PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 105th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

Vol. 144

WASHINGTON, MONDAY, JULY 13, 1998

No. 92

House of Representatives

The House was not in session today. Its next meeting will be held on Tuesday, July 14, 1998, at 12:30 p.m.

Senate

MONDAY, JULY 13, 1998

The Senate met at 12 noon and was called to order by the President pro tempore (Mr. THURMOND).

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Today's prayer will be offered by our guest Chaplain, Father Paul E. Lavin, St. Joseph's on Capitol Hill Church, Washington, DC.

We are glad to have you with us.

PRAYER

The guest Chaplain, Rev. Paul E. Lavin, offered the following prayer:

A reading from the Psalms of David.
Sing joyfully to the Lord, all you lands; serve the Lord with gladness; come before Him with song.

Know the Lord is God; He made us, His we are; His people, the flock He tends.

For He is good; the Lord, whose kindness endures forever, and His faithfulness to all generations.—Psalm 100.

Almighty and eternal God, You have revealed Your glory to all nations. God of power and might, wisdom and justice, through Your authority is rightly administered, laws enacted, and judgment decreed. Let the light of Your divine wisdom direct the men and women of the Senate and shine forth in all the proceedings and laws framed for our rule and government. May they seek to preserve peace, promote national happiness, and continue to bring us the blessings of liberty and equality.

We also pray for all the citizens of the United States, that we may be blessed in the knowledge and sanctified in the observance of Your holy law. May we be preserved in union and that peace which the world cannot give; and, after enjoying the blessings of this life, be admitted to those which are eternal. We pray to You who are Lord and God, forever and ever. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The able majority leader, Senator LOTT from Mississippi, is recognized.

Mr. LOTT. I thank the Chair.

SCHEDULE

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, this afternoon there will be a period for morning business until 2 p.m. Following morning business, the Senate will begin debate on a motion to proceed to the property rights bill. At 5:45, under a previous order, the Senate will proceed to a cloture vote on the motion to proceed to the private property rights bill. Following that vote, the Senate will consider any legislative or executive items that may be cleared for action.

For the remainder of this week, the Senate will attempt to complete action on the private property rights bill, finish several appropriations bills, including agriculture appropriations, the HUD/VA appropriations bill is a possibility, and hopefully the legislative appropriations bill. We could also begin consideration of the credit union bill, and we are also looking at when we will begin and how we will debate and consider the Patients' Bill of Rights. We have some Internet bills that we are trying to get cleared so that we can consider those under a short time agreement.

Also, as a reminder, on Wednesday, July 15, at 10 a.m., there will be a joint meeting of Congress to receive the address from the President of Romania.

So we have a good bit of work that we need to do this week, as usual. The focus will be on appropriations bills throughout most of the week, turning late in the week or early next week to the Patients' Bill of Rights or the credit union bill.

I yield the floor, Mr. President.

I observe the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HAGEL). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, is the Senate in morning business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is in morning business, under the previous order, until 2 p.m., and Senators are permitted to speak for up to 5 minutes.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak for 15 minutes.

PATIENTS' BILL OF RIGHTS

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I would like to just talk briefly about two short items today, the first of which is the Patients' Bill of Rights legislation, which we hope the Senate will take up perhaps as early as this week. Some suggest that there isn't a need for legislation to ensure the quality of care provided by managed care plans. They believe, I suppose, as some insurance companies do, that things are just fine in managed care and health care in this country. But others, and that includes most of the American people, know better. They worry that health care in this country is now often directed not by doctors or other medical professionals but by some accountant in an insurance office 500 or 1,000 miles away from where the patient is.

Let me describe, as we have nearly every day for some weeks, a case that illustrates why the American people are so anxious about what is happening in our health care system. This is the example of Mr. Vaughn Dashiell. Vaughn Dashiell is one more reason why HMO reform, or managed care reform, in the form of the Patients' Bill of Rights, should be brought before the Senate.

Vaughn lived with his wife, Patricia, and their three children in Alexandria, VA, not too far from the U.S. Capitol. He owned and operated his own printing company. On November 20, 1996, Vaughn stayed home from work. He had awakened that morning sick, suffering from a sore throat, a dry mouth and tunnel vision that limited his sight to only 18 inches. He tried to get an appointment to see a doctor within his HMO network but was told there were no appointments available at his designated facility. He was able to speak only to an HMO-employed nurse on duty over the phone. She could have told Vaughn to go to an emergency room for treatment, but instead she told him to make a regular appointment, even though none were available. So here is someone who has health care coverage, wakes up ill, calls the HMO, can't speak to a doctor, instead speaks to a nurse, and the nurse says, "Make an appointment," but no appointments are available.

As Vaughn's symptoms worsened, he called his HMO again requesting permission to see a doctor somewhere, or to go to a nearby emergency room for treatment. He was told only to wait and that he would receive a call back from a doctor on duty. When the doctor on duty was consulted, he agreed that Vaughn should go to an emergency room, but neither made a call himself, nor followed-up to see that Vaughn was contacted. And that night Vaughn Dashiell was not contacted—not by the nurse, not by the doctor, or by any other HMO staff regarding his condition and the request he had made for health care.

The next morning, Patricia Dashiell found her husband incoherent, with his eyes rolling. She hurriedly called the HMO hoping for an answer to Vaughn's problem, and they advised her to call 911. She called 911 and Vaughn arrived at the hospital at 9:18 a.m. in a diabetic coma. His blood sugar level was more than 20 times greater than the normal level. Just 2 hours after being rushed to the emergency room, Vaughn was dead from hyperglycemia. He was 39 years old. He had health insurance coverage, but he couldn't get care when he needed it, and he died.

This should not happen in this country. Health insurers should not put profits ahead of patients. And too often these days, they do. Vaughn Dashiell's condition would have and could have been treated if his health plan had enabled him to get care when he needed it. But all over this country, we are hearing of patients who need health care and are told by those who have covered them with health insurance, "It is not now available."

The Patients' Bill of Rights we have offered in the Senate is very simple. This legislation says that people who have health insurance coverage ought to get the health care they need when they have an urgent need for it. They ought to be able to seek emergency room care if a reasonable person would consider it an emergency. They ought to be able to see the doctor they need for the health care problem they are experiencing. Patients have a right to know all of the options for the treatment of their problem, not just the cheapest, and there are a whole series of other provisions to ensure that medical care will be practiced in a doctor's office or a hospital room, not an insurance office 1,000 miles away.

I have told, often, of the woman who, having fallen from a horse and hitting her head severely, was in an ambulance, with her brain swelling, on the way to the hospital. She had the presence of mind to tell the ambulance driver that she wanted to be driven to the hospital further away rather than to the nearby hospital. And when she recovered, she was asked why she had insisted, as she was lying there injured in the back of the ambulance with her brain swelling, on being taken to the hospital further away. She said it was because she knew the reputation of the closer hospital, and she knew that it was a for-profit institution with a reputation for being interested in its profit and loss margin than its patients' care. She did not want her body delivered to an emergency room where she would be looked at in terms of dollars and cents.

That story and the tragic story of Vaughn Dashiell and so many others like it that we have presented to the Senate daily now for so many weeks, describes the anxiety and concern people have in this country. We have the best health care in the world in many respects, but it is available to people in need of health care only if they are able to access the kind of doctors they need when they have need for that medical specialty.

It is available only if they are able to get to an emergency room when they have need for emergency care. When we have American citizens—thousands and thousand and thousands of them—who are denied care because someone in an office 500 miles away said, "Well, gee, that care is not needed, it is not to be delivered, it is not available," then the American people have a right to say, "What on Earth kind of health care system is this?"

One of the stories we presented earlier on the floor of the Senate was of a young boy with cerebral palsy whose managed care officials determined that he had only a 50 percent chance of being able to walk by age 5. And because he had only a 50 percent chance of being able to walk by age 5, plan officials decided that was a minimal benefit and they would withhold it from that young child; it was not cost effective. It was a minimal benefit to have a 50 percent chance of being able to walk when you are 5 years old.

Shame on the people who make those judgments. Shame on them.

We are saying with the Patients' Bill of Rights that those who need medical treatment in this country have certain rights, and those who deliver medical treatment certainly should be cost conscious, but cost ought not take precedence over quality. Those who have coverage for their health care needs ought to be able to expect to get their needs taken care of and responded to adequately. That is, regrettably, not the case in many parts of our country today.

We are led to believe that perhaps this week we will take up some form of the Patients' Bill of Rights. If that happens, it will be the right subject to be debated. It is a subject Americans expect to be addressed. I, as a cosponsor of the Patients' Bill of Rights, feel, as will many of my colleagues, that it is time for us to address this important issue on behalf of the American people.

FARM CRISIS

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I want to make some remarks on the subject of the farm crisis that exists in North Dakota and other parts of the country, and discuss some legislation a number of us intend to offer in the coming days and weeks dealing with that issue.

As a way of describing that issue, the New York Times had a front-page story yesterday that talks about it. The article reports, "As the national economy is booming, lawmakers have begun to focus on one of the few places in the country where times are bad—the northern plains where wheat and livestock prices have plunged and many farmers are desperate."

The story goes on to describe the condition in North Dakota and some other States where we have a serious agricultural crisis. Collapsing profits in agriculture mean that we are seeing family farmers going out of business at a record pace.

Let me describe that with one chart for those who watch these proceedings. In my home State of North Dakota, net farm income has dropped 98 percent in 1 year. That's right; a 98-percent drop in net farm income in 1 year.

Then ask yourself what this statistic means. Ask yourself what would be the result for you, your neighbor, or your community, if you experienced a 98-percent drop in net income? That is what the farmers of North Dakota are facing because of collapsed grain prices and the worst crop disease in a century. The primary crop disease they face is called scab, or fusarium head blight, and it has devastated wheat and barley crops and some others. The combination of crop disease and a collapsed grain price has produced a farm crisis that is very, very serious and to which this Congress must respond.

In the same New York Times article, it says some who wrote the current farm bill two years ago—which I did not support and voted against it—say that a free-market agricultural policy is the best. It quotes the authors of the farm bill as saying "Farmers can best be helped by people staying out of their hair and promoting export markets."

I want to describe part of the problem that farmers face with this kind of free-trade philosophy. There really isn't free trade for farmers. There isn't a free market for farmers. On both ends, they are pinched badly and hurt badly. On one end where they are trying to sell their product, they are trying to sell up through the neck of a bottle. The iron fist around the neck is the grain trade firms, the millers, the railroads where three, four, or five firms control virtually all of it and they squeeze back down resulting in increased costs for farmers and depressed farm prices. So there is no free market moving up.

How about on the back side of it all? Is there a free market in trade? No; through our backdoor comes a flood of Canadian grain which is unfairly subsidized in my judgment, and undercuts our farmers and their prices.

While that happens every day, I want to read another news story. It says: "Official's Beanie Babies Stir Furor." I don't know what page this was on in the paper. It was a fairly large story about Beanie Babies—Beanie Babies, mind you. No offense to people who collect them and like them, but I have not spent a nanosecond of my life thinking about Beanie Babies.

This story is about the U.S. Trade Ambassador who came home from China and apparently had purchased some Beanie Babies in China. She discovered, I guess to her embarrassment, that you can't bring 40 Beanie Babies into this country from China. The Beanie Babies are made in China for an American firm. They make the Beanie Babies in China, and then they ship the Beanie Babies back to the United States for sale in the United States. But you can't buy 40 Beanie Babies in China and haul them back here. Apparently, visitors are restricted to one Beanie Baby from China to the United States. I am told also you are restricted to one Beanie Baby from Canada to the United States.

Those of us who live up near the Canadian border see a lot of things coming in from Canada. I went up to the Canadian border one day with Earl Jensen of Bowbells, ND. We had a little 2-ton orange 10-year-old truck. We tried to take a few bushels of durum wheat into Canada. All the way up to the border, we met 18-wheelers coming from Canada to the United States full of Canadian wheat. We saw truck after truck after truck after truck, all full of wheat, all the way to the border.

Earl and I got to the border with this little 10-year-old orange truck. Do you think we could get one quarter-truckload of durum into Canada? They said: No, you can't do that. You can flood the market in the United States with Canadian grain, but you can't get one little orange truckload of durum wheat into Canada.

When it comes to restricting imports to the United States, we say one Beanie Baby. Boy, we're tough on Beanie Babies. And if you exceed one Beanie Baby, you're apparently in huge trouble. But you can ship all the durum wheat, all the spring wheat and barley you want, and nobody is going to pay any mind at all. Nobody is going to care. In fact, if they unfairly subsidize it, as I am convinced they are doing, it still doesn't seem to matter. When we send auditors up to Canada to get into the books and records of the Canadian Wheat Board to check it out, the Canadian Wheat Board says, "Go fly a kite, we don't intend to show you any information; we intend to give you no records about our trade into the United States."

I say to those quoted in the New York Times and those in this Chamber who say, "Gee, what we should do is rely on this free-market stuff," that there is no free market. There is no free market on either end, not the top end through which farmers market their products and not the back end through which they are facing unfair competition coming into this country with unfairly subsidized grain.

We have farmers going broke in record numbers. We face a very serious farm crisis. A new farm bill was written 2 years ago. When that farm bill was written, it was written by folks who said, "Let's have the farmers operate in whatever the free-market system is." Some of us said the problem is, there isn't a free market and if farmers run into price collapse, we are in a situation where they will not be able to get over that pricing valley. When they hit a price collapse, there needs to be a bridge over that price valley. If you don't help family farmers over that valley, then they go broke.

Some people say, "That's okay, it doesn't matter, we don't care if we have family farmers." I suppose some people don't. They don't care if we end up with big farms, agri-factories, farming from the west coast to the east coast. Does it matter? It seems to me it matters.

For those who haven't been on a farm, if you look out the plane at night and you see the yard lights dotting the landscape, each of those lights is a family living on a family farm.

These family farmers take more risks than almost anyone else in this country doing business. They risk whether they will get a crop. They put all their money in their crop, including the cost of seed and fertilizer, as they plant their fields in the spring. They have no idea whether there will be a dozen or more weather-related events that might destroy their crop. There is the threat of insects, the threat of hail, the threat of drought, the threat of too much moisture, among other things. Yet, if they are fortunate enough to get a crop, they might well end up seeing the market as it exists today with collapsed prices.

And they are facing big interests that clap about that. They say, "Gee, that's great. We love collapsed prices." The big grain millers, they think that is just fine. Only four firms control almost sixty percent of the flour milling in this country. I suppose the grocery manufacturers think that is just fine, because they seem to love low farm prices.

The problem is family farmers can't survive. They are the seed bed of American enterprise and the home of family values that have always nurtured and flowed from family farms to small towns and into big cities. It is these family farmers, who are the ones that we lose.

This is not just about dollars and cents. It is about something much more important to this country's future than just dollars and cents. And that is why during this week, next week and beyond, we feel the need and the urgency to propose some changes here on the floor of the Senate. We must deal with farm policy in a way that addresses the issue of trade, in a way that addresses the issue of the misplaced priorities within a system that worries about Beanie Babies on the same day that nobody seems to care much about family farmers.

We think there are some things that can be done to extend a helping hand to family farmers, and to say, that they matter in this country's future. When we offer legislation on the floor of the Senate, I expect there will be those who say, as they did 2 weeks ago, that the current farm bill is working just fine. I dearly wish we could give them a deed this afternoon and say, "Here. You think it's working fine? Here is your farm. We'll give you 1,000 acres. Buy some fuel and fertilizers and seed, and farm until you go broke. When you go broke—and you will—you come back and tell us how well your farm policy works." I just wish we could do that. But, of course, there is not time because this crisis requires action on a much more immediate basis.

Mr. President, we expect to have a substantial debate about that in the coming days. I hope that Republicans and Democrats will understand the merit, the value, and the worth of family farming in this country's future. I hope that we will decide to embark upon a farm policy that says to family farmers that when prices collapse and when you are ravaged by the worst crop disease of the century, we want to help you over those price valleys. We want you to be a part of this country's future.

We need a farm policy that tells family farmers that they matter from the standpoint of social and economic policy. Here we are in a country that produces the most wholesome quality food at the lowest percent of disposable income of anywhere in the world. Family farmers do matter in this country's future. I hope that will be the result of the debate we have here in the next month or two in the U.S. Senate.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Ms. COLLINS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to proceed for not to exceed 12 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The remarks of Ms. COLLINS pertaining to the introduction of S. 2292 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBERTS). Without objection, it is so ordered.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

PROPERTY RIGHTS IMPLEMENTATION ACT OF 1998—MOTION TO PROCEED

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I move to proceed to the consideration of S. 2271, the Property Rights Implementation Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now proceed to debate the motion to proceed to S. 2271, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Motion to proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 2271) to simplify and expedite access to the Federal courts for injured parties whose rights and privileges, secured by the United States Constitution, have been deprived by final actions of Federal agencies, or other government officials or entities acting under color of State law, and for other purposes.

The Senate proceeded to consider the motion.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Brian Day, one of my law clerks, have floor privileges during the pendency of the property rights debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, the people of Utah, and indeed, of all of our States, have felt the heavy hand of the government erode their right to hold and enjoy private property. I have authored and cosponsored many bills in the past that would protect private property from the jaws of the regulatory state.

Our opponents on the left and the radical, so-called environmental groups, however, have been successful so far in derailing the consideration of more needed reform measures. But I believe we have the opportunity to pass a narrower yet meaningful piece of legislation. The substitute we are considering today, S. 2271, the "Property Rights Implementation Act," narrows H.R. 1534, which passed the House of Representatives on October 23, 1997, by a 248 to 178 vote. After the House passed bill was referred to the Judiciary Committee, we met with local, environmental, and governmental groups in an effort to meet their concerns. The product of those meetings is the S. 2271 substitute.

Mr. President, I hope the Senate will allow us to proceed to consideration of this bill. How can we work to further improve this bill if your colleagues will not let us proceed to vote. This is a worthwhile bill that resolves many problems. I call on my colleagues to vote for cloture so that we may address those problems on the merits.

The purpose of S. 2271, is, at its root, primarily one of fostering fundamental fairness and simple justice for the many millions of Americans who possess or own property. Many citizens who attempt to protect their property rights guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution are barred from the doors of the federal courthouse.

In situations where other than Fifth Amendment property rights are sought to be enforced—such as First Amendment rights, for example—aggrieved parties generally file in a single federal forum without having to exhaust state and local procedures. This is not the case for property owners.

Often they must exhaust all state remedies with the result that they may have to wait for over a decade before their rights are allowed to be vindicated in federal court—if they get there at all. Moreover, the federal jurisdiction over property rights claims against federal agencies and Executive Branch Departments is in a muddle. In these types of cases, property owners face onerous procedural hurdles unique in federal litigation.

The Property Rights Implementation Act, if we are allowed to even consider it, primarily addresses the problem of providing property owners fair access to federal courts to vindicate their federal constitutional rights. The bill is thus merely procedural and does not create new substantive rights.

Consequently, the bill has two purposes. The first is to provide private property owners claiming a violation of the Fifth Amendment's taking clause some certainty as to when they may file the claim in federal court. This is accomplished by addressing the procedural hurdles of the ripeness and abstention doctrines which currently prevent them from having fair and equal access to federal court. S. 2271 defines when a final agency decision has occurred for purposes of meeting the ripeness requirement and prohibits a federal judge from abstaining from or relinquishing jurisdiction when the case does not allege any violation of a state law, right, or privilege. Thus, S. 2271 serves as a vehicle for overcoming federal judicial reluctance to review takings claims based on the ripeness and abstention doctrines.

The second purpose of the bill is to clarify the jurisdiction between the Court of Federal Claims in Washington, D.C., and the regional federal district courts over federal Fifth Amendment takings claims. The Tucker Act grants the Court of Federal Claims exclusive jurisdiction over takings claims seeking compensation. Thus, property owners seeking equitable relief must file in the appropriate federal district court.

This division between law and equity is archaic and results in burdensome delays as property owners who seek both types of relief are "shuffled" from one court to the other to determine which court is the proper forum for review. S. 2271 resolves this matter by simply giving both courts concurrent jurisdiction over takings claims, thus allowing both legal and equitable relief to be granted in a single forum. I will address this conundrum of the "Tucker Act shuffle" in more detail in a later speech.

I. HOW THE BILL WORKS

Let me briefly explain how the procedural aspects of the bill, designed to assure fairness, work. One of the hurdles property owners face when trying to have their Federal claim heard on the merits is the doctrine of abstention. Federal courts routinely abstain their jurisdiction and refer the case to state court, even if there is no State or local claim alleged. This is true only for property rights cases.

The bill would clarify that a Federal court shall not abstain its jurisdiction if only Federal claims are alleged. To protect State's rights, the bill allows an unsettled question of State law that arises in the course of the Federal claim to be certified in the highest appellate court of that State, under whatever certification procedures exist in that State. Federal courts would retain their jurisdiction, but the unsettled State law question would be answered in State, not Federal court. In the few States where no certification procedures exist, property owners would be unable to benefit from that expedited procedure.

The second hurdle the bill would resolve is the problem of "ripeness". Current law requires a property owner to get a "final decision" from the land use agency to which he or she has applied before their Federal claim can be heard in Federal court. S. 2271 simply provides an objective definition of a "final decision" so that both parties in a land use dispute will know when "enough is enough." The bill outlines the steps a property owner must take to resolve a dispute at the local level before a final decision by the agency in question has been reached.

The process clarified by the bill protects both States rights and the individual rights guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment. Before a land use decision is defined as "final": A property owner must make a meaningful application for a land use to the agency. If the application is denied, the property owner must make an appeal or seek a waiver of the denial. If rejected a second time, a final decision has been reached unless there is an elected local body with the authority to review land use appeals. In that case the property owner must submit another application and be denied a third time before a decision is defined as final.

The bill provides yet another layer of local decision making. In rejecting the property owners land use application, the agency may choose to provide a written explanation for the denial and explain the uses, density, and intensity of development that would be permitted on the property in question. If such an explanation is provided, the decision will not be considered final until the property owner resubmits a new application taking into account the conditions of the original denial. If the property owner is again rejected, and rejected on appeal, the decision is considered final.

In all instances, the property owner is exempted from making an appeal or seeking a waiver if no such appeal or waiver exists, or if doing so would be futile. The concept of "futility" is established in existing case law. The purpose of this exemption is to ensure that property owners are not trapped in a futile situation where time and money is wasted seeking such relief where the prospect is virtually nonexistent.

In short, the bill is very simple and protects the rights of localities by requiring that property owners comply with local procedures before they seek relief in Federal court.

II. THE NEED FOR LEGISLATION—THE RIPENESS PROBLEM

Mr. President, let me amplify why this legislation is desperately needed. The first part of the bill deals with the ripeness doctrine, a doctrine which has been misused in a manner that prevents property owners from vindicating what, after all, is a Federal right in Federal court.

Let me begin by reminding my colleagues that the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution protects individuals from having their private property "taken" by the Government without receiving just compensation. A complex body of law has developed from the Takings Clause of the Fifth Amendment and is used by Federal courts to determine whether a "taking" has occurred.

In conjunction with this complex body of takings law, an equally complex set of procedural doctrines has also developed for use by Federal courts to determine whether the core substantive issues involved in the takings claim are ready to be heard. These procedural doctrines are known as the doctrines of "ripeness" and, I might add, "abstention."

Under current case law, a takings claim must be "ripe" in order to be heard in Federal court. In a key decision entitled Williamson County Planning Comm'n v. Hamilton Bank of Johnson City, 473 U.S. 172 (1985), the Supreme Court attempted to clarify the principles of the ripeness doctrine.

The Court stated that a takings claimant must show: (1) that there has been issued a "final decision regarding the application of the regulations to the property at issue" from "the government entity charged with implementing the regulations," and (2) that the claimant requested "compensation through the procedures the State has provided for doing so." [Id. at 194.] A takings plaintiff must meet both requirements before the case will be considered ripe for federal adjudication; if either has not been met, then the claimant will be procedurally barred from bringing such a claim in Federal court.

Unfortunately, the lower court decisions which subsequently have attempted to apply the ripeness principles set forth in Williamson County have only served to create much confusion over when a claim becomes ripe. Property owners have been left with no clear understanding of how many proposals or applications must be submitted before their takings claim would be considered ripe.

For example, in Southview Assocs. v. Bongartz, 980 F.2d 84, 92 (2d Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 987 (1993), the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit decided a takings claim was not ripe because the landowner "did not attempt to modify the location of the units or otherwise seek to revise its application." The court failed to decide how many reapplications would be necessary to reach the merits.

In Schulze v. Milne, 849 F.Supp. 708 (N.D. Cal. 1994), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 98 F.3d 1346 (9th Cir. 1996), property owners submitted a total of thirteen (13) revised plans over three years to renovate their home. Each time they submitted a plan "in compliance with all applicable zoning laws," local officials nonetheless "refused to approve the plan, and instead informed plaintiffs that there were additional requirements, not found in any zoning or other statutes, which plaintiffs had yet to meet." [Id., 849 F.Supp. at 709.] This is happening in many areas around the country.

These examples poignantly illustrate the current confusion concerning when a claim becomes ripe. The current state of disarray that Federal judges and private landowners alike find themselves in can be fixed by the establishment of a set of objective criteria so that all parties will be able to easily discern when a government land use decision is final. This bill will bring that confusion to an end by clearly defining when a Federal takings claim becomes ripe for adjudication and how many final decisions are required before the claim may proceed in Federal court.

Additionally, much confusion has existed over the second prong of Williamson County: namely, the requirement that a property owner must exhaust all compensation remedies available under State law. This prong acts to prevent Federal courts from reaching a final decision until the State court definitively rules that it will not entertain a compensation remedy.

This problem is exemplified in Santa Fe Village Venture v. City of Albuquerque, 914 F.Supp. 478 (D.N.M. 1995). There, the local city council established a building moratorium to preclude any development on lands near a national monument site. Plaintiff had an option to purchase land within areas subject to the moratorium, but never exercised that option because of the total land use restriction. Rather, plaintiff filed a lawsuit in Federal District Court seeking just compensation from the local government for its inability to develop the property.

The first suit was dismissed on ripeness grounds because the property owner never sought a compensation remedy in State court. In other words, exhausting State compensation procedures was necessary to make a Federal claim ripe for resolution. The property owner then filed a second action for inverse condemnation in State court. This case was also dismissed—this time for lack of standing. Plaintiff returned to Federal court raising only Federal claims but had its case dismissed again on ripeness grounds because the Federal claims were not raised in State court despite the State court's previous adjudications. These type of situations will be resolved by the bill by remedying the confusion of the State exhaustion requirement.

As you can see in these Federal land use cases from 1983 to 1988, the red part of this, 94.4 percent, is where judges failed to reach the merits of the case—in other words, had ripeness problems—and the 5.6 percent of cases were decided on the merits, where they found that they were ripe. As you can see, the owners of property are just not being treated fairly and this is a constitutional privilege provided for in the fifth amendment of the Constitution, so this is wrong.

Let me just note, this is a recent study prepared by the law firm of Linowes and Blocher of Silver Spring, MD, and incorporated into the RECORD for this bill.

Over 80 percent of the takings cases originating in U.S. district courts between 1990 and 1997, as shown on this chart, were dismissed before the merits were ever reached due, again, to the ripeness doctrine.

The 81 percent in red is where judges failed to reach the merits of the case because of ripeness problems, and the green is decided on the merits. In those cases where they were decided, they averaged 7 years of total litigation. So you can imagine how the rights are not being protected.

Many of these dismissals were tantamount to the termination of the claim because the landowner lacked the adequate financial resources to form an appeal. For those landowners who could afford the high expenses of an appeal, the survey showed that more than half of the takings claims were still dismissed.

The red is where judges failed to reach the merits of the case, again, due to ripeness problems. The green is cases, between 1990 and 1997, decided on the merits, and they averaged 9.5 years of litigation.

Just think about that. For those landowners who could afford the high expenses of an appeal, the survey showed that more than half of the takings claims were still dismissed. Of those appellate cases that did not pass the ripeness test, 60 percent were remanded for more litigation on the merits. These results underscored the need for this legislation.

Further adding to the problem, a Federal court may also abstain from hearing a takings case under the judicially created doctrine of "abstention." This doctrine allows Federal judges to exercise discretion in deciding whether or not to accept cases that are properly under the Federal court's, in this case, jurisdiction. Federal courts are reluctant naturally to adjudicate State political and judicial controversies, so a Federal court will usually abstain anytime that a claim presents a Federal question that would not need to be resolved if an underlying challenged State action of an unsettled State law issue were determined. This is underscored by the Supreme Court case of Railroad Commission of Texas v. Pullman Co., 312 U.S. 496 (1941). Federal courts also abstain from hearing cases which touch on sensitive State regulatory issues which are best left to the state courts. Burford v. Sun Oil Co., 319 U.S. 315 (1943), is an example of this situation.

Additionally, federal judges often use the abstention doctrines to refer takings cases back to state courts before reaching the merits of the Fifth Amendment claims. This bill remedies the current abuse of abstention by requiring that Federal courts adjudicate the merits of an aggrieved property owner's claims where those claims are solely based on federal law. On the contrary, if a property owner also raises claims involving state constitutional, statutory or common law claims pend-ent to the federal claims, then the property owner may not use this bill and the federal court may properly abstain in that type of situation.

I have to emphasize that control over land use lies and will remain in the hands of local entities. Private property owners must submit a land use proposal to the local agency for approval which, for many applicants, is the beginning of a negotiation process regarding the permitted land uses. This process, however, can take years for property owners who are left in regulatory limbo due to the local entities' failure to make a final decision as to what land use is permitted. Consequently, property owners are not able to use or develop their land and are effectively denied their fifth amendment rights.

While this result could be construed as a fifth amendment taking, I must point out that the applicant is, for all practical purposes, unable to file a claim in Federal court to enforce these constitutional guarantees because local land use authorities do not want to be sued in Federal court and can abuse the system by purposely withholding a final agency decision. To further frustrate the problem, the federal court decisions interpreting the Supreme Court's "ripeness" definition are conflicting and confusing, providing little guidance to property owners as to when a case is "ripe" for federal adjudication.

Moreover, Federal judges are often reluctant to get involved in land use issues. Instead, they usually dismiss takings cases back to state court based on the abstention doctrines or the lack of ripeness. Unfortunately, the overwhelming majority of property owners do not have the time and money necessary to pursue their case through the state court and then re-file it in Federal court. The extensive use of the abstention doctrines by the Federal courts to avoid land use cases, even ones involving only a Federal claim, has created a blockade denying aggrieved land owners access to the Federal court system.

This problem is exemplified by the situation presented in Suitum v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency, 80 F.3d 359 (9th Cir. 1996), vacated and remanded, 117 S.Ct. 1659 (1997). Bernadine Suitum, a retiree, was barred from building on her land by a regional planning agency. For seven years, the Federal courts steadfastly refused to consider whether a taking of her property by the government had occurred until the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in an unanimous decision that she will have the right to argue her case in Federal court. This elderly woman's plight has resulted in years of expensive litigation just to have the opportunity to present the merits of her case to a Federal judge. Unfortunately, this situation is far from rare for many takings claimants.

Another procedural tool that has been used to construct a barrier to property owners seeking remedies in Federal court has been the use of the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel by Federal judges. Res judicata, also known as claim preclusion, acts as a bar to further claims brought by a party on the same claim where a final judgment on the merits has already been reached. Claim preclusion prevents parties from relitigating claims that were already raised or could have been raised in an earlier lawsuit. Similarly, collateral estoppel, also known as issue preclusion, prevents a plaintiff from relitigating issues that were already decided by a state court.

Consequently, a Federal court could preclude a property owner from bringing an otherwise ripe claim in Federal court because a final determination had already been reached in a State court proceeding. That is, a strict adherence to the Williamson County prongs could prove tantamount to the nails in the coffin box of the property owner's ripe takings claim. Nevertheless, by removing the state exhaustion requirement from the ripeness landscape, this bill effectively solves all res judicata and collateral estoppel problems.

Interestingly, claimants alleging violations of other fundamental rights do not encounter these same procedural barriers when attempting to bring meritorious actions in Federal court. In those situations, ripeness, abstention, and res judicata are often inapplicable.

This places fifth amendment claimants in an inferior position to their first amendment counterparts. But, the Supreme Court has expressly stated that the fifth amendment is "as much a part of the Bill of Rights as the first amendment or the fourth amendment."

Look what the Court said in Dolan v. City of Tigard:

We see no reason why the takings clause of the fifth amendment, as much a part of the Bill of Rights as the first amendment or fourth amendment, should be relegated to the status of a poor relation . . .

The Court, I hope, means what it says.

In any event, I certainly concur. The rights of the fifth amendment should not be inferior to the rights of the first amendment or to any other fundamental guarantee contained in the Bill of Rights.

This bill seeks to address these procedural blockades and offer property owners more certainty as to the Federal adjudicatory process governing takings claims. More specifically, the bill accomplishes this by defining when a final agency decision takes place and prohibiting Federal judges from invoking the abstention doctrine to avoid cases that involve only fifth amendment takings claims.

In other words, this bill does not impugn or prevail upon any State rights. It only is triggered when we have fifth amendment constitutional rights invoked.

Additionally, S. 2271 maintains the traditional interpretations of the abstention doctrine which keep the federal courts free from being thrust into controversies surrounding state and local issues by limiting its scope only to actions involving federal claims. As the proposed language indicates, usage of this Act by a claimant is optional.

That is, the bill allows a claimant the opportunity to bring a claim in Federal court if she so chooses, but does not mandate such an avenue of jurisdiction. S. 2271 simply allows every citizen her right to bring a Federal takings claim into Federal court to be decided on the merits. It is important to note that if a claimant brings a takings claim that is joined to other State claims, a Federal court would be able to abstain: for example, a takings claim accompanied by a State constitutional claim, a claim of ultra vires conduct, or abuse of discretion would not be able to reach the merits in Federal court without a State court first deciding the merits of the State claims.

Let me refute the critics and assert that S. 2271 accomplishes its goals in a manner that will not crowd the Federal dockets. Under the provisions of this bill, a claimant is required to obtain as few as three and as many as five decisions by local entities before that claimant's claim will be ripe for review by a federal court. Thus, the claimant must spend adequate time pleading her case before the local authorities and must obtain the necessary denials from them; until she satisfies these prerequisites, her claim will be barred from the Federal courts.

Some have argued that the second prong of Williamson County mandates as a matter of constitutional law that property owners exhaust State compensation remedies before seeking federal court redress. This conclusion is buttressed by their claim that a taking does not occur on a State or local level until the State or locality has had the opportunity to afford compensation to the property owner.

I disagree with both these contentions. First, Williamson County was decided before the remedy for a Federal taking was clarified. It is, indeed, outdated. When Williamson County was decided in 1985, the Court viewed the remedy for takings to be invalidation of the offending statute or rule. In other words, compensation was not considered the remedy for a taking under the U.S. Constitution. That changed in 1987, with First English Evangelical Lutheran Church of Glendale v. County of Los Angeles, 482 U.S. 304 (1987), where the Supreme Court finally held that the Federal remedy for a taking is compensation. Now that this Federal remedy has been clarified, there is no reason to compel a citizen to litigate State court remedies in State court first.

Second, and consequently, the second prong of Williamson County is now merely prudential in nature. This conclusion is buttressed by the Supreme Court's most recent takings and ripeness decision, where the Court described Williamson County's requirements as "two independent prudential hurdles * * *." Suitum v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency, the 1997 case I cited before, makes that case, 117 S. Ct. 1659, 1666 (1997). In other words, the requirement of exhaustion of State or local compensation procedures is a court-created barrier which Congress may alter. Simply put, initial State court litigation is not compelled by the Constitution.

Third, the Williamson County second prong is only dicta, and, therefore, not binding authority. The main issue in Williamson County concerned the first element of ripeness, that is, whether the land use agency rendered a "final decision." The ensuing discussion on compensation ripeness was neither essential nor necessary to support the decision. Thus, it was mere dicta.

Fourth, the text of the Takings Clause does not require that property owners must exhaust State or local compensation procedures. The drafters and ratifiers of the fifth and fourteenth amendments to the Federal Constitution did not intend such a result: The text of the takings clause states: "[N]or shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation." Those are words right out of our beloved constitution.

Thus, the fifth amendment clearly creates a Federal remedy for a taking. There is no basis to believe that the drafters and ratifiers intended State court litigation as a prerequisite to vindicate that Federal remedy. State court litigation puts the cart before the horse: Compensation is simply a computation of the amount owed for a taking. It makes no sense to sue in State court first, until liability for the Federal taking has been determined.

Fifth, preclusion doctrines, as mentioned above, bar any Federal takings suit in Federal court if a plaintiff must sue in State court first. A property owner in this circumstance would never get to Federal court to vindicate the property owner's rights. It is doubtful that this was the intent of the drafters and ratifiers who promulgated and adopted Federal rights amendments and established the Federal forums to protect them. Yet being barred from the Federal courthouse is exactly what happened in Dodd v. Hood River, in 1998, 136 F.3d 1219 (9th Cir. 1998). That is a ninth circuit court case.

The minority views accompanying H.R. 1534, the bill voted out of the Judiciary Committee, completely misstates the Dodd case. Dodd stands for the reverse of what the minority views represent. The minority claims that, one, "most federal appeals courts allow claimants to 'reserve' federal constitutional claims so that the federal courts may address those claims once the state court litigation has ended." This is not true. This can be seen from what happened in the various Dodd cases.

After being allowed to reserve their Federal takings claim in Dodd IV [(59 F. 3d at 862)], the Dodds were denied the right in Dodd V to raise it in Federal court under the "issue preclusion" doctrine of collateral estoppel. [See Dodd V, 136 F.3d at 1227 (9th Cir. 1998).]

The same thing happened to a takings claimant in Wilkinson v. Pitkin County Bd. of County Comm'rs, a tenth circuit case in 1998, where the court concluded that "the Williamson ripeness requirement is insufficient to preclude application of res judicata and collateral estoppel principles in this case." Moreover, in a candid footnote, the court acknowledged:

We do note our concern that Williamson's ripeness requirement may, in actuality, almost always result in preclusion of federal claims, regardless of whether a reservation is permitted. It is difficult to reconcile the ripeness requirement of Williamson with the laws of res judicata and collateral estoppel.

Contrary to the minority's misrepresentation of the law, Dodd and Wilkinson confirm that, without the referenced remedial legislation, citizens bringing fifth amendment takings claims in Federal court are in a Catch-22 situation. They must first go to state court, but when they do, they are barred from ever litigating their claim in Federal court. Meanwhile, municipal defendants in such cases are free to seek removal of the case from State to Federal court. This removal procedure was upheld recently by the Supreme Court in City of Chicago v. International College of Surgeons.

I must observe that other constitutional rights hinge on State or local issues, but do not require initial State litigation. Many provisions in the Bill of Rights also hinge on the resolution of issues concerning State or local law. There are no similar ripeness barriers requiring citizens to go to State court first to address the constitutionality of Government actions that infringe upon the speech, religion, or privacy rights protected in the Constitution.

Furthermore, the Supreme Court in Loretto v. Teleprompter Manhattan CATV Corp., 458 U.S. 419, 437, n. 15 (1982), held that takings could occur regardless of whether the property has increased in value. In this case the Court found a taking where cable was laid pursuant to a New York statute, which undoubtedly increased the value of the building. The Supreme Court found a taking and remanded the compensation issue to the lower court.

I believe that this holding is contrary to the position of the bill's critics that takings analysis require, as a matter of law, that compensation be determined before a governmental action can be considered an unconstitutional taking. Under Loretto, a court could find that there has been a taking—a significant interference with property rights—yet award no compensation. It is still considered an unconstitutional taking. Consequently, the compensation requirement of the Takings Clause is merely a remedy that may or may not be awarded in a state or federal court, depending on the fairness of the situation.

Buttressing this conclusion is the recent Supreme Court decision in Phillips v. Washington Legal Foundation, No. 96-1578 (June 15, 1998). In Phillips, the Court held that interest accruing from interest bearing lawyers trust accounts, that is, Interest On Lawyers Trust Accounts, or IOLTAs, as they call it, that that is property within the meaning of the fifth amendment. Although the Court left open whether the adequacy of compensation must be determined before a constitutional taking is considered to occur, [Phillips slip op. at 7, n.4], it is interesting to note that as a practical matter the Court first determined whether there was a property interest and, thereafter, remanded the case to determine whether there was a taking, and if so, the amount of just compensation to be paid for such taking.

The Court in effect applied a three-part test: (1) whether a property interest exists; (2) whether the property interest has been significantly interfered with; and (3) if a property interest has been taken, the determination of just compensation. The Committee believes that this approach belies the argument that a federal court cannot hear takings claims before a state determines compensation. Indeed, this was the position of the dissent, who argued that the issue of compensation is not separate and distinct from the issue of disposition and use of property. [Phillips, slip op. at 4 (Souter, J., dissenting).]

Furthermore, in Eastern Enterprises v. Apfel, No. 97-42 (U.S. June 25, 1998), decided on the next to last day of the 1997-1998 Supreme Court term, the Court faced the issue of whether the Coal Industry Retiree Health Benefit Act—called the “Coal Act”—which established a mechanism to fund health care for retirees, could be applied retroactively to a company that no longer mined coal and had withdrawn from the Coal Act funding scheme pursuant to terms of a prior negotiated agreement.

Four Justices, Chief Justice Rehnquist and Justices O'Connor, Scalia, and Thomas, held that the application of the Coal Act violated the Takings Clause of the fifth amendment. [Eastern Enterprises, slip op. at 1-37 (Plurality opinion of O'Connor, Rehnquist, Scalia, and Thomas, J.J.)]. One Justice, Justice Kennedy, held in concurring opinion that retroactive application of the Act violated the Due Process Clause. [Eastern Enterprises, slip op. at 1-7 (Kennedy, J., concurring and dissenting in part)].

In reaching its conclusion, the plurality grappled with the ripeness issue of whether a litigant, such as the petitioner in this case, is barred from seeking equitable relief in federal district courts. The Tucker Act confers exclusive jurisdiction on the Court of Federal Claims to hear claims for compensation under the Takings Clause of the fifth amendment, and it was argued, much like critics of this bill, that a claim for equitable or other relief under the Takings Clause is hypothetical until compensation is first determined by a court. The Supreme Court noted that the Court of Appeals, the various courts of appeals, were divided on the issue and that the Supreme Court's precedents were seemingly contradictory. [Eastern Enterprises, slip op. at 19 (plurality opinion of O'Connor, J.)].

For instance, the Supreme Court in First Evangelical Lutheran Church of Glendale v. County of Los Angeles, 482 U.S. 304, 314 (1987), observed that “the fifth amendment does not prohibit the taking of private property, but instead places a condition [just compensation] on the exercise of that power.” Yet in Duke Power Company v. Carolina Environmental Study Group, Inc., 438 U.S. 59, 70 n. 15 (1978), the Supreme Court held that a district court may exercise jurisdiction over declaratory judgment actions pursuant to a Takings Clause claim, even when no attempt to seek compensatory relief has been made in the Court of Federal Claims.

Significantly, the Eastern Enterprises plurality noted that the Supreme Court had granted equitable relief without discussing the applicability of the Tucker Act, and, thus, decided the issue sub silentio that an unconstitutional taking could occur without a determination of compensation. [Eastern Enterprises, slip op. at 19-20 (plurality opinion of O'Connor, J.), citing Babbitt v. Youpee, 519 U.S. 234, 243-245 (1997); Concrete Pipe & Products of Cal. v. Construction Laborers Pension Trust for Southern Cal., 508 U.S. 602, 641-647 (1993); Hodel v. Irving, 481 U.S. 704, 716-718 (1987)].

Based on the foregoing, I believe that a federal court may decide takings issues before compensation is ascertained. Indeed, the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in In re Chateaugay Corp., 53 F. 3d 478, 492 (2d Cir. 1995), characterized the contrary language in First Evangelical Lutheran Church, mentioned above, as obiter dicta.

Finally, I want to note that federal courts have more than adequate experience in the appraisal of value as the many takings and inverse condemnation claims heard by these courts demonstrate. Consequently, federal courts, as well as state courts, are appropriate forums to determine compensation. Indeed, this was the intent of the framers and ratifiers of the fifth and fourteenth Amendments.

In conclusion, let me point out that James Madison, in his celebrated Essay on Property, wrote that the very purpose of government is to protect private property.

Madison's own words in Essay on Property:

Government is instituted to protect property of every sort . . . this being the end of government. That alone is a just government, which impartially secures to every man whatever is his own.

Let me also point out the admonition of John Adams, who, in his Defense of the Constitutions of Government, cautions that:

The moment the idea is admitted into a society that property is not as sacred as the laws of God, and there is not force of law and public justice to protect it, anarchy and tyranny commence.

That is John Adams' Defense of the Constitutions of Government.

Mr. President, let us heed the advice and warnings of the wise Founders of this Republic. It is the duty of Congress to assure that the constitutional rights of all Americans are protected. This is especially true when, as here, the courts fail to do their job of safeguarding constitutional rights. In such a situation, Congress must step to the plate.

With passage of this bill, Congress will have hit a home run. The right to own and possess property will have been vindicated. Fairness to property owners will have been guaranteed by resolving the egregious delays and costs associated with the ripeness issue. Property owners will have been afforded fair access to the federal courts to vindicate their constitutional rights. Justice will no longer have been delayed nor denied.

I urge my colleagues to support this worthwhile measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. COLLINS). The Senator from Vermont is recognized.

Mr. LEAHY. Madam President, good to see a fellow Mainer. I was so intent and engrossed by the discussion of the senior Senator from Utah, I did not notice who was in the chair.

What is the parliamentary situation?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is debating a motion to proceed to Senate bill 2271. The cloture vote will occur at 5:45 p.m. Time is divided equally between now and then.

Mr. LEAHY. How much time is due to the Senator from Vermont?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont has 100 minutes remaining.

Mr. LEAHY. I thank the Chair.

Madam President, I am amazed on this issue. I look at the schedule set by the distinguished Speaker of the House, and we have so very few legislative days remaining that now we have this as a top priority—a bill to strip zoning and land use decisions from small towns and cities and counties—instead of passing important funding bills.

I do know the law requires us to have a budget by April 15; it also requires us to file our taxes bill April 15—we demand every person in the country do that. But it seems that the majority of the Republican leadership did not find it in their heart to obey their own law to pass the budget by that time.

I am not sure we have passed the budget. We passed one in the Senate; the House, months later, passed one; I don't believe it has been conferenced.

Anyway, these are things we cannot seem to find time to do, that the law requires us to do. The law requires us to file our income tax returns. The law requires the House and Senate to pass a budget by April 15. But the other body, at least, never got around to doing that.

We weren't able to find time to pass a tobacco bill, so there is not one that might be different from exactly what the tobacco companies want. We certainly haven't found time to pass legislation to increase patients' rights. We found it impossible to find time to pass legislation on campaign financing. But now we seem to be looking for the time to consider a bill that will take power away from State and local government. That power that we take from State and local government will go to the Federal courts.

This is the same U.S. Senate, Madam President, which has found it difficult to perform its constitutional duty to fill the scores of vacancies in the same Federal courts. On the one hand, we are saying we will not fill the vacancies; we will leave 75 to 100 vacancies in the Federal court. The U.S. Senate can't find time to confirm the people who are pending, like Sonia Sotomayor and others. But we have time to say we don't care what the States think in their courts. We don't care what counties and municipalities think in their courts. We will take their power away from them and dump them in the Federal court. Now, we are not going to have enough judges in the Federal court to handle the cases, because we will give the Federal courts a whole lot of jurisdiction they never asked for and don't want, in an unprecedented—unprecedented—exercise in antifederalism and unprecedented exercise of the Federal Government reaching into the States and stripping away their power and dumping into a Federal court. That is what we are spending our time on.

Maybe I made a mistake in reading some of the rhetoric that went with the Contract on America that my good friends on the other side of the aisle proposed which talked about giving power back to the States, back to the communities. They said: We have to get the Federal Government off your back. And yet now we have a piece of legislation which says: Whoops, we are going to take all your power away from you and give it to the Federal courts. Well, well, well.

This is a bill that would federalize local zoning decisions. This is a bill which goes against everything that the Republican Party has said they stood for, certainly everything that the people in my State, Republicans and Democrats, stand for, and that is giving power to local people. This goes against it. Why? Because its unabashed purpose is to give wealthy developers increased power to short-circuit communities' decisions, those decisions made through the public processes of local government.

Basically, what this is, it is a bill to install the golden rule, saying, if you have got the gold, you are going to make the rules. That is basically what it is. If you have got plenty of money, don't worry about pesky little things like a State court or zoning court or the things a community has a stake in; ignore those, because you can make your decision from your corporate headquarters 2,000 miles away, and you could care less what the people of Bar Harbor, ME, or Burlington, VT, might think because you have got the money and you have got the bill.

S. 2271, the so-called Private Property Rights Implementation Act, will give developers greater access to Federal courts and less accountability to local governments than any other citizens have. In fact, this legislation elevates the rights of property owners above other constitutional rights, such as civil rights. It goes back almost to a time when we were forming this country where they said: If you have a lot of property, you should be the only ones with rights; you should have the votes; you should make the laws if you have a lot of property and a lot of money. And we said, no, no, no, no, we had a little matter of fighting the Revolution so that wouldn't happen. We call it democracy—not anarchy, not monarchy, but democracy.

I have received letters from Governors, State attorneys general, and county commissioners opposing this assault on local decisionmaking.

In fact, the National Association of Counties passed a resolution opposing this effort, stating that these types of decisions are best made at the local level with ample opportunity for all parties to seek nonjudicial solutions.

