terrorist strike that occurred in New York, and a huge drop in the stock market of the United States. You cannot blame that on this President.

All of those things, and others, have combined with a 10 or 11-year growth cycle that had to come down, bringing the American economy into a non-growth era for a while. Now it is starting up, and we want our President to tell us how we can improve that situation for America. That is what it means to speak about the economy and jobs.

Our President says: You all may have a lot of good ways, but I believe we ought to cut taxes. Most economists suggest cutting taxes, if you cut them right, will stimulate economic growth. The more money that is put into the economy—that means into the pockets of people and the pockets of business so they can spend it—the more you do that, the more you have a chance of moving the American economy.

I understand the Democrats, with Senator DASCHLE as their leader, have a $141 billion package, a portion of which is giving money to the States because their treasuries are broke. If you want to do that, don't call it a stimulus package. We may do that in another event in the Senate, but our President, rightfully, is not including that in a stimulus package. That is not a stimulus, to help our States. At one time, we had a countercyclical problem. I don't know if DON NICKLES remembers, but Senator Muskie started it, and every time the economy would go down, you give the States money. Well, the President doesn't have that in this budget, in this proposal on taxes; but it may be considered separately if we have to help. What he does is look at accelerated expansion of the 10 percent bracket, accelerated reduction in income tax rates, accelerated elimination of the marriage penalty, with some refund of money, and an accelerated increase in the tax credits. It has the exclusion of dividends from individual taxable income and increases in small business expensing. That means if they can expense more, they keep more, which I just said you must do. Let them keep more so they can buy more equipment, spend more on jobs. The President has a hold harmless provision under the alternative minimum tax, a very necessary provision, and the cost of the plan is $98 billion in the first calendar year and $670 billion over 10 years.

The Democrat plan is so small I think we ought to nickname it. I think we ought to call it "the mouse."

The American economy is $10 trillion. If we are talking about 5 years, it is $50 trillion. That means the sum of the transactions going on, paychecks, car purchases, house purchases, financing, equals $10 trillion a year.

When my colleagues say let's accelerate it, that means let's put money into the economy that stirs that up enough and shakes up all those transactions where a little bit more fever is put in each one of them so some action is occurring which we would equate with growth and jobs.

Clearly, that cannot be done unless enough is put in to move the giant battleship called the American economy. So how can that be moved with a mouse? It cannot. If a mouse is put out there to do it, the mouse will die and nothing will happen.

If my colleagues don't want to throw away taxpayers' money, then produce a plan that purports to create jobs and is so small it does nothing. Otherwise, that money will have been thrown away and my colleagues would be back in 18 months or 2 years asking the American people to give them another shot at it because we did not do enough.

So I submit that the President's proposal, which he has already given us a glimpse of, which he will tell the American people about tonight in detail, is the right one for America. Am I alone? Of course I am not alone in thinking this. There are 110 economists. One would think from what some on the other side say that the President called on a few people and they gave him ideas and he picked this one and said: Oh, here is a new idea. Let's not tax dividends on the individuals who receive them.

That idea has been around. I have been in Congress 30 years. It was around when I arrived. This is what 110 economists, with three Nobel prize winners, said. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a summary of their approach.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

110 ECONOMISTS BACK BUSH TAX PLAN; 3 NOBEL LAUREATES JOIN GROUP URGING CONGRESS' SUPPORT

(By James G. Lakely)

The Washington Times—January 18, 2003.—A letter signed by 100 economists, including three Nobel Prize winners, urges Congress to support the main elements of President Bush's $647 billion tax-cut plan, make his 2001 tax cut permanent and restrain federal spending to spur the sluggish economy.

"As a rule, government cannot create wealth or expand the economy. Only the private sector can do that," said the letter this week to all members of Congress. "Government can, however, hinder economic growth through excessive taxes, high marginal tax rates, over-regulation, or unnecessary spending." The economists, including Nobel laureates Milton Friedman, James Buchanan and 2002 winner Vernon Smith, said increased spending to combat terrorism is warranted but that "excessive federal spending has a dampening effect on the American economy."

To remedy that, Congress should "end programs that outlive their usefulness and roll back government's share of the Gross Domestic Product."

According to the Congressional Budget Office, government spending represented 19 percent of the GDP in 2002, a level that has remained roughly stable during the past 15 years but threatens to explode to 40 percent because of entitlement spending by 2075.

The "wobbly" financial markets can gain solid footing again, said the economists, if Mr. Bush's $1.35 trillion tax cut in 2001 is made permanent.

"Investors and individual taxpayers will be able to make better decisions on their finances if they have greater confidence about what tax laws they will be facing in coming years," the letter said. "It is imperative for Congress to make the entire 2001 tax cut permanent."

The economists also applauded Mr. Bush's proposal to eliminate the double-taxation on corporate dividends, a policy they said is "especially harmful to economic growth."

Support for Mr. Bush's tax plan largely follows party lines. House Democratic leaders have scheduled an event Tuesday on Capitol Hill to argue that the president's plan is neither fair nor fiscally responsible and would leave state governments starving for money.

The various Democratic tax-cut proposals are dramatically smaller, short-term, targeted more narrowly and feature payments of at least $300 to all families, including those who pay no federal income tax.

A spokesman for the Democrats on the House Appropriations Committee criticized the president's plan for being too skewed toward "the superwealthy."

"The White House needs to wake up and realize that giving their rich cronies another tax break is not going to halt the Bush recession," the Democratic aide said.

"We need to put money in the hands of people who are having trouble putting food on their table, not people who want to buy a second yacht."

But Sen. Evan Bayh, Indiana Democrat, said he is "keeping an open mind" on supporting a pro-growth tax bill that has many of the features of the president's package. "I'm not someone who has an allergic reaction to the dividend proposal as some do," Mr. Bayh said.

"I think you'll see a great many elements of the president's proposal [in the final bill]. I think, frankly, we'll improve it to make it even more growth-oriented for the economy today."

Mr. DOMENICI. They suggest that only the private sector can do what is required. Government cannot create wealth or expand the economy. Friedman, Buchanan, and Vernon Smith, all Nobel laureates, said increased spending to combat terrorism must be done, but to the extent that it is a lot of money, it will not help the American economy. They go on to say we need what the President is suggesting in his plan.

This summary I have before me, News World Communications, from the Washington Times quotes this series of communications.

I see Mr. NICKLES, the Senator from Oklahoma. I was going to speak about Iraq for a few minutes but I think I will not because I assume he will speak on the economy and taxes. I think it would be good today to have my speech and his back to back.

IRAQ

Mr. DOMENICI. I conclude with some comments on Iraq. I hope that tonight our President will tell our people the issue in Iraq is why has Saddam Hussein not destroyed the weapons of mass destruction that are in his country; not that we did not find them, not that we did not find a smoking gun.

The United Nations verified that he had thousands of weapons in his country, thousands of weapons of biological and chemical makeup that can kill millions of people.

I ask unanimous consent for 2 additional minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHAFFEE). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOMENICI. Some 9 or 10 years ago, the United Nations said Saddam must get rid of them, and then we pulled out. The United Nations sat around, Iraq started selling oil again, and Saddam started being Saddam. Then we decided we will go in and see if he has gotten rid of them. Non-compliance by him means he has not shown what happened to the weapons.

The 12,000-page document, which was all over the press as if they had submitted 12,000 pages of real explanation, was presented some days ago as though it explained where these thousands of weapons went. The United States and its agents of absolute integrity have read every single page, every single line. The conclusion is that the 12,000-page document is a farce. It does not explain what happened to all of those weapons. It is a joke.

They put in those pages what they wanted, and they described what they wanted. The sum total is, where are they?

He continues to say: I am showing them everything. And we continue to say: It is your responsibility to show us what you did with them. After all, it is not like every country in the world would accept thousands of these chemical weapons. Some nation that is crazy enough to take them would have to be found. So we have to be told they are not here. But where are they? If they are dumped in the ocean, somebody would find out. They cannot easily be gotten rid of so he has not gotten rid of them. He hid them.

Now we are telling the world there is noncompliance. I hope the world sees it our way, but more importantly I hope Saddam sees it our way. I hope he understands there are a lot of us that understand what is going on and that it is like I just said: He better come clean or, in fact, something will happen. I hope he does it himself and I hope our friends realize they better join us in putting him on the spot or he will put the world on the spot, and he will do it very soon.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

IRAQ, THE ECONOMY, AND THE BUDGET

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I compliment my colleague, Senator DOMENICI, for his speech and also for many of the comments he made relating to the economy, the budget, and Iraq. I think the Senator from New Mexico is exactly right. The issue with Iraq is not whether the arms control inspectors can find a few weapons. It is whether or not Saddam Hussein is going to disarm and whether he is going to comply with the United Nations and whether the United Nations is going to enforce compliance.

We can pass 17 resolutions, all of which say the international community says he must disarm, but if we do not compel him to disarm, it makes the United Nations somewhat irrelevant to the whole proposal. Do those resolutions mean anything besides rhetoric or are we going to enforce them?

The previous administration did not enforce them. As a result, we did not even have arms control inspectors, much less enforcing the existing resolutions. Now we have a President who is going to lead the world, who says we should enforce these resolutions, and we should compel his disarmament.

When we think of the dangerousness of these weapons, I mentioned earlier today that two envelopes with anthrax that unfortunately were destined to the Senate killed a few people. They were not even opened in the post office. Yet they still killed people. They are very deadly materials. He happens to have tons of similar-type weapons, some even more dangerous such as VX.

I think the President is right in drawing a line in the sand and saying he must comply. The world community, the United Nations, agreed with the President last year. I hope they continue to support compelling Saddam Hussein to comply with existing U.N. resolutions.

I will submit for the RECORD a table which summarizes the Senate's action on H.J. Res. 2, the fiscal year 2003 omnibus appropriations resolution. This table was prepared by my staff based upon estimates of the Congressional Budget Office. I also wish to congratulate the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, Senator STEVENS, for working to limit the total fiscal year 2003 appropriations bills to amounts requested by the President.

As adopted by the Senate, H.J. Res. 2 contains $386.864 billion in discretionary spending when added to the amounts in the defense and military construction appropriations bills already enacted, which total $752.193 billion in fiscal year 2003 discretionary spending. These totals include a 1.6 percent across-the-board reduction amounting to $6.4 billion from all accounts funded in the other 11 appropriations bills, plus amounts for classified defense programs, $3.9 billion in fire and management, $825 million for which the President submitted separate requests.

Compared to fiscal year 2002, total discretionary spending under H.J. Res. 2 would grow by 2.4 percent, defense discretionary spending would grow by 6.9 percent, and domestic discretionary spending would decrease by 1.9 percent; compared to fiscal year 2002, less spending for one-time nonrecurring projects. Total discretionary spending under H.J. Res. 2 would grow by 4.7 percent, defense discretionary spending would grow by 7.3 percent, and domestic discretionary spending would grow by 2.1 percent. H.J. Res. 2 also includes several changes in mandatory programs not counted on the discretionary side of the budget.

The increased spending, which would total $4.221 billion in 2003, includes changes in agriculture payments for drought, payments to physicians in rural hospitals, and TANF payments to States.

I ask unanimous consent a table displaying the Budget Committee scoring of H.J. Res. 2 and enacted appropriations with comparison to 2002 be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, this is more fiscally responsible than any appropriations bills we have passed in the last many years. I compliment the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, Chairman STEVENS, as well as Senator FRIST and all of our colleagues who worked aggressively to contain the growth of these bills. That was not easy. We had a lot of votes. We voted down over half a trillion in additional spending amendments. I compliment my colleagues for showing some fiscal discipline.

In order to show fiscal discipline in the future, we have to pass a budget. Last year we did not pass a budget and we did not pass 11 of 13 appropriations bills. I hope this year we will be able to pass a budget; that we will be able to pass it on time; and that it will also allow for us to pass a growth package in addition to a package that would improve and enhance Medicare. Passing a budget makes it possible to do all those things. Without passing a budget we may not do any. We may not get appropriations done; we may not do a growth package; we may not do a prescription drug proposal or a Medicare enhancement proposal.

I speak just for a moment now on the President's proposal for economic growth and job creation. I have heard some colleagues coming to the floor criticizing it. I am also bewildered by statements they are making. Many have criticized the President's effort to eliminate double taxation on dividends, saying it benefits one group or another. I have not heard anyone say this is really good tax policy. Let's tax dividends twice. Let's tax it on the corporate level and tax it on the individual level so the net effective rate of taxation is anywhere from 65 percent to 73 percent, maybe 73.6 percent.

Now, with tax rates as high as two thirds or more, we more than discourage dividends. Dividends are basically rewarding the owners of the company with the fruits or profits of the company. With the double taxation, we are telling companies not to do this. I used to run a company. It makes no sense to do it. For corporations, particularly privately held corporations—I used to run one—why pay dividends if the Government is going to take, at least in present law, 35 percent automatically; and then individuals who may be paying rates of 28 percent or 27 percent, or maybe they are paying rates of 32 percent or 35 percent or 38 percent. If you add 35 percent and 35 percent, that is 70 percent. If a corporation makes $1,000 in earnings and they want to distribute it to their employees, the government gets $700 and the stock owner gets 30 percent.

That is absurd. It makes no sense.

Corporations are greatly discouraged from distributing their earnings to their owners. That is bad tax policy. And the present Tax Code encourages corporations to go into debt. We encourage corporations to pile up the debt because they get to expense it, but we do not tell them if they go the equity route, to build financing, to obtain financing, they can expense dividends. I hope we would do it. I would think expensing dividends from a corporate side would be the better way to eliminate double taxation. There are two or three different ways it can be done. I mention that to my colleagues.

The President has good tax policy—one that will help grow the economy, one that will encourage investment, one that would eliminate some of the gross distortions we have in the present Tax Code.

I make a couple of other comments concerning the President's tax proposal. I have heard a few people allude to the fact that it only benefits the wealthy. They have not read the President's proposal. The President's proposal is that we would have a $1,000 tax credit per child. Part of that was passed in 2001 and earlier where he said we will increase it. Right now the Tax Code has a $600 tax credit per child. He wants to make it $1,000. I have four kids. They are grown now so they will not qualify unless we include grandkids and maybe we should do that, too. One thousand dollars per child is $4,000 for four kids, $1,600 more than present law. One does not have to be wealthy to get it. If you have four kids, you get $1,600 more, a tax credit, where you do not have to pay taxes. That will take a lot of taxpayers to a zero tax bracket.

The President says, let's eliminate the marriage penalties by doubling the 15 percent tax bracket for an individual or a couple. The net impact of that, if a couple has a combined income of $55,000, they get to save about $1,000 per couple. If you want to do something to help middle income taxpayers, married couples, families, the President has it. He has a child tax credit, and he also has elimination of the marriage penalties. That is in his proposal. He also says individuals should not pay taxes at rates higher than corporations. I agree. Let's accelerate the tax cuts now for 2004 and 2006. And when you finish with that, the maximum income tax bracket, personal income taxes, is 35 percent. It just so happens 70 or 80 percent of the people who are paying that highest tax bracket are sole proprietorships, entrepreneurs, self-employed. Why should they pay a tax rate higher than General Motors? Presently, they do. General Motors pays a tax rate of 35 percent right now. Those individuals pay a tax rate of 38.6 percent. I don't think they should have to pay a tax rate higher than General Motors. They have a smaller business. Let's have a little equity.

Some say this is not doing enough for low-income. We have helped individuals and families. We have reduced tax rates for taxpayers in income tax brackets. The President expands the 10 percent tax bracket which he created 2 years ago. There was 15 percent tax brackets and the President made it retroactive on lowest income people. He took a lot of individuals in the 15 percent tax bracket and made their rate 10 percent. That was a 33 percent reduction in their tax bracket. We made it retroactive. That was equal to a benefit of about $600 for a couple. Now the President says let's expand the 10 percent bracket further. I compliment him for that, as well.

There is a lot of benefit in here for all income groups. A lot of people are throwing rocks at this without looking at the substance of it. I hope maybe they would look a little closer and maybe we should work a little more together and have a little bipartisan cooperation and see if we cannot do something to help grow the economy. It is vitally important we grow the economy. The President has a good proposal, a good package, one that will be, I am sure, thoroughly scrutinized by the Ways and Means Committee, by the Finance Committee.

We have a tradition in the Finance Committee reporting out bipartisan packages, whether in taxes or whether it be in the health care. I hope we will do both this year. We can. The President has given us a good proposal to do so. I look forward to working with my colleagues, Democrats and Republicans, to pass a budget and to pass a growth package that will help grow the economy. It is important that Congress enact both this year.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I understand that under the previous order, at 4:15 we start going back and forth. I ask the Senator from New York, who is prepared under that order, if I might proceed for 5 to 7 minutes prior to his taking it? I do not wish to be discourteous to my colleague because I know he came over for the 4:15 slot.

Mr. SCHUMER. I have no objection. The Senator is always a gentleman, and it is a pleasure to let him speak for his time first.

Mr. BENNETT. I thank the Senator and appreciate the opportunity.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

WAR WITH IRAQ

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, as I go out among my constituents, the one question I always get asked in these present times is: Are we going to go to war with Iraq?

For a while my answer was, that is up to Saddam Hussein. It depends on how he acts and what he does, as to whether or not we are going to go to war with Iraq.

But what he does now is fairly clear. The position he has taken is fairly clear. He made the comment to an Egyptian journalist, that has been repeated now around the world:

Time is working for us.

He has made it clear that he is not going to change. There will be no disarmament of Iraq from within. There will be no genuine cooperation with the inspectors. So I think my earlier answer probably is no longer correct. The decision now lies with President Bush: Will we go to war or won't we?

In that circumstance, the President is being bombarded on all sides with editorial comment and punditry, with firm, solid recommendations, yes and no, depending on the ideological status of the particular pundit. They can make those firm recommendations from the safe, secure position of knowing that they will not have to be acted upon and that they will not be held accountable if their recommendation is followed and the result is not successful.

The President faces what is clearly the most agonizing and difficult decision of his Presidency. I pray for him and urge other Americans to pray for him as he makes this decision.

I want to lay down what I see as the challenge here. I do not think it is an easy question. I do not think it is clear, one way or the other. The truly Presidential decisions never are. If the decisions were easy, they would be made before they got to the level of the President. If the action was clear, smart people at lower levels of Government would take it. It is only when the decision is agonizingly close and the options not clear on either side that it ends up ultimately on the President's desk in the Oval Office and becomes his decision and his decision alone.

This is what I see. Saddam Hussein is going through the motions of cooperating with the inspectors, and there are those who say: Let that process play out. We have him contained. As long as there are inspectors in the country, there will not be any effort to use weapons of mass destruction. Let's just let that play out.

Then there are those who say: He has violated the resolution of the United Nations. The legal position is absolutely clear. If the United Nations and the United States are going to be taken seriously around the world, we must now take military action and we cannot wait any longer.

I am sure those legal arguments with respect to Resolution 1441 in the United Nations are valid. I don't argue with them. But they don't change the practicality of the situation, that an attack on Iraq—even if it is justified under the legality of the United Nations resolution—might still prove to be a mistake. The solidity of the legal position with respect to Resolution 1441 is a legitimate question for Colin Powell to raise with his fellow diplomats, but it does not ease the agony of the necessity of making the final decision in the Oval Office.

I believe that Saddam Hussein is co-operating with the investigators for one reason and one reason only; that is that American troops are massing on the border. He knows American military power is sufficient, if unleashed, to bring his regime down and probably end his life. He is taking every step he can to try prevent that.

Those who say let this play out, leave the status quo and let it go forward, don't appreciate the difficulty of America keeping those troops on line, keeping those troops on the border, keeping those airplanes on alert so that he will continue to try to satisfy the inspectors. We cannot continue to do that for an extended period of time. It is not fair. It is not possible, given the lives and other challenges faced by these young people. At some point and at some point relatively soon, the President is going to have to make a decision to either move in or stand down. And the ultimate question here is not what is the legality of U.N. Resolution 1441 or what is the relevance of the United Nations in the world community. The ultimate question here is, What will be the result if he moves forward, and what will be the result if he stands down, he, in this case, of course, being President Bush.

We have heard a lot of talk. That is not the right term. That implies something less than seriousness. We have heard a lot of analysis about what could happen if he moves forward. Some of the scenarios are very encouraging; some are frightening. We don't know in advance which ones would come true. We have had less analysis placed on the question of what would happen if the President orders the troops to stand down and start to come home. We do have some historic precedent for this. I remember going to the room in the Capitol on the fourth floor and hearing Madeleine Albright describe the situation in Iraq, in terms eerily familiar to the terms we are currently hearing from Secretary Powell. I remember walking out of that briefing in room 407 and saying to myself: We will be at war with Iraq within 3 days.

Then President Clinton made the decision that we would stand down. American troops were not at the forward edge they are now, so that decision was not as difficult in terms of the logistics, as it would be for President Bush now. But at the same time, the progress being made then was not as good as it is now. President Clinton, for whatever reasons—good, bad, or indifferent—decided to stand down and the result has not been one with which the world is pleased.

Now, if we stand down, the result ultimately, in my opinion, would be more devastating for world peace, long term, than if we move forward.

I know how agonizing that decision must be for the President. I will look forward to listening to him discuss it with us tonight. I hope he will outline for us what would be the consequences if we stand down, in terms of American credibility—credibility that is not just saving face in some kind of psychological way, credibility that is essential to keeping the peace in the world. What would happen to those countries that are urging, hoping, praying for Saddam Hussein to be gone, if they said the Americans got this far, they came this close, and then they turned around and left? That means we cannot depend on the Americans ever again. We can't trust their word ever again. What would be the consequences of that? I think they would be serious.

I remember a couplet I learned as a child. I never quite understood what it meant until someone in my later years explained the historic context. It is just a child's rhyme, but it was based on a historic event. It said:

The King of France went up the hill
With twenty thousand men;
The King of France came down the hill,
And ne'er went up again.

There was even a tune that went to it. I will not duplicate Senator D'Amato and sing on the Senate floor. But that is where we are.

The King of France went up the hill
With twenty thousand men;
The king of France came down the hill,
And ne'er went up again.

The United States of America, acting on a 15-to-nothing resolution out of the Security Council of the United Nations, as well as an overwhelming vote in this Chamber and in the other body, has marched up the hill and told Saddam Hussein he must disarm. Now there are those who say because he has stopped producing these weapons, as long as these troops are at his border we can afford to turn around and march down again.

It is, as I said, an agonizing decision. It will be made by the President of the United States. He will not ask my advice, for I have no expertise in these matters. But my constituents do ask me about it because I represent them in this body.

I think having marched up the hill, having taken the United Nations Resolution 1441 at its face value, and having stood the troops there, that has produced the results we have had so far. We cannot now back down.

I wish the President well. As I said, he is in my prayers, and I hope that of all Americans, as he makes this most momentous decision. The consequence is: What happens if we do? And what happens if we do not?

I wish the President well as he makes that analysis. I have confidence in this

President and his instincts that he will, in fact, ultimately make the correct decision.

PROVIDING FOR A JOINT SESSION OF CONGRESS

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to H. Con. Res. 12, a resolution providing for a joint session of Congress, which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 12) providing for a joint session of Congress to receive a message from the President on the state of the Union.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 12) was agreed to.

JOINT SESSION OF THE TWO HOUSES—THE STATE OF THE UNION ADDRESS BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Presiding Officer of the Senate be authorized to appoint a committee on the part of the Senate to join with a like committee on the part of the House of Representatives to escort the President of the United States into the House Chamber for the joint session to be held tonight, Tuesday, January 28, 2003, at 9 p.m.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

PRAYERS FOR THE PRESIDENT AND THE MEN AND WOMEN IN THE ARMED FORCES

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, first let me join my friend from Utah in sentiments that he expressed at the end of his speech in that we hope and pray for the wisest decision from the President. And we hope and pray for our young men and women who are amassing in the Middle East now.

War, of course, should be the last resort. We still hope that it can be avoided. But if it cannot, we wish them and their families the best and pray for their speedy success.

HOMELAND SECURITY

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, my reason for coming to the Chamber today is similar to those of many of my colleagues on this side of the aisle. We are discussing what we hope the President will speak about tonight, what we want him to speak about, what we expect him to speak about.

Some of my colleagues have talked about areas such as the economy, the environment, education, and health care. I am going to address the issue of homeland security because, as much as we do overseas, we have to make sure our homeland is secure as well.

If, God willing, we were able to just eliminate all of al-Qaida and all of Saddam and his supporters, we would still face a danger from terrorism. Terrorists can strike almost at will in different ways, and our country is not yet secure against them, although I will say we have made some progress, particularly in the areas of air safety and in bioterrorism, since 9/11.

But we have so much more to do. What worries me is that the focus of this administration is almost exclusively on fighting the war on terrorism overseas. To beat the terrorists we need a one-two punch—one, fighting that war overseas, dealing with terrorism overseas; but, two, making our homeland more secure. And there seems to be a rather quaint and quirky notion among many of those in the administration that we can successfully fight the war here at home without spending a nickel. That is just wrong.

The bottom line is if someone were to say to the Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces, go fight the war in Iraq without any new resources, without any new dollars, he would say: I can't. But that is basically what we are saying to Mr. Tom Ridge and those who work under him.

Time and time again, when Members on both sides of the aisle have done a lot of research and proposed measures that would increase our security here at home, we are told: Well, that's a good idea, but we can't spend any money on it.

That just cannot be. There are so many areas where we lie naked, possible prey, God forbid, to terrorists.

Take our ports. We are far, far behind where we should be in monitoring what comes in on our ships. As we all know, those ships could be filled with deadly devices.

Take our borders. On the northern border, my State has a long and peaceful border with Canada. But, right now, if we pass the budget that was passed in the Senate, there will be fewer Customs inspectors on that northern border than there were on 9/11.

As to the FBI, this new budget that we passed, unfortunately, cuts the number of FBI agents. While the counterterrorism parts of the FBI are increasing, all the other parts are decreasing. It makes no sense to say we are going to make our citizens more secure from a foreign threat and leave them prey to a domestic threat. Bank robberies in my community are going up. It seems logical to assume that one of the reasons for that is that the FBI is not able to do its function under the strained budget that we have given it—to do both functions: fighting terrorism and fighting crime here at home.

As to cyberterrorism, unfortunately, Richard Clark, a brilliant man—the administration's point man on cyber-security—is leaving. But I am sure, as he has told many of you, we are again doing virtually nothing to make ourselves more secure from a deadly virus that might invade one of the very important technological systems that secure our country. And the list goes on and on and on.

As to truck safety, trucks that carry hazardous material, Brazil is doing a far better job in dealing with terrorism there than we are, even though they have not been the focus of terrorist attacks.

As to the rails, in my City of New York, Penn Station has a 1½-mile tunnel that has no egress. God forbid if something terrible happened there. What we have to do is look at all of our weak pressure points in terms of where terrorists would strike and strengthen them.

But this administration, in part because they do not want to spend the dollars necessary—as eager as they are to spend the dollars overseas that are necessary—is not doing the job.

So today we are going to look, as the President speaks, as to what specifically he is going to do to bolster our case in terms of homeland security. We are going to see if the promise that was made—for instance, in the USA Patriot Act, that we triple the number of Border Patrol and Customs agents and immigration authorities at the northern border—will be fulfilled.

We are going to look and see if there are the dollars necessary to update the INS computers, which are notoriously bad, so terrorists cannot slip into the country, and the FBI computers that, again, were so bad that all the signals we had about a plot that was hatched for 9/11 were missed, mainly because the FBI computers were less sophisticated, frankly, than the one my eighth grade, 14-year-old daughter has at our home.

The list goes on and on. And no one expects this administration will clean up every single problem we have in 6 months. But in terms of effort, in terms of focus, in terms of allocation of resources, they are woefully behind.

My good colleague from West Virginia, who has done so much to lead this fight, made a very good point on the homeland security bill. That bill, as you all know, rearranged agencies but did not change what happens within them.

Rearranging agencies does not change things. Moving the Coast Guard over to this new agency is not going to help it patrol 200 miles off the coast as it must do in our post 9/11 world.

When our President tonight gives his speech, we are all going to be looking to see what specifically he will say and what resources he will devote to protect our domestic security. Up until now the administration's voice has been all too quiet and all too silent. We hope tonight's speech indicates a large change.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. What is the status of the time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time until 4:45 is under the control of the Senator from New Hampshire, 5 minutes.

Mr. GREGG. Five minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Correct.

Mr. GREGG. I was of the impression that the unanimous consent gave us 7 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is now 5 minutes.

FUNDING

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, there have been a lot of representations made on the floor today by Members of the other side of the aisle relative to funding and lack of funding. It is interesting because, as we went through the last budget exercise in the Senate last week, when the appropriations bills were passed, we heard from the other side that they needed more and more money. And although the President tried to hold the line on fiscal discipline by setting a number of $750 billion of discretionary spending, which was the agreed-to amount signed off on by the Senator from West Virginia and members of the Democratic Party back when they controlled the Senate in the last Congress, suddenly we found that money was not enough.

There was over a half a trillion dollars of new spending proposed from the other side of the aisle that was not offset, not paid for, that would have been put on top of the spending which the President had committed to. That irresponsible explosion in proposals in spending is an example of the lack of discipline which we are seeing in the area of fiscal policy from the other side of the aisle.

It has to be put in the context not only of the fact that it is an explosive attempt to expand the Federal deficit through new spending, but also in the context of the fact that this President has made stronger commitments in the area of education and national defense than any President in recent times and certainly than the President who preceded him.

I yield the floor.

It is very hard for me to understand how with a straight face, Members from the other side of the aisle can come down here and attack this President for failing to fund education. When we look at what this President has done in the area of funding education, we need to look at some pretty simple and obvious charts. In his first year, President Bush increased funding for education over President Clinton's budget by $20 billion. That is $20 billion of new money this President put directly into education in his first year as President.

An example of that commitment was in the area of special education, where President Clinton basically zero funded, relative to increases, the issue of special education, while President Bush dramatically increased it, by $1 billion a year, year in and year out, since he has been President the first 3 years—$1 billion each year, so that he has radically increased funding for special education.

It is pretty hard for the other side to come down here and make the representation that this President has not significantly increased funding. In fact, if you look at the spending this President has committed to funding and done in the context of fiscal responsibility, not exploding the budget with spending as was proposed from the other side of the aisle when they proposed over half a trillion dollars of new spending last week without offsets, this President, in the area of education, has increased funding by $2.5 billion in the area of title I, for example, in his first 2 years in office. That is a greater increase, by 25 percent, than President Clinton gave in his 7 years in office. So the commitment for funding for education has been dramatic.

We heard earlier that the President hasn't funded up to the authorization levels. That is not unusual in this Congress or in this Government not to fund to the authorization levels. I will point out that if you are going to compare funding up to the authorization levels of this Presidency versus President Clinton, under President Clinton's Presidency, the gap between funding, the difference between funding to appropriation levels and authorization levels was about twice what this President's gap is in that area. President Bush has done even a better job in coming close to funding at authorization levels than President Clinton did.

It is really inconsistent and a touch hypocritical to come down here and attack President Bush for failing to fund education when, in fact, he has done more to fund education than any President in recent times and certainly dramatically more than his predecessor during a time when the Democratic Party controlled both the Senate and the Presidency.

There have been other representations that he has not funded adequately homeland security. That is an incredible representation. When I hear the Senator from New York come down here and say that homeland security has not been adequately funded, when you think of the billions, tens of billions of dollars the Congress has voted to assist the City of New York, very appropriately, under the leadership of this President, I find it difficult to understand how that argument can be made.

If you look at the funding in the area of the FBI, we have heard this representation: This number of agencies is going to have to be cut.

That is a total fabrication. FBI funding under this President has gone up every year. It is going up significantly this year. It went up significantly last year. And more agents are being added. The same is true of the INS, the same is true of the Marshals Service, of DEA. All of these accounts come under the jurisdiction of a committee which I had the good fortune to be ranking member of and now am chairman of, the Commerce, State, Justice Committee. The representation that we are actually reducing manpower or reducing the accounts in these areas is simply wrong. It is inaccurate, and it is a gross misstatement. It should not be made on the floor of the Senate because people should know the facts before they come down here and make these representations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. GREGG. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

THE ECONOMY

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, this is a most interesting discussion we are having. I guess two and two equals five here in the Senate. We are told repeatedly that this Senate and Congress should increase defense spending, and it does; increase spending on homeland security, and it does. And then cut other domestic discretionary spending. But now we are told, we don't really cut other domestic discretionary spending.

The President apparently wants to increase defense spending, increase homeland security spending, increase other spending, and then have tax cuts, as if somehow that all adds up. I don't know where you get that kind of schooling. Does two and two equal five? I don't think so.

Either there are cuts in domestic discretionary spending or there are no cuts. We all know the truth. I will bring charts down here and talk about these areas of the Government where they will be spending less this year than they did last year. With respect to homeland security, I wonder if my colleagues really make the case that the President has not in any way ignored the needs of homeland security when in fact we appropriated $2.5 billion for homeland security that the President would not spend, in spite of the fact that, for example, with port security, that is the security of America's seaports, we have 5.7 million containers coming in every year to the seaports, and 100,000 of them are inspected and 5.6 million are not.

Everyone in this country understands, all law enforcement understands, that that is a very difficult problem. The homeland security issue with respect to seaports is a very serious issue. It is unaddressed.

It is interesting to come here and listen to this, but there are either cuts in spending or there are not. We will have some discussion about that in the future. Let me talk about a couple of other things, if I might.

We are going to hear the State of the Union speech tonight. The fact is, I want this President to succeed. I want this country to succeed. I wish no ill will towards anyone because of partisanship. We are of different parties, but we serve the same interest. We serve the common interest of this country. All of us want this President to succeed, want his administration to succeed, and we want this country to do well.

But I want to tell you, there are some days when I wonder about what is going on around here. Today is one of those days. I don't know when in all the years I have served in the House and Senate that I have been more disturbed than I was in reading this article I will describe. It appeared in yesterday's Washington Times. A similar story ran in the Los Angeles Times the day before yesterday.

Let me read the first paragraph:

Top White House officials warned yesterday the Bush administration has not ruled out using nuclear weapons against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein if he deploys weapons of mass destruction against the United States.

Now, I don't understand this at all. We are told in the Los Angeles Times, and in this story, that they are talking about using designer bunker buster nuclear weapons, something that has been discussed previously in the administration. Do you know that India and Pakistan were shooting at each other yesterday over Kashmir? Both of them have nuclear weapons, and the leadership of this country must be exhorted to tell these countries you cannot use the nuclear option? We are the country that must exercise restraint.

We have people in this administration who, in my judgment, make the most reckless, dangerous statements I have heard in some 2 decades in this town when they talk about the potential of using nuclear weapons. That is not what this country ought to be talking about. There are some 30,000 nuclear weapons, give or take a couple thousand, that exist on this Earth. It ought to be our responsibility to try to make sure that never again is a nuclear weapon exploded in anger on the face of this Earth. If one, just one, is exploded, others will explode. This country ought not talk about the use of nuclear weapons. We ought not be reckless to talk about designing a new type of bunker buster nuclear weapon. This lowers the threshold of other countries who aspire to having nuclear weapons about when they might consider using them. It is reckless, dangerous, and irresponsible. I cannot believe I am reading this sort of thing. The nuclear option in Iraq—the L.A. Times says:

The United States has lowered the bar for using the ultimate weapon. The United States is thinking about the unthinkable, preparing for the possible use of nuclear weapons against Iraq.

I ask unanimous consent that the entire article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Times, Jan. 27, 2003]
ADMINISTRATION WON'T BAR USE OF NUCLEAR WEAPONS

(By Ellen Sorokin)

Two top White House officials warned yesterday the Bush administration has not ruled out using nuclear weapons against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein if he deploys weapons of mass destruction against the United States or its allies.

White House Chief of Staff Andrew H. Card Jr. said on Sunday morning talk shows that the United States will use "whatever means necessary" to protect its citizens and the world from a "holocaust."

"I'm not going to put anything on the table or off the table," Mr. Card said on NBC's "Meet the Press." "But we have a responsibility to make sure Saddam Hussein and his generals do not use weapons of mass destruction."

Dan Bartlett, White House communications director, echoed Mr. Card's sentiments.

"What is clear—and the message that President Bush has sent unequivocally—is that if the Iraqi regime, if Saddam Hussein and his generals decide for one second to use weapons of mass destruction against allied forces of the United States of America and our allies, we will make sure it doesn't happen," Mr. Bartlett said on CNN's "Late Edition."

Their comments came two days after an article published in the Los Angeles Times claimed the United States was considering using nuclear weapons in a possible war against Iraq to destroy underground command posts and stop Iraqi forces from using weapons of mass destruction.

The story cited top U.S. private military expert William M. Arkin. According to the story, he said plans for using nuclear weapons against Iraq were being fleshed out at the U.S. Strategic Command in Omaha, Neb., at the Pentagon and at an "undisclosed location" in Pennsylvania where Vice President Richard B. Cheney spent time during terrorism alerts.

Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld signed in December 2001 a classified nuclear posture review that opened the possibility for nuclear weapons to be used against targets able to withstand most non-nuclear attacks. Countries such as Iraq, Iran, North Korea, Libya and Syria were added to the list of possible targets.

Defense Department spokesman Maj. Ted Wadsworth refused to confirm or deny the report, saying: "That's something that policy-makers have to talk about."

Yesterday, several lawmakers and policy analysts said they hoped the administration would not resort to using nuclear weapons to deal with the situation in Iraq.

Sen. RICHARD G. LUGAR, Indiana Republican and chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he hasn't heard any discussion on using nuclear weapons on Iraq.

"Our policy is negotiation," Mr. LUGAR told "Late Edition." "[Secretary of State Colin L.] Powell at the United Nations, bringing together the U.N., trying to get Saddam to declare, hoping the inspectors against hope will find something. All we're saying . . . Saddam has to realize he will be disarmed. He doesn't understand that. I don't think he believes it. And that's the critical point."

Sen. BARBARA BOXER, California Democrat and a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said the real test of the country's leadership is bringing the world together and resolving the issues in a way that results with the least loss of life.

"It's very chilling to talk about first use of nuclear weapons," Mrs. BOXER said on "Late Edition."

"And I wish we didn't go down the path. The whole world knows that we are the superpower, we are for sure the only superpower, we have an arsenal that could destroy every man, woman and child in the world 10 times over. We don't have to go around beating the drums of war," she said.