Then the National Conference of State Legislatures recently said, "The only certain result would be an additional centralization of power in an unelected Federal judiciary at the expense of the States."

The National League of Cities and the U.S. Conference of Mayors are also concerned that this effort would lead to significant property tax increases. Mayor Giuliani, Republican mayor of New York, is worried about the unfunded mandates in the bill. He said, "It remains to be seen where the resources will come from to pay for these added burdens . . . on local governments that would have to defend themselves in these proceedings."

The Justice Department advises us that this effort will interfere with local governments' ability to have a say in how close garbage dumps, liquor stores, adult bookstores and noisy industrial plants can be to schools, homes, and churches. What it says is, if your town doesn't want a porno shop next to your church or your school, the developer could say, "We are going to put it there, and you don't even have a say in it anymore. We are going into Federal court."

The National Association of Towns and Townships, representing 11,000 local governments and many tens of thousands of local elected officials—Republicans and Democrats alike—stresses that the bill "would involve Federal courts in those disputes well before local governments and landowners have had the opportunity to fully consider the range of development alternatives . . . . Clearly, communities want to keep factories away from residential areas and adult stores away from schools." I hope so. I hope the U.S. Senate would not pass a bill to make it easier for porno shops to go next to grade schools or churches.

Mayor Giuliani calls these measures a fundamental intrusion upon his city's authority over local land use decisions, and he has written to me opposing this bill in the strongest terms. A recent Washington Post article described his efforts to eradicate strip clubs, X-rated video stores, and peep shows in the Times Square area. Make no mistake about it. If you vote for this bill, you are voting for a bill that would be a roadblock to those efforts.

The contradictions presented by this bill are startling. Instead of trusting local mayors, councils, planning and zoning commissioners, and Governors to know what is best for its citizens, this bill short-circuits the local process and it turns local land use disputes into Federal cases. I point out that the mayor of New York City is better equipped to handle the legal expenses this bill would impose than are countless small towns I could mention in Vermont or other States, including my own small town of Middlesex, VT. But even New York City—with many, many times the population and wealth of my State of Vermont—says the burden this bill would impose would be onerous.

Can you imagine—whether it is a town of 500, or 1,000, or 2,000—the little town of Strafford, VT, which I had the privilege to visit on the Fourth of July, has just a few hundred people. One of them was Senator Morrill, a former Senator—Senator Morrill of the 19th century, one of the longest serving Senators from Vermont—that was his homestead and his home—who came out of that little town having some sense of education and the need for education in small States and small towns, began the Land Grant Act. Look what we have benefited by that—every State in this Union. But that little town would be totally wiped out if somebody wanted to come in and destroy their whole character and say, "You can't do anything to stop us."

The mayors have told me the chilling effect the bill would have on their entire planning process by the specter of paying takings damages and attorney fees to developers, merely because a Federal judge sitting in a court somewhere distant disagrees with the wisdom of a particular use policy that would result in a wholesale retreat for local zoning decisions.

As Mayor Larry Curtis of Ames, IA, testified before the Judiciary Committee, "You only have to look at budgets of our small towns to see how S. 2271 would be tipping the scales of justice in favor of wealthy developers."

The top four developers in the United States have annual revenues in excess of $1 billion per year. Just four developers represent over $1 billion a year in revenues. Most of our small towns generate less than $10 million a year, and some way less than $10 million a year, in tax revenues. Ninety-percent of cities and towns in America have less than 10,000 people. They couldn't hire a lawyer to fight a well-entrenched developer. Of course not.

In my State, with a median community of around 2,500 people—my own community of Middlesex, VT, has 1,500 people—you can see these towns need their revenues to pay for police officers, teachers, safer streets and schools, and not spend the time in Federal court fighting huge developers. How can we expect small towns to protect the rights of their residents against a $1 billion developer who can hire all the lawyers they want? I would rather be paying that money for teachers, or nurses, or police officers, and for the protection of our communities. But, unfortunately, the House of Representatives has already made the decision that we will take power away from the States, we will take power away from our communities, we will give that power to major developers, who may be, coincidentally, major contributors to political action committees. They will take the power away from our towns and our cities.

How that flies in the face of the rhetoric when they talk about giving power back to our communities. But it is now the responsibility of the Senate to step through with some common sense to safeguard the jurisdiction of the budgets of our towns from a barrage of lawsuits, from special interests, and allow them to focus on community needs.

By giving land speculators and developers this huge new club to wield in their dealings with local officials, this bill would also remove the public from what should be a democratic process to decide what goes on in our communities' backyards. In Vermont, we have been fighting our own backyard battles over the last year—battles against the towers on the hillsides of our Green Mountains. One of our primary tools to protect Vermont from being turned into some kind of a giant pincushion with 200-foot towers indiscriminately sprouting up on every mountain and valley, within the protections of our own State law, Act 250 has become basically the anti-pincushion law. It has resolved over 15,000 cases, and it has been done with local people and with our own sense of our State and our own people making the decision, not some out-of-State fat-cat corporation. And the resolutions of these cases have been instrumental in retaining the character and natural resources and the heritage of my native State of Vermont—the heritage that makes it unique.

S. 2271 would have allowed developers to drag each and every one of those 15,000 cases into Federal court instead of allowing the people of Vermont to make the decisions. It might have been people from a huge corporation in Houston, or California, or somewhere else, against the people of Vermont. As the former State's attorney in Vermont, I cannot imagine having to fight this many legal battles on an annual State budget of less than $10 million, which is for fighting all of the State's legal battles.

This legislation will allow developers to avoid local and State authority to drag local communities into Federal court, where they won't even have the resources and where they might as well give up and say:

Here are our choices. We could protect the people of our community, we could protect the people of our State, we could protect our heritage, we could do what the people of the State want us to do, but in even trying to do it, we face the risk of bankrupting the town or the State. So we want to protect your heritage. We want to protect the reasons you live here, but we can't bankrupt you, and we are just going to have to surrender.

Why have we lost all the power in our local communities? Why have we lost the power of our States to stand up for the interests of our people, and the power of our communities to stand up for the interests of their people? Because the people in Washington, DC, in the House and Senate, were more interested in the needs and whims of a few fat-cat developers. They sold away our rights and our interests. They sold away our heritage. They sold away what makes our communities what they are.

Now, Madam President, I have spoken many times on the floor of the Senate on how I feel about my own State of Vermont. I have heard the Presiding Officer speak of the pride in her own State of Maine, one of the most beautiful States in this country. Each of our States is different. I kind of like it that way. But when we go home as Senators, every one of us has to feel the tug of our State and the feel of being there.

When I left my farmhouse in Middlesex, VT, this morning, I drove down the dirt road. Mist was coming out of the fields, a deer had just run across one of the fields, and the sun was shining. The sun rose on Mt. Ellen. I drove down along the Winooski River heading to the airport. It was so beautiful. A farmer was out tilling the field. I saw a hawk flying over one of the fields. My wife pointed to a place she likes the most as we drove along. It is a little spot, a tiny pond alongside the road, in an area that has been kept open for agriculture and recreation. The people in the community decided not to develop it, even though it would be prime development land. She said, "Let's see if it is there." And it was. There is almost always a great blue heron standing in there. We can almost count on it in the morning as we head to the airport and drive up French Hill and come over the top and see the Champlain Valley and Burlington, and our really nice lake, Lake Champlain is out there. And I thought: How beautiful this is.

There are parts of the State I remember from when I was a child, and that is part of it. My father used to tell me that most of the mountains were open land and fields throughout at different times of our history. Now most of them are forests. Some of the areas had been farmland and are now developed. But it was done carefully, in the way we wanted it to be done in Vermont. Our Act 250 was put through the legislature by a conservative Republican Governor, Dean Davis. But, like me, he was a native Vermonter who wanted to keep the best of our State.

Has it worked perfectly in every case? Probably not. I am sure we could look back where something might have been done slightly differently, but for the vast majority of cases it has worked so well, and Vermont is a better place to live and a more beautiful State as a result. But we made our choices.

Now some out-of-State, wealthy developer might say to us, "But if you had only let us come in here, if you had knocked out that pond where that great blue heron is—who knows, maybe one in a hundred cars go by—we could have put a building there, and you would have had tax revenues from it. You may even have had some jobs."

You know, they are probably right. It probably might have even increased the per-capita income of our State. But do you know what, Madam President? The people of Vermont said that the beauty of that area is more valuable to us. And shouldn't we make that decision?

Now, every year, we have some developer from out of State who will come in and look at these magnificent views—views that we have preserved, sometimes at great sacrifices, as Vermonters, we have preserved. They come in and say, "Oh, if we can just develop here, we will make millions for you and we will make even more millions for us. Someday you are going to be gone anyway, so what difference does it make?" We say, "No; we kind of like it this way."

I think of the home that I have in Vermont. My parents bought it 41 years ago this summer. They bought it as a summer place. We have turned it into a year-round home. There is a field on it. This field has one of the prettiest views in central Vermont. It looks at Camel's Hump and at Mt. Ellen, and it is gorgeous.

About 3 weeks after my father bought the whole place, with a couple hundred acres, back in the late fifties, a man called him up and said, "I would like to buy that field. I understand there is about 8 or 10 acres there out of the 200 that you bought." Dad said, "That's right." He said, "I will offer you for that field what you paid for the whole farm." My father said he wasn't interested. The man kept calling back every week, and the amount went up and up and up. He finally offered my father many, many times what he paid for the whole 200 acres for that 8 to 10 acres. And dad said, "I won't sell." He said, I guess to impress my father—and my mother and father had a small printing business in Montpelier—he said, "I will come up there in my private plane, and I will offer you enough money that you will sell." And dad said, "I would hate to have you waste the time. I am not going to sell." He said, "Well, why won't you?" And my father made a comment that was actually prophetic because my wife and I do the same thing today. He said, "Every so often we like walking up that field around sunset time and we like looking out there and seeing the Sun set." And he said to my dad, "If that's all you want, sell it to me and you can come there and watch the Sun set anytime you want." My father said, "No. It wouldn't be the same."

Now, we take that attitude about many things in Vermont, Madam President. Somebody will say, "Well, if we put up this huge tower or this bowl, it would improve your ability to get Baywatch" or whatever else the 12 channels on which 12 different folks will tell you if you send contributions to them, they have a direct line to God and will get you a blessing, or a blessing bigger than money. And we say, "No, we kind of like it the way it is."

But we make that decision. And then an out-of-State telecommunications company can't come in and say, "Oh, we are going to set you aside and we will go in there," because they are trying to do that under the Telecommunications Act now. Or somebody says, "If we put this factory outlet right here, you know, if people come to see this great view here and they see the factory outlet, they will go down there." And we say, "No, we kind of like the view the way it is."

Just as years ago Vermont became the first State to ban billboards along its highways. Everybody said, "Oh, my God. Your tourism will disappear; your businesses will disappear. You will become an economic wasteland." You know what happened. Tourism skyrocketed up because people kind of liked seeing the views and not seeing the billboards. But we made that decision. Under this law, the billboard company could come in and say, "You can't make that decision because we are just going to come through and we are going to take over."

Now, I know there are examples of citizens who want to develop their land and should have been allowed to develop it without pushing cases through the courts for years, but the U.S. Supreme Court has decided some recent cases in favor of landowners saying you have to make your decision. You can't tie it up forever. You do have to make your decision.

And that is fine. That is the way case law develops, and we make our decisions accordingly. But it does not justify rewriting Federal law to encourage developers to sue local governments for local zoning decisions. It does not justify a bill that will allow the filing of thousands of suits to prevent local governments from zoning out gas stations or incinerators or a 20-story building next to your house.

We need only to look at the list of actual takings claims that confront local governments to see what is wrong with this bill. In Tampa, FL, and Mobile, AL, officials were sued when they tried to restrict topless dancing bars. A chemical company challenged a Guilford County, NC, denial of a permit to operate a hazardous waste facility. The county said, "We don't really want your hazardous waste facility." They took them to court. A landfill operator contested a county's health and safety ordinance prohibiting the construction of additional landfills, even though people worried about their water supply. An outdoor advertising company challenged a Durham, NC, ordinance that limited the number of billboards in order to preserve the character of the city. A gravel mine operation challenged a Hempstead, NY, ordinance prohibiting excavation within 2 feet of the groundwater table that supplied water for the town.

I know how I would feel if I was a parent living in that town and my children were drinking that water.

An essential part of land use policy is weighing one resident's concern over another to arrive at a decision in the community interest. We need to balance the rights of property owners with those of others in the same community.

Remember that all of us live downstream, downwind, or next door to property where pollution or unsuitable activities can harm our health or our safety or our property values.

This new challenge to local government is more dangerous than the legislation we defeated last Congress. Take a look at the groups opposing this legislation. These are the groups in opposition. Every major State and local government organization opposes this bill: National Governors' Association; National Association of Counties; National League of Cities; U.S. Conference of Mayors; National Association of Town and Townships; National Conference of State Legislatures; the Judicial Conference of the United States; religious organizations; United States Catholic Conference; National Council of Churches of Christ; Religious Action Center for Reform Judaism; Evangelicals for Social Action; the League of Women Voters; Alliance for Justice; Physicians for Social Responsibility; National Trust for Historic Preservation; National Wildlife Federation; League of Conservation Voters; the Sierra Club; the National Environmental Trust, and on and on and on and on.

Every major conservation group opposes this bill. Civil rights groups, religious groups, labor groups, public interest groups, preservation groups, all oppose this bill.

Let's not overlook the threat to our court system when we are looking at the threat to our State and local government. As I said earlier, S. 2271 could significantly boost the workload of our already overburdened Federal court system. By making a Federal case out of local zoning decisions, we are going to rush zoning decisions into the Federal court before the local public process has even had a chance to work out some kind of alternative the community might want. Instead of allowing our communities to try to work it out themselves, we say, whoops, it is out of your hands entirely; we are going to turn it over to a Federal judge.

And think of the cost of dramatically increasing the workload of Federal courts. It is going to cause a lot greater delay in existing Federal court workload, even if the Senate did do its duty and confirm those dozens and dozens and dozens and dozens of judges waiting confirmation. And, of course, that is why the Judicial Conference of the United States, the Conference of Chief Justices, and 38 State attorneys general all oppose this bill.

The contradictions presented by this bill, contradicting what the majority leadership of this Senate says they want, are amazing. The legislation turns the goal of increasing local jurisdiction and decisionmaking on its head. It seems to abandon the respect for local decisions that so many in this body espoused during the takings debate during the 104th Congress.

Statements were made just last year—is our memory so short as Senators that we forget that last year statements were made that legislation should only apply to the Federal Government and not impact State or local zoning laws? This legislation directly threatens local authority.

Another seemingly obvious contradiction this legislation offers is to the "judicial activism" rallying cry of some in the matter of judicial appointments—just a matter of how selective some of those same people can be about judicial activism unless, of course, we think they might act on behalf of our supporters.

Rebutting their own criticism of activist judges, this bill will encourage judges to intervene in problems that belong in legislatures or city councils.

So with all of these contradictions and with the overwhelming opposition to this dangerous legislation, why is Congress considering such sweeping changes to the balance of power between local officials and developers?

That is a question being asked of us across the country. The Manchester, NH, Union Leader, not considered the most liberal newspaper in America—in fact, usually considered the most conservative—posed that question to the House when it took up the bill, when they said this bill is a "conservative flip-flop," and they said "let's not federalize local zoning disputes."

They thought, and they said it is "... a good guess that this bill will die quietly in the Senate, enabling House conservatives to tell their backers we 'gave it our best shot.'"

Well, there they go again, because now we are wasting valuable floor time on a bill the President has pledged to veto. This legislative proposal is unwarranted. It is unwise. We have to do a lot better for our local towns and communities and for local homeowners.

I have a statement of administration policy and a letter. I ask unanimous consent to have those printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT OF ADMINISTRATION POLICY
S. 2271—PROPERTY RIGHTS IMPLEMENTATION
ACT OF 1998

The Administration strongly opposes S. 2271 because it would shift authority over local land use issues away from local communities and State courts to Federal courts. The bill would subject local communities to the threat of premature, expensive Federal court litigation that would favor wealthy developers over neighboring property owners and the community at large. The President will veto S. 2271 or any similar legislation.

S. 2271 would harm neighboring property owners, weaken local public health and environmental protections, and diminish the quality of life by undermining local land use planning. Through radical changes to the existing legal doctrine of ripeness, the bill would give developers inappropriate leverage in their dealings with local officials by making it easier to sue local communities far earlier in the land use planning process. S. 2271 also purports to allow takings claimants to circumvent State courts altogether.

The bill would violate constitutional limits on congressional power if read, as its supporters intend, to allow for a ruling that an uncompensated taking has occurred even where the claimant fails to pursue available State compensation remedies. The bill also would prohibit Federal courts from "abstaining" or deferring to State courts on certain delicate issues of State law. It would lead to poorly informed decisions by allowing claimants to bring claims in Federal courts without an adequate factual record, the very claims that the courts themselves have said are unripe for resolution.

S. 2271 would empower the U.S. Court of Federal Claims to invalidate Federal statutes and rules and grant other injunctive relief in a broad category of cases. This grant of authority to a non-Article III court raises a host of serious constitutional and policy concerns.

The bill provides that, by including a property rights claim, any litigant against the United States could ensure that the entire case would be reviewed on appeal by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, an approach that would promote inappropriate forum-shopping. This would dramatically increase the legal influence of the Federal Circuit at the expense of other circuits, thereby disrupting settled interpretations of important areas of the law.

S. 2271 also could override the "preclusive review" provisions found in many Federal statutes, including major environmental laws. These provisions allow for the swift and orderly resolution of challenges to Federal actions. S. 2271 would deprive affected businesses and the public of the regulatory stability needed to plan their actions.

NATIONAL GOVERNORS' ASSOCIATION,
NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COUNTIES, NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF STATE LEGISLATURES, NATIONAL LEAGUE OF CITIES, UNITED STATES CONFERENCE OF MAYORS,

July 10, 1998.

TO ALL SENATORS: On behalf of the nation's governors, state legislators, and local elected officials, we are writing to express our strong opposition to S. 2271, the "Private Property Rights Implementation Act of 1998." We believe the proposed legislation, including the proposed technical amendments, would fundamentally interfere with and preempt the traditional and historic rights and responsibilities of state and local governments and would mandate significant new, unfunded costs for all state and local taxpayers.

State and local elected officials are as deeply committed to protecting private property rights as are members of Congress. A review of the most recent proposed revisions to the legislation makes clear that those changes do not address our fundamental problems with the bill. We continue to believe that S. 2271 goes far beyond its stated objectives.

If passed, the bill would undermine state and local government authority over land use and regulatory decisions by allowing developers and property owners to take their grievances directly to federal court, circumventing legal remedies at the state and local level. Such an "end run" around the processes established by our state laws runs counter to the foundations of federalism that this Congress purports to endorse. The bill preempts the traditional system for resolving local zoning, land use, and regulatory disputes; it creates a disincentive for developers to negotiate with localities in order to reach mutually agreeable solutions; and it puts federal judges in the position of micromanaging purely local affairs. We believe that large-scale developers will use the expedited access to federal courts under S. 2271 as a "club" to intimidate local officials who are charged with acting in the best interests of the community as a whole.

The framers of the Constitution never intended federal courts to be the first resort in resolving community disputes between local governments and private parties. In our view, these issues should be settled locally, as close to the affected community as possible. S. 2271 violates our cherished principles of federalism and state and local sovereignty. We urge you to oppose floor action on S. 2271.

Sincerely,

GOVERNOR GEORGE V.
VOINOVICH,

Governors' Association.*

City of Philadelphia, President, National League of Cities.

Mr. LEAHY. Madam President, I have some other items, but I see the very distinguished Senator from Louisiana on the floor, and I do not see others seeking recognition. I will yield to my colleague and friend from Louisiana, but before I do that, how much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 65 minutes remaining on his side.

Mr. LEAHY. I understand the Senator from Louisiana wanted time from Senator HATCH. If we could wait just one more moment for him to come back?

But while we are waiting for Senator HATCH to come back, let me just take a moment to offer what is really an example of the profits this bill will give to developers and the downfall it will be to homeowner rights.

One thing I heard from every mayor and local official about this bill is the fear of battles with large corporate developers with deep pockets. Instead of waging these battles, most mayors concede they will probably settle the cases and give in to the developers. It will be a field day for land speculators who buy land zoned for, let's say, farming and then sue in Federal court to have the land rezoned for commercial or residential purposes, because now they suddenly change their mind the day after buying it and say they no longer want to be farmers; they just want to make millions as developers.

One Senate staffer who works on this issue came across a timely example. He was visiting his boyhood hometown in Cortland County, NY, over the Fourth of July weekend. He told me about a pertinent situation.

A farm adjacent to about 25 homes on a small lake, Little York Lake, was recently sold for $2,000 per acre for a total of $65,000. A speculator bought the land which he wants to now sell for $30,000 per acre to make a quick profit of around $1 million. To do that, he has to evade local zoning and health requirements. The speculator knows the land, sold as farmland, is worth about $2,000 per acre. But if you sell it for residential or business development, it could be worth 15 times more. But, of course, it would greatly reduce the property values of neighboring homeowners living in the community. They would be hurt by it, but one speculator would benefit if he is able to change the rules.

The persons who sold the land to the speculator might have wished they had thought about just avoiding local land-use regulations. They could have made a whole lot of money if they did it themselves, but they didn't want to. They wanted to obey the rules.

This bill would allow the speculator to get into Federal court. It would certainly be futile for him to apply for construction permits for business, since the land is not zoned for that use. So why bother to work with the local governing body? Why bother to find a solution that might be acceptable to everybody? Instead, under the bill he could just sue them for taking the hoped-for profits or have his attorney make them change their zoning requirements. Incidentally, the land is located on the aquifer that provides the water for the community.

Well, Madam President, I don't want to see this example replicated across the country. Fighting for the Department of Agriculture programs to help conserve our Nation's farmland, I don't want to say we passed S. 2271, which throws that out.

Madam President, I understand that Senator HATCH has said if I want to yield time to the Senator from Louisiana—how much time would my friend like?

Ms. LANDRIEU. I would like 15 minutes.

Mr. LEAHY. I yield 15 minutes of the time of the distinguished Senator from Utah to the distinguished Senator from Louisiana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana is recognized.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Madam President, I have not often found myself at odds with my distinguished colleague from Vermont whom I have come to respect and admire a great deal in every aspect of his work. But I do rise in support of this bill, in opposition to the comments made by the distinguished Senator from Vermont.

I will, however, agree with him on one point, and that is we most certainly need to have our positions in our Federal courts filled in a timely manner. This is not the only issue in our country that needs attention. This is not the only issue where people, individuals and parties, are aggrieved and need their grievances remedied in a timely manner. So I do join him and thank him for his valiant efforts to try to get the nominations of many qualified individuals, nominated for our Federal bench, certified and voted on so that these matters can be handled in a more timely fashion.

But I am pleased to rise in support of S. 2271, to join my distinguished colleagues from Utah and Georgia. The reason I rise to support this bill is because this is about fairness. It is about access to justice for the rich and for the poor, for people who have a lot of property, for people who have little property. In fact, this is a bill for people who don't own any property yet, but one day hope or dream or have planned or have saved, or perhaps inherit some property, perhaps the first ever owned in generations in their family, from having their rights of ownership trampled on. It is what I think the Democratic Party is about. It is why I am a Democrat. It is about the fundamental principles that the Democratic Party of which I am so proud stands for, and which I have spent, as have many on our side, a great deal of our lives and our political careers—fighting for the principles of these cornerstones of fairness and justice.

I know my distinguished colleague pointed out corporate America. I am not sure exactly this is the picture he had in mind, because this is a picture, here, of Ann and Richard Reahard from Lee County, FL. I don't—perhaps he does, but I don't—see a corporate headquarters here in this picture or cell phones or limousines or Christian Dior suits. I just see two people who look like they love each other and have worked hard. They inherited 40 acres of land in Florida.

I will not go through all the heartache that is listed here, but the point is, this is not corporate America. These are two people from Florida who inherited some land, and because of the lack of clearness in this law, in this unconstitutional law, have literally lived a nightmare since 1984, even with the most reasonable suggestions made to this county about what to do to develop their property.

But the point is, this is not about the rich. This is, in fact, about the poor and the rich, and about people who have property and people who one day hope to. This bill is not just important because it promotes these worthy goals. It is important because it provides practical relief for the small landowners of Louisiana and across the country.

Opponents of this legislation assert that the bill will only help large developers and will put small localities at a disadvantage. To view S. 2271 that way is to actually put this situation on its head. Large land developers do not need our help to enforce their rights. They are the only plaintiffs that can actually afford to go all the way through the State court and then to Federal court, because under the current situation, you need to have plenty money, plenty time and plenty patience.

Even so, large developers are not likely to be the people bringing these cases. If you are a development corporation with a half dozen projects in a certain area, what sense does it make for you to aggravate the local authorities by challenging their decision in Federal court? None, because it makes no sense.

This bill is not about corporate America, large landowners, rich lawyers. Its much more likely scenario is a large developer will use its economic power and leverage to sail through the approval process, as complicated as it is, free from any trouble from local authorities, and they often do. The people who need this bill are private landowners, small business persons, small landowners who don't have a lot of money, who don't have economic clout, who can't hire a 100-person law firm to defend their rights in court and who don't have the resources that are at the disposal of some of our large developers.

If your greatest asset is your home—and that is the greatest asset of the vast majority of people in our country who own nothing else; if they own something, they own their home and their land—they simply don't have the resources necessary to defend their constitutional rights against a local, State or Federal agency determined to delay and wait out your court claim.

That is why I assert that this bill is about fairness. We change no substantive law under the fifth amendment. You have the same rights today as you will have when this bill passes. They will, however, be more clear. The change occurs with respect to the process by which you can enforce those rights. As it stands now, if I am a small property owner and I believe my land has been taken, I will be forced into a morass of administrative and legal procedures which studies show will take on the average of 9½ years.

Let me repeat that: 9½ years to be resolved; not 3 months, not 6 months, not 2 years. There are not too many people who can afford an attorney for several months, let alone for 9 years. If you are a multimillion-dollar development corporation, you can afford to wait, but if you are a family building a business for the first time or building your first family home, you will be financially ruined in that amount of time.

Which brings us to the second principle upheld by this legislation: access to justice. A 1997 study by Linowes and Blocher showed that even if you had spent the necessary time and money to go to local hearings and State court, in 81 percent of the cases brought to Federal court, the judges will still decline to hear the case on procedural grounds. In 81 percent of the cases they are being declined, not on the merits or the substance of their claim, but on procedural cases because the laws are so unclear in the jurisprudence, and that is what we are hoping to remedy today. Essentially, property owners have a constitutional right which they have no practical way of exercising.

Everyone, Madam President, is entitled to their day in court. I strongly support access to the courts for environmental concerns. I support municipalities who use the courts to enforce their zoning ordinances. But it would be hypocritical of me, I say to my colleagues, to turn my back on the other side of the argument and allow property owners to go without any remedy for their legitimate complaints.

Small property owners and large municipal governments, county governments and State governments—everyone—needs to have their day in court, and that is what this bill does, nothing more, nothing less.

The central principle which underlies this bill is that we do not have a two-tiered system of constitutional rights. Chief Justice Rehnquist stated that the fifth amendment should not be the forgotten stepchild of the Bill of Rights. However, that is precisely the situation we confront.

Under the fifth amendment, it states that private property shall not be taken for a public purpose without just compensation. To repeat: The fifth amendment says that private property shall not be taken for public use without a just compensation.

Nevertheless, we have inadvertently, I believe, constructed a system which precludes the vast majority of people from ever seeing the inside of a Federal court to defend their rights and to give meaning to these words. They are actually useless without proper procedures to allow someone to state their claim.

The free enjoyment of property is not only enshrined in the Constitution, it was one of the core motivations of our American Revolution. The difficulty is that while we have created a national right, the essence of land use and decisions are local, as they should be. For that reason, we have worked very hard to craft a bill which addresses the problems of property owners while maintaining the local decisionmaking structures.

This bill does not affect—although the opponents have said it from day one—it does not affect local zoning. It grants no new rights. It preserves the authority of zoning boards and city councils. Specifically, I point to page 16, lines 1 through 4 that establish clearly in this bill that no one is entitled, when this bill passes, to challenge the authority of a local government to set local zoning ordinances as enabled by their State constitution or State laws or the laws of their territory. I want to be very clear, because the opponents have argued that this upsets local zoning laws, and it does not.

In short, this is no overarching bill which will change land use laws. Rather, we will provide a chance for people who have real grievances to get their day in court in a timely manner.

This bill, in fact, Madam President, reminds me a great deal of the IRS reform bill, which this body just passed 98 to 2. When you put all the cards in the hands of an administrative agency, you ensure abuse. That is what is occurring in these land use cases today.

If you had read the horror stories that I have, you would feel the same outrage that compelled this Chamber to pass the IRS reform bill nearly unanimously.

From my own State, let me just share one of these stories. Dean and Rita Beard of Lafitte broke ground 2 years ago. They began building their dream home. They put all their savings into it and picked out a spot that had been pastureland for more than 100 years. The Beards hoped to turn this property over to their children and their grandchildren.

What ensued, however, was their worst nightmare, as the Army Corps of Engineers put their dream on hold by taking 10 acres of land for mitigation projects due to projects elsewhere. Now the nearly completed home of the Beards, which they were ready to enter, sits as a monument to the failure of our land use process.

The Beards' attorney advises them it may be 10 years before this issue is resolved. They may have a case, they may have a claim, they may have been harmed, but it will take them 10 years because of the complications of when the administrative decision is final is not clear.

In the meantime, they have invested their life savings into an unusable home and every extra penny has gone towards lawyers. I doubt after 9 years they will have, considering their situation, any money left.

That, Madam President, is what this bill is trying to address. It is not going to say how the courts should rule, it is just to say that this family, who built their dream home in hopes of turning it over to their children and grandchildren, can get their day in court more quickly after exhausting their local remedies.

This bill is important to the Beards, it is important to my State, it is important to the implementation of our Constitution. I hope my colleagues will take a close look—I know this vote is going to be very close today—I hope that they will take a close look at what is actually in this bill to see past the outlandish rhetoric thrown about by its opponents.

Should this bill pass, it will not be a panacea to all the problems and regulations faced by landowners and the difficulties faced by municipalities in zoning. However, it will be a negotiating tool that property owners do not now have. And it will take a small step in the right direction. It is a modest step.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Ms. LANDRIEU. May I please have additional time as I may require, another 2 minutes?

Mr. LEAHY. Certainly, from Senator HATCH's time.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Thank you. Another 5 minutes.

So I urge my colleagues to support cloture so that we can get to the merits of this legislation and debate it, to give it a full debate, because it most certainly is necessary.

In closing, let me just say a few words. My distinguished colleague from Vermont painted a most beautiful picture of the way Vermont looks. I hope to get to see it for myself someday. I sure have seen it in pictures, and I want to take my children there. Now, myself, I have spent many days on the shores of Lake Pontchartrain and flying over the marshes of Louisiana, seeing the beautiful sunsets, and have spent time on the west coast and on the east coast. And just this past weekend I was at a beautiful place in Maryland. I am well aware, as all of our colleagues are, how beautiful this land is and how grateful we should be to God for the land that He has given us.

But I do not think there is anything really, Madam President, that is more beautiful than the Constitution of the United States, and particularly the Bill of Rights. And I just want to remind our colleagues of the beautiful words of the amendments, the 10 amendments that make up the Bill of Rights, of which this is one that we speak today—the freedom of speech, the freedom of the press, the right of people to peacefully assemble, the right of people to petition their Government for redress of grievances, the right to life, liberty, and property, due process of law, nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation.

These are beautiful words. And it is our job to make sure that these words have meaning, that they are not just written on a piece of paper to be talked about or referred to in speeches, but that they actually work. And that is what this bill is—a modest attempt to clarify something that most certainly needs clarification.

Let me quote from the Washington Post editorial that my distinguished colleague from Vermont also referred to, an editorial opposing this bill. It takes exceptions with this bill. Actually, when I read this article, I thought it was a great example or outlined the three points of why this bill should be passed. And I would like to quote:

Current takings law is murky [the Washington Post says], but its murkiness strikes a useful balance, allowing government to implement zoning, environmental and other rules that can restrict the use of private property while still permitting compensation where that property is physically invaded or grievously devalued. That balance [it says] should not be altered [because it is murky].

Madam President, I do not think our constitutional rights should be murky. I do not think people in America think that our constitutional rights should be murky—the right of free speech, the right of free press, the right to own your own property. And if it is taken from you, and totally eliminated of its value, you should be compensated. And everyone in America has their right for their day in court. I do not believe, Madam President, that our rights should be murky.

I urge my colleagues to vote for cloture later this afternoon.

Thank you, Madam President, and I yield the balance of my time.

Mr. LEAHY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. I ask unanimous consent that the Sunday Washington Post editorial "Takings Exception" be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TAKINGS EXCEPTION

For all their professed commitment to federalism, congressional Republicans frequently seem eager to pass laws dumping quintessentially local matters into federal courts. The latest such effort is the Property Rights Implementation Act of 1998, which the Senate is now poised to consider. A version of this bill was already passed by the House of Representatives; it was a bad idea then, and it's no better now.

The principal component of the proposal would give property owners quicker access to federal courts in their disputes with local governments over contrasts on the use of private land. The takings clause of the Fifth Amendment forbids governments to take private property without providing just compensation, and battles over such local matters as zoning sometimes erupt into takings clause litigation. Traditionally, federal courts have not deemed takings claims ripe for review until avenues for negotiation with local officials are exhausted and plaintiffs have first sought compensation from state courts. The federal judiciary also has sought to avoid interpreting questions of state law in takings cases. The Senate bill would change the rules of takings litigation, allowing property holders into federal court earlier in the process of negotiations with local officials. It also would curtail the abstention authority of the federal courts. It would, in other words, make federal cases out of a whole class of property fights now treated as local matters.

The other prong of the legislation would give those claimants who are suing the federal government a wider choice of venues in which to do battle than they now enjoy. Currently, those who feel their property rights are being infringed can sue in federal district court seeking to have the federal agency stopped, or they can sue in the Court of Federal Claims for compensation for an alleged taking. The current proposal would give both courts jurisdiction over both types of claim. This is an invitation for abusive venue-shopping by plaintiffs, and the Justice Department has warned that it also poses constitutional problems.

The department has said it will recommend that President Clinton veto this bill, and he should certainly do so if it passes. Current takings law is murky, but its murkiness strikes a useful balance, allowing government to implement zoning, environmental and other rules that can restrict the use of private property while still permitting compensation where that property is physically invaded or grievously devalued. That balance should not be altered.

Mr. LEAHY. I yield such time as the distinguished senior Senator from Rhode Island might need.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island is recognized.

Mr. CHAFEE. Thank you very much, Madam President.

I want to thank the distinguished senior Senator from Vermont for permitting me to proceed.

Madam President, I oppose the motion to proceed to consider S. 2271, the so-called Property Rights Implementation Act of 1998. I urge my colleagues to vote against cloture. Quite simply, S. 2271 is a bad bill and we should not be spending any further time on this legislation, in my judgment.

The bill would put Federal courts in the position of second-guessing local land management decisions. It would make it significantly more difficult for State and local governments to implement zoning restrictions, preserve neighborhoods, or protect environmentally sensitive areas.

Madam President, this bill is opposed by virtually every national organization representing State and local governments—the National Governors' Association, the National Association of Counties, the National League of Cities, the Conference of Mayors, the National Conference of State Legislatures, amongst others.

The Nation's largest environmental groups are also strongly opposed to this legislation. I might say, Madam President, if anybody wonders whether this is an environmental vote, it is. And I know that many around here say that the environmentalists are not very fair in their scoring. Well, here they have given clear notice that this is an item that resonates deeply with them. They are strongly opposed to this legislation, the environmental groups.

The administration is strongly opposed. The Attorney General and the Secretary of the Interior and the Administrator of the EPA and the Chairwoman of the Council on Environmental Quality—all of them oppose this.

Madam President, I do not know whether these letters have been put in the RECORD previously, but I would just like to read, if I might—I wish the Senator from Utah were here, but perhaps he will be back. But I am going to just read, if I might, a couple of these letters.

This is from the National Governors' Association, the National Association of Counties, the National Conference of State Legislatures, the National League of Cities, the United States Conference of Mayors. This is dated July 10, 1998. This isn't some old letter we dragged out; this is dated July 10—3 days ago.

To all Senators: On behalf of the nation's governors, state legislators, and local elected officials, we are writing to express our strong opposition to S. 2271, the "Private Property Rights Implementation Act of 1998." We believe the proposed legislation, including the proposed technical amendments, would fundamentally interfere with and preempt the traditional and historic rights and responsibilities of state and local governments and would mandate significant new unfunded costs for all state and local taxpayers.

State and local elected officials are as deeply committed to protecting private property rights as are members of Congress. A review of the most recent proposed revisions to the legislation—

Your legislation, I say to Senator HATCH. I thought you might be interested in what the Governors and others have to say about it. They say your most recent revisions:

... do not address our fundamental problems with the bill. We continue to believe that S. 2271 goes far beyond its stated objectives.

If passed, the bill would undermine state and local government authority over land use and regulatory decisions by allowing developers and property owners to take their grievances directly to federal court, circumventing legal remedies on the state and local level. Such an "end run" around the processes established by our state law runs counter to the foundations of federalism. . . . The bill preempts the traditional systems for resolving local zoning, land use, and regulatory disputes; it creates a disincentive for developers to negotiate with localities in order to reach mutually agreeable solutions; and it puts federal judges . . .

Imagine this: the Federal Government, Federal judges, the very group we are so warned about frequently on this floor. And what is more, they are labeled frequently as activist Federal judges. Suddenly we are putting them in charge. I am shocked by this.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. CHAFEE. Let me finish and I will give you a chance.

I know the Senator from Utah is deeply concerned about these activist Federal judges. That is why I find it sort of out of character—

Mr. HATCH. If the Senator will yield, I will clarify.

Mr. CHAFEE. For him to want to turn these matters over from the locals to the activist Federal judges, to the courts. The framers of the Constitution never intended Federal courts to be the first resort in resolving community disputes between local governments and private parties.

This letter is signed by—well, who do we have here?—by the mayor of Salt Lake City.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. CHAFEE. Deedee Corradini, president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Mr. HATCH. As a matter of personal privilege, since the Senator raises my mayor, if the Senator will yield for a question, is the Senator aware in S. 2271 we have solved all those problems? The original bill did not participate, in the eyes of some of the mayors, but S. 2271, is the Senator aware, affects only Federal claims being brought before Federal court; that State and local claims, claims based on State or local law, are not affected by S. 2271, which is fairly contrary to what the distinguished Senator has been saying here?

The fact that the constitutional claims can arise from the actions of local governments does not make them any less a Federal claim, any more than a violation of first amendment rights are Federal claims, whether it is a Federal or local official doing the violating.

Is the Senator aware of that?

Mr. CHAFEE. I believe it is my time, is it not, Madam President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. CHAFEE. Let me finish, if I might.

I have here a letter, dated July 10, as I was saying just before the Senator from Utah came in. This is not some musty letter I dragged out of the files from a couple of years ago. This was written 3 days ago.

In it, it says:

We believe the proposed legislation, including the proposed technical amendments [i.e. those you have been referring to] would fundamentally interfere with the preemptive traditional and historic rights.

And who signed it? Well, the Governor George Voinovich, chairman, National Governors' Association; Richard Finan, president, Ohio State Senate and president, National Conference of State Legislatures; Randy Johnson, president, National Association of Counties; Councilmember Brian O'Neill of Philadelphia, president, National League of Cities; and then, of course the mayor of Salt Lake City. Here is her signature, Deedee Corradini.

I am sure she is a very able, intelligent, and fine lady, and an excellent administrator. So she directs this to all Senators. I am sure the Senator has received a copy.

Now, Madam President, let me just say this. In each of our cities and each of our States, we have a system for resolving zoning problems, for example. The way it works in my State—it might be entirely different in the State of the Presiding Officer or the State of the principal proponent of this legislation—if my property is zoned residential and I want to put a gas station next to my house and I think that would be a real winner, I could make a lot of money from that gas station—now it is true that 30 other houses on the plat might not like it, but I like it, so I go before, in our State, I go before the zoning board of review. I go before the zoning board. I would seek a variance. I presume I might well be turned down. Then I go to the zoning board of appeals. In other words, I take the second step.

Now, under this legislation, if I took that first step before the zoning board and was turned down and then I went to the zoning board of appeals, I wouldn't even have to wait for a decision. All I have to do is go before that, take that second step—in other words, one appeal—and then I can say, "This is taking too long," and "I want to go into the Federal court," and I can go into the Federal court. Then the Federal court, under this legislation, takes up the matter.

I just don't think that is what we want. So many times on the floor of this Senate we inveigh, all of us have, against one size fits all. Yet that is exactly what we are doing here. We are saying, no, no, no, we don't like your system that you have in Maine, in Bangor, the way they are handling these appeals. We will let that person go into that Federal court and there is no incentive to negotiate, to come up with a compromise. When it is done on a city level or town level, as it is in my State, having the zoning board say, can't you people work this out, a gas station, that sounds like a little much, but talk with your neighbors and see what they say. Perhaps in some other area you can work this out, but we want to negotiate.

That is not true when you get this thing in the Federal court. They then come down with a decision and they direct the zoning board—issue a permit for such and such. Is that really what we want?

I find this an astonishing proposal. I certainly hope that we are not going to get in this situation where powers that—200 years, these powers have resided in the local communities. Because somebody said, "Oh, they take too long, we don't like those long delays, so we are going to make it so you can go into the Federal court." Well, apparently the people who live there don't think it is taking too long or they would change it. We are not helpless in our local communities, and wherever one is, whether it is each Greenwich, RI, or Ellsworth, ME, the people don't like the situation, they can change it. That is perfectly possible.

What the law is saying, we don't like the way you are doing things down there, you are taking too long, so we will have those activist Federal judges that we have heard Senators on the floor inveigh against so often—I certainly hope that this cloture will not be invoked on this matter.

I might say, this issue isn't whether private property owners should be protected or whether private property owners are entitled to just compensation if their property is taken for public use. The fifth amendment already provides for that. You can get into the Federal court under the present system. You don't need this legislation. You have to permit the case to ripen. That is what the courts have been saying. In other words, exhaust your remedies on the local level before you can go into the Federal courts.

I greatly hope, as I said before, that for the sake of the locals and those who believe that powers should be at the local level, that a system that has been in place for the past 200 years is not arbitrarily changed as is proposed by this legislation here. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah is recognized.

Mr. HATCH. Madam President, I never cease to be shocked at some of the arguments made around here. A gas station in a 30-home residence area is going to rise to the dignity of what we are talking about here—give me a break. Houses of prostitution near places of worship—give me a break. Nobody is arguing about things like that. The State and local areas certainly have total control over those.

I am well aware this bill is opposed by the Department of Justice, many localities, some interstate governmental associations, and certain environmental groups. Almost knee-jerked in many respects. I believe their concerns that the bill would hinder local prerogatives and significantly increase the amount of Federal litigation are not only highly overstated but highly misunderstood by them. The bill is carefully drafted to ensure that aggrieved property owners must seek solutions on the local or State level before filing a Federal claim. It sets a limit on how many procedures localities may impose.

I don't consider just a few months reasonable procedure. The average case is taking 9½ years. If you are some poor little property owner, or even a developer, if you want to use some of the language that has been thrown around here and you have a just reason to bring up a takings claim because the State or local or Federal Government has taken your property, you have to have pretty deep pockets to be able to litigate for 9½ years. The reason you do is some of these localities are acting improperly and using the law to allow these cases to never ripen so that they can be heard.

I personally believe that the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island would change his mind if he just looked at the case and realized we are talking about true Federal issues here that should be in Federal court and should be there promptly, not after years of delay by local municipalities and/or other agencies, throwing up logjam after logjam to stop reasonable people from getting reasonable results under the circumstances. This bill will do that.

Now, when we originally wrote this bill, when it came from the House, it had provisions in there that caused some angst among people who are truly thoughtful in this area. So we, being truly thoughtful, made changes that aren't just technical, but changes that basically, I thought, solved every problem being raised on the floor today. It is extremely difficult. Let me just say that.

Moreover, I seriously doubt that there will be a rush of new litigation flooding Federal courts. This was the conclusion of none other than the Congressional Budget Office contained in the cost estimate section of the committee report accompanying H.R. 1534. Although CBO was unable to ascertain the increase in costs if large claims were allowed to proceed in Federal courts, it did note, after consulting legal experts, that "only a small proportion [of State cases] would be tried in Federal Court as the result of this H.R. 1534. . . ."

It is extremely difficult to prove a takings claim, and this bill does not in any way redefine what constitutes a taking. These claims are also very expensive to bring. Like I say, the average, over the last 10 years, has been 9½ years to bring even the most simple claim to fruition or conclusion. That is not what the Founding Fathers thought when they did the fifth amendment allowing and putting in the takings provision. These claims are expensive to bring. Paradoxically, localities' defense of Federal actions may be lessened by the bill, because localities already must litigate property rights claims on Federal ripeness grounds, which take years to resolve. It costs localities more money than they should have to pay.

Let me restate this. By providing certainty on the ripeness issue, the bill may very well reduce litigation costs to localities. Substantive takings claims, unless they are likely to prevail on the merits, are simply too hard to prove and too expensive to bring in Federal court. And the issue of ripeness will have been removed by the bill from the already-crowded court dockets.

Madam President, it is interesting to note that once many State officials, localities, and State and trade organizations really examine the measure, they rapidly become supporters of the bill. Those supporting the bill or increased vigilance in the property rights arena include the Governors of Tennessee, Wisconsin, Virginia, New Mexico, North Dakota, and South Carolina. They also include the American Legislative Exchange Council, which represents over 3,000 State legislatures, and trade groups such as America's Community Bankers, the National Mortgage Association of America, the National Association of Home Builders, the National Association of Realtors, and the National Federation of Independent Businesses, the organ of small business in this country. They are sick and tired of small businesses being taken advantage of by some of these people in some of these local areas and State areas, and even the Federal areas, in taking their property without just compensation. Then they have to go 9½ years to vindicate their claims. By the time they get there, the property is not worth anything anyway, or the interest has been consumed by attorney's fees.

People who support this bill also include agricultural interests, such as the American Farm Bureau, the American Forest and Paper Association, the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, the National Grange Association, et cetera, et cetera.

Just as important, let me point out that 133 House sponsors of the House-passed bill—and that is a bill different from this one, and that bill is subject to some of these criticisms—we have reformed that. The 133 House sponsors of the House-passed bill were former State and local officeholders. They are not stupid. They feel just as deeply about State and local office concerns as anybody on this floor.

I find it rather amusing that the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island is so solicitous of State and local areas, having argued on the other side on almost every other issue that has come before the Senate. Let's stop and think about it. I don't believe that these 133 former State and local officeholders would have voted for the bill if it conflicted with local sovereignty. The fact is that it does not conflict with local sovereignty. The fact is that it gives plenty of reasons and plenty of avenues for the local and State and other municipalities to solve these problems.

We have bent over backwards trying to accommodate those expressing concern about the bill which passed out of the Senate Judiciary Committee. We met with city mayors, representatives of local governmental organizations, attorneys general, and religious groups, to name a few. Some of these have signed these recent letters. I am not sure they understand any of these issues, let alone how much we have made in changes to this bill.

We held group meetings and asked for suggestions and changes to the bill, which would alleviate opposition and concerns. I thank Senators ABRAHAM, ASHCROFT, DEWINE, SPECTER, THOMPSON, and respective staffs, for negotiating and drafting changes to the bill designed to meet the concerns of particularly certain localities. These changes alleviate municipalities' concerns that the bill would become a vehicle for frivolous and novel suits. They remove any incentive the bill may have for property owners to file specious suits against localities. They foster negotiations to resolve problems, and these changes recognize the right of the States and localities to abate nuisances without having to pay compensation.

First of all, we created a new section dealing with the award of attorney's fees. In this section, we amended section 1988(b) of title 28 of the U.S. Code, which allows a court to award litigation costs and attorney's fees to the prevailing party in civil rights actions. This change allows a district court to hold the party seeking redress liable for reasonable attorney's fees and costs if the takings claim is not substantially justified. This section was created to address the localities' concerns that they would have to defend expensive, frivolous cases in Federal Court, wasting taxpayers' money. This section eliminates those concerns.

I think that the mayor of Salt Lake might have had a different opinion—or other mayors that the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island has cited, or the other Governors that the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island has cited. I have reason to believe that they haven't seen this current substitute that we have here, or they would change, like so many others are changing.

The problem is that you get these old bills out—and, yes, there were problems with the old bills, but that is what the legislative process is designed to correct. That is what we are doing here.

Mr. LEAHY. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. HATCH. I am a little bit agitated right now, and I want to finish some of these thoughts.

Mr. LEAHY. Well, I don't want to add to the agitation of the distinguished Senator.

Mr. HATCH. I will just say that the distinguished Senator very seldom does.

Another amendment to the bill requires a party seeking redress for a taking of real property to give any potential defendant written notice 60 days prior to a commencement of action in district court. This was added to address the localities' concerns that they will have insufficient time to negotiate with parties seeking redress before a Federal action was filed. This delay, I might add, acts as an inducement to seek compromise.

In addition, we added a nuisance provision to the purpose section of the bill that confirms State power to prevent land uses that are nuisances. I suspect that a house of prostitution would be a nuisance alongside a church or some other place. Perhaps there are many in this body that might agree with me that it is a nuisance, period. Under existing law, States have authority to abate nuisances and zone for commercial or residential uses. The Supreme Court, in Lucas v. South Carolina Coastal Council, held that such State actions require no compensation to affected landowners.