Pentagon adviser Richard Perle said on "Fox News Sunday" he couldn't think of a "target of interest" in a conflict with Iraq that couldn't be addressed with non-nuclear weapons.

"We have extraordinary military technology, weapons of great precision that have the enormous benefit of destroying the target almost all of the time without doing unintended damage to civilians," said Mr. Perle, a resident fellow at the conservative American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research in Washington.

"I can't see why we would wish to use a nuclear weapon," he said.

Several lawmakers said they would first want Mr. Bush to present evidence as to why military force against Iraq is needed.

Senate Minority Leader TOM DASCHLE, South Dakota Democrat, said Mr. Bush has yet to make a "compelling case" that military force against Iraq is necessary right now.

"He hasn't done that," Mr. DASCHLE said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

"The President needs to make a compelling case that Iraq poses a very imminent threat to the United States and, secondly, that he has worked through the international community and exhausted all other options. Only if those two criteria are met does he have the authority, the license to take military action."

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I hope those who are in closed rooms thinking in this kind of a dangerous way are not part of the Government for long, or part of this administration for long. That is not what we ought to be doing in this country.

Let me describe one other piece of information about this issue of foreign policy. One year ago in the State of the Union Address, the President said—correctly, in my judgment—that the greatest threat to this country is the network of terrorists around the globe that wish this country harm. They are the ones who murdered thousands of innocent Americans. One year ago now, I was in Afghanistan. Flying into that country over the mountains, you looked down and you understood that deep inside caves in the mountains were Osama bin Laden and his key planners, planning the murder of innocent Americans. That network of terrorists and others around the world represent a serious threat to this country.

But we have not heard about Osama bin Laden for a long while. I read yesterday that the President himself mentioned Osama bin Laden six times in the last year. It appears that these days it is "Osama been forgotten," rather than Osama bin Laden.

Osama bin Laden is a very serious threat to this country. He is apparently alive, according to our intelligence services. His chief deputy has not been found. Key leadership of the al-Qaida has not been discovered. The head of the CIA says we are at as great a risk today for terrorism as we were the day before September 11. It is now Iraq, all Iraq, all the time.

But the President was right last year. This country, in my judgment, suffers grave danger from the acts of terrorists who are still there, still active, and still wish to harm this country and kill innocent Americans.

My hope is that we could have some balance in the concerns we express about what is going on around the world between North Korea, Iraq, al-Qaida, and more.

Mr. President, I assume President Bush will talk a great deal about foreign policy tonight, but I think he will also talk about economic policy.

Saddam Hussein is a bad, evil guy, no question about that. North Korea is a threat. Terrorists, especially, are a very serious continuing threat. All of that, to be sure, exists. It is also the case that here at home we have an economy that is not doing very well. A great many people are out of work. Some people say, well, let's brush all that aside, things are just fine. They are not fine. The administration, for some while, has said this is just fine. The economy has hit a little speed bump, I think they called it, but things will be fine.

In the last 2 months, the administration fired their economic team, brought in some new people, and now they are saying we need a stimulus program, despite what they have provided us is not a stimulus at all. It will provide no jump start to the economy. If that is what we want, this is like hooking a flashlight battery to a car and hoping to start it. It will not work.

The question for all of us is: What will really work to give this economy some boost? First and foremost, part of what is weighing down on the neck of this economy is every morning every American wakes up and tunes in the news and the top story every day, every month, is the potential of war. That means unpredictability, uncertainty, and great concern. When that exists, the American people don't have the confidence in the future that we need. Confidence is what this economy is about. Our economic foundation is confidence by the American people. When they are confident, they do things that manifest that confidence. They take a trip, buy a car, buy a home, make a purchase, and the country expands. That is the expansionary side of the business cycle. When they are not confident about the future, they do the exact opposite. They defer the trip, don't buy the car, don't make the purchase, and the economy then contracts.

First and foremost, people are concerned about this talk every day, every week, every month regarding the specter of war. We have to find a way to move through this period and give people confidence about the future. But the economy also needs a boost, a fiscal policy that gives it a boost, a jump start.

The principles are very simple. They have nothing at all to do with what the President suggested. The principles are that a jump start of the economy ought to be immediate, temporary, and effective. I regret to say that the President proposes none of that. I wish he would have proposed something that was consistent with those principles. I would say sign me up, I am for it. But that is not the case.

We have lost a great many jobs—2.4 million private sector jobs—since President Bush took over. Now, it is not the role of Government to create jobs. That is not what Government does. The private sector and businesses create jobs. But the Government creates conditions under which jobs are created, economic conditions in which the economy expands or contracts. When it contracts, people lay their employees off, entrepreneurs and businesses lay off employees because they don't see a better future. When the economy expands, people are hired and more people are put to work as employees.

The fact is that, at the moment, we have exploding deficits, high unemployment, a lack of confidence in the future, and we need, it seems to me—all of us—to be serious about what we do in putting the economy back on track. We are finally talking about “how” rather than “whether.” Three months ago, the question was “whether.” The President's economic team was saying that things are fine. We are all saying they are not fine, we have to fix what is wrong with the economy, and the sooner the better.

My hope is that this evening the President will recognize all of us want to work with him on national economic policy and on foreign policy. It is very important that we do the right thing. The President's plan, regrettably, is not near the right thing for what ails this economy.

Providing exemptions for dividend payments, the bulk of which are owned by upper income people, the wealthiest Americans, and borrowing money to do it so we can have tax cuts for 10 years into the future of $670 billion makes no sense at all.

If someone were to say let's have a debate on reforming the tax system, we could debate all of these things, but if we are talking about how to stimulate this economy, how to jump-start the American economy, the President has provided exactly the wrong set of recommendations. They are not immediate, temporary or effective. He will be stuck, we will be stuck, and the American people will be stuck with an economy that is sluggish and is not doing what it needs to do to expand and help businesses create jobs. That is not what I want. It is not what any of my colleagues want. We had an economy that works, one that gave hope and opportunity to the American people, and we want that back.

I am going to come to the Chamber in the next couple of days and show some charts. I was going to show them today. The Office of Management and Budget, which tells us how the economy is doing, is so wildly off the mark they might as well be throwing darts at some chart to find out what the surplus, deficit, and fiscal policy ought to be. They predict, and promise from time to time, that the fiscal condition of this country is going to be incredibly good with big surpluses. Then a few months later, they say it is going to be an economy in big trouble and big deficits. It seems to me one could probably get as close as they are getting by throwing darts at a board. We really need a plan that works, one that is predictable, one we can count on, one that restores economic health to this country and puts the economy back on track.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. DORGAN. I am happy to yield.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator explain what this chart means?

Mr. DORGAN. This chart shows the predictions of the Office of Management and Budget. In the year 2002, they predicted we would have a $283 billion surplus.

Mr. REID. How did that turn out?

Mr. DORGAN. It turned out we had a $159 billion deficit.

Mr. REID. How far were they off? It is $283 billion, plus $159 billion, that's how far they were off?

Mr. DORGAN. That is very good. They were off over $400 billion. For 2003 they said we were going to have a $41 billion surplus. Now we are going to have over a $300 billion surplus.

Mr. REID. That is easy: $341 billion.

Mr. DORGAN. That is right. The Senator took advanced math in Searchlight, NV, I can see.

Mr. REID. I also ask my friend, wouldn't this $300 billion surplus that is the revised estimate be one of the largest deficits in more than 2 decades?

Mr. DORGAN. Yes, absolutely.

Now we have some people saying deficits really are not so bad. Where did that start? It seems to me if children are saddled with the debt from our spending, or our tax cuts, the kids are being told, by the way, here is our policy and you pay for it.

Is that good or bad? Where I come from, that is not the kind of value system that one wants to express in fiscal policy.

I am going to have more to say on this, but this is not the time. I know we want to be out soon and the President is going to be giving his State of the Union Address this evening.

I want to make the point that both in foreign policy and fiscal policy, this country is significantly challenged. These are very tricky times. It requires a very steady hand and good policies.

Let me finish where I started. I am very concerned about people, on the eve of a State of the Union Address by a President of the United States, talking about the potential use of nuclear weapons by our country. I cannot believe that is what is happening. Just after India and Pakistan, who possess nuclear weapons and do not like each other much, have been shooting at each other, this country is saying, by the way, there might be circumstances in which we could use nuclear weapons. Whoever these two top White House officials are who said this, shame on them.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. DORGAN. I am happy to yield.

Mr. REID. The majority leader is not in the Chamber to close the Senate, and I have a couple of questions I would like to ask. Mitch Daniels, the head of the Office of Management and Budget, said on January 16 this year we ought not to hyperventilate about this new deficit estimate. Are you aware that the Senate majority leader said on January 5, 1996: "We have a moral obligation to balance the budget; I am very hopeful that we are going to see to that"? Are you aware he said that?

Mr. DORGAN. It is not surprising. I think the value system for most of us has been we ought to try to have fiscal responsibility and balance the budget.

I say to the head of the Office of Management and Budget, he ought to start hyperventilating. If he does not hyperventilate over this, I guess there is nothing that gets his heart rate or breathing up.

When we talk about the issue of projected surpluses and then huge, suffocating budget deficits as far out as the eye can see, one better hyperventilate a little bit about that.

Mr. REID. Is the Senator aware that on February 1, 1998, the senior Senator from New Hampshire said: "As long as we have a Republican Congress we are going to have a balanced budget, and if we can get a Republican President we can start paying down the debt on the Federal Government"?

That really has not proven to be true, has it?

Mr. DORGAN. It is not true that we have at this point a balanced budget. What is true is the budget is seriously out of balance and headed south. It is going to get worse and we need to fix it. Ignoring it is not going to solve the problem. We need to jump-start this economy with something that is effective and that is a stimulus plan of some type that gives something to the American people to work with, and gives them some confidence.

I happen to believe that Senator DASCHLE, myself, and others who have talked about rebates make a lot of sense. Incentivizing consumption in the short term and incentivizing business investment in the short term, in an immediate and temporary way, is what I think will give some boost to this American economy.

Mr. REID. Is the Senator aware that on November 15, 1995, the junior Senator from Pennsylvania, now a part of the Senate leadership in the majority, said: "The American people are sick and tired of excuses for inaction to balance the budget. The public wants us to stay the course toward a balanced budget, and we take that obligation quite seriously"?

That really is not the way it is. Is it not true that during the last 4 years of the Clinton administration we spent less money than we took in?

Mr. DORGAN. Oh, yes.

Mr. REID. Is it not true we had a surplus?

Mr. DORGAN. We had very significant and increasing surpluses in the Federal budget. As a result of those surpluses, we began to actually eliminate Federal indebtedness, which relieved some of that burden off the shoulders of our children and their children.

Mr. REID. Is it not true we were even warned the last year of the Clinton administration to be careful, the debt is being paid down too quickly, slow it down or it may have some short-term impact on the economy?

Mr. DORGAN. What is true is when we got to a new fiscal policy proposal by the administration, they said let's cut $1.7 trillion in taxes because we have surpluses as far as the eye can see. Some of us said—I certainly did—maybe we ought to be a little bit conservative. What if we do not have surpluses forever? What if we run into some tough times? What if the economy runs into trouble? Then guess what happened. Without my vote, Congress passed a very large, permanent tax cut. We quickly discovered we were in a recession. Then we had a terrorist attack on September 11. Then we had a war on terrorism. Then we had the largest corporate scandals in history. All of this happened, it seems to me, suggesting that perhaps some of us who urged caution were right, because what happened is those big budget surpluses are now very big budget deficits.

What does the President say we ought to do about that? Let's provide more 10-year tax cuts to the tune of $670 billion. When interest is added to it, it is going to be over $1 trillion. None of that adds up.

Mr. REID. Is the Senator aware that on February 6, 1997, the senior Senator from Nebraska said: "The real threat to Social Security is the national debt. If we do not act to balance the budget and stop adding to the debt, then we are truly placing the future of Social Security in jeopardy"? These huge deficits that have been accumulated during the last 2 years of this administration—the first 2 years, I should say, of this administration, the last 2 years—certainly that is not good for Social Security. Senator HAGEL is right, is that not true?

Mr. DORGAN. What these deficits do is they injure the Social Security system, and the long-term solvency of the Social Security system. There is no question about that. We have a lot riding on putting this economy back on track. The sooner the better. I think what the President and the Congress need to do is find a way to work together to do something that is effective right now.

Let me thank the Senator from Nevada for his questions.

I yield the floor.

Mr. REID. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SANTORUM. I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

MEASURE READ THE FIRST TIME—S. 224

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I understand that S. 224, introduced earlier today, is at the desk, and I ask for its first reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill for the first time.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 224) to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 to provide for an increase in the Federal minimum wage.

Mr. DASCHLE. I now ask for its second reading, and I object to my own request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is heard.

MEASURE READ THE FIRST TIME—S. 225

Mr. DASCHLE. I understand S. 225, introduced earlier today, is at the desk, and I ask for its first reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the bill for the first time.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 225) to provide for emergency unemployment compensation.

Mr. DASCHLE. I now ask for its second reading, and I object to my request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is heard.

The bill will receive its second reading on the next legislative day.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, we will have more to say about these matters tomorrow. As my colleagues know, this is an ongoing interest on the part of our caucus to move forward in providing benefits to those who are uninsured, especially those who are no longer eligible for current benefits. There are about a million of those people who are looking to us for help, and we will have more to say about that tomorrow.

CAMBODIA'S RULING PARTY

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, there are two recent developments in Cambodia deserving of the Senate's attention.

First, voter registration for parliamentary elections in July, which is ongoing throughout that country over the next month, is being undermined by the ruling Cambodian People's Party, CPP. In complete control of the national and local election machinery, the CPP is making it difficult for opposition activists and supporters to register to vote and is creating a climate of fear that only bolsters the status quo.

While I am pleased the opposition Sam Rainsy Party and the royalist FUNCINPEC party have publicly complained of CPP interference and manipulation, I am deeply troubled by the relative silence of the international community in condemning these pre-election abuses.

Unless the complacent donor community aggressively checks CPP's manipulation in the preparation of these polls, the outcome of the elections will be a foregone conclusion even before the first vote is cast.

Second, recent comments by CPP hardliner and Prime Minister Hun Sen should be of grave concern to all donor nations, and democracy activists throughout Cambodia. On January 14, 2003, Hun Sen said: "I would like to announce to all the political parties to be very careful. If you would like to break Hun Sen's party, or the CPP, you might miss the opportunity to work on your own internal affairs. And as usual, Hun Sen would beat up and destroy the head of the engine. Meaning, I never beat up unimportant person but completely destroy the main engine. If you would like to play this game, I would be more than happy to accompany you. And I will use my last resort if that is what it takes. . . ."

This public threat betrays Hun Sen's total commitment to harassment, intimidation, and violence as a means of maintaining his rule.

Hun Sen's dark character was further revealed when he continued: "I assure you that I have all the means to get the information from you [opposition political parties]. If you have the meeting in the morning, the information will come to me in the afternoon. Except if you kill all the people in your own party like Pol Pot, then the information will not reach Hun Sen. Everywhere there are Hun Sen's men. Don't forget that I am the head of an undercover agency. I would like my capabilities to be known to the world. The CIA [Central Intelligence Agency] is American, but we are the Cambodian Intelligence Agency (CIA)."

Through his own words, and by his own admission, Hun Sen has shown himself to be nothing less than a paranoid evil dictator. His tough talk is unimpressive and only underscores his complicity in the numerous corrupt and violent episodes of Cambodia's more recent past, including illegal logging and the ongoing harassment of Global Witness, the killing of opposition activists, the banning of Voice of America rebroadcasts by the Beehive radio station, the March 1997 grenade attack against the Khmer Nation Party, and the July 1997 coup d'etat.

Let me be very clear to the State Department, the World Bank, and other international financial institutions: the failure to hold Prime Minister Hun Sen and the CPP accountable for their repressive actions and abuses, including in the ongoing harassment of Global Witness, will have funding ramifications in the fiscal year 2004 foreign operations bill.

I want to assure the people of Cambodia that many of us in the Congress will continue to follow political developments in Cambodia. We know that you want change, and the stability that comes from a nation rooted in the rule of law. And we know that the CPP cannot provide this.

EXTENSION OF THE RURAL ADD-ON PAYMENT FOR HOME HEALTH

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, on behalf of myself and Senator BOND, I want to thank the chairman of the Finance Committee and the chairman of the Appropriations Committee for agreeing to include a 6 month extension of the add-on payment for rural home health services in the omnibus appropriations bill. Extension of this add-on payment, which currently is scheduled to sunset on April 1 will help to ensure that Medicare patients in rural areas continue to have access to the home health services that they need.

Home health has become an increasingly important part of our health care system. The kinds of highly skilled, and often technically complex, services that our Nation's home health agencies provide have enabled millions of our most frail and vulnerable older persons to avoid hospitals and nursing homes and stay just where they want to be, in the comfort and security of their own homes.

Surveys have shown that the delivery of home health services in rural areas can be as much as 12 to 15 percent more costly because of the extra travel time required to cover long distances between patients, higher transportation expenses, and other factors.

Rural agencies also experience higher costs relative to productivity. Because of the longer travel times and distances between patients, rural caregivers are unable to perform as many visits in a day as their urban counterparts. Sandra Scott-Adams, the executive director of the Visiting Nurses of Aroostook in Aroostook County, ME, where I am from, tells me her agency covers 6,600 square miles with a population of only 72,000. Her costs are understandably much higher and her staff productivity much lower than the average due to the long distances her staff must cover to see patients.

Moreover, agencies in rural areas are frequently smaller than their urban counterparts, which means their relative costs are higher due to smaller scale operations. Smaller agencies with fewer patients and fewer visits means that fixed costs, particularly those associated with meeting regulatory requirements, are spread over a smaller number of patients and visits, increasing overall per-patient and per-visit costs.

If the rural add-on payment is eliminated on April 1, it will only put more pressure on rural home health agencies that are already struggling and could force more of these agencies to close. Many agencies operating in rural areas are the only home health providers in a vast geographic area. If any of these agencies are forced to close, the Medicare patients in that region will lose complete access to home health care.

The Medicare Payment Advisory Commission, MedPAC, met earlier this week and voted unanimously to extend for 1 year the add-on payments for rural home health services at 5 percent. Our provision is consistent with the MedPAC's recommendation and will extend the expiring provision through September 30. This will give the Finance Committee time to consider whether this add-on payment should be extended further.

Once again, I thank my colleagues for their assistance, and I look forward to working with them on this and other issues of importance to the health of rural Americans.

HONORING MISS DAISY ROSE BECK

• Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I rise today to honor Miss Daisy Rose Beck who passed away on September 7, 2002, after losing a hard fought battle with leukemia. She retired from the U.S. Federal Service in 1995 after serving America for 54 consecutive years. She holds the record for length of employment as a female GS-level employee.

From the early 1960s through 1995, her duties included personal secretary for the four-star U.S. army generals who pulled tours of duty in the Republic of Korea, commanding the United Nations Command, ROK/U.S. Combined Forces Command, U.S. Forces Korea and the 8th U.S. Army. In addition, she was one of the workers at the German War Crimes Trial at Nuremberg.