This change in the bill thus makes clear that State prerogatives are not altered. The bill, in any event, changes no substantive law and merely allows property owners fair access to the Federal courts after having gone through a variety of procedures in the State courts. And reasonable procedures at that, but not after 9½ years of being jerked around by some of the State courts, and Federal courts, by the way, because the Federal courts have been jerking them around, too, refusing to hear some of these cases on the doctrine of rightness, and the other doctrines that I have mentioned.

All this belies the bizarre and false allegations, such as the one contained in the Minority Views of the H.R. 1534 Committee Report, that if the bill passes localities may not prohibit gas stations in residential areas unless compensation is paid.

Finally, to narrow the scope of the ripeness provision, we limited the term "property owner" to include only "owners of real property." This change greatly narrows the procedural effects of this bill because the provisions of the bill that expedite access to the federal courts now will only encompass real property and, thus, will not apply to suits involving personal or intellectual property.

So we have solved that problem, which was a legitimate question, although really we ought to be protecting all property since this is a fundamental right of the fifth amendment of the Constitution of the United States of America, one that is ignored most of the time in our country.

THE STATES RIGHTS ISSUE: WHY S. 2271 DOES NOT IMPACT STATES' RIGHTS

S. 2271 affects only federal claims being brought before federal court. State and local claims, claims based on state or local law, are not affected by S. 2271. The fact that constitutional claims can arise from the actions of local governments does not make them any less a federal claim, any more than a violation of First Amendment rights are federal claims whether it is a federal or local official doing the violating.

The Supreme Court has long held that the Eleventh Amendment makes state governments acting under state law immune from suits filed under U.S.C. section 1983. In other words, state governments are already immune from suits filed on constitutional grounds by established Supreme court precedent, and S. 2271 does nothing to change that.

Local governments, however, are not immune from lawsuits claiming that constitutional rights have been violated. Again, it is the Supreme Court, not S. 2271, that has made local agencies subject to federal claims by individuals alleging their rights have been violated.

All S. 2271 does is ensure that when a suit is filed in federal court, the case can be heard on the merits, rather than spending time and money to determine whether the case is "ripe."

State and local agencies will have all the authority and power they currently have to make land use decisions—for zoning, environment, etc. S. 2271 does not change any substantive law. But, if local agencies violate Fifth Amendment rights when making land use decisions, S. 2271 helps a property owner get a more expedient hearing on the merits without the 10-year ripeness battle, which is one of the most futile experiences anyone can go through.

The property owner, under S. 2271, will still have to make at least one meaningful appeal to the agency in question before bringing a lawsuit. That means agencies have at least two cracks at making a balanced decision that protects the environment and public health while protecting the rights of private property owners. In the real world, property owners will likely try repeatedly, because the chances of getting a favorable ruling in court on the merits is extremely slim—and S. 2271 offers no help there.

The reason the bill refers to a property owner being rejected on "one meaningful application" and "one appeal or waiver" before a decision is considered final is to create some objective criteria so both the property owner and the land-use agency in question know when "enough is enough." The language actually codifies a body of federal cases requiring that a property owner make "one meaningful application" to the relevant land-use decision making body to ripen a Constitutional claim. (e.g. Eastern Minerals Int'l Inc. versus United States; Kawaoka versus City of Arroyo Grande; Unity Ventures versus Lake County.) The point is that property owners should not be forced to negotiate away portions of his or her constitutional rights in a series of re-applications and appeals as a condition of gaining access to federal court with a Constitutional claim. The fact that different cities or states may have varying procedures or multiple steps for making a final determination on land use is not at issue in this bill. The bill does not define what a "meaningful application" is, because it recognizes that different states and cities handle land use applications differently—the bill tries to be respectful of those differences and allow state and local officials determine that question.

If there is a threshold question of state or local law that is essential to the merits of the federal claim, and it is patently unclear or confusing, the federal court can, under S. 2271, have that question certified in state court under whatever procedures the state has in effect for certifying questions for a federal court.

In other words, if a federal claim involves an important issue of state law, the state courts will have first crack at it under S. 2271. The only difference is that the property owner will not get turned away from federal court and forced to file the whole claim again in state court, and go through a 10-year delay process that literally is subverting the very constitutional provisions that we are sworn to uphold.

This bill is pretty well thought out, and, frankly, I ask unanimous consent that a whole raft of letters from various people who are in support of this bill ranging from these various groups and so forth be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE ASSOCIATED GENERAL
CONTRACTORS OF AMERICA,
Washington, DC, June 19, 1998.

Hon. ORRIN G. HATCH,
U.S. Senate, Russell Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR HATCH: The Associated General Contractors of America (AGC) supports H.R. 1534, the Private Property Rights Implementation Act. This legislation will provide access to justice for private property owners subject to takings by the federal government.

The legislation defines what is a final administrative decision by the federal government under the "ripeness doctrine." For private property owners, the bill determines what the last administrative appeal is, triggering an owner filing for compensation when the government has taken or devalued property. Recent private property cases heard by the Supreme Court were merely decisions allowing private property owners to pursue a "takings" claim under the Constitution's 5th Amendment protections. Property owners have been prevented from going to court regarding a takings claim when a lower court rules the administrative appeals process has not been exhausted. In this legislation, Congress will prevent further costly, unnecessary litigation by providing access to courts, ensuring federal courts will hear takings cases.

AGC urges you to support this legislation. This will prevent lengthy administrative cases and allows private property owners immediate and appropriate redress of a takings claim.

Sincerely,

LOREN E. SWEATT,
Director, Congressional Relations

AMERICAN FOREST AND PAPER
Washington, DC, July 9, 1998.

Hon. ORRIN HATCH,
U.S. Senate, Russell Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR HATCH: The Senate will have the opportunity as early as Monday, July 13, to cast a vote in support of private property owners by voting in favor of S. 2271, the "Property Rights Implementation Act" on the Senate floor. On behalf of the American Forest & Paper Association, and the 9 million woodlot owners in this country, we urge you to vote "yes" to invoke cloture and on final passage of this bill. A vote in support of S. 2271 will be considered a key vote on behalf of our membership.

S. 2271 is a moderate, balanced, bipartisan effort to ensure that private property owners have their day in court. The Fifth Amendment to the Constitution states that private property should not be taken by the government for public use unless the owner is paid just compensation. However, recent studies have shown that property owners attempting to protect their property rights in federal court are rejected on procedural grounds over 80% of the time without ever getting a hearing on the merits of their case. Those who do get their day in court are forced to spend an average of nearly 10 years in litigation and procedural hurdles.

S. 2271 is strictly a procedural bill—it does not define a "taking" or mandate compensation. The bill:

Helps property owners obtain federal court relief more quickly and more affordably to preserve their Constitutionally-protected property rights.

Does not change substantive law. Property owners still must have the facts and prove their case. The bill does not create any new cause of action for property owners to give federal courts more power and authority than they have already.

Does not destroy the current exercise of state authority to determine land use, but does require states to use their procedures in a fair and constitutional way.

Affects only Federal claims. Federal courts will still be able to send unresolved state claims back to state court for certification before the federal courts go forward.

Streamlines the federal court docket by simplifying the federal procedures for constitutional takings claims.

Thank you for your time and attention to this important legislation. We strongly urge you to support S. 2271 on the Senate floor.

Sincerely,

JOHN H. DRESSENDORFER,
Vice President.

Mr. HATCH. Madam President, I yield the floor and reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. LEAHY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont is recognized.

Mr. LEAHY. Madam President, I listened with interest to my good friend, the distinguished senior Senator from Utah. He said that perhaps some of those who are opposed to this may not understand the bill. There is a reason for this. The bill we are discussing is S. 2271 which was introduced just last week. We never had a hearing on S. 2271. While we had a hearing on H.R. 1534 this bill is significantly different from S. 2271. S. 2271 was just printed late last week and many Members may not have had an opportunity to carefully review it.

This new bill just came bouncing in here. We haven't had one single hearing on this particular bill. My good friend from Utah talks of the care that went into it. This arrived full-blown, full-grown on the Senate floor—not one single Senate hearing on this bill. In fact, the bill on which we did hold a hearing, H.R. 1534, apparently bothered them enough that it was significantly changed. We haven't done a report on S. 2271. One was done on H.R. 1534 but not on S. 2271. Madam President, no

Senator can point to 30 seconds of Senate hearing on S. 2271. No Senator can point to a two-sentence report on this bill.

A lot of Senators probably did not even have a chance to look at S. 2271. Apparently, they thought H.R. 1534 should be changed. But this is a new bill that many of us feel is worse than its predecessor. But there have been no hearings on the changed text. There is no report on S. 2271, and under some new streamlined process the bill was just sent to the floor. We will vote on S. 2271, and then we will debate it later. It is like Alice in Wonderland. You have the sentencing first, and the trial later. This is not the way the U.S. Senate should act.

I think that is why the National Governors' Association, the National League of Cities, the National Association of Counties, the U.S. Conference of Mayors, and the National Conference of State Legislatures all stated their opposition to this new bill. Just 3 days ago, they said:

A review of the most recent proposed revisions to the legislation makes clear that those changes do not address our fundamental problems with the bill *** The framers of the Constitution never intended federal courts to be the first resort in resolving community disputes between local governments and private parties. In our view, these issues should be settled locally, as close to the affected community as possible.

In fact, some would say H.R. 1534, the earlier bill, would be better than S. 2271. S. 2271 is more burdensome to local governments than earlier versions.

First, the revised bill goes even further in limiting Federal judges' ability to abstain from cases dealing with local land use decisions. Maybe they have to abstain because we don't fill the vacancies of Federal courts. But assuming there is a Federal court and a Federal judge who has been lucky enough to be confirmed by the U.S. Senate, they have a limited ability to abstain. In S. 2271 a Federal judge in many circumstances cannot abstain from or relinquish jurisdiction to a State court because the plaintiff "brings a prior or concurrent proceeding before a State, territory, or local tribunal."

This revision effectively turns the earlier version of this provision on its head. Rather than leaving room for abstention when a State law claim is asserted, the revised version specifically states that a district court shall not abstain when there is a State law claim.

I don't know when we have ever done anything like this. This is an unprecedented big-foot action on the part of the Federal Government of stepping in and telling local citizens and state courts, "You don't count," as far as the U.S. Senate is concerned.

Rather than reducing interference with State court resolution of State and local law issues, the revised version of the bill actually would maximize Federal court interference with State courts.

Second, the revisions make the bill worse from a local government standpoint by eliminating the authority conferred on local governments in the bill as reported by committee to define a "meaningful application."

Instead, the revised bill would allow Federal courts to get into looking at local land use requirements and applications. Other changes in the bill are either harmful, cosmetic or without significant effect.

As a general matter, the bill would introduce new vague terminology which could lead to years of litigation over the meaning of this new language. And, of course, we are asked to enact S. 2271 without even a report. Enactment of the new legislation would make land use litigation process more time-consuming.

Look at the insertion of the phrase "one meaningful application to use the property . . . within a reasonable time." This change ostensibly addresses the concern that H.R. 1534, as reported, suggests an applicant only had to initiate a local application or waiver proceeding, but not necessarily await the outcome of the proceeding before suing in Federal court.

The change to "within a reasonable time" simply confirms that in some circumstances a developer would be able to proceed to Federal court without first obtaining local decisions. Many States and local governments already have specific time limits for administrative decisions. That seems to throw it out of the window.

I have said over and over again that when property is taken, the landowner should be compensated. That is what our Constitution requires—it requires just compensation. That is what local, State and federal Governments are doing. Certainly, there has been no need for such sweeping legislation demonstrated.

I wish we had an opportunity to work with the chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee to have a better bill. It is his prerogative not to have a hearing on this particular bill or to have a detailed report on it.

And we have instances where my friend from Utah says that this bill applies only to owners of property, but it defines owner as the owner or possessor of property or rights in property. That is more expansive than the normal meaning of the word owner. Somebody who steals property is a possessor of property. An adverse possessor of property is by definition in possession of the property. As I said, we have a case here where something is not broken, but we are about to fix it anyway.

Madam President, I withhold the balance of my time. I ask the Chair, how much time remains to the Senator from Vermont?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 39 minutes remaining.

Mr. LEAHY. I withhold that time.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, how much time does the Senator from Utah have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah has 22 minutes 48 seconds.

Mr. HATCH. Let me just say this, that we have held hearings through the years on similar bills, and we have held hearings on the underlying bill. We made four changes, which I outlined in my last remarks. So the hearings were held and the changes were made to accommodate some of the concerns of those who have been critical of this bill. So this is not without hearings, and it is not without an understanding.

I yield 10 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Texas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. GRAMM. Madam President, I thank you. I thank my colleague for yielding.

I would like to say that I think comments made today are living proof of the old adage that no good deed ever goes unpunished. The plain truth is that we have had numerous hearings on the issue of private property and takings. Our colleague from Utah has been a leader in this effort. We are considering this bill today because he has continually tried to accommodate people who oppose the underlying amendment that he has so effectively championed.

The issue before us today is not an issue of technicalities. It is not an issue of whether or not a certain number of mayors or Governors or locally elected officials think one thing or think another. The issue before us is, are we going to effectively enforce the Constitution of the United States?

What an incredible paradox it is that if we had similar legislation before the Senate to enforce our first amendment rights to freedom of religion, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of the right to assemble, and to address the Government about our grievances, we would have 100 Members of the Senate here demanding that the Senator's bill be adopted. If the Senator from Utah was simply trying to guarantee our freedom of speech and religion by setting out a clear course where ordinary people could have a day in court in determining whether their first amendment rights had been respected or abused, we would have 100 Members of the Senate supporting this bill.

The real issue before us is that there are many Members of the Senate, many Governors, many locally elected officials who do not support our fifth amendment rights. The fifth amendment to the Constitution says, "Nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation."

We all know, and it is the reason that this amendment is before us, that every day in America private property is being taken without just compensation. We all know in the name of endangered species, in the name of wetlands, in the name of numerous other public purposes, private property rights are being trampled on and people are finding their property taken or dramatically reduced in value because of some public objective. The opposition to this amendment is not based on technicalities. The opposition to this amendment is not based on some letter signed by some local officials or some State legislators. The opposition to this amendment is based on the fact that there are many in the country and many in the Congress who would like the fifth amendment guarantees of protecting private property to be gone. These guarantees stood up very well until the Depression era when the Supreme Court basically started to rule against private property. The Supreme Court and the lower courts have now moved back toward recognizing and respecting the fifth amendment. But the problem is that a lot of ordinary people have trouble getting their day in court. They often find themselves shuffling between the district court and the Court of Claims trying to uphold their rights.

So what does the bill before us do? It sets out a very simple process whereby people who believe that their private property rights have been trampled on can go into Federal court and have their day in court and have a decision made. I believe that private property is at least as important as the right of freedom of religion and speech. Our Founding Fathers understood that if your property is not secure, your right to freedom of religion and your right to freedom of speech can be abridged. Our Founding Fathers understood that private property is not only a human right; it is the basic human right. It is a foundation right of the American Republic. And, more important, it has been a foundation right of every great civilization in history.

Will Durant, in talking about Rome and the rise of Rome says, "Never was there a day when private property did not exist in Rome." The foundation of ancient Athens was private property, and the respect for private property. It cannot be a happy day in America when private property rights are trampled upon. Those who oppose the fifth amendment say, "If you made the Government pay people when we took their property for these good purposes, then we wouldn't be able to take their property for these good purposes." They say, "Surely it is worth it to protect the wetlands and endangered species and thousands of other objectives to be able to take people's property. And if we had to compensate them, we couldn't promote these public purposes."

I would just conclude by making two points. No. 1, why should the property owner, and the property owner alone, be forced to bear the cost of promoting these public objectives? And, second, when the Founding Fathers wrote, "Nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation," is it not clear that they were not just talking about taking your property to build a road across, they were talking about Government action that profoundly lowered the value of land in use or exchange?

So, this is not a debate about technicalities. It is not a debate about letters signed by local officials or State officials. It is a debate about the Constitution and about the fifth amendment. Those who believe in private property, those who support private property rights, will vote for this amendment. And those who do not support private property, those who believe that public purpose is more important than private property and that taking property without compensation to promote some public good—as they would define it—will vote "no" on this amendment.

Many will try to confuse the voter about what the issue is. The issue is the fifth amendment. The issue is whether or not we respect private property and private property rights in America. I respect private property and private property rights in America. That is why I am for the pending bill. I hope my colleagues will vote "yes."

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont is recognized.

Mr. LEAHY. Madam President, I have another matter pressing. I am going to leave the remainder of my time in the hands of the Senator from Washington. I know the Senator from Rhode Island and others still want to speak. There will be time. I believe I have close to 40 minutes left—30-some-odd minutes?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 36 minutes remaining.

Mr. LEAHY. I now yield to the Senator from Washington such time as she may need, and she would then reserve the remainder of our time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mrs. MURRAY. I ask unanimous consent a fellow from my office, Micki Aronson, be granted the privilege of the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. MURRAY. Madam President, I rise today in opposition to S. 2271, the bill before the Senate this evening. I do so knowing that I have the support of the vast majority of Washington State voters who, 3 years ago, soundly defeated a radical and dangerous referendum that is very similar to the bill that is before us today. In 1995, the people of Washington State overwhelmingly rejected a referendum that would have put developers and resource exploiters ahead of the rest of us. They defeated this proposal because they knew it really only amounted to one thing: a massive tax increase on regular people. Developers and their supporters would have us pay for the right to a high quality of life and strong communities, whereas today we enjoy these things as a result of basic zoning laws and environmental standards.

While the measure before us differs somewhat from Referendum 48, its underlying motive does not. Developers somehow believe that they are being denied their property rights by having to work through local and State land use laws. And, to be fair, there have been some isolated cases in which a maze of laws has thwarted reasonable environmentally sensitive projects. I personally will continue to urge local and State governments to streamline their processes to fix these occasional problems.

But, basically, the system works. It is simply not broken, and this bill is not necessary.

Mr. President, the most objectionable provision in this bill is that it allows developers to short-circuit local administrative, zoning, and other land use procedures. This promises to send increased litigation against already strapped local and State governments. This means more taxes, both to fund the court battles and, if local governments lose, to pay off developers to protect our quality of life. In addition, simply the threat of a Federal court may drive a town to acquiesce to a developer's demands, because they cannot afford to go to court and fight to protect their local land use decisions.

Frankly, I am surprised at the support this bill has gotten from those who traditionally would defer to local government making decisions on how best to use land and instead give that decision making authority to Federal courts. This seems like quite a reversal. Frankly, it seems particularly odd, given the Senate's backlog in filling Federal court vacancies.

While we have moved two of our Washington State candidates—Margaret McKeown and Ed Shea—both Senator GORTON and I are pushing very hard to get another circuit court nominee, Ron Gould, and a district court nominee, Bob Lasnik, heard and confirmed. Another district court judge is set to retire in the near future, creating another vacancy. I have to ask, Why is the Senate increasing Federal caseloads with this bill while simultaneously not filling empty seats?

That issue aside, this bill is not what this country needs. We do not need to undermine our Nation's laws that protect public health, safety, and the environment. There are usually very good reasons why development is prohibited in certain areas. It could be safety; the area could be prone to flooding or to landslides. It could be protection of water quality. It might be protection of threatened endangered species or ecosystems. And, in those cases where a local, State, or Federal entity does unreasonably and actually take a private person's property for a public good, we have a well-established legal system to provide compensation. And that system is working.

Let me close by reminding everyone that the Conference of Mayors, the National Association of Counties, and the National Conference of State Legislators oppose this legislation. In addition, every conservation group I am aware of opposes this. This is simply not good public policy.

I am committed to keeping the Pacific Northwest beautiful. I am committed to ensuring my constituents have the power to enact reasonable zoning ordinances to protect their water and environmental resources. I do not believe their taxes should be used to pay off developers.

I pledge to my constituents to work to ensure that the reasons we are all so proud to call Washington home remain intact. This bill would limit our ability to protect the things we hold precious, and I will vigorously oppose it, and I urge my colleagues to do the same.

I reserve the remainder of our time.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished Senator from South Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ENZI). The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today in support of cloture on S.2271, the Property Rights Implementation Act. Put simply, this bill is a modest effort to help property owners get their day in court.

Currently, it is very difficult for many landowners to get into court. When a landowner wishes to develop property, he must seek approval from local land use authorities, who should quickly evaluate the request and make a decision. However, local bureaucracies may take years to make a decision or may require the landowner to make countless reapplications. There is nothing the landowner can do because the courts will wait on a final administrative determination before taking any action.

Under this bill, the courts eventually must act if the bureaucracy refuses to make a final decision. The fundamental role of local authorities in property development decisions does not change. A reasonable administrative determination of a claim is still required before the owner can go to court. In other words, the locality will still have the upper hand, but it will not hold all the cards.

After a negative administrative decision, the bill allows a landowner to choose to go to Federal court rather than state court, but only under certain limited circumstances. If a landowner brings any claims under state law, even if the state claims are secondary to the Federal claims, the case must proceed in state court. It is only if the landowner brings solely a Federal claim for a Constitutional taking that the landowner must be permitted to proceed in Federal court if he wishes. Moreover, once in Federal court, if an unsettled question of state law arises in the case, the question must be certified to the state court where possible.

Some opponents to this legislation have said that it will result in a great shift in public power to regulate land. They say that property owners will be put at a great advantage over state and local authorities who are charged with controlling development, causing property owners to win many more claims. This argument will not prove to be correct. It cannot because the bill does not change the standard for determining a property rights claim. The legislation does not provide property owners any more rights than they have today, even though the rights they now have are limited and uncertain under case law. It is very difficult for a property owner to show that property has been taken for purposes of the Fifth Amendment, and that will not change under this bill.

The legislation only makes it easier to get to Federal court for a takings claim. It simply gives landowners a fair opportunity to get a decision. It does not make it any easier for them to win.

A limited option of Federal court access should exist when someone is trying to adjudicate their property rights secured by the Constitution. When other Constitutional rights are violated, such as the right to free speech, the person can go immediately to Federal court for relief. Why should the right to just compensation for a taking be any different? Indeed, for free speech issues involving obscenity, the court must look to the standards in the local community, but the claimant can still go immediately to Federal court. As Chief Justice William Rehnquist has written for the Court, "We see no reason why the Takings Clause of the Fifth Amendment, as much a part of the Bill of Rights as the First Amendment and Fourth Amendment, should be relegated to the status of a poor relation."

I agree with the Supreme Court. This bill would solve that major problem. Yet, it makes only modest changes in the current system. I hope my colleagues will support this small but important step for fairness in property rights.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise to express my strong opposition to S. 2271.

On the face of this bill, it sounds like the proponents are seeking to make some "procedural" changes in federal court jurisdiction that do not go as far as last Congress' unsuccessful attempts to change the standards for granting compensation under the Fifth Amendment.

But no one should be mistaken. This bill would dramatically change the standards—known as abstention and ripeness—which guide the resolution of claims for "just compensation" against local communities in local zoning disputes. The impact of these so-called procedural changes would be very significant, making it far easier to seriously undermine local land-use decisions. As a New York Times editorial stated with respect to the related House bill: "(The bill) is a dangerous piece of work that would threaten local zoning laws, reshape time-honored principles of federalism and make Federal judges the arbiters of land-use decisions everywhere. It would be a dream come true for developers but a nightmare for rational community planning." I believe that conclusion would apply with equal force to the bill before us.

That is why the bill is opposed by the National Governors Association, the League of Cities, the United States Conference of Mayors, the National Association of Counties, the Judicial Conference of the United States, 40 Attorneys General, major religious groups, the National Trust for Historic Preservation and a broad array of environmental and public interest groups.

For my State, this type of proposal is particularly contrary to what our citizens are seeking. There is no bigger issue right now in the State than the desire to preserve open space from development. Our Governor, John Rowland, has initiated a major program to preserve open space and the State Legislature has strongly supported these efforts. Connecticut is not unique: all over the country, states and localities are making preservation of open space a top priority.

This bill would seriously undermine these efforts by greatly expanding the volume of land-use litigation against local communities. Equally important, the heightened threat of litigation would significantly increase the leverage of developers over local communities in negotiations over land use issues. The existing authority of local governments to resolve local land use issues in their community would be undermined, and the ability of the public to participate in land-use decisions affecting their communities would be greatly diminished. In short, the end result of this legislation would be to undercut the ability of our nation's localities to protect zoning and land use regulations which average homeowners depend on to protect their investments.

In reviewing the Committee and Minority views on the bill considered by the Committee, I was particularly struck by a comment by Senator DEWINE during the markup. He stated: "The bill would in effect, leave local land use planners with two bad options—acquiesce to developers by making lenient decisions, or do whatever they think necessary to protect the local community and then face multiple suits in Federal court without having much negotiating ability with property owners." Senator DEWINE is right and with respect to the bill before us, too.

What is striking about this bill is the direct attack it makes on the ability of local and state governments to determine what is best for their communities, despite the fact that there is no evidence that local governments are incompetent or routinely deal in bad faith with developers. Nor is there any record to support the proposition that state courts cannot deal fairly with local land use zoning disputes.

Mr. President, I cannot see any reason why this Senate should pass legislation that is a wholesale attack on the ability of our localities and states to protect the values and fabric of the communities in which we live. I urge my colleagues to vote against the cloture motion.

Mr. GRAMS. Mr. President, I rise today in support of S. 2271—the Property Rights Implementation Act of 1998.

As a landowner, businessman, and Senator, I have long been concerned that the imposition of too many regulations adversely impact individuals and businesses. For too long, bureaucrats have exercised broad authority over local citizens and oftentimes trampled on their constitutional rights. It is time to bring even more comprehensive protections of property rights to the Senate floor for debate and a vote, and S. 2271 provides those missing or abused protections.

I am proud to say that I joined many of my colleagues last year in co-sponsoring S. 1204, Senator COVERDELL's Property Owners Access to Justice Act of 1997. That bipartisan legislation—very similar to that which we are debating today—simplified access to the federal courts for private property owners whose rights may have been deprived by government actions.

As we all know, the fifth amendment to the U.S. Constitution provides our nation's citizens with certain protections against the taking of their property. In cases where a taking is required, the Constitution ensures that the property owner is provided just compensation. Unfortunately, that is almost never the case and I doubt anyone in this chamber would claim the contrary. In the name of the "public good," governments often either take property or deem it unusable for virtually any productive purposes. Too often, property owners are then left with a worthless piece of land for which there is no use or little resale value.

Property owners are then forced to navigate their way through a maze of bureaucratic red tape and unending local and state roadblocks in fighting any unjust action. They are forced to exhaust any and all state or local remedies prior to having their claim heard in federal court. Because most property owners do not have the resources or the time to fight a taxpayer-subsidized army of lawyers and hurdles, they merely give up—unafforded their constitutional rights.

I am aware that the National League of Cities, the U.S. Conference of Mayors, and a whole host of State Attorneys General are opposed to S. 2271—but why? Because S. 2271 may actually force them to consider the rights of property owners before taking action. If the property in question is truly needed for the public good, then they should use eminent domain and acquire the property rather than leaving the owner holding the bag.

It is important to remember several points regarding S. 2271. First, S. 2271 does not circumvent local governments. Property owners must attempt to work through local procedures and be denied at least twice prior to seeking federal court action. S. 2271 does not preempt local zoning. Any use of the land by the property owner must be consistent with local zoning requirements—if not, S. 2271 does not apply. Additionally, S. 2271 does not require compensation or remove the burden to prove harm from the property owner in proving harm or the justification for compensation.

Similar legislation—authorized by Congressman GALLEGLY—was introduced in the House last year. It quickly gathered the support of 237 co-sponsors and passed the House last October by a vote of 248 to 178. Likewise, S. 1204 was introduced in the Senate last September with Senators LANDRIEU and DORGAN as cosponsors. Both bills received significant bi-partisan support upon introduction and throughout the legislative process.

Mr. President, it is time we provide property owners with certainty. It is time we provide property owners with avenues for action. And it is time we provide property owners with the rights guaranteed them under our Constitution. I urge my colleagues to vote in support of the cloture petition for S. 2271.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I rise today to address the important issue of private property rights and to support the Property Rights Implementation Act of 1998, S. 2271.

Private property rights have been the cornerstone of our free society. The fifth amendment of our Constitution states, "private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation." Currently, too many Americans are being denied fair access to Federal courts in order to uphold their fifth amendment constitutional rights.

S. 2271 would expedite access to the federal courts for individuals hurt by a government "taking" of private property. At the same time, it protects states rights by ensuring that any question of state or local law that is unclear to the fundamental merits of a case is to be sent back to the state courts before a federal court can continue.

Mr. President, the right of the people to be represented and heard is the basis of our government.

S. 2271 gives us the opportunity to ensure that the people of our nation are not ignored. It allows an individual citizen to exercise their fifth amendment rights provided to them by our founding fathers without costing them thousands of dollars and without taking 8 or 10 years of court proceedings to maintain these rights. As we've all heard before, "justice delayed is justice denied."

S. 2271 only re-enforces the constitution and the intent of our founding Fathers who understood the value of private property from the standpoint of individual political freedoms and individual economic freedoms. Those who would argue in opposition are supporting more government control by not allowing an individual to care for their own property. I believe each individual land owner can and should be responsible for their property without breaking current environmental, federal, state, or local laws. This bill does not create special rights for property owners; it simply allows them the same access to federal courts as other plaintiffs claiming a violation of their constitutional rights.

Mr. President, for these reasons I stand in support of S. 2271 and hope that my colleagues on both sides of the aisle will do the same. I also want to thank Mr. LOTT and Mr. HATCH for bringing this important legislation to the floor.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the motion to proceed to consideration of S. 2271, the Property Rights Implementation Act of 1998. This bill, introduced by the senior Senator from Utah, incorporates provisions of the bipartisan bill I introduced last year along with the Senator from Louisiana, Senator LANDRIEU, on this same subject.

Our legislation, the Property Owners Access to Justice Act, was introduced to simplify access to the federal courts for private property owners. S. 2271 would accomplish the same objective. The Constitution requires that when the government takes private property for a public purpose, the property owner must receive just compensation. This "takings clause" guarantee is one of the strongest defenses we have against arbitrary government.

Yet in many cases property owners must navigate a time-consuming and expensive procedural maze to protect their rights. Federal courts do not consider a takings case "ripe" for their consideration until all state law issues have been resolved and all administrative remedies exhausted. For property owners this can mean years of court battles and tens of thousands of dollars in legal fees just to win the right to have a federal court hear the merits of their case. One study found less than 6% of takings claims filed between 1983 and 1988 were ever deemed ripe for federal court adjudication.

Small landowners, first-time home buyers, and family farmers simply cannot afford this process. They deserve to have their claims heard and their rights in their own property settled.

S. 2271 sets a clear standard for when a claimant has exhausted all administrative remedies by defining when a "final decision" has been reached for purposes of ripeness doctrine. It also allows property owners to choose whether to assert their Fifth Amendment rights in state or federal court.

The supporters of S. 2271 believe that property owners deserve the same access to justice as persons defending their rights to free speech, freedom of religion, due process, or any other freedom protected by the Constitution. If your rights under the First Amendment are infringed by the government, you are not told to endure endless administrative hearings before seeking to uphold your rights in court. Fifth Amendment rights deserve the same degree of protection. Under the S. 2271, private property owners will no longer be turned away at the courthouse door.

Mr. President, it is important to note that S. 2271 is strictly procedural in nature. It does not change substantive law. It does not define a "taking" or establish a trigger for when compensation is due. It does not give property owners any special access to the federal courts. On the contrary, it allows property owners the same access to federal courts that other claimants currently have.

The property owner would still shoulder the burden of proving that he or she has been injured and deserves compensation. The bill gives property owners a choice of how and where to assert their property rights under the Constitution. If the property owner wants to pursue action against a local or state agency that has infringed on his or her rights, the property owner can sue in state or local court, as he would now. Or, if the property owner wants to reject that route and instead pursue a Fifth Amendment takings claim, the case can be heard in federal court.

We should note that the provisions of this bill only apply to Fifth Amendment constitutional claims. Issues relating to state law or local ordinances or regulations would be resolved in state court. This bill does not bring state law claims into federal court.

Opponents of this legislation have claim that it will abolish local control over zoning decisions or will federalize zoning law. Suggestions that this bill intrudes on the prerogatives of local governments are simply wrong.

Under the bill, a property owner must submit a land use application to the local entity with authority to make land use decisions. If an application is denied, the applicant will have to either reapply or file for an appeal. If the local land use authority explained the denial and how to change the application so that it would be approved, the applicant must reapply taking into account the suggestions in the new application. If the second application is denied, the applicant may go to the next step—the applicant must appeal or request a waiver of that land use decision to the administrative body with the power to review those decisions. If a local elected body exists in the locality which has the power to review appeal decisions or land use decisions, the applicant must seek review from that body. If that review is denied, then a final decision for purposes of ripeness has been reached and the applicant may then file a claim in federal court.

There are at least three and up to five opportunities for the local land use agencies and governments to make critical decisions regarding land use applications in their community before an applicant would be able to file a claim in federal court. Anyone who runs that gauntlet and still wants to file a federal claim may or may not prevail on the merits, but the claim will certainly not be frivolous.

S. 2271 applies to claims filed in federal court which involve only a federal Fifth Amendment taking claim. A federal court may still dismiss the case or send it back to state court if there is a pending state claim based on the same set of facts, the claim asserts state law claims, or the claim involves a state regulatory matter. But the fundamental purpose of this bill is to enable citizens to defend their federal constitutional rights in federal court. This in no way denigrates the lawful authority of local governments over land use, because all levels of government must obey the Constitution.

Mr. President, S. 2271 is a narrowly targeted but vitally important step toward restoring full protection of a fundamental constitutional right. I urge support for the motion to proceed.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I wanted to take a few moments to state my opposition to S. 2271, the Private Property Rights Implementation Act of 1998.

First, Mr. President, on behalf of my constituents, I want to indicate my strong concerns about the manner in which this bill has come to the Senate floor, and indicate why I opposed cloture on the motion to proceed to this bill. If necessary, I will return to the floor to discuss my concerns about this legislation in greater detail. The Senate Judiciary Committee, upon which I serve, reported H.R. 1534, the Citizen's Access to Justice Act of 1997, with amendments. I voted against reporting that measure.

In an effort to address concerns raised in Committee debate when the bill was reported, the Chairman and Senior Senator from Utah (Mr. HATCH) announced that he would work with Committee members to seek necessary improvements. The bill now before us embodies what the Chairman would have offered on the floor as a substitute amendment to H.R. 1534 as reported. Not only do I take exception to the result of this attempt to "improve" the bill but I am also alarmed at the speed with which this measure has been brought to the floor. The resulting bill number shuffle and procedural debate over whether or not the proponents would be offering a substitute amendment has left my constituents, on both sides of this issue, frustrated and confused.

This extremely technical and complicated matter is of critical importance to a wide variety of interests in my state who have followed this legislation since the early days of this Congress. Thus, I had hoped to act with greater concern for those constituents interested in the outcome of this measure as we sought to move it to the floor.

Procedurally, I am also concerned, Mr. President, that S. 2271 differs significantly from the legislation the Judiciary Committee reported. Members, for the first time, have heard about the substance of this bill through floor debate today. Given the potential impact of this legislation on both the federal government and local governments' financing and regulatory structures that we should have given members both a comprehensive written description of the changes contained in S. 2271 and additional opportunities to discuss this legislation with their constituents.

I voted against this measure in Committee and oppose the bill currently before the Senate for a number of reasons. First, this bill will result in a increase in litigation over local zoning matters in federal courts. As a result of the Listening Sessions I hold in every Wisconsin county every year I have worked with constituents on a number of regulatory red tape issues. It is clear that the last thing Wisconsinites want or need is a bill that "takes" scarce resources away from local governments by exposing state and local officials in our state to threat of federal liability in their attempts to control local land use and follow federal law.

As my colleagues have pointed out, this bill creates an opportunity for clever lawyers to profit at the expense of local ordinances to which we in the Judiciary Committee, and in this body, normally claim to defer. Certainly, this bill is not consistent with any claim of deference to state and local authority. It is an explicit transfer of power to the federal government.

This bill purports to lessen the impact upon the prerogatives of local governments, but it continues to allow broad exceptions to the very abbreviation of local land use processes which the bill itself mandates, a process which can be now be the subject of federal litigation.

As the Ranking Member of the Judiciary Committee (Mr. LEAHY) has explained that S. 2271 lowers two threshold barriers to bringing takings claims against federal and local governments in federal courts. It does so by legislating both the circumstances under which courts can abstain from hearing a case and dictating when a claim may be heard by a federal court—known as "ripeness."

In the case of takings lawsuits against the federal government, a case is ripe for adjudication when, as the bill defines it, a federal agency has made a "final decision." A "final decision" exists when an either an application or an appeal to use the property has been submitted but not been approved "within a reasonable time." Similar language is incorporated to specify when suits can be brought against local governments, and that section is somewhat more deferential to local governments. The bill is more deferential to local land use regulatory bodies, unlike when a claim is brought against a federal agency, by arguably making it more likely that an initial application will be filed.

Let me repeat that for colleagues, to make it clear. Under this legislation in certain circumstances an individual is able to sue the federal government for a taking without even submitting an application to a federal agency to determine whether the action they propose violates federal law. The bill says that the party seeking redress under this bill would not be required to submit an application or appeal if the district court holds that such actions would be futile. Futility is defined as the inability to seek or obtain approvals to use real property as defined under applicable land use or environmental law. I would point out that while futility is defined for actions in district courts, there is no definition of futility for the Court of Claims, though an individual making a claim against the federal government has the option under this legislation, which also concerns this Senator, to sue in either court. These provisions allow litigation not when a Constitutional right is deprived, that is when the government denies compensation for restricted use or condemnation of property, but rather when the use of the property itself has some conditions placed upon it.

I would like my colleagues to think for a moment about what kind of anti-regulatory and anti-compliance actions the futility exemption in this legislation would encourage. Such language suggests that if one knew or might know, as an experienced developer, that a particular type of wetland filling activity would not be likely to be permitted under the Clean Water Act, then one would be free to claim that requesting a permit for such an activity would be futile and sue the federal government.

Even if the government dismisses that case, as I am sure the bill's supporters argue it would, because there are no supporting facts and no application, under the language of this bill the court isn't allowed to abstain. Aren't we sending the wrong message, Mr. President? In Wisconsin, often my constituents are unaware when an action they have taken requires them to interact with a federal agency, and my office helps constituents in those circumstances. But this legislation explicitly provides that if know that an action is prohibited, you may sue to be compensated being denied the right to do it anyway. And for those who will argue that such suits won't happen, I'd reply by saying it's a genuine risk under this legislation. If an extreme suit against the government is successful, the federal government is obligated to pay the court costs of prevailing plaintiffs.

These same provisions apply to suits against local governments, though courts can abstain if an initial application isn't filed and there is some discretion given about whether prevailing plaintiffs would have to be awarded court costs. I also want to make clear that this bill applies to local land use decisions because I believe there may be some Senators who are under the impression that this bill applies only to actions taken by federal agencies.

However, this is not the case. S. 2271 contains additional provisions which limit local decision making, expanding upon similar provisions contained in the House-passed version of this legislation. For example it would require a land-use applicant to "take into account" any suggestions given by the land use agency which denied the application when reapplying before the applicant pursues federal litigation. This language is still unclear, and certainly local governments that will have their hands tied by this bill share this view.

Second, I remain concerned that this bill applies to all forms of property. Proponents claim that it only applies to real property. It may indirectly expand of the definition of private property. This will undoubtedly lead to creative lawsuits and increased costs for the taxpayers.

This bill allows vindication of "all interests constituting property rights, as defined by Federal or State law, protected under the fifth and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution." I would remind my colleagues that "all interests constituting property" is a much broader category than real estate. Moreover, the bill creates the right of access to federal court for any actions taken by federal agencies as described in Section 6 that "infringe or take" the rights to "use and enjoy real property."

Starting down the road of extending litigation rights to all forms of property, and all uses of property may lead the federal government to protect interests we might otherwise not protect.

Take for example contractual rights to receive water from the federal government. At present, there is no federal right to "receive" water except as provided by a contract, even though a supply of water clearly is related to the ability to produce crops on one's real property. The Bureau of Reclamation delivers water in 17 Western states, pursuant to contracts, for primarily agricultural purposes. Each year, it allocates water based upon supplies available in reservoirs and other storage facilities. Most contracts generally anticipate that delivered quantities may vary on an annual basis.

During the drought of 1993, the Bureau of Reclamation reduced the quantities of water supplied to the Westlands Water District. It allocated a portion of the limited water available to protect fish in accordance with the requirements of the Endangered Species Act. When agricultural users received only 50 percent of their contract quantities, Westlands sued alleging that the liability limitations of the contract were invalid and that the agricultural users were guaranteed a fixed quantity of water at a fixed price. They contended that despite the liability limitations of the contract, the Bureau's water allocation decisions improperly deprived them of water and entitled them to compensation.

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals dismissed Westlands' claim, sustaining the federal government's contract defense. This legislation would create an expedited procedure for bringing takings claims, and specifically provides for causes of action when "use" is restricted, thus potentially compromising the federal governments' argument in the Westlands case that the government was in compliance with the contract. In response to questions I submitted about last Congress's takings legislation, which had similar definitions of "use," then Counselor to the Secretary of the Interior Joseph Sax wrote explicitly about the Administration's concerns with the potential for property rights legislation to create a new category of federal water law:

Where Congress has recently restructured federal reclamation projects to direct more economically and environmentally sensitive management, as it has done for example in California's Central Valley Project... [a]ny steps the Department of Interior takes to implement these congressionally ratified improvements would doubtless result in demands for compensation by affected interests if these bills became law.

Other portions of the bill raise similar questions. For example, is it the intent of the language to suggest that any person taking an action that causes injury to a property right, but doesn't actually take the property, creates the right of access to federal courts? Even if that action is supported or mandated by a local or state ordinance or statute? How would one substantiate an action which damages the "right to enjoy" one's property? This is just another example of the kinds of problems this legislation poses. And what about the distinction the bill makes by including special reference to "real property" without defining that term?

Wisconsin communities are deeply afraid of the litigation costs and general erosion of the notion of community that will be implicit in the answers to these questions. Mr. President, I have heard almost unprecedented levels of opposition to this legislation from local governments all over my state, from large cities like Milwaukee and Madison to small communities like the Village of Park Ridge near Stevens Point and Cudahy, Wisconsin. Individuals of every political affiliation oppose this legislation, and editorials opposing similar bills have appeared all over my state.

To me, however, one of the best arguments against this legislation was sent to me by the former Mayor of New London, Wisconsin, Gregory Mathewson. After the H.R. 1534 passed the other body and was sent to the Senate Judiciary Committee former Mayor Mathewson wrote:

Our fear with this legislation is that it tilts the current balance and increases the range of things a property owner has a right to do. Meaning that communities no longer have any clear authority to zone property or decide between conflicting interests on the basis of the best interests of the community as a whole.

We often have homeowners who do not wish to see apartments of any type built near them, owners of large houses who do not want small houses built near them, and we routinely have to tell people that the City exists for all persons not a few, and that the poor, the non-land owning and others shall be welcome.

We fear now that these decisions will involve us in continuous litigation in federal court, and all notions of community will be eroded as the questions and issues will be so generalized by the courts that local reasons, customs and planning will be irrelevant.

I ask you to see that a balance is maintained, the community ought to have rights balances against individual rights. In its current form, H.R. 1534 appears to eliminate this balance. Everybody seeks out places to live which offer a high quality of life. It must be clear that there is no quality of life if someone can do anything they want with their property or sue over any perceived impact on their property. In either case, the individual controls the community and this is the operational definition of anarchy.

Mr. President, Wisconsin communities respect property rights, and want to have well developed and well planned cities, towns, and villages. This legislation goes too far in seeking not just to clarify but to enhance the procedural rights of property owners to seek compensation under the fifth and fourteenth amendments to the Constitution. In doing it would have unintended consequences that might undo the unique character of towns across America and within my home state. It is for this reason, and the others I have described, that I oppose this legislation. I urge other Senators to join me in seeking its defeat.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I oppose this legislation. Much of the bill is almost certainly unconstitutional, and all of it is unnecessary. States and municipalities already have adequate ways to decide questions of property rights.

The goal of this misguided legislation is not to protect the constitutional rights of property owners, but to create new rights for wealthy developers. It would alter the balance of power in their favor, and force local governments across the nation to accept a wide range of activities that harm communities.

This legislation is a Pandora's Box of problems for local communities and the federal judiciary. It will force municipalities into federal court early in the land-use process. It will force federal judges to accept cases involving sensitive land-use issues that should be handled at the local or state level. It will add a new burden to federal courts, at a time when they are already overburdened. It will substantially—and unconstitutionally—broaden the jurisdiction of the Court of Federal Claims.

The bill is the latest attempt by the Republican Congress to tip the balance against neighborhoods and towns and in favor of developers. It isn't unreasonable to ask property owners to consider the health, safety, and zoning needs of the local community. State and local planning and zoning boards, and health and safety commissions, exist to protect local needs, and balance them with the interests of property owners.

Each person's property rights are bounded by his neighbor's interests and limited by the public interest. It is not against the law for the government to "take" private property for public use. It is only against the law to take it without compensation. Local involvement is necessary to this process. Only at the local level can the proper determination of value be made and the necessary negotiations take place. Once decisions are made at the local level and state courts have a opportunity to reach a decision, property owners have the right to appeal to federal courts if they are dissatisfied with the local decision. There is nothing wrong with the current law that this legislation will fix.

By forcing federal courts into earlier stages of these local decisions, it will give landowners an unfair "big stick"—the threat of federal litigation.

And that threat is real. Currently, a federal judge may refuse to hear a case if it is not yet "ripe" for adjudication in a federal forum, or involves issues better dealt with in state courts. This bill will allow big developers to force local planning issues out of local administrative and judicial forums, where they belong, and into federal courtrooms, where they don't belong.

The bill also undermines the principles enunciated by the Supreme Court in the Williamson case, which held that remedies should be pursued at the state level before being sought in federal court. As the Court noted, "Rejection of exceedingly grandiose development plans does not logically imply that less ambitious plans will receive similarly unfavorable reviews." In other words, a city can deny a permit to build a factory on a piece of land, but might well allow residential development.

Most disputes about property are resolved by this back-and-forth process between local officials, neighbors and developers. Through this process, the community shapes the kind of growth it wants and can support. By allowing a developer to bring a city into federal court after filing one proposal, this bill will promote litigation at the expense of negotiated solution. Because municipalities are often small and federal lawsuits are costly, localities will be coerced into abandoning sensible land-use plans because they can't afford a lawsuit. This bill will certainly interfere with necessary local efforts to protect the quality of their communities, including the water, air, and open space, and health and safety, too.

Most communities across the country are small. Very few have legal staff. Yet these are the communities that will have to defend their regulations and zoning decisions in federal court if they don't surrender to big developers' demands. Some of the cases that this bill would affect could easily pose serious threats to the health and safety and well-being of our communities.

Finally, there are serious constitutional questions about the bill's proposed expansion of the jurisdiction of the Court of Federal Claims. That court is an Article I court, not an Article III court. It has no authority over Congressional or agency actions. It was created to hear monetary claims against the federal government. Expanding its scope will cause it to cross over into the realm of Article III courts.

The Judicial Conference of the United States opposes granting the Court of Federal Claims the power of injunctive and declaratory relief, and the authority to invalidate Acts of Congress or agency regulations. The power to invalidate Acts of Congress and federal regulations has historically been part of an independent judiciary. The Court of Federal Claims does not have the tenure and salary protections of an Article III court that ensure judicial independence. So this bill is likely to be held unconstitutional under standard doctrines of separations of powers.

Judicial efficiency in the already over-burdened federal court system will also suffer, as more federal lawsuits are filed against zoning boards, land-use bodies and regulatory agencies. The cases this legislation will unleash will burden the federal courts at a time when there are over 70 judicial vacancies. The irony is obvious—our Republican colleagues won't confirm more judges, but they're more than willing to add to the current excessive workload.

These complex issues of local land use are currently being resolved at the appropriate level. Congress should reject this heavy-handed scheme to curry favor with developers at the expense of homeowners and neighborhoods across America.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise in support of the property rights legislation we are currently considering. The question we have to answer today is simple. Do we want to give to homeowners and farmers the same rights to go to Federal court when their constitutional rights are infringed that we already give to flag burners and neo-Nazis who preach hate. For my Part, I think that hardworking farmers and homeowners ought to have at least as many constitutional rights as Nazis and flag burners.

For the benefit of my colleagues, I'd like to point out how this bill would change current law to correct the outrageous preference that activist Federal judges have given to flag burning over property rights. The current bill modifies the abstention doctrine, which provides that Federal courts will decline to hear certain court cases if there is on-going litigation in State court or before a State administrative agency.

Now, on its face, the abstention doctrine sounds good. I believe that Federal courts should decline to hear lawsuits when State governments or State courts are in the process of considering the same issues. This prevents the duplication of efforts and respects States' rights.

The property rights bill we're considering today would create an exception to the abstention doctrine for people who want to protect their constitutional right to own and control their property.

The thing to remember, however, is that the Federal courts have already created exceptions to the abstention doctrine. Let's look at some of the cases where the Federal courts have decided not to abstain. In other words, let's look at some cases where Federal courts went ahead and heard a court case even though a State government was in the middle of considering the same case.

In the case of Collins versus Smith, a Federal court decided not to abstain when a town in Illinois decided against issuing a parade permit to the American Nazi Party which wanted to march in a Jewish neighborhood. The Nazi Party couldn't afford to pay a fee which the town required, and so the Nazi Party was not given a permit to have this march. The Nazi Party challenged this decision as a violation of their constitutional rights and the town was considering whether to waive the fee or not to waive the fee. But the Nazis got tired of waiting and went to Federal court. And the court decided that it would hear the case even though there was a pending State proceeding.

So, the Nazi Party gets to protect their rights in Federal courts—no questions asked and without having to wait for State proceedings to conclude. But property owners don't have that ability. They can't just run into Federal court.

Mr. President, I think that's just plain wrong. I believe that hardworking Americans who own homes and hardworking farmers trying to work their land ought to have at least as many constitutional rights as the Nazi Party. If we pass this bill, we'll stop this unfairness.

Nazis aren't the only ones who get treated better than property owners. Flag burners have it pretty good as well. In Sutherland versus DeWulf, the city of Rock Island, Illinois tried to prosecute someone who had burned an American flag. So the flag burners went straight into Federal court to sue the city government. Even though there were on-going State proceedings, the Federal court decided to hear the case and specifically rules that it would not abstain until after the State proceedings were finished.

Again, this is unfair. It doesn't make sense to say that homeowners and farmers have to wait to have their day in court but flag burners can get their day in court any time they want. I think that property owners ought to have at least as many constitutional rights as flag burners.

So, Mr. President, we have a chance today to correct this absurd preference for flag burners and Nazis. Why should they get a special key to unlock the courthouse doors, while homeowners and farmers have to wait outside the courthouse for years until some Federal judge decides it's okay to file a property rights case. For once, let's use some common sense and pass this bill.

In the last Congress, the Judiciary Committee considered a comprehensive property rights bill. That was a good bill, and the Senate should have passed it. But there was strong opposition from intellectual elitists of the far left who have no regard for the concept of protecting private property rights. Those who spoke against the last property rights bill said it was too broad.

So, this Congress, we have a more narrowly focused bill. But even this more narrow bill isn't acceptable to the opponents of property rights.

Given what I've just pointed out about the preferential treatment that flag burners and Nazis get in terms of access to the Federal courts, I think that just shows how extreme and out-of-touch the other side is on this issue. I yield the floor.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Idaho.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield for 1 second? Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that after the Senator's remarks, I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I congratulate Chairman HATCH for bringing the Senate this important reform measure to safeguard Americans' property rights.

The concept of property is at the root of civilization as we know it. The right of the individual to acquire, possess and use property is one of the natural rights that does not depend on government for its existence; on the contrary, governments were formed in part to protect that right. Our Founders also saw the right to private property as the key to spurring individuals initiative and productivity that would ensure national prosperity and security. For that reason, the concept of property and the importance of its protection permeates the Constitution—there are references to it throughout the document, in addition to the fifth amendment's prohibition against the taking of private property for the public good, without just compensation.

Unfortunately, however, all these rights aren't worth the paper they are printed on, unless they can be enforced. That principle applies even to the Constitution. Our Founding Fathers may have thought the fifth amendment would shield the people of this country from government taking their property without just compensation. But for all too many Americans the shield has no substance, the promise of protection is hollow, the Constitution's guarantee is an empty one—all because they cannot enforce it against government encroachment.

This is not an isolated problem for a few wealthy Americans. In communities across the nation it is ruining family businesses, devaluing property of all kinds, preventing people from building homes and sometimes even from cleaning up pollution or hazards. In short, it is depriving citizens of all incomes from every state of one of the most prized basic human liberties.

There are many aspects of the erosion of private property rights protection and many ways to attack the problem. Chairman HATCH and I and others have tried in the past to enact a comprehensive solution. Unfortunately, that effort ran headlong into another political agenda, and for that reason, we have put it aside for the near term. Meanwhile, however, it makes sense to push ahead on a more limited—but still important—part of the solution.

The bill before us today, the Property Rights Implementation Act of 1998, focuses on the judicial side of the equation. Currently, people trying to vindicate their constitutionally guaranteed property rights face a procedural catch-22. They are forced to jump endless hurdles on the way to court, and then are bounced from court to court to obtain relief. At every step, the system is biased to the benefit of government and against the citizen. The costs are often staggering.

If it were this difficult to enforce any other constitutional guarantee, we would have seen reform long ago. Even members of the judicial branch have acknowledged that clarification is seriously needed in this area.

This bill would simplify the path to court and clarify the jurisdiction of the courts. It doesn't grant any new rights but only attempts to clean up the procedural quagmire that presently frustrates access to the courts. This is a precise and limited reform that would make a big difference to the citizens who are forced to litigate in order to protect their property rights.

I know that local governments have been concerned that this legislation may interfere with their areas of jurisdiction. However, this bill does nothing to reduce the power of local governments to make decisions with regard to property. Furthermore, this legislation actually exempts localities from paying attorneys' fees if they lose a takings claim. If the case involves a critical question of state or local law that is unclear, that question will be sent back to a state court for decision before the federal case can continue. In short, the bill does nothing to take away power from state and local government, while it strengthens the protection of individual citizens' rights.

Mr. President, the House has already passed similar legislation by an overwhelming vote. S. 2271 is an important reform, and I urge all Senators to support its passage. Let's most this bill to conference and then on to the President for enactment.

In conclusion, Mr. President, I am pleased to stand with the chairman of the Judiciary Committee today in support of S. 2271, the Property Rights Implementation Act of 1998.

We can talk about constitutional rights, and we should; we can talk about the very basic foundation of our economy, and we must. All of us are in favor of the environment, but some like to put the rights of the collective over the right of the individual.

What we are trying to do here today is sort a little bit of that out, because, yes, people buy property for a variety of reasons. They buy it to hold as you would put money in a bank, hoping that some day in the future you might be able to use it as an investment purpose to retire. It reminds me of a lady I met from Texas not long ago. She and her husband had done so. They had bought a small piece of property a long ways out of Dallas 30 years ago, hoping that some day it might be of value.

All of a sudden, the suburbs of Dallas reached the property. Her husband is dead, and this is her retirement. The Federal Government, in cooperation with the municipal government, said that property can now not be developed for a multitude of reasons. This lady only can go to court to redeem her values, but in this instance, she has no money.

While this particular legislation would not address that example, it would go a long ways toward honoring our constitutional rights and, most assuredly, would have allowed this individual her day in court. That is one example.

In my State of Idaho, where there are people who have held property for generations and like to continue to hold them for a variety of reasons—ranching or farming because it is their livelihood—only to have the Federal Government step in and determine that certain uses may not go on on that land or certain practices—or the land itself may be habitat for a particular species of plant, animal or bird, the value of that property is diminished because of the flexibility that the individual has to manage and operate that property, not for investment purposes, but as an income property. Yet, in those instances, and in most instances, the opportunity to recoup those kinds of losses are denied.

There are a good many other examples, Mr. President, and my time is limited this afternoon. I stand in strong support of this legislation and hope that my colleagues will join with me in gaining cloture for the purpose of debating this issue.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mrs. MURRAY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Rhode Island.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, there has been considerable discussion this afternoon about compensation and takings and so forth, but what this really is all about is, are we going to permit the local authorities to have the powers that they have had in the past to deal with local zoning matters and matters similarly associated therewith.

What the proponents of this legislation are saying is that we don't want that, we don't want to have a situation whereby you must exhaust your local remedies. Even though that is recognized to apply in the fourth amendment where we are dealing with unlawful searches and seizures, for example—and there the courts have said you have to exhaust your local remedies—here is what they are also saying in connection with these so-called property rights under the fifth amendment.

For some peculiar reason that I haven't quite been able to fathom here, those people who have long been stalwarts of the local authority and the powers of the locals—local elected officials, for example—are suddenly saying, "No, no, no, you don't know how to do this; we're a lot smarter than you are; we're Federal officials, we live inside the beltway, this is where we make our decisions and we're going to tell you how to run these matters on your local level."

Even though the Supreme Court recognizes that, yes, there can be no taking of private property without just compensation, they are saying that, first, you must exhaust your local remedies, you must let this what they call "ripen." We have gotten adjusted to that. For over 200 years, this is the way this system has worked. But, "No, no," say the proponents of this legislation, "that's not fast enough. Your local officials really don't know how to do this. What they are doing is they are holding up matters too long."

It is true that you, the local voters, for example, from your town or your city, your county, wherever it might be, you are tolerant of this, you are satisfied with the way the system works.

But we are in Washington, DC. And we say, "No, we don't like that. We're going to change it for you. And, yes, your mayors can come to us and your Governors can come to us and your local legislators. We're going to dismiss you. We don't care what you want, we're going to tell you how to do this. We're pretty smart here in the U.S. Government, and we're going to straighten this thing out. No, we don't have to bother having any hearings. We'll tinker with this and change it all around and bring it to the floor. That's all right."

As the senior Senator from Vermont has pointed out, there has not been 30 seconds of hearings on this bill we have before us, but they say that is all right because we are all very, very smart around here and we know what is best. And so we are saying to the president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, the president of the National Association of Counties, the president of the National League of Cities, and the vice chairman of the National Conference of State Legislatures, and so forth, this is the way we are going to do it.

We are going to say, "You don't have to exhaust your remedies." All you have to do in my State—I am not familiar how it works in every State; I know how it works in my State—if you want to make a dramatic change in zoning where you live, you want to put a multifamily structure up in a single family development, you say, "I'm going to go to the zoning board." And you ask permission for this. And if the zoning board says no, then you file with the zoning board of review. And that is all you have to do. You do not have to do anything else.

You do not have to go through that. And you do not have to take the steps and go to the State district court. Bang, you can go into Federal court. And there some federally appointed judge is going to tell you just how to straighten this thing out. He is going to tell you what to do, not your local officials, not your elected members of the zoning board or the zoning board of review. Not your mayor—he has nothing to do with this. It is going to be a federally appointed judge. And we have heard all—I do not know how many times on this floor we have heard about the dangers of activist Federal judges. And so we are going to have an activist Federal judge tell us what to do in East Greenwich, RI, or wherever it might be.

Mr. President, I do not think that is right. I can see why they avoided having a hearing on this final bill, because it would have been trash. And it came out on practically a straight party-line vote. It indicates the lack of support for this legislation.

Mr. President, I want to make one more point. When we have these things come up, a zoning request on the local level, there is great effort made to compromise it, to negotiate it in some fashion. "All right. You want to fill in a wetland? No, you can't fill in that wetland. There's a place where you can work out a situation, restore a wetland just right up the road. And this is the way we will work it out."

That is what local officials do. They know they are living there. They are dealing with their neighbors and people they know. They are not some Federal judge from some distant place who comes into town riding the circuit every now and then and says, "This is the way it's going to be." But the problem is, you do not have that negotiation, that attempt to compromise, that attempt to work these matters out.

I also might say, this has a very, very chilling effect on the local officials, because if the local officials are in a situation where they know they can be jerked into the Federal court—they make a decision on whether it is the preservation of a wetland or the preservation of the zoning, the one-acre zoning, whatever it might be—they are going to be very leery of making a decision against the wishes of the home builders, for example.

Why are the home builders so enthusiastic about this legislation? Are they trying to preserve the environment or preserve some open space or do what is best for the community? Well, it is totally understandable. They are looking after their own interests. That is what they want. So, Mr. President, they are going to be going right into the Federal court. They have plenty of money.

If I come from a relatively small town, and my little town is jerked into the Federal court—and we have a city solicitor—the town solicitor, who isn't paid much, if he is going to start going to Federal court and have to answer to every request for a change in the zoning, it is going to be a big bill that he is going to submit to this town.

Mr. President, I certainly hope that this so-called Property Rights Implementation Act of 1998, which is going to come before us in a half an hour on a question of cloture—I certainly hope that everybody will vote against cloture.

I thank the distinguished Senator from Washington for letting me speak.

Mrs. MURRAY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. I suggest the absence of a quorum and I ask unanimous consent that it be divided equally between both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to speak for up to 4 minutes on behalf of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the Senator using time from either side or is this an additional request?

Mrs. HUTCHISON. It is an additional request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Thank you, Mr. President. I want to thank the Senator from Washington for allowing me to use some time because I think there are a couple of other Senators who will be speaking on her side very shortly.

Mr. President, I commend Senator HATCH for his commitment to ensuring protection of private property rights as required by our Constitution and for trying to do everything we can to assure the private property provision of our Constitution is adhered to. People seem to overlook the fifth amendment sometimes, which says that:

No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation.

In spite of this unequivocal protection of private property in the Bill of Rights, the Federal Government has often adopted laws that violate these important rights. One law, for example, which has been implemented to the detriment of private property rights in Texas is the Endangered Species Act. In the Texas Panhandle, the Endangered Species Act has been used to protect a bait fish called the Arkansas River shiner. To protect the fish in Texas, even though it thrives in New Mexico, the water supply for cities such as Amarillo and agriculture in the area are put in jeopardy. In Travis County, families who purchased residentially zoned lots in good faith to build their homes are being penalized. In addition to the cost of their lots, they are forced to pay $1,500 as an added fee to protect habitat for the golden-cheeked warbler, in an area where 20,000 acres already are set aside for that purpose.

There are many other examples like this that demonstrate how laws can be used to actually violate constitutional rights. For this reason, I support property rights protections. We tried in the 103d Congress and in the 104th Congress, to guarantee compensation to landowners whose private property was devalued due to government regulations. Unfortunately, we were unsuccessful in adopting these reforms. Today, we are trying a new approach. Senator HATCH has put forward a new approach that adjusts our legal process to assure that constitutional rights are secured for the private property owners of our country.

Now, what Senator HATCH is doing is really mostly technical in nature. It is giving people the right to have their cases heard. I don't think Americans should have to spend all of their money just seeking to challenge the violation of rights that are guaranteed to them under the Constitution. I don't think that is due process. So I commend this bill because I do think it will take one step in the right direction toward protecting private property rights and helping private property owners at least have their cases adjudicated in court.

The bill does not speak to the real issue which is how we can accommodate environmental laws in a way that also protects the rights of private property owners. I hope this Congress will address the basic issue soon.

In the meantime, this bill at least will take us a step toward allowing people due process to protect their private property rights. I think it is time that the American people who own property have the ability to fully protect their rights guaranteed by the Constitution. I hope that we will all support this bill.

I thank the Senator from Washington. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If neither side yields time, it will be deducted equally from each.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, if I might, the other side was last to speak. If they have not called a quorum call, my understanding is the time is still on their time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is not correct. Under the precedent, if neither side yields time, the time is deducted equally.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry. There may have been another unanimous consent request when I was off the floor.

If somebody had sought recognition and yielded time for that person to speak, they do not call the quorum call, and nobody else seeks recognition subsequent to their speaking, does the time continue to run against whoever had been yielded time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Precedent is that the time is deducted from both sides equally.

Mr. LEAHY. So if somebody sought recognition on their time and just stands there silently, while they are standing there silently, the time is running equally?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If they are yielded for a set amount of time, that time will be deducted from their side. Once they yield the floor and they sit down, the time is no longer charged to them, it is charged to both sides equally.

Mr. LEAHY. How much time remains to the Senator from Utah and the Senator from Vermont?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah has 4½ minutes, and the Senator from Vermont has 21½ minutes.

Mr. LEAHY. And the vote is set for quarter of?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes.

Mr. LEAHY. I yield myself 5 minutes.

We continue to hear what an improvement we have in the new bill, S. 2271, as compared to H.R. 1534. Maybe it is, but maybe it isn't an improved bill. I don't believe it is an improved bill but it is a different bill.

Frankly, we have before the Senate a different piece of legislation in which there has not been 38 seconds of hearings. We have before the Senate a bill which, unlike other major legislation, does not have a specific report before the Senate. We have a bill that is brought down in time for the Monday afternoon bed check vote, without a report, without a hearing.

Mr. President, we are asked to pass a piece of legislation that would dramatically encroach on the rights of the municipalities, counties, and States in our country. It would be a massive shift of power from the local people and communities to the Federal courts.

I think one of the reasons it is being rushed through is that the big developers who want it don't want the public to look at this very long. But those who have looked at it are opposed to it. That includes the National Governors' Association, the National Association of Counties. Others who oppose it include the National League of Cities, the U.S. Conference of Mayors, the National Association of Towns and Townships, the National Conference of State Legislatures. The bill that was reported, H.R. 1534, was also opposed by those groups and the International Municipal Lawyers Association, 38 State attorneys general, and the American Planning Association.

Among those opposed to having that unprecedented shift of power to the Federal courts are the Judicial Conference of the U.S. Conference of Chief Justices and the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts.

Among those religious organizations opposed to that bill are the United States Catholic Conference, the National Council of Churches of Christ, Religious Action Center for Reform Judaism, and the Evangelicals for Social Action.

Among the public interest groups that are opposed to it are the League of Women Voters, the Alliance for Justice, the Physicians for Social Responsibility, the National Trust for Historic Preservation, and the U.S. Public Interest Research Group.

Among the conservation groups against it are the National Wildlife Federation and the League of Conservation Voters. Those who oppose it include the Sierra Club, the National Environmental Trust, the Environmental Working Group, the Center for Marine Conservation, the Environmental Defense Fund, the National Audubon Society, the Great Lakes United, the Earth Justice Legal Defense Fund, Izaak Walton League of America, the Scenic America, and the Wilderness Society, Natural Resources Defense Council, the Rails to Trails Conservancy, and the National Parks and Conservation Association, Friends of the Earth, Defenders of Wildlife, Appalachian Mountain Club, and the American Oceans Campaign.

Among those who are opposed to it are the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees and the United Steelworkers of America.

For the same reason that this Vermonter is opposed to the new bill, S. 2271, the Vermont League of Cities and Counties, is also opposed. They just wrote to me on the new bill saying:

Dear Senator LEAHY: I am writing you to express our strong support for your actions in opposing S. 2271. * * *

Local governments are working very hard in Vermont to exercise appropriate authority over land uses in their communities. We are joined in this in very real fashion by the Vermont legislature which this past session adopted legislation clarifying our ability to regulate wireless telecommunication facilities under zoning.

What would a volunteer part-time planning commission or zoning board of authority do if a national wireless telecommunications company came into town, not only with its platoon of attorneys and engineers but also with the ability to say, "you take a wrong step and you're in federal court?"

Continuing from their letter:

The chilling effect of that combination would be immense. It is already hard to find people willing to serve on local boards and commissions. With the threats proposed in the Takings legislation, many good public servants at the local level would simply give up.

That is from the Vermont League of Cities and Towns.

In an earlier letter, they asked me "At what cost to the communities?" This is a question being answered at the local level by local zoning boards of Charlotte, Hardwick, Cabot, and other towns throughout the State. I think we ought to pay some attention to it. In the Sunday Burlington Free Press, the homebuilders themselves made this statement regarding urban sprawl:

Urban growth is not really Congress' purview. . . . I think most Members of Congress recognize that planning ought to take place at a local or State level.

Then I ask, why are they pushing this bill? They want the Federal Government to take authority away from our States. Do the homebuilders need this for a win?

I said earlier that we Vermonters may differ in the way our State and communities should be handled as compared to how they would be handled by some large-scale, wealthy developer. That is our choice to make. I spoke of some of the most beautiful spots in our State that my wife and I love driving by. Each one has enormous developmental value, but we Vermonters have decided not to develop it. Now, we Vermonters pay the price for that. We get less tax revenue. We make less from our land; I know I do from my own land.

I have 220 acres on my tree farm. We could earn a lot more if Vermont suddenly zoned everything for commercial use. But I don't want to do that. I like the quality of life in Vermont. I like not having to lock my door. I like being able to walk through my fields and see a deer, or to ski down one of the logging trails on my property, as I have in the wintertime, and to see an owl floating on the thermals ahead of me by the moonlight. I liked being awakened about 3 o'clock this morning by the screech of a bear near my home. Frankly, I like that better than the screech of brakes in a congested urban intersection.

They also told us we would lose a great deal in Vermont when we did away with billboards. But a couple out-of-State billboard companies didn't do so well. The scenic vistas of Vermont were opened up and the tourism increased.

Mr. President, we ought to stop taking things out of the hands of small communities and counties in our States. We ought to let the people of West Virginia make their decisions and the people of Vermont make their decision and not say: We are going to yank this out of your hands and put it in Federal court.

Mr. President, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Alabama.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I would like to congratulate Chairman HATCH for his outstanding work on this very important issue that deals with a constitutional right that is as fundamental as our right to free speech. The Constitution says that the Government cannot take somebody's property without paying just compensation for it. Let me repeat that. Property cannot be taken without it being paid for.

Too often in America today, we have government agencies that would like to take control of someone's property, but they don't want to pay for it. So these agencies take property through the use of regulations and laws. Sometimes their actions are legitimate. For example, zoning regulations are often perfectly legitimate rules that we have to have if we are going to live together. But there often reaches a point in which the actions of a municipality, or a county, or a State, or a Federal Government—which is primarily what we are dealing with here—can, in fact, take the beneficial use of that property without offering any compensation for it. That is wrong; it should not happen.

This bill is a modest, very reasonable step. Senator HATCH has compromised and worked with those who have different views, and he has crafted a bill that is logical, reasonable, realistic, and that will protect our Constitutional property rights while not doing anything that would deny our ability to protect our environment. To me, it is clearly wrong to say that passage of this legislation would in any way restrict the environmental rights in this country. So I join in support of it. I think it is outstanding legislation. It simply provides a mechanism to protect our cherished fifth amendment constitutional rights.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

If no one yields time, time will be deducted equally.

Mr. LEAHY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ALLARD). The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, how much time is remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. You have 11 minutes 20 seconds.

Mr. LEAHY. How much time is remaining for the Senator from Utah?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. One minute thirty-six seconds. The vote will take place at 5:49, which under the unanimous consent agreement was moved from 5:45 to 5:49.

Mr. LEAHY. The vote is at what time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. 5:49.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I yield myself 4 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, we can probably sit here on the floor and think of some horror stories where a town made a mistake in holding something up. We could point somewhere to some local court where another mistake might have been made, or to a few prosecutors out of the thousands of our local prosecutors where one bad judgment call was made.

But we don't have the arrogance in this body to say we will take over all our local courts, all our local communities, all our local prosecutors, and turn them over to the Feds because mistakes won't be made. Because I can tell you right now that for every mistake made at the local level I could point to a bigger one made at the Federal level. I think that is why the Judicial Conference says don't quickly toss these matters into the Federal courts. The Federal courts can't keep up with the cases that are there today, especially when the Senate won't vote to confirm judges for the vacancies already existing.

Let's not do this. And let us say that the U.S. Senate, of all places, will protect the current state process and rights of local communities and local counties and States to make their own decisions.

Why do we want to say to our small towns that they can not decide to protect a particular area? Why do we say they should not be able to stop a building from being built next to a particular scenic spot? If they are willing to forego tax revenue by doing that, and they are willing to pay the price themselves—why do we want to say that some big developer from out of State could come in with a platoon of lawyers and endless pockets and say, "Oh, the heck with you. We know better. We can make a quick buck on that, and we will take you to Federal court if you do not let us do it?"

Before the Congress bulldozes local and state jurisdiction, we need to ask ourselves what urgent problem is being solved by this bill that could not be solved some other way? What is so urgent that we have to step in right now and wipe out the local land use process of our towns, our cities, our counties or our States? What is such a pressing need besides the current concerns of a couple of well-financed PACs? What is the urgent concern in this country that we have to suddenly rewrite the rule books and say from the Federal Government, "you people at the local government level don't know what you are doing, and we are going to step in and take it over?"

Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. HATCH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, how much time do I have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. One minute thirty seconds.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, let me use part of that.

Let me say what the five truths of the bill are.

This bill does not affect State or localities or local rights, and it only applies to real property.

No. 2, it does nothing to stop localities from zoning or passing or enforcing environmental measures.

No. 3, it does not increase Federal litigation against localities, because the bill does not create new law. And takings cases are expensive to bring. The Congressional Budget Office agrees with that.

No. 4, what the bill does is it grants property owners their day in court, which is denied in many cases by local court procedures or by local procedures, which at times are like the Minotaur's Labyrinth.

No. 5, currently property owners must litigate on average 9½ years before they can get a Federal court to reach a decision on the merits. No other constitutional right is treated that way.

In fact, in Dolan v. City of Tigard, the Supreme Court said, "We see no reason why the takings clause of the fifth amendment, as much of a part of the Bill of Rights as the first amendment, or fourth amendment should be delegated to the status of a poor relation."

We are trying to stop that. This bill will do it.

We have had hearings on it time after time over the years. We have added on this substitute four additional matters, mainly to help people who have raised concerns.

I hope our colleagues will support us on this motion to proceed.

Mr. LEAHY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, the fact is we have never had a hearing on this particular bill, S. 2271, not in the U.S. Senate. The fact is we do not have a report on this bill. S. 2271 was rushed to us and stuck on the calendar. It was just introduced last week. And without one second of hearings on this bill, without one word of a report, we Senators are asked to push forward and vote on it.

I am concerned that this bill radically changes a system which resolves thousands of land use decisions each week in thousands of American communities and cities. The zoning system in this country is working well. It is helping mayors, like Mayor Giuliani in New York, clean up their communities. Yet, as Mayor Giuliani said, the efforts he has made to clean up crime and clean up porno shops and clean up a lot of other problems in New York City, could be swept aside by this legislation.

I could show you stacks of letters from local citizens in Vermont, in Pennsylvania, in North Carolina, and in many other States who are up in arms about a provision of the 1996 Telecommunications Act that overrides local and State decisions involving cellular transmission towers. That provision, and this bill, were the subject of a recent article in Governing Magazine that was aptly titled, "The National Zoning Nanny."

Do we really want to federalize these local decisions by booting them into Federal court?

This bill is unwise, it is unsound, and it is unwarranted. We ought to be standing up here and defending our mayors, Governors, and our attorneys general, our towns and cities, and others in our States who understand the unintended consequences of this bill. We ought to stand up and say the people of Wyoming, Vermont, Utah, West Virginia, Rhode Island, North Carolina, Missouri, Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, South Dakota, North Dakota, Indiana, and Washington State, as the distinguished Senator from Washington State, Mrs. MURRAY said, know best how to make their decisions. And these people do not need the U.S. Senate to suddenly give them some new unfunded mandate and to make them liable for lawyers fees. We ought to respect the ability of the States to make decisions about how they run their communities, to make a decision of what is going to be built next to their schools or their churches or what kind of digging will go on next to the aquifers in their towns. All of these things could be quickly put before federal courts if we were to pass this bill.

Mr. President, in one minute, we are going to be voting. I hope we will vote not to proceed with this bill. We have never had a hearing on it. We never had a report on it. This issue is not ripe.

Mr. President, I yield any time I may have.

CLOTURE MOTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has expired. Under the previous order, the hour of the vote having arrived, the clerk will report the cloture motion.

The bill clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provision of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, do hereby move to bring to a close debate on the motion to proceed to the private property rights legislation:

CALL OF THE ROLL

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By unanimous consent, the quorum call under the rule has been waived.

VOTE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate on the motion to proceed to S. 2271, the Property Rights Implementation Act, shall be brought to a close?

The yeas and nays are required. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from New York (Mr. D'AMATO) and the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. FRIST) are necessarily absent.

Mr. FORD. I announce that the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BIDEN), the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. BREAUX), the Senator from Ohio (Mr. GLENN), and the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. TORRICELLI) are necessarily absent.

The yeas and nays resulted—yeas 52, nays 42, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 197 Leg.]

NOT VOTING—6

Biden	D'Amato	Glenn
Breaux	Frist	Torricelli

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On the vote, the yeas are 52, the nays are 42. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected.

Mr. LEAHY. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. CHAFEE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. LOTT addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

AGRICULTURE, RURAL DEVELOPMENT, FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1999

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now turn to consideration of S. 2159, the agriculture appropriations bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. DODD. Reserving the right to object, is there a possibility where there might be a few minutes just to conduct some morning business comments that are unrelated before we move to it? I do not think—

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, responding to the Senator from Connecticut, we do plan to ask for a time for morning business. Senator GRASSLEY is here waiting to speak in morning business, and I am sure that the Senator from Connecticut would go, and others might want to, but we have one procedure we want to go through and then go to morning business.

Mr. DODD. I thank the Majority Leader.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2159) making appropriations for Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies programs for fiscal year ending September 30, 1999, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

Pending:

Daschle amendment No. 2729, to reform and structure the processes by which tobacco products are manufactured, marketed, and distributed, to prevent the use of tobacco products by minors, and to redress the adverse health effects of tobacco use.

AMENDMENT NO. 2729

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the pending amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. LOTT. I raise a point of order that the pending amendment violates section 302(f) of the Budget Act.

Mr. DASCHLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Democratic leader.

MOTION TO WAIVE BUDGET ACT

Mr. DASCHLE. I move to waive the Budget Act for the amendment.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at 9:30 a.m. on Tuesday, July 14, the Senate resume debate on the pending motion to waive the Budget Act, with the time until 10 a.m. equally divided in the usual form. I further ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the debate time the Senate proceed to a vote on the motion to waive.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. DASCHLE. Reserving the right to object, I know Senator DODD had asked for time. I am wondering if I could ask unanimous consent that—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will suspend. I would like to get order in the Chamber. The Senate will please come to order.

Mr. DASCHLE. It is not my desire to object. I was just thinking perhaps it might be in order that Senators DODD, KENNEDY, and GRASSLEY be recognized immediately following this colloquy for purposes of recognition under morning business.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield in his reservation to object, and if there is not objection and we get the yeas and nays on that, it would be my intention at that point to ask consent that we now have a period for the transaction of morning business right now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, first of all, the Senator still had a reservation on my previous request.

Mr. DASCHLE. My only concern was that there be an accommodation for all those Senators who wish to be recognized, including Senator MURRAY.

Mr. LOTT. Are you asking that we get some sort of lineup as to how that might be?

Mr. DASCHLE. That might be appropriate. I do not know if there are other Senators on the leader's side of the aisle.

Mr. COCHRAN. Can we get the yeas and nays on the motion to waive and then approve this?

Mr. DASCHLE. Assuming we get some sort of an accommodation, I have no objection.

Mr. COCHRAN. I ask for the yeas and nays on the motion to waive the Budget Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I thank Senator DASCHLE for his cooperation on that.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. LOTT. I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period for the transaction of morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each, with the exception of Senator GRASSLEY—how much time do you desire?

Mr. GRASSLEY. That is plenty for me.

Mr. LOTT. And that Senator DODD be recognized following Senator GRASSLEY. Anybody else on this side seeking morning business time?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Since you asked me, 10 minutes.

Mr. LOTT. All right. We have 10 minutes first going to Senator GRASSLEY, then Senator DODD, and then Senator KENNEDY in that order, and then other Senators who may want to speak in morning business. That is the way I would make the request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. DASCHLE. I am not sure the request has been clarified—Senator GRASSLEY, Senator DODD, Senator KENNEDY, and Senator MURRAY. That order would be appropriate.

Mr. LOTT. Right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

RECENT TRAGEDY IN NORTHERN IRELAND

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, as all of our colleagues and most of America know, tragedy has struck once again in Northern Ireland with the untimely deaths of three young Catholic boys—Richard, Mark, and Jason Quinn. The Quinn brothers were burned to death early Sunday morning after their home was firebombed by Protestant extremists. I join with Prime Ministers Blair and Ahern, President Clinton and others in condemning this terrorist act. I also want to extend, and I am sure I am joined in this by all our colleagues, my deepest condolences to the Quinn family.

The murder of three innocent children is such a cowardly act that it is incomprehensible. Sadly though for those of us who watched the week-long escalation of violence, after members of the Orange Order were prevented from going forward with a controversial parade through the Catholic neighborhoods, the outcome was predictable. Ironically, the Quinn family had absolutely nothing to do with the standoff between members of the Protestant Orange Order and the Catholic neighborhood of Garvaghy Road over whether a controversial parade route would be followed or whether some compromise plan could be devised. Far too often disputes in Northern Ireland has produced innocent victims—many of them children, and it occurred again on Sunday night.

Prime Minister Tony Blair and Northern Ireland's political leaders have called for a halt to the current protest at Drumcree to permit a period of reflection with respect to recent events. I believe that members of the Orange Order should accede to that request. Was the dispute over parade routes really worth the lives of three young boys? I do not believe it was, nor do vast majority of the people of Northern Ireland. It is time for Protestant and Catholic community leaders to put aside their excuses for not having a face to face dialogue. Only they are capable of fashioning a compromise on matters that divide them. Only they can end the senseless violence that threatens to destroy the very foundation of the Northern Ireland Peace Agreement before it even has a chance to become fully operational.

Mr. President, The Good Friday Peace Accords were strongly supported by the majority of Northern Ireland's Catholics and Protestants in the May referendum. The agreement contains a workable plan for getting to the root causes of decades of sectarian conflict, but it must be given a fair chance to produce results. The most recent tragedy in Central Belfast has tested the resolve of Northern Ireland's political leaders to stay the course of peace. I hope they will remain resolute in support of peace. I pray as well that no more sons or daughters of Northern Ireland parents lose their lives as a result of sectarian terrorism.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, as my friend and colleague, Senator DODD, has pointed out, during the weekend, three young brothers—10 year old Richard Quinn, 9 year old Mark Quinn, and 7 year old Jason Quinn—were senselessly murdered because they were Catholic.

Some time ago, an Independent Parades Commission, appointed by the British Government, ruled that members of the Orange Order—a Protestant organization that celebrates a centuries-old victory of Protestants over Catholics by staging triumphalist marches through Protestant and Catholic neighborhoods—could not march through a Catholic neighborhood in Portadown, Northern Ireland. But the Orange Order refused to accept the ruling and vowed to force the march to proceed along the Garvaghy Road in a Catholic neighborhood. A stand-off ensued—members of the Orange Order attempted to march through the area, but were not allowed past barricades erected by security forces. Protestant extremists have used the week-long stand-off as justification to carry out attacks on Catholic homes and members of the police force.

Early Sunday morning, in Ballymoney, Co. Antrim, many miles from Portadown, the Young Quinn boys were asleep in their beds when their home was firebombed by individuals who can only be described as terrorists. The boys were living in a Protestant neighborhood, and their home was targeted because their mother is Catholic.

Both sides deserve their share of the blame for the sectarian attacks that continue in Northern Ireland. But this tragedy never had to happen and never should have happened. The Orange Order must recognize that its refusal to abide by the decision of the Parades Commission led to the murder of the Quinn boys. As a card left at the site of the Quinn home read: "A price to great to pay for a 15 minute walk."

Another contentious parade was conducted today in a civilized manner. Despite opposition by the local Catholic residents on the Ormeau Road in Belfast, the Parades Commission ruled that this parade should be permitted. The Orange Order conducted the parade within the bounds set down by the Commission, and the residents of the area staged a peaceful, dignified protest, but did not attempt to block the parade.

Prime Minister Tony Blair and Northern Ireland's Secretary of State Mo Mowlam deserve credit for not bowing to the pressure of extremists in the Orange Order. And I join with Protestant leader David Trimble, the First Minister of the new Northern Ireland Assembly, and Deputy First Minister Seamus Mallon in calling on those assembled in Portadown to end their confrontation in light of this tragedy.

This brutal fire bombing was the act of cowards. They do not represent the vast majority of the people in Northern Ireland, Protestants and Catholics alike, who have voted for peace and an end to division. Everyone outraged by the murder of these three young boys must redouble their efforts to support the peace process and to assure that extremists bent on sabotaging that process do not prevail.

We all extend our deepest sympathies to the members of the family.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to be able to proceed for 10 more minutes as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

PATIENTS' BILL OF RIGHTS

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the time moves on on the issue of our Patients' Bill of Rights legislation. Just 43 days remain in this session. The time has come to end the abuses of the HMOs and managed care plans. Families across the country know that too many medical decisions today are being made by the insurance company accountants instead of doctors. They know the company profits too often get priority over patients' needs and, too often, managed care is mismanaged care.

We have legislation—the Patients' Bill of Rights—to end these abuses. Included in the Patients' Bill of Rights is a section that allows ERISA-covered patients to hold their health plans accountable for abusive actions that result in injury or death.

This provision seems to have drawn the strongest opposition from the Republican leadership and their special interest allies. But an article in last Saturday's New York Times paints a poignant picture of the need for reform.

Judges throughout the Federal judicial system have written decisions in which they implore Congress to take action to correct ERISA's gross inadequacies.

They have repeatedly ruled that their hands are tied—even in the most egregious cases—from providing the patients or their families with meaningful redress when an insurance company's actions result in injury or death.

Mr. President, I will quote a few parts of this article.

I ask the Chair to remind me when 2 minutes remain.

... The United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, in New Orleans, reached a typical conclusion in a lawsuit by a Louisiana woman whose fetus died after an insurance company refused to approve her hospitalization for a high-risk pregnancy. . . .

In dismissing the suit, the court said, "The Corcorans have no remedy, state or Federal, for what may have been a serious mistake."

The court said that the harsh result "would seem to warrant a re-evaluation of ERISA so that it can continue to serve its noble purpose of safeguarding the interests of employees."

What they were pointing out is that there was no opportunity, after the negligence involved in this case, for the defendant to be able to receive any redress for the injuries they sustained, and the Federal judge was saying that Congress should act.

In a second case, Judge William G. Young of the Federal District Court in Boston, and I point out that he is a Republican appointee, said—

"It is deeply troubling that, in the health insurance context, ERISA has evolved into a shield of immunity which thwarts the legitimate claims of the very people it was designed to protect."

Judge Young said he was distressed by "the failure of Congress to amend the statute that, due to the changing realities of the modern health care system, has gone conspicuously awry," leaving many consumers "without any remedy" for the wrongful denial of health benefits.

Next

... Judge John C. Porfilio of the United States Court of Appeals for the 10th circuit, in Denver, said he was "moved by the tragic circumstances" of a woman with leukemia who died after her HMO refused approval for a bone marrow transplant. But, he said, the 1974 law "gives us no choice," and the woman's husband, who had sued for damages, is "left without a remedy."

Again

The United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, in St. Louis, said the law protected an HMO—against a suit by the family of a Missouri man, Buddy Kuhl, who died after being denied approval for heart surgery recommended by his doctors. "Modification of ERISA in light of the questionable modern insurance practices must be the job of Congress, not the courts," said Judge C. Arlen Beam.

The United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, in Cincinnati, said that the Federal law barred claims against a "utilization review" company that refused to approve psychiatric care for a man who later committed suicide. Because of ERISA, the court said, people who sue an HMO or an insurer for wrongful death "may be left without a meaningful remedy."

Federal District Judge Nathaniel M. Gorton, in Worcester, Mass., said that the husband of a woman who died of breast cancer was "left without any meaningful remedy" against an HMO that had refused to authorize treatment.

Federal District Judge Marvin J. Garbis in Baltimore, said ... whether ERISA should be "reexamined and reformed in light of modern health care is an issue which must be addressed and resolved by the legislature rather than the courts."

The Ninth Circuit continues in another case, and it goes on and on and on.

This is what we are seeing across the country in the Federal district courts, in the circuit courts, with judges that come from entirely different traditions, Republicans and Democrats alike.

When they look at ERISA, they find out that there are grossly inadequate remedies for individuals who have suffered as a result of malpractice, or because that HMOs have denied coverage for health treatments recommended by their doctors.

So, Mr. President, this isn't just those of us who are supporting this legislation that are saying it. Here we have the irrefutable presentations made by district court and circuit court judges across the country that are inviting Congress to act to protect families in the United States of America.

There is only one bill that provides that protection, and it is the Patients' Bill of Rights. Every single day that we delay acting on it, the circumstances we have discussed here tonight will be repeated and repeated and repeated.

The insurers and corporations who fear they have something to lose if patients are able to hold plans accountable have used ginned up estimates to try scare people into thinking that offering this protection would somehow result in dramatic premium increases. But tens of millions of patients—those who work for states and localities and those who purchase health insurance on their own—have this right, and a recent study confirmed that the cost associated with it is negligible.

The independent and nonpartisan Kaiser Family Foundation hired Coopers and Lybrand to examine the costs of being able to hold plans accountable for their actions. And their study found that ensuring this right costs as little as three pennies per month. Three pennies per month to hold your plan accountable for its actions.

Now, we know that the insurance industry does not support that particular proposal, and we know that the Republican leadership does not support that proposal. But we are asking, when in the world will the Republican leadership let us at least debate that issue here on the floor of the U.S. Senate? They have denied us the opportunity to mark the bill up in our committee. They have denied us the opportunity to have legislation on the calendar and the opportunity to get that measure scheduled so we can debate it. Mr. President, that is wrong.

Now we listened to those on the floor of the U.S. Senate the other night speaking for the Republican leadership saying, "The Republican leadership will decide when we will schedule this measure, and we in the majority are not going to schedule that measure until we are good and ready to do so."

Well, we are saying that we are going to offer this measure on every single appropriate measure that comes before the U.S. Senate, and maybe the leader does have the power to pull legislation down and stick it back on the calendar, but they are going to be really busy doing that because they are going to have to put every piece of legislation back on the calendar because we are going to continue to offer this commonsense proposal.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. I advise the Senator that 2 minutes remain.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I want to finally point out that the President's own blue ribbon nonpartisan commission, made up of a wide variety of different personnel representing the industry—doctors, patients, nurses—looked at the issues around patients rights. They recommended virtually unanimously that all patients should have the kinds of protections included in our Patients' Bill of Rights legislation. That is the President's commission.

Now, if our Republican friends do not want the American people to have these rights, let's get on the floor of the U.S. Senate and debate it. But they refuse to do so, Mr. President, and we will not be silent. We will continue to make every effort to bring this legislation up so that we can get about the business of protecting American consumers.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this full article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Times, July 11, 1998]

HANDS TIED, JUDGES RUE LAW THAT LIMITS H.M.O. LIABILITY
(By Robert Pear)

WASHINGTON, July 10—Federal judges around the country, frustrated by cases in which patients denied medical benefits have no right to sue, are urging Congress to consider changes in a 1974 law that protects insurance companies and health maintenance organizations against legal attacks.

In their decisions, the judges do not offer detailed solutions of the type being pushed in Congress by Democrats and some Republicans. But they say their hands are tied by the 1974 law, the Employee Retirement Income Security Act. And they often lament the results, saying the law has not kept pace with changes in health care and the workplace.

The law, known as Erisa, was adopted mainly because of Congressional concern that corrupt, incompetent pension managers were looting or squandering the money entrusted to them. The law, which also governs health plans covering 125 million Americans, sets stringent standards of conduct for the people who run such plans, but severely limits the remedies available to workers.

In a lawsuit challenging the denial of benefits, a person in an employer-sponsored health plan may recover the benefits in question and can get an injunction clarifying the right to future benefits. But judges have repeatedly held that the law does not allow compensation for lost wages, death or disability, pain and suffering, emotional distress or other harm that a patient suffers as a result of the improper denial of care.

Congress wanted to encourage employers to provide benefits to workers and therefore established uniform Federal standards, so pension and health plans would not have to comply with a multitude of conflicting state laws and regulations.

The United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, in New Orleans, reached a typical conclusion in a lawsuit by a Louisiana woman whose fetus died after an insurance company refused to approve her hospitalization for a high-risk pregnancy. The woman, Florence B. Corcoran, and her husband sought damages under state law.

In dismissing the suit, the court said, "The Corcorans have no remedy, state or Federal, for what may have been a serious mistake."

The court said that the harsh result "would seem to warrant a reevaluation of the Erisa so that it can continue to serve its noble purpose of safeguarding the interests of employees."

In another case, Judge William G. Young, of the Federal District Court in Boston said, "It is deeply troubling that, in the health insurance context, Erisa has evolved into a shield of immunity which thwarts the legitimate claims of the very people it was designed to protect."

Judge Young said he was distressed by "the failure of Congress to amend a statute that, due to the changing realities of the modern health care system, has gone conspicuously awry," leaving many consumers "without any remedy" for the wrongful denial of health benefits.

Disputes over benefits have become common as more employers provide coverage to workers through H.M.O.'s and other types of managed care, which try to rein in costs by controlling the use of services.

Here are some examples of the ways in which judges have expressed concern:

Judge John C. Portolio of the United States Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit, in Denver, said he was "moved by the tragic circumstances" of a woman with leukemia who died after her H.M.O. refused approval for a bone marrow transplant. But, he said, the 1974 law "gives us no choice," and the woman's husband, who had sued for damages, is "left without a remedy."

The United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, in St. Louis, said the law protected an H.M.O. against a suit by the family of a Missouri man, Buddy Kuhl, who died after being denied approval for heart surgery recommended by his doctors. "Modification of Erisa in light of questionable modern insurance practices must be the job of Congress, not the courts," said Judge C. Arlen Beam.

The United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, in Cincinnati, said that Federal law barred claims against a "utilization review" company that refused to approve psychiatric care for a man who later committed suicide. Because of Erisa, the court said, people who sue an H.M.O. or an insurer for wrongful death "may be left without a meaningful remedy."

Federal District Judge Nathaniel M. Gorton, in Worcester, Mass., said that the husband of a woman who died of breast cancer was "left without any meaningful remedy" against an H.M.O. that had refused to authorize treatment.

Federal District Judge Marvin J. Garbis, in Baltimore, acknowledged that a Maryland man may be left "without an adequate remedy" for damages caused by his H.M.O.'s refusal to pay for eye surgery and other necessary treatments. But, Judge Garbis said, whether Erisa should be "re-examined and re-formed in light of modern health care is an issue which must be addressed and resolved by the legislature rather than the courts."

The United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, in San Francisco, ruled last month that an insurance company did not have to surrender the money it saved by denying care to a Seattle woman, Rhonda Bast, who later died of breast cancer.

"This case presents a tragic set of facts," Judge David R. Thompson said. But "without action by Congress, there is nothing we can do to help the Basts and others who may find themselves in this same unfortunate situation."

Democrats and some Republicans in Congress are pushing legislation that would make it easier for patients to sue H.M.O.'s and insurance wrong decision, he or she can be sued, said Representative Charlie Norwood, Republican of Georgia, but "H.M.O.'s are shielded from liability for their decisions by Erisa."

Changes in Erisa will not come easily. The Supreme Court has described it as "an enormously complex and detailed statute" that carefully balances many powerful competing interests. Few members of Congress understand the intricacies of the law. Insurance companies, employers and Republican leaders strenuously oppose changes, saying that any new liability for H.M.O.'s would increase the cost of employee health benefits.

Senator Trent Lott of Mississippi, the Republican leader, said today that he had agreed to schedule floor debate on legislation to regulate managed care within the next two weeks. Senator Tom Daschle of South Dakota, the Democratic leader, who had been seeking such a debate, said Mr. Lott's commitment could be "a very consequential turning point" if Democrats have a true opportunity to offer their proposals.

But Senator Don Nickles of Oklahoma, the assistant Republican leader, said, "Republicans believe that health resources should be used for patient care, not to pay trial lawyers."

Proposals to regulate managed care have become an issue in this year's elections, and the hottest question of all is whether patients should be able to sue their H.M.O.'s. The denial of health benefits means something very different today from what it meant in 1974, when Erisa was passed. At that time, an insured worker would visit the doctor and then, if a claim was disallowed, haggle with the insurance company over who should pay. But now, in the era of managed care, treatment itself may be delayed or denied, and this "can lead to damages far beyond the out-of-pocket cost of the treatment at issue," Judge Young said.

H.M.O.'s have been successfully sued. A California lawyer, Mark O. Hiepler, won a multimillion-dollar jury verdict against an H.M.O. that denied a bone marrow transplant to his sister, Nelene Fox, who later died of breast cancer. But that case was unusual. Mrs. Fox was insured through a local school district, and such "governmental plans" are not generally covered by Erisa.

The primary goal of Erisa was to protect workers, and to that end the law established procedures for settling claim disputes.

Erisa supersedes any state laws that may "relate to" an employee benefit plan. Erisa does not allow damages for the improper denial or processing of claims, and judges have held that the Federal law, in effect, nullifies state laws that allow such damages.

Mrs. MURRAY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Thank you Mr. President.

EDUCATION: RECENT SUCCESSES AND CHALLENGES

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I rise today to mention a few topics vital to the educational success and safety of American children.

Mr. President, last week we saw some real success for American families and students. The Higher Education Reauthorization Act made several improvements that can benefit from more attention; this bill is a major victory for students and teachers across America. My daughter enters college this fall. I now get to experience first-hand the challenges of entering higher education that millions of families each year, and our actions last week were helpful.

Throughout the Labor Committee's efforts on this bill, I worked to strengthen our Nation's commitment to providing the strongest training possible for K-12 school teachers. I am most pleased with the bill's focus on teacher training, and in particular its emphasis on technology training.

The bill's provisions concerning student loans will make the dream of higher education that much closer to reality for many potential American college students. The campus safety and child care provisions will make a difference in all our communities.

I specifically thank Senator WELLSTONE for his work on the TANF amendment, so important for literacy instruction and lifelong learning. Since our debate on the welfare reform bill in 1996, I have worked with former Senator Simon, Senator WELLSTONE, and other Senators to point out the vital importance of education and literacy to a person's success in getting off of welfare. The passage of the Wellstone amendment is the right thing to do for low-income working Americans.

Under the Higher Education Reauthorization Act, I believe that the first generation of the new millennium will benefit immensely from the efforts put forth over this past year. From increases in financial aid, to campus security improvements, to technology instruction, S. 1882 will stand as a proud hallmark of this Congress.