Daisy Rose Beck was very quiet, friendly, efficient, respectful, and very much loved by all who met her. Daisy served for decades in places where most Americans only served a single year. She is a true American, hard working, efficient, intelligent, courteous, kind, and yet focused and dedicated to the success of a mission.

These days we face harsh enemies around the globe. We Americans have a proud tradition of doing what is right with fairness, kindness, and courage. Daisy Beck epitomizes these qualities. She is a wonderful, positive role model for all Americans in times of adversity.●

TRIBUTE TO SCARLOTTE DEUPREE

● Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, today I pay tribute to an outstanding citizen of the great State of Alabama, Miss Scarlotte Deupree.

Scarlotte may be a young woman, but her accomplishments are numerous and exceptional. Her most recent achievement was receiving the very distinguished honor of being First Runner Up to Miss America for 2003. This honor bears important functions, including representing and advocating good American values, which is a fundamental part of the Miss America Pageant. These young women choose platforms, or issues, important to our society and use their stature to help raise awareness and bring positive changes to these areas. Before entering the Miss America Pageant, Scarlotte knew that her platform would be adult literacy, an issue she has worked with for many years.

Scarlotte has devoted a great amount of her time to helping others and raising the public's awareness of adult literacy. Included in Scarlotte's work are her efforts in forming the Sylacauga Adult Literacy Council, her coordination of the first Women in Literacy Summit, as well as her work with the Literacy Council of Central Alabama, ALERT, Habitat for Humanity, and the Ronald McDonald House. In addition, Ms. Deupree helped spearhead the Literacy Awareness Week for the cities of Homewood and Athens, AL.

For her great work, Ms. Deupree has been honored by the Daily Points of Light Foundation with the Daily Point of Light No. 660 Award. She also received the Distinguished Partner Award by the Literacy Council of Central Alabama, the Miss Alabama Community Service Award, 1999 and 2002, Miss America State Community Service Award, 2002, the U.S. Presidential Service Gold Award, 1999 and 2002, and she was voted "Most Ambitious" by her student peers at Samford University.

Scarlotte also has a great record of accomplishment in other areas, including education. She completed high school at the top of her class at Sylacauga High School, where she was a member of the National Honor Society, student council, Mu Alpha Theta Math Honor Society, Political Awareness Club, and the B.B. Comer Library Teen Advisory Board. She went on to study English and journalism at Samford University, one of the Nation's best liberal arts colleges. There she was a member of the Sigma Tau Delta English Honor Fraternity, Samford University Honor's Program, Freshman Forum, Alpha Delta Pi Social Sorority, and volunteered as a Step Sing Consultant. In addition, she worked in my Senate office as an intern in the winter of 2000, a very busy time for our political system and country. She produced excellent work, received high marks from my staff, and contributed greatly to my office during her stay. I was very impressed with her.

She is an example of the great work our Nation's young people do. I am very proud of her and I know she will continue to give leadership to the critical area of adult literacy and that she will be a leader in whatever career she chooses. I applaud her tireless efforts on behalf of all Alabamians and would like to take this opportunity to thank her for all that she has contributed to her community, the State of Alabama and our Nation.

Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to join me today in recognizing Scarlotte Deupree for her outstanding achievements and wish her well as she continues to work to improve literacy.●

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Ms. Evans, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations and a withdrawal which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

REPORT ON THE STATE OF THE UNION—PM 1

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was ordered to lie on the table:

To the Congress of the United States:

Mr. Speaker, Vice President Cheney, Members of Congress, distinguished guests, fellow citizens:

Every year, by law and by custom, we meet here to consider the state of the union. This year, we gather in this chamber deeply aware of decisive days that lie ahead.

You and I serve our country in a time of great consequence. During this session of Congress, we have the duty to reform domestic programs vital to our country . . . and we have the opportunity to save millions of lives abroad from a terrible disease. We will work for a prosperity that is broadly shared . . . and we will answer every danger and every enemy that threatens the American people.

In all these days of promise and days of reckoning, we can be confident. In a whirlwind of change, and hope, and peril, our faith is sure, our resolve is firm, and our union is strong.

This country has many challenges. We will not deny, we will not ignore, we will not pass along our problems to other Congresses, other Presidents, and other generations. We will confront them with focus, and clarity and courage.

During the last 2 years, we have seen what can be accomplished when we work together. To lift the standards of our public schools, we achieved historic education reform—which must now be carried out in every school, and every classroom, so that every child in America can read, and learn, and succeed in life. To protect our country, we reorganized our government and created the Department of Homeland Security—which is mobilizing against the threats of a new era. To bring our economy out of recession, we delivered the largest tax relief in a generation. To insist on integrity in American business, we passed tough reforms, and we are holding corporate criminals to account.

Some might call this a good record. I call it a good start. Tonight I ask the House and Senate to join me in the next bold steps to serve our fellow citizens.

Our first goal is clear: We must have an economy that grows fast enough to employ every man and woman who seeks a job.

After recession, terrorist attacks, corporate scandals, and stock market declines, our economy is recovering—yet it is not growing fast enough, or strongly enough. With unemployment rising, our Nation needs more small businesses to open, more companies to invest and expand, more employers to put up the sign that says, "Help Wanted."

Jobs are created when the economy grows; the economy grows when Americans have more money to spend and invest; and the best, fairest way to make sure Americans have that money is not to tax it away in the first place.

I am proposing that all the income tax reductions set for 2004 and 2006 be made permanent and effective this year. And under my plan, as soon as I have signed the bill, this extra money will start showing up in workers' paychecks. Instead of gradually reducing the marriage penalty, we should do it now. Instead of slowly raising the child credit to a thousand dollars, we should send the checks to American families now.

This tax relief is for everyone who pays income taxes—and it will help our economy immediately. Ninety-two million Americans will keep—this year—an average of almost $1,100 more of their own money. A family of four with an income of $40,000 would see their federal income taxes fall from $1,178 to $45 per year. And our plan will improve the bottom line for more than 23 million small businesses.

You, the Congress, have already passed all these reductions, and promised them for future years. If this tax relief is good for Americans three, or five, or seven years from now, it is even better for Americans today.

We also strengthen the economy by treating investors equally in our tax laws. It is fair to tax a company's profits. It is not fair to again tax the shareholders on the same profits. To boost investor confidence, and to help the nearly 10 million seniors who receive dividend income, I ask you to end the unfair double taxation of dividends.

Lower taxes and greater investment will help this economy expand. More jobs mean more taxpayers—and higher revenues to our government. The best way to address the deficit and move toward a balanced budget is to encourage economic growth—and to show some spending discipline in Washington, D.C. We must work together to fund only our most important priorities. I will send you a budget that increases discretionary spending by 4 percent next year—about as much as the average family's income is expected to grow. And that is a good benchmark for us: Federal spending should not rise any faster than the paychecks of American families.

A growing economy, and a focus on essential priorities, will also be crucial to the future of Social Security. As we continue to work together to keep social Security sound and reliable, we must offer younger workers a chance to invest in retirement accounts that they will control and they will own.

Our second goal is high-quality, affordable health care for all Americans.

The American system of medicine is a model of skill and innovation—with a pace of discovery that is adding good years to our lives. Yet for many people, medical care costs too much—and many have no coverage at all. These problems will not be solved with a nationalized health care system that dictates coverage and rationing care. Instead, we must work toward a system in which all Americans have a good insurance policy . . . choose their own doctors . . . and seniors and low-income Americans receive the help they need. Instead of bureaucrats, and trial lawyers, and HMOs, we must put doctors, and nurses, and patients back in charge of American medicine.

Health care reform must begin with Medicare, because Medicare is the binding commitment of a caring society. We must renew that commitment by giving seniors access to the preventive medicine and new drugs that are transforming health care in America.

Seniors happy with the current Medicare system should be able to keep their coverage just the way it is. And just like you, the members of Congress, members of your staffs, and other federal employees, all seniors should have the choice of a health care plan that provides prescription drugs. My budget will commit an additional $400 billion over the next decade to reform and strengthen Medicare. Leaders of both political parties have talked for years about strengthening Medicare—I urge the members of this new Congress to act this year.

To improve our health care system, we must address one of the prime causes of higher costs—the constant threat that physicians and hospitals will be unfairly sued. Because of excessive litigation, everybody pays more for health care—and many parts of America are losing fine doctors. No one has every been healed by a frivolous lawsuit—and I urge the Congress to pass medical liability reform.

Our third goal is to promote energy independence for our country, while dramatically improving the environment.

I have sent you a comprehensive energy plan to promote energy efficiency and conservation, to develop cleaner technology, and to produce more energy at home. I have sent you Clear Skies legislation that mandates a 70 percent cut in air pollution from power plants over the next 15 years. I have sent you a Healthy Forests Initiative, to help prevent the catastrophic fires that devastate communities, kill wildlife, and burn away millions of acres of treasured forest.

I urge you to pass these measures, for the good of both our environment and our economy. Even more, I ask you to take a crucial step, and protect our environment in ways that generations before us could not have imagined. In this century, the greatest environmental progress will come about, not through endless lawsuits or command and control regulations, but through technology and innovation. Tonight I am proposing $1.2 billion in research funding so that American can lead the world in developing clean, hydrogen-powered automobiles.

A simple chemical reaction between hydrogen and oxygen generates energy, which can be used to power a car—producing only water, not exhaust fumes. With a new national commitment, our scientists and engineers will overcome obstacles to taking these cars from laboratory to showroom—so that the first car driven by a child born today could be powered by hydrogen, and pollution-free. Join me in this important innovation—to make our air significantly cleaner, and our country much less dependent on foreign sources of energy.

Our fourth goal is to apply the compassion of America to the deepest problems of America. For so many in our country—the homeless, the fatherless, the addicted—the need is great. Yet there is power—wonder-working power—in the goodness, and idealism, and faith of the American people.

Americans are doing the work of compassion every day—visiting prisoners, providing shelter to battered women, bringing companionship to lonely seniors. These good works deserve our praise . . . they deserve our personal support . . . and, when appropriate, they deserve the assistance of our government. I urge you to pass both my faith-based initiative and the Citizen Service Act—to encourage acts of compassion that can transform America, one heart and one soul at a time.

Last year, I called on my fellow citizens to participate in USA Freedom Corps, which is enlisting tens of thousands of new volunteers across America. Tonight I ask Congress and the American people to focus the spirit of service and the resources of government on the needs of some of our most vulnerable citizens—boys and girls trying to grow up without guidance and attention . . . and children who have to go through a prison gate to be hugged by their mom or dad. I propose a $450 million initiative to bring mentors to more than a million disadvantaged junior high students and children of prisoners. Government will support the training and recruiting of mentors, yet it is the men and women of America who will fill the need. One mentor, one person, can change a life forever—and I urge you to be that one person.

Another cause of hopelessness is addiction to drugs. Addiction crowds out friendship, ambition, moral conviction, and reduces all the richness of life to a single destructive desire. As a government, we are fighting illegal drugs by cutting off supplies, and reducing demand through anti-drug education programs. Yet for those already addicted, the fight against drugs is a fight for their own lives.

Too many Americans in search of treatment cannot get it. So tonight I propose a new $600 million program to help an additional 300,000 Americans receive treatment over the next 3 years.

Our Nation is blessed with recovery programs that do amazing work. One of them is found at the Healing Place Church in Baton Rouge, Louisiana. A man in the program said, "God does miracles in people's lives, and you never think it could be you." Tonight, let us bring to all Americans who struggle with drug addiction this message of hope: The miracle of recovery is possible, and it could be you.

By caring for children who need mentors, and for addicted men and women who need treatment, we are building a more welcoming society—a culture that values every life. And in this work we must not overlook the weakest among us. I ask you to protect infants at the very hour of birth, and end the practice of partial-birth abortion. And because no human life should be started or ended as the object of an experiment, I ask you to set a high standard for humanity and pass a law against all human cloning.

The qualities of courage and compassion that we strive for in America also determine our conduct abroad. The American flag stands for more than our power and our interests. Our Founders dedicated this country to cause of human dignity—the rights of every person and the possibilities of every life. This conviction leads us into the world to help the afflicted, and defend the peace, and confound the designs of evil men. In Afghanistan, we helped to liberate an oppressed people . . . and we will continue helping them secure their country, rebuild their society, and educate all their children—boys and girls. In the Middle East, we will continue to seek peace between a secure Israel and a democratic Palestine. Across the earth, America is feeding the hungry; more than 60 percent of international food aid comes as a gift from the people of the United States.

As our Nation moves troops and builds alliances to make our world safer, we must also remember our calling, as a blessed country, to make this world better. Today, on the continent of Africa, nearly 30 million people have the AIDS virus—including three million children under the age of 15. There are whole countries in Africa where more than one-third of the adult population carries the infection. More than four million require immediate drug treatment. Yet across that continent, only 50,000 AIDS victims—only 50,000—are receiving the medicine they need.

Because the AIDS diagnosis is considered a death sentence, many do not seek treatment. Almost all who do are turned away. A doctor in rural South Africa describes his frustration. He says, "We have no medicines . . . many hospitals tell [people], 'You've got AIDS. We can't help you. Go home and die.'"

In an age of miraculous medicines, no person should have to hear those words. AIDS can be prevented. Antiretroviral drugs can extend life for many years. And the cost of those drugs has dropped from $12,000 a year to under $300 a year—which places a tremendous possibility within our grasp.

Ladies and gentlemen, seldom has history offered a greater opportunity to do so much for so many. We have confronted, and will continue to confront, HIV/AIDS in our own country. And to meet a severe and urgent crisis abroad, tonight I propose the Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief—a work of mercy beyond all current international efforts to help the people of Africa. This comprehensive plan will prevent seven million new AIDS infections . . . treat at least two million people with life-extending drugs . . . and provide humane care for millions of people suffering from AIDS, and for children orphaned by AIDS. I ask the Congress to commit $15 billion over the next 5 years, including nearly $10 billion in new money, to turn the tide against AIDS in the most afflicted nations of Africa and the Caribbean.

This Nation can lead the world in sparing innocent people from a plague of nature. And this Nation is leading the world in confronting and defeating the man-made evil of international terrorism.

There are days when the American people do not hear news about the war on terror. There is never a day when I do not learn of another threat, or receive reports of operations in progress, or give an order in this global war against a scattered network of killers. The war goes on, and we are winning.

To date we have arrested, or otherwise dealt with, many key commanders of al-Qaida. They include a man who directed logistics and funding for the September 11th attacks . . . the chief of al-Qaida operations in the Persian Gulf who planned the bombings of our embassies in East Africa and the USS Cole . . . an al-Qaida operations chief from Southeast Asia . . . a former director of al-Qaida's training camps in Afghanistan . . . a key al-Qaida operative in Europe . . . and a major al-Qaida leader in Yemen. All told, more than 3,000 suspected terrorists have been arrested in many countries. And many others have met a different fate. They are no longer a problem for the United States and our friends and allies.

We are working closely with other nations to prevent further attacks. America and coalition countries have uncovered and stopped terrorist conspiracies targeting the American embassy in Yemen . . . the American embassy in Singapore . . . a Saudi military base . . . and ships in the straits of Hormuz, and the straits of Gibraltar. We have broken al-Qaida cells in Hamburg, and Milan, and Madrid, and London, and Paris—as well as Buffalo, New York.

We have the terrorists on the run, and we are keeping them on the run. One by one, the terrorists are learning the meaning of American justice.

As we fight this war, we will remember where it began—here, in our own country. This government is taking unprecedented measures to protect our people and defend our homeland. We have intensified security at the borders and ports of entry . . . posted more than 50,000 newly trained federal screeners in airports . . . begun inoculating troops and first responders against smallpox . . . and are deploying the Nation's first early warning network of sensors to detect biological attack. And this year, for the first time, we are beginning to field a defense to protect this Nation against ballistic missiles.

I thank the Congress for supporting these measures. I ask you tonight to add to our future security with a major research and production effort to guard our people against bio-terrorism, called Project Bioshield. The budget I send you will propose almost $6 billion to quickly make available effective vaccines and treatments against agents like anthrax, botulinum toxin, Ebola, and plague. We must assume that our enemies would use these diseases as weapons, and we must act before the dangers are upon us.

Since September 11th, our intelligence and law enforcement agencies have worked more closely than ever to track and disrupt the terrorists. The FBI is improving its ability to analyze intelligence, and transforming itself to meet new threats. And tonight, I am instructing the leaders of the FBI, Central Intelligence, Homeland Security, and the Department of Defense to develop a Terrorist Threat Integration Center, to merge and analyze all threat information in a single location. Our government must have the very best information possible, and we will use it to make sure the right people are in the right places to protect our citizens.

Our war against terror is a contest of will, in which perseverance is power. In the ruins of two towers, at the western wall of the Pentagon, on a field in Pennsylvania, this Nation made a pledge, and we renew that pledge tonight: Whatever the duration of this struggle, and whatever the difficulties, we will not permit the triumph of violence in the affairs of men—free people will set the course of history.

Today, the gravest danger in the war on terror . . . the gravest danger facing America and the world . . . is outlaw regimes that seek and possess nuclear, chemical, and biological weapons. These regimes could use such weapons for blackmail, terror, and mass murder. They could also give or sell those weapons to their terrorist allies, who would use them without the least hesitation.

This threat is new; America's duty is familiar. Throughout the 20th century, small groups of men seized control of great nations . . . built armies and arsenals . . . and set out to dominate the weak and intimidate the world. In each case, their ambitions of cruelty and murder had no limit. In each case, the ambitions of Hitlerism, militarism, and communism were defeated by the will of free peoples, by the strength of great alliances, and by the might of the United States of America. Now, in this century, the ideology of power and domination has appeared again, and seeks to gain the ultimate weapons of terror. Once again, this Nation and our friends are all that stand between a world at peace, and a world of chaos and constant alarm. Once again, we are called to defend the safety of our people, and the hopes of all mankind. And we accept this responsibility.

America is making a broad and determined effort to confront these dangers. We have called on the United Nations to fulfill its charter, and stand by its demand that Iraq disarm. We are strongly supporting the International Atomic Energy Agency in its mission to track and control nuclear materials around the world. We are working with other governments to secure nuclear materials in the former Soviet Union, and to strengthen global treaties banning the production and shipment of missile technologies and weapons of mass destruction.

In all of these efforts, however, America's purpose is more than to follow a process—it is to achieve a result: the end of terrible threats to the civilized world. All free nations have a stake in preventing sudden and catastrophic attack. We are asking them to join us, and many are doing so. Yet the course of this Nation does not depend on the decisions of others. Whatever action is required, whenever action is necessary, I will defend the freedom and security of the American people.

Different threats require different strategies. In Iran, we continue to see a government that represses its people, pursues weapons of mass destruction, and supports terror. We also see Iranian citizens risking intimidation and death as they speak out for liberty, human rights, and democracy. Iranians, like all people, have a right to choose their own government, and determine their own destiny—and the United States supports their aspirations to live in freedom.

On the Korean peninsula, an oppressive regime rules a people living in fear and starvation. Throughout the 1990s, the United States relied on a negotiated framework to keep North Korea from gaining nuclear weapons. We now know that the regime was deceiving the world, and developing those weapons all along. And today the North Korean regime is using its nuclear program to incite fear and seek concessions. America and the world will not be blackmailed. America is working with countries of the region—South Korea, Japan, China, and Russia—to find a peaceful solution, and to show the North Korean government that nuclear weapons will bring only isolation, economic stagnation, and continued hardship. The North Korean regime will find respect in the world, and revival for its people, only when it turns away from its nuclear ambitions.

Our Nation and the world must learn the lessons of the Korean peninsula, and not allow an even greater threat to rise up in Iraq. A brutal dictator, with a history of reckless aggression . . . with ties to terrorism . . . with great potential wealth . . . will not be permitted to dominate a vital region and threaten the United States.

Twelve years ago, Saddam Hussein faced the prospect of being the last casualty in a war he had started and lost. To spare himself, he agreed to disarm of all weapons of mass destruction. For the next 12 years, he systematically violated that agreement. He pursued chemical, biological, and nuclear weapons even while inspectors were in his country. Nothing to date has restrained him from his pursuit of these weapons—not economic sanctions, not isolation from the civilized world, not even cruise missile strikes on his military facilities. Almost 3 months ago, the United Nations Security Council gave Saddam Hussein his final chance to disarm. He has shown instead his utter contempt for the United Nations, and for the opinion of the world.

The 108 U.N. weapons inspectors were not sent to conduct a scavenger hunt for hidden materials across a country the size of California. The job of the inspectors is to verify that Iraq's regime is disarming. It is up to Iraq to show exactly where it is hiding its banned weapons . . . lay those weapons out for the world to see . . . and destroy them as directed. Nothing like this has happened.

The United Nations concluded in 1999 that Saddam Hussein had biological weapons materials sufficient to produce over 25,000 liters of anthrax—enough doses to kill several million people. He has not accounted for that material. He has given no evidence that he has destroyed it.

The United Nations concluded that Saddam Hussein had materials sufficient to produce more than 38,000 liters of botulinum toxin—enough to subject millions of people to death by respiratory failure. He has not accounted for that material. He has given no evidence that he has destroyed it.

Our intelligence officials estimate that Saddam Hussein had the materials to produce as much as 500 tons of sarin, mustard, and VX nerve agent. In such quantities, these chemical agents also could kill untold thousands. He has not accounted for these materials. He has given no evidence that he has destroyed them.

U.S. intelligence indicates that Saddam Hussein had upwards of 30,000 munitions capable of delivering chemical agents. Inspectors recently turned up 16 of them, despite Iraq's recent declaration denying their existence. Saddam Hussein has not accounted for the remaining 29,984 of these prohibited munitions. He has given no evidence that he has destroyed them.

From three Iraqi defectors we know that Iraq, in the late 1990s, had several mobile biological weapons labs. These are designed to produce germ warfare agents, and can be moved from place to place to evade inspectors. Saddam Hussein has not disclosed these facilities. He has given no evidence that he has destroyed them.

The International Atomic Energy Agency confirmed in the 1990s that Saddam Hussein had an advanced nuclear weapons development program, had a design for a nuclear weapon, and was working on five different methods of enriching uranium for a bomb. The British government has learned that Saddam Hussein recently sought significant quantities of uranium from Africa. Our intelligence sources tell us that he has attempted to purchase high strength aluminum tubes suitable for nuclear weapons production. Saddam Hussein has not credibly explained these activities. He clearly has much to hide.

The dictator of Iraq is not disarming. To the contrary, he is deceiving. From intelligence sources, we know, for instance, that thousands of Iraqi security personnel are at work hiding documents and materials from the U.N. inspectors—sanitizing inspection sites, and monitoring the inspectors themselves. Iraqi officials accompany the inspectors in order to intimidate witnesses. Iraq is blocking U-2 surveillance flights requested by the United Nations. Iraqi intelligence officers are posing as the scientists inspectors are supposed to interview. Real scientists have been coached by Iraqi officials on what to say. And intelligence sources indicate that Saddam Hussein has ordered that scientists who cooperate with U.N. inspectors in disarming Iraq will be killed, along with their families.

Year after year, Saddam Hussein has gone to elaborate lengths, spent enormous sums, taken great risks, to build and keep weapons of mass destruction—but why? The only possible explanation, the only possible use he could have for those weapons, is to dominate, intimidate, or attack. With nuclear arms or a full arsenal of chemical and biological weapons, Saddam Hussein could resume his ambitions of conquest in the Middle East, and create deadly havoc in the region. And this Congress and the American people must recognize another threat. Evidence from intelligence sources, secret communications, and statements by people now in custody, reveal that Saddam Hussein aids and protects terrorists, including members of al-Qaida. Secretly, and without fingerprints, he could provide one of his hidden weapons to terrorists, or help them develop their own.

Before September 11, 2001, many in the world believed that Saddam Hussein could be contained. But chemical agents and lethal viruses and shadowy terrorist networks are not easily contained. Imagine those 19 hijackers with other weapons, and other plans—this time armed by Saddam Hussein. It would take just one vial, one canister, one crate slipped into this country to bring a day of horror like none we have ever known. We will do everything in our power to make sure that day never comes.

Some have said we must not act until the threat is imminent. Since when have terrorists and tyrants announced their intentions, politely putting us on notice before they strike? If this threat is permitted to fully and suddenly emerge, all actions, all words, and all recriminations would come too late. Trusting in the sanity and restraint of Saddam Hussein is not a strategy, and it is not an option.

This dictator, who is assembling the world's most dangerous weapons, has already used them on whole villages—leaving thousands of his own citizens dead, blind, or disfigured. Iraqi refugees tell us how forced confessions are obtained—by torturing children while their parents are made to watch. International human rights groups have catalogued other methods used in the torture chambers of Iraq: electric shock, burning with hot irons, dripping acid on the skin, mutilation with electric drills, cutting out tongues, and rape.

If this is not evil, then evil has no meaning. And tonight I have a message for the brave and oppressed people of Iraq: Your enemy is not surrounding your country—your enemy is ruling your country. And the day he and his regime are removed from power will be the day of your liberation.

The world has waited 12 years for Iraq to disarm. America will not accept a serious and mounting threat to our country, our friends, and our allies. The United States will ask the U.N. Security Council to convene on February 5th to consider the facts of Iraq's ongoing defiance of the world. Secretary of State Powell will present information and intelligence about Iraq's illegal weapons programs; its attempts to hide those weapons from inspectors; and its links to terrorist groups. We will consult, but let there be no misunderstanding: If Saddam Hussein does not fully disarm, for the safety of our people, and for the peace of the world, we will lead a coalition to disarm him.

Tonight I also have a message for the men and women who will keep the peace, members of the American Armed Forces: Many of you are assembling in and near the Middle East, and some crucial hours may lie ahead. In those hours, the success of our cause will depend on you. Your training has prepared you. Your honor will guide you. You believe in America, and America believes in you.

Sending Americans into battle is the most profound decision a president can make. The technologies of war have changed. The risks and suffering of war have not. For the brave Americans who bear the risk, no victory is free from sorrow. This Nation fights reluctantly, because we know the cost, and we dread the days of mourning that always come.

We seek peace. We strive for peace. And sometimes peace must be defended. A future lived at the mercy of terrible threats is no peace at all. If war is forced upon us, we will fight in a just cause and by just means—sparing, in every way we can, the innocent. And if war is forced upon us, we will fight with the full force and might of the United States military—and we will prevail. And as we and our coalition partners are doing in Afghanistan, we will bring to the Iraqi people food, and medicines, and supplies . . . and freedom.

Many challenges, abroad and at home, have arrived in a single season. In 2 years, America has gone from a sense of invulnerability to an awareness of peril . . . from bitter division in small matters to calm unity in great causes. And we go forward with confidence, because this call of history has come to the right country.

Americans are a resolute people, who have lived to every test of our time. Adversity has revealed the character of our country, to the world, and to ourselves.

America is a strong Nation, and honorable in the use of our strength. We exercise power without conquest, and sacrifice for the liberty of strangers.

Americans are a free people, who know that freedom is the right of every person and the future of every nation. The liberty we prize is not America's gift to the world, it is God's gift to humanity.

We Americans have faith in ourselves—but not in ourselves alone. We do not claim to know all the ways of Providence, yet we can trust in them, placing our confidence in the loving God behind all of life, and all of history.

May He guide us now, and may God continue to bless the United States of America.

Thank you.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. CRAIG (for himself, Mr. BAUCUS, Mr. LOTT, Mr. CRAPO, Mr. SESSIONS, Ms. SNOWE, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. COCHRAN, Mrs. LINCOLN, Mr. BURNS, and Mr. MILLER):

S. 219. A bill to amend the Tariff Act of 1930 to clarify the adjustments to be made in determining export price and constructed export price; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I come to the Chamber this morning, with a number of my colleagues, to discuss what is a critical issue in timber country across the United States, where men and women go to work every day in our sawmills only to find the mill has been shut down and the lights have been turned out.

As a result, that has been a problem which has grown for some time because of the Canadians, their style of production at this moment, and the huge volume of timber they are pouring into this country. It is a market condition that will continue to shut down many of our mills, some that will never turn on their lights again, some that will never again employ men and women in the small towns where most of those mills are across the country.

Today, some of my colleagues and I are introducing legislation to work cooperatively with the administration in trying to resolve this through negotiation. This legislation is being offered on behalf of myself, Senator BAUCUS, Senator CRAPO, my colleague from Idaho, who is in the Chamber, Senator SESSIONS, Senator SNOWE, Senator COLLINS, Senator COCHRAN, Senator BURNS, and Senator LINCOLN.

In introducing this legislation today, we are amending the Tariff Act of 1930 to clarify what is an appropriate deduction from the price of merchandise. We believe the deduction of the countervailing duty should be included in the calculation in determining whether or not and to what extent there have been sales dumped at less than fair market value in the United States.

Some time ago, we established a countervailing duty against Canadian products coming into this market. This is in response to that and the way it is calculated.

While the Department of Commerce has worked diligently on the softwood lumber case, the Canadian industry and Government continue to effectively avoid the countervailing duty and antidumping orders. The most recent move by the Canadian Government to avoid the countervailing duty is to declare a significant region of interior British Columbia bug kill timber. This particular green lumber—or timber in this case—is being sold at salvage prices and has flooded the amount of available timber already in the market.

The price for this timber is now as low as a dollar per thousand board feet, while the competitive market value is over $100 per thousand board feet—in other words, on the stump at the time of the sale.

I remind my colleagues a majority of this determined bug kill has not yet been affected by bugs. It is simply a decision made by the Canadian Government in this instance. Yet they are selling it at prices that are as if it had been affected by disease.

Next, British Columbia has revised their forest practice code to reduce costs to the lumber manufacturers by decreasing forestry standards and placing logging corporations in charge of enforcement actions. That is like the U.S. Forest Service turning to the logging companies and saying the logging companies can enforce all of the environmental laws, as well as the laws under which we govern and manage our forests. We will turn that authority over to the logging companies.

What does this do to Canadian timber companies? It literally saves them millions of dollars in operating expenses.

These recent and blatant moves by the Canadians reveal their true desires to continue to flood the U.S. markets and their unwillingness to find a resolution that provides both security for U.S. and Canadian jobs.

Our proposal specifies that countervailing duties are to be treated as a cost of production, a clarification of the Trade Act that all duties should be considered a cost of production incurred on shipments to the United States. The deduction of countervailing duty would assist in determining whether or not and to what extent there have been sales dumped at less than fair market value in the United States.

Dumping is when a company sells a product into the United States for less than its cost of production. The Department of Commerce currently does not consider countervailing duties, which offset subsidies, as a cost of production when calculating the amount of dumping and requisite antidumping duties. The Department's policy of ignoring countervailing duties when calculating antidumping duties undervalues the actual amount of the dumping.

Fair value typically is the sales price of the merchandise in the country-of-origin market. The antidumping analysis compares fair value of a good from another country to the fair value of a good from the United States to determine if the good from another country was dumped at an unfair price in the U.S. market.

For example, in the U.S.-Canadian softwood lumber dispute, the Department of Commerce determined that the Canadian provinces subsidize their industry by providing lumber mills timber at prices that are 33 to 50 percent below market value. It also found that Canadian companies were selling lumber in the United States at below their subsidized cost of production, requiring an antidumping duty of 8.79 percent.

The antidumping duty currently undervalues the Canadian dumping practices by comparing a subsidized cost of production to the price of lumber rather than comparing the cost of production plus the countervailing duty to the price of lumber. It is all in the math, and in this kind of math it is quite obvious that Canadians are taking tremendous advantage of the marketplace. As I said earlier, the lights in the sawmills across America are going out.

Such a change in the Department's policy, we believe—those of us who have authored this legislation—is consistent with the practices of the European community and of Canada. It is time the Department of Commerce correct this accounting error, and it is time for the Canadian Government and their industry leaders to come to the table to negotiate a free and fair market price for both U.S. and Canadian lumber products.

I believe this Congress will not tolerate the kind of dumping activity that is going on in the market today, which appears to be at this moment not only blatant but an attempt to grab even a larger market share in this country.

For years, I have worked on this issue, and I clearly recognize the importance in the overall market of Canadian lumber in our market to meet our housing demands, but to do so and to expand that market base at a cost to U.S. jobs and U.S. producers is not fair, nor is it balanced. That is why we have introduced this legislation today.

Several other colleagues who are cosponsors in the legislation plan to come to the floor during this period of morning business to speak to this issue. I am extremely pleased to be joined by Senator BAUCUS, Senator LOTT, and Senator SNOWE. I mention those three specifically because they are on the Finance Committee. This is legislation that will be referred to the Finance Committee.

As my colleague from Idaho so clearly said, this is a simple correction in the law. It is a practice followed by other countries in Europe and Canada itself. Clearly, it would change the dynamics of how we deal with Canada, but it would also show the Canadians that we are not going to stand idly by and allow what is so blatant and so intentional in both the pricing of their stumpage and, therefore, the cost of entry into our market. Blatant dumping in the market for the purpose of gaining market share and putting some of our businesses out of business should not be tolerated.

We have all heard over the years the phrase "mill town." It is so true today, still, in those areas of our country that are adjacent to private and public forests, that it is the sawmill that often is the larger employer in the community, providing excellent jobs at high pay to the men and women who live within that community. When that mill goes down and those citizens are out of work, there is no alternative, there are no other jobs, or there are limited jobs in the community. That community oftentimes is anywhere from 20 to 100 to 150 miles from the next community.

So that wage earner oftentimes is faced with a very tough choice he or she may have to make. That is not just to go search for another job but oftentimes to pick up their family and move from that small community they had chosen to live in and to raise their families. Why? Because a singular employee in this instance was either shut down or put out of business. Why? Because of predatory practices on the part of our friends to the north. And I say "friends" because I believe that. But certainly in this segment of their economy, they are choosing to enter the most lucrative timber market in the world—ours—with a thriving, aggressive homebuilding industry and an economy in the homebuilding industry that is very strong today, to supply that product.

I recognize the sheer demand for dimensional lumber in this market is much greater than both United States producers from private and public lands can supply, and Canadians can and have had and will have a substantial portion of our market. But now, to do so intentionally so the big boys can get bigger in Canada, putting oftentimes out of business the smaller producer here in the United States, is something we should not stand idly by and tolerate.

Mr. President, I see I am being joined in the Chamber by my colleague from Mississippi. Senator LOTT is a cosponsor of the legislation we have just introduced dealing with the Tariff Act of 1930. Mississippi has a thriving timber industry that is a major contributor to their State's economy, and especially to rural Mississippi's workforce. So I will be happy to yield to Senator LOTT for him to discuss this issue, of course, or any other issue he might wish to discuss.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss a much-needed clarification of current trade law. Misinterpretation of the current law hurts hundreds of American companies and thousands of American workers.

It is a misinterpretation that results in the understatement both of the degree of foreign unfair trade and the amount of duties necessary to offset it.

The legislation Senator CRAIG and I are proposing would clarify that, in an antidumping proceeding, countervailing duties paid by a foreign seller should be deducted from the U.S. price.

This legislation would rectify the current understatement of unfair trade and ensure that the true expenses of selling in the United States are recognized in the calculation of duties.

Now, I am here today because this issue is of particular importance to Montana's softwood lumber industry. For more than 20 years, I have stood beside our lumber industry as they have fought massive illegal subsidies by the Canadian government.

All they are asking for is a level playing field.

Unfortunately for everyone, this process has been stuck in an endless cycle of litigation. I hope we can end that, and get to a place where there is real market-based competition. But until we do, we must ensure that our fair trade laws are as strong as possible.

We have countervailing duty laws that offset unfair foreign subsidies. We also have antidumping laws that help ensure that foreign products are sold for a "fair price" in the United States, a price that is comparable to the foreign price, and that reasonably reflects the cost of production.

But we can't make a fair comparison unless we factor in the cost of countervailing duties. It's that simple. We are letting unfair traders off the hook.

And we're doing so simply because of a misinterpretation of current law by the Department of Commerce. There is no sensible policy or legal rationale for this practice.

And I would note here that adopting this legislation would make our practice consistent with the practices of Canada and the European Union. For the life of me, I can't understand we wouldn't give our companies and workers trade laws that are as strong as those in the countries we compete against. That is just common sense.

I would also emphasize that Commerce itself could fix this problem if it were so inclined. Commerce could, for example, announce in an ongoing administrative review its intention to reconsider treatment of countervailing duties as a cost. The Department has often used such cases as a means to review policy.

The current policy makes no sense. It violates the statute. It fails to redress continued dumping. And it effectively discourages negotiations to end unfair trade.

Most importantly, correcting the current policy would force Canadian mills to make a clear choice, negotiate a long-term resolution or face higher duties.

In the absence of a voluntary change in policy by Commerce, I offer this legislation to clarify the statute.

This will ensure a fair comparison of prices and a more accurate measurement of the amount of dumping. It is just the right thing to do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I thank Senator CRAIG for his leadership on this issue, and also Senator BAUCUS and Senator CRAPO, and a number of others whose States are being severely impacted by very unfair Canadian softwood lumber practices.

Forestry is the second largest crop in my State of Mississippi and represents $1.25 billion annually. But what we are dealing with is the dumping of this Canadian softwood into our region of the country.

"Dumping" is when a company sells a product for less than the cost of production. But the Department of Commerce currently does not consider countervailing duties, which offset subsidies, as a cost of production when evaluating and calculating the amount of dumping and the requisite antidumping duties. The Department's policy of ignoring these countervailing duties when calculating antidumping duties undervalues the amount of the dumping of the products.

Let me just say, I have been working on this issue actually for years now. I have worked with the previous administration and have been working with this administration. Our Customs officials have tried to be helpful. And certainly the current Secretary of Commerce has been paying close attention to this issue, and I really appreciate it. But there are limits to what they can do without additional legislation that will make it clear how we will deal with these countervailing duties. So that is why this legislation has been introduced.

I think we must have had 8 or 10 Senators who met with the Secretary of Commerce and other officials of Commerce and discussed this problem and its continuing impact on this major industry in my State and in our country, and talked about the need to take some further actions to make sure we are properly evaluating the product that is being dumped in the United States.

The United States-Canada softwood lumber dispute is one that has been going on a long time. And it is clear from information we have that the Canadian provinces are subsidizing their industry by providing lumber mills timber at prices that are 33 to 50 percent below market value. Our Commerce Department has found that Canadian companies have been selling lumber in the United States but below their subsidized cost of production, requiring an antidumping duty of 8.79 percent. The fair market value calculation currently undervalues the Canadian dumping practices by comparing a subsidized cost of production to the cost of United States lumber rather than comparing the subsidized cost of production plus the countervailing duty to the cost of United States lumber.