Mr. President, on other education topics, we still have some large challenges ahead. The House Appropriations Committee is set to have full Committee mark-up of education appropriations this week. The Labor Subcommittee has cut education funding from the President's proposed levels by $2 billion in discretionary spending, and ignored his proposals to improve school construction and class size reduction. This would be the week for House members to eliminate these egregious cuts.

Let me list a few things the House has put at risk through cuts or eliminations: improving children's literacy; opening school buildings up after hours to make them the hub of the community; getting extra help in reading and math to poor-achieving students; improving education technology, including technology teacher training; getting first-generation students ready for college; and many others. The House has ignored the priorities of the American people.

The American people care deeply about education. They are frustrated when their schools do not succeed, and they bristle at those who would make it harder for the schools to succeed. This is not about just bricks and mortar, or about throwing good money after bad. This is about priorities, common-sense solutions, and improving quality.

Do not try to fool the parents. The parents know that school improvement has a cost—in hard decisions, and in hard cash. They know that when Congress offers vouchers and expanded charter schools and bonuses for private schools and private businesses—the Congress is turning its back on the public school.

They know that a cut is a cut, and that a block grant leads to a cut. They know that nearly the entire discussion this year on education from the other side of the aisle—and a time or two on this side of the aisle—amounts to the empty words of a snake-oil salesman.

Well, now we have a chance to turn this all around, like the public has forced the Congress to do in years past. Congress cuts the funding for schools, the public groans in disbelief, and the Congress wises up. Let us not wait until September to do it. The House has a chance this week to put back the money they've taken. The Senate will have its chance soon.

In America, you turn your back on the public school at your peril. What we need to do instead is meet the hard challenges head on.

The schools, in the inner cities, and in the rural areas, are crumbling. The Congress can do something about it.

The classes are overcrowded, which adds to the school construction problem. The Congress can take action.

The budgets have been cut and cut, and failing a local levy can mean disaster for a school. The Congress can keep its hands off the school budget, and restore these House cuts.

The Congress can increase national expenditures to more than the meager 2 percent of the national budget it now sets aside for schools. And the Congress can set the right tone.

Rather than generating empty air that has the effect of chipping away at support for the local public school—the very foundation of democracy, citizenship, and community in this nation—the Congress can speak the words that need to be said.

The responsibility of serving as a member of Congress, as a member of the United States Senate, is weighty indeed. By our words, our signature, and our actions, we can take steps to improve our nation's schools and our student's futures.

We can set an important tone, and say the hard things that the students, families, teachers, school officials, community leaders and others need to hear. We can also talk of success.

But if we act and speak only to tear the fabric of support for the public school—if the tone we set is only to chip, chip, chip at public confidence in an institution they know personally to have value—then we are abdicating part of our great responsibility as Senators.

Americans know that members of Congress can work together, and achieve results. They know we could take actions to improve their public schools. And that is why it is so disheartening to me when Republicans or Democrats put ideology or politics or mean-spiritedness in the way of success for our students. We must act together to do what is in the best interest of all children.

It is also important Mr. President that we conduct background checks and adequately screen our teachers to make sure they are qualified, competent and capable of providing our children with the quality education they deserve.

THE CRIME IDENTIFICATION TECHNOLOGY ACT OF 1998

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I wish to speak for a moment as a cosponsor of the Crime Identification Technology Act of 1998. Mr. President, this is a bill that simply, but importantly, provides funding to states and local communities so they can conduct quality criminal background checks. This bill assures parents that dangerous adults will not be employed by their child's school or child care facility.

There is no doubt that most children today head off to school or are dropped off at child care and are supervised by competent, qualified, caring adults. But as our society becomes increasingly violent, parents need the assurance that when their child is under another adult's care, steps have been taken to assure that the care-giver is qualified and competent and safe to take care of their child.

Mr. President, we sit in outrage when television newscasters report yet another story of a child who has been abused or molested when parents thought they had found a safe place to take their child. Nothing frightens a parent more than a report of a child who has been abused by a predator—molesters, abusers or pedophiles.

We do not have to sit and wait, Mr. President. We can and must do more. We have the laws to better screen those who care for our children. Let us use them. We must protect our children and see to it that they grow up in a safe environment. No child should ever suffer these kinds of traumas. That is why Mr. President, I am cosponsoring the Crime Identification Technology Act of 1998. I believe this bill is a strong step to accomplish the type of protection that is needed.

We have a right to expect that those people to whom we entrust the care of our children are decent, upright, trustworthy individuals. Parents have a right to know that anyone who comes in contact with their children in an unsupervised environment has been appropriately screened. We have a right to know that anyone with a criminal history of child abuse, molestation and sexual crimes against children will be prevented from being in a position where they have access to our children.

In this highly mobile society we live in, we know that abusers move easily across state boundaries seeking jobs in places where they think their past will not catch up to them. If schools or child care providers only check in-state applicants for state criminal convictions—and do not require a fingerprint check which can be scanned against a national clearinghouse of convicted criminals—they have not adequately screened applicants before hiring them to oversee our children.

In fact, Mr. President, a case that prompted the passage of laws requiring national criminal background checks in my home State of Washington, involved the arrest of a social worker who possessed hundreds of photos and videotapes of young boys engaged in sexual activities. He was charged on 40 counts of possession of child pornography.

The investigation began after one of the adolescents under his supervision accused him of sexual abuse. When the social worker was hired, a background check of this man was "clean" and reported "no past problems." However, he was previously employed by a state agency far away, across state lines in Texas. Although the Washington state agency checked his references in Texas, they did not check to see if he had a criminal history in any other state.

The background check did not extend beyond the borders of Washington state. State officials at the time admitted they had no routine way of determining whether any state worker had ever run afoul of the law outside Washington's borders.

As a result of this incident, the Washington State Legislature closed this loophole by passing laws requiring national criminal background checks on workers and volunteers who deal with vulnerable populations such as children, the elderly and disabled.

More recently, at a Washington, D.C. day care center, a substitute security guard was filling in for the regular guard, who was sick that day. That afternoon, the substitute guard was arrested on the premises—allegedly an accessory to murder a few months earlier.

In this case, the security firm failed to screen the worker adequately. He was a resident of Maryland and the firm only checked state records which revealed no criminal record. However, the substitute guard had a long rap sheet in Washington D.C., which the security firm did not check. The failure of this security firm to conduct a background check of the neighboring state's jurisdiction put 70 children at tremendous risk.

It is imperative that we stop interstate movement and let abusers know that their backgrounds will be checked, their applications will be screened and national and state fingerprint checks will be conducted where appropriate. In addition, it is essential that we provide funds to the states so they can update their criminal history records and provide timely information when it is requested.

Unfortunately, Mr. President, we live in a time that requires us to protect our children by screening and checking the backgrounds of volunteers and other people who have access to our children. Statistics reveal that 46 percent of child molesters are non-family members who are known to their victims. These are "trusted" adults, such as teachers, scoutmasters, coaches, clergy, counselors and neighbors. As parents, we must be concerned about the people who have access to our children. The bottom line is that strict screening mechanisms and criminal background checks are vital to the safety of our children.

Mr. President, I am cosponsoring this bill because it provides grants to the States for programs for fingerprint-supported background checks for non-criminal justice purposes. These purposes include screening youth service employees, volunteers, and other individuals in positions of trust—if authorized by federal or state law and administered by a government agency. This bill also promotes enhanced communication nationwide between local, state, and national computer systems for domestic violence and sexual offender identification and registration systems.

The Crime Identification Technology Act of 1998 is also important because it provides necessary funding to the States so they can upgrade their criminal history record systems and improve criminal identification of sexual offenders.

Mr. President, this bill is an effective way to stop pedophiles from stalking our children under the guise of employment or volunteer activity. It will also help States protect their children by letting sexual predators know that background checks and screening mechanisms will be conducted wherever they move.

It is imperative that would-be employees not be able to avoid detection during background checks by failing to report their criminal past. The Raleigh News and Observer reported on January 8, 1997 that Terry Dondrell Howie pled guilty to being an accessory to a murder, at the same time he worked taking care of toddlers at a local day care center.

Howie was fired from his job at the day care center, three days after he was sentenced to five years in prison for his role in a deadly car-jacking. Although a state law that requires annual background checks would have eventually caught his felony charges, day care employees facing felony charges can escape detection for months.

There is no requirement that a lengthy background check be completed before a hiring because of the high turnover on day care center staffs.

This can be a fatal practice that must be changed. Take the tragic case of 18-year-old Michelle Montoya, who—in 1997, as a senior in Rio Linda High School—was brutally raped and killed in the school's wood shop by a substitute janitor with a felonious past. The janitor was put on-the-job before fingerprint tests were completed. He had served time for voluntary manslaughter and just prior to the murder of Michelle, he had been paroled. Although California has since passed legislation prohibiting school districts from hiring employees before background checks are complete, the same is not true in every state.

As parents we expect our schools and day care centers to protect our children. We must provide the funding and the attention necessary to correct this problem so that other families do not suffer the same kind of horrible tragedy and loss as the Montoya family.

Mr. President, we cannot take any chances when it comes to protecting our children. We must do everything we can to ensure their safety and protection which is why I urge my colleagues to join me in support of this bill.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BROWNBACK). The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

TRIBUTE TO MRS. CATHY ABELL

Mr. LOTT. Mister President, I would like to recognize the professional dedication, vision and public service of Mrs. Cathy Abell who is leaving the Army Senate Legislative Liaison Office to serve as the Congressional Affairs Coordinator for the Assistant Secretary of the Army for Manpower and Reserve Affairs. It is a privilege for me to recognize the many outstanding achievements she has provided for the Senate, the Army, and our great Nation.

Cathy Abell worked for every Member of the Senate as the Secretary of the Army's legislative liaison to the Senate. She was instrumental in facilitating the exchange of information between our constituent services offices and the Department of the Army. Mrs. Abell is an expert at cutting through the red tape of the military bureaucracy and never lost sight of the fact that taking care of the individual was paramount. I never knew of an instance in which Mrs. Abell would back away from doing the right thing for the Army, the soldier or family member and the Senate offices she served.

Mrs. Abell earned the reputation as someone on whom we could rely on to respond to our inquiries in a responsive, professional manner. She always provided informative, well researched responses to our constituents. Cathy Abell was the "go to" person in the Army's Senate Legislative Liaison Office. When a Senate office had a really complex case, the legislative assistants knew that they should direct the inquiry to her. Mrs. Abell would skillfully work through the complex military regulations and determine how best to maintain the integrity of the Army's processes while permitting the soldier or family member to receive the relief required by their situation.

She is able to communicate effectively with both military officials and Congressional staff members and has developed superb working relationships with our staffs. Her professional abilities and the excellent working relationships earned her the respect and trust which served her, the Army and the Senate so well.

Mrs. Abell recognized that many of our staff were not familiar with Army organizations, processes and procedures. To address this lack of familiarity, she organized and implemented a series of trips in which our staffs were able to experience first hand the conditions under which military personnel are recruited, processed and trained. As a result of her initiative, Senate staff members are able to more accurately explain Army procedures to constituents, in many cases eliminating the need for a formal inquiry. Initiative, caring service and professionalism are the terms used to describe Mrs. Abell.

Mister President, Cathy Abell is a great credit to the Army and the Nation. As she now departs to share her experience and expertise with the Assistant Secretary of the Army for Manpower and Reserve Affairs, I call upon my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to recognize her service to the Senate and wish her well in her new assignment.

THE VERY BAD DEBT BOXSCORE

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, at the close of business Friday, July 10, 1998, the federal debt stood at $5,525,566,285,491.56 (Five trillion, five hundred twenty-five billion, five hundred sixty-six million, two hundred eighty-five thousand, four hundred ninety-one dollars and fifty-six cents).

One year ago, July 10, 1997, the federal debt stood at $5,354,746,000,000 (Five trillion, three hundred fifty-four billion, seven hundred forty-six million).

Twenty-five years ago, July 10, 1973, the federal debt stood at $454,595,000,000 (Four hundred fifty-four billion, five hundred ninety-five million) which reflects a debt increase of more than $5 trillion—$5,070,971,285,491.56 (Five trillion, seventy billion, nine hundred seventy-one million, two hundred eighty-five thousand, four hundred ninety-one dollars and fifty-six cents) during the past 25 years.

HIGHER EDUCATION REAUTHORIZATION ACT

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I would like to discuss an important issue that should be addressed by House and Senate conferees meeting to resolve differences regarding the Higher Education Reauthorization Act.

Various institutions of higher education have tried for a number of years to have the Age Discrimination in Employment Act amended to allow certain types of early retirement plans for tenured faculty. Various Members of this Body have traditionally viewed such an amendment with concern.

At the same time, some Members of this Body are concerned that potentially meritorious ADEA claims have faced statute of limitations problems based on the application of the Supreme Court decision in Lorance versus AT&T Technologies.

I understand there have been efforts to address these concerns, and I would like to pose a question to my colleague from Massachusetts, Senator KENNEDY. Senator KENNEDY, is it your understanding that the House of Representatives has addressed one or both of these issues in its version of this bill?

Mr. KENNEDY. The House of Representatives has addressed only one of these issues. It has proposed a limited exception to the Age Discrimination in Employment Act for tenured faculty. But you are correct that there is an additional concern regarding older workers and their ability to pursue claims under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, and that has to do, as you noted, with the application of the Supreme Court case, Lorance versus AT&T Technologies.

In 1991, Congress passed legislation that partially overturned Lorance. Today, Lorance does not apply to claims brought under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act. Unfortunately, Congress did not consider the effect of the Lorance decision on other statutes, in particular, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Yes, it is unfortunate. Lorance established an unworkable system for filing claims under the employment discrimination laws. It held that when a seniority system was allegedly adopted with a discriminatory purpose, the time limit for challenging that system begins to run on the date the system is first adopted—not the date it begins to apply to the individual employee. This could be a “catch-22”: by the time an employee is harmed and has standing to bring a claim, the statutory time period for challenging the policy will often have expired. Indeed, in some cases, no current employee would ever be able to challenge a long-standing, but discriminatory employment policy or system.

This is clearly contrary to the purposes of the age discrimination laws. There is no justification for unfairly closing the doors of justice to victims of age discrimination.

Mr. KENNEDY. I concur with my colleague from Iowa. Before the Senate accedes to the House’s provision on tenured faculty, this issue should be discussed and hopefully resolved during the conference.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Thomas, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Ms. COLLINS:

S. 2292. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to provide for coverage under the Medicare Program of insulin pumps as items of durable medical equipment; to the Committee on Finance.

MEDICARE INSULIN PUMP COVERAGE ACT OF 1998

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, diabetes is a serious and potentially life-threatening disease affecting more than 16 million Americans at a cost of more than $137 billion annually. That is more than the cost of treating any other disease. Moreover, since 3 million elderly Medicare beneficiaries have been diagnosed with diabetes, and another 3 million are likely to have it but not realize it at this point, nowhere is the economic impact of diabetes felt more strongly than in our Medicare Program.

Treating seniors for the often devastating complications associated with diabetes accounts for more than one-quarter of all Medicare expenses. Therefore, helping diabetic seniors avoid the complications of their disease will not only greatly improve the quality of their lives, but also help reduce the economic burden that diabetes places on the Medicare Program. This, Mr. President, is essential to the long-term economic viability of Medicare.

While there is no known cure, diabetes is largely a treatable disease. Many people who have diabetes can lead completely normal, active lives as long as they stick to a proper diet, carefully monitor the amount of their blood sugar or glucose, and take their medicine, which may or may not include insulin.

However, Mr. President, unfortunately, if a person with diabetes does not follow this rather strict regimen, they put themselves at risk of blindness, loss of limbs and an increased chance of heart disease, kidney failure, and stroke. Therefore, appropriate preventive services for diabetes have the potential to save a great deal of money that otherwise would go for hospitalization or other acute care costs—not to mention a great deal of unnecessary pain and suffering.

Mr. President, Congress recently took a number of important steps to improve Medicare coverage of preventive care for individuals with diabetes. Prior to enactment of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, Medicare covered diabetes self-maintenance education services in inpatient or hospital-based settings and in limited outpatient settings, specifically hospital outpatient departments or rural health clinics.

Medicare did not, however, cover education services if they were given in any other outpatient setting, such as a physician's office. Moreover, while Medicare did cover the cost of blood-testing strips used to monitor the sugar in the blood, it did so only for type I diabetics who required insulin to control their disease. Last year's Balanced Budget Act rightly expanded Medicare to cover all outpatient self-management training services as well as providing uniform coverage of blood-testing strips for all people with diabetes.

With the enactment of the Balanced Budget Act, we made significant progress toward improving care for Medicare beneficiaries with diabetes. However, Mr. President, there is more that we can do.

External insulin infusion pumps have proven to be more effective at controlling blood glucose levels than conventional injection therapy for many insulin-dependent diabetics. This helps them to avoid the expensive complications and the suffering resulting from uncontrolled diabetes. However, Mr. President, Medicare currently does not cover these pumps, even in cases where they have been prescribed as medically necessary by the Medicare beneficiary's physician. I am, therefore, today pleased to introduce legislation, the Medicare Insulin Pump Coverage Act of 1998, that would expand Medicare coverage to cover insulin infusion pumps for certain type I diabetics.

External insulin pumps are neither investigational nor experimental. They are widely accepted by health care professionals involved in treating patients with diabetes. Moreover, studies such as the Diabetes Control and Complications Trial sponsored by NIH have established that maintaining blood glucose levels as close to normal as possible is the key to preventing the devastating complications of diabetes.

For many patients, Mr. President, the use of an infusion pump is the only way that optimal blood glucose control can be achieved safely and effectively. That is why virtually all other third-party payers—including most State Medicaid programs and CHAMPUS—cover the device. Moreover, there is precedent under the Medicare Program itself for covering the pump. Medicare currently covers infusion pumps for numerous cancer drugs as well as for pain control medications.

Mr. President, I first became interested in this problem because of the experience of one of my constituents, Nona Frederich of Raymond, ME. She is an example of the kind of Medicare patient who would benefit from the pump. She is currently, unfortunately, being denied what is for her the most effective form of glucose control.

Nona has been an insulin-dependent diabetic since 1962. Because of her extremely volatile insulin sensitivity, her diabetic specialist placed her on an insulin infusion pump in January of 1982. Until she reached age 65, the cost of the pump and operating supplies was underwritten in large part by her insurer, Colorado Blue-Cross-Blue Shield, and later by Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Maine.

In March of 1995, it became necessary for Nona to purchase a new infusion pump. By now, however, she was older and on Medicare. Much to her surprise, Medicare refused to cover the pump, even though her doctor had prescribed it as clearly being medically necessary to help control her diabetes. Since then, with the help of my Portland office staff, the Frederichs have worked their way through the Health Care Financing Administration's system of appeals. Unfortunately, in January of this year, they received final notification of a negative decision by the Department of Health and Human Services. Their only option now is to file a civil suit, which they are simply not in a position to pursue.

The Frederichs literally have notebooks filled with documentation of the procedures they have followed and the evidence they have submitted. Moreover, they have personally paid close to $5,000 in original pump costs and supplies for which they have received no reimbursement under the Medicare Program. For a Medicare beneficiary with limited income, these kinds of costs can be devastating. They can place the pump completely out of reach, even though the pump is medically necessary. In such a case, such patients would be forced to return to or continue with conventional insulin therapy which simply may not be as effective in controlling their blood sugar. As a consequence, these patients are admitted to the hospital with complications over and over again. The irony is that then Medicare will pick up the bill, and a far higher bill it will be than if Medicare had paid for the pump in the first place.

While potentially devastating for an individual, the financial cost to Medicare of expanding coverage to include the insulin-infusion pump would be relatively minor. Under my bill, the pump would have to be prescribed by a physician and the beneficiary would have to be a Type-I diabetic, "experiencing severe swings of high and low blood glucose levels." Of the estimated 3 million Medicare beneficiaries with diabetes, only about 5 percent are Type-I, or insulin-dependent. Of these, it is estimated the pump would be appropriate for only about 4 percent. But what a difference it would make in the lives of those 4 percent.

The American Diabetes Association, the American Association of Clinical Endocrinologists and the American Association of Diabetes Educators, as well as officials at the Centers for Disease Control, have all advocated expanding Medicare to cover insulin pumps for Type-I diabetics who would otherwise have great difficulty in controlling their blood sugar.

I am very pleased to be introducing this legislation today to do just that. I urge my colleagues to join me as co-sponsors.

I ask that the text of the bill be entered into the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2292

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

SEC. 2. COVERAGE OF INSULIN PUMPS UNDER MEDICARE.

(a) INCLUSION AS ITEM OF DURABLE MEDICAL EQUIPMENT.—Section 1861(n) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395x(n)) is amended by inserting before the semicolon the following: "and includes insulin infusion pumps (as defined in subsection (uu)) prescribed by the physician of an individual with Type I diabetes who is experiencing severe swings of high and low blood glucose levels and has successfully completed a training program that meets standards established by the Secretary or who has used such a pump without interruption for at least 18 months immediately before enrollment under part B".

(b) DEFINITION OF INSULIN INFUSION PUMP.—Section 1861 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395x) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"Insulin Infusion Pump

"(uu) The term 'insulin infusion pump' means an infusion pump, approved by the Federal Food and Drug Administration, that provides for the computerized delivery of insulin for individuals with diabetes in lieu of multiple daily manual insulin injections."

(c) PAYMENT FOR SUPPLIES RELATING TO INFUSION PUMPS.—Section 1834(a)(2)(A) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395m(a)(2)(A)) is amended—

(1) in clause (ii), by striking "or" at the end;

(2) in clause (iii), by inserting "or" at the end; and

(3) by inserting after clause (iii) the following:

"(iv) which is an accessory used in conjunction with an insulin infusion pump (as defined in section 1861(uu))."

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to items of durable medical equipment furnished under title XVIII of the Social Security Act on or after the date of enactment of this Act.

By Mr. MCCAIN (for himself, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. SMITH of Oregon, Mr. FAIRCLOTH, Mr. INOUE, Mr. SANTORUM, Mr. BREAUX, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. CLELAND, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. SARBANES, Mrs.

BOXER, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. FORD, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. ROBERTS, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. REID, Mr. BRYAN, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. WELLSTONE, Mr. DORGAN, and Mr. REED):

S. 2295. A bill to amend the Older Americans Act of 1965 to extend the authorizations of appropriations for that Act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

OLDER AMERICANS ACT REAUTHORIZATION OF 1998

• Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, today I introduce the Older Americans Act Reauthorization Bill of 1998. I have 22 co-sponsors: Senator BARBARA MIKULSKI, Senator JAMES INHOFE, Senator GORDON SMITH, Senator LAUCH FAIRCLOTH, Senator DANIEL INOUE, Senator RICK SANTORUM, Senator JOHN BREAUX, Senator RICHARD DURBIN, Senator MAX CLELAND, Senator EDWARD KENNEDY, Senator PAUL SARBANES, Senator BARBARA BOXER, Senator PATTY MURRAY, Senator WENDELL FORD, Senator RON WYDEN, Senator PAT ROBERTS, Senator DANIEL AKAKA, Senator HARRY REID, Senator RICHARD BRYAN, Senator CARL LEVIN, Senator BOB GRAHAM, and Senator CHARLES GRASSLEY.

The OAA expired in 1995, and we are entering the fourth year without an OAA reauthorization. The bill would reauthorize the OAA thru the year 2001 using the language of the 1992 Act. This time frame would give needed stability to OAA programs while allowing a full evaluation of the OAA to ensure it is relevant to our current and future seniors.

Reauthorization of the OAA is absolutely essential. It is the major vehicle for the delivery of such programs as: meals on wheels; congregate meals; home care (personal care, homemaker, and chore service); adult day care; senior centers; transportation; a job program with skills training for low income seniors; a long term care ombudsman; research and demonstration projects; and abuse prevention and elder rights.

In addition, this is the cornerstone of programs for elderly Native Americans because it is the only federal program that allows tribes to directly plan for the needs of their elderly based on their own culture and traditions.

The OAA is a coordinated system of care that can work alone or hand in hand with Medicare and Medicaid services for those seniors in greatest social and economic need. It also encourages public/private partnerships; promotes seniors volunteering to help one another; and spells out a planning and oversight mechanism that includes the seniors themselves.

We all recognize and appreciate the hard work of the Sub-Committee on Aging to get an updated, reauthorized bill to us during this Congress, and I will continue to work in support of their effort. However, with our condensed legislative calendar, the likelihood of completing the full committee process is diminished. This legislation would provide a short term reauthorization in order to allow The Committee to continue its work to rewrite the 1992 law.

This bill is endorsed by 32 of the major national aging organizations and associations, a list is attached.

Mr. President, our nation's seniors and their families are very concerned that these vital services will stop. It is time to reassure them.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a list of groups supporting the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMENDMENT No. 3123

On page 99, between lines 17 and 18, insert the following:

TITLE IX

HUMAN RIGHTS IN CHINA

Subtitle A—Forced Abortions in China

SEC. 9001. This subtitle may be cited as the "Forced Abortion Condemnation Act".

SEC. 9002. Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Forced abortion was rightly denounced as a crime against humanity by the Nuremberg War Crimes Tribunal.

(2) For over 15 years there have been frequent and credible reports of forced abortion and forced sterilization in connection with the population control policies of the People's Republic of China. These reports indicate the following:

(A) Although it is the stated position of the politburo of the Chinese Communist Party that forced abortion and forced sterilization have no role in the population control program, in fact the Communist Chinese Government encourages both forced abortion and forced sterilization through a combination of strictly enforced birth quotas and immunity for local population control officials who engage in coercion. Officials acknowledge that there have been instances of forced abortions and sterilization, and no evidence has been made available to suggest that the perpetrators have been punished.

(B) People's Republic of China population control officials, in cooperation with employers and works unit officials, routinely monitor women's menstrual cycles and subject women who conceive without government authorization to extreme psychological pressure, to harsh economic sanctions, including unpayable fines and loss of employment, and often to physical force.

(C) Official sanctions for giving birth to unauthorized children include fines in amounts several times larger than the per capita annual incomes of residents of the People's Republic of China. In Fujian, for example, the average fine is estimated to be twice a family's gross annual income. Families which cannot pay the fine may be subject to confiscation and destruction of their homes and personal property.

(D) Especially harsh punishments have been inflicted on those whose resistance is motivated by religion. For example, according to a 1995 Amnesty International report, the Catholic inhabitants of 2 villages in Hebei Province were subjected to population control under the slogan "better to have more graves than one more child". Enforcement measures included torture, sexual abuse, and the detention of resisters' relatives as hostages.

(E) Forced abortions in Communist China often have taken place in the very late stages of pregnancy.

(F) Since 1994 forced abortion and sterilization have been used in Communist China not only to regulate the number of children, but also to eliminate those who are regarded as defective in accordance with the official eugenic policy known as the "Natal and Health Care Law".

SEC. 9003. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of State may not utilize any funds appropriated or otherwise available for the Department of State for fiscal year 1999 to issue any visa to any national of the People's Republic of China, including any official of the Communist Party or the Government of the People's Republic of China and its regional, local, and village authorities (except the head of state, the head of government, and cabinet level ministers) who the Secretary finds, based on credible information, has been involved in the establishment or enforcement of population control policies resulting in a woman being forced to undergo an abortion against her free choice, or resulting in a man or woman being forced to undergo sterilization against his or her free choice.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Attorney General may not utilize any funds appropriated or otherwise available for the Department of Justice for fiscal year 1999 to admit to the United States any national covered by subsection (a).

(c) The President may waive the prohibition in subsection (a) or (b) with respect to a national of the People's Republic of China if the President—

(1) determines that it is in the national interest of the United States to do so; and

(2) provides written notification to Congress containing a justification for the waiver.

Subtitle B—Freedom on Religion in China

SEC. 9011. (a) It is the sense of Congress that the President should make freedom of religion one of the major objectives of United States foreign policy with respect to China.

(b) As part of this policy, the Department of State should raise in every relevant bilateral and multilateral forum the issue of individuals imprisoned, detained, confined, or otherwise harassed by the Chinese Government on religious grounds.

(c) In its communications with the Chinese Government, the Department of State should provide specific names of individuals of concern and request a complete and timely response from the Chinese Government regarding the individuals' whereabouts and condition, the charges against them, and sentence imposed.

(d) The goal of these official communications should be the expeditious release of all religious prisoners in China and Tibet and the end of the Chinese Government's policy and practice of harassing and repressing religious believers.

SEC. 9012. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no funds appropriated or otherwise made available for the Department of State for fiscal year 1999 for the United States Information Agency or the United States Agency for International Development may be used for the purpose of providing travel expenses and per diem for the participation in conferences, exchanges, programs, and activities of the following nationals of the People's Republic of China:

(1) The head or political secretary of any of the following Chinese Government-created or approved organizations:

(A) The Chinese Buddhist Association.

(B) The Chinese Catholic Patriotic Association.

(C) The National Congress of Catholic Representatives.

(D) The Chinese Catholic Bishops' Conference.

(E) The Chinese Protestant "Three Self" Patriotic Movement.

(F) The China Christian Council.

(G) The Chinese Taoist Association.

(H) The Chinese Islamic Association.

(2) Any military or civilian official or employee of the Government of the People's Republic of China who carried out or directed the carrying out of any of the following policies or practices:

(A) Formulating, drafting, or implementing repressive religious policies.

(B) Imprisoning, detaining, or harassing individuals on religious grounds.

(C) Promoting or participating in policies or practices which hinder religious activities or the free expression of religious beliefs.

(b)(1) Each Federal agency subject to the prohibition in subsection (a) shall certify in writing to the appropriate congressional committees, on a quarterly basis during fiscal year 1999, that it did not pay, either directly or through a contractor or grantee, for travel expenses or per diem of any national of the People's Republic of China described in subsection (a).

(2) Each certification under paragraph (1) shall be supported by the following information:

(A) The name of each employee of any agency of the Government of the People's Republic of China whose travel expenses or per diem were paid by funds of the reporting agency of the United States Government.

(B) The procedures employed by the reporting agency of the United States Government to ascertain whether each individual under subparagraph (A) did or did not participate in activities described in subsection (a)(2).

(C) The reporting agency's basis for concluding that each individual under subparagraph (A) did not participate in such activities.

SEC. 9013. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of State may not utilize any funds appropriated or otherwise available for the Department of State for fiscal year 1999 to issue a visa to any national of the People's Republic of China described in section 9012(a)(2) (except the head of state, the head of government, and cabinet level ministers).

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Attorney General may not utilize any funds appropriated or otherwise available for the Department of Justice for fiscal year 1999 to admit to the United States any national covered by subsection (a).

(c) The President may waive the prohibition in subsection (a) or (b) with respect to an individual described in such subsection if the President—

(1) determines that it is vital to the national interest to do so; and

(2) provides written notification to the appropriate congressional committees containing a justification for the waiver.

SEC. 9014. In this subtitle, the term "appropriate congressional committees" means the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate and the Committee on International Relations of the House of Representatives.

Subtitle C—Monitoring of Human Rights Abuses in China

SEC. 9021. This subtitle may be cited as the "Political Freedom in China Act of 1998".

SEC. 9022. Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Congress concurs in the following conclusions of the United States State Department on human rights in the People's Republic of China in 1996:

(A) The People's Republic of China is "an authoritarian state" in which "citizens lack the freedom to peacefully express opposition to the party-led political system and the right to change their national leaders or form of government".

(B) The Government of the People's Republic of China has "continued to commit widespread and well-documented human rights abuses, in violation of internationally accepted norms, stemming from the authorities' intolerance of dissent, fear of unrest, and the absence or inadequacy of laws protecting basic freedoms".

(C) "[a]buses include torture and mistreatment of prisoners, forced confessions, and arbitrary and incommunicado detention".

(D) "[p]rison conditions remained harsh [and] [t]he Government continued severe restrictions on freedom of speech, the press, assembly, association, religion, privacy, and worker rights".

(E) "[a]lthough the Government denies that it holds political prisoners, the number of persons detained or serving sentences for 'counterrevolutionary crimes' or 'crimes against the state', or for peaceful political or religious activities are believed to number in the thousands".

(F) "[n]onapproved religious groups, including Protestant and Catholic groups * * * experienced intensified repression".

(G) "[s]erious human rights abuses persist in minority areas, including Tibet, Xinjiang, and Inner Mongolia[, and] [c]ontrols on religion and on other fundamental freedoms in these areas have also intensified".

(H) "[o]verall in 1996, the authorities stepped up efforts to cut off expressions of protest or criticism. All public dissent against the party and government was effectively silenced by intimidation, exile, the imposition of prison terms, administrative detention, or house arrest. No dissidents were known to be active at year's end."

(2) In addition to the State Department, credible independent human rights organizations have documented an increase in repression in China during 1995, and effective destruction of the dissident movement through the arrest and sentencing of the few remaining pro-democracy and human rights activists not already in prison or exile.

(3) Among those were Li Hai, sentenced to 9 years in prison on December 18, 1996, for gathering information on the victims of the 1989 crackdown, which according to the court's verdict constituted "state secrets"; Liu Nianchun, an independent labor organizer, sentenced to 3 years of "re-education through labor" on July 4, 1996, due to his activities in connection with a petition campaign calling for human rights reforms; and Ngodrup Phuntsog, a Tibetan national, who was arrested in Tibet in 1987 immediately after he returned from a 2-year trip to India, where the Tibetan government in exile is located, and following a secret trial was convicted by the Government of the People's Republic of China of espionage on behalf of the "Ministry of Security of the Dalai clique".

(4) Many political prisoners are suffering from poor conditions and ill-treatment leading to serious medical and health problems, including—

(A) Gao Yu, a journalist sentenced to 6 years in prison in November 1994 and honored by UNESCO in May 1997, has a heart condition; and

(B) Chen Longde, a leading human rights advocate now serving a 3-year reeducation through labor sentence imposed without trial in August 1995, has reportedly been subject to repeated beatings and electric shocks at a labor camp for refusing to confess his guilt.

(5) The People's Republic of China, as a member of the United Nations, is expected to abide by the provisions of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

(6) The People's Republic of China is a party to numerous international human rights conventions, including the Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment.

SEC. 9023. (a) The Secretary of State, in all official meetings with the Government of the People's Republic of China, should request the immediate and unconditional release of Ngodrup Phuntsog and other prisoners of conscience in Tibet, as well as in the People's Republic of China.

(b) The Secretary of State should seek access for international humanitarian organizations to Draphchi prison and other prisons in Tibet, as well as in the People's Republic of China, to ensure that prisoners are not being mistreated and are receiving necessary medical treatment.

(c) The Secretary of State, in all official meetings with the Government of the People's Republic of China, should call on that country to begin serious discussions with the Dalai Lama or his representatives, without preconditions, on the future of Tibet.

SEC. 9024. (a) Of the amounts appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act, $1,100,000 shall be available for support personnel to monitor political repression in the People's Republic of China in the United States Embassies in Beijing and Kathmandu, as well as the American consulates in Guangzhou, Shanghai, Shenyang, Chengdu, and Hong Kong.

(b) The amount available under subsection (a) is in addition to any other amounts appropriated or otherwise available in fiscal year 1999 for the personnel referred to in that subsection.

SEC. 9025. (a)(1) Of the amounts appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act, $2,500,000 shall be available for the National Endowment for Democracy for the promotion of democracy, civil society, and the development of the rule of law in China.

(2) The amount available under paragraph (1) is in addition to any other amounts appropriated or otherwise made available in fiscal year 1999 for the National Endowment for Democracy.

(b) The Secretary of State shall, in fiscal year 1999, utilize funds available in the East Asia-Pacific Regional Democracy Fund to provide grants to nongovernmental organizations to promote democracy, civil society, and the development of the rule of law in China.

SEC. 9026. (a) The Secretary of State shall utilize funds appropriated or otherwise available for the Department of State for fiscal year 1999 submit to the International Relations Committee of the House of Representatives and the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, in that fiscal year, a report on human rights in China, including religious persecution, the development of democratic institutions, and the rule of law. The report shall provide information on each region of China.

(b)(1) The Secretary of State shall utilize funds referred to in subsection (a) to establish a Prisoner Information Registry for China which shall provide information on all political prisoners, prisoners of conscience, and prisoners of faith in China.

(2) Such information shall include the charges, judicial processes, administrative actions, use of forced labor, incidences of torture, length of imprisonment, physical and health conditions, and other matters related to the incarceration of such prisoners in China.

(3) The Secretary may make funds available to nongovernmental organizations presently engaged in monitoring activities regarding Chinese political prisoners to assist in the creation and maintenance of the registry.

SEC. 9027. It is the sense of Congress that Congress, the President, and the Secretary of State should work with the governments of other countries to establish a Commission on Security and Cooperation in Asia which would be modeled after the Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

SEC. 9028. It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the people of Hong Kong should continue to have the right and ability to freely elect their legislative representatives; and

(2) the procedure for the conduct of the elections of the first legislature of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region should be determined by the people of Hong Kong through an election law convention, a referendum, or both.

SEC. 9029. It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the Government of the People's Republic of China should stop the practice of harvesting and transplanting organs for profit from prisoners that it executes;

(2) the Government of the People's Republic of China should be strongly condemned for such organ harvesting and transplanting practice;

(3) the President should bar from entry into the United States any and all officials of the Government of the People's Republic of China known to be directly involved in such organ harvesting and transplanting practice;

(4) individuals determined to be participating in or otherwise facilitating the sale of such organs in the United States should be prosecuted to the fullest possible extent of the law; and

(5) the appropriate officials in the United States should interview individuals, including doctors, who may have knowledge of such organ harvesting and transplanting practice.

AMENDMENT NO. 3125

On page 99, between lines 17 and 18, insert the following:

SEC. 8014. (a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the "Communist China Subsidy Reduction Act of 1998".

(b) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) the People's Republic of China has enjoyed ready access to international capital through commercial loans, direct investment, sales of securities, bond sales, and foreign aid;

(2) regarding international commercial lending, the People's Republic of China had $48,000,000,000 in loans outstanding from private creditors in 1995;

(3) regarding international direct investment, international direct investment in the People's Republic of China from 1993 through 1995 totaled $97,151,000,000, and in 1996 alone totaled $47,000,000,000;

(4) regarding investment in Chinese securities, the aggregate value of outstanding Chinese securities currently held by Chinese nationals and foreign persons is $175,000,000,000, and from 1993 through 1995 foreign persons invested $10,540,000,000 in Chinese stocks;

(5) regarding investment in Chinese bonds, entities controlled by the Government of the People's Republic of China have issued 75 bonds since 1988, including 36 dollar-denominated bond offerings valued at more than $6,700,000,000, and the total value of long-term Chinese bonds outstanding as of January 1, 1996, was $11,709,000,000;

(6) regarding international assistance, the People's Republic of China received almost $1,000,000,000 in foreign aid grants and an additional $1,566,000,000 in technical assistance grants from 1993 through 1995, and in 1995 received $5,540,000,000 in bilateral assistance loans, including concessional aid, export credits, and related assistance; and

(7) regarding international financial institutions—

(A) despite the People's Republic of China's access to international capital and world financial markets, international financial institutions have annually provided it with more than $4,000,000,000 in loans in recent years, amounting to almost a third of the loan commitments of the Asian Development Bank and 17.1 percent of the loan approvals by the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development in 1995; and

(B) the People's Republic of China borrows more from the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the Asian Development Bank than any other country, and loan commitments from those institutions to the People's Republic of China quadrupled from $1,100,000,000 in 1985 to $4,300,000,000 by 1995.

(c) OPPOSITION OF UNITED STATES TO CONCESSIONAL LOANS TO CHINA.—(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in the consideration by an international financial institution of a concessional loan to the People's Republic of China, any citizen or national of the People's Republic of China, or any entity established in the People's Republic of China, the United States Executive Director of the international financial institution may not use any funds appropriated or otherwise available to such Executive Director for fiscal year 1999 except to use the voice and vote of the United States to oppose the provision of the concessional loan by the institution.

(2) In this subsection:

(A) The term "concessional loans" means loans with highly subsidized interest rates, grace periods for repayment of 5 years or more, and maturities of 20 years or more.

(B) The term "international financial institution" has the meaning given that term in section 1701(c)(2) of the International Financial Institutions Act (22 U.S.C. 262r(c)(2)).

(d) PRINCIPLES FOR UNITED STATES NATIONALS CONDUCTING INDUSTRIAL COOPERATION PROJECTS IN CHINA.—(1) It is the purpose of this subsection to create principles governing the conduct of industrial cooperation projects of United States nationals in the People's Republic of China.

(2) It is the sense of Congress that any United States national conducting an industrial cooperation project in the People's Republic of China should:

(A) Suspend the use of any goods, wares, articles, or merchandise that the United States national has reason to believe were mined, produced, or manufactured, in whole or in part, by convict labor or forced labor, and refuse to use forced labor in the industrial cooperation project.

(B) Seek to ensure that political or religious views, sex, ethnic or national background, involvement in political activities or nonviolent demonstrations, or association with suspected or known dissidents will not prohibit hiring, lead to harassment, demotion, or dismissal, or in any way affect the status or terms of employment in the industrial cooperation project. The United States national should not discriminate in terms or conditions of employment in the industrial cooperation project against persons with past records of arrest or internal exile for nonviolent protest or membership in unofficial organizations committed to non-violence.

(C) Ensure that methods of production used in the industrial cooperation project do not pose an unnecessary physical danger to workers and neighboring populations or property, and that the industrial cooperation project does not unnecessarily risk harm to the surrounding environment; and consult with community leaders regarding environmental protection with respect to the industrial cooperation project.

(D) Strive to establish a private business enterprise when involved in an industrial cooperation project with the Government of the People's Republic of China or other state entity.

(E) Discourage any Chinese military presence on the premises of any industrial cooperation projects which involve dual-use technologies.

(F) Undertake to promote freedom of association and assembly among the employees of the United States national. The United States national should protest any infringement by the Government of the People's Republic of China of these freedoms to the International Labor Organization's office in Beijing.

(G) Provide the Department of State with information relevant to the Department's efforts to collect information on prisoners for the purposes of the Prisoner Information Registry, and for other purposes.

(H) Discourage or undertake to prevent compulsory political indoctrination programs from taking place on the premises of the industrial cooperation project.

(I) Promote freedom of expression, including the freedom to seek, receive, and impart information and ideas of all kinds, regardless of frontiers, either orally, in writing or in print, in the form of art, or through any media. To this end, the United States national should raise with appropriate authorities of the Government of the People's Republic of China concerns about restrictions on the free flow of information.

(J) Undertake to prevent harassment of workers who, consistent with the United Nations World Population Plan of Action, decide freely and responsibly the number and spacing of their children; and prohibit compulsory population control activities on the premises of the industrial cooperation project.

(3) The Secretary of State shall utilize funds appropriated for the Department of State for fiscal year 1999 to forward a copy of the principles set forth in paragraph (2) to the member nations of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development and encourage them to promote principles similar to these principles.

(4) In this subsection:

(A) The term "industrial cooperation project" refers to a for-profit activity the business operations of which employ more than 25 individuals or have assets greater than $25,000.

(B) The term "United States national" means—

(i) a citizen or national of the United States or a permanent resident of the United States; and

(ii) a corporation, partnership, or other business association organized under the laws of the United States, any State or territory thereof, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

(e) PROMOTION OF EXCHANGES BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND CHINA.—(1) Agencies of the United States Government which engage in educational, cultural, scientific, agricultural, military, legal, political, and artistic exchanges shall utilize funds appropriated or otherwise available to such agencies for fiscal year 1999 to initiate or expand such exchange programs with regard to China.

(2) It is the sense of Congress that a Federally chartered not-for-profit organization should be established to fund exchanges between the United States and China through private donations.

Subtitle A—Exchange of Criminal History Records for Noncriminal Justice Purposes

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact Act of 1998".

SEC. 202. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) both the Federal Bureau of Investigation and State criminal history record repositories maintain fingerprint-based criminal history records;

(2) these criminal history records are shared and exchanged for criminal justice purposes through a Federal-State program known as the Interstate Identification Index System;

(3) although these records are also exchanged for legally authorized, noncriminal justice uses, such as governmental licensing and employment background checks, the purposes for and procedures by which they are exchanged vary widely from State to State;

(4) an interstate and Federal-State compact is necessary to facilitate authorized interstate criminal history record exchanges for noncriminal justice purposes on a uniform basis, while permitting each State to effectuate its own dissemination policy within its own borders; and

(5) such a compact will allow Federal and State records to be provided expeditiously to governmental and nongovernmental agencies that use such records in accordance with pertinent Federal and State law, while simultaneously enhancing the accuracy of the records and safeguarding the information contained therein from unauthorized disclosure or use.

SEC. 203. DEFINITIONS.

In this title:

(1) ATTORNEY GENERAL.—The term "Attorney General" means the Attorney General of the United States.

(2) COMPACT.—The term "Compact" means the National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact set forth in section 107.

(3) COUNCIL.—The term "Council" means the Compact Council established under Article VI of the Compact.

(4) FBI.—The term "FBI" means the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(5) PARTY STATE.—The term "Party State" means a State that has ratified the Compact.

(6) STATE.—The term "State" means any State, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

SEC. 204. ENACTMENT AND CONSENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

The National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact, as set forth in section 107, is enacted into law and entered into by the Federal Government. The consent of Congress is given to States to enter into the Compact.

SEC. 205. EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS.

(a) PRIVACY ACT OF 1974.—Nothing in the Compact shall affect the obligations and responsibilities of the FBI under section 552a of title 5, United States Code (commonly known as the "Privacy Act of 1974").

(b) ACCESS TO CERTAIN RECORDS NOT AFFECTED.—Nothing in the Compact shall interfere in any manner with—

(1) access, direct or otherwise, to records pursuant to—

(A) section 9101 of title 5, United States Code;

(B) the National Child Protection Act;

(C) the Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act (Public Law 103-159; 107 Stat. 1536);

(D) the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 (Public Law 103-322; 108 Stat. 2074) or any amendment made by that Act;

(E) the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437 et seq.); or

(F) the Native American Housing Assistance and Self-Determination Act of 1996 (25 U.S.C. 4101 et seq.); or

(2) any direct access to Federal criminal history records authorized by law.

(c) AUTHORITY OF FBI UNDER DEPARTMENTS OF STATE, JUSTICE, AND COMMERCE, THE JUDICIARY, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATION ACT, 1973.—Nothing in the Compact shall be construed to affect the authority of the FBI under the Departments of State, Justice, and Commerce, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1973 (Public Law 92-544 (86 Stat. 1115)).

(d) FEDERAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE ACT.—The Council shall not be considered to be a Federal advisory committee for purposes of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.).

(e) MEMBERS OF COUNCIL NOT FEDERAL OFFICERS OR EMPLOYEES.—Members of the Council (other than a member from the FBI or any at-large member who may be a Federal official or employee) shall not, by virtue of such membership, be deemed—

(1) to be, for any purpose other than to effect the Compact, officers or employees of the United States (as defined in sections 2104 and 2105 of title 5, United States Code); or

(2) to become entitled by reason of Council membership to any compensation or benefit payable or made available by the Federal Government to its officers or employees.

SEC. 206. ENFORCEMENT AND IMPLEMENTATION.

All departments, agencies, officers, and employees of the United States shall enforce the Compact and cooperate with one another and with all Party States in enforcing the Compact and effectuating its purposes. For the Federal Government, the Attorney General shall make such rules, prescribe such instructions, and take such other actions as may be necessary to carry out the Compact and this title.

SEC. 207. NATIONAL CRIME PREVENTION AND PRIVACY COMPACT.

The Contracting Parties agree to the following:

OVERVIEW

(a) IN GENERAL.—This Compact organizes an electronic information sharing system among the Federal Government and the States to exchange criminal history records for noncriminal justice purposes authorized by Federal or State law, such as background checks for governmental licensing and employment.

(b) OBLIGATIONS OF PARTIES.—Under this Compact, the FBI and the Party States agree to maintain detailed databases of their respective criminal history records, including arrests and dispositions, and to make them available to the Federal Government and to Party States for authorized purposes. The FBI shall also manage the Federal data facilities that provide a significant part of the infrastructure for the system.

ARTICLE I—DEFINITIONS

In this Compact:

(1) ATTORNEY GENERAL.—The term “Attorney General” means the Attorney General of the United States;

(2) COMPACT OFFICER.—The term “Compact officer” means—

(A) with respect to the Federal Government, an official so designated by the Director of the FBI; and

(B) with respect to a Party State, the chief administrator of the State’s criminal history record repository or a designee of the chief administrator who is a regular full-time employee of the repository.

(3) COUNCIL.—The term “Council” means the Compact Council established under Article VI.

(4) CRIMINAL HISTORY RECORDS.—The term “criminal history records”—

(A) means information collected by criminal justice agencies on individuals consisting of identifiable descriptions and notations of arrests, detentions, indictments, or other formal criminal charges, and any disposition arising therefrom, including acquittal, sentencing, correctional supervision, or release; and

(B) does not include identification information such as fingerprint records if such information does not indicate involvement of the individual with the criminal justice system.

(5) CRIMINAL HISTORY RECORD REPOSITORY.—The term “criminal history record repository” means the State agency designated by the Governor or other appropriate executive official or the legislature of a State to perform centralized recordkeeping functions for criminal history records and services in the State.

(6) CRIMINAL JUSTICE.—The term “criminal justice” includes activities relating to the detection, apprehension, detention, pretrial release, post-trial release, prosecution, adjudication, correctional supervision, or rehabilitation of accused persons or criminal offenders. The administration of criminal justice includes criminal identification activities and the collection, storage, and dissemination of criminal history records.

(7) CRIMINAL JUSTICE AGENCY.—The term “criminal justice agency”—

(A) means—

(i) courts; and

(ii) a governmental agency or any subunit thereof that—

(I) performs the administration of criminal justice pursuant to a statute or Executive order; and

(II) allocates a substantial part of its annual budget to the administration of criminal justice; and

(B) includes Federal and State inspectors general offices.

(8) CRIMINAL JUSTICE SERVICES.—The term “criminal justice services” means services provided by the FBI to criminal justice agencies in response to a request for information about a particular individual or as an update to information previously provided for criminal justice purposes.

(9) CRITERION OFFENSE.—The term “criterion offense” means any felony or misdemeanor offense not included on the list of nonserious offenses published periodically by the FBI.

(10) DIRECT ACCESS.—The term “direct access” means access to the National Identification Index by computer terminal or other automated means not requiring the assistance of or intervention by any other party or agency.

(11) EXECUTIVE ORDER.—The term “Executive order” means an order of the President of the United States or the chief executive officer of a State that has the force of law and that is promulgated in accordance with applicable law.

(12) FBI.—The term “FBI” means the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(13) INTERSTATE IDENTIFICATION SYSTEM.—The term “Interstate Identification Index System” or “III System”—

(A) means the cooperative Federal-State system for the exchange of criminal history records; and

(B) includes the National Identification Index, the National Fingerprint File and, to the extent of their participation in such system, the criminal history record repositories of the States and the FBI.

(14) NATIONAL FINGERPRINT FILE.—The term “National Fingerprint File” means a database of fingerprints, or other uniquely personal identifying information, relating to an arrested or charged individual maintained by the FBI to provide positive identification of record subjects indexed in the III System.

(15) NATIONAL IDENTIFICATION INDEX.—The term “National Identification Index” means an index maintained by the FBI consisting of names, identifying numbers, and other descriptive information relating to record subjects about whom there are criminal history records in the III System.

(16) NATIONAL INDICES.—The term “National indices” means the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File.

(17) NONPARTY STATE.—The term “Nonparty State” means a State that has not ratified this Compact.

(18) NONCRIMINAL JUSTICE PURPOSES.—The term “noncriminal justice purposes” means uses of criminal history records for purposes authorized by Federal or State law other than purposes relating to criminal justice activities, including employment suitability, licensing determinations, immigration and naturalization matters, and national security clearances.

(19) PARTY STATE.—The term “Party State” means a State that has ratified this Compact.

(20) POSITIVE IDENTIFICATION.—The term “positive identification” means a determination, based upon a comparison of fingerprints or other equally reliable biometric identification techniques, that the subject of a record search is the same person as the subject of a criminal history record or records indexed in the III System. Identifications based solely upon a comparison of subjects’ names or other nonunique identification characteristics or numbers, or combinations thereof, shall not constitute positive identification.

(21) SEALED RECORD INFORMATION.—The term “sealed record information” means—

(A) with respect to adults, that portion of a record that is—

(i) not available for criminal justice uses;

(ii) not supported by fingerprints or other accepted means of positive identification; or

(iii) subject to restrictions on dissemination for noncriminal justice purposes pursuant to a court order related to a particular subject or pursuant to a Federal or State statute that requires action on a sealing petition filed by a particular record subject; and

(B) with respect to juveniles, whatever each State determines is a sealed record under its own law and procedure.

(22) STATE.—The term “State” means any State, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

ARTICLE II—PURPOSES

The purposes of this Compact are to—

(1) provide a legal framework for the establishment of a cooperative Federal-State system for the interstate and Federal-State exchange of criminal history records for noncriminal justice uses;

(2) require the FBI to permit use of the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File by each Party State, and to provide, in a timely fashion, Federal and State criminal history records to requesting States, in accordance with the terms of this Compact and with rules, procedures, and standards established by the Council under Article VI;

(3) require Party States to provide information and records for the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File and to provide criminal history records, in a timely fashion, to criminal history record repositories of other States and the Federal Government for noncriminal justice purposes, in accordance with the terms of this Compact and with rules, procedures, and standards established by the Council under Article VI;

(4) provide for the establishment of a Council to monitor III System operations and to prescribe system rules and procedures for the effective and proper operation of the III System for noncriminal justice purposes; and

(5) require the FBI and each Party State to adhere to III System standards concerning record dissemination and use, response times, system security, data quality, and other duly established standards, including those that enhance the accuracy and privacy of such records.

ARTICLE III—RESPONSIBILITIES OF COMPACT PARTIES

(a) FBI RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Director of the FBI shall—

(1) appoint an FBI Compact officer who shall—

(A) administer this Compact within the Department of Justice and among Federal agencies and other agencies and organizations that submit search requests to the FBI pursuant to Article V(c);

(B) ensure that Compact provisions and rules, procedures, and standards prescribed by the Council under Article VI are complied with by the Department of Justice and the Federal agencies and other agencies and organizations referred to in Article III(1)(A); and

(C) regulate the use of records received by means of the III System from Party States when such records are supplied by the FBI directly to other Federal agencies;

(2) provide to Federal agencies and to State criminal history record repositories, criminal history records maintained in its database for the noncriminal justice purposes described in Article IV, including—

(A) information from Nonparty States; and

(B) information from Party States that is available from the FBI through the III System, but is not available from the Party State through the III System;

(3) provide a telecommunications network and maintain centralized facilities for the exchange of criminal history records for both criminal justice purposes and the noncriminal justice purposes described in Article IV, and ensure that the exchange of such records for criminal justice purposes has priority over exchange for noncriminal justice purposes; and

(4) modify or enter into user agreements with Nonparty State criminal history record repositories to require them to establish record request procedures conforming to those prescribed in Article V.

(b) STATE RESPONSIBILITIES.—Each Party State shall—

(1) appoint a Compact officer who shall—

(A) administer this Compact within that State;

(B) ensure that Compact provisions and rules, procedures, and standards established by the Council under Article VI are complied with in the State; and

(C) regulate the in-State use of records received by means of the III System from the FBI or from other Party States;

(2) establish and maintain a criminal history record repository, which shall provide—

(A) information and records for the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File; and

(B) the State's III System-indexed criminal history records for noncriminal justice purposes described in Article IV;

(3) participate in the National Fingerprint File; and

(4) provide and maintain telecommunications links and related equipment necessary to support the services set forth in this Compact.

(c) COMPLIANCE WITH III SYSTEM STANDARDS.—In carrying out their responsibilities under this Compact, the FBI and each Party State shall comply with III System rules, procedures, and standards duly established by the Council concerning record dissemination and use, response times, data quality, system security, accuracy, privacy protection, and other aspects of III System operation.

(d) MAINTENANCE OF RECORD SERVICES.—

(1) Use of the III System for noncriminal justice purposes authorized in this Compact shall be managed so as not to diminish the level of services provided in support of criminal justice purposes.

(2) Administration of Compact provisions shall not reduce the level of service available to authorized noncriminal justice users on the effective date of this Compact.

ARTICLE IV—AUTHORIZED RECORD DISCLOSURES

(a) STATE CRIMINAL HISTORY RECORD REPOSITORIES.—To the extent authorized by section 552a of title 5, United States Code (commonly known as the "Privacy Act of 1974"), the FBI shall provide on request criminal history records (excluding sealed records) to State criminal history record repositories for noncriminal justice purposes allowed by Federal statute, Federal Executive order, or a State statute that has been approved by the Attorney General and that authorizes national indices checks.

(b) CRIMINAL JUSTICE AGENCIES AND OTHER GOVERNMENTAL OR NONGOVERNMENTAL AGENCIES.—The FBI, to the extent authorized by section 552a of title 5, United States Code (commonly known as the "Privacy Act of 1974"), and State criminal history record repositories shall provide criminal history records (excluding sealed records) to criminal justice agencies and other governmental or nongovernmental agencies for noncriminal justice purposes allowed by Federal statute, Federal Executive order, or a State statute that has been approved by the Attorney General, that authorizes national indices checks.

(c) PROCEDURES.—Any record obtained under this Compact may be used only for the official purposes for which the record was requested. Each Compact officer shall establish procedures, consistent with this Compact, and with rules, procedures, and standards established by the Council under Article VI, which procedures shall protect the accuracy and privacy of the records, and shall—

(1) ensure that records obtained under this Compact are used only by authorized officials for authorized purposes;

(2) require that subsequent record checks are requested to obtain current information whenever a new need arises; and

(3) ensure that record entries that may not legally be used for a particular noncriminal justice purpose are deleted from the response and, if no information authorized for release remains, an appropriate "no record" response is communicated to the requesting official.

ARTICLE V—RECORD REQUEST PROCEDURES

(a) POSITIVE IDENTIFICATION.—Subject fingerprints or other approved forms of positive identification shall be submitted with all requests for criminal history record checks for noncriminal justice purposes.

(b) SUBMISSION OF STATE REQUESTS.—Each request for a criminal history record check utilizing the national indices made under any approved State statute shall be submitted through that State's criminal history record repository. A State criminal history record repository shall process an interstate request for noncriminal justice purposes through the national indices only if such request is transmitted through another State criminal history record repository or the FBI.

(c) SUBMISSION OF FEDERAL REQUESTS.—Each request for criminal history record checks utilizing the national indices made under Federal authority shall be submitted through the FBI or, if the State criminal history record repository consents to process fingerprint submissions, through the criminal history record repository in the State in which such request originated. Direct access to the National Identification Index by entities other than the FBI and State criminal history records repositories shall not be permitted for noncriminal justice purposes.

(d) FEES.—A State criminal history record repository or the FBI—

(1) may charge a fee, in accordance with applicable law, for handling a request involving fingerprint processing for noncriminal justice purposes; and

(2) may not charge a fee for providing criminal history records in response to an electronic request for a record that does not involve a request to process fingerprints.

(e) ADDITIONAL SEARCH.—

(1) If a State criminal history record repository cannot positively identify the subject of a record request made for noncriminal justice purposes, the request, together with fingerprints or other approved identifying information, shall be forwarded to the FBI for a search of the national indices.

(2) If, with respect to a request forwarded by a State criminal history record repository under paragraph (1), the FBI positively identifies the subject as having a III System-indexed record or records—

(A) the FBI shall so advise the State criminal history record repository; and

(B) the State criminal history record repository shall be entitled to obtain the additional criminal history record information from the FBI or other State criminal history record repositories.

ARTICLE VI—ESTABLISHMENT OF COMPACT COUNCIL

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is established a council to be known as the "Compact Council", which shall have the authority to promulgate rules and procedures governing the use of the III System for noncriminal justice purposes, not to conflict with FBI administration of the III System for criminal justice purposes.

(2) ORGANIZATION.—The Council shall—

(A) continue in existence as long as this Compact remains in effect;

(B) be located, for administrative purposes, within the FBI; and

(C) be organized and hold its first meeting as soon as practicable after the effective date of this Compact.

(b) MEMBERSHIP.—The Council shall be composed of 15 members, each of whom shall be appointed by the Attorney General, as follows:

(1) Nine members, each of whom shall serve a 2-year term, who shall be selected from among the Compact officers of Party States based on the recommendation of the Compact officers of all Party States, except that, in the absence of the requisite number of Compact officers available to serve, the chief administrators of the criminal history record repositories of Nonparty States shall be eligible to serve on an interim basis.

(2) Two at-large members, nominated by the Director of the FBI, each of whom shall serve a 3-year term, of whom—

(A) 1 shall be a representative of the criminal justice agencies of the Federal Government and may not be an employee of the FBI; and

(B) 1 shall be a representative of the noncriminal justice agencies of the Federal Government.

(3) Two at-large members, nominated by the Chairman of the Council, once the Chairman is elected pursuant to Article VI(c), each of whom shall serve a 3-year term, of whom—

(A) 1 shall be a representative of State or local criminal justice agencies; and

(B) 1 shall be a representative of State or local noncriminal justice agencies.

(4) One member, who shall serve a 3-year term, and who shall simultaneously be a member of the FBI's advisory policy board on criminal justice information services, nominated by the membership of that policy board.

(5) One member, nominated by the Director of the FBI, who shall serve a 3-year term, and who shall be an employee of the FBI.

(c) CHAIRMAN AND VICE CHAIRMAN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—From its membership, the Council shall elect a Chairman and a Vice Chairman of the Council, respectively. Both the Chairman and Vice Chairman of the Council—

(A) shall be a Compact officer, unless there is no Compact officer on the Council who is willing to serve, in which case the Chairman may be an at-large member; and

(B) shall serve a 2-year term and may be reelected to only 1 additional 2-year term.

(2) DUTIES OF VICE CHAIRMAN.—The Vice Chairman of the Council shall serve as the Chairman of the Council in the absence of the Chairman.

(d) MEETINGS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Council shall meet at least once each year at the call of the Chairman. Each meeting of the Council shall be open to the public. The Council shall provide prior public notice in the Federal Register of each meeting of the Council, including the matters to be addressed at such meeting.

(2) QUORUM.—A majority of the Council or any committee of the Council shall constitute a quorum of the Council or of such committee, respectively, for the conduct of business. A lesser number may meet to hold hearings, take testimony, or conduct any business not requiring a vote.

(e) RULES, PROCEDURES, AND STANDARDS.—The Council shall make available for public inspection and copying at the Council office within the FBI, and shall publish in the Federal Register, any rules, procedures, or standards established by the Council.

(f) ASSISTANCE FROM FBI.—The Council may request from the FBI such reports, studies, statistics, or other information or materials as the Council determines to be necessary to enable the Council to perform its duties under this Compact. The FBI, to the extent authorized by law, may provide such assistance or information upon such a request.

(g) COMMITTEES.—The Chairman may establish committees as necessary to carry out this Compact and may prescribe their membership, responsibilities, and duration.

ARTICLE VII—RATIFICATION OF COMPACT

This Compact shall take effect upon being entered into by 2 or more States as between those States and the Federal Government. Upon subsequent entering into this Compact by additional States, it shall become effective among those States and the Federal Government and each Party State that has previously ratified it. When ratified, this Compact shall have the full force and effect of law within the ratifying jurisdictions. The form of ratification shall be in accordance with the laws of the executing State.

ARTICLE VIII—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

(a) RELATION OF COMPACT TO CERTAIN FBI ACTIVITIES.—Administration of this Compact shall not interfere with the management and control of the Director of the FBI over the FBI's collection and dissemination of criminal history records and the advisory function of the FBI's advisory policy board chartered under the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) for all purposes other than noncriminal justice.

(b) NO AUTHORITY FOR NONAPPROPRIATED EXPENDITURES.—Nothing in this Compact shall require the FBI to obligate or expend funds beyond those appropriated to the FBI.

(c) RELATING TO PUBLIC LAW 92-544.—Nothing in this Compact shall diminish or lessen the obligations, responsibilities, and authorities of any State, whether a Party State or a Nonparty State, or of any criminal history record repository or other subdivision or component thereof, under the Departments of State, Justice, and Commerce, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1973 (Public Law 92-544), or regulations and guidelines promulgated thereunder, including the rules and procedures promulgated by the Council under Article VI(a), regarding the use and dissemination of criminal history records and information.

ARTICLE IX—RENUNCIATION

(a) IN GENERAL.—This Compact shall bind each Party State until renounced by the Party State.

(b) EFFECT.—Any renunciation of this Compact by a Party State shall—

(1) be effected in the same manner by which the Party State ratified this Compact; and

(2) become effective 180 days after written notice of renunciation is provided by the Party State to each other Party State and to the Federal Government.

ARTICLE X—SEVERABILITY

The provisions of this Compact shall be severable, and if any phrase, clause, sentence, or provision of this Compact is declared to be contrary to the constitution of any participating State, or to the Constitution of the United States, or the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person, or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of this Compact and the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person, or circumstance shall not be affected thereby. If a portion of this Compact is held contrary to the constitution of any Party State, all other portions of this Compact shall remain in full force and effect as to the remaining Party States and in full force and effect as to the Party State affected, as to all other provisions.

ARTICLE XI—ADJUDICATION OF DISPUTES

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Council shall—

(1) have initial authority to make determinations with respect to any dispute regarding—

(A) interpretation of this Compact;

(B) any rule or standard established by the Council pursuant to Article V; and

(C) any dispute or controversy between any parties to this Compact; and

(2) hold a hearing concerning any dispute described in paragraph (1) at a regularly scheduled meeting of the Council and only render a decision based upon a majority vote of the members of the Council. Such decision shall be published pursuant to the requirements of Article VI(e).

(b) DUTIES OF FBI.—The FBI shall exercise immediate and necessary action to preserve the integrity of the III System, maintain system policy and standards, protect the accuracy and privacy of records, and to prevent abuses, until the Council holds a hearing on such matters.

(c) RIGHT OF APPEAL.—The FBI or a Party State may appeal any decision of the Council to the Attorney General, and thereafter may file suit in the appropriate district court of the United States, which shall have original jurisdiction of all cases or controversies arising under this Compact. Any suit arising under this Compact and initiated in a State court shall be removed to the appropriate district court of the United States in the manner provided by section 1446 of title 28, United States Code, or other statutory authority.

Subtitle B—Volunteers for Children Act

SEC. 221. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Volunteers for Children Act".

SEC. 222. FACILITATION OF FINGERPRINT CHECKS.

(a) STATE AGENCY.—Section 3(a) of the National Child Protection Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. 5119a(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(3) In the absence of State procedures referred to in paragraph (1), a qualified entity designated under paragraph (1) may contact an authorized agency of the State to request national criminal fingerprint background checks. Qualified entities requesting background checks under this paragraph shall comply with the guidelines set forth in subsection (b) and with procedures for requesting national criminal fingerprint background checks, if any, established by the State."

(b) FEDERAL LAW.—Section 3(b)(5) of the National Child Protection Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. 5119a(b)(5)) is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: "except that this paragraph does not apply to any request by a qualified entity for a national criminal fingerprint background check pursuant to subsection (a)(3)".

(c) AUTHORIZATION.—Section 4(b)(2) of the National Child Protection Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. 5119b(b)(2)) is amended by striking "1994, 1995, 1996, and 1997" and inserting "1999, 2000, 2001, and 2002".

NOTICE OF HEARING

COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AFFAIRS

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, I would like to announce that the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs will meet during the session of the Senate on Wednesday, July 15, 1998 at 9:30 a.m. to mark up the following: S. 391, Mississippi Sioux Judgment Funds; S. 1905, Cheyenne River Sioux Compensation; H.R. 700, Agua Caliente and; S. 109, Native Hawaiian Housing Assistance. Immediately following the mark-up the Committee will hold a hearing on S. 2097, the Indian Tribal Conflict Resolution and Tort Claims and Risk Management Act of 1998. The markup/hearing will be held in room G-50 of the Dirksen Senate Office Building. Those wishing additional information should contact the Committee on Indian Affairs at 202/224-2251.

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEE TO MEET

SUBCOMMITTEE ON NEAR EASTERN AND SOUTH ASIAN AFFAIRS

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Monday, July 13, 1998 at 3:00 pm to hold a hearing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

WALL STREET BEGINS MOCK TRADE TESTING FOR Y2K

• Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, Yesterday, The New York Times reported that Wall Street firms will turn their clocks ahead today to December 29, 1999, to begin mock trading in the widest ranging Year 2000 (Y2K) test yet by any industry. The tests will investigate what might happen to anyone trading stocks, options, or corporate and municipal bonds on December 30 and 31, 1999, and January 3 and 4, 2000 (January 1, 2000 falls on a Saturday).

As a member of the Special Committee on the Year 2000 Technology, I am encouraged to see that the financial community is taking the Year 2000 computer problem seriously. On Monday, July 6, Senator BENNETT and I held a field hearing in New York to examine the progress of U.S. and foreign financial firms in addressing the Y2K problem. At the hearing, we emphasized the importance of testing, and the need to begin testing by December of this year. Appearing on behalf of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the First Vice President Ernest T. Patrikis said that he "does not think it is possible to over-emphasize the importance of testing to help improve readiness."

The hearing last week made it clear that Y2K is a serious and pervasive problem confronting the domestic and international economy. The Senior Vice President and Chief Technology Officer of the New York Stock Exchange, William A. Bautz, said that the Securities Industry Association (SIA) refers to solving the Year 2000 computer problem as "the biggest business-technology effort that the world has ever experienced."

I am pleased that SIA is sponsoring this industry-wide test and look forward to seeing the results. I only hope that the other industries follow the lead of the financial community and start their testing soon.

I ask that the article from yesterday's Times, "Wall St. to Roll Clock Ahead To See if Year 2000 Computes," be printed in the RECORD.

The article follows:

[From the New York Times, July 12, 1998]

WALL ST. TO ROLL CLOCK AHEAD TO SEE IF YEAR 2000 COMPUTES

(By Barnaby J. Feder)

For computer wizards on Wall Street, tomorrow will be Dec. 29, 1999, a step into electronic time travel that will be studied anxiously around the globe.

After months of preparation, the nation's leading brokers, the major exchanges, clearinghouses and depository companies will begin mock trading in the widest-ranging test yet by any industry of how well computers will cope with the transition to the next century.

The tests, sponsored by the Securities Industry Association, are designed to help brokers and other key players in the $270 billion industry figure out whether their computer systems are ready to handle trades that will settle on Jan. 3, 2000, the first business day of the new century. Over the next two weeks, the industry will reset the clocks on the test computers and investigate what might happen to anyone trading stocks, options or corporate and municipal bonds on Dec. 30 and 31, 1999, and Jan. 3, and 4, 2000.

Not much has been left to chance. The multimillion-dollar effort is supervised by Coopers & Lybrand following trading scripts carefully developed by the participants with the help of outside consultants.

Thus, Leonard De Trizio, the J.P. Morgan & Company vice president in charge of the computers that support equity trading, knows that he will be selling 800 shares of a fictional Big Board company with the ticker symbol KDD at 9:30 tomorrow morning, and he knows that Morgan Stanley will be buying it, while Merrill Lynch & Company will be selling Home Shopping Network convertible bonds to Lehman Brothers.

The participants are looking for signs of the millennium bug, the catchall name for a variety of electronic foul-ups that are likely to occur when computers fail to recognize that the first days of the new century come after the last days of the old one. The problem stems from the way many microprocessors and computer programs use only two digits to refer to the year in dates—98 for 1998, for example.

Many chips and programs do not accept a low number like 00 for the year 2000, or 01 for 2001 as valid dates that follow the 99 for 1999.

What complicates the problem is that computers often react in unpredictable ways. Some spew inaccurate data. Others appear to function normally but then cannot be restarted once they have been shut down.

Computer specialists have talked about the millennium problem for decades. But only recently have businesses and public officials begun to recognize how widely dates are used in computing and to take seriously warnings that the dawn of the new century could see widespread disruptions in daily life, at the very least, and deadly accidents or perhaps a global economic recession if the problem is not tamed.

Because the securities industry is the first to conduct tests involving connections between many computer users and is publishing vast amounts of data about the results on its World Wide Web site (www.sia.com), year 2000 experts say that the results of these tests could have a huge effect on morale in the rapidly growing legions of specialists working on the problem.

"It's good that they are setting a standard of openness for the entire corporate sector," said Edward Yardeni, chief economist of Deutsche Bank Securities. Mr. Yardeni has become one of the highest-profile year 2000 pessimists, predicting a 70 percent chance of worldwide recession stemming from computer problems related to the millennium.

"If it goes badly, though, corporations may be more reluctant to share information, and more people are going to come around to my view of the risks," Mr. Yardeni said.

Those managing the securities tests are discouraging any attempt to draw broad conclusions from them. The managers point out, for example, that the tests will deal with very small volumes of fictional securities, and they describe the exercise as a mere dress rehearsal for high-volume tests planned for next spring. Some major computer systems have been completely excluded, including those that manage dividends and interest, margin trading and client account records. In addition, only the most common types of trades and securities will be tested this week.

"Dealing with this isn't rocket science, but there is a mountain of details," said Donald Kittell, the association's executive vice president. "People don't realize that a trade may go through 40 to 50 steps from start to finish."

The securities companies participating in the test that starts tomorrow account for about half the trading volume in stocks, bonds, options and other financial instruments. Each agreed to set up a discrete computer operation to run the tests. In the United States alone, securities companies are expected to spend $3 billion to $5 billion addressing year 2000 and related problems.

Yet, when the millennium arrives, Wall Street's ability to function will depend not just on the internal systems it began to test today but on the preparedness of markets overseas, where many players offset any bets placed domestically.

What is more, Wall Street's success at ushering in the millennium will also depend heavily on the year 2000 readiness of New York's power, water and telecommunications utilities and of countless other systems that are beyond its ability to test.

All of this underscores what many computer experts consider one of the most troubling aspects of the year 2000 challenge. Each phase of the problem—from identifying vulnerable systems to figuring out remedies to testing fixes—has proved more complicated, time-consuming and expensive than had been expected. The emerging consensus has been that testing has been the most widely underestimated challenge.

Consultants are consistently warning that very few corporations, government agencies or other computer-dependent enterprises will end up having enough time and resources to do as much testing as they should.

"It would be a setback if this doesn't go well," said William Ulrich, a year 2000 consultant in Soquel, Calif., "because these guys are way out in front." ●

HIGHER EDUCATION ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1998

● Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I come to the floor today to support S. 1882, the Higher Education Act Amendments of 1998. This bill comes at a time when our nation's shifting job market has greatly increased student demand for post-secondary education. However, for many families in Kentucky and across the nation, the rising cost of tuition creates a real barrier to attending college. A majority of college students today rely upon some form of financial assistance in order to meet these escalating costs. For the first time in decades, loans constitute the largest part of student financial-aid packages. As the loan burden increases, students and their families are seeking greater choice in financial resources for higher education.

Making a college education more affordable has always been a priority of mine, and for the past several years I have introduced legislation to provide tax incentives to families who save for college. In fact, my legislation, which allows tax-free education savings in state-sponsored savings plans for education purposes, was included in the Parent and Student Savings Account Plus Act, which Congress approved earlier this year by a strong margin. The House and Senate approved this essential legislation in response to growing public interest in federal policies that facilitate personal planning and investment in education, and to provide students with greater choices in both academic programming and financial aid resources. However, this measure and similar initiatives have been heavily criticized by the Clinton Administration.

For example, throughout the HEA reauthorization process, President Clinton has repeatedly tried to limit students' financial options by creating a single-lender system run by the U.S. Department of Education. Banks, credit unions, and other qualified lenders currently use their financial expertise and experience in loan management to provide college loans for students and parents through the Federal Family Education Loan Program (FFELP), while the U.S. Department of Education operates the Direct Lending program through participating colleges and universities. The Clinton Administration heralded the consumer benefits that would result from the competition between FFELP and the Direct Lending program during its original authorization in the 1993 Budget. Now, President Clinton has turned away from his original advocacy for greater choice in favor of making the U.S. Department of Education the sole lender for student loans.

Since its creation, the Direct Lending program's reputation has become synonymous with slow, inefficient service. The Department simply does not have the personnel or experience necessary to efficiently process the high volume of loans demanded by students. For example, in 1996, the processing of 900,000 student aid applications submitted to the Department were delayed by severe management problems. Just last year Congress was forced to pass the Emergency Student Loan Consolidation Act in response to the Department's stoppage in processing applications for direct loan consolidations. If students had been limited to one lending option, the Department's backlog and organizational problems would have denied many students access to the student loans necessary for their enrollment in school.

Based on the Department's struggle to meet its responsibility to our nation's students, concerned members of the House and Senate have worked diligently to prevent another crisis in student access to college loans. Not all colleges and universities participate in the Direct Lending program, and the interest rate index adjustments supported by the 1993 Budget threaten to eliminate private lenders from the student loan market. Without the aid of private lenders, many students will be left without necessary financial assistance. S. 1882 rejects Clinton's repeated attempts to strangle consumer choice by revising the interest rate index on student loans, and improves the service and accountability standards of guaranty agencies who participate in the FFELP program.

The guaranty agency model included in this bill directs agencies to utilize the advantages of the Internet and other technological advances in order to increase the speed and efficiency of the student loan process. S. 1882 also increases the financial responsibility guaranty agencies must bear when a student loan goes into default. All lending organizations—public and private—should be held up to high standards of performance and fiscal integrity. By increasing agency accountability, this bill makes sure that students across the country have access to qualified, responsible lending agencies. By streamlining the loan process and weeding out irresponsible lenders, S. 1882 strengthens the ability of reliable agencies to offer low-interest student loans.

S. 1882 increases institutional accountability not only for lenders, but for institutions of higher education as well. A solid primary and secondary education is the base upon which future academic success is built, and a highly qualified teaching force is an essential component of a child's educational foundation. S. 1882 raises the bar with which we measure teachers by holding institutions of higher education that prepare teachers for classroom instruction responsible for the caliber of teachers they graduate.

From early childhood through post-secondary school, a child has no greater resource than a knowledgeable, skillful teacher in the classroom, and S. 1882 holds both states and institutions of higher education responsible for placing the best teachers in our public schools. Through the creation of Teacher Quality Enhancement Grants, S. 1882 focuses on state-based reform of the teacher certification process to ensure that new teachers are qualified both in instructional skills and the subject matter which they teach, and to hold institutions of higher education accountable for properly preparing teachers for the classroom. These grants also give states the flexibility to financially reward teachers whose students have high levels of academic performance, and the authority to remove unqualified teachers from the classroom. In addition, S. 1882 allows states to develop alternative certification options for college graduates and capable individuals from other professional and occupational backgrounds who are interested in teaching.

Students face many other barriers in addition to cost when preparing for acceptance into a post-secondary school. Many first-generation and low-income students have educational needs that are not met by routine classroom instruction. S. 1882 provides support services and counseling programs for these students through the reauthorization of federal TRIO programs. For years, students across Kentucky have benefited from the Upward Bound program, which assists disadvantaged students in gaining entrance into higher education and completing a course of study. Unfortunately, many Upward Bound students are forced to choose between summer educational programs and part-time employment. S. 1882 will enable these students to pursue challenging academic programs by expanding Upward Bound to include summer work study. The Talent Search program is also expanded to introduce low-income students to careers in which students from disadvantaged backgrounds are under-represented. I am pleased that S. 1882 reauthorizes and strengthens these two programs which are highly valued by students throughout Kentucky.

The influence of institutions of higher education is felt far beyond the classroom as many colleges and universities are providing long-term leadership for communities undergoing an economic transition. In Kentucky, the higher education community has done an exemplary job of molding its curricula to meet the economic needs of the Commonwealth. The University of Kentucky and Louisville have established world-class research programs and have extended their community recruitment and outreach programs. Many of Kentucky's regional colleges and private schools are also implementing programs complimentary to the goals of excellence outlined by their home communities and the state government. Kentucky's community colleges and technical schools recently integrated their academic and training programs to create a seamless system of post-secondary education. Such efforts to achieve cooperation and quality in post-secondary education will produce great benefits for Kentucky students in the years to come.

By recognizing the inextricable link between future economic viability and higher education, Kentucky is a prime example of the direction in which higher education in the United States is headed. With this bill, we have the opportunity to open the doors of higher education to a greater number of students than ever before, at a time when post-secondary education is at a premium. As the summer draws to a close, and another school year is about to begin, I am pleased that ninety-five of my colleagues joined me in recognition of the important role education plays in shaping our nation's future by supporting S. 1882.●

AMERICA'S GAME HAS A NEW LEADER

●Mr. CONRAD. On July 9, 1998, Major League Baseball selected Bud Selig as its ninth Commissioner in the history of baseball.

After serving as the Chairman of Baseball's Executive Council for the last six years, the owners picked from their own ranks and bestowed the formal leadership mantle on Alan H. "Bud" Selig.

For the last 28 years, Bud has been the driving force behind major league baseball in Milwaukee, from bringing baseball back in 1970 to building a new convertible stadium to open in 2000.

In September of 1992, Bud was picked to fill the void created by the departure of Fay Vincent. From the day he took the reins of the Executive Council, he was faced with serious issues that had eluded solutions. The first task was securing a new collective bargaining agreement with the Players Association. That agreement is an essential element in the growing trust and cooperation that is now visible between the players and the owners.

If labor peace was not a big enough challenge, Bud was instrumental in securing a revenue sharing agreement, and in implementing the popular wild-card playoff system and interleague play that the fans have found very exciting and enthusiastically attend. All of these improvements have helped bring back fans in numbers that reflect a healing of the game after the strike.

Those accomplishments are truly important but they merely set the stage for the agenda items that await the ninth Commissioner of Baseball. Most people who follow baseball believe Bud will have to address several tough issues: realignment and scheduling; elimination of payroll disparity; and marketing and promotion of baseball both at home and internationally. This last issue is one that also provides an avenue to continue to work with the Players Association to grow the game in a way that the fans, the players and the owners benefit.

Bud was responsible for bringing Paul Beeston from the Toronto club into the management ranks of baseball as the Chief Operating Officer. With Paul to tend to the day to day operations in the new and reorganized New York offices, Bud will be free to focus on the important tasks that lie ahead. The challenges that Bud now faces will require him to draw on the legendary consensus building skills that he has so effectively used in the past to continue to provide the unified leadership that will put baseball on a path to move into the next century.

As a life long baseball fan, I wish him well.●

POSTAL WORKER RECOGNITION

● Mr. GRAMS. Mr. President, I take this opportunity to say "thank you" to a most diverse collection of government employees, unified by many factors but most of all, a commitment to service. Thank you for the professionalism that you display which has allowed us to come to expect value, reliability, and uniformity from one of the world's largest businesses.

Who are these employees? They're truck drivers, engineers, janitors, accountants, detectives, customer service personnel, and letter carriers. They're United States Postal Employees.

The United States Postal Service is a business with an unusual pedigree, even though we commonly recognize the "post office" as a traditional government entity. Yet while its origins can be traced to the origins of our country, the Postal Service as we know it today is only 27 years old. USPS went through an extensive revamping in the late 1960s and early 70s. The Post Office Department was removed from the President's Cabinet and converted into a non-profit government corporation. The result was an effective elimination of politicians from the management of postal affairs.

Congress passed the Postal Reorganization Act which created the new United States Postal Service on July 1, 1971. This month, we recognize an organization able to modernize, while maintaining the fundamental unifying factors required of such a massive global organization.

USPS has a unique set of privileges and responsibilities which serve to ensure uniform service and stable prices for mail delivery throughout the United States. The Chair of the USPS Board of Governors announced in late June that there would be no postal rate increase for 1998. The next rate increase will take effect January 10, 1999. At that time the price of a First-Class letter will increase by one penny, to 33 cents.

USPS last increased rates on January 1, 1995. When the new rates take effect next year, it will be the second straight rate adjustment below inflation, in effect cutting the real cost of a First-Class stamp by seven percent since 1995. That makes the cost of a First-Class letter among the lowest in the industrialized world—a feat managed without taxpayer subsidies. In Japan, the cost of a First-Class letter is $.57, in Great Britain it is $.42 and in Germany it is $.62.

Yet the success of USPS in its ability to reorganize, modernize, and compete in a global marketplace is due to each individual postal employee, because that's what comprises successful business operations—great employees.●

TRIBUTE TO JUSTIN S. MORRILL ON THE 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF HIS DEATH

● Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, 1998 is an important year for Vermont and the nation as it marks the 100th anniversary of the death of a great statesman, Senator Justin S. Morrill. Senator Morrill was a remarkable man; his authorship of the Land-Grant College Act gave, and continues to give, millions of Americans the opportunity to pursue higher education. To recognize this accomplishment, the Stratford Historical Society is holding a symposium on July 16 and 17, 1998 to pay homage to Senator Morrill and his legacy.

Senator Morrill was one the most influential politicians in the mid-nineteenth century. During his 43 years in Congress, he introduced many innovative bills and worked to improve the lives of millions of Americans through higher education. The Land-Grant College Act provided public lands for agricultural colleges and, in turn, set the standard for American public universities. In addition to these accomplishments, Senator Morrill was also instrumental in the creation of the Washington Monument and the Library of Congress.

In fact, on November 4, 1997, I was honored to attend a ceremony at the Library of Congress to unveil a plaque in the Great Hall of the Jefferson Building honoring Senator Morrill. The plaque was presented to the Library on behalf of the people of Vermont by the Vermont Center for the Book, on the occasion of the 100th anniversary of the Jefferson Building. The plaque honors the vital role that Senator Morrill played in making the Jefferson Building a reality.

Mr. President, Justin S. Morrill was a dedicated statesman who spent his life helping others. He revolutionized education and, as poet Robert Frost once noted, "For me there is no greater name in American education than that of Senator Justin Smith Morrill." Such an amazing man deserves recognition and, on this 100th anniversary of his death, I pay tribute to him and his accomplishments.●

HIGHER EDUCATION AMENDMENTS OF 1998

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now turn to H.R. 6, the higher education bill, and that the Senate insist on its amendment, request a conference with the House, and the Chair be authorized to appoint conferees on the part of the Senate, all without further action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Presiding Officer appointed Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. COATS, Mr. GREGG, Mr. FRIST, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. ENZI, Mr. HUTCHINSON, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. WARNER, Mr. MCCONNELL, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr.

DODD, Mr. HARKIN, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. WELLSTONE, Mrs. MURRAY, and Mr. REED conferees on the part of the Senate.

NATIONAL CRIMINAL HISTORY ACCESS AND CHILD PROTECTION ACT

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of S. 2294 introduced earlier today by Senator HATCH.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2294) to facilitate the exchange of criminal history records for noncriminal justice purposes, to provide for the decentralized storage of criminal history records, to amend the National Child Protection Act of 1993 to facilitate the fingerprint checks authorized by that Act, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I have introduced the National Criminal History Access and Child Protection Act of 1998. I am pleased to have been joined by the Ranking Member of the Judiciary Committee, Senator LEAHY, as well as by Senator DEWINE and the distinguished Minority Leader, Senator DASCHLE, in introducing this legislation, which also has the support of the Administration.

This important legislation addresses a critical issue—the access to criminal history records for legitimate purposes other than use within the criminal justice system. These records are frequently used today for a wide variety of important purposes, such as employment background checks for child care workers, health care workers, elder care workers, teachers, school bus drivers, security guards, and bar applicants.

Few disagree with the use of criminal history records to ensure that those in important positions of trust with our children, elderly, and persons with disabilities do not have criminal backgrounds making such trust inappropriate or even dangerous. Yet, currently, policies and procedures on disseminating these records vary widely from state to state.

This legislation addresses this issue, by enacting what has come to be known as the Triple I (III) Compact. This proposed interstate and federal-state compact is supported by the Administration, the FBI, the Criminal Justice Information Advisory Policy Board, and all state criminal history repositories. It would establish "rules of the road" for the interstate sharing of criminal history records for non-criminal history purposes, such as background checks for employees who work with children or who are in otherwise sensitive jobs. The compact provides for state-to-state and federal-to-state sharing of records, through the Interstate Identification Index (III) and the National Fingerprint File (NFF).

Under the compact, requests for criminal history checks for non-criminal justice purposes would be made between state records repositories and between the state repositories and the FBI, which maintains the III and NPF systems. Interstate dissemination policy would be governed by the policy of the requesting state, but intrastate dissemination and use of records would still be governed by the law of the state which owns the record. The primacy of use of records for criminal justice purposes would be maintained, as would direct access to records already permitted under current law. Additionally, record checks would have to be fingerprint supported to ensure accuracy, and the privacy of records would be protected. The compact would be administered and policed by a council comprised of state and federal officials.

This legislation also includes improvements to the National Child Protection Act, which Congress enacted in 1993 to encourage the use of criminal history records to screen volunteers who work with our children, elderly, and persons with disabilities. This provision amends the NCPA to permit child care, elder care, and volunteer organizations, known as "qualified entities," to request background checks through state agencies in the absence of state laws implementing the NCPA. The 1993 NCPA and its 1994 amendments extending its coverage to elder care and disabled care workers conditioned part of state's Byrne grant funding on the establishment of procedures for records checks for child care and elder care workers and volunteers, but many states have not done so. Qualified entities are not permitted to request a background check from states absent state establishment of procedures. This provision is a modest change to current law, and permits qualified entities to request the background check, but does not override any state laws regarding use or dissemination of records. The provision is based on H.R. 2488, and is supported by volunteer groups, including the Boy Scouts and the Boys and Girls Clubs. This provision recently passed the House of Representatives as an amendment to other legislation.

Mr. President, this legislation is a modest but important step in protecting the most vulnerable in our society from those who would abuse unique access to prey on them. I appreciate the support of my cosponsors for this legislation, and urge its approval by the Senate.

Mr. ALLARD. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be deemed read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the bill appear in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (S. 2294) was deemed read a third time and passed, as follows:

S. 2294

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE II—VOLUNTEERS FOR CHILDREN ACT

Sec. 201. Short title.

Sec. 202. Facilitation of fingerprint checks.

TITLE I—EXCHANGE OF CRIMINAL HISTORY RECORDS FOR NONCRIMINAL JUSTICE PURPOSES

SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact Act of 1998".

SEC. 102. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) both the Federal Bureau of Investigation and State criminal history record repositories maintain fingerprint-based criminal history records;

(2) these criminal history records are shared and exchanged for criminal justice purposes through a Federal-State program known as the Interstate Identification Index System;

(3) although these records are also exchanged for legally authorized, noncriminal justice uses, such as governmental licensing and employment background checks, the purposes for and procedures by which they are exchanged vary widely from State to State;

(4) an interstate and Federal-State compact is necessary to facilitate authorized interstate criminal history record exchanges for noncriminal justice purposes on a uniform basis, while permitting each State to effectuate its own dissemination policy within its own borders; and

(5) such a compact will allow Federal and State records to be provided expeditiously to governmental and nongovernmental agencies that use such records in accordance with pertinent Federal and State law, while simultaneously enhancing the accuracy of the records and safeguarding the information contained therein from unauthorized disclosure or use.

SEC. 103. DEFINITIONS.

In this title:

(1) ATTORNEY GENERAL.—The term "Attorney General" means the Attorney General of the United States.

(2) COMPACT.—The term "Compact" means the National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact set forth in section 107.

(3) COUNCIL.—The term "Council" means the Compact Council established under Article VI of the Compact.

(4) FBI.—The term "FBI" means the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(5) PARTY STATE.—The term "Party State" means a State that has ratified the Compact.

(6) STATE.—The term "State" means any State, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

SEC. 104. ENACTMENT AND CONSENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

The National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact, as set forth in section 107, is enacted into law and entered into by the Federal Government. The consent of Congress is given to States to enter into the Compact.

SEC. 105. EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS.

(a) PRIVACY ACT OF 1974.—Nothing in the Compact shall affect the obligations and responsibilities of the FBI under section 552a of title 5, United States Code (commonly known as the "Privacy Act of 1974").

(b) ACCESS TO CERTAIN RECORDS NOT AFFECTED.—Nothing in the Compact shall interfere in any manner with—

(1) access, direct or otherwise, to records pursuant to—

(A) section 9101 of title 5, United States Code;

(B) the National Child Protection Act;

(C) the Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act (Public Law 103-159; 107 Stat. 1536);

(D) the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 (Public Law 103-322; 108 Stat. 2074) or any amendment made by that Act;

(E) the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437 et seq.); or

(F) the Native American Housing Assistance and Self-Determination Act of 1996 (25 U.S.C. 4101 et seq.); or

(2) any direct access to Federal criminal history records authorized by law.

(c) AUTHORITY OF FBI UNDER DEPARTMENTS OF STATE, JUSTICE, AND COMMERCE, THE JUDICIARY, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATION ACT, 1973.—Nothing in the Compact shall be construed to affect the authority of the FBI under the Departments of State, Justice, and Commerce, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1973 (Public Law 92-544 (86 Stat. 1115)).

(d) FEDERAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE ACT.—The Council shall not be considered to be a Federal advisory committee for purposes of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.).

(e) MEMBERS OF COUNCIL NOT FEDERAL OFFICERS OR EMPLOYEES.—Members of the Council (other than a member from the FBI or any at-large member who may be a Federal official or employee) shall not, by virtue of such membership, be deemed—

(1) to be, for any purpose other than to effect the Compact, officers or employees of the United States (as defined in sections 2104 and 2105 of title 5, United States Code); or

(2) to become entitled by reason of Council membership to any compensation or benefit payable or made available by the Federal Government to its officers or employees.

SEC. 106. ENFORCEMENT AND IMPLEMENTATION.

All departments, agencies, officers, and employees of the United States shall enforce the Compact and cooperate with one another and with all Party States in enforcing the Compact and effectuating its purposes. For the Federal Government, the Attorney General shall make such rules, prescribe such instructions, and take such other actions as may be necessary to carry out the Compact and this title.

SEC. 107. NATIONAL CRIME PREVENTION AND PRIVACY COMPACT.

The Contracting Parties agree to the following:

OVERVIEW

(a) IN GENERAL.—This Compact organizes an electronic information sharing system among the Federal Government and the States to exchange criminal history records for noncriminal justice purposes authorized by Federal or State law, such as background checks for governmental licensing and employment.

(b) OBLIGATIONS OF PARTIES.—Under this Compact, the FBI and the Party States agree to maintain detailed databases of their respective criminal history records, including arrests and dispositions, and to make them available to the Federal Government and to Party States for authorized purposes. The FBI shall also manage the Federal data facilities that provide a significant part of the infrastructure for the system.

ARTICLE I—DEFINITIONS

In this Compact:

(1) ATTORNEY GENERAL.—The term “Attorney General” means the Attorney General of the United States;

(2) COMPACT OFFICER.—The term “Compact officer” means—

(A) with respect to the Federal Government, an official so designated by the Director of the FBI; and

(B) with respect to a Party State, the chief administrator of the State’s criminal history record repository or a designee of the chief administrator who is a regular full-time employee of the repository.

(3) COUNCIL.—The term “Council” means the Compact Council established under Article VI.

(4) CRIMINAL HISTORY RECORDS.—The term “criminal history records”—

(A) means information collected by criminal justice agencies on individuals consisting of identifiable descriptions and notations of arrests, detentions, indictments, or other formal criminal charges, and any disposition arising therefrom, including acquittal, sentencing, correctional supervision, or release; and

(B) does not include identification information such as fingerprint records if such information does not indicate involvement of the individual with the criminal justice system.

(5) CRIMINAL HISTORY RECORD REPOSITORY.—The term “criminal history record repository” means the State agency designated by the Governor or other appropriate executive official or the legislature of a State to perform centralized recordkeeping functions for criminal history records and services in the State.

(6) CRIMINAL JUSTICE.—The term “criminal justice” includes activities relating to the detection, apprehension, detention, pretrial release, post-trial release, prosecution, adjudication, correctional supervision, or rehabilitation of accused persons or criminal offenders. The administration of criminal justice includes criminal identification activities and the collection, storage, and dissemination of criminal history records.

(7) CRIMINAL JUSTICE AGENCY.—The term “criminal justice agency”—

(A) means—

(i) courts; and

(ii) a governmental agency or any subunit thereof that—

(I) performs the administration of criminal justice pursuant to a statute or Executive order; and

(II) allocates a substantial part of its annual budget to the administration of criminal justice; and

(B) includes Federal and State inspectors general offices.

(8) CRIMINAL JUSTICE SERVICES.—The term “criminal justice services” means services provided by the FBI to criminal justice agencies in response to a request for information about a particular individual or as an update to information previously provided for criminal justice purposes.

(9) CRITERION OFFENSE.—The term “criterion offense” means any felony or misdemeanor offense not included on the list of nonserious offenses published periodically by the FBI.

(10) DIRECT ACCESS.—The term “direct access” means access to the National Identification Index by computer terminal or other automated means not requiring the assistance of or intervention by any other party or agency.

(11) EXECUTIVE ORDER.—The term “Executive order” means an order of the President of the United States or the chief executive officer of a State that has the force of law and that is promulgated in accordance with applicable law.

(12) FBI.—The term “FBI” means the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(13) INTERSTATE IDENTIFICATION SYSTEM.—The term “Interstate Identification Index System” or “III System”—

(A) means the cooperative Federal-State system for the exchange of criminal history records; and

(B) includes the National Identification Index, the National Fingerprint File and, to the extent of their participation in such system, the criminal history record repositories of the States and the FBI.

(14) NATIONAL FINGERPRINT FILE.—The term “National Fingerprint File” means a database of fingerprints, or other uniquely personal identifying information, relating to an arrested or charged individual maintained by the FBI to provide positive identification of record subjects indexed in the III System.

(15) NATIONAL IDENTIFICATION INDEX.—The term “National Identification Index” means an index maintained by the FBI consisting of names, identifying numbers, and other descriptive information relating to record subjects about whom there are criminal history records in the III System.

(16) NATIONAL INDICES.—The term “National indices” means the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File.

(17) NONPARTY STATE.—The term “Nonparty State” means a State that has not ratified this Compact.

(18) NONCRIMINAL JUSTICE PURPOSES.—The term “noncriminal justice purposes” means uses of criminal history records for purposes authorized by Federal or State law other than purposes relating to criminal justice activities, including employment suitability, licensing determinations, immigration and naturalization matters, and national security clearances.

(19) PARTY STATE.—The term “Party State” means a State that has ratified this Compact.

(20) POSITIVE IDENTIFICATION.—The term “positive identification” means a determination, based upon a comparison of fingerprints or other equally reliable biometric identification techniques, that the subject of a record search is the same person as the subject of a criminal history record or records indexed in the III System. Identifications based solely upon a comparison of subjects’ names or other nonunique identification characteristics or numbers, or combinations thereof, shall not constitute positive identification.

(21) SEALED RECORD INFORMATION.—The term “sealed record information” means—

(A) with respect to adults, that portion of a record that is—

(i) not available for criminal justice uses;

(ii) not supported by fingerprints or other accepted means of positive identification; or

(iii) subject to restrictions on dissemination for noncriminal justice purposes pursuant to a court order related to a particular subject or pursuant to a Federal or State statute that requires action on a sealing petition filed by a particular record subject; and

(B) with respect to juveniles, whatever each State determines is a sealed record under its own law and procedure.