That is what this legislation would do. It would correct this by specifying that the CVD duties are to be treated as a cost of production, a clarification of U.S. statute section 19, U.S.C. 1677, which states that all duties should be considered a cost of production incurred on shipments to the United States. Such a change of Department policy is consistent with practices in the European Union and, as a matter of fact, of Canada.

The legislation, in my opinion, will have an immediate impact because with the correction of this problem, then, the Canadian mills will face the prospect of paying considerably higher antidumping rates if the lumber market remains at the current low level. So I think this is something we need to do.

I have met with Canadian officials, including the Prime Minister, the Ambassador, and Members of their Parliament. I had the impression that while they recognized this is an economic problem in the United States and unfair, they do not believe we are going to take the necessary action to really get a result. And they have been dragging it out now for years.

I am going to meet with some Canadian Government officials even tomorrow. I am sure this issue will come up.

But once they realize we are serious—I believe this administration, this Commerce Department is serious—we are not going to allow them to sell this product at below production of cost, and that we are also going to include in that figure the cost figure, the countervailing duty orders, I think maybe they will understand that we have to deal with this problem.

Even today, bug kill timber is being sold at salvage prices in the interior of British Columbia, which has increased the amount of available timber already on the market. The price for this timber is as low as $1 per 1,000 board feet, when the competitive market value is over $100 per thousand board feet. That gives you some concept of the disadvantage with which our American softwood lumber producers are dealing. Our lumber industry is in a crisis. Make no mistake about it. We have been losing mills. The product value is down. Production is down. If the current market conditions continue, many of our remaining lumber manufacturers will not survive the next 6 months. This is a critical situation, and it is one that is going to get much worse if we don't get some action quickly.

The U.S. lumber industry supports the Department's changed circumstances process. Therefore, I think this is a solution we can all work on. As a member of the Finance Committee, along with Senator BAUCUS, who also serves on the Finance Committee, we will make sure this legislation receives the consideration it deserves.

We urge our colleagues in the country that is one of our two or three best friends in the world, Canada, to work with us on this. This is an unfair situation, one that has been going on too long, one that is destroying an important part of our economy. I hope our Government will vigorously pursue the litigation that is now being considered. The WTO has already found that Canada has an actionable subsidy, meaning these duties will be imposed until provinces allow the market to determine the price of timber. Our Government should continue to pursue it.

Our Canadian friends and allies should work with us because this is a very unfair situation, one we are trying to remedy by making sure all of the costs of production, including the countervailing duties, are included in their calculations.

I congratulate Senator CRAIG for his leadership in this area, and I look forward to working with him in the future as we come forward with a proper solution to this critical issue.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I appreciate Senator LOTT coming to the Chamber this morning to speak on the role the timber industry plays in the economy of Mississippi and how important it is. It is important to rural Mississippi, to rural Idaho, to rural America, where we struggle mightily to keep a viable productive job base.

Clearly over the last decade, the economy of this country flourished. And while all of that was going on, it was rural Idaho that felt much of the pain and shared not in that new growth economy, in part because of the very problem both Senator LOTT and I and Senator BAUCUS and others are addressing. My colleague Senator CRAPO spoke to the matter as well.

This is a relatively simple adjustment in trade law, but it could have a substantial impact on the Canadians and the current practices in which they are involved, practices we believe are not in the best interest of both governments and both countries.

To have a nearly "cut at will" policy, both in provincial and crown timber in Canada, is at best frustrating to some of us who believe not only is that bad policy but, from an environmental point of view, it is not an effectively balanced policy. Are the practices being adhered to that should be adhered to for the purposes of sustaining yields and ongoing production of timber? Or is it simply an effort to keep people at work, in this instance, and, more importantly now, because of the declaration of green timber unaffected by disease or bug, now being called bug kill timber, is it simply a policy to grab an increasingly larger portion of the market? When many of these medium- and small-size mills go down, oftentimes they don't come back. If they are down for a longer period of time, the workforce disperses in search of another job and, as a result of that, many of these mills that go down will stay down permanently.

That is exactly what larger producers in Canada are hoping for, as it will allow them an ever-increasing larger portion of the market here in the lower 48 States.

I hope the Finance Committee will hold hearings and move quickly on this issue. It is important for our economy and, more importantly, it is a small town, mill town issue that in many States, such as Idaho, Mississippi, Montana, and throughout the South where there are large timber reserves, becomes a critical way of sustaining the rural economy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, I appreciate the opportunity to join with my colleague from Idaho, Senator CRAIG, and with the other Senators he has listed who are cosponsoring this critical legislation.

Senator CRAIG has already laid out this circumstance. Some time ago, when we could not reach an agreement with Canada on this critical issue through trade negotiations, WTO and other trade sanctions were sought by American companies seeking to correct the problem that has been faced by subsidized timber flooding into the United States from Canada. As a result of that effort, the U.S. Department of Commerce found the Canadian provinces subsidize their industry by providing lumber mills timber at prices that are 33 to 50 percent below market value.

As Senator CRAIG has indicated, as a result of that, a countervailing duty was applied and the Canadian timber producers, who are trying to bring their timber into the United States, are now required to pay this countervailing duty as a cost for their subsidized timber.

The response of the Canadian Government to that has not been simply to comply and try to negotiate a new, workable softwood lumber agreement. Instead, the Canadian Government has continued to increase the available subsidies and to try to flood the United States markets with this timber. The outcome has been that from August 2000 to March 2001, the United States lumber manufacturers closed 27 mills permanently while only two Canadian mills were closed during that time. The reason, of course, was this continued support provided from the Canadian Government.

How was it provided? As has already been indicated, allegedly bug kill timber. But timber wood that has not faced the impact yet was provided for prices which were as low as $1 per 1,000 board feet when the market price for that timber would have been somewhere in the neighborhood of $100 per 1,000 board feet. This significantly subsidized timber has been brought into the United States, exacerbating the problem.

Second, as Senator CRAIG already indicated, the British Columbian government has already revised their forest practice code to reduce the cost of lumber manufacturers under their code, saving them millions of dollars annually. What we see is, in response to this anticompetitive situation of unfair trade practices that have been identified and which are now being dealt with in litigation, the Canadians have increased their subsidies and are continuing to flood timber into the United States markets.

A number of changes need to occur. But one of them needs to occur in U.S. law because as a part of the entire process, it is important to determine the amount of subsidy. The subsidy is determined by evaluating whether the price that is being charged to the Canadian producers is above or below their cost of production. One of the critical elements is determining that value.

Currently, we have found Canadian companies are selling their lumber into the United States at below their subsidized cost of production, requiring antidumping duty of 8.79 percent. The point I make is that their current subsidies are even below and make it so that they are able to provide their timber to U.S. markets below subsidized cost of production.

The legislation we are introducing today will require them to include the countervailing duty which they pay as a part of their cost of production in determining what their true subsidy is. As long as the United States does not require the Canadians to include their countervailing duties as a cost of their production, then the amount of the subsidy which we determine will be even less than it truly is. It will not be accurately reflected.

This is a simple change to clarify what is already on the books in the United States. This practice is pursued in Europe and in Canada already under their approach to these issues. It is only proper that the U.S. Government stand firmly behind this principle. Again, the principle is, when a nation is subsidizing its products and shipping them into U.S. markets to the detriment of our producers, that subsidy must be included as a cost of doing business when we calculate in our litigation with them the amount of subsidy and the resultant countervailing duties we can apply.

I don't believe there is a legitimate argument against this legislation. I realize nations across the world are trying to figure out how to continue to do the best they can for their producers to help them get their products into our markets. However, we have now very aggressive negotiations underway in bilateral trade arrangements as well as in multilateral trade arrangements such as the world trade negotiations seeking to bring down the level of subsidies across the world to a level of zero. That is our objective in our international trade negotiations. We cannot tolerate the continued defiance of these types of laws in our negotiations. That is the simple purpose behind this legislation.

The United States and the Department of Commerce and our United States trade negotiators in particular have been doing a tremendous job in helping deal with a very difficult situation resulting from the Canadian unfair trade practices in softwood lumber. They are to be commended for this. One of the things we need to provide to them as a tool in this ongoing process is a congressional and, indeed, American statutory declaration that countervailing duties must be included in the cost of production as we negotiate on these critical issues with our neighbors to the north.

I thank the Senate for this time. I thank my colleague Senator CRAIG for his leadership on this issue and the other Senators supporting this effort.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I am here today to cosponsor legislation that should help resolve the current crisis being faced by the U.S. softwood lumber industry, which continues to be devastated by the continuation of a "wall of subsidized wood" coming from four Canadian provinces that are effectively avoiding countervailing duty and antidumping orders of the U.S. Department of Commerce. This is causing a crisis in current market conditions not only in Maine but across the Nation.

The purpose of the U.S. countervailing duty, or CVD, law, is to offset unfair foreign subsidies which cause injury to our U.S. producers. In the Canadian softwood lumber case, Commerce has determined that some Canadian provinces subsidize their lumber mills at prices that are 33 to 55 percent below market value. Currently, Canadian prices for salvage timber, for instance, are as low as $1 per thousand board feet at the same time the competitive market value is over $100 thousand board feet.

Our antidumping law is supposed to ensure that foreign products are not sold for less than its cost of production. Currently, the Department of Commerce does not consider countervailing duties as a cost of production, thereby undervaluing the Canadian dumping practices by comparing a subsidized cost of production to the price of lumber rather than comparing the cost of production plus the countervailing duty to the price of lumber. Ignoring countervailing duties when then calculating antidumping duties undervalues the actual amount of dumping, and is devastating to our U.S. softwood lumber industry.

The Craig/Baucus legislation that I am supporting today amends the Tariff Act of 1930 to clarify that countervailing duties should be added into the cost of production as it reflects the true cost of production by offsetting subsidies. This provision will rectify the problem of undervalued dumping duties and make U.S. trade policies consistent with those of our trading partners, such as Canada and the European Union.

Adopting this clarification should have an immediate market impact. With the correction of the current problem, Canadian mills would face the prospect of paying considerably higher antidumping rates if the lumber market remains at the current low level. This legislation should demonstrate the resolve of the U.S. government to reach a fair and permanent solution to the softwood lumber trade case by increasing the risk to Canadian companies if a negotiated settlement is not reached. The Canadian lumber industry and its governments must realize that the U.S. will continue to impose the required duty offsets until the subsidies and dumping stop.

I commend the Department of Commerce for their diligent work on the softwood lumber case with Canada and cannot urge our U.S. trade negotiators strongly enough to reach a settlement with Canada just as soon as possible before we have yet another U.S. mill close its doors for good. The subsidized and dumped lumber from Canada has been devastating to my State of Maine, where sawmills continue to close their doors for good, affecting entire rural communities where these businesses are located, and where the mills are often the major source of good paying jobs in these areas.

Moreover, if a negotiated settlement is not reached, I believe that the U.S. should vigorously pursue the litigation with the World Trade Organization, WTO, especially since the WTO has already found that Canada has an actionable subsidy, meaning duties will be imposed until provinces allow the market to determine the price of timber rather than provincial governments.

Again, this legislation being offered today by Senators from all regions of the country provides a much needed clarification of U.S. trade law, in keeping with those of Canada and the European Union, that will greatly help the U.S. softwood lumber industry out of its current economic crisis that has been caused by subsidized, underpriced imports, and I urge the support of my colleagues.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I support the efforts of the Department of Commerce and United States Trade Representative to negotiate a fair trade agreement with Canada. We have a very important trading relationship with Canada. They are America's strongest trading partner, and I hope we can continue strengthening that relationship. However, Canada subsidizes its lumber mills, and those mills are dumping lumber in our domestic market. This has a devastating effect on the lumber industry in America, particularly in Mississippi where mills are closing each month.

Currently, the Department of Commerce has imposed a countervailing duty to offset the injury to our market. Canadian mills must pay a 29 percent duty on top of the cost of producing their lumber. To arrive at that duty rate, the Department of Commerce calculates what it costs Canadian lumber producers to process their lumber. In fact, a U.S. statute, §19 U.S.C. 1677, states that duties should be considered a cost of production incurred on shipments to the United States.

Today, Senators CRAIG, BAUCUS, BURNS, MILLER, CRAPO, LOTT, SESSIONS, SNOWE, COLLINS, LINCOLN, and I introduced a bill to clarify the law so that there is no misunderstanding of the rules under which the Department of Commerce calculates the duties imposed on illegally subsidized Canadian lumber. This recalculation would raise the price it costs Canadians to produce their lumber and would allow the Department of Commerce to raise the current 29 percent duty. The practice of subsidizing and dumping must be taken seriously.

I am hopeful that the recent trips by the U.S. Government to Canada can result in honest and fruitful negotiations leading to a fair lumber trading agreement. It is in the best interest of both of our countries that we reach an agreement. In my State, lumber is one of our most valuable agricultural products.

For years the mills in my state have endured unfair trading practices. Now that the U.S. is finally imposing duties to offset the injury to these mills, the Canadians are simply incorporating the duties into their cost of doing business. On behalf of the few remaining lumber mills in Mississippi I urge the Department of Commerce to uphold existing trade laws by counting duties as a cost.

By Mr. FITZGERALD:

S. 220. A bill to reinstate and extend the deadline for commencement of construction of a hydroelectric project in the State of Illinois; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill to reinstate a license surrendered to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, FERC, that authorized the construction of a hydroelectric power plant in Carlyle, IL. In order to facilitate the construction of the hydroelectric power plant, the bill also contains a provision that extends the deadline for beginning construction of the plant.

Carlyle, IL, is a small community of 3,406 people in Southwestern Illinois, fifty miles east of St. Louis. Carlyle is situated on the Kaskaskia River at the southern tip of Carlyle Lake, which was formed in 1967 when the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers completed construction of a dam on the river. Carlyle Lake is 15 miles long and 3.5 miles wide, the largest man-made lake in Illinois.

When the Army Corps of Engineers constructed the dam, it failed to build a hydroelectric power plant to capitalize on the energy available from water flowing through the dam. A hydroelectric power facility in Carlyle would produce 4,000 kilowatts of power and provide a renewable energy source for surrounding communities. Furthermore, the environmental impact of adding a hydroelectric facility would be minimal, and such a facility, located at a site near the existing dam, would not produce harmful emissions.

In 1997, Southwestern Electric Cooperative obtained a license from the FERC to begin work on a hydroelectric project in Carlyle. In 2000, Southwestern Electric Cooperative surrendered their license because they were unable to begin the project in the required time period. The City of Carlyle is interested in constructing the hydroelectric power plant and is seeking to obtain Southwestern Electric Cooperative's license.

The bill I am introducing today is required for the construction of the facility. Legislation is necessary to authorize FERC to reinstate Southwestern Electric Cooperative's surrendered license. Because there is not enough time remaining on the license to conduct studies, produce a design for the facility, and begin construction of the project, the bill includes a provision that allows FERC to extend the applicable deadline.

The full Senate passed this bill, during the 107th Congress, on November 20, 2002 without opposition, but, the House of Representatives was unable to act on this legislation before the 107th Congress adjourned.

This legislation is an easy and environmentally safe approach to meeting the energy needs of Southwestern Illinois. Please join me in supporting this measure to provide a clean alternative energy source for this part of the Midwest.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 220

Notwithstanding the time period specified in section 13 of the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 806) that would otherwise apply to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission project numbered 11214, the Commission may, at the request of the licensee for the project, and after reasonable notice, in accordance with the good faith, due diligence, and public interest requirements of that section and the Commission's procedures under that section—

(1) reinstate the license for the construction of the project as of the effective date of the surrender of the license; and

(2) extend the time period during which the licensee is required to commence the construction of the project for 3 consecutive 2-year periods beyond the date that is 4 years after the date of issuance of the license.

By Mr. FEINGOLD (for himself and Mr. MILLER):

S. 221. A bill to amend the Communications Act of 1934 to facilitate an increase in programming and content on radio that is locally and independently produced, to facilitate competition in radio programming, radio advertising, and concerts, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise today to re-introduce legislation that will promote competition in the radio and concert industries.

This legislation will begin to address many of the concerns that I have heard from my constituents regarding the concentration of ownership in the radio and concert industry and its effect on consumers, artists, local businesses, and ticket prices.

Last year, I introduced this same legislation, and with the help of a wide range of organizations and other Senators, we put this issue on the front and center in Congress. I am pleased that a number of Committees are looking at this issue and considering holding hearings in the coming weeks.

With these hearings coming up, I want once again to bring this proposal to my colleagues attention. And as the Committee process works itself forward, I expect that we will discover additional issues to address that will strengthen the provisions in my legislation.

But this legislation is where Congress should begin its efforts to promote competition, diversity, and localism in radio.

I love radio. But, over the last year, I have learned that concentration of ownership in the radio and concert industry has made it difficult for individuals, artists, and organizations to find outlets to express their creativity and promote diversity.

Music and local news carried over the radio can help society to consider some of the most serious issues affecting our Nation: issues like war and peace, issues like social justice.

If the already diminishing number of gatekeepers of radio content chooses not to air controversial music because it may turn off advertisers, one of the most universal mediums to engage in dialogue will be lost. Regardless of our point of view, we must retain the ability of radio to show the diverse range of voices that form our culture.

I have heard many stories about the effects of this concentration. But perhaps the most compelling was at the annual Congressional Black Caucus event last year, when two people who have been involved in radio for decades told me about the real life importance of diversity in radio.

They spoke about the importance of the locally-owned media that helped raise public awareness of the campaign of the late Harold Washington to become the first black mayor of Chicago. They said that the main avenue for many in the central city to hear about the campaign was through locally-owned radio stations.

If an out-of-State corporation controlled the programming of these radio stations, would this political pioneer have received the same coverage?

I have also heard a great deal from religious organizations about how consolidation harms their ability to reach out in their communities. They have said that we must get to the root of the problem by curbing anti-competitive practices that make it difficult for locally-owned, independent radio stations to prosper.

I also learned about the story of Everett Parker, who during the civil rights movement of the 1960s was a pioneering defender of public interest in broadcasting.

In Dr. Parker's most famous crusade, he and the United Church of Christ went to Jackson, MS, to challenge the license renewals of stations that were blocking coverage of the civil rights movement, even though African-Americans constituted almost half of the audience.

By failing to cover the civil rights movement, the station failed all of the citizens of Jackson by limiting access to information on issues of public importance.

So, joining with the local NAACP, the group went to the Federal Communications Commission and challenged the licenses of the Jackson stations. The case went all the way to the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, which took away the station's license.

What makes this case so significant is that it established the right of any American to petition the Commission, instead of limiting such petitions to commercial interests.

The radio airwaves continued to be owned by the public. Radio is a public medium. It must serve the public good.

We must promote localism and diversity on our airwaves and crack down on anti-competitive practices that are a result of concentration in the radio and concert industry.

We must address negative consequences of the 1996 Telecommunications Act, which opened the floodgates for consolidation and led to anti-consumer and anti-competitive practices.

Just consider how the rise in ticket prices coincided with the passage of the Telecommunications Act. Following the passage of the Act, and the resulting consolidation of the radio and concert industry, ticket prices went through the roof!

Before the passage of the 1996 Act, ticket prices were increasing at a rate slightly higher than the Consumer Price Index. Following the Telecommunications Act of 1996, however, ticket prices have increased at a rate almost 50 percentage points higher than the Consumer Price Index. From 1996 to 2001, concert ticket prices rose by more than 61 percent, while the Consumer Price Index increased by just 13 percent.

During the debate of the 1996 Act, I joined a number of my colleagues in opposing the deregulation of radio ownership rules because of concerns about its effect on consumers, artists, independent radio stations, and local communities.

Passage of this Act was an unfortunate example of the influence of soft money in the political process. I have consistently said that this Act was bought and paid for by soft money, by unlimited contributions by corporations, unions and wealthy individuals to the political parties. Everyone was at the table, except for the consumers.

That's why I am pleased to re-introduce this legislation, the Competition in Radio and Concert Industries Act, which would reduce the levels of concentration and curb some of these anti-competitive practices.

My legislation prohibits those who own radio stations and concert promotion services or venues from leveraging their cross-ownership to hinder competition in the industry. For example, if an owner of a radio station and a promotion service hinders access to the airwaves of a rival promoter or artist, then the owner would be subject to penalties.

My legislation will also help to curb the concentration that leads to these anti-competitive practices.

It would strengthen the FCC merger review process by requiring the FCC to scrutinize the mergers of any radio station ownership group that reaches more than 60% of the nation.

My legislation would also curb consolidation on the local level by preventing any upward revision of the limitation on multiple ownership of radio stations in local markets.

The bill would also prohibit the current shakedown system, where the big radio corporations are said to leverage their market power to require payments from artists in exchange for playing their songs. And it would also close a loophole that allows large radio ownership companies to exceed the cap by "warehousing stations" through a third party. In these cases, they control the station through a third party, but the stations are not counted against their local ownership cap.

Songs and ideas should not be broadcast on the radio based on how much money has changed hands. Airplay should be based on good songs and good ideas what the local audience wants to hear.

My legislation would slow the levels of concentration and address a number of concerns that I have heard from artists and others, although it does not address all the issues facing our communities.

Over the coming months, I hope that my colleagues will give this issue their attention, both on the floor and in committee.

I urge my colleagues to cosponsor this legislation so that we can work together to restore competition to the radio and concert industry by putting independent radio stations, local concert promoters, and artists on a level playing field.

People should have choices, listeners should have a diversity of options, and Americans should be able to hear new and different voices. Radio allows us to connect to our communities, to our culture, and to our democracy. It is one of the most vibrant mediums we have for the exchange of ideas, and for artistic expression. We must fight to preserve it, and together I believe we can do just that.

Radio is a public medium, and we must ensure that it serves the public good. That's a democratic vision of American radio well worth fighting for.

By Mr. KYL (for himself and Mr. MCCAIN):

S. 222. A bill to approve the settlement of the water rights claims of the Zuni Indian Tribe in Apache County, Arizona, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, on behalf of Senator MCCAIN and myself I am introducing legislation today that would codify the settlement of the Zuni Indian Tribe's water rights for its religious lands in northeastern Arizona. Congress first recognized the importance of these lands in 1984 when it created the Zuni Heaven Reservation, Pub. L. 98-498, as amended by Pub. Law No. 101-486, 1990. For nearly a century, the small communities upstream from this Reservation have fully-appropriated the water from Little Colorado River for use in their homes and on their fields. Yet the Zuni Tribe asserted that it would need water to restore and use its Reservation lands. The prospect of dividing the limited water of the Little Colorado River with still another user created great uncertainty. To resolve that uncertainty and to avoid expensive and protracted litigation, the Zuni Tribe, the United States on behalf of the Zuni Tribe, the State of Arizona, including the Arizona Game and Fish Commission, the Arizona State Land Department, and the Arizona State Parks Board, and the major water users in this area of Arizona negotiated for many years to produce a water settlement that is acceptable to all parties.

This bill would provide the Zuni Tribe with the resources and protections necessary to acquire water rights from willing sellers and to restore and protect the wetland environment that the Zuni Tribe previously used. In return, the Zuni Tribe would waive its claim in the Little Colorado River Adjudication. In addition, the Zuni Tribe would, among other things, grandfather existing water uses and waive claims against many future water uses in the Little Colorado River basin. In summary, with this bill, the Zuni Tribe can achieve its needs for the Zuni Heaven Reservation while avoiding a disruption to local water users and industry. Furthermore, the United States can avoid litigating water rights and damage claims and satisfy its trust responsibilities to the Tribe regarding water for the Reservation. The parties have worked many years to reach consensus and I believe this bill would produce a fair result to all.

This legislation unanimously passed the Senate in the 107th Congress. Unfortunately, the House of Representatives adjourned and was unable to take action on the bill. We hope for its swift passage in the 108th Congress.

By Mrs. FEINSTEIN (for herself, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. CORZINE, and Mr. GREGG):

S. 223. A bill to prevent identity theft, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise, along with Senator GRASSLEY, Senator CORZINE, and Senator GREGG to introduce the Identity Theft Prevention Act.

This bill addresses the growing tide of identity theft cases by requiring banks, credit bureaus, and other financial institutions to take some practical steps to protect sensitive personal information.

What is identity theft? Identity theft occurs when one person uses another person's Social Security number, birth date, driver's license number, or other identifying information to obtain credit cards, car loans, phone plans or other services in the victim's name.

The criminal literally assumes the identity of the victim for illicit gain.

Identity theft has become the number one white collar crime of the new millennium, and Congress needs to make a major effort to protect Americans' personal information.

Hundreds of thousands of Americans are victimized by identity theft each year.

The personal losses as a result of these crimes are major. The average financial loss from an identity theft case is $17,000 and it takes a typical victim 18 months to restore his or her good credit.

In some cases, victims are falsely saddled with criminal records or are denied loans and other valuable financial services.

Identity theft is frighteningly easy to commit. One of my constituents, Kim Bradbury of Castro Valley, knows this too well. Kim reported that an identity thief obtained a credit card in her name through the Internet in less than 60 seconds. The false application only had her Social Security number and birth date correct.

Kim only found out she was an identity theft victim when a representative of a telemarketing company called her at home while she was feeding her one-year child. The representative told her that someone with a different address had applied for a credit card in Kim's name.

In Kim's case, it appears that her Social Security number was stolen by a fellow employee who also had stolen the identities of several dozen company employees. The thief ultimately stole over $100,000 in merchandise, including 20 cell phone accounts, via identity fraud.

All indicators suggest that the crime continues to grow at an alarming rate.

Just two months ago, Federal prosecutors announced the largest single identity theft case in U.S. history. Three individuals allegedly sold the credit and personal information of 30,000 people.

At one national credit reporting agency, consumers requested 53 percent more fraud alerts in fiscal year 2001 than fiscal year 2000.

As of December 2001, the Federal Trade Commission, FTC, Identity Theft Clearinghouse averaged more than 3,000 call-ins per week, a seven-fold increase since the clearinghouse began operation in November 1999.

The Identity Theft Prevention Act offers a series of practical steps to cut-off criminal access to sensitive consumer data.

No. 1, Credit card number truncation on receipts: first, the Identity Theft Prevention Act would require all new credit-card machines to truncate any credit card number printed on a customer receipt.

Thus, when a store gives a customer a receipt from a credit card purchase, only the last five digits of the credit card number will show.

This prevents identity thieves from stealing credit card numbers by retrieving discarded receipts.

Existing machines would have to be reprogrammed to truncate credit card numbers on receipts within four years after enactment of the legislation.

No. 2, Fraud alerts: the bill would give the Federal Trade Commission the authority to impose a fine on credit issuers who issue new credit to identity thieves despite the presence of a fraud alert on the consumer's credit file.

Too many credit card issuers are granting new cards without adequately verifying the identity of the applicant. Putting some teeth into fraud alerts will curb irresponsible granting of credit.

No. 3, Free credit reports: third, the legislation would entitle each consumer to one free credit report per year. Currently six States, Colorado, Georgia, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, and Vermont, have laws entitling consumers to one free credit report per year from the national credit bureaus.

According to identity theft victim advocates, identity theft is detected much earlier if consumers actively monitor their credit files. The cost of credit reports is a major obstacle to their use by consumers.

No. 4, Change of address: finally, the bill requires a credit card company to notify consumers when an additional credit card is requested on an existing credit account within 30 days of an address change request.

This provision addresses a common method of identity fraud where a criminal steals an individual's credit card number, and then obtains a duplicate card by informing the issuer of a change of address.

The Identity Theft Prevention Act requires financial institutions to implement needed precautions to prevent identity fraud and protect a person's good name.

Verifying a credit applicant's address, complying with "fraud alerts", and truncating credit numbers on receipts are all measures that will make it harder for criminals to engage in identity fraud.

It is appropriate and necessary for financial institutions to take these steps. These companies have a responsibility to prevent fraudsters from using their services to harm the good name of other citizens.

Moreover, in this complex, information-driven society, consumers simply can't protect their good name on their own.

I strongly believe this legislation will provide desperately needed tools to combat identity theft, and I look forward to working with my colleagues to secure its passage.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of this legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 223

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Identity Theft Prevention Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) the crime of identity theft has become one of the major law enforcement challenges of the new economy, as vast quantities of sensitive, personal information are now vulnerable to criminal interception and misuse;

(2) in November 2002, Americans were alerted to the dangers of identity theft when Federal prosecutors announced that 3 individuals had allegedly sold the credit and personal information of 30,000 people, the largest single identity theft case in United States history;

(3) hundreds of thousands of Americans are victims of identity theft each year, resulting in an annual cost to industry of more than $3,500,000,000.

(4) several indicators reveal that despite increased public awareness of the crime, the number of incidents of identity theft continues to rise;

(5) in December 2001, the Federal Trade Commission received an average of more than 3,000 identity theft calls per week, a 700 percent increase since the Identity Theft Data Clearinghouse began operation in November 1999;

(6) allegations of social security number fraud increased by 500 percent between 1998 and 2001, from 11,000 to 65,000;

(7) a national credit reporting agency reported that consumer requests for fraud alerts increased by 53 percent during fiscal year 2001;

(8) identity theft violates the privacy of American citizens and ruins their good names;

(9) victims of identity theft may suffer restricted access to credit and diminished employment opportunities, and may spend years repairing the damage to credit histories caused by identity theft;

(10) businesses and government agencies that handle sensitive personal information of consumers have a responsibility to protect this information from identity thieves; and

(11) the private sector can better protect consumers by implementing effective fraud alerts, affording greater consumer access to credit reports, truncating of credit card numbers, and establishing other prevention measures.

By Mr. BIDEN (for himself, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. LIEBERMAN, and Mrs. FEINSTEIN):

S. 226. A bill to prohibit an individual from knowingly opening, maintaining, managing controlling, renting, leasing, making available for use, or profiting from any place for the purpose of manufacturing, distributing, or using any controlled substance, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I rise today, along with my good friend, the senior Senator from Iowa, Senator GRASSLEY, to introduce the Illicit Drug Anti-Proliferation Act. This legislation arises out of a hearing Senator GRASSLEY and I held in the Senate Caucus on International Narcotics Control in December 2001 on the proliferation of Ecstasy and other club drugs generally, and the role of some promoters of all-night dance parties, known as “raves”, in distributing Ecstasy to young people. Our bill provides Federal prosecutors the tools needed to combat the manufacture, distribution or use of any controlled substance at any venue whose purpose is to engage in illegal narcotics activity. Rather than create a new law, our bill merely amends a well-established statute to make clear that anyone who knowingly and intentionally uses their property, or allows another person to use their property, for the purpose of distributing or manufacturing or using illegal drugs can be held accountable, regardless of whether the drug use is ongoing or occurs at a single event.

While my legislation is aimed at the defendant's predatory behavior, regardless of the type of drug or the particular place in which it is being used or distributed, one problem that we are facing currently involves so-called “club drugs” and raves. According to a report which the Partnership for a Drug Free America will release in the near future, teens who report attending a rave are seven times more likely to have tried Ecstasy than teens who report not attending a rave. I find this statistic quite troubling.

Despite the conventional wisdom that Ecstasy and other club drugs are “no big deal,” a view that even the New York Times Magazine espoused in a cover story, these drugs can have serious consequences, and can even be fatal. Just last month we got some encouraging news: after years of steady increase, Ecstasy use is finally beginning to decrease among teens. That said, the rate of use remains unacceptably high and we still have quite a bit of work to do to counter the widespread misconception that Ecstasy is harmless, fashionable and hip.

At the Drug Caucus hearing, witnesses testified that rogue rave organizers commonly go to great lengths to portray their events as safe so that parents will allow their kids to attend. They advertise their parties as alcohol-free events and some even hire off-duty police officers to patrol outside the venue. But the truth is that some of these raves are drug dens where use of Ecstasy and other “club drugs”, such as the date rape drugs Rohypnol, GHB and Ketamine, is widespread.

But even as these promoters work to make parents think that their events are safe, they send a different message to kids. Their promotional flyers make clear that drugs are an integral part of the party by prominently featuring terms associated with drug use, such as the letters “E” or “X”—street terms for Ecstasy, or the term “rollin’”, which refers to an Ecstasy high. They are, in effect, promoting Ecstasy along with the rave.

By doing so, unscrupulous promoters get rich as they exploit and endanger kids. Some supplement their profits from the $10 to $50 cover charge to enter the club by selling popular Ecstasy paraphernalia such as baby pacifiers, glow sticks, or mentholated inhalers. And predatory party organizers know that Ecstasy raises the core body temperature and makes the user extremely thirsty, so they sell bottles of water for $5 or $10 apiece. Some even shut off the water faucets so club goers will be forced to buy water or pay admission to enter an air-conditioned “cool down room.”

After the death of a 17-year-old girl at a rave party in New Orleans in 1998, the Drug Enforcement Administration conducted an assessment of rave activity in that city which showed the close relationship between these parties and club drug overdoses. In a two year period, 52 raves were held at the New Orleans State Palace Theater, during which time approximately 400 teenagers overdosed and were treated at local emergency rooms. Following “Operation Rave Review” which resulted in the arrest of several rave promoters and closing the city's largest rave, overdoses and emergency room visits dropped by 90 percent and Ecstasy overdoses were eliminated.

State and local governments have begun to take important steps to crack down on rave promoters who allow their events to be used as havens for illicit drug activity. In Chicago, where Mayor Daley has shown great leadership on this issue, it is a criminal offense to knowingly maintain a place, such as a rave, where controlled substances are used or distributed. Not only the promoter, but also the building owner and building manager can be charged under Mayor Daley's law. The State of Florida has a similar statute making such activity a felony.

And in Modesto, California, police officers are offering "rave training classes" to parents to educate them about the dangers associated with some raves and the club drugs often associated with them.

At the Federal level, there have been four cases in which Federal prosecutors have used the so called "crack house statute" or other Federal charges to go after rogue rave promoters. These cases, in Little Rock, AR, Boise, ID, Panama City, FL, and New Orleans, LA, have had mixed results, culminating in two wins, a loss and a draw, suggesting that there may be a need to tailor this Federal statute more precisely to the problem at hand. As a result, last session I proposed legislation which would do just that. I am reintroducing it today and I am pleased to have Senator GRASSLEY once again as the lead cosponsor. I might note that the legislation is also included in the Democratic leadership crime bill.

After I introduced this legislation last year, a great deal of misinformation began circulating about it. I want to make the record clear. Simply stated, my bill provides technical corrections to an existing statute, one which has been on the books for 16 years and is well established.

Critics of my bill have asserted that if the legislation were to become law "there would be no way that someone could hold a concert and not be liable" and that the bill "holds the owners and the promoters responsible for the actions of the patrons." That is simply untrue. We know that there will always be certain people who will bring drugs into musical or other events and use them without the knowledge or permission of the promoter or club owner. This is not the type of activity that my bill would address. The purpose of my legislation is not to prosecute legitimate law-abiding managers of stadiums, arenas, performing arts centers, licensed beverage facilities and other venues because of incidental drug use at their events. In fact, when crafting this legislation, I took steps to ensure that it did not capture such cases. My bill would help in the prosecution of rogue promoters who not only know that there is drug use at their event but also hold the event for the purpose of illegal drug use or distribution. That is quite a high bar.

I ask unanimous consent that a letter from the Coalition of Licensed Beverage Associations, COLBA, be printed at the end of my statement. COLBA, who initially expressed concerns that my bill would make their members liable for the actions of their patrons, has endorsed my legislation because they realized that my bill was not aimed at responsible party promoters.

I am confident that the overwhelming majority of promoters are decent, law abiding people who are going to discourage drug use, or any other illegal activity, at their venues. But there are a few promoters out there who are taking steps to profit from drug activity at their events. Some of these folks actually distribute drugs themselves or have their staff distribute drugs, get kickbacks from drug sales at their events, have thinly veiled drug messages on their promotional flyers, tell their security to ignore drug use or sales, or send patients who need medical attention because of a drug overdose to a hospital across town so that people won't link emergency room visits with their club. What they are doing is illegal under current law. My bill would not change that fact. Let me be clear. Neither current law nor my bill seeks to punish a promoter for the behavior of their patrons. As I mentioned, the underlying crack house statute has been on the books since 1986, and I am unaware of this statute ever being used to prosecute a legitimate business.

The legislation simply amends the current "crack house statute" in two minor ways. First, it clarifies that Congress intended for the law to apply not just to ongoing drug distribution operations, but to "single-event" activities, such as a party where the promoter sponsors the event with the purpose of distributing Ecstasy or other illegal drugs. After all, a drug dealer can be arrested and prosecuted for selling one bag of drugs, and the government need not show that the dealer is selling day after day, or to multiple sellers. Likewise, the bill clarifies that a "one-time" event where the promoter knowingly distributes Ecstasy over the course of an evening, for example, violates the statute the same as a crack house which is in operation over a period of time. Second, the bill makes the law apply to outdoor as well as indoor venues, such as where a rogue rave promoter uses a field to hold a rave for the purpose of distributing a controlled substance. Those are the only changes the bill makes to the crack house statute. It does not give the Federal Government sweeping new powers as the detractors have asserted.

Critics of the bill have also claimed that it would provide a disincentive for promoters to take steps to protect the public health of their patrons including providing water or air conditioned rooms, making sure that there is an ambulance on the premises, etc. That is not my intention. And to underscore that fact, I plan to remove the findings, which is the only place in the bill where these items are mentioned, from the bill. Certainly there are legitimate reasons for selling water, having a room where people can cool down after dancing, or having an ambulance on hand. Clearly, the presence of any of these things is not enough to signify that an event is "for the purpose of" drug use.

The reason that I introduced this bill was not to ban dancing, kill the "rave scene" or silence electronic music, all things of which I have been accused.

Although this legislation grew out of testimony I heard at a number of hearings about the problems identified at raves, the criminal and civil penalties in the bill would also apply to people who promoted any type of event for the purpose of drug use or distribution. If rave promoters and sponsors operate such events as they are so often advertised as places for people to come dance in a safe, drug-free environment then they have nothing to fear from this law. In no way is this bill aimed at stifling any type of music or expression it is only trying to deter illicit drug use and protect kids.

Last year people criticized the bill's title, the "RAVE Act", because they thought it was unfairly targeting raves. Although I do not believe that I was unfairly targeting anybody, I have changed the title to the "Illicit Drug Anti-Proliferation Act of 2003."