(22) STATE.—The term “State” means any State, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

ARTICLE II—PURPOSES

The purposes of this Compact are to—

(1) provide a legal framework for the establishment of a cooperative Federal-State system for the interstate and Federal-State exchange of criminal history records for noncriminal justice uses;

(2) require the FBI to permit use of the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File by each Party State, and to provide, in a timely fashion, Federal and State criminal history records to requesting States, in accordance with the terms of this Compact and with rules, procedures, and standards established by the Council under Article VI;

(3) require Party States to provide information and records for the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File and to provide criminal history records, in a timely fashion, to criminal history record repositories of other States and the Federal Government for noncriminal justice purposes, in accordance with the terms of this Compact and with rules, procedures, and standards established by the Council under Article VI;

(4) provide for the establishment of a Council to monitor III System operations and to prescribe system rules and procedures for the effective and proper operation of the III System for noncriminal justice purposes; and

(5) require the FBI and each Party State to adhere to III System standards concerning record dissemination and use, response times, system security, data quality, and other duly established standards, including those that enhance the accuracy and privacy of such records.

ARTICLE III—RESPONSIBILITIES OF COMPACT PARTIES

(a) FBI RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Director of the FBI shall—

(1) appoint an FBI Compact officer who shall—

(A) administer this Compact within the Department of Justice and among Federal agencies and other agencies and organizations that submit search requests to the FBI pursuant to Article V(c);

(B) ensure that Compact provisions and rules, procedures, and standards prescribed by the Council under Article VI are complied with by the Department of Justice and the Federal agencies and other agencies and organizations referred to in Article III(1)(A); and

(C) regulate the use of records received by means of the III System from Party States

when such records are supplied by the FBI directly to other Federal agencies;

(2) provide to Federal agencies and to State criminal history record repositories, criminal history records maintained in its database for the noncriminal justice purposes described in Article IV, including—

(A) information from Nonparty States; and
(B) information from Party States that is available from the FBI through the III System, but is not available from the Party State through the III System;

(3) provide a telecommunications network and maintain centralized facilities for the exchange of criminal history records for both criminal justice purposes and the noncriminal justice purposes described in Article IV, and ensure that the exchange of such records for criminal justice purposes has priority over exchange for noncriminal justice purposes; and

(4) modify or enter into user agreements with Nonparty State criminal history record repositories to require them to establish record request procedures conforming to those prescribed in Article V.

(b) STATE RESPONSIBILITIES.—Each Party State shall—

(1) appoint a Compact officer who shall—

(A) administer this Compact within that State;

(B) ensure that Compact provisions and rules, procedures, and standards established by the Council under Article VI are complied with in the State; and

(C) regulate the in-State use of records received by means of the III System from the FBI or from other Party States;

(2) establish and maintain a criminal history record repository, which shall provide—

(A) information and records for the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File; and

(B) the State's III System-indexed criminal history records for noncriminal justice purposes described in Article IV;

(3) participate in the National Fingerprint File; and

(4) provide and maintain telecommunications links and related equipment necessary to support the services set forth in this Compact.

(c) COMPLIANCE WITH III SYSTEM STANDARDS.—In carrying out their responsibilities under this Compact, the FBI and each Party State shall comply with III System rules, procedures, and standards duly established by the Council concerning record dissemination and use, response times, data quality, system security, accuracy, privacy protection, and other aspects of III System operation.

(d) MAINTENANCE OF RECORD SERVICES.—

(1) Use of the III System for noncriminal justice purposes authorized in this Compact shall be managed so as not to diminish the level of services provided in support of criminal justice purposes.

(2) Administration of Compact provisions shall not reduce the level of service available to authorized noncriminal justice users on the effective date of this Compact.

ARTICLE IV—AUTHORIZED RECORD DISCLOSURES

(a) STATE CRIMINAL HISTORY RECORD REPOSITORIES.—To the extent authorized by section 552a of title 5, United States Code (commonly known as the "Privacy Act of 1974"), the FBI shall provide on request criminal history records (excluding sealed records) to State criminal history record repositories for noncriminal justice purposes allowed by Federal statute, Federal Executive order, or a State statute that has been approved by the Attorney General and that authorizes national indices checks.

(b) CRIMINAL JUSTICE AGENCIES AND OTHER GOVERNMENTAL OR NONGOVERNMENTAL AGEN-

CIES.—The FBI, to the extent authorized by section 552a of title 5, United States Code (commonly known as the "Privacy Act of 1974"), and State criminal history record repositories shall provide criminal history records (excluding sealed records) to criminal justice agencies and other governmental or nongovernmental agencies for noncriminal justice purposes allowed by Federal statute, Federal Executive order, or a State statute that has been approved by the Attorney General, that authorizes national indices checks.

(c) PROCEDURES.—Any record obtained under this Compact may be used only for the official purposes for which the record was requested. Each Compact officer shall establish procedures, consistent with this Compact, and with rules, procedures, and standards established by the Council under Article VI, which procedures shall protect the accuracy and privacy of the records, and shall—

(1) ensure that records obtained under this Compact are used only by authorized officials for authorized purposes;

(2) require that subsequent record checks are requested to obtain current information whenever a new need arises; and

(3) ensure that record entries that may not legally be used for a particular noncriminal justice purpose are deleted from the response and, if no information authorized for release remains, an appropriate "no record" response is communicated to the requesting official.

ARTICLE V—RECORD REQUEST PROCEDURES

(a) POSITIVE IDENTIFICATION.—Subject fingerprints or other approved forms of positive identification shall be submitted with all requests for criminal history record checks for noncriminal justice purposes.

(b) SUBMISSION OF STATE REQUESTS.—Each request for a criminal history record check utilizing the national indices made under any approved State statute shall be submitted through that State's criminal history record repository. A State criminal history record repository shall process an interstate request for noncriminal justice purposes through the national indices only if such request is transmitted through another State criminal history record repository or the FBI.

(c) SUBMISSION OF FEDERAL REQUESTS.—Each request for criminal history record checks utilizing the national indices made under Federal authority shall be submitted through the FBI or, if the State criminal history record repository consents to process fingerprint submissions, through the criminal history record repository in the State in which such request originated. Direct access to the National Identification Index by entities other than the FBI and State criminal history records repositories shall not be permitted for noncriminal justice purposes.

(d) FEES.—A State criminal history record repository or the FBI—

(1) may charge a fee, in accordance with applicable law, for handling a request involving fingerprint processing for noncriminal justice purposes; and

(2) may not charge a fee for providing criminal history records in response to an electronic request for a record that does not involve a request to process fingerprints.

(e) ADDITIONAL SEARCH.—

(1) If a State criminal history record repository cannot positively identify the subject of a record request made for noncriminal justice purposes, the request, together with fingerprints or other approved identifying information, shall be forwarded to the FBI for a search of the national indices.

(2) If, with respect to a request forwarded by a State criminal history record repository under paragraph (1), the FBI positively identifies the subject as having a III System-indexed record or records—

(A) the FBI shall so advise the State criminal history record repository; and

(B) the State criminal history record repository shall be entitled to obtain the additional criminal history record information from the FBI or other State criminal history record repositories.

ARTICLE VI—ESTABLISHMENT OF COMPACT COUNCIL

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is established a council to be known as the "Compact Council", which shall have the authority to promulgate rules and procedures governing the use of the III System for noncriminal justice purposes, not to conflict with FBI administration of the III System for criminal justice purposes.

(2) ORGANIZATION.—The Council shall—

(A) continue in existence as long as this Compact remains in effect;

(B) be located, for administrative purposes, within the FBI; and

(C) be organized and hold its first meeting as soon as practicable after the effective date of this Compact.

(b) MEMBERSHIP.—The Council shall be composed of 15 members, each of whom shall be appointed by the Attorney General, as follows:

(1) Nine members, each of whom shall serve a 2-year term, who shall be selected from among the Compact officers of Party States based on the recommendation of the Compact officers of all Party States, except that, in the absence of the requisite number of Compact officers available to serve, the chief administrators of the criminal history record repositories of Nonparty States shall be eligible to serve on an interim basis.

(2) Two at-large members, nominated by the Director of the FBI, each of whom shall serve a 3-year term, of whom—

(A) 1 shall be a representative of the criminal justice agencies of the Federal Government and may not be an employee of the FBI; and

(B) 1 shall be a representative of the noncriminal justice agencies of the Federal Government.

(3) Two at-large members, nominated by the Chairman of the Council, once the Chairman is elected pursuant to Article VI(c), each of whom shall serve a 3-year term, of whom—

(A) 1 shall be a representative of State or local criminal justice agencies; and

(B) 1 shall be a representative of State or local noncriminal justice agencies.

(4) One member, who shall serve a 3-year term, and who shall simultaneously be a member of the FBI's advisory policy board on criminal justice information services, nominated by the membership of that policy board.

(5) One member, nominated by the Director of the FBI, who shall serve a 3-year term, and who shall be an employee of the FBI.

(c) CHAIRMAN AND VICE CHAIRMAN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—From its membership, the Council shall elect a Chairman and a Vice Chairman of the Council, respectively. Both the Chairman and Vice Chairman of the Council—

(A) shall be a Compact officer, unless there is no Compact officer on the Council who is willing to serve, in which case the Chairman may be an at-large member; and

(B) shall serve a 2-year term and may be reelected to only 1 additional 2-year term.

(2) DUTIES OF VICE CHAIRMAN.—The Vice Chairman of the Council shall serve as the Chairman of the Council in the absence of the Chairman.

(d) MEETINGS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Council shall meet at least once each year at the call of the Chairman. Each meeting of the Council shall be open to the public. The Council shall provide prior public notice in the Federal Register of each meeting of the Council, including the matters to be addressed at such meeting.

(2) QUORUM.—A majority of the Council or any committee of the Council shall constitute a quorum of the Council or of such committee, respectively, for the conduct of business. A lesser number may meet to hold hearings, take testimony, or conduct any business not requiring a vote.

(e) RULES, PROCEDURES, AND STANDARDS.—The Council shall make available for public inspection and copying at the Council office within the FBI, and shall publish in the Federal Register, any rules, procedures, or standards established by the Council.

(f) ASSISTANCE FROM FBI.—The Council may request from the FBI such reports, studies, statistics, or other information or materials as the Council determines to be necessary to enable the Council to perform its duties under this Compact. The FBI, to the extent authorized by law, may provide such assistance or information upon such a request.

(g) COMMITTEES.—The Chairman may establish committees as necessary to carry out this Compact and may prescribe their membership, responsibilities, and duration.

ARTICLE VII—RATIFICATION OF COMPACT

This Compact shall take effect upon being entered into by 2 or more States as between those States and the Federal Government. Upon subsequent entering into this Compact by additional States, it shall become effective among those States and the Federal Government and each Party State that has previously ratified it. When ratified, this Compact shall have the full force and effect of law within the ratifying jurisdictions. The form of ratification shall be in accordance with the laws of the executing State.

ARTICLE VIII—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

(a) RELATION OF COMPACT TO CERTAIN FBI ACTIVITIES.—Administration of this Compact shall not interfere with the management and control of the Director of the FBI over the FBI's collection and dissemination of criminal history records and the advisory function of the FBI's advisory policy board chartered under the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) for all purposes other than noncriminal justice.

(b) NO AUTHORITY FOR NONAPPROPRIATED EXPENDITURES.—Nothing in this Compact shall require the FBI to obligate or expend funds beyond those appropriated to the FBI.

(c) RELATING TO PUBLIC LAW 92-544.—Nothing in this Compact shall diminish or lessen the obligations, responsibilities, and authorities of any State, whether a Party State or a Nonparty State, or of any criminal history record repository or other subdivision or component thereof, under the Departments of State, Justice, and Commerce, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1973 (Public Law 92-544), or regulations and guidelines promulgated thereunder, including the rules and procedures promulgated by the Council under Article VI(a), regarding the use and dissemination of criminal history records and information.

ARTICLE IX—RENUNCIATION

(a) IN GENERAL.—This Compact shall bind each Party State until renounced by the Party State.

(b) EFFECT.—Any renunciation of this Compact by a Party State shall—

(1) be effected in the same manner by which the Party State ratified this Compact; and

(2) become effective 180 days after written notice of renunciation is provided by the Party State to each other Party State and to the Federal Government.

ARTICLE X—SEVERABILITY

The provisions of this Compact shall be severable, and if any phrase, clause, sentence, or provision of this Compact is declared to be contrary to the constitution of any participating State, or to the Constitution of the United States, or the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person, or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of this Compact and the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person, or circumstance shall not be affected thereby. If a portion of this Compact is held contrary to the constitution of any Party State, all other portions of this Compact shall remain in full force and effect as to the remaining Party States and in full force and effect as to the Party State affected, as to all other provisions.

ARTICLE XI—ADJUDICATION OF DISPUTES

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Council shall—

(1) have initial authority to make determinations with respect to any dispute regarding—

(A) interpretation of this Compact;

(B) any rule or standard established by the Council pursuant to Article V; and

(C) any dispute or controversy between any parties to this Compact; and

(2) hold a hearing concerning any dispute described in paragraph (1) at a regularly scheduled meeting of the Council and only render a decision based upon a majority vote of the members of the Council. Such decision shall be published pursuant to the requirements of Article VI(e).

(b) DUTIES OF FBI.—The FBI shall exercise immediate and necessary action to preserve the integrity of the III System, maintain system policy and standards, protect the accuracy and privacy of records, and to prevent abuses, until the Council holds a hearing on such matters.

(c) RIGHT OF APPEAL.—The FBI or a Party State may appeal any decision of the Council to the Attorney General, and thereafter may file suit in the appropriate district court of the United States, which shall have original jurisdiction of all cases or controversies arising under this Compact. Any suit arising under this Compact and initiated in a State court shall be removed to the appropriate district court of the United States in the manner provided by section 1446 of title 28, United States Code, or other statutory authority.

TITLE II—VOLUNTEERS FOR CHILDREN ACT

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Volunteers for Children Act".

SEC. 202. FACILITATION OF FINGERPRINT CHECKS.

(a) STATE AGENCY.—Section 3(a) of the National Child Protection Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. 5119a(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(3) In the absence of State procedures referred to in paragraph (1), a qualified entity designated under paragraph (1) may contact an authorized agency of the State to request national criminal fingerprint background checks. Qualified entities requesting background checks under this paragraph shall comply with the guidelines set forth in subsection (b) and with procedures for requesting national criminal fingerprint background checks, if any, established by the State."

(b) FEDERAL LAW.—Section 3(b)(5) of the National Child Protection Act of 1993 (42

U.S.C. 5119a(b)(5)) is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: "except that this paragraph does not apply to any request by a qualified entity for a national criminal fingerprint background check pursuant to subsection (a)(3)".

CRIME IDENTIFICATION TECHNOLOGY ACT OF 1998

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 382, S. 2022.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2022) to provide for the improvement of interstate criminal justice identification, information, communications, and forensics.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary, with an amendment on page seven, so as to make the bill read:

S. 2022

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Crime Identification Technology Act of 1998".

SEC. 2. STATE GRANT PROGRAM FOR CRIMINAL JUSTICE IDENTIFICATION, INFORMATION, AND COMMUNICATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the availability of amounts provided in advance in appropriations Acts, the Attorney General, through the Bureau of Justice Statistics of the Department of Justice, shall make a grant to each State, which shall be used by the State, in conjunction with units of local government, State and local courts, other States, or combinations thereof, to establish or upgrade an integrated approach to develop information and identification technologies and systems to—

(1) upgrade criminal history and criminal justice record systems, including systems operated by law enforcement agencies and courts;

(2) improve criminal justice identification;

(3) promote compatibility and integration of national, State, and local systems for—

(A) criminal justice purposes;

(B) firearms eligibility determinations;

(C) identification of sexual offenders;

(D) identification of domestic violence offenders; and

(E) background checks for other authorized purposes unrelated to criminal justice; and

(4) capture information for statistical and research purposes to improve the administration of criminal justice.

(b) USE OF GRANT AMOUNTS.—Grants under this section may be used for programs to establish, develop, update, or upgrade—

(1) State centralized, automated, adult and juvenile criminal history record information systems, including arrest and disposition reporting;

(2) automated fingerprint identification systems that are compatible with standards established by the National Institute of Standards and Technology and interoperable with the Integrated Automated Fingerprint Identification System (IAFIS) of the Federal Bureau of Investigation;

(3) finger imaging, live scan, and other automated systems to digitize fingerprints and to communicate prints in a manner that is compatible with standards established by the National Institute of Standards and Technology and interoperable with systems operated by States and by the Federal Bureau of Investigation;

(4) programs and systems to facilitate full participation in the Interstate Identification Index of the National Crime Information Center;

(5) systems to facilitate full participation in any compact relating to the Interstate Identification Index of the National Crime Information Center;

(6) systems to facilitate full participation in the national instant criminal background check system established under section 103(b) of the Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act (18 U.S.C. 922 note) for firearms eligibility determinations;

(7) integrated criminal justice information systems to manage and communicate criminal justice information among law enforcement agencies, courts, prosecutors, and corrections agencies;

(8) noncriminal history record information systems relevant to firearms eligibility determinations for availability and accessibility to the national instant criminal background check system established under section 103(b) of the Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act (18 U.S.C. 922 note);

(9) court-based criminal justice information systems that promote—

(A) reporting of dispositions to central State repositories and to the Federal Bureau of Investigation; and

(B) compatibility with, and integration of, court systems with other criminal justice information systems;

(10) ballistics identification and information programs that are compatible and integrated with the National Integrated Ballistics Network (NIBN);

(11) DNA programs for forensic and identification purposes, and identification and information programs to improve forensic analysis and to assist in accrediting crime laboratories;

(12) sexual offender identification and registration systems;

(13) domestic violence offender identification and information systems;

(14) programs for fingerprint-supported background checks capability for noncriminal justice purposes, including youth service employees and volunteers and other individuals in positions of responsibility, if authorized by Federal or State law and administered by a government agency;

(15) criminal justice information systems with a capacity to provide statistical and research products including incident-based reporting systems that are compatible with the National Incident-Based Reporting System (NIBRS) and uniform crime reports; and

(16) multiagency, multijurisdictional communications systems among the States to share routine and emergency information among Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies.

(c) ASSURANCES.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, a State shall provide assurances to the Attorney General that the State has the capability to contribute pertinent information to the national instant criminal background check system established under section 103(b) of the Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act (18 U.S.C. 922 note).

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $250,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1999 through 2003.

(2) LIMITATIONS.—Of the amount made available to carry out this section in any fiscal year—

(A) not more than 3 percent may be used by the Attorney General for salaries and administrative expenses;

(B) not more than 5 percent may be used for technical assistance, training and evaluations, and studies commissioned by Bureau of Justice Statistics of the Department of Justice (through discretionary grants or otherwise) in furtherance of the purposes of this section; and

(C) the Attorney General shall ensure the amounts are distributed on an equitable geographic basis.

(e) GRANTS TO INDIAN TRIBES.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the Attorney General may use amounts made available under this section to make grants to Indian tribes for use in accordance with this section.

AMENDMENT NO. 3126

Mr. ALLARD. Senator HATCH has an amendment at the desk for himself and others, and I ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. ALLARD], for Mr. HATCH, for himself, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. DEWINE, and Mr. DASCHLE, proposes an amendment numbered 3126.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact Act of 1998”.

SEC. 202. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) both the Federal Bureau of Investigation and State criminal history record repositories maintain fingerprint-based criminal history records;

(2) these criminal history records are shared and exchanged for criminal justice purposes through a Federal-State program known as the Interstate Identification Index System;

(3) although these records are also exchanged for legally authorized, noncriminal justice uses, such as governmental licensing and employment background checks, the purposes for and procedures by which they are exchanged vary widely from State to State;

(4) an interstate and Federal-State compact is necessary to facilitate authorized interstate criminal history record exchanges for noncriminal justice purposes on a uniform basis, while permitting each State to effectuate its own dissemination policy within its own borders; and

(5) such a compact will allow Federal and State records to be provided expeditiously to governmental and nongovernmental agencies that use such records in accordance with pertinent Federal and State law, while simultaneously enhancing the accuracy of the records and safeguarding the information contained therein from unauthorized disclosure or use.

SEC. 203. DEFINITIONS.

In this title:

(1) ATTORNEY GENERAL.—The term “Attorney General” means the Attorney General of the United States.

(2) COMPACT.—The term “Compact” means the National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact set forth in section 107.

(3) COUNCIL.—The term “Council” means the Compact Council established under Article VI of the Compact.

(4) FBI.—The term “FBI” means the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(5) PARTY STATE.—The term “Party State” means a State that has ratified the Compact.

(6) STATE.—The term “State” means any State, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

SEC. 204. ENACTMENT AND CONSENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

The National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact, as set forth in section 107, is enacted into law and entered into by the Federal Government. The consent of Congress is given to States to enter into the Compact.

SEC. 205. EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS.

(a) PRIVACY ACT OF 1974.—Nothing in the Compact shall affect the obligations and responsibilities of the FBI under section 552a of title 5, United States Code (commonly known as the "Privacy Act of 1974").

(b) ACCESS TO CERTAIN RECORDS NOT AFFECTED.—Nothing in the Compact shall interfere in any manner with—

(1) access, direct or otherwise, to records pursuant to—

(A) section 9101 of title 5, United States Code;

(B) the National Child Protection Act;

(C) the Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act (Public Law 103-159; 107 Stat. 1536);

(D) the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 (Public Law 103-322; 108 Stat. 2074) or any amendment made by that Act;

(E) the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437 et seq.); or

(F) the Native American Housing Assistance and Self-Determination Act of 1996 (25 U.S.C. 4101 et seq.); or

(2) any direct access to Federal criminal history records authorized by law.

(c) AUTHORITY OF FBI UNDER DEPARTMENTS OF STATE, JUSTICE, AND COMMERCE, THE JUDICIARY, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATION ACT, 1973.—Nothing in the Compact shall be construed to affect the authority of the FBI under the Departments of State, Justice, and Commerce, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1973 (Public Law 92-544 (86 Stat. 1115)).

(d) FEDERAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE ACT.—The Council shall not be considered to be a Federal advisory committee for purposes of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.).

(e) MEMBERS OF COUNCIL NOT FEDERAL OFFICERS OR EMPLOYEES.—Members of the Council (other than a member from the FBI or any at-large member who may be a Federal official or employee) shall not, by virtue of such membership, be deemed—

(1) to be, for any purpose other than to effect the Compact, officers or employees of the United States (as defined in sections 2104 and 2105 of title 5, United States Code); or

(2) to become entitled by reason of Council membership to any compensation or benefit payable or made available by the Federal Government to its officers or employees.

SEC. 206. ENFORCEMENT AND IMPLEMENTATION.

All departments, agencies, officers, and employees of the United States shall enforce the Compact and cooperate with one another and with all Party States in enforcing the Compact and effectuating its purposes. For the Federal Government, the Attorney General shall make such rules, prescribe such instructions, and take such other actions as may be necessary to carry out the Compact and this title.

SEC. 207. NATIONAL CRIME PREVENTION AND PRIVACY COMPACT.

The Contracting Parties agree to the following:

OVERVIEW

(a) IN GENERAL.—This Compact organizes an electronic information sharing system among the Federal Government and the States to exchange criminal history records for noncriminal justice purposes authorized by Federal or State law, such as background checks for governmental licensing and employment.

(b) OBLIGATIONS OF PARTIES.—Under this Compact, the FBI and the Party States agree to maintain detailed databases of their respective criminal history records, including arrests and dispositions, and to make them available to the Federal Government and to Party States for authorized purposes. The FBI shall also manage the Federal data facilities that provide a significant part of the infrastructure for the system.

ARTICLE I—DEFINITIONS

In this Compact:

(1) ATTORNEY GENERAL.—The term "Attorney General" means the Attorney General of the United States;

(2) COMPACT OFFICER.—The term "Compact officer" means—

(A) with respect to the Federal Government, an official so designated by the Director of the FBI; and

(B) with respect to a Party State, the chief administrator of the State's criminal history record repository or a designee of the chief administrator who is a regular full-time employee of the repository.

(3) COUNCIL.—The term "Council" means the Compact Council established under Article VI.

(4) CRIMINAL HISTORY RECORDS.—The term "criminal history records"—

(A) means information collected by criminal justice agencies on individuals consisting of identifiable descriptions and notations of arrests, detentions, indictments, or other formal criminal charges, and any disposition arising therefrom, including acquittal, sentencing, correctional supervision, or release; and

(B) does not include identification information such as fingerprint records if such information does not indicate involvement of the individual with the criminal justice system.

(5) CRIMINAL HISTORY RECORD REPOSITORY.—The term "criminal history record repository" means the State agency designated by the Governor or other appropriate executive official or the legislature of a State to perform centralized recordkeeping functions for criminal history records and services in the State.

(6) CRIMINAL JUSTICE.—The term "criminal justice" includes activities relating to the detection, apprehension, detention, pretrial release, post-trial release, prosecution, adjudication, correctional supervision, or rehabilitation of accused persons or criminal offenders. The administration of criminal justice includes criminal identification activities and the collection, storage, and dissemination of criminal history records.

(7) CRIMINAL JUSTICE AGENCY.—The term "criminal justice agency"—

(A) means—

(i) courts; and

(ii) a governmental agency or any subunit thereof that—

(I) performs the administration of criminal justice pursuant to a statute or Executive order; and

(II) allocates a substantial part of its annual budget to the administration of criminal justice; and

(B) includes Federal and State inspectors general offices.

(8) CRIMINAL JUSTICE SERVICES.—The term "criminal justice services" means services provided by the FBI to criminal justice agencies in response to a request for information about a particular individual or as an update to information previously provided for criminal justice purposes.

(9) CRITERION OFFENSE.—The term "criterion offense" means any felony or misdemeanor offense not included on the list of nonserious offenses published periodically by the FBI.

(10) DIRECT ACCESS.—The term "direct access" means access to the National Identification Index by computer terminal or other automated means not requiring the assistance of or intervention by any other party or agency.

(11) EXECUTIVE ORDER.—The term "Executive order" means an order of the President of the United States or the chief executive officer of a State that has the force of law and that is promulgated in accordance with applicable law.

(12) FBI.—The term "FBI" means the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(13) INTERSTATE IDENTIFICATION SYSTEM.—The term "Interstate Identification Index System" or "III System"—

(A) means the cooperative Federal-State system for the exchange of criminal history records; and

(B) includes the National Identification Index, the National Fingerprint File and, to the extent of their participation in such system, the criminal history record repositories of the States and the FBI.

(14) NATIONAL FINGERPRINT FILE.—The term "National Fingerprint File" means a database of fingerprints, or other uniquely personal identifying information, relating to an arrested or charged individual maintained by the FBI to provide positive identification of record subjects indexed in the III System.

(15) NATIONAL IDENTIFICATION INDEX.—The term "National Identification Index" means an index maintained by the FBI consisting of names, identifying numbers, and other descriptive information relating to record subjects about whom there are criminal history records in the III System.

(16) NATIONAL INDICES.—The term "National indices" means the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File.

(17) NONPARTY STATE.—The term "Nonparty State" means a State that has not ratified this Compact.

(18) NONCRIMINAL JUSTICE PURPOSES.—The term "noncriminal justice purposes" means uses of criminal history records for purposes authorized by Federal or State law other than purposes relating to criminal justice activities, including employment suitability, licensing determinations, immigration and naturalization matters, and national security clearances.

(19) PARTY STATE.—The term "Party State" means a State that has ratified this Compact.

(20) POSITIVE IDENTIFICATION.—The term "positive identification" means a determination, based upon a comparison of fingerprints or other equally reliable biometric identification techniques, that the subject of a record search is the same person as the subject of a criminal history record or records indexed in the III System. Identifications based solely upon a comparison of subjects' names or other nonunique identification characteristics or numbers, or combinations thereof, shall not constitute positive identification.

(21) SEALED RECORD INFORMATION.—The term "sealed record information" means—

(A) with respect to adults, that portion of a record that is—

(i) not available for criminal justice uses;

(ii) not supported by fingerprints or other accepted means of positive identification; or

(iii) subject to restrictions on dissemination for noncriminal justice purposes pursuant to a court order related to a particular subject or pursuant to a Federal or State statute that requires action on a sealing petition filed by a particular record subject; and

(B) with respect to juveniles, whatever each State determines is a sealed record under its own law and procedure.

(22) STATE.—The term “State” means any State, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

ARTICLE II—PURPOSES

The purposes of this Compact are to—

(1) provide a legal framework for the establishment of a cooperative Federal-State system for the interstate and Federal-State exchange of criminal history records for noncriminal justice uses;

(2) require the FBI to permit use of the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File by each Party State, and to provide, in a timely fashion, Federal and State criminal history records to requesting States, in accordance with the terms of this Compact and with rules, procedures, and standards established by the Council under Article VI;

(3) require Party States to provide information and records for the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File and to provide criminal history records, in a timely fashion, to criminal history record repositories of other States and the Federal Government for noncriminal justice purposes, in accordance with the terms of this Compact and with rules, procedures, and standards established by the Council under Article VI;

(4) provide for the establishment of a Council to monitor III System operations and to prescribe system rules and procedures for the effective and proper operation of the III System for noncriminal justice purposes; and

(5) require the FBI and each Party State to adhere to III System standards concerning record dissemination and use, response times, system security, data quality, and other duly established standards, including those that enhance the accuracy and privacy of such records.

ARTICLE III—RESPONSIBILITIES OF COMPACT PARTIES

(a) FBI RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Director of the FBI shall—

(1) appoint an FBI Compact officer who shall—

(A) administer this Compact within the Department of Justice and among Federal agencies and other agencies and organizations that submit search requests to the FBI pursuant to Article V(c);

(B) ensure that Compact provisions and rules, procedures, and standards prescribed by the Council under Article VI are complied with by the Department of Justice and the Federal agencies and other agencies and organizations referred to in Article III(1)(A); and

(C) regulate the use of records received by means of the III System from Party States when such records are supplied by the FBI directly to other Federal agencies;

(2) provide to Federal agencies and to State criminal history record repositories, criminal history records maintained in its database for the noncriminal justice purposes described in Article IV, including—

(A) information from Nonparty States; and

(B) information from Party States that is available from the FBI through the III System, but is not available from the Party State through the III System;

(3) provide a telecommunications network and maintain centralized facilities for the exchange of criminal history records for both criminal justice purposes and the noncriminal justice purposes described in Article IV, and ensure that the exchange of such records for criminal justice purposes has priority over exchange for noncriminal justice purposes; and

(4) modify or enter into user agreements with Nonparty State criminal history record repositories to require them to establish record request procedures conforming to those prescribed in Article V.

(b) STATE RESPONSIBILITIES.—Each Party State shall—

(1) appoint a Compact officer who shall—

(A) administer this Compact within that State;

(B) ensure that Compact provisions and rules, procedures, and standards established by the Council under Article VI are complied with in the State; and

(C) regulate the in-State use of records received by means of the III System from the FBI or from other Party States;

(2) establish and maintain a criminal history record repository, which shall provide—

(A) information and records for the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File; and

(B) the State's III System-indexed criminal history records for noncriminal justice purposes described in Article IV;

(3) participate in the National Fingerprint File; and

(4) provide and maintain telecommunications links and related equipment necessary to support the services set forth in this Compact.

(c) COMPLIANCE WITH III SYSTEM STANDARDS.—In carrying out their responsibilities under this Compact, the FBI and each Party State shall comply with III System rules, procedures, and standards duly established by the Council concerning record dissemination and use, response times, data quality, system security, accuracy, privacy protection, and other aspects of III System operation.

(d) MAINTENANCE OF RECORD SERVICES.—

(1) Use of the III System for noncriminal justice purposes authorized in this Compact shall be managed so as not to diminish the level of services provided in support of criminal justice purposes.

(2) Administration of Compact provisions shall not reduce the level of service available to authorized noncriminal justice users on the effective date of this Compact.

ARTICLE IV—AUTHORIZED RECORD DISCLOSURES

(a) STATE CRIMINAL HISTORY RECORD REPOSITORIES.—To the extent authorized by section 552a of title 5, United States Code (commonly known as the “Privacy Act of 1974”), the FBI shall provide on request criminal history records (excluding sealed records) to State criminal history record repositories for noncriminal justice purposes allowed by Federal statute, Federal Executive order, or a State statute that has been approved by the Attorney General and that authorizes national indices checks.

(b) CRIMINAL JUSTICE AGENCIES AND OTHER GOVERNMENTAL OR NONGOVERNMENTAL AGENCIES.—The FBI, to the extent authorized by section 552a of title 5, United States Code (commonly known as the “Privacy Act of 1974”), and State criminal history record repositories shall provide criminal history records (excluding sealed records) to criminal justice agencies and other governmental or nongovernmental agencies for noncriminal justice purposes allowed by Federal statute, Federal Executive order, or a State statute that has been approved by the Attorney General, that authorizes national indices checks.

(c) PROCEDURES.—Any record obtained under this Compact may be used only for the official purposes for which the record was requested. Each Compact officer shall establish procedures, consistent with this Compact, and with rules, procedures, and standards established by the Council under Article VI, which procedures shall protect the accuracy and privacy of the records, and shall—

(1) ensure that records obtained under this Compact are used only by authorized officials for authorized purposes;

(2) require that subsequent record checks are requested to obtain current information whenever a new need arises; and

(3) ensure that record entries that may not legally be used for a particular noncriminal justice purpose are deleted from the response and, if no information authorized for release remains, an appropriate “no record” response is communicated to the requesting official.

ARTICLE V—RECORD REQUEST PROCEDURES

(a) POSITIVE IDENTIFICATION.—Subject fingerprints or other approved forms of positive identification shall be submitted with all requests for criminal history record checks for noncriminal justice purposes.

(b) SUBMISSION OF STATE REQUESTS.—Each request for a criminal history record check utilizing the national indices made under any approved State statute shall be submitted through that State's criminal history record repository. A State criminal history record repository shall process an interstate request for noncriminal justice purposes through the national indices only if such request is transmitted through another State criminal history record repository or the FBI.

(c) SUBMISSION OF FEDERAL REQUESTS.—Each request for criminal history record checks utilizing the national indices made under Federal authority shall be submitted through the FBI or, if the State criminal history record repository consents to process fingerprint submissions, through the criminal history record repository in the State in which such request originated. Direct access to the National Identification Index by entities other than the FBI and State criminal history records repositories shall not be permitted for noncriminal justice purposes.

(d) FEES.—A State criminal history record repository or the FBI—

(1) may charge a fee, in accordance with applicable law, for handling a request involving fingerprint processing for noncriminal justice purposes; and

(2) may not charge a fee for providing criminal history records in response to an electronic request for a record that does not involve a request to process fingerprints.

(e) ADDITIONAL SEARCH.—

(1) If a State criminal history record repository cannot positively identify the subject of a record request made for noncriminal justice purposes, the request, together with fingerprints or other approved identifying information, shall be forwarded to the FBI for a search of the national indices.

(2) If, with respect to an request forwarded by a State criminal history record repository under paragraph (1), the FBI positively identifies the subject as having a III System-indexed record or records—

(A) the FBI shall so advise the State criminal history record repository; and

(B) the State criminal history record repository shall be entitled to obtain the additional criminal history record information from the FBI or other State criminal history record repositories.

ARTICLE VI—ESTABLISHMENT OF COMPACT COUNCIL

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is established a council to be known as the “Compact Council”, which shall have the authority to promulgate rules and procedures governing the use of the III System for noncriminal justice purposes, not to conflict with FBI administration of the III System for criminal justice purposes.

(2) ORGANIZATION.—The Council shall—

(A) continue in existence as long as this Compact remains in effect;

(B) be located, for administrative purposes, within the FBI; and

(C) be organized and hold its first meeting as soon as practicable after the effective date of this Compact.

(b) MEMBERSHIP.—The Council shall be composed of 15 members, each of whom shall be appointed by the Attorney General, as follows:

(1) Nine members, each of whom shall serve a 2-year term, who shall be selected from among the Compact officers of Party States based on the recommendation of the Compact officers of all Party States, except that, in the absence of the requisite number of Compact officers available to serve, the chief administrators of the criminal history record repositories of Nonparty States shall be eligible to serve on an interim basis.

(2) Two at-large members, nominated by the Director of the FBI, each of whom shall serve a 3-year term, of whom—

(A) 1 shall be a representative of the criminal justice agencies of the Federal Government and may not be an employee of the FBI; and

(B) 1 shall be a representative of the non-criminal justice agencies of the Federal Government.

(3) Two at-large members, nominated by the Chairman of the Council, once the Chairman is elected pursuant to Article VI(c), each of whom shall serve a 3-year term, of whom—

(A) 1 shall be a representative of State or local criminal justice agencies; and

(B) 1 shall be a representative of State or local noncriminal justice agencies.

(4) One member, who shall serve a 3-year term, and who shall simultaneously be a member of the FBI's advisory policy board on criminal justice information services, nominated by the membership of that policy board.

(5) One member, nominated by the Director of the FBI, who shall serve a 3-year term, and who shall be an employee of the FBI.

(c) CHAIRMAN AND VICE CHAIRMAN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—From its membership, the Council shall elect a Chairman and a Vice Chairman of the Council, respectively. Both the Chairman and Vice Chairman of the Council—

(A) shall be a Compact officer, unless there is no Compact officer on the Council who is willing to serve, in which case the Chairman may be an at-large member; and

(B) shall serve a 2-year term and may be reelected to only 1 additional 2-year term.

(2) DUTIES OF VICE CHAIRMAN.—The Vice Chairman of the Council shall serve as the Chairman of the Council in the absence of the Chairman.

(d) MEETINGS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Council shall meet at least once each year at the call of the Chairman. Each meeting of the Council shall be open to the public. The Council shall provide prior public notice in the Federal Register of each meeting of the Council, including the matters to be addressed at such meeting.

(2) QUORUM.—A majority of the Council or any committee of the Council shall constitute a quorum of the Council or of such committee, respectively, for the conduct of business. A lesser number may meet to hold hearings, take testimony, or conduct any business not requiring a vote.

(e) RULES, PROCEDURES, AND STANDARDS.—The Council shall make available for public inspection and copying at the Council office within the FBI, and shall publish in the Federal Register, any rules, procedures, or standards established by the Council.

(f) ASSISTANCE FROM FBI.—The Council may request from the FBI such reports, studies, statistics, or other information or materials as the Council determines to be necessary to enable the Council to perform its duties under this Compact. The FBI, to the extent authorized by law, may provide such assistance or information upon such a request.

(g) COMMITTEES.—The Chairman may establish committees as necessary to carry out this Compact and may prescribe their membership, responsibilities, and duration.

ARTICLE VII—RATIFICATION OF COMPACT

This Compact shall take effect upon being entered into by 2 or more States as between those States and the Federal Government. Upon subsequent entering into this Compact by additional States, it shall become effective among those States and the Federal Government and each Party State that has previously ratified it. When ratified, this Compact shall have the full force and effect of law within the ratifying jurisdictions. The form of ratification shall be in accordance with the laws of the executing State.

ARTICLE VIII—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

(a) RELATION OF COMPACT TO CERTAIN FBI ACTIVITIES.—Administration of this Compact shall not interfere with the management and control of the Director of the FBI over the FBI's collection and dissemination of criminal history records and the advisory function of the FBI's advisory policy board chartered under the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) for all purposes other than noncriminal justice.

(b) NO AUTHORITY FOR NONAPPROPRIATED EXPENDITURES.—Nothing in this Compact shall require the FBI to obligate or expend funds beyond those appropriated to the FBI.

(c) RELATING TO PUBLIC LAW 92-544.—Nothing in this Compact shall diminish or lessen the obligations, responsibilities, and authorities of any State, whether a Party State or a Nonparty State, or of any criminal history record repository or other subdivision or component thereof, under the Departments of State, Justice, and Commerce, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1973 (Public Law 92-544), or regulations and guidelines promulgated thereunder, including the rules and procedures promulgated by the Council under Article VI(a), regarding the use and dissemination of criminal history records and information.

ARTICLE IX—RENUNCIATION

(a) IN GENERAL.—This Compact shall bind each Party State until renounced by the Party State.

(b) EFFECT.—Any renunciation of this Compact by a Party State shall—

(1) be effected in the same manner by which the Party State ratified this Compact; and

(2) become effective 180 days after written notice of renunciation is provided by the Party State to each other Party State and to the Federal Government.

ARTICLE X—SEVERABILITY

The provisions of this Compact shall be severable, and if any phrase, clause, sentence, or provision of this Compact is declared to be contrary to the constitution of any participating State, or to the Constitution of the United States, or the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person, or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of this Compact and the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person, or circumstance shall not be affected thereby. If a portion of this Compact is held contrary to the constitution of any Party State, all other portions of this Compact shall remain in full force and effect as to the remaining Party States and in full force and effect as to the Party State affected, as to all other provisions.

ARTICLE XI—ADJUDICATION OF DISPUTES

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Council shall—

(1) have initial authority to make determinations with respect to any dispute regarding—

(A) interpretation of this Compact;

(B) any rule or standard established by the Council pursuant to Article V; and

(C) any dispute or controversy between any parties to this Compact; and

(2) hold a hearing concerning any dispute described in paragraph (1) at a regularly scheduled meeting of the Council and only render a decision based upon a majority vote of the members of the Council. Such decision shall be published pursuant to the requirements of Article VI(e).

(b) DUTIES OF FBI.—The FBI shall exercise immediate and necessary action to preserve the integrity of the III System, maintain system policy and standards, protect the accuracy and privacy of records, and to prevent abuses, until the Council holds a hearing on such matters.

(c) RIGHT OF APPEAL.—The FBI or a Party State may appeal any decision of the Council to the Attorney General, and thereafter may file suit in the appropriate district court of the United States, which shall have original jurisdiction of all cases or controversies arising under this Compact. Any suit arising under this Compact and initiated in a State court shall be removed to the appropriate district court of the United States in the manner provided by section 1446 of title 28, United States Code, or other statutory authority.

Subtitle B—Volunteers for Children Act

SEC. 221. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Volunteers for Children Act".

SEC. 222. FACILITATION OF FINGERPRINT CHECKS.

(a) STATE AGENCY.—Section 3(a) of the National Child Protection Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. 5119a(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(3) In the absence of State procedures referred to in paragraph (1), a qualified entity designated under paragraph (1) may contact an authorized agency of the State to request national criminal fingerprint background checks. Qualified entities requesting background checks under this paragraph shall comply with the guidelines set forth in subsection (b) and with procedures for requesting national criminal fingerprint background checks, if any, established by the State."

(b) FEDERAL LAW.—Section 3(b)(5) of the National Child Protection Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. 5119a(b)(5)) is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: "except that this paragraph does not apply to any request by a qualified entity for a national criminal fingerprint background check pursuant to subsection (a)(3)".

(c) AUTHORIZATION.—Section 4(b)(2) of the National Child Protection Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. 5119b(b)(2)) is amended by striking "1994, 1995, 1996, and 1997" and inserting "1999, 2000, 2001, and 2002".

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I am pleased that the Senate today is passing, as an amendment to S. 2022, the Hatch-Leahy-DeWine-Daschle Federal-State "III" Compact for exchange of criminal history records for non-criminal justice purposes. This Compact is the product of a decade-long effort by federal and state law enforcement officials to establish a legal framework for the exchange of criminal history records for authorized non-criminal justice purposes, such as security clearances, employment or licensing background checks.

Since 1924, the FBI has collected and maintained duplicate state and local fingerprint cards, along with arrest and disposition records. Today, the FBI has over 200 million fingerprint cards in its system. These FBI records are accessible to authorized government entities for both criminal and authorized non-criminal justice purposes.

Maintaining duplicate files at the FBI is costly and leads to inaccuracies in the criminal history records, since follow-up disposition information from the States is often incomplete. Such a huge central database of routinely incomplete criminal history records raises significant privacy concerns.

In addition, the FBI releases these records for noncriminal justice purposes (as authorized by Federal law), to State agencies upon request, even if the State from which the records originated or the receiving State more narrowly restricts the dissemination of such records for noncriminal justice purposes.

The III Compact is an effort to get the FBI out of the business of holding a duplicate copy of every State and local criminal history record, and instead to keep those records at the State level. Once fully implemented, the FBI will only need to hold the Interstate Identification Index (III), consisting of the national fingerprint file and a pointer index to direct the requestor to the correct State records repository. The Compact would eliminate the necessity for duplicate records at the FBI for those States participating in the Compact. Eventually, when all the States become full participants in the Compact, the FBI's centralized files of state offender records will be discontinued and users of such records will obtain those records from the appropriate State's central repository (or from the FBI if the offender has a federal record).

The Compact would establish both a framework for this cooperative exchange of criminal history records for noncriminal justice purposes, and create a Compact Council with representatives from the FBI and the States to monitor system operations and issue necessary rules and procedures for the integrity and accuracy of the records and compliance with privacy standards. Importantly, this Compact would not in any way expand or diminish noncriminal justice purposes for which criminal history records may be used under existing State or Federal law.

Overall, I believe that the Compact would increase the accuracy, completeness and privacy protection for criminal history records.

In addition, the Compact would result in important cost savings from establishing a decentralized system. Under the system envisioned by the Compact, the FBI would hold only an "index and pointer" to the records maintained at the originating State.

The FBI would no longer have to maintain duplicate State records. Moreover, States would no longer have the burden and costs of submitting arrest fingerprints and charge/disposition data to the FBI for all arrests. Instead, the State would only have to submit to the FBI the fingerprints and textual identification data for a person's first arrest.

With this system, criminal history records would be more up-to-date, or complete, because a decentralized system will keep the records closer to their point of origin in State repositories, eliminating the need for the States to keep sending updated disposition information to the FBI. To ensure further accuracy, the Compact would require requests for criminal history checks for noncriminal justice purposes to be submitted with fingerprints or some other form of positive identification, to avoid mistaken release of records.

Furthermore, under the Compact, the newly-created Council must establish procedures to require that the most current records are requested and that when a new need arises, a new record check is conducted.

Significantly, the newly-created Council must establish privacy enhancing procedures to ensure that requested criminal history records are only used by authorized officials for authorized purposes. Furthermore, the Compact makes clear that only the FBI and authorized representatives from the State repository may have direct access to the FBI index. The Council must also ensure that only legally appropriate information is released and, specifically, that record entries that may not be used for noncriminal justice purposes are deleted from the response.

Thus, while the Compact would require the release of arrest records to a requesting State, the Compact would also ensure that if disposition records are available that the complete record be released. Also, the Compact would require States receiving records under the Compact to ensure that the records are disseminated in compliance with the authorized uses in that State. Consequently, under the Compact, a State that receives arrest-only information would have to give effect to disposition-only policies in that State and not release that information for non-criminal justice purposes. Thus, in my view, the impact of the Compact for the privacy and accuracy of the records would be positive.

I am pleased to have joined with Senators HATCH and DEWINE to make a number of refinements to the Compact as transmitted by to us by the Administration. Specifically, we have worked to clarify that (1) the work of the Council includes establishing standards to protect the privacy of the records; (2) sealed criminal history records are not covered or subject to release for noncriminal justice purposes under the Compact; (3) the meetings of the Council are open to the public, and (4) the Council's decisions, rules and procedures are available for public inspection and copying and published in the Federal Register.

Commissioner Walton of the Vermont Department of Public Safety supports this Compact. He hopes that passage of the Compact will encourage Vermont to become a full participant in III for both criminal and non-criminal justice purposes, so that Vermont can "reap the benefits of cost savings and improved data quality." The Compact is also strongly supported by the FBI and SEARCH.

We all have an interest in making sure that the criminal history records maintained by our law enforcement agencies at the local, State and Federal levels, are complete, accurate and accessible only to authorized personnel for legally authorized purposes. This Compact is a significant step in the process of achieving that goal.

Mr. ALLARD. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be agreed to, the committee amendment be agreed to, the bill be considered read the third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the bill appear in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 3126) was agreed to.

The committee amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The bill (S. 2022), as amended, was considered read the third time and passed, as follows:

TITLE I—CRIME IDENTIFICATION
TECHNOLOGY ACT OF 1998*SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Crime Identification Technology Act of 1998”.

SEC. 102. STATE GRANT PROGRAM FOR CRIMINAL JUSTICE IDENTIFICATION, INFORMATION, AND COMMUNICATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the availability of amounts provided in advance in appropriations Acts, the Attorney General, through the Bureau of Justice Statistics of the Department of Justice, shall make a grant to each State, which shall be used by the State, in conjunction with units of local government, State and local courts, other States, or combinations thereof, to establish or upgrade an integrated approach to develop information and identification technologies and systems to—

(1) upgrade criminal history and criminal justice record systems, including systems operated by law enforcement agencies and courts;

(2) improve criminal justice identification;

(3) promote compatibility and integration of national, State, and local systems for—

(A) criminal justice purposes;

(B) firearms eligibility determinations;

(C) identification of sexual offenders;

(D) identification of domestic violence offenders; and

(E) background checks for other authorized purposes unrelated to criminal justice; and

(4) capture information for statistical and research purposes to improve the administration of criminal justice.

(b) USE OF GRANT AMOUNTS.—Grants under this section may be used for programs to establish, develop, update, or upgrade—

(1) State centralized, automated, adult and juvenile criminal history record information systems, including arrest and disposition reporting;

(2) automated fingerprint identification systems that are compatible with standards established by the National Institute of Standards and Technology and interoperable with the Integrated Automated Fingerprint Identification System (IAFIS) of the Federal Bureau of Investigation;

(3) finger imaging, live scan, and other automated systems to digitize fingerprints and to communicate prints in a manner that is compatible with standards established by the National Institute of Standards and Technology and interoperable with systems operated by States and by the Federal Bureau of Investigation;

(4) programs and systems to facilitate full participation in the Interstate Identification Index of the National Crime Information Center;

(5) systems to facilitate full participation in any compact relating to the Interstate Identification Index of the National Crime Information Center;

(6) systems to facilitate full participation in the national instant criminal background check system established under section 103(b) of the Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act (18 U.S.C. 922 note) for firearms eligibility determinations;

(7) integrated criminal justice information systems to manage and communicate criminal justice information among law enforcement agencies, courts, prosecutors, and corrections agencies;

(8) noncriminal history record information systems relevant to firearms eligibility determinations for availability and accessibility to the national instant criminal background check system established under section 103(b) of the Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act (18 U.S.C. 922 note);

(9) court-based criminal justice information systems that promote—

(A) reporting of dispositions to central State repositories and to the Federal Bureau of Investigation; and

(B) compatibility with, and integration of, court systems with other criminal justice information systems;

(10) ballistics identification and information programs that are compatible and integrated with the National Integrated Ballistics Network (NIBN);

(11) DNA programs for forensic and identification purposes, and identification and information programs to improve forensic analysis and to assist in accrediting crime laboratories;

(12) sexual offender identification and registration systems;

(13) domestic violence offender identification and information systems;

(14) programs for fingerprint-supported background checks capability for noncriminal justice purposes, including youth service employees and volunteers and other individuals in positions of responsibility, if authorized by Federal or State law and administered by a government agency;

(15) criminal justice information systems with a capacity to provide statistical and research products including incident-based reporting systems that are compatible with the National Incident-Based Reporting System (NIBRS) and uniform crime reports; and

(16) multiagency, multijurisdictional communications systems among the States to share routine and emergency information among Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies.

(c) ASSURANCES.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, a State shall provide assurances to the Attorney General that the State has the capability to contribute pertinent information to the national instant criminal background check system established under section 103(b) of the Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act (18 U.S.C. 922 note).

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $250,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1999 through 2003.

(2) LIMITATIONS.—Of the amount made available to carry out this section in any fiscal year—

(A) not more than 3 percent may be used by the Attorney General for salaries and administrative expenses;

(B) not more than 5 percent may be used for technical assistance, training and evaluations, and studies commissioned by Bureau of Justice Statistics of the Department of Justice (through discretionary grants or otherwise) in furtherance of the purposes of this section; and

(C) the Attorney General shall ensure the amounts are distributed on an equitable geographic basis.

(e) GRANTS TO INDIAN TRIBES.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the Attorney General may use amounts made available under this section to make grants to Indian tribes for use in accordance with this section.

TITLE II—NATIONAL CRIMINAL HISTORY
ACCESS AND CHILD PROTECTION ACT*SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “National Criminal History Access and Child Protection Act”.

Subtitle A—Exchange of Criminal History Records for Noncriminal Justice Purposes*SEC. 211. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the “National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact Act of 1998”.

SEC. 212. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) both the Federal Bureau of Investigation and State criminal history record repositories maintain fingerprint-based criminal history records;

(2) these criminal history records are shared and exchanged for criminal justice purposes through a Federal-State program known as the Interstate Identification Index System;

(3) although these records are also exchanged for legally authorized, noncriminal justice uses, such as governmental licensing and employment background checks, the purposes for and procedures by which they are exchanged vary widely from State to State;

(4) an interstate and Federal-State compact is necessary to facilitate authorized interstate criminal history record exchanges for noncriminal justice purposes on a uniform basis, while permitting each State to effectuate its own dissemination policy within its own borders; and

(5) such a compact will allow Federal and State records to be provided expeditiously to governmental and nongovernmental agencies that use such records in accordance with pertinent Federal and State law, while simultaneously enhancing the accuracy of the records and safeguarding the information contained therein from unauthorized disclosure or use.

SEC. 213. DEFINITIONS.

In this subtitle:

(1) ATTORNEY GENERAL.—The term “Attorney General” means the Attorney General of the United States.

(2) COMPACT.—The term “Compact” means the National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact set forth in section 217.

(3) COUNCIL.—The term “Council” means the Compact Council established under Article VI of the Compact.

(4) FBI.—The term “FBI” means the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(5) PARTY STATE.—The term “Party State” means a State that has ratified the Compact.

(6) STATE.—The term “State” means any State, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

SEC. 214. ENACTMENT AND CONSENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

The National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact, as set forth in section 217, is enacted into law and entered into by the Federal Government. The consent of Congress is given to States to enter into the Compact.

SEC. 215. EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS.

(a) PRIVACY ACT OF 1974.—Nothing in the Compact shall affect the obligations and responsibilities of the FBI under section 552a of title 5, United States Code (commonly known as the "Privacy Act of 1974").

(b) ACCESS TO CERTAIN RECORDS NOT AFFECTED.—Nothing in the Compact shall interfere in any manner with—

(1) access, direct or otherwise, to records pursuant to—

(A) section 9101 of title 5, United States Code;

(B) the National Child Protection Act;

(C) the Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act (Public Law 103-159; 107 Stat. 1536);

(D) the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 (Public Law 103-322; 108 Stat. 2074) or any amendment made by that Act;

(E) the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437 et seq.); or

(F) the Native American Housing Assistance and Self-Determination Act of 1996 (25 U.S.C. 4101 et seq.); or

(2) any direct access to Federal criminal history records authorized by law.

(c) AUTHORITY OF FBI UNDER DEPARTMENTS OF STATE, JUSTICE, AND COMMERCE, THE JUDICIARY, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATION ACT, 1973.—Nothing in the Compact shall be construed to affect the authority of the FBI under the Departments of State, Justice, and Commerce, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1973 (Public Law 92-544 (86 Stat. 1115)).

(d) FEDERAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE ACT.—The Council shall not be considered to be a Federal advisory committee for purposes of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.).

(e) MEMBERS OF COUNCIL NOT FEDERAL OFFICERS OR EMPLOYEES.—Members of the Council (other than a member from the FBI or any at-large member who may be a Federal official or employee) shall not, by virtue of such membership, be deemed—

(1) to be, for any purpose other than to effect the Compact, officers or employees of the United States (as defined in sections 2104 and 2105 of title 5, United States Code); or

(2) to become entitled by reason of Council membership to any compensation or benefit payable or made available by the Federal Government to its officers or employees.

SEC. 216. ENFORCEMENT AND IMPLEMENTATION.

All departments, agencies, officers, and employees of the United States shall enforce the Compact and cooperate with one another and with all Party States in enforcing the Compact and effectuating its purposes. For the Federal Government, the Attorney General shall make such rules, prescribe such instructions, and take such other actions as may be necessary to carry out the Compact and this subtitle.

SEC. 217. NATIONAL CRIME PREVENTION AND PRIVACY COMPACT.

The Contracting Parties agree to the following:

OVERVIEW

(a) IN GENERAL.—This Compact organizes an electronic information sharing system among the Federal Government and the States to exchange criminal history records for noncriminal justice purposes authorized by Federal or State law, such as background checks for governmental licensing and employment.

(b) OBLIGATIONS OF PARTIES.—Under this Compact, the FBI and the Party States agree to maintain detailed databases of their respective criminal history records, including arrests and dispositions, and to make them available to the Federal Government and to Party States for authorized purposes. The FBI shall also manage the Federal data facilities that provide a significant part of the infrastructure for the system.

ARTICLE I—DEFINITIONS

In this Compact:

(1) ATTORNEY GENERAL.—The term "Attorney General" means the Attorney General of the United States;

(2) COMPACT OFFICER.—The term "Compact officer" means—

(A) with respect to the Federal Government, an official so designated by the Director of the FBI; and

(B) with respect to a Party State, the chief administrator of the State's criminal history record repository or a designee of the chief administrator who is a regular full-time employee of the repository.

(3) COUNCIL.—The term "Council" means the Compact Council established under Article VI.

(4) CRIMINAL HISTORY RECORDS.—The term "criminal history records"—

(A) means information collected by criminal justice agencies on individuals consisting of identifiable descriptions and notations of arrests, detentions, indictments, or other formal criminal charges, and any disposition arising therefrom, including acquittal, sentencing, correctional supervision, or release; and

(B) does not include identification information such as fingerprint records if such information does not indicate involvement of the individual with the criminal justice system.

(5) CRIMINAL HISTORY RECORD REPOSITORY.—The term "criminal history record repository" means the State agency designated by the Governor or other appropriate executive official or the legislature of a State to perform centralized recordkeeping functions for criminal history records and services in the State.

(6) CRIMINAL JUSTICE.—The term "criminal justice" includes activities relating to the detection, apprehension, detention, pretrial release, post-trial release, prosecution, adjudication, correctional supervision, or rehabilitation of accused persons or criminal offenders. The administration of criminal justice includes criminal identification activities and the collection, storage, and dissemination of criminal history records.

(7) CRIMINAL JUSTICE AGENCY.—The term "criminal justice agency"—

(A) means—

(i) courts; and

(ii) a governmental agency or any subunit thereof that—

(I) performs the administration of criminal justice pursuant to a statute or Executive order; and

(II) allocates a substantial part of its annual budget to the administration of criminal justice; and

(B) includes Federal and State inspectors general offices.

(8) CRIMINAL JUSTICE SERVICES.—The term "criminal justice services" means services provided by the FBI to criminal justice agencies in response to a request for information about a particular individual or as an update to information previously provided for criminal justice purposes.

(9) CRITERION OFFENSE.—The term "criterion offense" means any felony or misdemeanor offense not included on the list of nonserious offenses published periodically by the FBI.

(10) DIRECT ACCESS.—The term "direct access" means access to the National Identification Index by computer terminal or other automated means not requiring the assistance of or intervention by any other party or agency.

(11) EXECUTIVE ORDER.—The term "Executive order" means an order of the President of the United States or the chief executive officer of a State that has the force of law and that is promulgated in accordance with applicable law.

(12) FBI.—The term "FBI" means the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(13) INTERSTATE IDENTIFICATION SYSTEM.—The term "Interstate Identification Index System" or "III System"—

(A) means the cooperative Federal-State system for the exchange of criminal history records; and

(B) includes the National Identification Index, the National Fingerprint File and, to the extent of their participation in such system, the criminal history record repositories of the States and the FBI.

(14) NATIONAL FINGERPRINT FILE.—The term "National Fingerprint File" means a database of fingerprints, or other uniquely personal identifying information, relating to an arrested or charged individual maintained by the FBI to provide positive identification of record subjects indexed in the III System.

(15) NATIONAL IDENTIFICATION INDEX.—The term "National Identification Index" means an index maintained by the FBI consisting of names, identifying numbers, and other descriptive information relating to record subjects about whom there are criminal history records in the III System.

(16) NATIONAL INDICES.—The term "National indices" means the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File.

(17) NONPARTY STATE.—The term "Nonparty State" means a State that has not ratified this Compact.

(18) NONCRIMINAL JUSTICE PURPOSES.—The term "noncriminal justice purposes" means uses of criminal history records for purposes authorized by Federal or State law other than purposes relating to criminal justice activities, including employment suitability, licensing determinations, immigration and naturalization matters, and national security clearances.

(19) PARTY STATE.—The term "Party State" means a State that has ratified this Compact.

(20) POSITIVE IDENTIFICATION.—The term "positive identification" means a determination, based upon a comparison of fingerprints or other equally reliable biometric identification techniques, that the subject of a record search is the same person as the subject of a criminal history record or records indexed in the III System. Identifications based solely upon a comparison of subjects' names or other nonunique identification characteristics or numbers, or combinations thereof, shall not constitute positive identification.

(21) SEALED RECORD INFORMATION.—The term "sealed record information" means—

(A) with respect to adults, that portion of a record that is—

(i) not available for criminal justice uses;

(ii) not supported by fingerprints or other accepted means of positive identification; or

(iii) subject to restrictions on dissemination for noncriminal justice purposes pursuant to a court order related to a particular subject or pursuant to a Federal or State statute that requires action on a sealing petition filed by a particular record subject; and

(B) with respect to juveniles, whatever each State determines is a sealed record under its own law and procedure.

(22) STATE.—The term "State" means any State, territory, or possession of the United States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

ARTICLE II—PURPOSES

The purposes of this Compact are to—

(1) provide a legal framework for the establishment of a cooperative Federal-State system for the interstate and Federal-State exchange of criminal history records for noncriminal justice uses;

(2) require the FBI to permit use of the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File by each Party State, and to provide, in a timely fashion, Federal and State criminal history records to requesting States, in accordance with the terms of this Compact and with rules, procedures, and standards established by the Council under Article VI;

(3) require Party States to provide information and records for the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File and to provide criminal history records, in a timely fashion, to criminal history record repositories of other States and the Federal Government for noncriminal justice purposes, in accordance with the terms of this Compact and with rules, procedures, and standards established by the Council under Article VI;

(4) provide for the establishment of a Council to monitor III System operations and to prescribe system rules and procedures for the effective and proper operation of the III System for noncriminal justice purposes; and

(5) require the FBI and each Party State to adhere to III System standards concerning record dissemination and use, response times, system security, data quality, and other duly established standards, including those that enhance the accuracy and privacy of such records.

ARTICLE III—RESPONSIBILITIES OF COMPACT PARTIES

(a) FBI RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Director of the FBI shall—

(1) appoint an FBI Compact officer who shall—

(A) administer this Compact within the Department of Justice and among Federal agencies and other agencies and organizations that submit search requests to the FBI pursuant to Article V(c);

(B) ensure that Compact provisions and rules, procedures, and standards prescribed by the Council under Article VI are complied with by the Department of Justice and the Federal agencies and other agencies and organizations referred to in Article III(1)(A); and

(C) regulate the use of records received by means of the III System from Party States when such records are supplied by the FBI directly to other Federal agencies;

(2) provide to Federal agencies and to State criminal history record repositories, criminal history records maintained in its database for the noncriminal justice purposes described in Article IV, including—

(A) information from Nonparty States; and

(B) information from Party States that is available from the FBI through the III System, but is not available from the Party State through the III System;

(3) provide a telecommunications network and maintain centralized facilities for the exchange of criminal history records for both criminal justice purposes and the noncriminal justice purposes described in Article IV, and ensure that the exchange of such records for criminal justice purposes has priority over exchange for noncriminal justice purposes; and

(4) modify or enter into user agreements with Nonparty State criminal history record repositories to require them to establish record request procedures conforming to those prescribed in Article V.

(b) STATE RESPONSIBILITIES.—Each Party State shall—

(1) appoint a Compact officer who shall—

(A) administer this Compact within that State;

(B) ensure that Compact provisions and rules, procedures, and standards established by the Council under Article VI are complied with in the State; and

(C) regulate the in-State use of records received by means of the III System from the FBI or from other Party States;

(2) establish and maintain a criminal history record repository, which shall provide—

(A) information and records for the National Identification Index and the National Fingerprint File; and

(B) the State's III System-indexed criminal history records for noncriminal justice purposes described in Article IV;

(3) participate in the National Fingerprint File; and

(4) provide and maintain telecommunications links and related equipment necessary to support the services set forth in this Compact.

(c) COMPLIANCE WITH III SYSTEM STANDARDS.—In carrying out their responsibilities under this Compact, the FBI and each Party State shall comply with III System rules, procedures, and standards duly established by the Council concerning record dissemination and use, response times, data quality, system security, accuracy, privacy protection, and other aspects of III System operation.

(d) MAINTENANCE OF RECORD SERVICES.—

(1) Use of the III System for noncriminal justice purposes authorized in this Compact shall be managed so as not to diminish the level of services provided in support of criminal justice purposes.

(2) Administration of Compact provisions shall not reduce the level of service available to authorized noncriminal justice users on the effective date of this Compact.

ARTICLE IV—AUTHORIZED RECORD DISCLOSURES

(a) STATE CRIMINAL HISTORY RECORD REPOSITORIES.—To the extent authorized by section 552a of title 5, United States Code (commonly known as the "Privacy Act of 1974"), the FBI shall provide on request criminal history records (excluding sealed records) to State criminal history record repositories for noncriminal justice purposes allowed by Federal statute, Federal Executive order, or a State statute that has been approved by the Attorney General and that authorizes national indices checks.

(b) CRIMINAL JUSTICE AGENCIES AND OTHER GOVERNMENTAL OR NONGOVERNMENTAL AGENCIES.—The FBI, to the extent authorized by section 552a of title 5, United States Code (commonly known as the "Privacy Act of 1974"), and State criminal history record repositories shall provide criminal history records (excluding sealed records) to criminal justice agencies and other governmental or nongovernmental agencies for noncriminal justice purposes allowed by Federal statute, Federal Executive order, or a State statute that has been approved by the Attorney General, that authorizes national indices checks.

(c) PROCEDURES.—Any record obtained under this Compact may be used only for the official purposes for which the record was requested. Each Compact officer shall establish procedures, consistent with this Compact, and with rules, procedures, and standards established by the Council under Article VI, which procedures shall protect the accuracy and privacy of the records, and shall—

(1) ensure that records obtained under this Compact are used only by authorized officials for authorized purposes;

(2) require that subsequent record checks are requested to obtain current information whenever a new need arises; and

(3) ensure that record entries that may not legally be used for a particular noncriminal justice purpose are deleted from the response and, if no information authorized for release remains, an appropriate "no record" response is communicated to the requesting official.

ARTICLE V—RECORD REQUEST PROCEDURES

(a) POSITIVE IDENTIFICATION.—Subject fingerprints or other approved forms of positive identification shall be submitted with all requests for criminal history record checks for noncriminal justice purposes.

(b) SUBMISSION OF STATE REQUESTS.—Each request for a criminal history record check utilizing the national indices made under any approved State statute shall be submitted through that State's criminal history record repository. A State criminal history record repository shall process an interstate request for noncriminal justice purposes through the national indices only if such request is transmitted through another State criminal history record repository or the FBI.

(c) SUBMISSION OF FEDERAL REQUESTS.—Each request for criminal history record checks utilizing the national indices made under Federal authority shall be submitted through the FBI or, if the State criminal history record repository consents to process fingerprint submissions, through the criminal history record repository in the State in which such request originated. Direct access to the National Identification Index by entities other than the FBI and State criminal history records repositories shall not be permitted for noncriminal justice purposes.

(d) FEES.—A State criminal history record repository or the FBI—

(1) may charge a fee, in accordance with applicable law, for handling a request involving fingerprint processing for noncriminal justice purposes; and

(2) may not charge a fee for providing criminal history records in response to an electronic request for a record that does not involve a request to process fingerprints.

(e) ADDITIONAL SEARCH.—

(1) If a State criminal history record repository cannot positively identify the subject of a record request made for noncriminal justice purposes, the request, together with fingerprints or other approved identifying information, shall be forwarded to the FBI for a search of the national indices.

(2) If, with respect to an request forwarded by a State criminal history record repository under paragraph (1), the FBI positively identifies the subject as having a III System-indexed record or records—

(A) the FBI shall so advise the State criminal history record repository; and

(B) the State criminal history record repository shall be entitled to obtain the additional criminal history record information from the FBI or other State criminal history record repositories.

ARTICLE VI—ESTABLISHMENT OF COMPACT COUNCIL

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is established a council to be known as the "Compact Council", which shall have the authority to promulgate rules and procedures governing the use of the III System for noncriminal justice purposes, not to conflict with FBI administration of the III System for criminal justice purposes.

(2) ORGANIZATION.—The Council shall—

(A) continue in existence as long as this Compact remains in effect;

(B) be located, for administrative purposes, within the FBI; and

(C) be organized and hold its first meeting as soon as practicable after the effective date of this Compact.

(b) MEMBERSHIP.—The Council shall be composed of 15 members, each of whom shall be appointed by the Attorney General, as follows:

(1) Nine members, each of whom shall serve a 2-year term, who shall be selected from among the Compact officers of Party States based on the recommendation of the Compact officers of all Party States, except that, in the absence of the requisite number of Compact officers available to serve, the chief administrators of the criminal history record repositories of Nonparty States shall be eligible to serve on an interim basis.

(2) Two at-large members, nominated by the Director of the FBI, each of whom shall serve a 3-year term, of whom—

(A) 1 shall be a representative of the criminal justice agencies of the Federal Government and may not be an employee of the FBI; and

(B) 1 shall be a representative of the non-criminal justice agencies of the Federal Government.

(3) Two at-large members, nominated by the Chairman of the Council, once the Chairman is elected pursuant to Article VI(c), each of whom shall serve a 3-year term, of whom—

(A) 1 shall be a representative of State or local criminal justice agencies; and

(B) 1 shall be a representative of State or local noncriminal justice agencies.

(4) One member, who shall serve a 3-year term, and who shall simultaneously be a member of the FBI's advisory policy board on criminal justice information services, nominated by the membership of that policy board.

(5) One member, nominated by the Director of the FBI, who shall serve a 3-year term, and who shall be an employee of the FBI.

(c) CHAIRMAN AND VICE CHAIRMAN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—From its membership, the Council shall elect a Chairman and a Vice Chairman of the Council, respectively. Both the Chairman and Vice Chairman of the Council—

(A) shall be a Compact officer, unless there is no Compact officer on the Council who is willing to serve, in which case the Chairman may be an at-large member; and

(B) shall serve a 2-year term and may be reelected to only 1 additional 2-year term.

(2) DUTIES OF VICE CHAIRMAN.—The Vice Chairman of the Council shall serve as the Chairman of the Council in the absence of the Chairman.

(d) MEETINGS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Council shall meet at least once each year at the call of the Chairman. Each meeting of the Council shall be open to the public. The Council shall provide prior public notice in the Federal Register of each meeting of the Council, including the matters to be addressed at such meeting.

(2) QUORUM.—A majority of the Council or any committee of the Council shall constitute a quorum of the Council or of such committee, respectively, for the conduct of business. A lesser number may meet to hold hearings, take testimony, or conduct any business not requiring a vote.

(e) RULES, PROCEDURES, AND STANDARDS.—The Council shall make available for public inspection and copying at the Council office within the FBI, and shall publish in the Federal Register, any rules, procedures, or standards established by the Council.

(f) ASSISTANCE FROM FBI.—The Council may request from the FBI such reports, studies, statistics, or other information or materials as the Council determines to be necessary to enable the Council to perform its duties under this Compact. The FBI, to the extent authorized by law, may provide such assistance or information upon such a request.

(g) COMMITTEES.—The Chairman may establish committees as necessary to carry out this Compact and may prescribe their membership, responsibilities, and duration.

ARTICLE VII—RATIFICATION OF COMPACT

This Compact shall take effect upon being entered into by 2 or more States as between those States and the Federal Government. Upon subsequent entering into this Compact by additional States, it shall become effective among those States and the Federal Government and each Party State that has previously ratified it. When ratified, this Compact shall have the full force and effect of law within the ratifying jurisdictions. The form of ratification shall be in accordance with the laws of the executing State.

ARTICLE VIII—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

(a) RELATION OF COMPACT TO CERTAIN FBI ACTIVITIES.—Administration of this Compact shall not interfere with the management and control of the Director of the FBI over the FBI's collection and dissemination of criminal history records and the advisory function of the FBI's advisory policy board chartered under the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) for all purposes other than noncriminal justice.

(b) NO AUTHORITY FOR NONAPPROPRIATED EXPENDITURES.—Nothing in this Compact shall require the FBI to obligate or expend funds beyond those appropriated to the FBI.

(c) RELATING TO PUBLIC LAW 92-544.—Nothing in this Compact shall diminish or lessen the obligations, responsibilities, and authorities of any State, whether a Party State or a Nonparty State, or of any criminal history record repository or other subdivision or component thereof, under the Departments of State, Justice, and Commerce, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1973 (Public Law 92-544), or regulations and guidelines promulgated thereunder, including the rules and procedures promulgated by the Council under Article VI(a), regarding the use and dissemination of criminal history records and information.

ARTICLE IX—RENUNCIATION

(a) IN GENERAL.—This Compact shall bind each Party State until renounced by the Party State.

(b) EFFECT.—Any renunciation of this Compact by a Party State shall—

(1) be effected in the same manner by which the Party State ratified this Compact; and

(2) become effective 180 days after written notice of renunciation is provided by the Party State to each other Party State and to the Federal Government.

ARTICLE X—SEVERABILITY

The provisions of this Compact shall be severable, and if any phrase, clause, sentence, or provision of this Compact is declared to be contrary to the constitution of any participating State, or to the Constitution of the United States, or the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person, or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of this Compact and the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person, or circumstance shall not be affected thereby. If a portion of this Compact is held contrary to the constitution of any Party State, all other portions of this Compact shall remain in full force and effect as to the remaining Party States and in full force and effect as to the Party State affected, as to all other provisions.

ARTICLE XI—ADJUDICATION OF DISPUTES

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Council shall—

(1) have initial authority to make determinations with respect to any dispute regarding—

(A) interpretation of this Compact;

(B) any rule or standard established by the Council pursuant to Article V; and

(C) any dispute or controversy between any parties to this Compact; and

(2) hold a hearing concerning any dispute described in paragraph (1) at a regularly scheduled meeting of the Council and only render a decision based upon a majority vote of the members of the Council. Such decision shall be published pursuant to the requirements of Article VI(e).

(b) DUTIES OF FBI.—The FBI shall exercise immediate and necessary action to preserve the integrity of the III System, maintain system policy and standards, protect the accuracy and privacy of records, and to prevent abuses, until the Council holds a hearing on such matters.

(c) RIGHT OF APPEAL.—The FBI or a Party State may appeal any decision of the Council to the Attorney General, and thereafter may file suit in the appropriate district court of the United States, which shall have original jurisdiction of all cases or controversies arising under this Compact. Any suit arising under this Compact and initiated in a State court shall be removed to the appropriate district court of the United States in the manner provided by section 1446 of title 28, United States Code, or other statutory authority.

Subtitle B—Volunteers for Children Act

SEC. 221. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Volunteers for Children Act".

SEC. 222. FACILITATION OF FINGERPRINT CHECKS.

(a) STATE AGENCY.—Section 3(a) of the National Child Protection Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. 5119a(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(3) In the absence of State procedures referred to in paragraph (1), a qualified entity designated under paragraph (1) may contact an authorized agency of the State to request national criminal fingerprint background checks. Qualified entities requesting background checks under this paragraph shall comply with the guidelines set forth in subsection (b) and with procedures for requesting national criminal fingerprint background checks, if any, established by the State."

(b) FEDERAL LAW.—Section 3(b)(5) of the National Child Protection Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. 5119a(b)(5)) is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: "except that this paragraph does not apply to any request by a qualified entity for a national criminal fingerprint background check pursuant to subsection (a)(3)".

(c) AUTHORIZATION.—Section 4(b)(2) of the National Child Protection Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. 5119b(b)(2)) is amended by striking "1994, 1995, 1996, and 1997" and inserting "1999, 2000, 2001, and 2002".

CRIME VICTIMS WITH DISABILITIES AWARENESS ACT

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 438, S. 976.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 976) to increase public awareness of the plight of victims of crime with developmental disabilities, to collect data to measure the magnitude of the problem, and to develop strategies to address the safety and justice needs of victims of crime with developmental disabilities.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary, with an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Crime Victims With Disabilities Awareness Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS; PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) although research conducted abroad demonstrates that individuals with developmental disabilities are at a 4 to 10 times higher risk of becoming crime victims than those without disabilities, there have been no significant studies on this subject conducted in the United States;

(2) in fact, the National Crime Victim's Survey, conducted annually by the Bureau of Justice Statistics of the Department of Justice, does not specifically collect data relating to crimes against individuals with developmental disabilities;

(3) studies in Canada, Australia, and Great Britain consistently show that victims with developmental disabilities suffer repeated victimization because so few of the crimes against them are reported, and even when they are, there is sometimes a reluctance by police, prosecutors, and judges to rely on the testimony of a disabled individual, making individuals with developmental disabilities a target for criminal predators;

(4) research in the United States needs to be done to—

(A) understand the nature and extent of crimes against individuals with developmental disabilities;

(B) describe the manner in which the justice system responds to crimes against individuals with developmental disabilities; and

(C) identify programs, policies, or laws that hold promises for making the justice system more responsive to crimes against individuals with developmental disabilities; and

(5) the National Academy of Science Committee on Law and Justice of the National Research Council is a premier research institution with unique experience in developing seminal, multidisciplinary studies to establish a strong research base from which to make public policy.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this Act are—

(1) to increase public awareness of the plight of victims of crime who are individuals with developmental disabilities;

(2) to collect data to measure the extent of the problem of crimes against individuals with developmental disabilities; and

(3) to develop a basis to find new strategies to address the safety and justice needs of victims of crime who are individuals with developmental disabilities.

SEC. 3. DEFINITION OF DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITY.

In this Act, the term "developmental disability" has the meaning given the term in section 102 of the Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act (42 U.S.C. 6001).

SEC. 4. STUDY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General shall conduct a study to increase knowledge and information about crimes against individuals with developmental disabilities that will be useful in developing new strategies to reduce the incidence of crimes against those individuals.

(b) ISSUES ADDRESSED.—The study conducted under this section shall address such issues as—

(1) the nature and extent of crimes against individuals with developmental disabilities;

(2) the risk factors associated with victimization of individuals with developmental disabilities;

(3) the manner in which the justice system responds to crimes against individuals with developmental disabilities; and

(4) the means by which States may establish and maintain a centralized computer database on the incidence of crimes against individuals with disabilities within a State.

(c) NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES.—In carrying out this section, the Attorney General shall consider contracting with the Committee on Law and Justice of the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences to provide research for the study conducted under this section.

(d) REPORT.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to the Committees on the Judiciary of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report describing the results of the study conducted under this section.

SEC. 5. NATIONAL CRIME VICTIM'S SURVEY.

Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act, as part of each National Crime Victim's Survey, the Attorney General shall include statistics relating to—

(1) the nature of crimes against individuals with developmental disabilities; and

(2) the specific characteristics of the victims of those crimes.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I was delighted to join with Senator DEWINE during National Crime Victims Rights Week in April to introduce S. 976, the Crime Victims with Disabilities Awareness Act. I was glad to welcome Senator KENNEDY, Senator HATCH, Senator KOHL, Senator FEINSTEIN, and Senator ABRAHAM as cosponsors.

I have been overwhelmed by the positive response and broad support that our bill has received. I have, and will include in the record, a letter of support signed by over 50 groups, including the National Association of Developmental Disabilities Council's the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill, the National Association of State Directors of Special Education, the National Center of Hearing Disabilities, the American Association of Health and Disability, and many, many others.

In order to move this bill through the Judiciary Committee, Senator DEWINE and I are agreeing to a substitute amendment to the Crime Victims With Disabilities Awareness Act. The substitute eliminates the specific authorization for the research funding and would, instead, leave it up to the Department of Justice to allocate money for this research. Although I preferred our original bill and regret having to eliminate the specific authorization that was at the heart of our original proposal, I was prepared to accept the amendment in order to achieve progress on this important front in our efforts better to assist and serve victims of crime.

The bill being considered by the Senate would have the Department of Justice conduct research which will increase public awareness of the victimization of individual with developmental disabilities, understanding of the nature and extent of such crimes, and examine the means by which States may establish and maintain a database on the incident of crime against individuals with disabilities.

The need for this research is abundantly clear. Studies conducted abroad have found that individuals with disabilities are four to 10 times more likely to be a victim than individuals without disabilities. One Canadian study found that 67 percent of women with disabilities were physically or sexually assaulted as children.

This bill also directs the Attorney General to utilize statistics gathered from studies by the Department for inclusion in the National Crime Victims Survey.

I said in April that it is important that we focus attention on the needs and rights of crime victims not only during National Crime Victims Rights Week, but throughout the year. For the past several years, I have worked hard with others to make improvements in the law and provide greater assistance to victims of crime.

My involvement with crime victims rights began more than three decades ago when I served as State's Attorney for Chittenden County, Vermont, and witnessed first-hand the devastation of crime. I have worked ever since to ensure that the criminal justice system is one that respects the rights and dignity of victims of crime and domestic violence, rather than presents additional ordeals for those already victimized.

Over the last 20 years we have made strides in recognizing crime victims' rights and providing much needed assistance. I am proud to have played a role in passage of the Victims and Witnesses Protection Act of 1983, the Victims of Crime Act of 1984, and the Victims' Rights and Restitution Act of 1990 and the other improvements we have been able to make.

In the Violent Crime Control Act of 1994, Congress acted to ensure a right of allocation of victims of crimes of violence or sexual abuse and to make tens of millions of dollars available to crime victims. No amount of money can make up for the harm and trauma of being the victim of crime, but we should do all that we can to see that victims are assisted, compensated and treated with dignity by the criminal justice system.

I was the author of the Victims of Terrorism Act that passed the Senate the wake of the Oklahoma City bombing and became the basis for the Justice for Victims of Terrorism Act signed into law in April 1996. We are able to make funds available through supplemental grants to the States to assist and compensate victims of terrorism and mass violence, which incidents might otherwise have overwhelmed the resources of Oklahoma's crime victims compensation program or its victims assistance services.

We also filled a gap in our law for residents of the United States who are victims of terrorism and mass violence that occur outside the borders of the United States. In addition, we allowed greater flexibility to our State and local victims' assistance programs and some greater certainly so that they can know that our commitments to victims programming will not wax and wane with events. And we were able to raise the assessments on those convicted of federal crimes in order to fund the needs of crime victims.

Last year, I cosponsored the Victim Rights Clarification Act of 1997. That legislation reversed a presumption against crime victims observing the fact phase of a trial if they were likely to provide testimony during the sentencing phase of that trial. As a result of that legislation, not only were victims of the Oklahoma City bombing able to observe the trial of Timothy McVeigh, all those who were able to witness the trial and were called as witnesses to provide victim impact testimony at the sentencing phase of that trial, were able to do so.

The Crime Victims Assistance Act, S. 1081, is legislation that I introduced this past July with Senator KENNEDY. It builds upon the progress made over the last several years. It provides for a wholesale reform of the Federal Rules and Federal law to establish additional rights and protections for victims of federal crime.

This bill would provide crime victims with an enhanced right to be heard on the issue of pretrial detention and plea bargains, an enhanced right to a speedy trial and to be present in the courtroom throughout a trial, an enhanced right to be heard on probation revocation and to give a statement at sentencing, and the right to be notified of a defendant's escape or release from prison.

The Crime Victims Assistance Act would also strengthen victims' services by increasing Federal victim assistance personnel, enhancing training for State and local law enforcement and Officers of the Court, and establishing an ombudsman program for crime victims.

With a simple majority of both Houses of Congress, the Crime Victims Assistance Act could be enacted this year and we could mark a significant and immediate difference in the lives of victims throughout our country. I hope that the Senate will turn to this important measure, as well, in our efforts to assist victims of crime.

One unfortunate consequence of the effort to focus attention on proposals to amend the Constitution has been to dissipate efforts to enact effective victims rights legislation over the past two years. The momentum we had built over the last several years has been dissipated by this constitutional focus and exclusion of statutory reform.

While we have made great improvements in our law enforcement and crime victims assistance programs and have made advances in recognizing crime victims' rights, we still have work to do. Each year I try to help focus attention on those who work so hard every week of the year on behalf of all crime victims in crime victims' assistance and compensation programs. Their hard work and dedication have made a real difference in the lives of people who suffer from violence and abuse.

The needs of victims of crime are many and must be addressed in a number of ways, including strengthening law enforcement and education, improving and increasing services for victims, and protecting the rights of victims. I am hopeful that in the days to come, the research directed by the Crime Victims with Disabilities Awareness Act will serve as the foundation for the growth and improvement of services available to victims with disabilities throughout our country.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the committee substitute be agreed to, the bill be considered read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the bill appear in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The bill (S. 1976), as amended, was considered read the third time and passed.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I rise today to compliment my colleagues for the unanimous passage of the Crime Victims with Disabilities Awareness Act of 1998. When I introduced this legislation, S. 1976, I wanted to increase public awareness of the plight of crime victims with disabilities—by developing a research and statistical basis from which to understand the nature and extent of crimes against people with developmental disabilities.

Gauging from the favorable response of my colleagues, the press, and people in the disability community itself, public awareness of the crime victims with developmental disabilities has increased by the very introduction of this legislation. But we recognize that this is only the tip of the iceberg—the larger problem is crimes against people with many other kinds of disabilities as well.

Passage of this legislation comes not a moment too soon. It is time that we began a new, hopeful chapter in the lives of the many disabled individuals who live quietly in fear of crime and violence.

There are too many victims who cannot communicate what has happened to them—who find it more difficult than most crime victims to seek comfort, counseling, reassurance, and protection. These victims must relive the violence for the rest of their lives.

Today, as a governing body, the United States Senate has spoken collectively on this increasing challenge. We know that for a number of reasons, more people are being born developmentally disabled. Among the factors are poor prenatal nutrition, increases in child abuse, and substance abuse issues, including fetal alcohol syndrome.

It is my hope that the Department of Justice will engage the Committee on Law and Justice of the National Research Council to produce seminal, multi-disciplinary research that will encourage further academic research in this area, and develop useful new strategies to reduce the incidence of crimes against the disabled. America should not have to rely upon foreign countries to infer research and statistics about our own citizens.

Passage of this legislation is an important recognition of the severity of the impact crime has on these people's lives. It is an attempt to speak for those who cannot speak for themselves. We will not let the disabled suffer alone and in silence any longer. As a country we must understand them, learn to communicate with them, and reassure them.

This is a very important step forward for American society.

I thank my colleagues, and I yield the floor.

ORDERS FOR TUESDAY, JULY 14, 1998

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today it stands in adjournment until 9:30 a.m. on Tuesday, July 14. I further ask that when the Senate reconvenes on Tuesday, immediately following the prayer, the routine requests through the morning hour be granted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ALLARD. I further ask consent that the Senate stand in recess from 12:30 until 2:15 p.m., to allow the weekly party caucuses to meet.

PROGRAM

Mr. ALLARD. For the information of all Senators, on Tuesday morning, under a previous order, the Senate will debate the motion to waive the Budget Act with respect to the Daschle amendment, with a vote occurring on the motion at 10 a.m. Following that vote, the Senate will continue consideration of the agriculture appropriations bill with the hope of finishing the bill by early evening.

For the remainder of the week, it is hoped that the Senate will complete several more appropriations bills. Members are reminded that the Leader Lecture Series, hosted by the majority leader, will be held tomorrow night at 6 p.m. in the old Senate Chamber. The Speaker will be former Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker.

Also, on Wednesday morning at 10 a.m. there will be a joint meeting of Congress in the House Chamber to receive an address by the President of Romania.

ORDER FOR ADJOURNMENT

Mr. ALLARD. If there is no further business to come before the Senate, I now ask the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order, following the remarks of the Senator from New Jersey, Senator LAUTENBERG.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ALLARD. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

TOBACCO AMENDMENT NOT SUBJECT TO A POINT OF ORDER

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, it has been inquired all around the country, by many people, as to whether or not the tobacco industry won its fight here in the Capitol. Did they bowl us over? Did they get the Congress to knuckle under? Are they so powerful that, over the will of the American people, the tobacco industry prevailed?

And we say no. There is an amendment that has been offered by the Democratic leader, Senator DASCHLE, that would give us a chance in the Senate to choose between the tobacco industry, the tobacco lobby, their friends, and our Nation's children.

This amendment would put a real dent in a public health catastrophe that has touched nearly every American family. There are few of us who have not heard about the ravages of tobacco on a friend or relative, or seen people we know weakened from respiratory conditions caused by the use of tobacco—smoking, and how it changed the structure of their lives, how they are unable to do the things that they used to do: participate in sports, play actively with their children or their grandchildren—or how they suffered premature death.

Too often, on the Senate floor, we have heard opponents of the tobacco bill parrot the propaganda of the tobacco industry. I would like to take a moment to review the real issues in this debate.

The tobacco industry still lives in a privileged regulatory environment set up by its backers throughout decades. We have now learned something about what they discussed in the privacy of their boardrooms, in the privacy of their records, in the privacy of their marketing schemes, knowing full well that if they manipulated their product, if they introduced more nicotine, if they changed the advertising, that they could capture the market replacements that they needed to maintain their profits and their revenues. They knew if they tweaked their ads in a certain way, they could get young people to pick up smoking. Joe Camel became better known, it was said, than Mickey Mouse.

The reason the industry targets our children and engages in other corporate misbehavior is that, aside from the courts, the industry does not face any real oversight of their actions, despite their devious actions to fool the public. The tobacco amendment that we have before us would put oversight in place. That is the primary reason that the industry's friends killed the bill last month. They killed it because they didn't want to have their market opportunities reduced. They didn't want to let the children, the young people in our society, get by, live normal lives, without their life expectancies being impaired. They didn't want to protect the families and the well-being of our citizens, because it meant cash to these folks. It meant that their market might shrink a little bit, that their stock prices might go down, that their salaries might be decreased. They didn't care about the damage they wrought—not at all. We see it in testimony, some of which was given under oath, which has some questions surrounding it.

This amendment would establish unfettered FDA jurisdiction over tobacco products, so people would know what is there, so people would know that smoking can really do a job on you. I know many people have talked about the importance of FDA jurisdiction, but I want to describe what it really means. It means that the Federal Drug Administration has the capacity to enforce their anti-teen-smoking efforts. It means that they will have clear statutory authority to enact the appropriate constitutional advertising restrictions to protect children.

FDA authority also means that smokers will know what chemicals and additives are put into the cigarettes they smoke. We did some research in my office on this subject and found out there are some 500 ingredients that are in a pack of cigarettes and some of these things are really toxic. We restrict their use in normal functioning in our society because we know how dangerous they are. When our constituents enter their local grocery or drug stores, cigarettes and other tobacco products are the only products meant for human consumption that do not disclose their ingredients. We ask it of food products. We are getting stricter all the time about what you have to worry about with meat and how you have to cook it and treat it. So, too, with vegetables. We see advertisements: "Organically grown." But when it comes to tobacco, they put up, to use the expression, a pretty heavy smoke-screen.

Last year I introduced a bill to inform consumers about the ingredients and chemicals in tobacco products. Although we know that most smokers are aware that cigarettes are "bad for you," I don't think the vast majority of smokers, or citizens, realize that there is arsenic and benzene and lead in the smoke they consume. These are things we prohibit. We prohibit the use of lead in paint today. We prohibit the use of benzene in products where it used to be routine. And arsenic—everybody knows that arsenic is a poison. Not only will the FDA require, under this amendment, the tobacco companies to disclose the presence of these chemicals, but it will also make sure the tobacco industry takes appropriate steps to decrease these poisons in their products.

For years, the tobacco companies hid health secrets and secretly manipulated the ads as to the nature of their products. Under strong FDA jurisdiction, the tobacco industry will have to play by the rules. And, like other industries that produce drugs, they are going to be subject to the appropriate oversight to protect the consumers, to protect our citizens. It is long overdue.

One thing we have to remember in the argument with the tobacco companies, the arguments that we have with them, is that this is not just another business, this is a business whose products are going to kill you if you use them, and there is no denying that. This is a business that is designed to make an addict out of you—addicts, over 45 million in America today. If this business was conducted in a less auspicious place than a boardroom of a tobacco company, and if it was a group of individuals who said, "We have a way to weaken America and here is the plot: We can kill over 400,000 Americans every year, and no one is going to say anything to us. Further, we cannot only encourage people to use the product, but we can start with them when they are children."

Do you know what? They will be more addicted to this product than many of them are addicted to illegal drugs. If we do this, we can cost America $100 billion in lost productivity and in health care costs; we can attack the American Nation, killing 400,000 people in a year, more than eight times the number that we lost in Vietnam in all the years of that war, a period of time when almost all America went into mourning about the loss of these young lives, these brave people; 58,000 died there—and here we lose 400,000 people a year, more than all of the wars that this country fought in this century. In one year, we kill more Americans with tobacco than those lost in combat in the 20th century.

Mr. President, this amendment is going to require the tobacco products and advertisements to have large, clear warning labels that will send a strong message to kids about the real consequences of smoking. We are not just going to say "could be dangerous to your health." And we are not going to permit it to be in colorful ads to make the young people feel like this is the macho image, this is the cool image that they want to portray. These warning labels will not be hidden in small type on the side of a pack of cigarettes. These labels will be prominently displayed in large type on each side of the pack of cigarettes.

They will contain simple, truthful messages about the dangers of the product: Cigarettes are addictive; cigarettes cause cancer; and smoking can kill you. All true. All to the point. These new warning labels will add a strong dose of truth to the industry's deceitful billboards and other ads. They are not going to continue to see the guy on horseback roping the cattle or the champion swimmer or the champion athlete. No, those are bogus claims. We don't believe those anymore. But the problem is there has been an impression created in the minds of America that goes back decades, and smoking appeared to be cool. Every movie actor and every movie actress not too many years ago would have a cigarette hanging out of their mouth.

When I was a soldier in the Army and I was in the war zone, they made sure we had in our rations little packs of cigarettes, little sleeves with three or four cigarettes, as I remember, in each of them, free, to make sure you felt good about what you were doing. At the same time, they were creating addictions that we now wrestle with in our veterans population.

What we want to see is the Surgeon General's warning clear and concise, clear and perceptible, instead of the industry lies like "Alive with Pleasure." We have seen that on billboards. It ought to read: "Dying with pain," "Dying too early," "Unable to compete," "Unable to function," "Unable to take care of your family," "Unable to stay with your children as they grow," because tobacco is dragging you down all the way.

This amendment will require a truthful health warning to be printed on 20 percent of the billboard service. See it: "Cigarettes kill"; "Dying with pain." That is the message that has to be out there, not this deceitful message that says, "You are going to feel good."

There was a time, I remember, when they used to say doctors smoke one brand more than any other, because it had the real taste, it was good, it made you feel good.

The tobacco industry and their friends don't want us to deliver this message to the public.

This amendment, Mr. President, contains strong look-back provisions that were improved by an amendment approved overwhelmingly by this body 66 votes to 29. I want to explain this look-back provision.

It says that if you haven't gained the objective—and that is to reduce the number of teenagers who are picking up smoking—you and your company are going to have to pay and pay substantially. It is going to put teeth in our effort to dramatically reduce teen smoking.

The real experts on marketing cigarettes to children are the tobacco companies themselves. So let them work to reduce that number. They have done a masterful job, and now they have to undo it.

Mr. President, we know that the most efficient and effective way to dramatically reduce teen smoking is to raise the price, and this amendment will do that. A variety of factors contribute to a teenager's decision to try that first cigarette or to chew that first bit of spit tobacco. I know, because I smoked for 25 years. I took up smoking when I was a teenager, and I sure reinforced the image when I served 3 years in the U.S. Army.

But we know that once you begin—tobacco companies know—most citizens don't realize that the first cigarette or the 15th or the 20th cigarette that you smoke is the reaction that says you are going to do this for the rest of your life whether you like it or not. How many people have we ever met in our lives—I know I have met, I will say, thousands who said to me, "Boy, I quit once for 3 months, but then something happened, and I started again." Or "I tried 100 times to stop smoking, and every time I have it licked, I come back to it."

We know that addiction is the tobacco industry's game. That is what they want to do: Get you addicted, and then the marketing is easy.

Mr. President, another issue I have long been involved with is secondhand smoke. As many of my colleagues know, I, with the help of then-Congressman DURBIN, now Senator DURBIN, authored the legislation that prohibited smoking on airplanes. It is now 11 years ago.

It was the first real dent in the tobacco industry lobbying armor, and it was the first step toward the eventual goal of an overall national standard on secondhand smoke. We know, and I see it all the time when I talk to people, if I tell them that I was the author of the smoking ban in airplanes, boy, they love it—"That is the greatest thing you have done." When I am searching for applause, speaking to an audience, I always tell them that and they all applaud. These are people who remember how unpleasant it was to be in an airplane filled with tobacco smoke. The result is that secondhand smoke is very dangerous to the health and well-being of people.

A Harvard study said that there are 50,000 fatal heart attacks a year that result from secondhand smoke—fatal heart attacks, secondhand smoke, other people's smoke. This amendment makes serious headway in protecting the public from the dangers of secondhand smoke.

The tobacco industry has spent millions on propaganda and fake science reports to the contrary of the belief that breathing other people's smoke is not merely an inconvenience, it is a deadly poison.

Mr. President, although the disease caused by secondhand smoke often takes years to manifest itself in most adults, that is not the case for young children. Secondhand smoke creates immediate health risks for children. Exposure to smoking increases a child's risk for respiratory illnesses and infections, impaired development of their lungs and middle-ear infections. Further, about half of all the childhood cases of asthma, chronic bronchitis and wheezing are attributable to exposure to secondhand smoke.

It was really ironic when we were writing laws here that would prohibit smoking in places around the country, public buildings, et cetera, schools, places that children inhabit, and yet, smoking was allowed until very recently in the Capitol Buildings, on the Senate side absolutely.

I thought to myself, how can I ask my people to work in an environment where they have to breathe someone else's secondhand smoke and know that I am doing the right thing, when smoking was allowed in the halls in other areas. It used to bother me that a pregnant woman working in my office would have to walk through the halls, and it would be like walking through a smoker's lounge.

I know that she did not want to do it. And I did not want her to have to do it.

So we have a chance, Mr. President, to say to the tobacco industry, "Listen, lay off our kids. Stop it. We want you to be as concerned about this as the public health community is." I hope that my colleagues will support this, the Daschle amendment, to provide our children with a fighting chance against the seductions offered by the tobacco industry.

Its time will come. The game isn't over. What happens when the game is delayed in sports is, there is always a penalty that gets offered. That is the same thing that is going to happen here.

Mr. President, with that, I yield the floor.