In addition to amending the crack house statute, the legislation also addresses the low penalties for trafficking gamma hydroxybutyric acid, GHB, by directing the United States Sentencing Commission to examine the current penalties and consider increasing them to reflect the seriousness of offenses involving GHB. Currently, GHB penalties are simply too low. In order to get five years for a GHB offense, you have to have more than 13 gallons of the drug, equivalent to 100,000 doses and a street value of about $1 million. According to the DEA, big-time GHB dealers distribute approximately one gallon quantities of the drug, the penalty for which is currently only between 15 and 21 months. These cases simply aren't being prosecuted at the Federal level because the penalties are so low. The Sentencing Commission needs to take a look at this problem and consider raising the penalties for this dangerous drug.

But the answer to the problem of drug use at raves is not simply to prosecute irresponsible rave promoters and those who distribute drugs. There is also a responsibility to raise awareness among parents, teachers, students, coaches, religious leaders, etc. about the dangers of the drugs used and sold at raves. The DEA is already doing some of this through its club drug awareness campaign, where DEA agents are holding conferences with local women legislators to get information out about the dangers of these substances. The legislation provides funds to the DEA to continue this important work. Further, the bill authorizes nearly $6 million for the DEA to hire a Demand Reduction Coordinator in each state who can work with communities following the arrest of a significant local trafficker to reduce the demand for drugs through prevention and treatment programs.

It is the unfortunate truth that some raves are havens for illicit drugs. Enacting the Illicit Drug Anti-Proliferation Act will help to prosecute the promoters who seek to profit from exploiting and endangering young lives and will take steps to educate youth, parents and other interested adults about the dangers of Ecstasy and other club drugs associated with raves.

I hope that my colleagues will join me and support this legislation.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COALITION OF LICENSED BEVERAGE
Alexandria, VA, October 15, 2002.

Senator JOE BIDEN,
Chairman, Senate Judiciary Committee, Hart
Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Coalition of Licensed Beverage Associations (COLBA) is a national association representing the interests of private-sector licensed beverage retailers who sell and serve alcohol beverages. COLBA represents both on-premise and off-premise alcohol beverage licensees. It is dedicated to preserving States' rights to ensure legal sales of alcohol to persons of legal-consumption age to maintaining high standards for the retail sale of alcohol.

Like you, Mr. Chairman, COLBA members have become increasingly concerned with the trafficking and use of the drug Ecstasy. As you know, much of the abuse of Ecstasy and other club drugs happens at all-night dance parties known as "raves." Rave organizers often go to great lengths to portray their events as safe, alcohol-free parties in order to persuade parents to allow their children to attend. Such events tend to reflect negatively on the legitimate licensed beverage industry and its many small businesses.

COLBA supports state and local government's efforts to crack down on rave promoters who allow their events to be used as havens for illicit drug activity. COLBA also supports your effort to strengthen the current statutes to provide law enforcement and prosecutors with the tools necessary to bring a halt to this activity.

Initially COLBA had concerns about your legislation effort and felt that if it were to become law any concert or special event holder would be held liable for incidental drug use. There was a misconception in the industry that the bill would hold the owners and the promoters of non-rave events responsible for the actions of the patrons.

However, it is the understanding of COLBA that the purpose of the Rave Act legislation is not to prosecute legitimate law-abiding managers of stadiums, arenas, performing arts centers, licensed beverage facilities and other venues due to incidental drug use at their events. The purpose of the Rave Act is the prosecution of rogue promoters who not only know that there is illegal drug use at their event, but also hold the event for the purpose of illegal drug use or distribution.

In light of this clarification by your gracious and dedicate staff, the Coalition now understand the intent of your legislative effort and fully supports the passage of the Rave Act. Please feel free to contact me if you need any additional information or if I can be of any further assistance.

Respectfully,

DAVID S. GERMROTH,
Washington Representative.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my colleague Senator BIDEN today in introducing the Illicit Drug Anti-Proliferation Act. This is a continuation of an effort he and I spearheaded last year to update our laws so they can continue to be used effectively against drug dealers who are pushing drugs on our kids.

As drug dealers discover new drugs and new methods of pushing their poison, we must make sure our legal system is adequately structured to react appropriately. I believe this legislation does that.

Our proposal will modify the existing crack house statute so that its jurisdiction over temporary events, such as raves, would be more clear. And although this legislation grew out of the problems identified at raves, the criminal and civil penalties in the bill would also apply to people who promoted any type of event for the purpose of drug use or distribution. Illegal drug use in any location should not be tolerated, regardless of what cover activity is created to hide the transaction.

This said, I want to emphasize that our legislation should in no way hamper the activities of legitimate event promoters. I realize that drugs are not widely available at all raves or other events open to the public. And I know that my colleagues Senator BIDEN is just as aware as I am that drug use occurs at events without the knowledge or endorsement of the event promoters. This legislation should not affect the activities of legitimate event promoters. In no way is our bill aimed at stifling any type of music or public expression, it is only trying to deter illicit drug use and protect kids.

The sale of illicit narcotics, whether on a street corner here in Washington, D.C., or a warehouse in Des Moines, IA, must be confronted and halted wherever possible. One of the new, "trendy" illicit narcotics is Ecstasy—an especially popular club drug that is all too often being sold at all-night dance parties, or raves. Ecstasy is an illegal drug that has extremely dangerous side effects.

In general, Ecstasy raises the heart rate to dangerous levels, and in some cases the heart will stop. It also causes severe dehydration, a condition that is exacerbated by the high levels of physical exertion that happens at raves. Users must constantly drink water in an attempt to cool off—a fact that some unscrupulous event promoters take advantage of by charging exorbitant fees for bottles of water, after cutting off water to drinking fountains and rest room sinks.

Too often, Ecstasy users collapse and die because their bodies overheat. And even those who survive the short-term effects of Ecstasy use can look forward to long-term problems such as depression, paranoia, and confusion, as scientists have learned that Ecstasy causes irreversible changes to the brain.

Many young people perceive Ecstasy as harmless and it is wrongly termed a recreational or "kid-friendly" drug. This illegal substance does real damage to real lives. Although targeted at teenagers and young adults, its use has spread to the middle-aged population and rural areas, including my own

State of Iowa. Ninety percent of all drug treatment and law enforcement experts say that Ecstasy is readily accessible in this country. We cannot continue to allow easy access to this drug or ignore the consequences of its use.

That is why I believe it is important that we update the laws that have been effectively used to shut down crack houses so they can go after temporary events used as a cover to sell drugs. It is important to remember that this legislation builds upon an existing statute, with existing case law, and therefore existing standards of how it is to be implemented. The existing statute has been used to go after landlords who "knowingly and intentionally" let their property be used for illegal narcotics activities. It has not, nor should it be used, to take action against every landlord of every property where drug activity takes place.

Similarly, the expansion of authorities created by this legislation is designed to target promoters who "knowingly and intentionally" allow drug use at their events. This is a high standard that should protect event promoters from casual application of this statute. Clearly, taking steps to reduce or eliminate drug use at an event, such as the posting of signs or through zero-tolerance instructions to security personnel, are not actions that would be taken by someone who would intentionally allow drug use to occur at an event.

I believe an event promoter does have some responsibility for what goes on at an event that they create. Particularly if they knowingly create an event for the purpose of buying, using, keeping, or selling drugs. While not common, there have been court cases which have been able to reach this high standard of proof. Using 21 U.S.C. 856, more popularly known as the "crack house" statute, law enforcement has arrested drug dealers who hosted raves and other dance events as a cover to push their product. Four cases have been brought to Federal court, with mixed results—mostly because the applicability of current law is unclear.

This legislation is an important step, but a careful one. Our future rests with the young people of this great nation and America is at risk. Ecstasy has shown itself to be a formidable threat and we must confront it on all fronts, not only through law enforcement but education and treatment as well. I hope my colleagues will join us in supporting this legislation, and help us work towards its quick passage.

By Mrs. FEINSTEIN (for herself and Mr. REID):

S. 227. A bill to amend the Higher Education Act of 1965 to extend loan forgiveness for certain loans to certified or licensed teachers, to provide for grants that promote teacher certification and licensing, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce this bill with Senator HARRY REID to increase the maximum loan cancellation amount available to credentialed teachers from $5,000 to $10,000.

Educational research is clear: the single most important contributor to raising student achievement is having well-trained, high-caliber teachers in the classroom. And yet, far too many of our Nations' students are being taught by teachers who are not fully credentialed.

This is especially true in low-income communities, where 22 percent of the teachers do not have credentials, more than 10 times the rate in wealthy communities.

Because good teachers can make such a positive difference in the classroom, the "No Child Left Behind Act," signed by President Bush last year, requires States to ensure that all teachers in our public schools are "highly qualified" by the 2005-2006 school year. This benchmark, which I believe was long overdue, is one that I applaud and was pleased to support last Congress.

And while we have taken a bold first step by committing that our children will receive quality education from a licensed teacher, our work is far from over.

We must now strengthen our commitment by helping States look for new ways to reach prospective teachers and build quality into their teacher preparation and development programs.

Nationwide, it is estimated that approximately 2 million new teachers will need to be hired by 2009.

This statistic, combined with the reality that roughly 200,000 veteran teachers will need to get their teaching certificate by the 2005 school year or lose their ability to teach, makes it clear that States have an ambitious requirement to fulfill in a short amount of time.

But many States and school districts argue that they lack the resources necessary to fulfill these mandates on their own.

The gravity of this problem is vividly depicted in California, where at least 300,000 new teachers will need to be hired and credentialed by 2008 to replace retirees and to accommodate the projected population growth at a time when the State is experiencing a drastic budget shortfall. All of this must happen during a time when the State is experiencing drastic budget shortfalls. The California State Board of Education projects that all of these changes will cost $6 billion.

The $6 billion price tag does not include the costs associated with credentialing 32,000 emergency credentialed teachers, which is 11 percent of California's entire workforce, by the 2005 school year. This task alone would cost California $365 million.

And none of these cost-estimates take into account the cost of credentialing teachers in other States with high percentages of the teaching work force not fully credentialed.

While I strongly believe that States need to be held accountable for ensuring that all teachers are fully credentialed. But I also recognize that in order for States to meet this Federal mandate on time, many may need guidance and support from the Federal Government.

This is not just a matter of holding those in the local school district or the local schoolhouse accountable; it is also a question of holding those in positions of public trust from the schoolhouse up to the statehouse, and to the U.S. Capitol, too, accountable for making sure that the job gets done.

I believe that this bill takes a good first step in doing just that by creating a balance between State and Federal accountability and addressing two obstacles confronting school districts as they prepare for the 2005 academic year: lack of incentives to lure teachers into teacher credentialing programs early and lack of resources available to teaching institutions to improve and build upon their credentialing curriculum.

I believe that the Federal Government should recognize the value of having a qualified teacher in a low income classroom by enhancing the loan cancellation benefits of credentialed teachers.

Current law allows teachers to receive up to $5,000 of their student loans to be forgiven in exchange for 5 years of teaching in a low-income school. Unfortunately, few teachers have taken advantage of this program because of the low loan cancellation amount available to them in comparison to the length of service required for eligibility.

To encourage recent graduates of teacher licensure programs to enter and remain in the teaching field, this bill doubles the maximum loan cancellation amount to $10,000 for credentialed teachers teaching for five years in a low income school.

And while uncredentialed teachers would continue to be eligible for loan forgiveness available to all teachers under the current law, the enhanced benefits for uncredentialed teachers will expire on December 31, 2005, just in time for the mandated deadline set for all teachers to be fully licensed.

The second element of my bill authorizes grants to institutions of higher education to create and expand credentialing programs. Funds would be made available to colleges and universities to develop and implement teacher preparation programs including curriculum development that focuses on credentialing teachers.

I strongly believe that teachers desiring to become credentialed should have every resource available to them to do so. These components are meant to complement State programs already available to credentialed teachers, which aim to improve teacher quality and tenure.

To California's credit, since the 1999-2000 school year, 5,000 emergency credentialed teachers have been successfully placed in State-backed teacher preparation programs. And the State is working to create and improve teacher preparation programs that include relevant course work, classroom training, and mentoring by a veteran teacher, with a goal of full credentialing.

But this is not happening in every school district nationwide and it must. States and local school districts should work together to prioritize available funds to set up programs to ensure that every teacher within their district is adequately trained.

States must continue to look for innovative ways to keep qualified teachers in the classroom, especially in low performing school districts, and funnel available Federal funds to local initiatives to get emergency certified teachers into credentialing programs.

We as a Nation must continue to make providing quality education to our children a top priority. Passing legislation is just the first step. With the expected population growth and the need to replace teachers approaching retirement, States must act swiftly and aggressively to ensure that neither children nor teachers are left behind.

I urge my colleagues to join me in co-sponsoring this important piece of legislation that would give States and teachers the necessary resources to ensure that every teacher is a "highly qualified" teacher. Our Nation's students deserve nothing less.

By Mrs. FEINSTEIN (for herself, Mr. GREGG, and Mr. LEAHY):

S. 228. A bill to amend title 18, United States Code, to limit the misuse of social security numbers, to establish criminal penalties for such misuse, and for other purposes; read the first time.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President. I rise to reintroduce, along with Senator JUDD GREGG, the Social Security Number Misuse Prevention Act. This is critical legislation, especially in light of the increasing number of cases of identity theft.

In fact, the Federal Trade Commission, FTC, this week announced that identity theft is the Nation's top consumer fraud complaint for the third consecutive year.

Last year, this legislation was approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee, and the Finance Committee was set to vote on it as well, but it got entangled in an unrelated amendment.

It is my hope that Congress will approve this legislation this year, so that we can begin to protect one of the most fundamental rights of all Americans.

I believe all Americans should have the right to: control how their personal identifying information is used. Keep their Social Security number out of the public domain. Limit disclosure by public agencies of personal information; and I also believe that Americans have the right to expect that businesses and government agencies will protect your personal information held within their databases.

Lately, however, these rights have been seriously compromised by thieves who are stealing American's identity's in record numbers.

Just in the last year, identity theft cases have doubled nationwide. American consumers filed approximately 163,000 identity theft complaints with the FTC in 2002. Fully 43 percent of all the complaints the FTC receives are about identity theft.

My own State, California, has more victims than any other State. The FTC recorded 30,738 identity theft cases last year from California consumers alone.

Senator GREGG and I are reintroducing our Social Security number protection bill because Social Security numbers are the keys thieves use to unlock and take over a person's identity.

Identity thieves use Social Security numbers to: fraudulently obtain credit cards, access existing financial accounts, commit bank fraud, falsely obtain employment and government benefits; and create additional false identification documents, such as drivers' licenses.

Sally Twentymen, for instance, had her identity stolen when a thief rifled through her mail and stole credit card renewal forms.

The thief used her name and Social Security number to make $13,000 in cash advances and to open two additional credit card accounts in her name.

Not surprisingly, reports of Social Security number misuse have risen lockstep with the growth in identity theft.

Allegations of Social Security number fraud have increased by 600 percent over the past several years from 11,000 in 1998 to 73,000 in 2003.

Social Security Number Prevention Act:

The goal of this legislation is straightforward, to get Social Security numbers out of the public domain so that identity thieves can't access the number.

First, this bill prohibits anyone from selling or displaying an individual's Social Security number to the general public without the individual's consent, but does permit legitimate business-to-business and business-to-government uses of the number.

This practice occurs today. A stranger or stalker can buy your Social Security number off the Internet for a few dollars.

In one troubling case, Christopher Jones, a twenty-five-year old employee at the University of North Carolina-Pembroke, stole approximately 3,000 Social Security numbers through his job handing out towels and other equipment at the university gym.

In order to get equipment from Mr. Jones, students had to give him their Social Security numbers. Jones mined these numbers over several months and advertised the Social Security numbers for sale on eBay with an opening bid of $1.00 per number for a block of 1,000 numbers.

One advertisement, for example, read "100 (one hundred social Security # Numbers Obtain False Credit Cards Identity Theft I Don't Care Bid Starts at a Dollar a Piece USPS Money Orders only all Different."

Second, this legislation gives consumers the right to refuse to give out their Social Security numbers to companies that don't really need it.

Companies, however, can still require Social Security numbers for purposes under the Fair Credit Reporting Act, for background checks, if required by law, or if the number is necessary to verify identity or prevent fraud.

Third, this legislation curbs the public display of Social Security numbers on government documents. Specifically, the bill removes Social Security numbers from government checks and driver's licenses.

In addition, the bill prohibits governments entities from displaying Social Security numbers on public records that are posted on the Internet or in electronic media after the effective date of the act.

I don't believe a complete stranger should not be able to get access to my Social Security number from my birth certificate or marriage license, especially just by logging onto the Internet!

Finally, this legislation creates new penalties targeting the misuse of Social Security numbers. Specifically, the bill gives the Social Security Administration the authority to issue civil penalties of up to $5,000 for people who misuse Social Security numbers.

The bill also creates a maximum five year prison sentence for anyone who obtains another person's Social Security number for purpose of locating or identifying that individual with the intent to physically harm that person.

This legislation is fundamental to protecting the identities of American citizens.

I look forward to working with Senator GREGG to secure its passage this year, and I ask unanimous consent that the text of this legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 228

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Social Security Number Misuse Prevention Act".

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents of this Act is as follows:

Sec. 1. Short title; table of contents.

Sec. 2. Findings.

Sec. 3. Prohibition of the display, sale, or purchase of social security numbers.

Sec. 4. Application of prohibition of the display, sale, or purchase of social security numbers to public records.

Sec. 5. Rulemaking authority of the Attorney General.

Sec. 6. Treatment of social security numbers on government documents.

Sec. 7. Limits on personal disclosure of a social security number for consumer transactions.

Sec. 8. Extension of civil monetary penalties for misuse of a social security number.

Sec. 9. Criminal penalties for the misuse of a social security number.

Sec. 10. Civil actions and civil penalties.

Sec. 11. Federal injunctive authority.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The inappropriate display, sale, or purchase of social security numbers has contributed to a growing range of illegal activities, including fraud, identity theft, and, in some cases, stalking and other violent crimes.

(2) While financial institutions, health care providers, and other entities have often used social security numbers to confirm the identity of an individual, the general display to the public, sale, or purchase of these numbers has been used to commit crimes, and also can result in serious invasions of individual privacy.

(3) The Federal Government requires virtually every individual in the United States to obtain and maintain a social security number in order to pay taxes, to qualify for social security benefits, or to seek employment. An unintended consequence of these requirements is that social security numbers have become one of the tools that can be used to facilitate crime, fraud, and invasions of the privacy of the individuals to whom the numbers are assigned. Because the Federal Government created and maintains this system, and because the Federal Government does not permit individuals to exempt themselves from those requirements, it is appropriate for the Federal Government to take steps to stem the abuse of social security numbers.

(4) The display, sale, or purchase of social security numbers in no way facilitates uninhibited, robust, and wide-open public debate, and restrictions on such display, sale, or purchase would not affect public debate.

(5) No one should seek to profit from the display, sale, or purchase of social security numbers in circumstances that create a substantial risk of physical, emotional, or financial harm to the individuals to whom those numbers are assigned.

(6) Consequently, this Act provides each individual that has been assigned a social security number some degree of protection from the display, sale, and purchase of that number in any circumstance that might facilitate unlawful conduct.
